MASS BY BISHOP COLTON ON LADY OF LOURDES DAY

Impressive Celebration Planned for Patronal Feast of Church.

NEWS OF CATHOLIC PARISHES.

Many Pre-Lenten Entertainments Arranged—More Priests Are Transferred.

The Right Rev. Charles H. Colton, D.D., Bishop of Buffalo, will officiate at the pontifical mass at the Church of Our Lady of Lourdes, Broadway and Aberdeen street, on Sunday, February 12, when the patronal feast of the church will be celebrated. The rector, the Rev. John McCullough, S.P.M., has been at work for weeks preparing for this annual event, which is always one of the most imposing and impressive services seen in the city during the entire year.

The Church of Our Lady of Lourdes is a shrine to which the faithful flock from all over the borough, and on these special occasions the attendance is always so large that the vast edifice is not big enough to hold the crowds. The beauty of the interior of the church has been frequently commented upon, and the famous grotto, a reproduction on a reduced scale of the Grotto of Lourdes, in France, has done much to enhance the favor in which the church is held as a place of special devotion. The musical programme this year will be unusually elaborate, and a distinguished pulpit orator will preach the sermon.

The nineteenth annual concert and lecture in aid of the Monastery of the Precious Blood, at the Montauk Theater on Sunday evening, March 12, promises to be as brilliant a success as any that has taken place during the past eighteen years. The announcement that the lecturer will be the Very Rev. Alexander P. Doyle, C.S.P., rector of the Apostolic Mission House, Washington, D. C., has been received with great favor. He has many friends in Brooklyn who will be glad to welcome him, and many who feel an interest in the work in which he is engaged—training priests for the giving of missions to Catholics and non-Catholics—will be pleased to hear him on a question in the discussion of which his experience as a missionary priest, particularly among non-Catholics, gives to him a broad view of the subject of his lecture, "Facing the Twentieth Century."

Father Doyle is noted as an able speaker, and it is as a great favor that he comes to Brooklyn to lecture in aid of the Sisters of the Precious Blood, in whom he has always had a kindly, fatherly interest.

Miss Marie Kieckhoefer, who for several years past has managed the music, will do so on the coming occasion. She has secured Miss Gertrude Finsten, violiniste; John Finnegan, tenor of St. Patrick's Cathedral, Manhattan; Miss Loretta De Lone, harp soloist of the Pittsburg and Minneapolis Orchestra, and Miss Bernardine Kieckhoefer, as accompanist.

St. Bernard's Church, Hicks and Rapalyea streets, will benefit by an entertainment and reception on Tuesday evening, February 21 (Washington's Birthday eve), at the Kings County Palace, 120 Schermerhorn street. The entertainment is under the auspices of the choir of the church. The programme will open with a first part minstrel show, followed by an original specialty, a novel feature never before attempted by any amateur production, and will conclude with a one-act comedy farce, entitled "Too Much Married." The production is under the supervision of Daniel Thompson, assisted by Miss Anna Kearan.

The monthly euchre and bridge for the benefit of St. Vincent's Guild, will be held in the parlors of St. Vincent's Home, on Tuesday, February 7, at 2:30 P.M. Members and their friends are earnestly requested to attend. There will be souvenirs for non-players.

The Rev. Thomas S. Duhigg, rector of the Church of St. John, the Evangelist, returned a few days ago from Atlantic City, where he made a short stay with his old Roman fellow student, the Rev. Thomas P. McLoughlin, rector of the Church of the Blessed Sacrament, New Rochelle, N. Y.

The cornerstone of the new Church of St. Mary at Bay Side, of which the Rev. Gervase Kubec is rector, will be laid to-morrow afternoon, with appropriate and impressive ceremonies.

The annual mass for deceased members of the Holy Name Society will be celebrated at St. John's Chapel, Monday, February 13 (Lincoln's Birthday). Printed notices have been sent to all members requesting them to be present.

The Rev. John L. Belford, rector of the Church of the Nativity, will lecture before Brooklyn Council, No. 60, Knights of Columbus, at their rooms in Prospect Hall to-morrow evening. The subject of Father Belford's discourse will be "Why I Am a Catholic."

The new superior general of the Sisters of St. Joseph, of which there are many in the Brooklyn diocese, is Mother M. Bonaventure, superior of St. John's Orphan Asylum, Philadelphia. She succeeds the late Mother Mary Clement.

Plans are being perfected for the collection of the building fund for the new Church of the Immaculate Heart of Mary at Windsor Terrace, of which the Rev. M. J. Tierney is rector. The frame structure, which was built 16 years ago by the Rev. James J. McAteer, the founder of the parish, is inadequate to meet the needs of the fast-growing congregation, and the building of a new edifice has become a necessity. The new church will occupy the site of the present one, which will be moved to another part of the fine property owned by the congregation at Fort Hamilton parkway and East Fourth street.

At Symphony Hall, Boston, on Sunday afternoon and evening, there were two great gatherings of representatives of the 900,000 Catholics of the Archdiocese of Boston, attending the first Catholic Congress held under the direction of Archbishop O'Connell. In the evening the crowd was so great that Horticultural Hall was secured for the overflow, and hundreds were even then turned away. Resolutions were adopted supporting the independence of the Holy See; expressing sympathy with the Catholics in France; on freedom of education; favoring the complete abolition of divorce laws; for the censorship of theaters; for the suppression of the publication of the details of criminal and divorce trials; against the desecration of Sunday, and in sympathy with labor. Addresses were made by the Archbishop and by priests and laymen of prominence.

The children of St. Malachy's Ocean Home at Rockaway Beach are still praying hard for the recovery of their chaplain, Father Koeberle, who is seriously ill at St. Catherine's Hospital, with an even chance of recovery. At the home, Father Koeberle is greatly missed. He entered into all the games of the youngsters, shooting marbles with the boys and helping to turn the skipping rope for the tiny girls, and they all feel as sheep must when the shepherd is far away.

The Rev. Charles H. O'Dougherty, assistant to the Rev. Thomas F. McGronen at the Church of St. Ambrose, has gone to the South to spend several weeks. During the winter Father O'Dougherty contracted a very heavy cold, which at one time threatened to develop into pneumonia. This was happily averted, but it will be necessary for Father O'Dougherty to recuperate in a balmier atmosphere. His many devoted friends in St. Ambrose's will wait this return with anxiety, and he will be sure of a warm welcome when he comes back with his health restored.

The Church of Our Lady of Mercy, in Schermerhorn street, of which the Rev. James J. McAteer is rector, will be benefited by a monster euchre and reception which is to be held in the Pouch Gallery, Clinton avenue, on the evening of Monday, February 27. The arrangements are in the hands of the Rev. John A. Bohag, Father McAteer's able assistant, who is being helped by a very efficient committee, which has as its object the making of this event by far the most successful and enjoyable one in the history of church euchres in Brooklyn. A feature will be a souvenir book, which will be one of the finest things of its kind ever gotten out. There will be valuable souvenirs for players and non-players, and a special door souvenir of gold. The parishioners are looking forward to a rare treat on the evening of the euchre, which will be followed by a long dancing programme.

The Rev. Vincent P. Delaney, who for the past two years has been an assistant to the Rev. William B. Farrell, at the Church of Sts. Peter and Paul, in the Eastern District, has been transferred by the diocesan authorities and made associate rector of St. Matthew's Church, on Eastern Parkway.

The Rev. Edward J. Hoare, who has been attached to St. Agnes' Church for some time past, has been sent to the Church of Our Lady of Good Counsel. Father Hoare made his theological studies in Rome, and is one of the ablest men among the younger priests of the diocese.

It is more than likely that Bishop McDonnell and Msgrs. McCarthy and McNamee, who sailed for Jamaica last Saturday, will be present at the dedication of the new cathedral, in Kingston, to-morrow. The structure, which replaces the one destroyed a few years ago, is an imposing building standing upon an eminence, and is one of the first objects that strike the eye of the traveler as he approaches Kingston on the steamer.

The Holy Name Society of the Church of the Sacred Heart, of which the Rev. John L. Nash, LL.D., is rector, is preparing to give its annual euchre on Monday evening, February 27. The committee and chairman are working hard to make the event surpass its predecessors, and it is hoped that a large sum will be raised for the renovation of the rectory.

The Rev. Joseph D. McKenna, recently appointed inspector of schools, has entered upon the duties of his new office. Father McKenna has a big task before him, as he will practically have to inaugurate the work, the schools having had no inspector since the resignation of the Rev. Thomas J. O'Brien.

KISMET TEMPLE MEETING.

First Ceremonial Gathering of Shriners Largely Attended.

The first ceremonial meeting of Kismet Temple was held at the Mosque, Herkimer street and Nostrand avenue, on Tuesday evening, January 31. There was a very large attendance. At the last meeting the election of officers took place, and Noble Henry Lange was elected potentate, but on account of illness he was unable to be present and so the installation of the officers was postponed until the first session in the new year. Ill. William Bamber opened the session and then called Ill. Joseph H. Cummin to take charge and install the officers. Ill. Noble Cummin then formally installed the officers of Kismet for 1911 and placed the gavel in the hands of Ill. Henry Lange, who received a hearty greeting from all the nobles present. The business being disposed of, the Arab patrol gave an exhibition drill, going through new manoeuvers, and ending with the word Kismet made with cimetars, showing their proficiency and the result of the training they had undergone. The chief, Noble John D. Stem, received many congratulations on the skillful manner in which the patrol passed through the intricate evolutions, and the exhibition was pronounced the best the patrol had ever given. Ill. Noble William Bamber generously created the new batch of Nobles, as Noble Lange has not fully recovered from his severe illness. Many new sights were seen by the neophytes in their journey over the hot sands and even the nobles who accompanied the caravan were surprised at the new diversion and startling effects produced during their journey. Inquiries were made as to whether it was a Fourth of July celebration or February 22. After the ceremonies an entertainment was given which was enjoyed by all present. The feast of one of the most celebrated of the Arabs followed and then the nobles wended their way to their happy homes. The Arab patrol will give a minstrel show, followed by a dance at the Mosque on the evenings of February 21 and 22. The patrol intend to go to Rochester in July next, when the Imperial Council meets there and will take part in the competitive drill. They feel quite sure that they will bring home one of the prizes of the occasion. On the return trip they will make a detour by way of the Rapids and the Thousand Isles.

being weighed in the balance. The present movement in France is a prophecy of what will soon take place in every civilized country of the globe, as enlightened liberty shall mount the throne and break the fetters as fast as they are forged by a church that would enslave the mind and soul of man. The old hard-shell Baptist church has also become a castaway, because it refused to carry out the great commission. Let us missionary Baptists, Methodists, Presbyterians, and all others take warning. No man knoweth what a day may bring forth.

"Unless we are more faithful to our sublime mission than we have been, God will remove our candlesticks from their places, and will raise up others to be the torch-bearers of the world. Already the Lord is rebuking us through the Salvation Army and the Volunteers of America, because we have too often turned a deaf ear to the lowly and the outcast."

NORTH PARK SLOPE GROUP.

Impressive services were held in Grace Methodist Church, in which the North Park Slope Group meetings are being conducted, last night. A large chorus, under the direction of B. H. MacCurdy, sings at each service. The attendance was double that of the first evening. The Rev. Dr. H. Grattan Dockrell of Boston is the preacher. His sermon last night on Job was a clear and strong presentation of thoughts suggested by the patriarch's trials and unbroken trust in God. An interesting meeting of personal workers was held after the service. The Rev. M. M. Ammunson of the Sterling Place Church of Christ read the Scripture lesson. The Rev. G. O. Griffith of Sixth Avenue Baptist Church and the Rev. Frederick F. Shannon of Grace Church also took part in the service? A union service will be held in Grace Church on Sunday evening, when Dr. Dockrell will preach.

THE PROSPECT SLOPE GROUP.

The Chapman-Alexander meetings in the middle group of the Prospect Slope section have opened auspiciously. The co-operating churches are the Sixth Avenue M. E., the Rev. E. C. Tullar, pastor; the Prospect Heights, Presbyterian, the Rev. Dr. E. D. Bailey, pastor, and the Greenwood Baptist. The meeting place is in the latter church. The chairman of the group is the Rev. Joel B. Slocum, pastor of the entertaining church. The parish which this three-fold organization is responsible is Third street to Eleventh street, the Canal to Prospect Park West. The group is finely organized and all the various committees are in full swing. Evangelist Gale and Singer W. H. Collison seem especially adapted to this important portion of the Park Slope.

Mr. Gale, on the opening night, had for his theme "Give God a Chance." That will be the slogan of the campaign, so far as the middle group of Park Slope is concerned. This was followed last evening by a masterly sermon on "Prayer." It was an appeal to believe what God has said about prayer and to act upon that belief.

Professor Lowe has been giving some interesting and instructive illustrated addresses to the young people at 4 o'clock. The concluding one will be given to-morrow afternoon at the conclusion of the Bible School, in the Greenwood Church.

The women of this group are organized for work. The committee on women's meetings is as follows: Mrs. Charles A. Wilson, chairman; Mrs. Frederick Bruckbauer and Miss Adelaide Dieckman. One successful meeting has already been held in the home of Mrs. Bruckbauer. The next meeting for women will be held in the Sixth Avenue M. E. Church on Tuesday afternoon at 3:30.

THE GROUP MEETINGS.

All of the meetings in the several groups in the Chapman-Alexander evangelistic campaign were even better attended last night than they were on Thursday evening, when they began.

There was a much larger attendance at the services of the Heights Group, in the Reformed Church on the Heights. At the meeting of the Ridgewood Group, in the Knickerbocker M. E. Church, about thirty confessed Christ. Reports from the Bushwick Group indicate that there is an awakening spirit among the people of the neighborhood. The same is also true of the Stuyvesant Central Group, in the Janes M. E. Church, and the Carroll Park Group, in the Strong Place Baptist Church.

DR. STUCKER HERE.

The Rev. Edwin S. Stucker, an evangelist and Chatauqua lecturer from the middle West, whose home is in the beautiful college and Chautauqua town, Ottawa, Kan., and behind whose work stand a committee of seven prominent western men, has been invited by Dr. Chapman to join the evangelistic forces for the present campaign. Mr. Stucker will preach nightly at the South Reformed Church, Fourth avenue and Fifty-fifth street, the Rev. W. J. MacDonald, pastor. With the singer, Fred E. Warner, of Danville, Ind., he will make his home at 251 Fifty-third street. A large congregation were assembled in this beautiful auditorium of the South Reformed Church to greet these gentlemen at their opening service on Thursday evening.

"MAN'S GREATEST PROBLEM."

The Rev. Milton S. Rees of Rochester will be the speaker at the meeting for men to-morrow afternoon in the auditorium of the Bedford Y. M. C. A., Bedford avenue and Monroe street. Subject: "Man's Greatest Problem." This meeting is under the auspices of the Chapman-Alexander evangelistic campaign. A large chorus of male voices will be directed by I. H. Meredith, composer and singer. Donald Chalmers will be the special soloist. The meeting will be held at 3:30. All men are welcome. Following the auditorium meeting at 5:30 Charles E. Francis will conduct the Sunday Parliament. The topic under discussion will be: "Blue Laws—Are They Good or Bad?" The Monday night meeting at 9:30 will be addressed by Mr. Asher of the Chapman-Alexander mission.

ITALIAN SERVICES.

Italian evangelistic services will begin to-morrow morning at 10:30 o'clock in the Franklin Avenue Italian Presbyterian Church, near Myrtle avenue. The Rev. Eduardo Taglialatela of Rome, director of the Methodist Sunday schools in Italy, will preach the sermon. He will also preach at 5 P.M. in the Atlantic Avenue Mission, 2095 Atlantic avenue, near Rockaway avenue. Evangelistic meetings will be held every evening at both places. The Rev. Stefano L. Tosta is the pastor. Italian services all in connection with the Chapman-Alexander campaign, will also be held every evening at the Italian Baptist Church, 14 Jackson street, and at the York Street M. E. Church, York and Gold street. Italian ministers of Brooklyn and New York have pledged to speak at these meetings.

have neglected to inform themselves upon this, of all subjects, the most important.

To-morrow (Sunday), Feb. 5, 3 P.M., in the Brooklyn Academy of Music, Pastor Russell will give you the benefit of thirty-five years' research upon this topic: "What Is Man That God Is Mindful of Him?" Psalm 8:iv.

We will assume in advance that the Pastor's conclusions will be logical, reasonable, Scriptural, and hence satisfactory. Every one is cordially invited. As always, when Pastor Russell speaks, seats will be free and no collection will be lifted.

FIVE MEMORIAL WINDOWS

Five memorial windows for the chancel of St. Bartholomew's Church, Pacific street, near Bedford avenue, have been placed this week, and they will be dedicated at to-morrow's morning service, which begins at 11 o'clock. The service will be conducted by the Rev. Frank M. Townley, the rector, and appropriate music will be sung by a large choir, under the direction of organist and Choirmaster Mather.

Those who have seen the windows have pronounced them beautiful examples of stained glass art. They were made in Europe, and were expected to arrive months ago.

These windows will be unveiled by the rector and dedicated in memory of Caroline W. L. Heydenreich, Alice Bradley, Mary A. Cunningham, Simeon and Eleanor Leland and F. Arline Yergason. The offertory anthem at the service, "What Are These That Are Arayed in White Robes?" Steiner. The order of service will be printed and placed in the pews. In the evening, after evening prayer, stereopticon views of the "Passion Play" will be presented, with lecture by Dr. Arnold W. Catlin.

Special India Paper Edition

This is indeed the era of CONSERVATION—of SCIENTIFIC MANAGEMENT; in every field the world's keenest minds are at work to save time, energy, resources—to promote facility and convenience. For the first time this principle is now applied in the mechanical production of an important American work of reference; the result is shown in the photographic reproduction here printed; this result is accomplished simply by employing English-finish Bible paper (known as India paper) instead of the ordinary paper generally used, and by substituting flexible covers for stiff and heavy boards. Such is the transformation now effected in the Special Edition for 1911 of that great twenty-volume library of universal reference,

THE AMERICANA

A comparison of the two volumes affords a surprise; you find that each contains nearly 1,000 pages; you note that without sacrificing legibility or durability there is a great saving in shelf-space with unusual facility and convenience in handling, making reference so quick and easy as to be a pleasure and not a task. The India-paper feature and the flexible covers (in Buckram and Full Morocco) are decided economic improvements. The volumes are as easy to handle as a magazine; one of them may be lifted between thumb and finger, even by a child; the full twenty-volume set occupies so little space that the work may be kept on a small desk or library table—at your elbow for quick service—resulting in an increased usefulness, especially to youthful knowledge seekers who are not inclined to make a trip to distant shelf or bookcase to make sure about things that come up in reading or study.

What the Americana Is

A work edited under the supervision of FREDERICK CONVERSE BEACH, for thirty years Editor of

THE SCIENTIFIC AMERICAN.

2,000 Editors 70,000 Articles

He has had the assistance of more than two thousand of the world's great scholars and experts; these writers have deemed it an honor to be identified with so noble a work.

ENTIRELY ORIGINAL PLAN:—The AMERICANA, as its thousands of owners will attest, is up-to-date and modern to the last degree; the mistakes and omissions of other works, even recent ones, have been avoided; its method of production is new; it is written by MEN WHO KNOW—not by mere compilers, but by expert workers in every field and that field is covered not by ONE expert, but by MANY. The work contains upward of seventy thousand articles WHICH WOULD YOU RATHER HAVE: ONE ARTICLE ON ELECTRICITY BY ONE MAN WHO COULD NOT POSSIBLY KNOW IT ALL, OR THIRTY ARTICLES ON THE DIFFERENT BRANCHES OF THAT GREAT SUBJECT—MAGNETISM, LIGHT, HEAT, POWER, TRACTION AND SO ON—EACH BY THE ACKNOWLEDGED MASTER-WRITER IN THAT SPECIAL BRANCH?

AMERICAN TOPICS:—From the day of its publication The AMERICANA has led all others in its exhaustive treatment of subjects of vital interest and importance to Americans, and not alone concerning the United States and her possessions, but concerning British America, Central America and South America as well.

FOREIGN COUNTRIES:—Every nation of the earth is treated with absolute fairness and in due proportion; moreover the work is of international scholarship, and to this end the ablest writers of other lands have been called in and each has contributed according to his special knowledge of his own country. WHICH WOULD YOU RATHER HAVE: ONE ARTICLE ON JAPAN COMPILED FROM OTHER BOOKS IN THE OLD WAY BY AN OFFICE-EDITOR, OR TWENTY ARTICLES WRITTEN BY TWENTY JAPANESE SCHOLARS AND MEN OF AFFAIRS—EACH AN EXPERT?

RECENT KNOWLEDGE:—The AMERICANA not only presents in orderly array for easy finding the World's FIXED knowledge in the realms of History, Biography, Literature, Mathematics and the like, but also spells the latest and fullest word regarding RECENT knowledge along scientific lines—knowledge that may be called EXPERIMENTAL in that it has been and is receiving additions from time to time as the result of recent research, investigation and discovery. Much of this experimental knowledge is NOW FOR THE FIRST TIME GIVEN TO THE WORLD.

Both volumes contain the same number of pages and are printed from the same type, with the same illustrations, maps, charts, diagrams, photographic and color plates.

"A Work of Vast Interest and Immense Utility"

That is what is said of The AMERICANA by those who own it; the work is of "vast interest" because it places the reader in close touch with great writers on every theme, and it is of "immense utility" because you get this knowledge AT FIRST HAND, and in simple, non-technical language that even youthful readers can understand and enjoy. In fact, it makes the pursuit of knowledge interesting, rapid and easy.

Add to this the CONVENIENT FORM of the India-paper edition, which largely increases its usefulness, and you have a work of UNIVERSAL REFERENCE in EVERY DEPARTMENT OF KNOWLEDGE that is SIMPLY IDEAL for the home or office and especially to help the young folks in their studies.

PROMPT ACTION ADVISED Of the Special Edition printed on India paper many of the sets are already bespoken by present owners in exchange for ordinary paper sets, and orders are coming in rapidly. PARLIAMENT IS OPENED BY KING AND QUEEN

Big Crowds Gather in Streets Through Which Corge us Procession Passed.

OVATION FOR THE SOVEREIGN.

Brilliant Scene in House of Lords, Where Brief and Colorless Speech Is Read From the Throne.

London, February 6—King George and Queen Mary, for the first time in their reign, proceeded in state this afternoon from Buckingham Palace to Westminster, where His Majesty read the speech formally opening Parliament from the throne in the House of Lords. During the ceremony the Queen was seated at the side of the King.

Though the day was dark and chilly an immense throng was gathered in St. James Park and in Whitehall, where the gorgeous procession passed. Other thousands surrounded the Parliamentary buildings.

Their Majesties rode in the gilded state coach drawn by eight cream-colored horses caparisoned in gold and purple. The King wore a field marshal's uniform.

As the royal party passed the cheering was unusually hearty, as it was the first opportunity that the populace had had to express its gratification over the vindication of King George in the recent libel suit against Edward Myllus.

An escort of Life Guards preceded the state coach, and Yeomen of the Guard followed. Five state carriages, each drawn by six horses, were occupied by officials of the court and gentlemen and ladies in waiting. Regiments of the Guards lined the route, and as the procession moved on, the artillery regiments fired the royal salute. The crown and sword of state were borne from St. James Palace to Parliament in the royal carriage under the escort of the Guards.

The House of Lords was packed when the imperial procession entered from the robing room at 2:30 o'clock. The Colonies for the first time were represented by the Colonial Agents General. Diplomats occupied places in the royal gallery. The women were mauve in half mourning.

Speaker Lowther and as many of the members of the House of Commons as could, crowded the floor and stood in the aisles. All the officers of state in regalia, including Earl Carrington, Lord Great Chamberlain, with equerries and pursuivants bearing the emblems of office, escorted Their Majesties into the chamber and were grouped around the throne during the ceremony.

The King's speech from the throne was brief and colorless. It opened with a filial reference to the death of King Edward. The only references to foreign affairs were a mention of the fact that negotiations had been opened with Japan for a new commercial treaty, and an allusion to the friction in Persia over the disturbance of British trade routes. A casual expression of interest in the approaching imperial conference was made.

Only two proposed legislative measures were mentioned specifically. "Proposals," said the King, "will be submitted without delay for settling the relations between the two houses of Parliament, with the object of securing an effective, working constitution."

Legislation would also be had, His Majesty said, to provide insurance against sickness and unemployment.

In making the declaration of faith, King George used for the first time the amended form adopted at the last session of Parliament and which omits the traditional reference to the Catholic Church, which was offensive to the adherents of that faith.

From the paucity of the legislative proposals it is evident that the government has determined to allow nothing beyond necessary financial measures, to interfere with action on the veto bill. The Suffragettes already are threatening a renewal of their activities because they were not mentioned in the speech, and the laborites are much put out for the reason that it contained no promise of a bill dealing with the hated Osborne judgment.

That the Nationalists are satisfied with their position was indicated, when at a meeting held late in the day, they decided not to introduce any private bills during the present session.

A RAID AT KINGS PARK

Quantity of Liquor Confiscated From an Alleged Unlicensed Grocery Close to Asylum Grounds.

(Special to The Eagle.)

Kings Park, L. I., February 6—One man is in the lockup at Northport and two others are at liberty on bail, as the result of a raid made on Friday night on an Italian store on the grounds of the State Hospital for the Insane here. A large quantity of spirituous liquors were seized as evidence of their illegal sale.

Many complaints have been received of the place, which is located close to the hospital buildings, and which ostensibly supplies groceries and provisions to the Italian laborers. It is conducted by A. M. De Leo of Brooklyn, who had as manager Antonio Zanziella.

Last Monday Justice J. F Kelly took the deposition of an attendant at the hospital, who had been arraigned before him fordrunkenness, in which he swore that he had purchased whisky at De Leo's store. The justice forwarded the paper, together with similar affidavits, to District Attorney Furman.

An order of search and seizure was immediately issued by County Judge Griffing, and the raid was made on Friday night. A large quantity of liquor was seized, and Manager Zanziella, together with two other Italians, John Grinaidi and Antonio Cochlara, were taken into custody.

Another Italian, Mike Patsy, who was connected with the place, is in Brooklyn, but a warrant has been issued for his arrest. Zanziella and Grinaidi were released each on $1,000 bail, but Cochlara is still in jail.

It is claimed that the place was not only selling liquor without a license, but it was in further violation of the law in selling liquor on the grounds of the State Hospital.

The matter of the seizure will come up beofre Judge Griffing at iverhead, and the three Italians will be arraigned before Justice Kelly, probably on Wednesday.

SNOWSTORM FROM WEST MAY LAST ALL NIGHT

Forecaster Scarr Expects the Fall to Be a Heavy One

TRAFFIC IN WEST SUFFERS.

Brooklyn is in the grasp of a lusty snow storm, this afternoon, which gives every indication of holding on for a while. It began half an hour before noon, and Mr. Scarr, the local weather expert, may fasten another feather in his cap, for an hour before it started he told an Eagle reporter that the storm was on the way and would descend on the city before night. He thought it might be one of the old-fashioned kind, too.

The storm certainly began like one of those you may expect to hear about when a country grandfather settles himself by the stove in the village store and says, "Why, I remember a winter of forty years ago when——." The flakes were not large and wet, but fine and dry. They fell from a typical storm sky without a glint of blue to relieve its leaden gray and soon the roofs of Brooklyn were bonneted with white. There wasn't much wind, but the snow fell with a consistent, steady force which boded ill for traffic on the surface lines before many hours had passed.

At noon the official temperature stood at 20, which was a slight increase. It was said then that the storm was moving eastward, that the storm center had been over Illinois at 8 o'clock and that the snow fall would increase within the next thirty-six hours. According to the Weather Bureau, the snow will pelt us even harder before night sets in.

Forecaster Scarr said this morning: "The storm which is traveling this way from the westward is central over Ohio and the Mississippi Valley just now. It is snowing north and south of us. The storm has made a ring around us, and its nearest points of approach to this city are at Pittsburg, Erie and Buffalo. The ring is gradually lessening in circumference, and is due to close in on us this afternoon. It may be a very heavy fall or it may be a storm of only moderate force. Four or five inches of snow cover the ground in Ohio, and it is still snowing there.

"Do you think the storm will break all records for the winter?" the prophet was asked.

