FOREWORD

This Comprehensive Concordance is designed to aid you in locating words and Scripture passages in the New World Translation of the Holy Scriptures.

A number of fine concordances have been produced in the past two centuries, the majority of which have been for use with the King James Version of the Bible. However, since 1950, millions of copies of the New World Translation have been printed and distributed world wide. Many of these are in the hands of persons who are diligent students of the Bible and who would therefore make good use of a concordance designed for this translation, since it is the one they most often use.

In this Comprehensive Concordance you will find listed every occurrence of all the principal words in the New World Translation (1971 edition). This has required some 14,700 word headings and a total of about 333,200 entries.

Use of a concordance can save much time in searching out desired Bible verses. Also, a complete listing of the occurrences of Bible words, such as is found in this Comprehensive Concordance, can assist one to ascertain what the Bible really teaches on any subject. It enables one to get a balanced, Biblical view of the topics that one studies. By showing all the various settings in which a term is used it also helps one to resolve any seeming discrepancies.

HOW TO USE THIS CONCORDANCE

When you look up a word in this Comprehensive Concordance, you will find the occurrences of the word listed in the order in which they appear in the Bible. In each case the location of the text is shown. This is followed by a brief excerpt showing the immediate context of the word, to enable you to determine whether it is the reference that you are seeking. Where there is more than one listing for the same Bible book, the abbreviation for the name of the book appears in the first entry but not in entries below it, as shown here. The key word itself is represented simply by the first letter, in italics. To illustrate, under WORD you will find entries such as the following:

Ac 17:11 for they received the w with 17:13 w of God was published also

A basic rule to remember in using this concordance is this: Everything is listed as it is spelled. This includes numbers, such as "two" and "forty."

All words that are spelled the same are put under the same heading. This is true even if some of the words are capitalized and others are not. Thus all occurrences of "God" and "god" are in one listing, and the same is true of "Put" (the name of an individual and of a people) and "put." Similarly, all parts of speech that are spelled the same appear under the same heading. So, the verb "bear" (often meaning "to carry") and the noun "bear" (the animal), as an example, are found under just one heading.

Two or more words joined by a hyphen are treated as one word. For example, "only-begotten" is listed, not under "begotten," but with the words beginning with "O." As for words that are frequently used together but are not joined by a hyphen, these are listed separately. That is the case with the expression "active force." It is found under both "active" and "force."

Singular, plural and possessive forms of words are listed separately. This is because they are spelled differently. Thus "son" (singular), "sons" (plural), "son's" (singular possessive) and "sons'" (plural possessive) are found in separate listings.

To simplify the use of this concordance, some words have been omitted entirely. These include only words that experience has shown would seldom, if ever, be consulted and which would therefore make the volume needlessly cumbersome if they were included. The omitted words are: a, accordingly, ah, along, also, although, an, and, another, another's, any, are, as, at, be, because, been, begin, besides, both, but, by, can, cannot, concerning, consequently, could, did, do, does, done, during, each, either, ever, everybody, fairly, for, forth, from, further, furthermore, had, having, he, hence, henceforth, her, here, hers, herself, him, himself, his, however, I, if, in, including, indeed, instead, into, is, it, its, itself, likewise, may, me, meantime, meanwhile, moreover, my, myself, neither, nevertheless, next, nor, not, O, of, off, onto, or, other, other's, others, otherwise, our, ours, ourselves, quite, rather, shall, she, should, simply, since, some, something, subsequently, than, that, the, their, theirs, them, themselves, then, there, thereby, therefore, therefrom, thereof, thereupon, these, they, this, those, thus, to, too, up, upon, us, very, was, we, were, when, where, whereas, wherefore, wherever, whether, which, while, who, whoever, whom, whomever, with, would, yet, you, your, yours, yourself, yourselves.

To facilitate research, certain listings are only partial. There are words that appear hundreds or even thousands of times in the Bible and that would rarely be consulted. Yet certain occurrences of the word may be valuable. An exhaustive listing would make it difficult to locate the desired texts. To illustrate: the verb "will" could fill many pages if the list of references were complete, and these would probably never be used. Yet the noun "will" (as in the expression "the will of God") can be used in locating valuable information. The compilers of this Comprehensive Concordance have eliminated those occurrences of the word that would only hinder you in locating the information that you really want. The words treated in this manner are limited in number and each of them is clearly marked by an asterisk (*) so that you will realize that the listing is only partial.

IF YOU HAVE DIFFICULTY IN LOCATING A PARTICULAR VERSE

These suggestions may help you:

1. Are you sure that you have the correct spelling?

2. May it be that the text you are seeking is listed under another form of the word that you have in mind (possibly plural or possessive)?

3. Is the word for which you are looking part of a hyphenated expression? If so, look under the letter representing the first part of the word combination.

4. It may be that the word you have in mind does not appear in the New World Translation. Perhaps it is in some other Bible version or is simply the way that you personally have paraphrased what is in the text. Why not try looking up another word that you believe is in the Scripture?