"That is hard to tell. We had 9 inches in December. The storm may last over until to-morrow, but to-morrow it should clear up. Indications are that the temperature will rise this afternoon, but it probably will be colder Tuesday."

While Mr. Scarr was saying this, dispatches flashed here over wires sagging under a dead weight of wet snow telling of Chicago being in difficulties. A widespreading white counterpane covered the Windy City, interfering with the traffic on the steam and elevated railroads and sadly handicapping surface lines. Telegraph wires were expected to fall at any time because of the sleet, and conditions were not improving. The weather was growing steadily colder, and threatened to bring about much suffering.

At Davenport, Ia., 8 inches of snow fell.

The snow fall in Pittsburg is the heaviest of the winter, and street car service to many suburbs was suspended. All rail traffic was hampered.

At a number of points in New England early to-day the temperatures were the lowest of the winter.

The cold wave in that section was receding at noon before a heavy storm approaching from the West.

MRS. S. S. CHAUNCEY WEDS

Her First Husband, Who Died in 1899, Left Her Over a Million Dollars.

Brooklyn society in particular as well as American society in general will no doubt be more interested than surprised in the cable news of the day from London that Mrs. Samuel Sloan Chauncey has married a wealthy Englishman, Brigadier General the Hon. Cecil Edward Bingham. The ceremony was quietly solemnized on Saturday, in the presence of a few of their closest friends, among whom were the Grand Duke Michael and his daughter, the Duke of Rutland and Lord and Lady Savile.

Mrs. Chauncey was known at the time of her husband's death, in 1899, as the "most beautiful widow in the world." She was, before her first marriage, Miss Alice Louise Carr, daughter of a politician in moderate circumstances of Leavenworth Ind. Upon the death of her father, the beauty and grace of the young woman attracted the notice of Dr. George Griffith, a leading physician of Louisville, Ky., who invited her to visit his daughter and she was introduced by them into Kentucky society. While on a visit with them to Florida, Miss Carr met Mr. Chauncey, a wealthy resident of the Heights in Brooklyn. They were married in 1894, and took up their residence at 146 Joralemon street.

Throughout the lingering illness of Mr. Chauncey, which ended in his death in Colorado, whither he had gone in search of relief, Mrs. Chauncey had been a most devoted wife, abandoning all of her social leadership and opportunities. From her husband's estate she was said to have received $1,500,000.

Soon afterward, the widow, renowned for her beauty, removed to London, where she took up her residence, entering immediately into the innermost circles of court society. From time to time rumors of her engagement to many titled foreigners were rife, although no wedding materialized until Saturday. Among her suitors were said to be Prince Miguel of Braganza, eldest son of the Portuguese pretender; Lord Rosebery, Lord Dalmeny and several others.

In England, Mrs. Chauncey created a furore with her beauty and charm of manner. King Edward VII was said to be one of the most ardent champions of Mrs. Chauncey in her social activities, in which she was frequently spoken of as "one of those delightful Americans."

Mrs. Chauncey's sister, now the wife of Lord Newborough; and her mother, Mrs. Carr, were present at her marriage on Saturday to General Bingham. The bridegroom is in command of the Second Brigade of Household Cavalry.

EXTRA SESSION TALK STRONGER IN CAPITAL

Canada Does Not Look Upon Reciprocity Agreement as a Standing Offer.

EARLY ACTION IS NECESSARY.

Belief That President Practically Has Made Up His Mind to Call Extra Session.

Eagle Bureau,
608 Fourteenth Street.

Washington, February 6—There was more extra session talk about the White House to-day than at any time since the Canadian trade agreement was submitted to Congress. While the President is somewhat sensitive about the public getting the impression that he is talking extra session with the expectation that such talk will have an influence on the present Congress, it is now well understood that he practically has made up his mind to call an extra session the later part of March if the present House of Representatives shall ratify the agreement and the Senate shall fail to act on it.

Early action is necessary, because Canada is not willing to have the agreement hold over until next winter. The Dominion officials have let the officials here know within the last few days that Canada does not look upon the agreement submitted as a standing offer. This situation undoubtedly is influencing the President to make up his mind in favor of an extra session in case ratification is not obtained at the present session.

The prospect is that the Democratic members of the House will, at their caucus to-night, decide to support the agreement. If they do take this action the ratification of the agreement by the House the latter part of this week or the first of next will be assured.

So far the President has not been able to make any headway with the Senate. The agreement is now pigeonholed in the Committee on Foreign Relations, and whether it will be turned over by that body to the Committee on Finance, which must consider it, remains to be seen. Some of the opponents of the agreement are urging the Foreign Relations Committee to hold on to it, and thus prevent even committee action at this session. The President's inquiries have convinced him that the agreement would go through the Senate if a vote could be reached.

While the insurgent Republican Senators, with the exception of Senator Beveridge, probably would vote against the agreement on the ground that it favors the beef trust, the steel trust and the rubber trust, the real opposition comes from the old standpatters. The President is greatly disappointed over the attitude of such insurgent Senators as La Follette, Cummins and Bristow. He had supposed they would be heartily in favor of the agreement.

Three important subjects will hold the attention of Congress this week. In the House the apportionment bill will be the leading issue. The advocates of a House of 391 and the advocates of a membership of 433 are each claiming a majority. The Republicans are showing no disposition to abide by the decision of their caucus last week, which fixed 391 as the membership to be supported, all of which goes to show that there is no longer any Republican leadership in the House.

In the Senate, the Lorimer case and the tariff commission legislation will lead. The expectation is that a vote on Lorimer will be reached by Thursday or Friday. The tariff commission bill, as amended by the Committee on Finance at Saturday's meeting, will be brought into the Senate about the middle of the week. Its backers hope to see it made the unfinished business in place of the direct election of Senators resolution. The chance of this bill going through the Senate seemed better to-day than it was a week ago.

TELLS COOLLY ABOUT MURDER

King McNamara of Lexington, Ky., Surrenders to Police.

Shot a Man Dead Who Slandered His Brother, and Now Believes He Can "Beat the Case."

King McNamara, who walked into the West Thirtieth street police station in Manhattan, last night, and said he was wanted in Lexington, Ky., for a murder he committed twelve years ago, when arraigned this morning before Magistrate Murphy, in the Tombs police court, told of the crime in a manner as unconcerned as if it were just an ordinary incident in his life.

"Yes, I killed a man, judge," he said, "and feeling that I'm just going to beat the case, I want to go back and have it over with. I don't know his name, but I knew of him, and when he said that one of my brthers had registered falsely, why we just got into an argument. He made a move as if to draw his 'smoke-wagon,' but I had mine in my overcoat pocket, and so I beat him to it. That's all there is to it."

Detective Murphy, who took McNamara into court, showed the magistrate a telegram which was received from Chief of Police J. J. Regan of Lexington, saying that the Kentuckian was wanted for the murder of Jacob S. Keller, in February, 1899. Magistrate Murphy committed him to the Tombs on a short affidavit, and he will be held there until the arrival of Lexington officers with requisition papers.

PASTOR RUSSELL'S VIEWS

Evangelistic and Missionary Efforts Discounted.

WHY GOD CARES FOR MAN

Pastor Russell of Brooklyn Tabernacle

Brooklyn Academy of Music was crowded yesterday afternoon to hear Pastor Russell on God's mindfulness of man from the text, "What Is Man, That Thou Art Mindful of Him?" (Psalm viii, 4.) The large audience listened with intense interest, so that a pin-drop could have been heard. The speaker said:—

For some weeks our city will be in the throes of a "Revival of Religion." Hundreds of ministers have placed themselves and their congregations under the leadership of the Rev. Dr. Chapman and Mr. Alexander, the famous singer, for the purpose of reviving religion; for the purpose of rescuing human souls from eternal torment, as the proposition is generally understood. Business men have subscribed large sums of money for this noble work of rescue, reasoning that if thousands of dollars are spent in fire-fighting apparatus for the protection of human life for a few years, the services of Messrs. Chapman and Alexander will be cheap if they carry away twenty-five thousand dollars for a month's work, provided the results show a goodly number rescued from eternal torment.

Sympathizes With the Open-Handed Business Man.

We sympathize with some of these large-hearted and open-handed business men who give their money for so laudable an object. Yet we cannot think that many, nay not even a majority, of those who contributed this sum have done so conscientiously. We cannot think that one-half of them believe in the teaching of eternal torture, nor can we think that more than one-tenth of them believe that a practical conversion is signified by a response to an invitation which implies a preference for heavenly bliss rather than for eternal anguish. However, it is for those who pay the money to exercise their own consciences in this matter, and it is none of our business what they decide.

We sympathize also with the hundreds of pastors of this city who have joined in this movement, which they hope will increase their congregations and church revenues, but these pastors know in reality that the Bible does not teach eternal torment, and they have discarded the Bible anyway in favor of Higher Critical-Infidelity. Theirs is an unhappy and stultified position.

We sympathize still more with the poor people whose education along spiritual lines is almost wholly neglected, and who live in constant fear of the God who loves them and in dreadful misunderstanding of the Bible, which he has given them. Between the imperfectness of the translation and the coloring of prejudice and the twist of misunderstanding of some parables and symbols they are helpless in the presence of educated men who teach inferentially what they do not themselves believe. Alas! poor "common people!" that you should be betrayed by those in whom you repose confidence and whom you unwittingly pay for keeping you in the dark by taking from you the key of knowledge. Truly, "My people perish for lack of knowledge" (Hosea iv:6).

Sympathizes Still More With God.

But still more we sympathize with God, whose name is dishonored, whose Justice, Mercy, Wisdom, Love and Power are traduced, nay, vilified. We say to ourself, How wonderful the patience of God, which for centuries has endured blasphemous misrepresentations of his good character and Divine Plan of the Ages! Well does He tell us that as the heavens are higher than the earth, so His plans and methods in respect to our salvation are higher than ours—not lower. Well does He tell us that human fear toward Him is taught by the precepts of men, not according to His word (Isaiah xxix:13). We can see reasons why the Lord has kept silence toward the heathen, but we are perplexed that judgments have so long delayed to come upon those who, knowing better, still slander the great and holy name and misrepresent the Divine purposes.

What would a chief shepherd do to an under-shepherd found misleading the sheep, guiding them into poisonous pastures? We believe that he would take the sheep from them, even though he allowed them still to shepherd the goats. And it is quite our thought that such a judgment impends over Christendom and that all shepherds, false to their trust, will be dismissed ignominiously, and that very soon!

Some urge that we should do evil in order to obtain good results; that we should misrepresent the Divine character in order to get people to join the Church. Is it urged that some may, as a result of this evangelistic movement, lead a more orderly and decent life hereafter as citizens, and that we should be willing to join in traducing our Creator, in order to obtain this result? We answer, No, a thousand times, No! In our judgment the perversions of the Truth, the dishonoring of our Maker, the instilling of misconceptions into the minds of the people, is an awful cost to pay, even if the results should be a hundred times as great as promised. Well did Jesus say, "Ye compass sea and land to make one proselyte and, when he is gained, you make him two-fold more a child of destruction than yourselves" (Mat. xxiii:15). The conversions achieved by misrepresentations of God instill a poison into the heart difficult to eradicate, impervious to the Truth.

It grieves me to be obliged conscientiously thus to characterize a movement which has, at least, an outward appearance of godliness. It will attract to me the venom of those whose hypocrisies I criticize. It is not the money that they will collect that grieves me, for those who give it honestly, thinking thus to serve the Lord, will surely be blessed by Him. It is the hypocrisy of the thing, the misrepresentation of their own belief and unbelief and the slander against the holy name of the Creator and the further bamboozling and throwing of dust into the eyes of the common people—this awakens, and should awaken, righteous indignation. And the more others do not speak, the more I must speak in denunciation and in warning to the people to search the Scriptures and become undeceived.

Harken Now to Our Text.

The teachings of all the creeds of the "Dark Ages" which have come down to us, although they contain many good things, are so befogged with misrepresentations of God as to be a stench to our nostrils and a menace to our spiritual health. They picture to us a God either reckless and careless of the future interests of

SEVERAL MISSIONS TO BEGIN TO-MORROW

Fathers of Various Orders Will Conduct Exercises in Local Churches.

NEWS OF CATHOLIC PARISHES.

Several missions will begin in Brooklyn to-morrow, at the last masses in the churches in which the services will be conducted. At the Church of St. Vincent de Paul, in North Sixth street, the Vincentian Fathers from Springfield, Mass., will start a mission that will continue for four weeks. The leader of this band of missionaries will be: The Rev. P. M. Boland, C. M., assisted by the Rev. P. F. Finnigan, C. M.; the Rev. C. R. Rosenstein, C. M., and the Rev. J. J. Lee, C. M. At St. Michael's Church, Fourth avenue and Forty-second street, of which the Rev. William T. McGuirl is rector, the Passionist Fathers of Hoboken will begin a three weeks mission. The Church of the Holy Name, Prospect Park West and Prospect avenue, of which the Rev. Thomas O'Reilly is rector, will have a mission that will continue for two weeks, conducted by the Vincentian Fathers, while at the Church of St. Rose of Lima, Parkville, of which the Rev. James J. McAleese is rector, the Redemptorist Fathers will begin a renewal mission that will last for two weeks. Announcements of other missions will be made from time to time as the Lenten season progresses.

Next Wednesday, Friday and Saturday will be the ember days of spring, on which the obligation of fasting rests upon those who are not exempt.

The St. Vincent de Paul Society will hold its annual spring meeting at St. Patrick's Hall, Willoughby avenue, to-morrow. The annual reports will be made and talks will be delivered by men who are interested in the work of the society.

The quarterly conference of the clergy of the diocese will be held at St. John's College on Tuesday and Thursday of next week. On Tuesday the dogmatic paper will be read by the Rev. Francis Dillon of St. Antony of Padua's Church, and the historical paper by the Rev. M. G. Flanbery, LL.D., rector of St. Paul's. On Thursday the dogmatic paper will be by the Rev. Thomas Baxter, D. D., of St. Michael's, and the historical paper by the Rev. Frank Renner, D. D., of the Church of the Fourteen Holy Martyrs.

The forty hours devotion will begin to-morrow at St. Francis Xavier's, Sixth avenue and Carroll street; St. Peter's, Hicks and Warren streets, and at St. Nicholas', Olive and Devoe streets.

In the death of Brother Paul O.S.F., Brooklyn has lost one of her foremost Catholic educators. For nearly half a century Brother Paul had been a member of the Franciscan Community at St. Francis College. He came of a distinguished family and was a convert to the Catholic faith. Though a man of brilliant attainments, who would doubtless have made his mark in the priesthood, he preferred to walk in a humbler, though in no less useful, path, and many of the clergy of Brooklyn that have attained eminence owe it to the training they received at his hands. In his earlier years he was intimately acquainted with Cardinals Manning and Newman. His funeral yesterday was attended by most of the leading pastors of the diocese. His remains were interred in the community plot in Holy Cross Cemetery.

To-night at St. Ignatius' Church, Nostrand avenue and Carroll street, the novena of grace begins in honor of the canonization of St. Ignatius and St. Francis Xavier. The novena will continue until Sunday, March 12, and each evening there will be a sermon, prayer and benediction. The sermons will be by the Rev. Fathers O'Conor, Coughlan, Hurley, Young, Conniff, Smith and Cotter and will deal with the life and attributes of St. Francis Xavier. A plenary indulgence may be gained by those who make the novena and visit a Jesuit church.

The Rev. Joseph P. McGinley, rector of St. Patrick's Church, Fort Hamilton, is expected home this evening. The Rev. Frederick Lund, associate rector of St. Charles Borromeo's, the Rev. Martin Lang and the Rev. Peter Schwarz will return some time next week.

The many friends of the Rev. John A. Bohag, assistant rector of the Church of Our Lady of Mercy, in Schermerhorn street, will be glad to learn that he is now recovering from the severe illness that has confined him to his room for some time. Father Bohag was taken ill suddenly about two weeks ago while celebrating mass, and for several days his condition was very serious. It is expected that in a short time he will be able to resume his duties.

For the benefit of the building fund of St. James Hall, Lakewood, N. J., which is under the care of the Sisters of St. Joseph, a fair and festival of the nations will be held during the last week in March. The sisters are preparing to add a new structure to their present property, which is too small to accommodate the growing needs of the institution. Several handsome articles have already been donated.

The confirmation yesterday by the Senate of President Taft's nomination of the Rev. Edward F. Brophy of the Church of Our Lady of Victory, Brooklyn, as chaplain in the army completes the official proceedings that will take away from this borough one of its most popular and zealous priests.

With hardly an exception, original buildings at the Catholic University, Washington, have been outgrown. Students have come to the University direct, and also to the colleges of the religious communities, which now number eight—Paulists, Holy Cross Fathers, Marists, Sulpicians, Franciscans, Dominicans, Apostolic Mission House and Fathers of the Divine Word, besides Benedictines and the Congregation of the Precious Blood, represented in the University School of Theology. Students from these communities attend University classes and take a fair share of the degrees. Appeal is made to meet the need for a chapel to be located at a University campus center, and to seat about seven hundred. The chapel in Divinity Hall, long used, has become quite too small. A new building is needed for Chemistry, and the University looks forward to a post-graduate school in biology. Dormitories are in great need, as they are at other universities, for fifty lay students are soon to arrive, supported by the Knights of Columbus Foundation, which foundation represents $500,000. A new Divinity Hall is imperatively needed, and discussion of making it or other buildings memorials of various Catholic leaders, notably, of course, Cardinal Gibbons, is going on.

An important meeting of Branch No. 244, Catholic Knights of America, was held in St. Philomenia's Hall, Sidney place and Livingston street, on Sunday night. John O'Rourke presided and William O'Rourke recorded. The meeting was called for the purpose of indorsing a protest made by the local Federation of German Catholic societies, against the passage of a bill now pending in the Legislature legalizing the Sabbath as a day on which a certain class of people will be permitted to do business. Patrick Ward paid a high compliment to the German Federation for the interest manifested in this important matter, and he hoped that all representative American citizens would co-operate with the German Catholics to prevent the law being passed. Richard J. Conlon said that resolutions condemning the bill should be sent to Albany by every Catholic society.

The Daughters of Wisdom will collect to-morrow at the doors of the Church of Our Lady of Mercy, Schermerhorn street, and the Church of the Holy Innocents, Beverley road and East Seventeenth street. On the second Sunday of Lent, March 12, through the kind invitations of the pastors of St. Ann's Church, Front and Gold streets, and the Church of the Sacred Hearts of Jesus and Mary, Hicks street, the good sisters will collect at those churches.

The Rev. David J. Hickey, rector of the Church of St. Francis Xavier, Sixth avenue and Carroll street, has made every home in his parish a temporary bank. He has distributed 1,000 small banks that are to be filled and returned by May 1. The proceeds, it is hoped, will wipe out the small debt on the property and provide the nucleus for a fund for the building of the new parochial school. The parish was founded by Father Hickey twenty-five years ago, and there will be a grand celebration of the silver jubilee.

Under the auspices of the Fenelon Reading Circle Dr. James J. Walsh, the celebrated lecturer, will tell of "Art Epochs in St. Francis Country" on March 14 at 4 P.M. at the Touch Gallery.

Musical Moments

Mme. Destinn's Two Successive Nights—"The Children of Bethlehem" a Delightful Production.

Mme. Emmy Destinn, on Thursday night, appeared in "The Girl of the Golden West" and on Friday night, in the Metropolitan, in "The Bartered Bride." Two exacting roles to her credit on two successive nights established her versatility and powers of endurance, with no loss of artistic effect, which needed no proof, and the unusual care of her health, which is entitled to remark and praise. The opera on Friday night, drew a fair audience, won respectful and close attention, was a delight to such as heard it for the first time and was far from unsatisfactory to those whose pleasure in it was renewed. Among such as assisted Mme. Destinn, Karl Jorn attracted favor as Hans; Otto Goritz challenged attention as the imbecile and versatile butt of occasion; while Witherspoon, Bayer, Ruysdael, Ludwig, Burgstaller, Anna Case and others renewed the agreeable impression of former occasions in their roles. The music was engaging, the dancing graceful, the costumes picturesque and the orchestra, under the control of Alfred Hertz, was not only effective but pleasing.

The New Theater held an audience yesterday afternoon which followed with interest the unfolding of the story of the "Children of Bethlehem," by Gabriel Pierne. Walter Damrosch seemed to be inspired when he suggested that this musical composition be given a stage form. As it stands it is a spiritual and lovely idyl. The shepherd children singing and gamboling on the pasture lands, their affright as the star flames out in the sky, and the Voice speaks to them; their starting out to see the Heavenly Babe, bearing their gifts to Him, and their visit to the manger where the little Lord Jesus lies, are here set to music of the most interesting nature. The realism of the stage setting, and the sweep of the wind across the pasture were details which made the idyl seem very real. The parts were taken by Miss Florence Mulford, as the Virgin; Miss Elizabeth Dodge, as the Star; Miss Hulda Lashanska, as Jeanette; Mme. Marguerite Kefer, as Nicholas; Miss Beatrice Bowman, as Babette; William Wheeler as the ass and ox; Horatio Connell, as a herdsman, and Edward Duray as a celestial voice. A chorus of shepherd children, three magi and attendants, were included in the cast.

The ideal production of this religious drama, would be by children, for though the young women taking the parts look like children, their voices are not those of children. The Jeannette was specially well placed with Miss Lashanska; her dramatic work was strong and her voice, more naturally handled than that of the Virgin, who sang like an opera singer. Simplicity in the singing of the Mary would have given just the needed touch of spirituality to the part; her work, however, was well sustained. Although he is French, Mr. Pierne did not give a too Gallic touch to the music. There is good Oriental coloring and sensuous beauty, as a whole. The scene in the stable, though mystically lovely, might have been staged more in accordance with a child's notion of the stable wherein the Lord was born. The chorus was a mellow and sweet ensemble and the shading was effective. A delightful element in the audience was the presence of many children.

The Schubert "Unfinished Symphony" was played exquisitely, as a kind of prelude to the Beethoven drama.

At Irving Place Theater (Deutsches), Manhattan, the famous German tenor, Werner Alberti, continues to earn deserved plaudits. Last night he essayed the character of Manrico in Verdi's "Der Troubadour," and delighted a large audience with his manly, robust tenor. The opera was well staged and the cast of principals was adequate. Fraulein Jeannette Allen was the Leonore, and she sang with full, round mezzo-soprano. Frau Fischer-Zarad was Azucena, the gypsy mother, and she scored dramatically as well as vocally. The chorus, weak in number, and somewhat ragged in attack, yet sang tunefully, while the orchestra, under Herr Burgarth, was excellent. Many Brooklynites were in the audience.

BROOKLYN ACADEMY OF MUSIC
Sunday, March 5th, 3 P. M.
Because of the incapacity of the Tabernacle to accommodate the crowds which attend Pastor Russell's services when he is in Brooklyn, the Academy of Music for some time past has been used, as it will be to-morrow. Its capacity is about 2,500, and late-comers frequently fail to gain admittance. Pastor Russell has many demands upon his time in various parts of the United States and Canada, but aims to always give Brooklyn the first Sunday of each month. To-morrow afternoon's service, however, will be the last for him in Brooklyn until May 7, as he has numerous appointments in the interim—week days as well as Sundays. He addresses gatherings of Bible Students and usually has the largest auditoriums, and them crowded. His coming itinerary in Europe includes at least five addresses to Jews on "Zionism in Prophecy."

The address to-morrow in the Academy will be at the usual hour—3 o'clock. All seats will be free, no collections will be lifted. A Question Meeting is announced for the evening, 7:30 P.M. sharp, at the Brooklyn Tabernacle, 13 and 17 Hicks street. Bible queries of every sort will be entertained.

REPUBLICANS WILL LOSE MANY FINE, SOFT JOBS

G. O. P. Leaders to Be Turned Ruthlessly Adrift, Is Plan.

BILLS SURE TO BE PASSED.

If the plans of the Democratic organization leaders go through, nearly every Republican district leader in Kings County will lose his job. This includes not only the leaders, but their chief lieutenants as well, for they are all marked for removal, and it will be surprising if any of the Woodruff men are in public office at the end of the year. Their combined salaries reach nearly $100,000 a year.

Seven Republican district leaders, and several other officials of the Kings County Republican general committee are slated to lose their jobs before many weeks, according to the plans of the Democrats. And as the hour for the reopening of the session of the Legislature to-night grows nearer, the leaders are growing gloomier and gloomier, for all the reports they receive are discouraging in the extreme. Only one or two maintain a cheerful demeanor, the others are frankly blue. The men whom the Democrats have marked for decapitation include:

Jacob Brenner, chairman of the Republican executive committee, of the Eighth Assembly District, and commissioner of jurors. Salary, $6,000.

Jacob Livingston, leader of the Twenty-second Assembly District, and deputy commissioner of jurors. Salary, $3,500.

Lewis M. Swasey, leader of the Seventeenth Assembly District, and commissioner of records. Salary, $5,000.

D. H. Ralston, leader of the First Assembly District, and deputy commissioner of records. Salary, $4,000.

Charles E. Teale, treasurer of the Republican county committee, and public administrator. Salary, fees.

Charles H. Kelby, president of the Republican county committee and counsel to the public administrator. Fees.

Charles F. Murphy, leader of the Tenth Assembly District and state transfer tax appraiser. Salary, $3,500.

Nearly all of these come under provisions in legislation proposed by the leaders of the Democratic majority in the Legislature, or else under the jurisdiction of the State Civil Service Commission, now Democratic, and from present indications, either the appointing power will be changed and Democrats put in their places, or civil service regulations will be amended so as to permit their removal and the substitutions of faithful Democratic workers in their places.

In addition to these, Naval Officer F. J. H. Kracke, leader of the Eighteenth Assembly District, may face the abolishment of his office, as was recommended by President Taft in his message to the last Congress. The Democratic House majority may pass a bill embodying the President's recommendation, and it would certainly be favored by Senator O'Gorman, the new Democratic Senator from New York, and the other new Democrats in the Senate. William Barnes, jr., the Republican state chairman, who occupied a similar position at Albany, has already been supplanted, but his position has not been abolished. Kracke's salary is $8,000.

Further, there are rumors of an alliance between Borough President Steers, who is a Democrat, elected on a Fusion ticket, and Democratic County Leader John H. McCooey. Steers lives in McCooey's district. If these rumors, which are scouted by the Republican leaders, should turn out to be true, more Republican district leaders and their friends will find themselves out in the cold. These men, under the jurisdiction of the Borough President, include:

Reuben L. Haskell, Republican leader of the Twenty-third Assembly District and borough secretary. Salary, $3,500.

Frederick Linde, Republican leader of the Ninth Assembly District and Superintendent of Highways. Salary, $5,000.

Thomas Lineburgh, Republican leader of the Fifth Assembly District and Assistant Commissioner of Public Works. Salary, $5,000.

Lewis H. Pounds, chief aid to Kracke in the Eighteenth District and Commissioner of Public Works. Salary, $6,000.

Combine Is Known as "Office-Holding Trust."

The whole combine has been termed by disgruntled Republican workers who never had a chance at a good job as "the Office-holding Trust." Some of these Republicans will not object if their leaders are put out of office, for they hold to the old opinion that "to the victors belong the spoils," in this instance at least.

Brenner and Livingston are affected by the bill introduced by Assemblyman Fay, which seeks to take from the county judges the power of appointing the Commissioner of Jurors and give it to the Sheriff, County Clerk, Register, District Attorney and Surrogate, as a board. Swasey and Ralston are affected similarly by a bill ending their terms of office, introduced by Assemblyman Donnelly, and providing for the appointment of their successors by the Register, who is a Democrat. The county judges—Dike and Fawcett, Republicans—now have the power of appointing the Commissioner of Records. Teale and Kelby are affected by a measure in many respects similar to the two preceding, which provides that the Public Administrator shall be appointed by the Surrogate, a Democrat, instead of by the Surrogate and the two county judges, as at present. This bill was introduced by Senator Sanner. Devoy's job is in danger because Senator Cronin's bill to end his term and provide for the appointment of his successor by the County Clerk, at present a Democrat, instead of by the two county judges, is well along toward final passage. Murphy, Schnitzspan and Wentz, as subordinates of the State Controller, are now enjoying the benefits of civil service regulations which were applied to them under the last administration. The present Civil Service Commission has already passed a resolution rescinding that action and placing them in the exempt class, so that they may expect a request for their resignations at almost any time.

Kemlo, as Deputy Receiver of Taxes for Brooklyn, might be removed should the Gaynor charter, which provides that his office shall be transferred to the jurisdiction of the City Chamberlain, instead of the Controller, be passed.

Marcus Campbell, as counsel to the State Lunacy Commission, may be the only one left at the end of the year, as the majority of the board are hold-overs from the Hughes administration, with long terms to serve. But Governor Dix wishes to abolish the commission, and that would end Campbell. All in all, there is little cheer at Republican headquarters.

It was reported to-day, that, in addition to all those enumerated above, Philip T. Williams, Republican leader of the Thirteenth Assembly District, and deputy in charge of the Mortgage Tax Department in the register's office, is also under the ban. He was placed under civil service restrictions against removal during the Republican control of the State Civil Service Commission, and now it is expected that the present commissioners may at any moment remove those restrictions. Register Lundy can then appoint a new man in his place. He receives a salary of $3,500 a year.

RAILWAYS LOSE $20,000,000

President Peters Tells of Hold-Up by Post Office.

That the government, through the Post Office Department, is holding up the railroads of the country for transportation service amounting to more than $20,000,000 a year, was the statement made to-day by President Ralph Peters of the Long Island Railroad, vice chairman of the Committee on Railway Mail Pay, representing over 200,000 miles of road.

"More than a year ago," said Mr. Peters, "the Post Office Department collected statistics from the railroads as to their receipts from express, mail and other passenger service. The results of this inquiry have not been made public by the Post Office, but the analysis by our committee of the reports submitted shows that at the average rate received for everything carried on passenger trains except mails, a million and a quarter dollars more would have been paid for mail transportation during the single month covered by the inquiry of the Post Office Department than actually was paid, or $15,000,000 more a year.

"The railways are operating 3,000 apartment mail cars for the convenience of the Post Office in assorting mail in transit without receiving a cent for the use of this space. They are required to perform services in delivering mails from stations to post offices, which, as estimated by a former postmaster general, would cost the department over $4,000,000 a year if performed by contract. They render free passenger service not provided for by law in transporting mail clerks while off duty that would amount to over a million dollars a year at the rate of two cents a mile, besides being forced to carry free all officers, inspectors and agents of the Post Office Department. Under the system of weighing mails only once in four years there is no allowance for the 8 per cent. a year increase in the amount of mail carried during the intervening period, depriving the roads of some $3,000,000 a year which they should receive under the existing inadequate rates of pay."

BRIGANTE NOT A BURGLAR.

Daniel Brigante did not get his Easter shirt after all, yesterday, but instead, he was sent to jail in default of $500 bail, pending a trial in Special Sessions, on a charge of having maliciously broken a window in the laundry of Sing Long, at 308 Adams street. Brigante is 18 years old, and lives at 259 Washington street. He says he one day last week took his shirt to Sing Long's shop, and asked him to have it ready on Saturday. He called on Saturday afternoon, but Sing did not have the shirt. Indeed, he said he had never seen it, and told Brigante to produce the ticket. But Brigante said he had no ticket, and so the Chinaman said he could have no shirt.

"I'll come to-night and take one," said Brigante, as he went out. He got up at 5 o'clock yesterday morning and broke a hole in the laundry window. Detective Rand of the Adams street police station chanced along at the time Brigante was putting his hand through the window, in search of a shirt.

Magistrate Harris, sitting in the Adams street court yesterday morning, heard the corroboration of the shirt part from the Chinaman. So he had the charge made one of malicious mischief.

AFFECTION FOR OLD SCHOOL.

When Public School No. 28, on Herkimer street, near Ralph avenue, is torn down, which will be done as soon as the Board of Education receives funds for a new building, James T. Holle, secretary of the Manufacturers Association, wants a piece of the woodwork. He has so written to City Superintendent Maxwell.

The school was built in 1856, and "Jimmy" Holle was one of the first boys to register. He began in the lowest grade, was graduated, and some twenty-five years later, he was made a member of the Board of Education, and was assigned to the school committee, which had Public School No. 28 in its jurisdiction. At this time Miss Ella Folger, since dead, was principal; she was "Jimmy" Holle's teacher when he was in school.

In his letter to Superintendent Maxwell, Mr. Holle wrote in part:

"I would like to have a piece of the interior woodwork of the building, in order that I may have it mounted and kept as a souvenir. If you will kindly pass these lines along to the Superintendent of Buildings, it will very much oblige me."

ALARM AT FORT SALONGA SEEMS UNWARRANTED

It Is Not Believed Dr. Washington Plans a Northern Tuskegee There.

LAND IS MUCH TOO VALUABLE.

None Is for Sale for That Purpose. Howard Orphan Society's Plant Is Near By.

Northport, L. I., April 17—Some of the residents of the exclusive section of Fort Salonga continue to be somewhat aroused over the purchase by Dr. Booker T. Washington, the famous negro educator, of a summer home there. It has been learned, however, that few of the property owners would object seriously to having Dr. Washington for a neighbor, if they could be sure that there was no foundation for the rumor of the intended purchase by him of a large tract of land nearby, on which to establish an institution for the education of negroes.

The J. Cornell Brown property, which Dr. Washington has purchased, is small, consisting of only one and a half acres, but is beautifully located, overlooking the sound. There is a comfortable bungalow and a barn on the place. It is generally believed here that Dr. Washington intends to occupy the property solely as a summer residence, and most of the people feel sure that the report of his intention to establish a school in this section is unfounded. At Kings Park, a few miles east, there is now the home of the Brooklyn Howard Colored Orphan Asylum, and according to the plans of the managers, the work of this institution is to be so enlarged, as to resemble the Tuskegee School, in its education of the negro youth.

It is not believed that Dr. Washington would consider starting another institution so near the one at Kings Park, and it is also thought that the plans of the latter institution may have given rise to the rumors in regard to Dr. Washington's intentions.

Nevertheless, to forestall any such event, several of the wealthy property owners stand ready to purchase Dr. Washington's home at a substantial increase over the price he paid, but so far nothing has resulted from their overtures to the educator.

It has been reported that in event of Dr. Washington selling his property at Fort Salouga, a shore front site had been offered him at Old Field, but no confirmation of this report can be obtained. Building Commissioner John Thatcher of Manhattan, who keeps in close touch with real estate activities in Old Field, where he lives, told an Eagle reporter yesterday that he had heard nothing of any such proposition. He said he did not think the people of Old Field were particularly interested in the matter, and while he thought they would have no objection to Dr. Washington as a neighbor, they would not make a special effort to bring him to Old Field.

Land Adjoining Washington Place Very Valuable.

Willard N. Baylis, a Manhattan lawyer, an all-the-year-around resident of Huntington, who, about six months ago, bought the Breeze Hill stock farm from the Brown estate, and other pieces aggregating 200 acres, adjoining Dr. Washington's place on the west, which tract it has been said it would be purchased for a Tuskegee farm school, laughs at the idea of his farm being bought for a negro school.

He says that his property is worth $1,000 per acre, and that would preclude the idea of its being bought for any such purpose.

The farm of George Longbothem, on the south of the Washington place, is held at $1,500 per acre, and the twenty-five-acre tract of Mrs. Juliett H. Brown, wife of Harry C. Brown, bounding the easterly side of the Washington tract, is held at $55,000. Mr. Baylis says:

"I brought my property some time before Dr. Washington asked to have the title to his place examined. I never had any intention of reselling to the negro educator. The first I knew of his intention to buy his place at the water front was when Benjamin Cozart, in whose name the purchase was made by William Fallon, a broker, asked me to examine the title and make the transfer. Dr. Washington sent me his check of $4,500 to pay on the property, leaving a mortgage of $4,000.

"The place belonged to a Mr. Snyder, president of the village of Northport. Dr. Washington intends to use it for a summer home, the same as he did the Van Wyck farm on Huntington Harbor. There is a nice house and barn on the place. He never had any colored people at his Huntington home, except his own family and servants. He stayed there all summer, except when he visited the home of President Theodore Roosevelt or other white persons interested in his Southern work.

Other Land South of Railroad Can Be Bought at Low Figure.

"There would be no sense or logic in Dr. Washington buying valuable waterfront property for a negro educational institution when he could get land south of the railroad for a very small part of what he would have to pay for any property in the vicinity of his new home. The Howard Orphan Asylum of Brooklyn has acquired over 500 acres at Kings Park, and it cost it a small fraction of what would have to be paid for shorefront tracts. Dr. Washington could well consolidate his work with that of the Howard Asylum people, if he had any intention of locating a school similar to that at Tuskegee, but he has bought his summer home near Indian Head for recreation and rest instead of taking up the arduous work of starting a new school on Long Island."

U. S.-JAPAN FRIENDSHIP.

It Cannot Be Broken by Campaign of Falsehood and Misrepresentation, Says Komura.

Tokio, April 17—Count Komura, the foreign minister, gave a dinner to-day for Ambassador O'Brien and the staff of the American embassy in celebration of the recent conclusion of the new Japanese-American commercial treaty.

In offering a toast to President Taft Count Komura said that sincere friendship had "built a foundation which cannot be shaken by a campaign of falsehood and misrepresentation which is being prosecuted with an ingenuity worthy of a better cause. This treaty gives added proof of the solidity of the relations between Japan and the United States, and owes its existence largely to the active interest and wise statesmanship of President Taft."

Responding, Mr. O'Brien toasted the emperor, agreed that "kindly and sympathetic relations," as described by the foreign minister, existed, and added:

"It may be necessary to continue to deny falsehoods and discourage unwarranted and unworthy suspicion, but no sincere friend of mankind and patriotic citizen of either country should shrink from the task of silencing evil-minded speakers and writers and of convincing the last doubter that the two nations are destined to continue in accord and harmony. While President Taft richly deserves the encomium pronounced by the foreign minister, we must not forget that the emperor always accorded his assistance, interest and sympathy."

BITTEN FOUR MONTHS AGO, DIES OF HYDROPHOBIA

John H. Sachse Had Made Light of Wound and Refused to Take Treatment.

RABIES DEVELOPED FRIDAY.

After carrying the poison in his veins for four months, John Henry Sachse, a photo-engraver, well known in the neighborhood of his home at 181 Georgia avenue, died this morning at the Kings County Hospital of hydrophobia. A small dog bit him four months ago. In spite of his wife's remonstrances, Sachse paid no attention to the slight wound which gave him no trouble until Friday, when he became violently ill after drinking a glass of water. On Saturday, after drinking another glass of water, he began barking and showed unmistakable symptoms of hydrophobia. He was removed to the Kings County Hospital on Sunday, after becoming violent, and died there last night.

Four months ago Sachse was in a tailor shop on Broadway, near Gates avenue, when a small dog rushed into the place and snapped at the legs of several men. The dog was frothing at the mouth. Sachse ran to help one of the men who was attacked and the dog bit him between the thumb and index finger, making only a slight wound. Sachse put a little peroxide on it, and forgot all about it. When he came home at night and told his wife about the incident she became alarmed and asked him to have the injury cauterized. Sachse laughed at her fears and refused to pay any more attention to the hurt.

He forgot all about it until last Friday, when the drinking of the water upset him. Mrs. Sachse called in Dr. Benjamin Kaufman of 482 Stone Avenue early Saturday morning, who diagnosed Sachse's ailment as hydrophobia. Sachse didn't seem to understand the seriousness of his trouble, and laughingly insisted upon going to work. He came home at noon, a very sick man. He drank another glass of water and after that began barking and snarling like a dog. Dr. Kaufman was called again, gave Sachse treatment and advised him to go to a hospital. Sachse insisted that he did not have hydrophobia and refused to go.

He was ill intermittently Saturday afternoon and Sunday morning. At noon Sunday, when Dr. Kaufman was called for the third time, he found Sachse violent. The doctor called an ambulance from the Bradford Street Hospital and Dr. Kelly responded. In order to make sure that Sachse was suffering from hydrophobia he held a glass of water in front of him. Sachse snapped at it, began frothing at the mouth and tried to bite the doctor. He was hurried to the Kings County Hospital and by the time he reached there was so violent that he had to be strapped to the bed. He became worse rapidly and died last night.

Mrs. Sachse said this morning that she had made another effort to persuade her husband to have his injury cauterized two weeks ago, when her daughter Anna had her hand treated after being bitten by a fox terrier. Mr. Sachse ridiculed the possibility of there being any bad affects from a bite three and one-half months old.

Sachse has been living in East New York for many years. He was a member of a number of benevolent societies and had many friends. He leaves a widow and two grown daughters, Helen and Anna.

NOELL IS DOWN AND OUT

According to Statement of His Attorney in Alimony Suit.

Supreme Court Justice Blackmar, in special term, this morning, granted a motion for $15 a week alimony and $100 counsel fee to Mrs. Elmira T. Noell in her suit for an absolute divorce from William A. Noell, a member of the Union League Club and head of the firm of William L. Noell & Co., expert accountants, 30 Church street, Manhattan. Mrs. Noell, who has a daughter, Hope, 5 years of age, asked for $150 a month, and said her husband was earning $5,000 a year. Noell's lawyer said that his client was "down and out," and was even posted for dues at the club.

The Noells were married on February 10, 1902. Mrs. Noell says she is now living with friends and without support, and that Mr. Noell has an apartment at the Hotel Touraine, Clinton street. Two of her brother-in-laws, Louis A. McDonald and Archibald A. McAuslin, appear, according to the papers, to have obtained whatever evidence there is against Noell. They say that some time ago they located Noell in an apartment at 229 West Sixty-ninth street, Manhattan, and that he was living there with a Miss Komel, who is named as the corespondent.

Noell's attorney denied all the allegations of the complaint, and he also insisted that his client was in a very bad way financially.

"Why," he exclaimed, "he is suffering, and is down and out, and hasn't got a cent, and I have had to loan him money."

Under the circumstances Justice Blackmar said he would fix a weekly stipend at $15 a week until the case is tried.

NAVY YARD NOTES.

Owing to the lack of work in the sheet metalers division, fifty men employed in that department received official notice to-day that they were to be laid off to-night until work is started on the new battleship New York.

There was much rejoicing to-day among the gunmen when they received word that they had broken all world's records in installing the new 12-inch guns on the battleship Connecticut.

The annual sale of condemned stores will take place to-morrow morning at 10 o'clock in Building No. 64A. It is expected to be the largest sale in the history of the Navy Department.

After being in Dry Dock No. 3 for the past two weeks the torpedo boat Paulding will leave in a day or two for Hampton roads.

The battleship Connecticut, which has been at the yard for the past week, having a new set of 12-inch guns installed on her, will go in Dry Dock No. 3 in a few days for her yearly overhauling.

The following men were appointed to-day in the hull division: John T. Mackey and Henry Brownstein, messengers; John J. Roche, typewriter, and William Van Dorn, assistant ship's draftsman.

The battleship North Dakota will arrive from Boston the latter part of this week. She is expected to remain here about thirty days.

The submarine torpedo boat Octopus left Dry Dock No. 3 this morning. She will proceed to Newport to-morrow in tow of the naval tug Pontiac.

Martin Klink, a laborer, residing at 1065 Flushing avenue, while working on the repairing of the battleship Ohio, which is in Dry Dock No. 2, this morning accidentally fell into one of the deck holes of the warship and received contusions of the back. He was attended by the yard surgeon, but later was able to go home.

RUSSELL GOES TO LONDON TO EXTEND GOSPEL WORK

Will Also Direct the Activities Which He Has Established Here.

CROWDS AT ACADEMY OF MUSIC

No Collections Ever Taken Up and No Request Made for Money by Pastor.

The Rev. Charles T. Russell, better known as Pastor Russell, has accepted the pastorate of the London Tabernacle, at Paddington. This does not mean, however, that the Brooklyn Tabernacle, or his activities in America, will be abandoned. It was explained to-day by the Rev. E. W. Brennelsen, one of Pastor Russell's assistants, that the pastor will visit Brooklyn at least twice a year, and perhaps oftener, to give encouragement and guidance to his assistants and keep a directing hand on the work in this country. The invasion of England, it is said, is merely a broadening of Pastor Russell's field of labor.

Pastor Russell has been in England for several weeks, and yesterday he occupied his new pulpit at Paddington twice. He has been importuned for months, it is claimed, to establish himself in England, only acquiescing when he was shown "six thousand written requests" for his sermons and religious writings.

In June, 1909, not long after his advent in Brooklyn, a dispatch from Pittsburg told of his having paid his former wife $6,026 to settle alimony up to September 1, 1912, and also $1,500 counsel fees, and $6,000 costs in the action she brought. The grounds alleged in the action were cruelty.

The growth of Pastor Russell's congregations in Brooklyn has been remarkable. He purchased, in 1909, the old Bethel Chapel, at 17 Hicks street, under the Brooklyn Bridge, and first called it the People's Church. Only a few people heard his first sermon, but before many weeks had passed the edifice was crowded to its capacity and soon it became impossible to accommodate all who wished to hear him. Then he rented the Academy of Music. From this larger auditorium also crowds were turned away, for lack of room.

Pastor Russell never takes any collections and never makes any public requests for financial aid. It was said that the Academy of Music alone cost him an average of $700 for each Sunday. Brooklyn ministers have puzzled themselves more than once as to how he met his large expenses.

His followers say he gets the money necessary to carry on his work from the contributions of wealthy and generous people in all parts of the country.

Mr. Brennelsen would not go into details to-day as to the exact figures with regard to all of the various undertakings conducted by the pastor and his followers, and knew of no way by which detailed information could be gained.

At the corner of Columbia Heights and Orange street, several score of Pastor Russell's followers have their home. There are two four-story brick houses fronting on Columbia Heights, and a new building, much larger has recently been erected in the rear. It was explained to-day that those who live there are not in any sense "communists," but that it is merely a boarding house, where they dwell for convenience.

WOOD DIES IN ELECTRIC CHAIR.

Ossining, N. Y., April 17—Robert Francis Wood, who killed his niece in New York City over a year ago, was put to death in the electric chair in Sing Sing Prison early to-day. Wood was declared dead after one shock had been administered.

Wood met his death without a word escaping him. He was convicted of killing his niece, Amelia Roach, after he had remonstrated with her because he believed she was "going to the bad."

LE STRANGE NOT A STRANGER.

Police Dig Up His Prison Record. Has Spent Many Years Behind Bars.

Judge Dike, in the criminal term of the County Court, this morning, had an "old-timer" before him in Harry Le Strange, 47 years of age. On Friday last Le Strange said he was Frederick Moran, and from Providence, R. I., his occupation being, he said, a theatrical manager. He had been arraigned on an indictment charging him with the theft of a number of women's watches from a Fulton street department store. He entered a plea, thinking that his past would not be uncovered; but it was.

Moran was discovered to be Le Strange, with a record of two terms in a Massachusetts prison, and also two terms in Sing Sing, as well as one in the penitentiary. Judge Dike smiled when Le Strange insisted that he was in the theatrical business, when arraigned for sentence this morning.

"You have evidently not had much time for rehearsals during a number of years," said the court. "We don't get many such old-timers as you here any more, and if your record had been known when your indictment was under consideration you could have been indicted as a second offender, and I could have sent you to Sing Sing for forty years. As it is I send you there for four years and ten months."

LEGISLATURE TO RECONVENE.

Appropriation Bill Will Aggregate About $26,000,000—Crowded Calendar in Both Houses.

(Special to The Eagle.)

Albany, April 17—Governor Dix announced to-day that the annual appropriation bill will be introduced to-night when both branches of the Legislature convene after a two weeks recess. The Governor said the bill aggregated about $26,000,00, which is less than the bill of last year.

Both the Senate and Assembly chambers are in shape for the reconvening of the Legislature. The Senate Chamber is in excellent condition. The lobby, however, is crowded with new temporary offices for the Post Office and Senate Leader Wagner. The Assembly Chamber still bears many marks of the fire.

Both houses have big calendars of business. In the Senate there are fourteen printed pages of measures ready for action.

SAILS ON MAIDEN VOYAGE.

Only American Steamship in Foreign Trade Steams Away for the Tropics.

The Red D Line's new steamship Merida sailed this afternoon from Pier 11, Pierrepont's Stores, for Curacoa to commence her life's work between that island and the Venezuelan city of Maracaibo. She is the only wooden ship afloat in foreign trade that carries the American flag, on the Atlantic coast, at least. She will ply entirely between Curacoa, La Guayra and Maracaibo, but principally between the Dutch island and Maracaibo, acting as a tender to the larger ships of the line. As at present arranged, she will make the latter trip weekly, a distance of 225 miles for the single run. She is commanded by Captain Johansen, who has spent twenty-two years in this trade on her predecessor, the old Merida. Owing to the lack of docking facilities, ships in continual service in this service must have wooden hulls, copper sheathed as a protection against the barnacles, grass and other marine growths that speedily cripple a steel or iron vessel in the tropics. Unless in case of accident, it will hardly be necessary to bring the Merida here for dry docking and cleaning oftener than once in every four or five years. The Merida takes out about half a cargo of cement and flour, just enough to give her ballast on the voyage.

SEALSHIPT CONTRACTS ILLEGAL

Decision That They Are Against Public Policy.

Company Owns Large Areas of Oyster Lands in Long Island and on the Sound.

Bridgeport, Conn., April 17—Judge Platt of the United States Circuit Court has returned a decision denying the application of the Sealshipt Oyster System for a temporary injunction restraining the Andrew Radel Oyster Company from soliciting trade among its customers anywhere in the United States.

Judge Platt holds that the scheme of the Sealshipt System is dependent for success upon the strict enforcement of its contracts, and that by their use the complainant is enabled to eliminate competition. He says:

"With my present light I believe the contracts in question to be against public policy, illegal and void. Since the complainant's story of wrong is almost entirely based upon the rights which it claims under the contracts, the props seem to have fallen out from under it."

The Sealshipt Oyster System owns large areas of oyster lands in Great South and Peconic Bays and in Long Island Sound. It has extensive shipping houses at West Sayville and at Greenport, and recently acquired holdings at Long Island City for making shipments to distant points.

FEDERAL JUDGE DEAD IN BED.

Body Found by Associates Who Had Searched for Him.

Little Rock, Ark., April 17—Federal Judge John H. Rogers of the Western District of Arkansas, was found dead in bed at a hotel here to-day by Judges Trieber and K. M. Rose of Fort Smith, who called to ascertain the reason for his absence from the bench.

Heart disease is believed to have caused his death. His home was in Fort Smith, Ark.

PASTOR RUSSELL'S AIDS WORK HARD "FOR LOVE"

Helpers in Brooklyn Headquarters Get No Salaries.

SOME INTERESTING FIGURES.

Receipts for Year Almost $150,000, but Expenses Are Even Greater. Millions of Tracts Distributed.

The announcement that Charles T. Russell, otherwise known as "Pastor Russell," has taken charge of the London Tabernacle, has stimulated interest in the methods he employs in spreading his religious propaganda. He is the head of the "Millennial Dawn" sect and president of the Peoples Pulpit Association and of the Watch Tower Bible and Tract Society, at 17 Hicks street. The propaganda is spread by printed tract and pamphlet, which are sent out in such volume, that recently, he said, in the "Watch Tower," a semi-monthly publication:

"We presume it is safe to say that no other organization ever put out one-tenth this amount of free literature in a year."

According to Pastor Russell's own figures, the number of these pamphlets and tracts published and sent broadcast within the space of a single year was 20,797,166, or 350,957,360 pages, all of which the printing presses rattled off and the laborers in the vineyard sent out free. Pastor Russell does not say what it cost to carry on this work of love, but the outlay was large. He also stated "One thousand papers in the United States and Canada are publishing our sermons and Bible studies."

This is only a small part of the work that Pastor Russell and his associates have been doing. In the brick building at 17 Hicks street, there are 100 persons at work, according to one of those connected with the Peoples Pulpit Association. These get no salary—just their board and necessary expenses. Everything is done for "love."

"No salaries are paid—merely moderate expenses" to quote Pastor Russell himself. "Yet we are all comfortable and very thankful and happy."

Twenty-five Typewriters Employed Sending Out Letters.

About twenty-five typewriters and stenographers spend many hours each day answering letters which pour in to 17 Hicks street from points all over the world. The official figures of the correspondence department show that in one year the letters and cards received in Brooklyn, as published in the "Watch Tower and Herald of Christ's Presence," was 112,085, and the letters and cards sent out from Brooklyn reached the very respectable total of 144,311. Many of the letters received contain voluntary contributions. They are not asked for say the pastor's associates. They just "pour in."

The Watch Tower has a circulation of 30,000, and it is paid for at the rate of $1 a year. The revenue from this publication alone would amount to $30,000 a year at this rate if all the subscribers paid cash, but those of the vineyard say that many copies are sent out gratis—how many they do not make clear.

Then there is the Pilgrim Service. The number engaged in pilgrim service in the United States and Canada is fifty-seven. These fifty-seven preaching brothers have already traveled (the figures taken from the Watch Tower and Herald of Christ's Presence) 477,247 miles, visited 3,251 cities to spread the "true Gospel"; held 3,297 public meetings and 7,416 parlor meetings. The greatest traveler is Pastor Russell himself, who is not sojourning in the slums of London. The London Tabernacle is at Paddington, where there is much need of the light the true gospel spreads.

Pastor Russell is the author of six volumes on the new method of Bible study. They are referred to as "two sets of Bible Keys of three volumes each." These books, which are "of priceless value to God's humble, faithful children," are sold at the rate of $1 for the first set and $1.20 for the second." About 5,000,000 copies of these have been printed, according to Pastor Russell's associates, but then a great many copies are given away free, regardless of the expense of getting them up, and Pastor Russell doesn't make anything out of them, say those who represent him. In fact, he spent $100,000 "out of his own pocket" in circulating one of his earlier works.

Millions of copies of the Peoples Pulpit, another means of spreading the light, are printed and sent out every year. It is subscribed for at the rate of 12 cents a year. In addition to this hundreds of thousands of copies of Scripture Studies are put in circulation annually, and many thousands of copies of Manna and of religious booklets.

Having in mind all this work, together with the costly placards bearing the leader's likeness that are put up in conspicuous places where they are best calculated to strike the eye, "it might be expected that millions of money had been expended in order to bring about its accomplishment" (the words included within quotation marks are Pastor Russell's. But not so. On the contrary, "economy is associated with every part of the work," wrote the pastor in the Watch Tower recently. Then he went on to give "our financial showing," which is as follows:

Expended elsewhere:
In Great Britain	$7,905.55
In Germany	3,673.67
In Australasia	481.06
In India	522.37
In South Africa	1,433.62
In Sweden	1,625.81
In Norway and Denmark	2,491.58
In Jamaica	935.29
In France, Italy and Switzerland	695.73
In Greece	266.45
In Mexico	50.00
		20,935.24
Total expenditure		$160,679.04
Receipts:
Balance from 1909	$3,718.38
Good Hopes, tract fund, etc.	139,658.72
		143,377.10
Shortage		$17,301.94

This is close for the extent of the work, and if other "Good Hopes" be realized this balance will be wiped out before January, 1911.

We congratulate all of our dear co-laborers and praise God for the privileges thus represented.

Very truly your servant in the Lord,
C. T. RUSSELL, President.

Bookkeeping Is Very Strict, Says Secretary-Treasurer.

At 17 Hicks street and Eagle reporter found a man who said his name was Van Amberg and explained that his position being that of secretary and treasurer, he was thoroughly familiar with all the details of the work.

"That financial statement is from the books itself?" he was asked.

"It is compiled from the books. Our system of bookkeeping is very strict.

"You do not itemize it. Are you willing to open your books for inspection?"

Mr. Brenneisen, who is secretary of the People's Pulpit Association, was also asked if he would permit the books to be inspected.

"No," he said. "I shall refer you to Pastor Russell. He will be here shortly."

According to Van Amberg, Pastor Russell at one time ran four department stores and a music store. He gave up these activities to labor in the vineyard for nothing.

"Is he a graduate of any theological seminary?" he was asked.

"He is neither an ordained clergyman nor a graduate of a theological seminary," was the reply, "but there is more theology in those six books of his than all the theologians can tell you," he said.

MRS. PLATT IS GUILTY OF TELLING FORTUNES

Fashionably Dressed Women Spiritualists Fill Flatbush Courtroom.

RECEIVED PAY FOR PROPHECY.

Police Matron, Mrs. Goodwin, Testifies That Seeress Was Away Off Truth's Track.

An outpouring of spiritualists created quite a sensation in the Flatbush Police Court this morning, where Magistrate Dodd was called upon to try a case in which one of their number was accused of fortune telling, and never had so many fashionable gowns and picturesque hats been seen before in the courtroom.

Mrs. Ida Platt, who has a room at 1309 Bedford avenue, opposite the Twenty-third Regiment Armory, was the defendant. It appears that on March 27 she told the fortune of a police matron, Mrs. Isabella Goodwin.

Mrs. Goodwin called on Mrs. Platt on the day mentioned, and at other times, and none of the visits cost her less than $1. She said she was told that her mother and her brother, John, appeared from the spiritual world, and that the latter advised her not to sell any property for three years. Now, Mrs. Goodwin's mother is not dead, and she never had a brother. Then for her nephew, Edward, came the glad tidings that he was about to have a change of position. The nephew, as a matter of fact, is a student at the Horace Mann School. Furthermore, and this should have been the best message of all, came the information that Mrs. Goodwin was being followed and attended every evening by an Indian named Silver Fox, who saw to it that "she arose quite refreshed every morning." Mrs. Goodwin was also informed that she had a young daughter, whose father spoiled her very much. The matron confessed to having a daughter, but she declared the young lady was over 19 years old, and that its father had been dead for many years.

Throughout the trial the spiritualistic spectators showed their sympathy for Mrs. Platt, and shook their heads at Mrs. Goodwin's testimony.

The owner and editor of the Spiritualistic Church, who came from Chicago, testified that the defendant was an accredited representative of the church.

"In my opinion the defendant has violated the letter and spirit of the subdivision No. 3, Section 899, Code of Criminal Procedure," said Magistrate Dodd, after the hearing, "in that she has contended to deliver to the complainant messages from persons whom she erroneously stated to be dead, and advice from them as to her conduct. It is not established, to my satisfaction, that the defendant acted in this particular case as an officer or agent of any church or belief, but acted entirely upon her own responsibility. The defendant is therefore found guilty, and sentenced to give a bond in the sum of $100, to keep the peace for a year."

The bond was given by the husband of the defendant, William H. Platt, who is the secretary of the Rome, Ogdensburg and Watertown Railroad. After the verdict, the spiritualists held an indignation meeting outside of the courtroom, but they decided that there was nothing they could do.

VELD IN RAYMOND ST. JAIL

Judge Dike Considers Conviction Most Important.

Says if It Had Not Been for His Perjury, Higginbotham Might Have Been Convicted.

Probably the most dejected prisoner in the Raymond Street Jail to-day was the Rabbi Hartog Veld, convicted yesterday of perjury in the Magistrate Higginbotham case. In his cell he refused to see any visitors or say anything whatever for publication. The rabbi will be sentenced by Judge Dike on Monday.

Many friends and associations are said to be preparing to submit to Judge Dike a petition asking for clemency.

The rabbi is occupying a cell in the jail where, as one of the probationary officers, he held religious services on the Jewish Sabbath for members of that church.

With the conviction of Rabbi Veld, the question has arisen whether or not the charges, in some new form, will be revived against Higginbotham.

Veld's trial lasted three days. Assistant District Attorney Elder, who was very active in the prosecution of Higginbotham, represented the prosecution in Veld's trial. J. Grattan McMahon was the defendant's attorney. Veld's chief defense was in the form of an excuse. He said that he had been under great mental strain, and when he testified as to the location of the furniture in Higginbotham's private room before Magistrate Kempner, he had in mind its location on the day he testified, and not on the day of the alleged assault.

It is thought possible that the exprobation officer may be invited to tell District Attorney Clarke how he came to be a witness in the Higginbotham hearing, as Mr. Elder expresses himself as absolutely sure that Miss Hickey's story of the happenings in Magistrate Higginbotham's private room on the morning of September 2 is true.

Judge Dike, in his brief address to the jury, following Veld's conviction yesterday afternoon, said:

"Your verdict is most important in several ways, for I know of no crime that strikes so deeply at the fundamentals of justice as perjury does. Who knows if this defendant had told the truth, as he did not, but that Magistrate Higginbotham might have been tried in this court and convicted.

"In behalf of this community and the city I congratulate you for your verdict, for your action has been the first step taken toward clearing up the monstrous situation at the Bedford avenue court."

SERVICES AT FAITH HOME.

Thirty-sixth Anniversary Celebrated by Its Friends—Miss Campbell Speaks.

Many friends of the inmates of the Faith Home for Incurables attended the praise service held last night at Classon avenue and Park place, it being the thirty-sixth anniversary of the establishment of the building on that site. The home was started by the Misses Fannie and Etta Campbell in a small house on Putnam avenue.

Miss Etta Campbell last night spoke of the many manifestations of God's presence and His care over Faith Home. The Rev. J. A. Hanson, pastor of the Central Baptist Church, spoke concerning the Home, and said that it seemed a little peculiar to talk of the inmates of the Home of Faith as incurables. He proposed to substitute for the word incurables, "endurables." Dr. Meet also addressed the gathering and spoke of the good work that the home had been doing from the start to the present time, and hoped that that good work would continue.

The vocal and instrumental music was led by the president of the board of trustees, George C. Stebbins.

The home is for women who are without money or friends able to support them, and who on account of some incurable disease cannot be received into hospitals or other homes.

TEARS OUT GLASS EYE AND HURLS IT AT JUDGE

MEN IN CAGES CRY AND CURSE.

Viterbo, Italy, April 21—Of all the methods adopted by the Camorrist prisoners to excite sympathy or incite a riot, none surpassed in novelty and effectiveness that of Gastano Esposito, who at the end of a mad harangue to-day, tore a glass eye from his head and, hurling it at the feet of the presiding judge, stampeded the courtroom. Then he fell in a faint and President Bianchi suspended the sitting.

According to the state, Esposito, who is known as a usurer, is a dangerous malefactor and succeeded Enrico Alfano as the head of the Camorra when Alfano fled to the United States, there to fall into the hands of Lieutenant Petrosino. He is charged with having been one of those who met at Bagnoli and condemned Gennaro Cucoccolo to death for treachery to his associates in crime.

There was a shudder among the spectators when Esposito was called for interrogation. He is not a pleasing man to look upon at best and his knife-scarred face is made less inviting by the glass substitute for an eye lost in his youth.

The prisoner attempted to prove an alibi so far as the meeting at Bagnoli was concerned. At that time he was traveling, he said, between Milan and Rome. He gave a detailed account of his wanderings prior to the murder of Cuoccolo and his wife and gradually wrought himself up to a fine frenzy. He concluded in substance as follows:

"It is true that I concealed myself at the time, when I learned that I was to be arrested. I was suffering as I am even now, from heart disease. In my boyhood I lost one eye. I feared that I would die in prison from the malady which had already seized me or what would be even worse, that I would lose my other eye."

Here self-pity gripped the prisoner, who became hysterical, and sobbed violently, his face in his hands. All attention was on the man, when, suddenly, he raised his head and with a deft movement of the hand released the sightless organ, and, throwing it on the floor before the judge's bench, bared his disfigured face to the horrified spectators. Thus for a few seconds he posed and then, with a choking cry, dropped to the floor in a faint.

By this time the nerves of all in the room were an edge, and, as Esposito collapsed, a tumult was raised. From the steel cages the prisoners shouted, cried and cursed. Pasquale Gargiulo, who is also a sufferer from heart disease, wailed:

"You wish for our deaths in prison. We wish that at least we may die in a hospital."

One of the jurymen, who is a physician was to the assistance of Esposito and President Bianchi declared the sitting suspended.

BALLOON MEETS WITH MISHAP

Rope Caught in Tree—Non-Stop Trip to Amsterdam Was Attempted With Ten Passengers.

Brunswick, Germany, April 21—The dirigible balloon Parseval VI, met with a mishap ten miles north of here to-day and was forced to make a rough landing. The passengers escaped injury and the airship was not seriously damaged, though it lies partly in a swamp and will of necessity be dismantled and sent to Bitterfield by train.

The accident happened soon after noon and brought to an end what had promised to be a successful non-stop flight from Berlin to Amsterdam. The airship, occupied by ten persons, including two military officers of the Netherlands, rose at Berlin at 4:30 o'clock this morning and sailed away toward Amsterdam at a clip of 34 miles an hour. Oebisfelde, Saxony, was passed over soon after 10 o'clock, the dirigible going strong, despite rather strong wind currents.

Between Isenbuttel and Lieferde the aerial craft was flying low when she encountered a gust of wind that compelled her to slow up. At the moment the free end of a rope that dangled from the car caught in the branches of a great birch tree and gave to the airship a yank that broke her equilibrium. This, combined with the wind, made necessary an immediate descent, which was fairly well accomplished, though with some strain to the dirigible and the shaking up of her passengers. A new start, pending repairs, was out of the question, and the Parseval VI will have to go to a shed for an overhauling.

WILL SEEK TO PROVE TITLE

Mrs. Hartt of Amityville Claims Valuable City Realty.

Believes She Has Title to Broad Street, Manhattan, and Gravesend Realty Valued at $1,500,000.

Amityville, L. I., April 21—Mrs. Charles Hartt, wife of a prominent local real estate agent, is taking steps to realize upon property in Broad street, Manhattan, and in Gravesend, Brooklyn, to which she believes she is the rightful heir. The property is held by persons not having full titles to it, Mrs. Hartt claims, and is valued at over $1,500,000.

It is alleged that Mrs. Hartt's daughter, Mrs. John R. Murray of Rockaway Beach, has secured the payment of over $100,000, believed to be for a quit claim deed to the lands. Mrs. Hartt claims her daughter has no right to the property and so cannot sign a quit claim deed.

According to the story told an Eagle reporter by Mrs. Hartt, the property in question belonged to Mrs. Hartt's great-grandfather, Benjamin Stymus, who, about a hundred years ago, told his two sons to care for it until his daughter, Sarah, Mrs. Hartt's grandmother, became of age. He died shortly after doing this. For some reason, his daughter permitted the control of the property to pass from her, but she nor any of the descendants ever gave up title to the property.

Legal aid has been secured, and steps will at once be taken to secure compensation for Mrs. Hartt's rights to the property.

According to Mr. Hartt, his wife thinks that if the daughter is able to realize upon the claim without any legal rights, the mother should be able to do so, having the deeds and other documents to establish her claim.

It is said that the Broad street property has a frontage of about 137 feet, but Mr. Hartt was unable or unwilling to state its exact location.

MACKAY CHAUFFEURS FINED.

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence H. Mackay Stopped in Their Respective Cars for Speeding Through Jamaica.

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence H. Mackay were hurrying to Roslyn last night to keep a dinner engagement, when their respective chauffeurs were halted by Motor Cycle Officer Meehan, after a sharp chase on Hillside avenue, Jamaica.

Mr. Mackay's driver, James Gillespie, was charged with going thirty-five miles an hour. He was fined $20 by Magistrate Fitch this morning. Mr. Mackay was in the car. He explained that he was in a hurry to reach Roslyn, but had no intention of violating the law.

Twenty minutes later Officer Meehan put chase after a big limousine in which Mrs. Mackay was being driven along the same thoroughfare. Her chauffeur, C. J. Barton, was halted and Mrs. Mackay offered the same excuse as did her husband. Her driver was arraigned in court this morning, at Jamaica, and paid the same fine as did his fellow chauffeur.

James Willetts, a well known Glen Cove man, was a third victim of the motor cycle officer. He, too, was speeding on Hillside avenue and paid a $20 fine for his fun.

This will be followed by a reception into membership of the church of the June class, numbering seventeen. A musical service will be given in the evening by the Cathedral Quartet, assisting the quartet of the church. Among the numbers will be the sextet from "Lucia;" soprano solo, "I Will Sing Praises"; alto and tenor duet, male quartet, "The Homeland"; the choir, "Alleluia"; soprano, alto and tenor trio; male quartet, "The Light of Life." A calendar social will be held in the Sunday school hall on Friday night. The services of a humorist reader have been secured. Some vocal music will be given.

In Emmanuel Baptist Church, the Rev. Dr. John Humpstone, pastor; J. Lewis Conant, assistant, the subject of the morning sermon will be "The Efficient Christ." The Communion service will be observed at 4 o'clock in the afternoon, and at the evening service will be given the springtide musical service. The quartet and soloists will render an anthem by Farebrother; a trio from Hayda's "Creation," a selection from William's "Harvest Song." The solos are "Gloria," by Seccia, for contralto voice, and a song, "Grass and Roses," by Bartlett, for the tenor. The Ascription is "Still, Still With Thee." This being Whit-Sunday, the brief address will be on the subject, "Thou Sendest Forth Thy Spirit." As organ preludes, Mr. Stebbins will play MacMaster's "Pastorale" and Mendelssoon's "Spring Song." The postlude will be a composition of his own, "Angelus du Soir." The Men's Brotherhood Bible Class will meet one hour before the morning service.

The men's class of the Central Presbyterian Church will have for its topic to-morrow afternoon at 3 o'clock, "In What Way Can We Best Help in Carrying Out the Christ Programme as Found in Luke iv:18, 19?" Dr. Carson will lead. Every man who can possibly be at the class is urged to attend, to show his love toward Dr. Carson and his appreciation of the great honor which has been conferred upon him. President Taft will speak in Tompkins Avenue Congregational Church (where our school meets with that school), at 2:15, and he will afterward review the parade. The men are asked to parade as usual, only in larger numbers.

In the Sumner Avenue Methodist Episcopal Church to-morrow, the pastor, the Rev. Dr. John Henry Bell, will meet the probationers at 10 o'clock. At 10:30 the sacrament of the Lord's Supper will be administered and the reception of members will take place. In the evening the pastor will speak on "Is the Gospel Too Good to Be True?"

The Rev. A. H. C. Morse will preach to-morrow morning in the Strong Place Baptist Church. The ordinance of the Lord's Supper will be observed, and the hand of fellowship given to new members. At the noon hour the men's class meets for the last session before the summer vacation. At 2:30 the Bible school meets—the last session in the afternoon till autumn (the summer sessions will be at the noon hour, commencing June 11). In the evening the address will be given by G. R. R. Stanley.

The Rev. G. O. Griffith, pastor of the Sixth Avenue Baptist Church, will preach at both services to-morrow. The monthly communion service will be held after the morning sermon, at which time new members will be publicly welcomed into the church. His evening sermon will be on "Dwelling in the Temple." The Yokefellows will meet an hour before the morning service and the regular session of the Bible school will be held at the usual hour in the afternoon.

The First Bethany Bible Class of the Baptist Temple will assemble to-morrow at 12 o'clock noon at the close of the morning service in the gallery near the south entrance. The speaker will be Charles C. Overton, who originated the Christian Flag, and he will speak on the topic, "The Christian Flag." This flag is now used in every state in America and in every country of the world. The anniversary committee will meet at the close of the session and the class will take part in the anniversary parade on June 8. The class voted enthusiastically to take for its fourth annual outing an all-day sail on the Hudson River the latter part of June.

Vesper services beginning at 3:45 o'clock will be held in the Lewis Avenue Congregational Church during June. There will be no evening service until September. "Nature's Call to Worship God" will be the theme during the month, the special topic to-morrow being "The Sea." In Grace Presbyterian Church there will be reception of new members and communion to-morrow morning. In the evening the pastor, the Rev. Robert H. Carson, will preach on "The God of the Fathers." A women's night, under the auspices of the Brotherhood, will be given on Tuesday evening.

The last session of the Men's Class of Grace Presbyterian Church for the season will be held to-morrow afternoon at 3 o'clock. The subject will be "What the class means to us, and how we can make the years to come better than the year that is gone." On Wednesday evening the annual meeting will be held in the gymnasium at 8 o'clock. Officers will then be elected and a social time will be enjoyed.

In the Duryea Presbyterian Church to-morrow morning there will be reception of members and celebration of holy communion. The pastor, the Rev. Dr. W. I. Davenport, will give a brief meditation on "The Mountain Top and Its Lessons." The choir will sing "O, Taste and See," by Reed, and "Prayer of the Penitent," by Matthews. In the evening the pastor will preach on "The Noble Living of a Noble Life." Special music: "Great God, to Thee My Evening Song," by Wagner-Schnecker, and "I'm a Pilgrim," by Marston.

In the Twelfth Street Reformed Church the Rev. J. Collings Caton, pastor, will preach to-morrow morning on "The Church and the Child." The Sunday school will attend this service and sing the anniversary songs. In the evening the theme of the sermon will be "Despised Birthright," third of a series of evangelistic services, at which the Chapman-Alexander song books will be used.

MISSIONARIES SAY GOOD-BY.

Dr. and Mrs. Clark Given a Farewell Service.

There was a farewell service in the Hanson Place Baptist Church last night for Dr. and Mrs. Joseph Clark, who sail on Saturday to renew missionary connections in the Congo. The pastor of the church, the Rev. L. L. Henson, and the district secretary of the American Baptist Foreign Missionary Society, the Rev. A. L. Snell, were present, and spoke in an appreciative fashion of the work of the two missionaries. Mrs. Clark said her sailing would mark the fifth time she had left this country to go to the Congo and would begin her twenty-sixth year in active mission work.

Dr. Snell referred in high terms to the Baptist Forward Movement, which is having a great effect in the missionary as well as the institutional life of the church. He said that it was marvellous how much deep enthusiasm was now flowing through the life of the church. He referred to the Hanson Place Church as one of the big factors in this movement.

GOODBY TO MR. MAC GLASSON.

Riverhead, L. I., June 3—A number of Riverhead men gave a complimentary dinner at the Long Island House, here, on Thursday night, to William H. MacGlasson, supervising architect of the new jail, who is soon to leave town.

Mr. MacGlasson has had charge of the entire construction, for Architect William J. Beardsley, and while he has been here he has made a lot of friends, who showed their appreciation of him by the jolly farewell dinner.

NINE LACROSSE TEAMS TO PLAY FOR THE PRESIDENT

Great Game Expected at Crescent Club on Thursday.

MONTREALERS AS OPPONENTS.

Marine Band From the Navy Yard Has Been Ordered to Play for Distinguished Guests.

A special team has been organized to represent the Crescent Athletic Club on Thursday, when an exhibition game of lacrosse is to be played for the benefit of the President and Mrs. Taft, who that day will be guests of the club. There will be many features of special interest connected with the game.

In the first place, the opponents of the Crescents will be the Montreal Athletic Association team. It is curiously timely that the Canucks should be pitted against the Crescents with the President as a spectator. It will be a contest of Canadian and American amateurs.

Another feature of the contest will be the referee. Borough President "Cy" Miller of the Bronx will don a white sweater and running shoes and keep track of the play. He is an expert at the game, has a stout pair of limbs and will soon find out whether sitting on the city bench has impaired his wind.

The Crescent players will be William Dobby, captain; Benjamin A. Keilley, Robert J. Wall, Archie L. Allen, Lionel Moses, William Madden, E. P. Cypriot, Arthur E. Lifflton, Rodney Walbridge, J. S. Kennedy, Vincent Kennedy and John J. O'Rourke, as valiant and skilled a lot of men as ever handled the lacrosse stick.

President Taft will start for the grounds of the Country Club of the Crescent immediately after the luncheon given by William Berri to the Sunday School Association and guests. He will be accompanied by Secretary Hilles, Major Butt, his military aid; Congressman Calder and a number of prominent Brooklyn men.

Governor Dix, Mayor Gaynor, General Fred Grant, Admiral Leutze, Borough President Steers and a number of other officials have been invited by the club. President Paul Bonynge will receive with a specially appointed committee, headed by Alexander Crichton, who will have charge of the general arrangements and ceremonies.

A space will be roped off for the presidential party in the center of the grounds, and the game will begin as soon as the President arrives. The Canadian flag will fly with the American flag, and the special President's flag, and before the contest begins the two teams will be introduced to the President.

After the game an informal reception will be held, but there will be only a few moments left to the President. He will arrive at the grounds at 5 o'clock, or a little after, and will depart from the club at 6:30 on board the revenue cutter Seneca to sail to the foot of Fiftieth street, Manhattan. Motor cars will convey the party from there to the Astor Hotel, where they will attend the dinner of the cotton brokers.

Secretary Meyer to-day telegraphed orders to Admiral Leutze of the Brooklyn Navy Yard to send the local marine band to the Crescent Clubhouse on Thursday to play for the President and the other guests of the club.

A special boat in addition to the regular schedule will leave the Battery on Thursday at 4:30 in the afternoon, returning to Manhattan at 10:30.

The majority of the passengers that arrived here yesterday on the Booth Line's Cuthbert and the Lamport & Holt steamship Titian this morning are negresses from Barbados. They are of all shades of color, and were well dressed as they landed from the ships, both of which called at the island. Sometime ago one of the Outerbridge lines brought seventy from Bim Town, as Barbados is called, and they all went to Canada, where, it was said, they had been engaged for domestic work at $5 per month.

READY FOR "THE MIKADO."

Concordia Ladies Chorus to Present Famous Satire To-morrow.

The Concordia Ladies Chorus, a well-known women's glee club, under the direction of Adalbert Fuhge, will make its first venture, to-morrow night, at the Majestic Theater, into the comic opera field and will present "The Mikado," the famous Japanese satire by Gilbert and Sullivan. The cast of principals has been carefully selected by Mr. Fuhge and includes many who have sung their roles before, especially with the Brooklyn Light Opera Company, which appeared earlier in the season. The chorus, all properly costumed and vocally trained, will make up a picturesque supporting company.

Donald Chalmers, the precentor at the Reformed Church on the Heights, will appear again as the Mikado, in which he met so much success with the opera company. Yum Yum is to be sung by Mrs. Juliette Selleck, George Selleck will portray Nanki-Poo, Louis Von Hasslacher, Ko-Ko; William Simmons, Pooh-Bah; William Carson, Pish Tush, and Ferdinand Feuerbach, Nee-Ban. Besides Mrs. Selleck, in the charming role of Yum Yum, the chief honors among the women will devolve on Miss Flora Hardie as Katisha, which she has already given with exceptional skill; Miss Anna Kuhlmann as Peep-Bo and Miss Hattie Havighorst as Pitti-Sing. The society will be assisted by a large chorus of men, and an augmented orchestra.

MOTORMAN IS A PREACHER.

Deacon of Beecher Memorial May Get a Charge.

The Rev. R. L. S. Berry is the pastor of the Beecher Memorial Congregational Church, Herkimer street, near Rockaway avenue, and he has in his congregation Francis A. C. Stone, who is a deacon and a lay preacher. He is not entitled by ordination to the title of "reverend," but he has done a great deal of evangelistic work and considerable preaching, taking his odd hours from the work of motorman on the elevated railroad to carry out his religious plans.

The Rev. Mr. Berry came here from Miller's Place, L. I., to succeeded the Rev. Charles J. Allen, who resigned in February to accept a call to the Parkville Congregational Church, where he has been at work for some time. Mr. Stone, it is understood, is expecting a call to another church, where, it is not stated, in which case he will be compelled to leave the employ of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company. It has been stated that he was ordained seven years ago, but no record of it is at hand, although, as said, he has preached in many Brooklyn and Manhattan churches.

FOR NEW PAROCHIAL SCHOOL.

Enjoyable Entertainment Given at Berkeley Hall.

The entertainment for the benefit of the new parochial free school of St. Augustine's Church, Sixth avenue and Sterling place, of which Mgr. Edward W. McCarty is rector, given last night at Berkeley Institute, was a financial success. The hall was filled with an audience that greatly enjoyed the very interesting programme, which included a lecture by Arthur S. Colbern on "Our Lady of Lourdes," which was illustrated with slides and moving pictures. All the apparitions of the Virgin Mary to the little girl Bernadette in the grotto at Lourdes, in southern France, in 1858, were shown, as well as many scenes and incidents associated with the world-renowned shrine. It was a very impressive entertainment. Following the lecture a musical programme was given by members of St. Augustine's choir. The affair was in charge of Miss Lillian D. Goodwin, assisted by Miss M. Leonard, Miss McGrath, Miss Lynch and Miss Mary Hanhart.

HARD WORK!

DELAY IN SENDING ALARM CAUSES MANY BIG FIRES

O'Keeffe Intimates That Dreamland Might Have Been Saved.

TALKS TO HIGHWAY BOARD.

Discusses Failure of High Pressure at Coney Island and Lack of Fire Drills in Office Buildings.

Deputy Fire Commissioner Arthur J. O'Keeffe gave a long talk last evening to the members of the Kings Highway Board of Trade at the Highway Casino. He discussed a variety of matters concerning the city departments with which he has been connected and at the end came to his work in the Fire Department, where he asked for the co-operation of the citizens.

The first requirement for effective fire fighting, he said, is a prompt alarm signal and in this connection he recommended the use of the telephone, the advice of ex-Fire Chief Croker to the contrary notwithstanding. Much of the recent disaster at the Dreamland fire was due to the delayed call. He stated that the investigations of the fire marshal has shown that the workmen in the Hell Gate building, where the fire started, waited fully ten minutes before asking for outside help in checking the blaze they had started. Even then they did not know enough to use the signals in the park, they did not know where they were, but sent one of the men on foot to the engine house several blocks away.

The next requisite to an early alarm signal is plenty of water, and here Mr. O'Keeffe laid the blame for the poor success of the Fire Department at Coney Island on the failure of the high pressure system. It was not so much the failure of the pumping engines that the Deputy Commissioner blamed, as the arrangement at the Island by which the residents along the Bowery and other parts out of danger could cut in on the high pressure system and use all the water on their own buildings. That naturally drew the water away from the scene of the fire. The pressure, he said, can be supplied by the fire engines on the street independent of the pressure in the mains, but there has to be a supply of water for the engines to draw from. That is the reason the four inch mains are not sufficient for any distance. They cannot furnish the amount of water. The Coney Island system was not designed to supply more than sixteen streams of hose at a time and when some places not on fire employed as many as twelve lines of hose, the supply was cut down.

To prevent loss of life as well as of property, the people themselves must not rely wholly on the Fire Department for protection, said Mr. O'Keeffe. Emergency apparatus and fire drills in the large buildings and factories, especially where women work, are absolutely necessary. There might be a fire any day in the large office buildings, he said, and he urged the members of the board to institute fire drills in their own buildings. On every floor one man should be detailed to use the telephone and locate the fire as well as call for help, while others should handle the hose, etc.

The fire drills in the public schools were referred to by the speaker as models after which the owners of loft and office buildings might take pattern. The two thousand pupils of the Manual Training High School, for instance, have a record of getting out in two minutes. In the Triangle Shirtwaist building, he said, all the girls might have been saved by going up to the roof, but no girl will think of going to the roof to escape a fire unless she has been drilled to go that way in case the fire breaks out in a story below her. The elevator boy also made ten trips all the way to the basement, when he could just as well have discharged his passengers at the sixth floor, below which there was no fire. It was all due to failure to take precautions.

Lack of Fire Drills in Office Buildings.

"And yet," said the speaker, "I have since then visited from five to six hundred so called fireproof buildings, where they had all sorts of emergency apparatus in shipshape, sliding doors to the fire escapes, reels of fire horse, fire buckets and axes, but no provision for any one of those things in an emergency."

Several members of the board asked questions on more local topics than these, notably fire signal boxes, and flat tires for the engines, so that they won't get stuck in the mud on the dirt roads of Brooklyn. Mr. O'Keeffe stated that the flat tires had been proposed, but had been rejected by the fire commissioner because it was cheaper to use only one standard kind of wheel all over the city. He was under the impression that all the streets of the city would soon be paved any way.

This raised a shout of laughter from the residents of the Kings Highway section, and the speaker admitted that maybe the fire commissioner did not know Brooklyn as well as he might. Mr. O'Keeffe will take the matter up.

Mr. O'Keeffe told of the valuable time lost at the recent big fire at Rockaway Beach, because the man who had the key could not be found, and when the men smashed the signal box they put the whole system out of order.

Some members of the board are planning to start a new local paper called the Kings Highway Neighbor. The men behind the project are M. J. France, George P. Christie and William W. Heacock. The office of the paper is to be at 1926 East Fourteenth street.

BAPTISTS IN SESSION

Brooklyn Churchmen Go to Patchogue on Visit to New Edifice.

At 12:30 to-day a special train full of Brooklyn Baptists left Jamaica for Patchogue, L. I., to attend the summer session of the Long Island Baptist Association, which, as its name indicates, is composed of about seventy-five churches from all parts of Long Island, the larger number, of course, being the Brooklyn churches.

It was stipulated by the Long Island Railroad Company that there should be two hundred tickets for this special train, and for a time it looked as if this number could not be secured. But yesterday the train was secured, and if the number is short of two hundred, which this morning it did not appear to be, the ministry had promised to make good to the company. The Rev. Edwin Richmond of Rockville Centre, clerk of the association, had charge of the arrangements.

There is a new church at Patchogue, and the visit is in a sense a sort of "dedication." The Rev. J. J. Parsons, long a pastor in Brooklyn, is pastor now at Patchogue, and he and his people have arranged to give the visiting Baptists a hearty welcome. The sessions were mostly devotional, with a number of addresses on the work of the mission churches and of the denomination. The moderator, the Rev. Dr. W. C. P. Rhoades, presided.

The programme consists of two anniversaries of the women mission workers, those interested in the home and in the foreign field, one at 2 o'clock this afternoon, and the other in the evening. The home work was presented at the 2 o'clock meeting, Mrs. R. B. Montgomery presiding, and the foreign work will be at the evening meeting, with an address by Mrs. Comstock. During the afternoon and evening addresses will be made by the Rev. G. T. Wood and S. Paul Jefferson of Island churches, and the Rev. Dr. L. L. Henson, pastor of the Hanson Place Baptist Church. The sermon will be preached this evening by the Rev. Dr. Curtis Lee Laws, pastor of the Greene Avenue Baptist Church.

COFFEE FROM LONDON.

A unique state of affairs exists in the coffee trade at the approach of the new season, which commences on July 1, and this is the import of Brazil coffee from London. The first cargo arrived on the Pennsylvania a couple of weeks ago, and was landed at Martin's Stores. The Drumcree is due to arrive to-day at Pier 7, Martin's Stores, from London. She has on board 110,000 bags of coffee, the largest cargo that has come here for at least eighteen months past, and there are two other coffee-laden steamships on the way from London, a novel state of affairs. The visible supply is about 2,400,000 bags less than it was one year ago, and of the former 5,100,000 bags are held by the Bankers Committee in pursuance of the valorization plan. Prices at present are about 4 cents higher to the grocers than they were one year ago, and the valorization interests say there is a short crop, due to drought. The present price of raw coffee here is nearly 11 cents per pound for what is known as No. 7 grade. The cargoes afloat are pitifully small as compared with those arriving prior to the valorization scheme. They are as follows: Woglinde, 20,000 bags; Voltaire, 4,000 bags; Titian, 12,000 bags; Scottish Prince, 8,000 bags; Oppurg, 17,000 bags; Camoens, 33,000 bags; Byron, 10,000 bags. These cargoes are for Brooklyn piers, while for New Orelans the Pruth has 87,000 bags and the Spanish Prince 36,000 bags. There are in the warehouses here more than 2,000,000 bags, and altogether in the United States and afloat about 2,438,000 bags. With the new crop due, the situation is a decidedly peculiar one.

St. Ann's Church on the Heights had in it the daintiest of wedding parties yesterday afternoon. Miss Marion Bigelow was married to S. Worcester Sargent of Philadelphia, amid a full choral service and before many people, despite the bleak day. Greenery and white peonies decked the historic church, and yellow and lavender-toned girls attended the bride.

Miss Bigelow had a maid of honor and four bridesmaids waiting on her. Her bridesmaids were Miss Jean Murray (her cousin), and Miss Eunice Mallory of Brooklyn, Miss Ethel Carhart of the well-known Brooklyn Carhart family, but now living across the river, and Miss Dorothy Stratton of Manhattan. For maid of honor she had chosen Miss Elise Flanigan, also of Manhattan.

All these five girls carried yellow daisies, arranged in sheath bouquets. The maid of honor was in yellow satin trimmed with ecru lace, her gown having a tunic of yellow chiffon. She wore an ecru lace hat, with a yellow crown, and a large yellow bow. The four bridesmaids had gowns of the same yellow satin and ecru lace, but with tunics of lavender satin, in place of yellow. Their hats, of the same ecru lace, had lavender silk crowns and lavender bows.

Miss Bigelow's wedding gown was trimmed with the same Duchesse lace that had been on the robe in which her mother (Miss Maud Murray of South Brooklyn, a well-known belle of not so many years ago) was married. It was of white satin, and its veil was of Duchesse lace, caught up with orange blossoms. She carried lilies of the valley.

The Rev. C. Campbell Walker, rector of St. Ann's, officiated. The ceremony was at 4 o'clock, and was followed by a small reception at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Wilder Bigelow, 10 Schermerhorn street. The decorations here were yellow daisies against green. Mrs. Bigelow wore black, heavily embroidered.

The best man was Winthrop Sargent, jr., a brother of the bridegroom, and the ushers Gorham P. Sargent, another brother, John A. Morris, Julian d'Este and Louis Flanders of Boston, Effingham Burnett of Buffalo and Newell Vanderhoef, formerly of Brooklyn.

Mr. Sargent is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Winthrop Sargent of Philadelphia, and a nephew of the distinguished painter, John S. Sargent. He has just been graduated from Harvard.

Bridge and "Shower" For Miss Westermayr.

Alpha Alpha Sigma girls "showered" one of this week's brides, Miss Adelaide Westermayr, who is to be married on Thursday, at the Midwood Club yesterday. Miss Westermayr thought she had been invited merely to a sorority bridge, and the "shower" was a complete surprise. It was a "miscellaneous shower," some of the gifts Miss Westermayr received being a lace breakfast cap, cut glass, pictures, an embroidered towel and a bookrack.

The festivity was held in the club's ballroom. The presentation to Miss Westermayr was made picturesquely. A large basket, filled with daisies, was brought in and handed over to her. Under the daisies and tucked away at the basket's sides were the presents.

Miss Helen Singleton won the bridge prize of the afternoon—a picture of a bride. Other Alpha Alpha Sigma girls there were Mrs. Gordon Case (Miss Edith Warburton), Mrs. Frank Andrews (Miss Vivian Patterson), Miss Valerie Tomes, Miss Gertrude Rice, Miss Anna Beder, Miss Theodora Steinhugler, Miss Edna Maguire, Miss Emma Lakeland, Miss Nan Verplanck and Miss Louise Korber.

Amateur Brooklyn talent will sing and dance. The exact idea of the "Potpourri" the School Settlement girls will not hint at, but they say it is "quite new," and has been a great success in many Western cities.

REJUVENATED SONS OF JOVE.

Unique Organization of Electrical Men Holds Annual Banquet.

The close of the National Electric Light Convention, held in Manhattan last week was followed by a grand rejuvenation of the Sons of Jove on Friday night at Brighton Beach Casino. A banquet was held at which over 400 sat down to dinner. The national officers were represented by Jupiter J. F. Dostal of Denver, Col.; George Welderman of Brooklyn; Statesman T. I. Jones of Brooklyn, Statesman Washington Devereux of Philadelphia and Obert L. Jaynes of Pittsburg.

T. I. Jones of the Brooklyn Edison Company was toastmaster. W. W. Freeman, president of the National Electric Light Association; John F. Gilchrist, who is to succeed Mr. Freeman as president of that association, both active members of the Sons of Jove, addressed the diners on the good influence of the order in the electrical field. J. W. Dostal, president of the order, spoke about the great interest displayed all over the country and the rapid increase in membership during the past year.

After the dinner the "rejuvenation" proceeded with 107 new candidates, who were initiated, and after passing through the ordeal with success were elected Jovians.

WEATHER FORECAST

Persons desiring information concerning the weather, temperature or other information can secure it by using telephone No. 571 Main, from 8 A.M. till 6 P.M. week days. Nights and Sundays, 6200 Main.

Indications Until 8 P.M. To-morrow.

Washington, June 6.—For Eastern New York: Showers to-night and Wednesday; moderate northeast to east winds.

Local Probabilities.

Showers to-night and probably Wednesday; moderate variable winds, mostly easterly.

General Weather Conditions.

High barometric pressure persists to-day over the St. Lawrence Valley and the North Atlantic States, retarding the normal eastward movement of the barometric depressions to the westward and breaking up barometric conditions in general into many small centers of high and low pressures. This has resulted in light but quite well distributed rains from the Mississippi Valley eastward to the Atlantic coast. In New York State the rains are heavier than for several weeks. Albany reports 1.10 inches. Slightly cooler weather is shown in the Central Valleys and eastward. Unsettled and showery weather will probably continue in this vicity this afternoon, to-night and probably on2 Wednesday, with moderate variable winds, mostly east.

DR. L. W. MUNHALL RAPS "MILLENNIAL DAWNISM"

Philadelphia Evangelist and Bible Expositor Calls It Heresy.

RUSSELLITES WERE PRESENT.

They Made No Attempt to Refute Speakers' Arguments, but Gave Out Tracts at the Door.

Dr. L. W. Munhall of Philadelphia, the well-known evangelist and Bible expositor, did not mention Pastor Russell by name last night in an address on "The Millennial Dawn Heresy" in the Greene Avenue Baptist Church, but he spoke of the Brooklyn Tabernacle and compared it with the days of long ago. Dr. Munhall said that error always masqueraded as truth, and cited Christian Science as not founded on the Bible as is claimed, but on the late Mary Baker Eddy's "Science and Health." Dr. Munhall pointed out what he called fallacies in the book, and said that half-truths were more dangerous than no truth.

Dr. Munhall then paid his respects to higher criticism, what its exponents termed the "new truth," "but," said he, "it is as old as ancient infidelity, and there is nothing in it that cannot be found in Tom Paine's 'Age of Reason' or in Voltaire's writings. Higher criticism is only plagiarism. When I was a boy it was preached here in Brooklyn and in Philadelphia, but it got a cold hand as coming from the devil and as challenging the authority and integrity of the sacred Scriptures."

Dr. Munhall's address was made under the auspices of a committee appointed by several churches and composed of ministers and laymen, set "for the defense of the truth." The movement is interdenominational, and the Greene Avenue Church was loaned last night for the purpose of the meeting, which was one in a series which have been successful, the one of last night, according to the Rev. C. C. Cook, who presided, being the largest of the series. No collection was taken, and to the church a vote of thanks was given for the use of the edifice.

Dr. Munhall explained that he would not have time to speak as long as he should like, after Mr. Cook had introduced him, as he was obliged to catch a train for the West, where he had engagements to speak to-day. He said that the name of the Brooklyn Tabernacle made him feel at home, for he remembered it in the older days. He had at one time held a seven weeks evangelistic campaign there, when 3,000 persons had been converted, there having been 1,700 accessions to the Tabernacle, others going to many other churches. No uncertain sound about the fundamentals ever came from the old Tabernacle when Dr. Talmage was there, no matter what might be said about his sensational methods and manner. "But the old days have gone," said Dr. Munhall, "and the old glory has departed, but the Lord of Hosts is still with us."

Dr. Munhall declared in strong terms that the Spirit had been grieved by the denials of His truth now so prevalent, and which were being promulgated in the pulpit, in the religious schools and newspapers, and said that the Holy Spirit had withdrawn largely from the churches and that "pink teas" and like entertainments were now resorted to to draw the people. "If the preachers did their duty and gave the people what they came to hear—the truths of God's word—instead of lectures and entertaining talks," said the speaker, "and would give the people spiritual food, which they do not get, the church would prosper. If the church was what it ought to be, there would be no place for these errors."

The speaker then gave the denials of the truth which he declared the millennial dawn theory set up. "It denies," he said, "the pre-existence of Jesus Christ, the atonement of Christ, which it also declares to be void; it denies the resurrection of Christ; it teaches the annihilation of the wicked, denies eternal punishment, says that Christ came in 1874, and puts down the end of the present age as 1914; it denies the deity of Christ and advances the theory of a second chance—a chance for the wicked after death."

Dr. Munhall read quite freely from the book, "Millennial Dawn," and refuted all its theories from quotations from the Old and New Testaments, setting forth a strong argument for the old fundamental truths and denouncing as false every declaration of the "millennial dawn heresy," as he called it.

In the audience there were a number of Russellites, and one of the "pastor's" adherents stood at each door of the church and distributed circulars to the people as they came out, which were torn up and littered over the sidewalk. At the same time Dr. I. M. Haldeman's book on "Millennial Dawnism," which is a severe arraignment of it, were given out in large numbers at the doors.

BARBER ATTEMPTS SUICIDE.

William Reimer, 44 years old, a barber, attempted to commit suicide at his home, 514 East One Hundred Fortieth street, the Bronx, this morning, by shooting himself in the left temple with a .32 caliber revolver. He was found in the bathroom unconscious, by his wife, Mary, and was taken to Lincoln Hospital a prisoner. His condition is serious. He has been in poor health for several years.

PRIESTS OF DIOCESE TO BEGIN RETREATS

Clergymen Will Go to Keyser Island in Three Divisions.

NEWS OF CATHOLIC CHURCHES

Young Priests Receive Appointments and Begin Careers—Outings to Aid Parishes.

The retreats for the Roman Catholic clergy of the Brooklyn diocese will begin on Monday, August 28, and will last for three weeks. They will be conducted at Manresa Institute on Keyser Island, near South Norwalk, Conn., and will be conducted by priests of the Jesuit order. The priests taking part will go in three separate divisions, the first going on Monday, August 28, and remaining until Saturday, September 2; the second on Monday, September 4, remaining until Saturday, September 9, and the third on Monday, September 11, returning on Saturday, September 16. Every priest in the diocese, except those who are absent from home or are excused for a valid reason, will take part in the retreats. It is scarcely probable that Bishop McDonnell, who sailed for Europe last Saturday, will return in time to be present at any of the exercises, but the plans were made by him before his departure, and the schedule so arranged that at least one priest will be left on duty in each church or within reaching distance, while the others are away on retreat.

Upon approval of Archbishop Farley of New York Catholic laymen have just issued a statement concerning retreats for laymen, their origin and value. The statement is based on the new venture of Catholic laymen of New York in providing a place for retreats throughout the year, and social studies for the training of instructors, and the statement's aim is to encourage the founding of similar retreats for laymen of other parts of the United States.

Catholic laymen of Belgium have the honor, it seems, of inaugurating the movement on a sound basis, the Jesuit Fathers co-operating there as here. At Liege has just been celebrated the tenth anniversary of the founding of the Retreat House of Notre Dame, but before that Belgium had no fewer than five such houses. These were Fayt, founded in 1891; Ghent, in 1894; Arlon, 1896, and Lierre, 1899.

The single one at Liege has been attended by no fewer than 14,000 laymen, and throughout Belgium there are now 4,000 laymen held in 200 Leagues of Perseverance. The aim of these retreats is the deepening of the spiritual life. Two years ago such a house was founded in England, called Oakwood Hall, and located at Romiley. American Catholic laymen inaugurate the movement in New York, and now appeal to Catholic laymen of other cities to establish these houses of retreat. Jesuit priests are ready, they say, to co-operate in the conduct of the retreats, houses being provided.

The Rev. Michael Walsh, rector of St. Joseph's Church, Kings Park, L. I., sailed for Ireland a few days ago to visit his parents. While he is away the parish will be looked after by his brother, the Rev. Patrick Walsh of New Orleans.

The forty hours devotion will begin tomorrow, which is the ninth Sunday after Pentecost, at the following churches: Our Lady of Solace, Coney Island; St. Francis de Sales, Rockaway Park; St. Raymond's, Lynbrook.

The Rev. John H. O'Rourke, S.J., the new president of Brooklyn College, is actively at work preparing for the opening of the college in September. The college will have the best staff of professors in its history, and already the indications are that the enrollment will be very large.

Through the efforts of Father O'Donnell, the acting rector, assisted by a very energetic corps of workers, the lawn festival for the Church of the Holy Name, on Prospect Park West, was a huge success, nearly $2,500 being realized. The money will be added to the fund for enlarging the church, which was built over thirty years ago by the Rev. Thomas S. O'Reilly, who, though well on his way toward his golden jubilee, is still very active. He is at present in Ireland, visiting his boyhood home.

Continuing a time-honored custom of the two ancient orders, the celebrant of the mass will be a Franciscan father, assisted by two other members of the Order of St. Francis. The preacher for the occasion will be the Very Rev. Walter C. Elliott, superior of the Paulist Fathers.

Reduced rates are in effect from all parts of the United States for this day and all parties of 125 persons or more will be able to travel to the centennial and return for a one-way fare, under the Interstate Commerce ruling and the new rate law of the United States.

TOMMY GINTY OUTPOINTS HARRY STONE OF MANHATTAN

Clever Fighter From Scranton, Pa., Shows His Ability at Brighton Beach A. C.

Tommy Ginity of Scranton, Pa., a stockily built lightweight, who, it is said, shaded K. O. Brown in Scranton about a month ago, demonstrated his skill by besting Harry Stone, who hails from across the bridge, in the principal contest, which went ten rounds at the Brighton Beach Athletic Club, Coney Island, last night. Ginity is a strong boy, and possesses a dangerous left jab.

Stone gave the Pennsylvanian about fifteen pounds handicap. Harry stood a foot taller than his adversary and his reach was much longer. Ginity did all of the forcing. There was very little fighting in the first half of the battle. Stone blocked cleverly and danced away from several hard hooks that would have done much damage. In the sixth round Ginity swung several hard rights and lefts to face. Then his foe showered a half a dozen light straight left and rights to jaw which made the Penn "pug" smile. The latter came back and swung his left and right hard, cutting Stone on the back of the neck.

There was considerable clinching in the seventh. Ginnity planted some right hooks to body and face. Near the end of the session, Stone pounded the face with hard rights and lefts. The Manhattan Isle scrapper rallied in the closing three rounds.

At the start of the certain period, Ginity rushed Stone and ripped a couple of hard left and right hooks to the body. Stone blocked several hard blows. Ginity dodged a hard swing, and as he turned, Stone sent over a vicious left swing to jaw which dazed the Pennsylvanian. Stone followed with a volley of hooks to the face and Ginity clinched. After he collected his wits, they fought at close quarters until the bell.

The semi-final bout, which went six rounds, was the best entertainment of the evening. Bobby Loughery of Philadelphia defeated Dave Mackey of Worcester, N. Y. The Quaker landed many vicious blows in the opening round, and it looked as though Mackey was in line for the sleep number. The spectators thought surely that the opening round would be the end of hostilities. Mackey came back and took more punishment. In the next three rounds he was badly beaten but refused to stop. In the fifth and sixth Mackey showed up strong and fought his adversary evenly. Loughery was too clever for his foe. Mackey's gameness won him many friends.

EFFECT OF SUBWAY DIGGING.

Not Expected to Materially Stimulate Market, Says Authority.

It seems certain that the beginning of "digging" of the new subway system will not have any stimulating effect on the real estate market during the coming season, says the Record and Guide. Even if the work of construction had been begun under conditions which would assure a quick and steady job, an uninterrupted supply of the necessary capital, and simultaneous construction all over the city, speculators would still be likely to postpone purchases until the day of actual operation drew nearer. The present subway, as the Record and Guide pointed out last week, did not have much effect upon values until the trains were running, except, possibly, in the neighborhood of Long Acre Square. The new subways will have a still smaller effect upon prices, because the day of the actual operation is so remote and so precarious. Even if all the other causes for delay are removed, the city will have to raise so much money that it may be forced to go slow in spending it. There are limits to the amount of cash which even New York can borrow at any one time. If any delays occur from such a cause, no one can tell which of the new lines will have to be temporarily sacrificed.

The real estate market for the coming year will, consequently, not be influenced by any prospective transit improvements. The amount and kind of trading will be determined by conditions similar to those which have determined the real estate market of the past two years. Wherever renting is good, building will take place, but probably not in any great quantities.

Money will be easy, and a deal of it will be invested in improved real estate. Valuable sites in retail districts will continue to be picked up wherever possible by business men who want to occupy them; and the migration to the new mercantile district uptown may possibly increase in volume. But there are no symptoms of any noticeable revival of activity or of an outbreak of speculative interest in any new district.

STATE CHESS MEETING.

The annual midsummer meeting of the New York State Chess Association came to a conclusion at Trenton Falls, N. Y., yesterday. After winning three straight, Major J. M. Hanham drew the next two with E. N. Olly of New Jersey and won the match by 4 points to 1.

W. J. Ferris of Newcastle, Del., emerged winner of the first class tournament with a score of 5 to 1. E. R. Perry of Manhattan, R. J. Guckemus of Utica and D. W. Waller of Seneca Falls, each with a score of 4½ to 2½, divided the next three prizes. Other scores were: D. F. Searle, Rome, and C. H. Stephenson, Washington, D. C., each 3 to 3; N. Weber, Utica, 2½ to 4½; G. N. Cheney, Syracuse, 1 to 6.

I. B. Scheiber of Manhattan won his match against the veteran H. Ring of Hartford, Conn., with a score of 5½ to 4½.

SALES ON STATEN ISLAND.

William F. Banks, operator at Fort Wadsworth Station, Staten Island, says he finds business shelving upwards in Richmond, which he credits to the "Prendergast subway" to reach that borough. This week he sold for John M. Sawyer of Stratford road, Brooklyn, seventeen lots, and two houses on Housman avenue and for A. G. Thompson sixteen lots on Bellaire avenue, Rosebank.

HARNESS NOTES.

Detroit, Mich., August 5—Ed Geers, the veteran driver of trotters and pacers, drove the bay stallion Anvil to victory in the Merchants and Manufacturers stake, the classic of the Grand Circuit meeting, which winds up today. A heavy track favored the stallion and Geers drove Anvil home in front in straight heats. This makes the fifth M. and M. stake of his career for the veteran driver. Anvil was hard driven to win the first two heats, losing some ground on breaks, but he rallied each time and got up at the wire. The final heat was easy. The time made for the three heats was as follows: 2:08¼, 2:08¾ and 2:09¼.

Ten events are on the programme for the weekly Saturday matinee of the Parkway and New York Driving clubs at the Parkway track this afternoon. The programme will bring together some horses that will be seen in harness at the big meet for purses which takes place next week.

W. L. ("Dusty") Rhoades of Guttenberg, N. J., is expected to arrive at the local trotting track tomorrow with eight of his eligibles for next week's trotting meet. Rhoades will have to take to the stables at the Gravesend racetrack, where most of the visiting horsemen are quartered.

According to dispatches from Detroit, an attempt was made by Justice of the Peace Randolph to stop betting at the Grand Circuit meeting yesterday. The justice served warrants on a few pool sellers, but at the time called for the hearing last night, none of the men appeared. Justice Randolph announced that he would issue warrants to-day for the arrest of the officials of the driving club, but the promoters declared that racing would go on, no matter what action was taken by the justice.

SQUATTER'S LONG FIGHT ENDS IN HIS EVICTION

"Red" Mitchell's Rude Shack, Which He Protected for 28 Years, Is Torn Down.

HE AND DOG NOW HOMELESS.

Marshals Wreck His Place With Axes and Pile Belongings in the Street.

Robert Mitchell, squatter—the neighborhood knew him better as "Red" Mitchell—was evicted today from his doll's house of a shack at Rochester avenue and Lincoln place. For twenty-eight years the crude little structure of rough boards indiscriminately hammered together had been the only home Mitchell had known and for twenty-five of those years he had fought with might and main to keep from being ousted. He sat, this afternoon, in the midst of a heap of "furniture" with his coach dog Spot, who has often helped his master resist the invaders. For once in his life "Red" Mitchell was somewhat disconsolate.

Two city marshals went to Rochester avenue and Lincoln place this morning with authority to bundle the old squatter out, bag and baggage. He was away on some little business venture with his old, raw-boned nag almost as old as himself, but Spot was there in the doorway and he didn't take kindly to the visitors who came with axes to tear down his master's home.

Marshals Batter Down Door With Axes.

The marshals were Henry Lewis and George J. Baldwin. When they found the door closed they proceeded to break it in and as the first blows of the axe sounded against the weather-beaten panels Red Mitchell drove up.

"What yer doing?" he asked.

The city marshals told him they had come to dispossess him.

"Give me a chance," pleaded Red, but the marshals were there to carry out their orders and he was obliged to sit dumbly on his rickety old wagon and watch the demolition of his home.

Spot, the dog, bared his teeth and contested the right of the marshals to enter, but they drove him away with stones and he fled yelping. Then Mitchell's belongings were carried out and dumped on the street with small ceremony. There was an ancient stove, a table, two iron beds and a few odds and ends. There were also some pictures of the Crucifixion which Mitchell had hung on the walls years ago when his wife was alive and a crucifix in a glass case which had belonged to her.

Automobile Drags Away Wrecked Hut.

When the rambling structure was clear of furniture its demolition began. One side of it was torn away and someone said to be connected with the real estate company which now holds title to the land by right of purchase drove over in a touring car and attached a rope to what remained of Mitchell's home. Then the car started up and the shack was pulled across the street. There was talk of burning it. Mitchell had left then, so he was spared that sight.

Rochester avenue and Lincoln place was open country when Mitchell went there to live twenty-eight years ago. He constructed the building himself. It had three small rooms. It looked not unlike a frontier cabin perched there in lonely solitude, and the resemblance grew more striking when the years brought city improvements and modern business and residential structures which crowded the shack.

Mitchell had a horse, a cart or two and did odd jobs roundabout. He also cut grass sods and sold them. He raised a few vegetables in the patch of a garden he had appropriated and lived on in contentment with his wife until three years after he squatted on the property.

Then the march of improvements took in Rochester avenue and Lincoln place. Streets were laid out and named and Mitchell was made to understand that he had to move. He did. He moved the house back about fifty feet and held the fort. Two years ago a real estate company bought the ground and the fight began to oust Mitchell. It was carried into the municipal courts and Mitchell won a temporary victory, as it was shown that he had lived there twenty-five years, and it was held that long tenure entitled him to remain. But the real estate company appealed the case with the result that Mitchell was ordered evicted.

FATHER DEAD; GIRL MAY LIVE.

Rassalli Ricchette, 43 years old, of 601 Sixth avenue, who shot his favorite daughter, Rosa, 19 years old, and then turned the revolver on himself and sent a bullet through his head, died yesterday afternoon in the Seney Hospital. The doctors say that Rosa still has a fighting chance for her life.

THINKS ALLEN IS HER SON

Man Found Starving at Dobbs Ferry Probably Resident of Morris Park.

(Special to The Eagle.)

Dobbs Ferry, N. Y., September 6—The unidentified man who was brought to the hospital here from Hastings, where he was found in a lot on the verge of death from starvation, had grown a little stronger this morning and showed signs of emerging from a state of coma. In his delirium he keeps repeating "Allen Quirk, Richmond Hill, Staten Island."

The man was found in a hobo camp on the premises of William Rowley, who years ago put up a small hut for the human derelicts who wander up and down the Hudson Valley.

An Eagle reporter today interviewed Mrs. Isaac Quirk of 1215 Lefferts avenue, Morris Park, whose son, Allen H., has been missing since July 15. She said that they had not been notified of the finding of Allen, although the description given by the reporter tallied with that of her son, who is 23 years old—the age given in the dispatch. A former schoolmate has gone to the hospital to ascertain whether it is the Morris Park man.

VACHRIS BACK IN UNIFORM

"Tony" Vachris, the former chief of the Italian detectives, who was sent to Italy to complete the work of Petrosino, who was shot to death by Black Hand ruffians in Palermo, was last night detached from the detective service and was sent to do plain duty as a police lieutenant in the Sixty-third Precinct. As Vachris lives in the Bay Ridge section, and as the Sixty-third Precinct is located at Third avenue and 160th street, in the Bronx, it is conjectured that Vachris is persona non grata with the present police administration. His assignment to a Bronx precinct is practical banishment from his family.

Vachris has felt the hand of official adversity ever since Commissioner Waldo took charge of the police affairs of the city. The sleuth was at the head of the Italian bureau of detectives, and there was a general impression that, even if there were still Black Hand outrages, the police were keeping the thieves, blackmailers and murderers pretty well under control.

The Italian bureau was scattered to the four winds, on the general theory that it was wrong to have an Italian bureau; that it was a reflection on the Italian race, and that there might as well be an Irish, or Scotch, or German bureau.

Vachris has had a notable record as a policeman and one of the bravest things he did, according to the belief of many of his friends, was to volunteer to go to Italy on the day that the news of Petrosino's murder was received. He was accompanied on this trip by Patrolman John Crowley, and they got a lot of useful information.

LIBRARIES TO BE INSPECTED.

Officers of the Brooklyn Public Library are preparing to show Brooklyn's libraries and equipment to the best advantage on September 29, when librarians from all over the State will visit this borough.

The New York Library Association will hold its twenty-first meeting in this city from September 25 to 29. The last day is down on the programme as "Brooklyn Day," when the delegates will be the guests of the Long Island Library Club.

A luncheon will be held late in the forenoon at the Montauk Club, following a meeting at 10:30 o'clock at the Brooklyn Institute Museum. After the luncheon the visitors will be taken in automobiles to the different libraries in the borough. Prospect Park and Coney Island will be visited, and the delegates will then wind up their five-day convention with a dinner at Reisenweber's Brighton Beach Casino. Miss Theresa Hitchler of the Brooklyn Public Library is arranging the "Brooklyn Day" programme.

Among those who will be guests at the convention and who are expected to speak are Mayor Gaynor, President Nicholas Murray Butler of Columbia University, President Elmer E. Brown of New York University and President J. H. Finley of the College of the City of New York.

WILL OPEN STEINWAY TUNNEL

Another most important step has just been taken in connection with the opening of the Steinway tunnel between Long Island City and Manhattan. The board of directors of the New York Central Railway have signed the consent for its opening. The directors took this action as the representatives of the owners of the property occupied by the station and other buildings of the New York Central on Forty-second street, Manhattan.

As the franchise of the tunnel had expired it was necessary to get the consent of a majority of the property holders along the line of the tunnel in both Queens and Manhattan. The consents of those in Queens were secured last spring through the efforts of the Long Island city Business Men's Association. Now that the directors of the Central have signed there is no doubt that the tunnel will be soon opened.

COMET NOW VISIBLE.

Cambridge, Mass., September 6—Brooks' comet, on which the astronomers of the world are focusing their telescopes, is now visible to the naked eye and is increasing in brightness. A bulletin just issued by the Harvard Astronomy Observatory states that the comet may be easily followed, notwithstanding its rapid motion, due to its proximity. On September 17 the comet will be at its least distance from the earth, at which time it will be only 15,500,000 miles away.

ENGINEER IS KILLED.

Brookville, Pa., September 6—Plunging into a landslide at Maxport, Pa., late last night, a passenger train on the Buffalo and Allegheny division of the Pennsylvania Railroad was wrecked and Engineer C. H. Montgomery of Dubois was killed. Fireman Harry Hetrick of Dubois was seriously injured. The engine and baggage car went over a steep embankment.

SEVEN DIE IN FIRE.

Juneau, Alaska, September 6—Seven persons are known to be dead as a result of the fire which destroyed the Juneau Hotel and the McGrath Building late Sunday night. Other bodies are being sought in the ruins.

INSTITUTE IS READY FOR 1911-12 SEASON

Annual Prospectus Contains Many Events in Entertainment and Educational Line.

AMBASSADOR BRYCE TO SPEAK

Dramatic Readings, Concerts and Lectures by Noted Individuals on the Programme.

While the annual prospectus of the Brooklyn Institute will not be published until next week, an interesting announcement is taken from the first forty pages. The announcements of the lectures, concerts, dramatic readings, courses of instruction and other educational work made a year ago were of such commanding interest and great variety that it seemed impossible that the Institute could prepare a programme for the coming year more complete and more interesting than the last. This, however, it has been able to do. The number of anniversary meetings and addresses has been increased from ten last season to thirteen. The Right Hon. James Bryce, LL.D., D.C.L., Minister Plenipotentiary from Great Britain to the United States, who was unable to give an address before the Institute last winter, is expected to speak on "Great Britain and the United States—Their Services to Humanity, Past and Present"; Judson G. Harmon, LL.D., Governor of the State of Ohio and a member of the Cabinet of President Cleveland, will deliver an address on "The Growth of Democracy"; William E. Borah, United States Senator from Idaho, is expected to give an address on the "Election of United States Senators by a Direct Vote of the People as an Extension of the Principle of Democracy in Government"; Professor Henry van Dyke, D.D., LL.D., of Princeton University will give the centennial address on "Charles Dickens"; Alfred Tennyson, the eldest surviving son of Charles Dickens, will speak on his father's life and works; the Rev. Philip Moxom, D.D., LL.D., one of our leading Browning scholars, will give the centennial address on "Robert Browning," and Percy MacKaye, M. A., will read the centennial poem on Browning. Theodore E. Burton, LL.D., United States Senator from Ohio, will deliver an address on "The Conservation of Our Natural Resources," with special reference to the Niagara River; Wendell Phillips Stafford, LL.D., of Vermont, Justice of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, will give the centennial address on "Wendell Phillips," and George McAneny, President of the Borough of Manhattan, will give an address that will be of very great local interest, on "The Principles Involved in the Development of Rapid Transit in New York City." These addresses, together with the opening and closing addresses of the season, and the Washington anniversary address, will be delivered in the opera house or in the music hall of the Academy.

Distinguished Scholars to Lecture.

The lectures who have been most welcome to the people of Brooklyn in recent years will all be found in the announcements for the coming year, and there will be an unusually large number of names of distinguished scholars, men of letters and men of scientific reputation who will be new to Brooklyn audiences.

The Augustus Graham lectures will be delivered by Prof. Bliss Perry, L. H. D., LL. D., of Harvard University. His general subject will be "American Traits in American Literature," and the subjects of the individual addresses, to be delivered on Sunday afternoons in November and December, will be, respectively, "The American Mind," "American Idealism," "Romance and the Reaction," "Humor and Satire," "Humor and Nature," "Individualism," and "Fellowship." The Rev. Henry van Dyke, D. D., LL. D., of Princeton University, is expected to give a series of six addresses in January and February on "The Poets," five of the lectures to be on the poets, respectively, William Cullen Bryant, John Greenleaf Whittier, James Russell Lowell, Henry Wadsworth Longfellow, and Oliver Wendell Holmes. The closing address will be upon "Our Later American Poets." Prof. Edward Howard Griggs, M. A., L. H. D., who has heretofore given two courses each season, will give a single course of eight addresses in October and November on "Moral Leaders, From Socrates to Tolstoy." The subjects of the individual lectures will be "Socrates," "Marcus Aurelius," "St. Francis of Assisi," "Giordano Bruno," "Victor Hugo," "Carlyle," "Emerson" and "Tolstoy." It is now some eight years since Prof. Griggs has lectured in Brooklyn on any one of these subjects, and his lectures as formerly given before the Institute have been entirely recast for the coming season.

The King James Version of the Bible.

The Rev. Cleland B. McAfee, D. D., pastor of the Lafayette Avenue Presbyterian Church, will give one of the most important series of lectures or addresses during the season, and on the very timely subject, "The King James Version of the Bible," in commemoration of the 300th anniversary of the publication of this version. The subjects of his addresses will be: "The English Bible Before King James," "The Making of the King James Version; Its Outstanding Traits," "The Literary Phases of the King James Version," "Its Influence on Literature," "Its Influence on History" and "The Bible Today." Prof. Franklin H. Giddings, Ph.D., LL.D., of Columbia University, president of the new department of sociology of the Institute, will give a series of six addresses on "Social Theory and Public Policy," and the subjects of the individual lectures will be: "The Practical Value of Social Theory," "Some Possibilities of Civilization," "The American Experiment," "The Menaces of Vice and Crime," "The Significance of Race," and "Vital Questions of Social Economy." Professor William Turner, M.A., S.T.D., of the Catholic University of America, will give six lectures on "Masters of Medieval Thought," and the subjects of the individual lectures will be: "St. Augustine," "John the Scot," "Gellert," "St. Anselm," "Abelard," and "St. Thomas Aquinas." The Rev. Caleb S. S. Dutton, pastor of the Second Unitarian Church of Brooklyn, will give six addresses on "English Democracy," and on the following themes: "Nineteenth Century Liberalism," "The New Liberalism and Individualism," "The New Liberalism and Socialism," "Ethical Ideals vs. Economic Dogmas," "Democracy and the Project of Empire," and "The Rebirth of a Nation." The Rev. John Wesley Hill, pastor of the Metropolitan Temple, New York, will give a series of six addresses on "The Creative Forces in Our National Life."

Among the courses of literary lectures will be one by Professor Richard Burton, Ph.D., of the University of Minnesota, on "The Modern English Drama"; a course by Leon H. Vincent, M.A., of Boston, on "Modern English Novelists," and on the following subjects: "Scottish Humor and Sentiment"; "J. M. Barrie"; "A Great London Realist: George Gissing"; "Neo-Medievalism and Historical Romance: Maurice Hewlett"; "The Novels of William De Morgan"; "Celtic Contrasts: Fiona Macleod" and George Moore," and "Latest Figures: Arnold Bennett, John Galsworthy and J. C. Smith." A course by Louis K. Anspacher, Ph.D., of New York on "The Greek Drama," with the following titles: "The Place of Drama Among the Arts," "An Organized Audience," "The Tragic Idea of the Greeks," "Aeschylus, the High Priest of Dramatic Literature," "Sophocles, the Classic Artist of All Time," "Euripides, the First Great Rationalist in Drama." A course by John Cowper Powys, M.A., of Cambridge University, England, on the following subjects: "Victor Hugo," "Balzac," "Guy de Maupassant" and "Anatole France." A course of six lectures on "Carlyle, Ruskin and Morris," by Emil E. Camerer, M.A., LL.D., of New York, and six lectures by Louis U. Wilkinson, M.A., of Cambridge University, England, on "Love Idylls in Poetry and Prose," with the following subjects: "Tennyson: Lancelot and Elaine; Oenone and Paris." "Meredith: Richard Feverel and Lucy; Sandra Belloni and Wilfrid Pole; Aminta and 'Matey' Weyburn." "Hardy: Tess of the d'Urbervilles and Angel Clare; Elfride and Stephen, in a 'Pair of Blue Eyes.'" "Dumas Fils: Marguerite and Armand, in 'La Dame aux Camelias.'" "Abbe Provost: Manon Lescaut and the Chevalier des Grieux," and "Turgenev: Elena and Dmitri Insarov, in 'On the Eve.'"

Lecture Recitals and Dramatic Readings.

Series of lecture recitals will be given by Carl Fique, conductor of the United German Singing Societies of Brooklyn, on "Six Great Operas That Have Shaped Musical History"; by Thomas Whitney Surette, with assisting artists, on "The Sonatas of Beethoven"; by Daniel Gregory Mason of New York, with assisting artists, on "The Elements of Musical Composition"; by A. Foxton Ferguson of London, England; three recitals on "Compositions of Chopin, Liszt and MacDowell," by G. C. Ashton Jonson; three by Arthur Rowe Pollock, with assisting artist, on "Schumann, Cesar Franck and Grieg," and three by Arthur Whiting on subjects to be selected.

Among the series of dramatic readings will be three by Mrs. Bertha Kunz Baker of contemporary dramas; four readings from Charles Dickens, by Leland Powers, with the following subjects: "David Copperfield," "Bleak House," "A Christmas Carol" and selections from Dickens' stories. These readings by Mr. Powers are given because of the interest felt in this centennial year in the works of Dickens. Miss Alice Chapman of Boston will give six readings from the Bible and related literature on six Sunday afternoons in the Music Hall of the Academy. Her readings will be preceded by appropriate organ recitals to be given by Scott Wheeler of New York. Miss Vida Sutton of Chicago will give three lecture readings on "The Morality, Miracle and Mystery Plays." Miss Beatrice Forbes-Robertson will give three lecture readings on Saturday afternoon in February. Miss Fola La Follette, daughter of Senator La Follette, Wisconsin, is invited to give three dramatic readings, and there will also be readings by Henry Gaines Hawn, Miss Beatrice Herford, Miss Katherine Jewell Everts of Boston, Miss Mabel Powers of Rochester and Miss Lelia Simon of New York.

Alfred H. Brown, M.A., whose lectures on "The Ethics of the Drama" have been of such great interest during the past two years, and who is a native of Brooklyn, will give a series of six lectures on "The Drama of Six Nations," with the following subjects: "Ibsen's 'Hedda Gabler,' Norway;" "Suddermann's 'The Joy of Living,' Germany;" "Echegaray's 'Folly of Saintliness,' Spain;" "Gorki's 'In the Depths,' Russia;" "Shaw's 'Candida,' England;" and "Thomas' 'As a Man Thinks,' America." In addition to the centennial anniversary meeting commemorating the one hundredth anniversary of the birthday of Robert Browning, there will be a course of lectures on "The Life and Works of Browning," by Alfred W. Martin, M.A., S.T.B., of New York.

The courses of lectures on the fine arts will include six lectures by Charles H. Caffin on "The Story of Dutch Painting in the Seventeenth Century," six lectures on "German Art" by Professor Kriehn, Ph.D., of New York; six illustrated lectures on "Spanish and German Art" by Miss Harriette H. Winslow of Buffalo, N. Y., and six illustrated lectures by Miss Florence A. Stone, M.A., of Athens, Greece, on "Greek Art." Other courses of illustrated lectures will be given by Professor A. V. W. Jackson, LL.D., of Columbia University, on "Oriental Countries;" six illustrated lectures by Arthur Stanley Riggs, F.R.G.S., on "The Far East;" six illustrated lectures on "South American Countries," by Professor Charles W. Furlong, formerly of Cornell University, on "The South America of Today;" six illustrated lectures on "The Western Half of Our Continent," six illustrated lectures on "South American Countries," by Mrs. Harriet Chalmers Adams.

It is, however, impossible to give any adequate conception of the announcements contained in the first 40 out of 240 pages in the forthcoming prospectus of the Institute.

The Institute offices were opened today in the Academy of Music. Professor Franklin W. Hooper, LL.D., has just returned from his summer home in New Hampshire and will be regularly at the office from this time forward.

FIGHT ON BROOKLYN MAN.

W. E. Kelly Seeks Re-election as President of Carriers.

Rochester, September 6—When the eighteenth biennial convention of the National Letter Carriers Association convened this morning there was every prospect of a bitter contest over the election of officers. A strong insurgent movement has developed among the delegates, who claim that the present officers have been inactive. The insurgents want equalization of salaries in first and second class cities, with a mandatory $1,200 grade. They favor the Reilly eight-hour law and want the right to appeal from the decision of postmasters. They also seek a living wage for substitute carriers. They claim the present administration has not been constructive.

M. M. Smith of Buffalo is the insurgent candidate for president. President William E. Kelly of Brooklyn is up for re-election. At the morning session the delegates were addressed by First Assistant Postmaster General Charles P. Grandfield.

FEDERAL GRAND JURY.

The September Federal grand jury was drawn today. United States District Attorney William J. Youngs had prepared evidence in a dozen criminal cases that are pending and a number of indictments are expected to be handed down before the end of the week. The jury is as follows: William H. Bird, foreman; Augustus H. Adams, Frederick H. Adams, Charles L. Anderson, Frederick Brehm, Eugene Barnes, Harry J. Brody, William H. Chandler, Philip H. Davis, Albert Eppers, Carl Goepel, John E. Harrington, David E. Heinman, Robert Holmes, jr., John Henigin, William Lane, Edward L. McKenzie, Charles C. Miller, Frederick K. Spencer, Louis Schwagerl, Henry C. Wagner, Frederick K. PASTOR RUSSELL SUED FOR $10,000 DAMAGES

Plaintiff, Who Charges Libel, Is Philip Sidersky of Baltimore.

SAYS REPUTATION WAS HURT.

Brooklyn Minister Is Alleged to Have Said Things That Were Printed in Philadelphia Paper.

(Special to The Eagle.)

Baltimore, Md., September 6—Philip Sidersky of the Emanuel Bible Mission of Baltimore, who is seeking to convert the Hebrews to the Christian faith, filed a suit, charging libel and asking $10,000 damages, against Charles T. Russell, known as Pastor Russell of the Brooklyn Tabernacle, in the Superior Court in Baltimore City this afternoon. The suit was filed by Attorney Louis Ashman, who also sent a copy of the suit to be filed in Oakland, Garrett County, Md., where Russell is conducting a conference at Mountain Lake Park.

In the declaration Mr. Sidersky says he is engaged in missionary and Gospel work, and has for several years maintained a mission in the City of Baltimore, which has been carried on with the approval of prominent churchmen, and has been aided, financially and otherwise, but that the defendant, well knowing that, has contrived by false and fraudulent means to injure the plaintiff's reputation, and to thus cause his followers and supporters to lose confidence in him and prevent him from receiving the aforesaid contributions, which constitute his livelihood, and did cause to be published in a weekly newspaper in Philadelphia, which is circulated all over the United States, a certain false and injurious libel concerning the said plaintiff and his Gospel work. The tenor to wit: "When I announced at a certain religious meeting held by the defendant in the City of Washington the closing hymn, a man in the audience started to address the people, but was told to sit down, which he did. After the meeting, I learned that this man, who was a street preacher, had addressed the crowd as they left the hall. I learned that associated with this street preacher was a Mr. Sidersky (meaning the plaintiff), who runs a Yiddish Mission in Baltimore. It was this Sidersky who recently deceived the Jewish Morning Journal, which published his attack on me (Russell), they thinking that he was an orthodox Jew."

DR. BENJAMIN EDSON DEAD

Benjamin Edson, a practicing physician for forty years on the Park Slope, and for thirty years physician to the Home for Destitute Children, died yesterday at his home, 82 St. Mark's avenue.

His death was the result of heart trouble, and occurred while he was at his desk writing. Dr. Edson was in active practice up to the time of his decease. He had not been in the best of health recently, but no fears were felt for him.

Benjamin Edson was born at Otego, Otsego County, N. Y., of old New England stock, May 26, 1831, and after attending the Delaware Institute was graduated from the State Normal School at Albany, N. Y.

He was long the principal of Public School No. 14, in this borough, and was graduated from the New York University in 1873, immediately entering practice as a physician. He was a member of the Kings County Medical Society, the Otsego Society, the Alumni Association of the Albany State Normal School, past master of Orion Lodge, F. and A. M., and belonged to the Brooklyn Masonic Veterans.

He leaves a daughter, Grace, the wife of William R. Scrimgeour, and two grandchildren, residing at Maplewood, N. J. His wife was a Miss Mary R. Waters of Milford, N. Y., who died eight years ago. FIGHT OVER RINK.

Rivals for Possession of Clermont Avenue Building in Court.

Further arguments in the present fight for control of the Clermont Avenue Rink, which is now being waged between Brooklyn and Manhattan boxing club promoters, were to be heard this morning in the Sixth District Municipal Court before Justice Rosenthal, but at the instance of the plaintiff the matter was held over until Monday. Luke O'Reilly appeared for James Twyford, the Brooklyn claimant, while Hugo Hirsh was the representative of the O'Rourke interests from Manhattan.

Apparently Twyford has the upper hand. According to his counsel he has a lease on the premises from September 1 for a year. Twyford just now also has possession of the rink, having camped there with some of his followers since last Friday.

This morning the Brooklyn contingent was very much put out over the postponement. Apparently this morning the feeling among the local crowd was that O'Rourke should stay in Manhattan and let this borough take care of itself.

As soon as the case was postponed Twyford and O'Reilly went to Manhattan to apply for a license for the American Athletic Club to operate in the Clermont Avenue Rink. They had their lease and a bond with them. In the meantime O'Rourke is also going ahead as if he was in possession of the rink, and further developments are looked for.

GOV. BLEASE WRITES OF LIES AND LIARS

Corps will be on the right of the right wing, and their position will bring them, naturally, into Charleston first; and if you have watched the history of that corps you will have remarked that they generally do their work up pretty well. The truth is the whole army is burning with an insatiable desire to wreck vengeance upon South Carolina.

"And his further order to his lieutenant, Hunter, in which he said:

He (Grant) further says that he wants your troops to eat out Virginia clear and clean, as far as they go, so that crows flying over it for the balance of the season will have to carry their provender with them.

"From the looks of these orders it would seem that Sherman and his men would not question the burning of Columbia. Furthermore, I cite you some authorities which, if you will look up, you will find that it is admitted and proven that Sherman did burn Columbia. Notably among them I desire to quote from 'Ohio in the War,' by the Hon. Whitelaw Reid, in which he says:

'It was the most monstrous barbarity of this barbarous march. Before his movement began General Sherman begged permission to turn his army loose in South Carolina and devastate it. He used this permission to the full. He protested that he did not wage war upon women and children. But, under the operations of his orders, the last morsel of food was taken from hundreds of destitute families that his soldiers might feast in needless and riotous abundance. Before his eyes rose, day after day, the mournful clouds of smoke on every side that told of old people and their grandchildren driven, in midwinter, from the only roofs there were to shelter them, by the flames which the wantonness of his soldiers had kindled. Yet if a single soldier was punished for a single outrage or theft during that entire movement we have found no mention of it in all the voluminous records on the march.

"If Sherman and his men did not burn Columbia, why was it that the home of Wade Hampton, 2d, was burned, and for feat that they had not burned the proper place, they proceeded to the home of Wade Hampton, 3d, the then Confederate leader, and burned it?

"Leaving Columbia, they went on through upper South Carolina, through Fairfield County, and other counties, burning and plundering as they went. Was this Hampton's men? There are living witnesses that it was the army of one W. T. Sherman. Why did Sherman say Hampton burned Columbia, and then afterwards say that he did not do it, but that he (Sherman) said this to discredit Hampton? I said in my speech to the old veterans that a man who will burn your character is an infamous scoundrel and meaner than the man who burns your body or your property. I repeat that, sir, it is true.

"Now, sir, I shall not descend to your plane and engage in blackguardism as you have done towards me, much of which is false and comes from a heart which is corrupt and from a head which is willing to lie or abuse in order to carry a point or win a temporary victory. As to who I was or who I am, nearly 57,000 white voters of South Carolina answered that question a year ago and elected me Governor of their State over five opponents, notwithstanding a set of liars and character thieves editing certain newspapers of this State attempted to defeat my by publishing the most outrageous slanders about me. The people knew that they were lies and that the editors were liars and so branded them by electing me Governor. Every daily and nearly every weekly newspaper in the State opposed me and I beat them.

"I have in the North some of the best friends I have in the United States; many relatives, some quite close, and I have not the slightest feeling against any human being on account of the war; but when an attempt is made to blacken the name of a Southern soldier, I will defend him, and, as I said in my speech, if I were sitting in the largest cathedral on earth and the pulpit was occupied by the greatest preacher that has been in the world since the days of Christ, and he were to state that the South fought for an infamous cause, or that the Southern soldiers were traitors, I would rise in my seat and tell him that he was a liar—let come what may.

"It is said that I hate 'free niggers'; if so, why is it that I have paroled or pardoned more of them in seven months than any Governor we have had has done in his four years of office? I have pardoned some Yankees who came into South Carolina and got into trouble, and they have gone home. If I hated Yankees why did I not refuse and let these prisoners stay in the penitentiary and die instead of letting them go to their Yankee homes and be with their families once again? I now have under consideration and expect to grant executive clemency to a man who, when he was asked by the solicitor if he was with Sherman's army, made the reply: 'Yes, I was there, and I am proud of it.' He was convicted and is now in the penitentiary, and I have promised to relieve him. Does this display hatred for the Yankees or Sherman's bummers?

Spoke in Defense of Confederate Soldiers and Leaders.

"There are other cases which I could mention and which I will mention if you so desire. I was not out of humor, was not wrought up, was in a 'clear frame of mind' and spoke coolly, deliberately and from the records and in the defense of the good names of Wade Hampton, M. C. Butler, M. W. Gary and the other Confederate leaders and their soldiers—the ex-Confederate veterans, the truest, bravest, noblest band of men that ever marched upon a field of battle in this world. Their equal was never seen before and never will be seen again, and if defending them against a falsehood is hatred for the Yankee or the nigger, make the most of it, for as long as I live, wherever I am and wherever it may be, if any man says that they were traitors or rebels I will say that that man lies, let the consequences be what they may; and as to them, I beg to quote you just a short sentence from your President Roosevelt in his life of Thomas H. Benton, in which he says:

The world has never seen better soldiers than those who followed Lee, and their leader will undoubtedly rank as, without any exception, the very greatest of all the great captains that the English-speaking people have brought forth—and this, although the last act of chief of his antagonists may himself claim to stand as the full equal of Marlborough and Wellington.

"As for the Northern capital: Keep it up there if you want to. I have never seen or heard of any coming here yet except when the one or ones who sent it expected to make large profits from the investment or receive heavy interest for its use; hence the man who sends it here receives full pay for it and it's no charity to us that you send it here, and if he things so, so far as this State is concerned he will please keep it. I am of the opinion that the South can get along just about as well without the North as the North can without the South, but we all should (and I do) wish for a strong, united country—all working and pulling together to make each other stronger and more useful and make all of the people happy and bury all old feelings of animosity; but lies in writing about the Southern or Northern soldiers and lies in newspapers will not bring about that era; hence let the historians record the truth about both sides—let the newspapers write the truth, and when either side tells on let some man stand and denounce the liar; and I am one who believes that the South will always furnish her man ready to speak and who will speak in no uncertain tones.

"Did you denounce Heyburn, when he denounced the South, and spoke of it as having fought for an infamous cause? Then why show your animosity and denounce me when I stand up and speak for the Southern soldiers and in the defense of them and their leaders? Where is your consistency? The shoe pinches; you put it on; wear it; the hit dog yells; it seems that I heard you holler.

"I am not one of those who apologizes to the North for the war—neither do I get upon my knees and beg them for forgiveness, and never expect to. The Confederates were right; they fought for the highest of principles and the number of Yankees in the graveyards show that they were some fighters, and if the North had not had recruits from all over the world, Lee would have won, as every honest man will admit; and I believe that we killed about as many Yankees as we had soldiers in the Southern Army.

"I hope some day to meet you and possibly you will conclude that I am not a firebrand or so ignorant as you might make believe. For a solid country, for the truth; for the right; for the upbuilding of the American nation and always ready to defend her, I will with you stand.

"Very respectfully,
(Signed) "COLE L. BLEASE,
"Governor of South Carolina."

The Eagle editorial to which the foregoing letter is a reply, was as follows:

The Burning of Columbia.

Governor Blease of South Carolina was too young in 1865 to have any personal knowledge of the burning of Columbia during its occupation by the Union army under General William T. Sherman. Yet he confidently and with much vehemence revives the venerable charge which such distinguished Southern officers as the late Joseph E. Johnston and Joe Wheeler refused to entertain, that Columbia was deliberately fired by Sherman's orders.

At the best the question has only an academic interest now. Columbia has risen from her ashes a fine, prosperous and growing community, whose citizens apparently are not at all vindictive toward the memory of the great strategist who "plowed his red furrow" right through the heart of the Palmetto State. Still, Governor Blease's vaporings should serve to recall the history of the closing days of Sherman's northern march, when his vanguard entered Columbia on the heels of Wade Hampton's retreating cavalry. This was in the month of February, 1865. The fire broke out on the night of the 17th. Sherman himself tells the story thus, and his statement that everything possible was done to prevent the spread of the flames was proved during the investigation before the mixed commission on American and British claims to be absolutely correct:

"Having walked over much of the suburbs of Columbia in the afternoon, and being tired, I lay down on a bed in Blanton Duncan's house to rest. Soon after dark I became conscious that a bright light was shining on the walls, and, calling some one of the my staff (Major Nichols, I think), to inquire the cause, he said there seemed to be a house on fire down about the market house. The same high wind still prevailed and fearing the consequences I bade him go in person to see if the provost guard were doing its duty. He soon returned and reported that the block of buildings directly opposite the burning cotton of that morning (Hampton's men had set fire to some cotton before their retreat) was on fire, and that it was spreading; but he had found General Woods on the ground with plenty of men trying to put the fire out, or, at least, to prevent its extension. The fire continued to increase and the whole heavens became lurid. I dispatched messenger after messenger to Generals Howard, Logan and Woods, and received from them repeated assurances that all was being done that could be done, but that the high wind was spreading the flames beyond control. These officers were on the ground all night and Hazen's division had been brought into the city to assist Woods' division already there."

In view of the strenuous efforts made to arrest the flames, the charge of wanton incendiarism is nothing short of ridiculous. That the Confederates left cotton bales blazing in the streets when they departed has never been disputed. Whether the cotton was fired by Hampton's orders or not is immaterial. The really vital facts are that the conflagration began near where cotton bales were burning and that Sherman's division and brigade commanders, acting directly under his

MR. JENKS AND THE TRAGIC MUSE

By Robert E. Rogers

THE opening of the theatrical season on Labor Day—at least, that seems to be another of the burdens Labor Day bears—was hailed with joy by the feminine members of the Jenks family, and during the week Emmaline went assiduously to what she called "shows," extracting the price, show by show, from a proud but reluctant father. As Emmaline would have nothing but the best entertainment, viewed from the best seat, and usually hinted for chocolate almonds on the side, it will be seen that she was costing Mr. Jenks money.

"I'm blessed if you're goin' to more than three a week," was Mr. Jenks' declaration of independence, uttered one evening as the family sat on the porch, after a hectic day in which he had been mulcted of some two dollars plus for what he called frivolous trash.

"Why, pa," began Emmaline, in pained surprise. "I can't begin to see everything they put on if I only go that often. Besides, Hattie and me have promised to go together, and she always sees three matinees a week, besides the ones Harold takes her to in the evening. "Anyway," she added, with a slight blush, "it won't really cost you so much, 'cause George said he was going to take me to lots."

"George" was Mr. Sproddles, who sat on the bottom step, surreptitiously holding Miss' Jenks' hand. He rose to his opportunities by giving the hand a squeeze, and remarking briefly, "You bet!"

"You got the craze, too?" demanded Pa Jenks, sharply.

"Well, I like a good show now and then," he replied, cautiously. "There's usually a classy burlesque at the Star and Garter——"

"George and I are going to see lots of Shakspeare this winter?" broke in Emmaline, coldly.

"And the Gotch wrastling pictures ought to be along pretty soon," added George, with a note of enthusiasm.

"You people," said Mr. Jenks, "don't know anything but bloodless, modern, boiled-shirt plays, and la-la-la musical things. It didn't used to be that way when I was young.

"I remember the time I played through New York state with 'The Gladiator's Bride.' I was young then, before I met your ma. Had a hankerin' to go on the stage and be another Booth. Used to give shows in the cellar when I was a kid, and do comic stunts in the school plays and church entertainments. Finally I got so bad I'd give fifty cents to go on as a super at the old Brooklyn Theater where The Eagle Building stands now. Then folks saw there was no hope for me and decided to let me go to the bad my own way."

"And did you, pa?" inquired Emmaline, innocently.

"I certainly did," retorted Mr. Jenks with a chuckle. The memories of his youth were sweet to him. "Tramped round the agents till I got a two line part in the 'Gladiator's Bride' as aforesaid. Played a faithful Greek slave with pink tights and a red wig and a little brown tunic that would have looked like a pillow slip if there had been more of it. They wanted to make me take off my glasses, but I wouldn't give up my independence, not for eleven dollars a week."

"What were your two lines?" asked Emmaline.

Mr. Jenks shut his eyes in an effort of memory. "'Twas one of these noble old blank verse drammas," he said. "Only parts of it were blanker than others. I guess my lines were the blankest in the piece. I came in, middle of the last act where the heroine was waiting for the hero and soliliquizing about it, and I says with fear written all over my face——" Mr. Jenks sprang up nimbly and took an attitude—

"The hol-o-caust advances! Rome's in flames,
I beg you, dearest lady, flee, oh, flee!"

Then she said "Never!" and stabbed herself because she thought the leading man was lost in the flames, and I fled, oh, fled, just as Julius Antonius ran in and fell on her body with a forty line speech, and slow curtain with red fire and trumpets off-stage."

"Finally my chance came. Leading man—his name was Archibald de Quedville Montgomery—at least that was his name on the programme, but his handkerchiefs were marked Reilly—Archibald got into an altercation with a hotel-keeper, a heartless ruffian, who set a paid board bill above all mimetic art; landlord assaulted him, hit him somewhere near the back of his head and the postoffice, and Archie had to be shipped home for repairs. That was Sunday night, and we opened Monday somewhere—I think it was Weehauken. Anyway, there was an advance sale of as much as fourteen dollars, and the show had to be given. But how? That was the question. The manager—poor old Blinks—ran round tearfully begging some one to learn the part before Monday, only to get the merry laugh from all hands. Some part it was too, full of mingled blank verse and wrestling matches with the villain."

"And then, pa," cried Emmaline, breathlessly, "you offered?"

"Right," answered Mr. Jenks with pride. "I'd heard Archie get it off so often I knew it by heart. Anyone of the other men could have learned it the same way only they didn't have my ambition."

"You must have wanted to act," said Ma Jenks, acidly.

A dreamy distant look came into Mr. Jenks' face, and he turned to Sproddles, and began speaking softly. "It wasn't acting," he murmured, "it was acting with her." Ma Jenks stiffened.

"Who was 'her,'" inquired Sproddles.

"The leading lady," said Mr. Jenks, raptly. "Vivien—Vivien St. Clair—the most beautiful being my earthly eyes shall ever gaze upon. Hunks, simply hunks, of hair of spun gold, sapphire eyes, alabaster brows, ivory fingers, silver tones, and a heart of precious metal."

"How she murmured those love scenes?"

"Murdered?" queried Emmaline.

"But acting with Vivien was not all happiness," he said, hastily. "I shall never forget that first night. It was horrible. I had the lines so I could say 'em backward, but the costume was a different thing. Archibald was one of those husky old-fashioned actors, nearly six feet tall with a waistline that was a waistline. Built something like George here, only more graceful. Now I—I—was well not as large as I am now"—George whistled, vindictively—"and Archibald's clothes fit me too much. When I got his sections of tin armor on me—all beautifully adorned with gilt paint that came off on Vivien's costume in the clinches—I rattled round inside like a pea in a walnut shell. Then I had a helmet with a red plume that quivered in the wind. It was a nice helmet, but it came down over my ears so I couldn't hear, and my eyes, so I couldn't see. Except for that I got along beautifully in it. Then there was a long cloak which tripped me up when I was in a hurry, and a sword which got between my legs, and gave me a drunken locomotion which was not classical."

"A-ah! A long yellow silk robe, with a sort of blue embroidered overskirt that left one shoulder bare, and heavy gold bracelets, and her hair fell all down her back with strings of pearls in it. I tell you, George, she—was—some—peach." George looked slyly at Emmaline and breathed heavily.

"You must have made a striking couple," commented ma.

"We did, except that she was a foot and a half too tall, and I had to stand on the palace stairs when I wooed her. But she didn't cause the trouble. Everything went finely till the third act, the big scene of the piece. I'd been saving my strength for that. You don't get scenes like that now on the stage. Scene was the Colosseum, and Vivien, who played Esther, the Christian slave, was to be killed by a mob of gladiators.

"Manager wanted lions, and sprung one on us at the dress rehearsal, but we all struck, so he compromised on gladiators. Well, just as they were going to club her, Julius Antonius leaped into the arena with a battle axe, caught the fainting girl, and drove the ruffians—about two dozen of them—howling from the scene. Brassy music for finale—spotlight and quick curtain.

"These gladiators were the fly in the ointment that upset my kettle of fish. Archibald always got along all right with 'em, I found out later, by taking 'em all out before the scene and giving them large quantities of liquids, so that in the scene they were well disposed to him and a bit sleepy as well. But, bless you, I was too young and proud for that. So I walked out of my dressing room haughtily, as a leading man should, with my nose up. I even elbowed one or two husky ones out of the way, and called 'em names when they sassed me.

"You see they were a sad-looking bunch, with costumes made out of any old thing, and quick make-ups—the property man used to do them one a minute—and large clubs. I always had said real clubs were dangerous, and that night I was sure of it. My cue came, much sooner than it had any business to, it seemed to me. I dropped gracefully into the arena, pushed the thugs aside with a great deal of action, and clasped as much of Vivien as I could reach around her waist—it was some waist—and prepared for my long speech to the rabble, bidding them disperse. It was a good speech but long. Went something like this——"

Mr. Jenks sprang up, jerked Sproddles to his feet, who stood there blushing uncomfortably, amid Emmaline's giggles, while Jenks encircled his waist, struck an attitude, and began in a voice which caused sleepy neighbors down the street to rush to the windows and peer out:

'Ye men of Rome! How can I call you men,
Who thus with impious and gore-dappled hands
Dare touch the sacred person of this gy-url?
Back to your dens and kennels, ere I leap
And with this sword, which slew five thousand men
In battle on the banks of Euphrates,
Carve you limb from limb and hang your heads
All dripping, on the Cloaca Maxima,
Eternal warning to the citizens
That Julius is protector of their maids.'

"There was a good deal more of it and it was very beautiful, if they had given me a chance to say it. But they didn't. As soon as Vivien was flopped down on my right arm—and she weighed something, too—and I had begun my speech, with my sword threatening to trip me up every moment, one of the strong-arm men shouted 'Come on, boys, let's give this skinny son of a scene-shifter his!'"

"They did," said Mr. Jenks, ruefully. "They used real clubs, too. I used my silly papier-mache sword till it broke, and then tried to get away. But I didn't get off as fast as I wanted. Women were screaming in the audience, and I thought Vivien was crying, too, till I looked down and saw she was just shaking with laughter. Then I got mad and dropped her. Her face when she hit the floor was a study. She got up and walked off, madder'n a wet hen. Then I dodged some of the combatants and kicked down a few others, and made for the door, with the whole gang after. They chased me all through town, with the jays cheering me on, and my tin armor rattling like a fire department. I caught a freight train at the station just as it was pulling off. They didn't want to have me stay—thought I was a lunatic, I guess, but when they saw the crowd after me they took pity, and the train crew rigged me up in extra overalls and a jumped they had aboard. I dropped the armor and things along the road in separate sections."

"And didn't you ever see Vivien again?" said Emmaline, as soon as she could speak coherently?

"No," said her sire. "And I didn't want to neither. She cured me."

Dead on the Field of Glory

By Don Marquis

I.

This isn't just anyone's corpse that is lying
Here where the carnage was worst!
The soldier that died here did some prize dying
From sabres and missiles and thirst.

II.

He was the Bleeding Aide
That galloped adown the lines
With words of the ambuscade
In yonder clump of pines;
He was the Great Commander
That Aide reported to—— Napoleon, Alexander,
Caesar, Grant, Lysander,
That fought the war and planned her,
And pulled the victory through;
He was the Sergeant that ran
(As only a sergeant can)
Right to the shattered van,
Catching the colors that fell;
He was the last, forlorn,
Desperate charge of the worn
And wearied cavalry, torn
And riddled by shot and shell!

III.

A General comes spurring hard, comes spurring from the rear,
Comes spurring with a pair of spurs, comes spurring without fear;
The army gives a shout because it recognizes him——
No one but he could spur that way, so resolute and grim!
The General says the day is lost unless with courage stout
Some husky guy swims yonder stream and drives the foeman out;
A dauntless Corporal remarks: "I am the guy will swim!"

IV.

Here is the place where the gallant command
Sought the Last Ditch to make the Last Stand;
Inch by inch only they yielded the ground,
Heaping the foemen in winrows around;
Swept the final heroic assault of the day;
He made that Last Charge!—and he made that Last Stand!—
And he died with his sword flashing red in his hand;
'Twas he that covered the army's retreat,
And, shooting himself, snatched the day from defeat;
He wrote this dispatch from the scene of the fray;
We have won—but we've won at a terrible cost;
I regret to report that my life has been lost;
Don't print any details that I don't revise
Lest the public be cheated with errors and lies;
When the moaument's builded kindly await
My O. K. on the same, and don't dedicate
Any second-rate shaft, for this fight was sublime—
And I'm having a perfectly corking good time!

V.

Dead on the field that he won he is lying—
He was scattered too much to be nursed—
Tread gently, reporters, tread cautiously, tourists,
Here's where the dynamite burst.

ALCOHOL—A GLIMPSE FORWARD

(Special Aerophone to The Eagle).

CHATEAU DES BEAUX ARTS, Huntington, September 16 (1921)—Fire caused by carelessness in throwing down a lighted match on the North Hempstead turnpike at 10 o'clock this morning, destroyed a mile of road between Cold Spring Harbor and Huntington, burned one man to death, injured several persons, and for a time threatened the village of Cold Spring with destruction. What has been often predicted as a result of the universal use of denatured alcohol for power purposes, has come to pass. The whole section about Cold Spring and Huntington Bay is in a state of panic, and thousands of people are fleeing for their lives, using all sorts of antiquated vehicles to get toward the center of the island and away from the Sound and the motor highways. A steady stream of sightseers is pouring in from the city, however, and they laugh at the fright of the residents and will not be deterred from getting a close view of the speedy craft at anchor in the bay.

Fear of a wide conflagration or a tremendous explosion of alcohol vapors from the thousands of motors gathered to witness the international races between aeroplanes, motorboats and racing cars, is driving the population southward. An appeal is to be made to Governor Calder to order the races stopped, and martial law may have to be ordered to prevent the wholesale destruction of the valuable machines by the terror-stricken farmers. The conditions are almost indescribable. Confusion and terror reign supreme, and the whole populace seems to have gone stark, staring mad.

The air is surcharged with the fumes of the alcoholic fuels used by the motors, and it requires little stretch of the imagination to picture a sheet of flame a mile high over Huntington Bay, which would consume even the salt in the water. This possibility has been pointed out by some fervent speakers of the Anti-Alcoholic League, who conducted a campaign in this section during the past week, and the fire on the turnpike this morning was taken as the beginning of the end by the rural inhabitants.

That there is some basis for the fear was admitted to The Eagle correspondent by Commodore Jose Pidgeon of the Motor Boat Club of America at noon today. He is greatly concerned over the unexpected gathering of thousands of motorboats, motorcars and aeroplanes, all using various brands of alcoholic liquors for power.

"We never expected so many thousands of spectators," said the commodore, sadly. "We now find ourselves face to face with a most serious problem. Should a fire get a start, in any one of the boats on the bay, there is no telling the extent of the catastrophe which would certainly follow. You could almost step from boat to boat, now, and the flames would spread with inconceivable rapidity if one tank exploded. We have issued the most rigid orders forbidding smoking, but we are in a state of terrible anxiety for fear the worst may happen. This is the last of the international races so near New York City."

The roads to Huntington have been traversed by hundreds of thousands of alcohol-driven machines within the past few days, and in patches the surface of the road bed is saturated with a mixture of alcohol and oil drippings which is highly inflammable, as the burning of the road near Cold Spring indicates. The surface of Huntington Bay is in a state almost as bad, and the air reeks with the pungent odors of the various forms of denatured alcohol used to drive the big engines.

Several boys were detected applying matches to the surface of the water almost in front of the Chateau des Beaux Arts last night, but, fortunately, the mixture did not catch fire and the boys were locked up by Constable Stiles. Scores of boats arrived during the night and a close watch is being kept, so that the experiment will not be repeated, for it is feared that the bay might literally take fire with the amount of spirits that has been added from the discharges of the late arrivals.

Some of the foreign entries in the events are using a concentrated form of alcohol which is highly explosive, and is claimed to be very powerful. The Spirits of Nitre LII., the crack hydroplane of the Marquis of Queensbury, is said to have developed one hundred miles an hour through the use of the liquor from which she takes her name. The Absinthe Frappe, owned by the Due de Chalnes, and painted green, has been almost filled to the gunwales with extra tanks of absinthe for the big races tomorrow against the Vodka II. of Grand Duke Sergius. If the French boat ever gets in the lead, it is said the fumes from her engine will overcome all the occupants of rival boats in the rear. These boats are not nearly so popular with the native baymen, as the entries from Canada, Scotland and Kentucky. The Mint Julep of Colonel Charles Osborne Stark is the center of an admiring fleet of rowboats. Colonel Stark has engaged a corps of experts, who are at present disputing over the proper method of mixing the fuel to be supplied to the engine so as to obtain the greatest speed.

Rollo De Pyster is using a very fragrant cologne in his craft, and says that the fumes alone are powerful enough to drive the boat at one hundred and forty miles an hour.

A conference of the Air Scouts Club, who are policing the course, with the officers of the United States Aerial Squadron in charge of the regulations, is to be held at 2 o'clock this afternoon, to determine upon some means of insuring the safety of the spectators and property for miles around. It is rumored that every alcohol engine, either on boat, motorcar or aeroplane, not owned by a member of the associated clubs interested, will be sent away a distance of five miles from the races. This is not to prevent collisions, but to spread the dangerous fuel tanks over as wide an area as possible to prevent a disaster. Stern measures are necessary, it is felt, and they will be rigidly enforced. The orders will be issued at 3 o'clock today.

Edwig Rees, a Scandinavian engineer, attached to one of the hydro-alco-planes, is believed to have been responsible for the blaze on the road near Cold Spring this morning. He wandered ashore to enjoy a quiet smoke, as smoking is forbidden on the boats, and after lighting a cigarette, threw the match down on the road. Three witnesses of the tragedy have been found who tell substantially the same story. They say that the engineer was enveloped in a sheet of flame almost immediately, and the fire then spread up the road. Only the quick use of an autoplow which was run across the highway, making several furrows a foot wide, checked the flames. The Air Scouts did good service, hovering over the blazing road and sprinkling chemicals in the path of the fire.

Many of the residents of this section seem to be befuddled with the atmosphere, but the fire roused them to a high pitch of excitement, and they are staggering away as fast as they can.

"The Fire Then Spread Up the Road."

Little Tales of Brooklyn Town

THE Rev. Dr. S. Parkes Cadman is regarded as one of the best story-tellers among the ministers, and he is about as fond of a joke on himself as anybody else. He is certainly the quickest man to answer questions in what is called a "Question Box Service" there is before the public today. During the last fall he gave a series of addresses to men at the Bedford Branch of the Young Men's Christian Association. The men in the audience were at each lecture invited to send up questions, which Dr. Cadman had stated he would answer when he was through speaking. The questions were of every description, but Dr. Cadman was never at a loss for an answer.

Sometime previous to the Sunday afternoon on which the reply here recorded came, Pastor Russell had delivered his lecture or sermon on "Where Are the Dead?" A man in the audience, with intent to have fun with the celebrated preacher, sent up to Dr. Cadman this question:

"Where are the dead?"

Quick as a flash Dr. Cadman answered: "I have a choice selection of 'dead ones' in Central Church. Come around and look them over."

Of course, this was not to be taken seriously, and no one did so take it, but its quick retort created a laugh which continued for some time.

A GROUP of Brooklyn lawyers were discussing one of their profession the other evening, and in the course of the conversation somebody spoke of his unfailing courtesy. "Yes," said one, "Blank is the very acme of courtesy and dignity, but sometimes he can become angry, and then his native courtesy struggles with his wrath, and the result is rather peculiar. It reminds me of a little story.

"A circus came to my old town in the South when I was a boy, and among those who went to see it was a typical Kentucky colonel, as dignified as a justice of the United States Supreme Court. As a prelude to the performance, a clown appeared in the ring holding forth a bottle of rare old Bourbon, and invited everyone in the crowd to come forward and take a drink. The colonel responded, marching down the aisle with stately tread.

"What followed was irresistibly comical. As the colonel advanced the clown retreated, still holding the bottle out. The colonel, his dignity never for a moment deserting him, again stepped gravely forward and again the clown retreated. These maneuvers continued until the clown backed into the dressing-room and then, concealing the bottle behind his back, he grimaced mockingly.

The colonel drew himself up, threw his head high and with an indignant snort said sternly:

"'Inborn courtesy, suh, and not a desire for your liquor, led me to accept your invitation, you bandy-legged, hump-nosed, weazened-faced galoot.'"

A SPORTING writer of Brooklyn knows a good story about Cardinal Gibbons. The scribe used to be a newspaperman in Baltimore, and one evening he and several other Baltimore reporters went to the Cardinal's home to interview him. The Cardinal—whom everybody loves—was most genial, as he always is, and to the surprise of the reporters he passed cigars among them all. The boys "lit up" and took soul-satisfying whiffs, but their contentment changed to consternation at the very first puff. Then each looked at his neighbor and quietly laid his cigar aside, stealthily, while the Cardinal had his attention occupied elsewhere.

It seems that the good man had for years collected cigars which well-meaning persons had presented him with but which he never smoked. He had kept them carefully laid away to give to his friends, but, knowing little about tobacco and the manner of preserving it, he had packed them away in camphor. When the reporters attempted to smoke them it was like puffing on camphor balls.

Mr. Hilliard used to be an amateur actor in Brooklyn. A certain Brooklyn man, who knew him well in those days, is authority for a statement that the famous actor as a boy showed little histrionic ability, or, at least, so little that when he announced that he was going on the stage professionally he was laughed at. Subsequent events have proved that Mr. Hilliard knew his own talents better than his friends did and better than they thought he himself knew them.

As an amateur actor in Brooklyn, the star of "A Fool There Was" was a member of an organization known as the Athenian Society and at one time as the Social Literary Union. Some of the Brooklyn people with whom Mr. Hilliard was associated in those days were Edith Kingdon, now Mrs. George Gould; Dr. Robert B. Cantrell of 53 McDonough street, the late Colonel John Oakey, who was an Assistant United States District Attorney; James A. Ruggles of the Union League Club, A. A. Webster, former Mayor Alfred A. Chapin and his sister, since married, who was Miss Grace Chapin, and Dean Pratt. Dr. Lyman Beecher was interested in the work of the society.

CHURCH A SALESROOM FOR 'MIRACLE' WHEAT AT $60 PER BUSHEL

Offered the Faithful Who Read Pastor Russell's Magazine.

SOLD AT THE TABERNACLE.

Anyone Who So Desires Can Purchase the Precious Grain at Hicks Street Headquarters.

Many of the devoted followers of Pastor Russell, whose indefatigable efforts in the vineyard of the Lord has attracted wide attention in Brooklyn, are awaiting with interest the result of a new experiment emanating from his headquarters in the Tabernacle, 13 and 17 Hicks street, this borough.

The experiment is "Miracle Wheat."

The society of which Pastor Russell is the head wants it distinctly understood that it has nothing whatever to do with the wheat itself, beyond the fact that the grain is being sold from its headquarters, and that it expects the faithful follower who produces it to give the society the returns from the sales.

Because of the miraculous powers of the wheat in question, it is being sold at a slightly higher rate than that commanded by the ordinary variety. Generally speaking, the price of the "Miracle Wheat" is $60 a bushel. It can be bought in small lots at about $1 for a pound. Or, if one desires, it can also be purchased at the rate of fifty-five pounds for $50.

The price of ordinary wheat for which farmers claim no extraordinary or divine qualities is, according to the latest quotations, about 59 cents or $1 per bushel.

Brother Dockey (first name refused to inquirers) is the watchdog of the wheat treasury. Brother Dockey states that from thirty to thirty-five bushels have been sold thus far, which, according to the price quoted, has netted from $1,800 to $2,100. The Watch Tower Bible and Tract Society gets this money, according to Brother Dockey. The society's receipts last year from the sale of religious literature, donations, etc., was $150,000, and the money realized from the sale of wheat at $60 a bushel is expected to swell this year's revenues to an even higher figure.

Brother Dockey says that Brother J. A. Bohnet, who, Brother Dockey understands, has "a farm out in Ohio," first discovered "miracle" wheat. This was in 1907. Since that time he has experimented with it, and other "brothers" have been told the secret, until now Brother Bohnet of Ohio and Brother Flemming of Indiana and others are able to grow enough "miracle" wheat to have it placed on sale in Brooklyn, the brothers generously agreeing to donate all the proceeds to Pastor Russell's society. The following advertisement in the Watch Tower, the semi-monthly of the society, explains the proposition:

A DONATION OF MIRACLE WHEAT.

Brother Bohnet writes us that he has gradually accumulated a crop of miracle wheat from the few grains he obtained as a start. He prefers that the first opportunity for obtaining this wheat shall go to The Watch Tower readers. He will sell it for $1 per pound, including postage, and give the entire proceeds to our society. All orders for this wheat should be addressed Miracle Wheat Bohnet, 17 Hicks street, Brooklyn, N. Y. This will keep mail on this subject separate from his personal mail and from ours.

Brother Bohnet promises to be ready to ship this wheat by August 1. He says miracle wheat should be sowed one-fourth as thick as common wheat. Ordinarily it should produce from ten to fifteen times as much proportionately to the amount sown. To save keeping account, money should accompany the order. Watch Tower readers will have the preference up to August 15, after which orders will be attended to indiscriminately, so long as the supply holds out. This wheat should be sown in the fall.

Brother Dockey says that some of Pastor Russell's followers in this city came to the Tabernacle personally and bought "miracle" wheat, while others in other cities and states sent in their money by mail and Uncle Sam carried the precious grain.

For years wheat experts in America have tried to produce wheat with the yielding qualities claimed by Brother Bohnet's grain. Yet here is a marvelous grain that has been in existence for four years and not a big grain man in the country has known anything about it, or it would have been commercialized long ago.

No Guarantee Goes With the Wheat, However.

At the Tabernacle in Hicks street no guarantee is given with the "miracle" wheat that is sold that it will yield "from ten to fifteen times as much proportionately to the amount sown." Brother Dockey admits the possibility that the "miracle" brand isn't so wonderful as all this. He says that Brother Bohnet doesn't claim this. Brother Dockey in substantiation of this statement points to the advertisement above quoted, pointing especially to several certain words, to wit, "ordinarily it should produce." Brother Dockey figures that this relieves Brother Bohnet of all responsibility in case any particular lot of "miracle" wheat should prove to yield only ordinary results.

Brother Dockey says that a wrong impression is got by anyone who, reading the advertisement, believes that Pastor Russell or the Watch Tower Bible and Tract Society guarantees the worth of "miracle" wheat or that either Pastor Russell or the society has anything to do actually with promoting the sale of the wheat.

"Here's our lawyer right here," said Brother Dockey today, motioning to a tall man in black who was standing near by. "He'll explain that this society has nothing whatever to do with 'miracle wheat.'"

The tall man in black said he was "general counsel" for the society. He did not care to give his name.

"Brother Dockey is right," he said. "Anybody who says that Pastor Russell or the society is selling wheat is a liar. Brother Bohnet offered to donate his 'miracle wheat' and the society accepted his offer. He is merely allowed to place the wheat on sale here in the Tabernacle. Brother Dockey sells it. Neither brother has a voting share in the society. Brother Bohnet has kindly agreed to turn over all the money received for the wheat to the treasury of the society."

Neither Brother Dockey nor the "general counsel" make any claim that the "miracle wheat" has an intrinsic value of $60 a bushel.

"The advertisement in the Watch Tower does not say that 'miracle' wheat is worth $1 a pound," said the general counsel. "It says simply that Brother Bohnet is willing to sell it at that price. It is purely a donation sale, for the benefit of the society, and those who buy at the price quoted do so with the understanding and the idea that they are voluntarily giving aid to the society. I might place high value upon worthless furniture if I wished to, and if people wanted to buy at the price I named they could do so if they wished, though I made no claims that the furniture had any real value beyond that of ordinary furniture."

Although Brother Bohnet is not a member of the society, according to the "general counsel," it is a fact that he finds time, between tending his "miracle" wheat on his Ohio farm, to lecture before Bible classes. Brother Bohnet just now is lecturing out in Washington or Canada, Brother Dockey is not sure just which.

TAFT IN PEORIA

Busy Day Mapped Out for Him. Refuses to Discuss Reciprocity Defeat.

Peoria, Ill., September 22—A cloudless sky greeted President Taft, who arrived here at 6:30 o'clock this morning on his special train from Kalamazoo. The Knights of Columbus, whose guest he is, have arranged a busy day for him.

Leaving the car at 8 o'clock a.m., the President was escorted to Creve Coeur Club, where he was tendered a breakfast by the Rev. Edmund M. Dunne, Bishop of the diocese of Peoria, and at which about forty priests of the diocese and members of the Knights of Columbus were present.

Leaving the clubhouse at 10 o'clock, the presidential party went on an automobile ride through the downtown district and prominent residence district, bringing up at the Country Club at noon, where a luncheon was served by the Republican State Central Committee.

At 3 o'clock the President will be taken to the clubhouse of the Knights of Columbus, where a reception will be tendered to him, cards having been issued to 500 prominent citizens. From 4:30 to 6 o'clock he will rest at the home of Mrs. W. A. Heron, a relative of his wife, and at 6:30 o'clock he will be the guest of honor and deliver an address on "Columbus and the Philippines," at the annual banquet of the Knights of Columbus. He leaves at midnight for St. Louis.

President Taft got up early today and scanned the papers eagerly for more complete returns from the Canadian election than were available last night. The certain defeat of the Government and reciprocity was plain, but the President had nothing to say before he left his private car to take up the day's programme.

HART HELD FOR GRAND JURY.

Uncle Believes Idea of "Evening Up" Led Boy Into Burglary.

Magistrate Harris today held Clarence J. Hart, the young burglar who gave his name as Frank Meyers when he was arrested in the commission of a burglary at 211 State street, the other day, for the action of the Grand Jury on two charges of burglary. There are to be four complaints against him when his case is brought to the attention of the Grand Jury, and it is likely that other complaints of burglary will crop up.

The uncle of the prisoner, Joseph B. Lackon of Court street, owner of the coal barge Katie D, visited him in the "pen" in the Adams Street Court this morning. He said Clarence was not at heart a bad boy, and indicated that he had tried to work honestly for him. But one day burglars broke into the boy's cabin and stole a lot of his property. He felt that the idea that he had been victimized by thieves led Clarence into burglary on the general principle of evening up things.

AVIATOR KILLED IN FALL.

Curtiss Machine Operator Drops to Death at Mansfield, Pa.

Elmira, N. Y., September 22—"Daredevil" Castellane, a Curtiss aviator, fell to instant death at the Mansfield, Pa., fair today. He had started in an exhibition flight, and when three-quarters of a mile from the ground his machine was seen to careen, turn turtle and fall on a hillside.

Castellane was found buried beneath the wreckage of his engine and plane.

His wife witnessed the fatality.

NOTED SOPRANO ILL.

Shanna Cumming Jones Has Not Been Able to Sing for Several Weeks.

Mrs. Shanna Cumming Jones, the famous soprano, who has been a member of the quartet of the Central Congregational Church for a number of years, has not been in the choir loft for many weeks. She returned from a trip to the Pacific Coast, during which she sang in oratorio in many cities, early in the summer. She was nervously broken down and was compelled to go to a sanitarium for treatment.

Frederick Preston, organist and musical director of the Central Congregational Church, said today that Mrs. Jones was somewhat improved and it was expected that she would be able to resume her duties in a few weeks. In order to quietly rest she had gone to a sanitarium but would no doubt soon be able to return home.

BANK PROBE MAY END BY REFUSAL OF DIX TO ISSUE A SUBPENA

Goldstein Names Five Witnesses Besides Grout Who Refuse to Be Examined at Hearings.

SAYS GOVERNOR PROMISED IT.

Grand Jury and Bank Department Sessions Resumed Here—Orr Contracting Company Inquired Into.

(Special to The Eagle.)

Albany, September 22—Governor Dix still maintains his intention to issue no executive subpena requiring Edward M. Grout to testify before him as to his knowledge of the affairs of the Union Bank.

Assemblyman Goldstein hopes the Governor will change his mind, as he says that the Governor promised to issue a subpena some time ago if a hitch occurred in the present investigation conducted by the Banking Department.

In response to questions before leaving Albany, Goldstein threw a new light on the status of the investigation by showing that several most important witnesses have followed Grout's lead and are refusing to appear at the bank investigation. Goldstein said:

"Yes, it is true, Governor Dix promised to issue an executive subpena some time ago. I cannot understand his present attitude. When the question of the investigation by the State Banking Department was proposed some time ago I raised the objection to it upon the ground we might be blocked.

"Governor Dix assured me he would issue an executive subpena if there was any attempt at obstruction. We have reached a crisis in the investigation. Governor Dix should come to the rescue of the 23,000 Brooklyn banking victims. Not only did Governor Dix assure me of aid when needed, but Superintendent Van Tuyl made a similar promise to a committee which saw him some weeks ago.

"At the present time several important witnesses are missing. They have been served with subpenas, but have ignored them. Among the missing are Charles F. Donnelly, a brother-in-law of President Sullivan, of the old Mechanics and Traders Bank; Joseph Weed, another brother-in-law of Sullivan; Christopher J. Brooks, formerly manager of the Atlantic Avenue Branch of the Mechanics and Traders; Thomas D. Tompkins, son of a former director of the Mechanics and Traders, who owes the bank $100,000, and Louise D. Burkhardt, secretary to Sullivan, who was in Europe when the 1908 Grand Jury investigated the bank affairs. All of the witnesses have skipped out of the State and our inquiry will soon be at a standstill unless Governor Dix comes to the aid of the depositors.

MR. ORR KNEW LITTLE ABOUT HIS COMPANY

In the most candid manner the president of one of the concerns which figures prominently in the Union Bank history recited at the investigation today the story of how his name was used time and again by the insiders in the Union Bank to cover the purchase of the stock of other institutions, and to do many things he did not thoroughly investigate. In a space of two years and a half the company received credits at the bank of $1,450,000, although the company was incorporated and started on $500, which Cropsey could not definitely determine had been paid in.

The man was Robert P. Orr, an attorney and the president of the Orr Contracting Company. He said he did not go far in his investigation of the bank account of his company. Cashier James T. Ashley of the bank was an incorporator of the company and when $400,000 or so would be added or taken away from the company's account Orr would leave it pretty much to Ashley.

Grand Jury Bank Investigation May Bring Indictments.

The Grand Jury investigation into the Union Bank scandals was resumed this afternoon at 2 o'clock, following a short recess taken to permit Assistant District Attorney Goldstein to visit Albany to see Governor Dix in relation to securing an executive subpena against Edward M. Grout, and the Grand Jury entered into its final week of work.

District Attorney Clarke and Mr. Goldstein are taking extraordinary precautions to prevent any information getting out from the Grand Jury room and this is taken as an indication that more than one indictment in the Union Bank matter will be handed in on Friday next, when the jurors are discharged.

Both Mr. Clarke and his assistant were very busy today in matters pertaining to the Union Bank. When the Grand Jury convened this afternoon the witnesses were kept within the inner anteroom and the outer door kept shut. It is expected that there will be afternoon sessions each day next week until the question of indictments is finally disposed of.

Robert P. Orr of 656 President street was the first witness called at the Bank Department hearing, which was resumed today. He said he was an incorporator of the Orr Contracting Company and its president. James T. Ashley and John Orr were also incorporators. John Orr, he said, was a bank clerk. Robert said John, his brother, had moved recently from 715 President street, where he had been living. He said he hadn't made any effort to look up his brother, though he knew the latter had recently been married. He was asked if his brother had gone on a wedding trip, and he said he didn't believe he had. The witness and the counsel had a tiff over the whereabouts of John Orr, and the witness said if the lawyer would indicate that he wanted John he'd get him. Attorney Cropsey said that was what he wanted and the question was dropped.

The Orr Construction Company was taken up. The attorney asked how the company came to be incorporated. The NORMAN A. LEES ARRESTED.

Wife of Former Brooklynite Says He Threatened to Kill Her.

(Special to The Eagle.)

Fishkill, N. Y., September 22—Norman A. Lees, who became prominent a few months ago by the charges he brought concerning the conditions in the Matteawan State Hospital, is under arrest in Poughkeepsie charged by his wife, Annie, with threatening to kill her.

Lees and his family moved a few months ago to Poughkeepsie from Brooklyn, where they lived at 131 Douglass street. Mrs. Lees in her complaint says her husband has threatened to kill her by throwing her from the second story veranda of their residence, and also has threatened to have her sent to an asylum. She says her husband showed her commitment papers already made out and for $10 he could get a court to send her away.

AMERICAN A. O. H. SCORED BY BOARD OF ERIN MEN

National President Hanlon Denounces Rivals in Heated Words

There was a red hot meeting last evening of the county board of the branch of the Ancient Order of Hibernians, known as the Board of Erin, which is quite distinct from the other organization with a similar name, at the headquarters, Myrtle avenue and Bridge street.

The meeting was called to emphasize a protest against the alleged action of Division No. 6, of the American A. O. H., in admitting men said not to be of Irish birth or descent, and casting an alleged slight upon Dr. Donohue of St. Thomas Aquinas Church and Father Duhigg, rector of St. John the Evangelist.

Words were not minced at the meeting, and when Dennis J. Hanlon, national president of the Board of Erin, pitched into the members of the opposition body, the feeling ran very high, and the old building fairly shook as in fiery language Mr. Hanlon proceeded to flay the men who had been guilty of the alleged "disgraceful proceeding."

Mr. Hanlon's Blood Crept as He Read the Story in The Eagle.

Mr. Hanlon began by saying that though he lives in Manhattan, he is a close reader of The Brooklyn Daily Eagle, and on looking over the paper on Wednesday evening, it made his blood fairly creep when he read of the alleged scandal resulting from a meeting held by the "so-called Hibernians," at which several of the priests of Brooklyn were insulted. Nothing better could be expected, continued the speaker, from a "gang" who sent delegates to Ireland to break up the order of which he was national president. This, Mr. Hanlon said they tried to do, but the bishops and priests in Ireland defeated the attempt, and instead of breaking up the order the delegates had to make their escape from the old country.

The speaker also alleged that the rival organization had attempted to defeat Home Rule, but that the true sons of Erin had thwarted them, and so their stay in Ireland was cut short.

This was bad enough, said the speaker, but now in desperation they have insulted some of the most patriotic and deservedly respected priests in Brooklyn. Mr. Hanlon then stated with the greatest possible emphasis that genuine A. O. H. Board of Erin unreservedly denounced the scandal heaped on the Irish race by the so-called American board, and that no stone should be left unturned to expose the injury done to the Irish people by these "soldiers of fortune."

Resolutions in keeping with Mr. Hanlon's remarks were carried without a dissenting whisper, and the secretary was authorized to forward them to the press.

Meeting Recalls Some of the Feuds of Bygone Days.

The Board of Erin claims to be the original Ancient Order of Hibernians, established in Ireland nearly a century ago. It was extended to America many years ago, to organize the Irishmen employed in building the railroads in this country. Owing to county factional disturbances, the Board of Erin stepped in and organized many divisions of the order. In this way there was unity, as the old county faction trouble was done away with.

However, about thirty years ago, a split occurred, and a new branch of the A. O. H. was organized that had no connection with the old Board of Erin. The old-time members refused to cut loose from their affiliation with the society in Ireland, and as a result, the friction between the two organizations has continued more or less ever since, though in recent years it has not been very pronounced.

For years the separate factions in Brooklyn held individual parades on St. Patrick's Day, and the discreet police commissioner of Brooklyn usually saw to it that the routes were kept as widely separated as possible. Latterly, however, the feeling has died down, and there has been only one parade, in which all hands joined with apparent cordiality.

It would seem from what happened last evening that the breach may be opened again, and the return fire from the American branch of the A. O. H. is being eagerly awaited.

The other officers are James Leonard, financial secretary; Timothy Meehan, president of Division No. 6, B. of E.; Thomas Rice, treasurer.

Young Danish Aviator Stid to Be Planning Trip for Next Summer.

A trip across the Atlantic Ocean in an aeroplane is planned by a young Danish aviator, who has written a letter to the Nordlyset, a Danish weekly, published at 562 Atlantic avenue, this borough, in which he outlines his projected trip. The name of the aviator is withheld by G. S. Strandvold, editor of the paper, at the young Dane's request. He does not want his negotiators with English and American capitalists to miscarry through premature publication.

William H. Babcock, the chauffeur whose car killed Dr. Herman Bender on the night of August 16, was arraigned this morning before County Judge Dike on an indictment charging him with manslaughter in the second degree.

Babcock's attorney waived the reading of the indictment and pleaded not guilty. Babcock will be tried early in October, it is said. If convicted he can get a fifteen year sentence in prison.

TRUST REORGANIZATION TO GAIN COURT APPROVAL SAYS ATTORNEY GENERAL

The Plan Must Be Such as the Government May Acquiesce In.

TO MOVE AGAINST VIOLATORS.

Court Decision Makes It Necessary for Combinations to Resolve Themselves Into Separate Entities.

Washington, September 22—Recent reports to the effect that the attorneys for large combinations of corporations and their principals also were hoping for some general understanding with the government authorities concerning the application of the anti-trust law, and that some of them had gone to the Attorney General to ascertain what action, if any, may be necessary to make them stand right in the eyes of the Government was the subject of much discussion here today.

The Associated Press is in position to state the following as the attitude of the Department of Justice:

"The position of the Attorney General, frequently stated by him, is that since the decisions of the Supreme Court in the oil and tobacco cases, to quote the language employed by him in his speech at Battle Creek, Mich., 'the area of uncertainty in the law' has been greatly reduced, and the meaning of the statute in its application to great monopolistic corporations made clear and this makes it necessary for those combinations to resolve themselves into a number of distinct, separate entities, no one of which shall be in itself a combination in restraint of trade or threaten monopoly. How this shall be done is, of course, a separate problem in each case, a problem which in the first instance those in control of the combinations and their counsel must work out.

"The law department of the government cannot undertake to act as universal counsel for the trusts. It is preparing to bring before the court all the combinations which appear to be in clear violation of the law. If the courts agree with the government's views they doubtless will follow the precedents set by the Supreme Court in the tobacco case and by the United States Circuit Court in the third circuit in the powder case and decree the combination to be illegal and to give it a reasonable time to reorganize in conformity with the law under penalty of injunction or receivership if it should fail to do so.

"The plan of reorganization must be such as the government may acquiesce in or it would be compelled to oppose its approval by the court. But the final approval is for the court to make.

"In the case of the Harvester Company that corporation voluntarily submitted to the government's plan of reorganization before suit was brought, and while not going so far as the officials of the department of justice considered it should go, the representatives of the Harvester Company evinced a willingness to conform, if possible to the views of the department and to make such changes as it should deem necessary to comply with the law.

"In some cases, such as the suits against the combination of electrical light manufacturers and the Southern Wholesale Grocers Association, the defendants, as soon as the petitions were filed, evinced a willingness to comply with the law and submitted proposed reorganizations and tendered a form of decree which they were willing to have the court enter against them. It is understood that negotiations respecting such decree have been completed and at the next term of court the defendants will appear and agree to the entry of judgments granting all relief the government could ask as the result of a litigation.

"If other combinations should take like action and submit to the Department of Justice plans of reorganization which should in good faith bring about a competitive condition and terminate monopolistic conditions and also all agreements unduly restraining interstate trade and commerce, the Department of Justice would doubtless give them careful consideration, and if found to be adequate would submit them to the courts on an appropriate petition, the decree of the court to be so framed as to make the provisions of the plan binding upon the defendants and to enjoin them from further monopolistic effort.

"But the burden of framing such plans and of demonstrating their efficiency and adequacy must be assumed by those interested in the combinations and not by the officials of the Department of Justice."

Stanley's Views of Steel Trust Reorganization.

"The Steel trust," Representative A. O. Stanley of Kentucky, chairman of the Steel Investigating Committee of the house, is quoted today as saying, "is too powerful to yield without a struggle to any demand that it dissolve and reorganize. Besides, I do not believe the Department of Justice is at all sure yet that it can prove that this corporation exists in violation of the Sherman law. It also remains to be seen whether the House committee will bring to light facts which will prove restraint of trade and monopoly. It is my opinion, however, that eventually the Steel trust will consent to a voluntary dismemberment."

Mr. Stanley does not believe that the United States Steel Corporation is seriously considering at this time any plan to follow the example of the International Harvester Company and offer to conform to the Sherman anti-trust law in accordance with demands of the Department of Justice without going into court.

HEARST A CASTLE BUYER?

Newspaper Proprietor Said to Be Purchaser of Tattershall Pile.

The American millionaire who, according to cabled reports, has purchased Tattershall Castle in Lincolnshire, England, and intends to remove it here stone by stone and brick by brick, is said to be William Randolph Hearst, the newspaper proprietor.

Mr. Hearst is not known to own any land on Long Island on which he could erect the castle, although he may have acquired a site through recent purchase.

At the office of Mr. Hearst's Manhattan paper this morning it was said that nothing whatever was known there concerning the purchase of the castle.

A pitiful story of poverty, near starvation, and risks run to save a five-cent car fare in order to use the money for a sandwich at lunch time, was told in the New Jersey avenue court to Magistrate Fitch today by Morris Kiutsky, 16 years old, of 388 Watkins street, who was arrested while on his way to work in Manhattan by Special Officer Heffernan of the B. R. T. at the New Lots station of the Canarsie elevated line.

The officer charged the boy with climbing up the pillar of the "El" road and crossing the live third rail in order to evade the payment of the regular fare of five cents. The Magistrate placed the boy on probation in order to have the case investigated.

Morris, who is a pale, sickly, underfed youth of the tenement house type, said that he is the oldest of a family of four children, that his mother is sick and under the doctor's care, and that his father is able to earn but $8 a week in a Manhattan sweatshop, while he himself keeps up the family income with his own wages, which are $3 a week.

Sixty cents of that goes for car fare to Manhattan and back, leaving nothing for midday lunches. Today Morris had ten cents left, and by stealing a ride from the B. R. T. he expected to have a nickel for a sandwich at noon. He said he had no supper last night, all the money the family had having been spent for the doctor's bill, and that he had no breakfast this morning. The temptation to get a ride to his place of work by risking his life on the third rail became too strong and he yielded.

PARK SLOPE JEWELER MISSING

Abraham Eisenberg May Have Gone to England; Checks Marked "N. G."

Several residents on the Prospect Park Slope are worried over the sudden disappearance of Abraham Eisenberg, a young jeweler, who a few weeks ago opened a shop at 238 Prospect Park West. They had left watches and other jewelry for repairs at the shop and today the place is closed and it is rumored that the owner has left for England.

A letter to that effect was received yesterday by Samuel Rosenthal, a wholesale jeweler, at 37 Maiden lane, Manhattan, who had sold a bill of goods to Eisenberg on credit amounting to about $300. The letter was from Eisenberg, and advised him to go to 238 Prospect Park West and call for his goods, as the proprietor was about to leave for England. When Rosenthal came to Brooklyn the shop was closed.

Mrs. Rose Rubin of 236 Prospect Park West last week sold Eisenberg a pair of diamond earrings for $24, which he paid for with two checks on the Fifth Avenue Branch of the Mechanics Bank for $12 each. He received her consent to date the checks last Tuesday. She went to the bank on that day, but was told the checks were no good, for lack of funds. Eisenberg had offered to sell her a $250 pair of earrings for $100 cash, but she said she didn't want them.

Among those who have watches at the shop for repairs are F. W. Cockrane, manager of a store at 226 Prospect Park West, who a few days ago left a gold watch worth $55 with Eisenberg, and Edward White, a clerk in the same store, who entrusted him with a silver watch. The windows are barred and the doors locked. A few of the less valuable articles for sale in the store are visible, but no one has had an opportunity to investigate what is left in the safe. A crowd of excited owners of jewelry gathered in front of the store last evening, but no damage was done.

At the Fifth avenue branch of the Mechanics Bank it was stated today that Eisenberg had had an account there, but that he withdrew all his money early in the week, and that since then several checks have come in which the bank has not been able to honor.

It is but six weeks ago since Eisenberg opened his shop on Prospect Park West. Where he came from, or where he lived no one in the neighborhood seems to know, though Samuel Rosenthal, the Manhattan jeweler, believes he used to be employed as an assistant by William Finkel, at Bayonne, N. J.

ANNEXATION TALK AND TRUST FEAR HURT RECIPROCITY

Champ Clark's Speech Carried Much Weight in Canadian Election.

FRICTION MAY FOLLOW

GREAT INFLUENCE EXERTED.

Liberal Minister Says Its Extent and Nature, if Disclosed, Would Startle the People of the Dominion.

RESULTS OF THE CANADIAN ELECTION.

Majority of Conservatives, opponents of reciprocity, 49.
Result of election likely to result in higher tariff.
Champ Clark's annexation speech believed to have had much weight in the result.
R. L. Borden, who will be the new Premier, says the verdict was in no wise dictated by a spirit of unfriendliness to the United States.
Anti-American sentiment figured largely in the result, is the opinion of some Canadian papers.

FACTS ABOUT RECIPROCITY.

First discussed between American and Canadian representatives at Ottawa in March, 1910, as outgrowth of adjustment of maximum and minimum provisions of Payne-Aldrich tariff.
Agreement finally drafted in January, 1911. Sent to Congress by Taft January 26.
Passed House, 61st Congress, February 14, by a vote of 221 to 93.
Did not reach a vote in Senate.
Extra session of 62d Congress called by Taft for April 4 to pass reciprocity.
Bill introduced in House on April 12 by Democratic leader and passed on April 21 by a vote of 267 to 89.
Introduced in Senate on April 24 and reported on June 13, with the Root amendment. Root amendment defeated on June 26.
Bill passed in Senate on July 22 by a vote of 53 to 27.
Length of debate in House—Seven days.
Total length of extra session—April 4 to August 22.

Eagle Bureau,
608 Fourteenth street.

Washington, September 22—Fear of the great American trusts is regarded in Washington as one of the principal reasons why Canada turned down the Reciprocity agreement so overwhelmingly. The annexation cry also is believed here to have had much to do with it, and Champ Clark may have to reckon with the home effect of that speech he made, which was so widely circulated in Canada.

Few Government officials who had anything to do with the Reciprocity agreement are in town, but those who are, realize from the Canada returns that the Dominion was afraid of the gigantic industries of the United States. The voters evidently were made to believe that the present agreement was only a beginning; that while it might do no damage itself, it would lead to further reciprocity which might strike a hard blow at their manufactures.

This was a noticeably prevalent opinion in Ontario, even to the casual visitor. The Canadian manufacturer was saying that he would not be able to compete with the United States industrial combinations, once the bars were let down. Perhaps he did not stop to think that such great trusts as the Standard Oil and American Tobacco already have been intrenched in Canada for years. Operating through Canadian companies.

Champ Clark's Annexation Speech Carried Much Weight.

As to annexation the Canadian voter apparently gave far more weight to the views of Speaker Clark than did anybody in the United States. To him Champ Clark was one of the great leaders of the United States Government, and what he had said was of far-reaching significance. Lack of knowledge of American politics and of Clark's real power did not enable him to apply the discount which was generally applied here. The Canadian did not know that Speaker Clark is not the leader of the House of Representatives and has, perhaps, less influence in determining its policies than any one of several Democrats who could be named. Clark's ill-timed speech is not likely to help his presidential aspirations, for his party supported reciprocity and but for Democratic votes it could never have passed Congress.

It is now realized here, also, that Canada was shy and suspicious of the trade agreement initiated and urged by the United States. Voters were made to believe that this country had something up its sleeve and would not be seeking tariff concessions unless it expected to get all the best of it. They were apparently convinced that somewhere in the reciprocity agreement was a hidden joker, not being able to conceive that a great power like the United States would deliberately seek something at the hands of a smaller power unless it had an ulterior purpose.

The power of the Canadian railroads is also seen in the result of the vote. Their opposition to the pact was made very evident within the past few weeks, and their political influence is very great. The railroads apparently foresaw less business for the Canadian manufacturers and therefore less business for them. They are also deeply interested in the increase of Canada's population, and offer all sorts of inducements to settlers. They have large quantities of land to sell, and apparently under the present system they are doing well and do not propose to take any chances.

Speculation Over Result Upon Taft's Political Future.

The result upon the political fortunes of President Taft cannot be safely estimated today. Those Republicans, particularly the Insurgents, who fought and

WICKERSHAM DENIES STEEL TRUST STORY

Did Not Say Big Corporation Is Plainly a Violation of Law.

CAN'T BE FORCED FROM OFFICE

Attorney General Quoted as Saying He Intended to Send Rich Violators of Law to Jail.

"Statements attributed to me that United States Steel combination is plainly a violation of law are entirely unwarranted.

(Signed) "G. W. WICKERSHAM."

Mr. Wickersham is at Bretton Woods, N. H. According to a story printed in a Manhattan paper this morning he is reported to have promised a relentless prosecution of such corporations as continue to violate the anti-trust act and to have expressed his intention of sending the responsible trust heads to prison. He said, according to this story, that he is not going to resign, and that he could not be forced out of office by the powerful corporations.

"I have not resigned," he is reported to have said, "and do not intend to do so." He said that his difference of opinion with Secretary MacVeagh of the Treasury Department on the National City Bank case was a difference of opinion as to a matter of law, merely, and that neither would leave the Cabinet because of it.

Speaking of the fact that the Sherman law is a criminal statute, he is quoted as saying:

"If I continue to serve as attorney general till the end of Mr. Taft's term, I intend to send some of them (the rich violators of the law) to jail. The heads of the Turpentine Trust are already sentenced, and nothing can save them from serving their terms in jail except a Supreme Court decision in their favor. The men under indictment in the Beef Trust cases in Chicago will also go to prison if I have my say. So will all others who knowingly, willfully and deliberately go on violating the law now that its meaning has been made so clear."

Speaking of the possibility of the Beef Trust men following the wire Pool defendants and substituting a plea of "Non vult" or "nole contendre" for one of "Not guilty," he is reqorted to have said that the Government would oppose any such plea, and that he thought no judge would accept it under the circumstances.

"That plea," says the story, "was accepted by Judge Archbald in the Wire Pool cases in New York City, and I have no criticism to make of his action in imposing the small fine he did on the members of the pool. I know that many of them were entirely innocent of any criminal intent. But I can't understand Judge Archbald's not sending Jackson—that quack doctor of the law—to jail."

The Jackson referred to by Mr. Wickersham is Edwin Eliphalet Jackson, jr., of 424 Clinton avenue, Brooklyn, a noted legal adviser of the great corporations, who was fined $45,000 by Judge Archbald in connection with the Wire Pool cases.

FIRED AT TWO BURGLARS

East Islip P. M.'s Aim Was Bad and Crooks Got Away Moneyless.

East Islip, L. I., September 23—Two husky burglars, weighing at least 185 pounch each, well dressed and wearing fedora hats, are being sought today by the Suffolk County authorities, more especially those in this section, for trying to rob Postmaster Albert Hanford at 3 o'clock this morning. The men are believed to be the ones who operated at Central Islip a few nights ago.

Since the postoffice burglaries have become so numerous in this section, Mr. Hanford decided it would be safer to take his postal money to his sleeping room nights. The burglars thought this plan might be followed, so this morning they appeared in the postmaster's sleeping room.

He was awakened by a series of flashes of light in his face. Grabbing his revolver from beneath his pillow, he jumped out of bed and ran for the burglars, who by this time discovered they had awakened him, and were just getting through his door into the hall as he awoke. He chased them through the house, never getting near enough to shoot accurately. The men escaped through a kitchen window. It was seen that they had made preparations for a hurried exist, for all of the chairs and tables had been carefully "cleared from the road."

The postmaster did have a large sum of money in the room with him, and it is fortunate for him that he slept with one eye open.

While chasing them he was able to get a description of their clothes and size, but not of their faces.

The men had previously been to the stable of Henry Peterson, a contractor; had broken down his stable door and had taken his best horse, which they had harnessed to a wagon bearing his name. They left Islip in this rig, which was later found by Nightwatchman John Joyce on the State Hospital grounds at Central Islip.

It is believed the men are well acquainted with Long Island and that they got across to Smithtown and took the train from there.

EARTHQUAKE IN ALASKA.

Valdez, Alaska, September 23 (via wireless)—The most violent earthquake yet experienced in Valdez, occurred at 7:02 Thursday night. The oscillations were northwest and south east and their duration covered 52 seconds.

Valdez is built of wood with no building more than two stories high, and no damage was done. The cable at Sitka was severed.

JUDGE PARKER'S CHAUFFEUR.

Joseph F. Hill, who described himself as a chauffeur in the employ of former Chief Justice Alton B. Parker of the Court of Appeals, was held in $1,000 bail in the New Jersey avenue police court today, for a further hearing on a charge of assault, and fined $10 to boot for having a false number on his automobile. Hill, who lives at 37 Johnson avenue, was in an automobile which ran into Rose Cohen, a young woman of 21, of 1990 Chester street, and seriously injured her while the streets of Brownsville were filled with people celebrating the Jewish New Year.

Miss Cohen was taken to St. Mary's Hospital. Her condition is said to be very serious.

FOWLER OVER MOUNTAINS

Colfax, Cal., September 23—Aviator Fowler left this place at 6:57 a.m.; bound across the mountains to Winnemucca, Nev., resuming his ocean-to-ocean flight.

Fowler returned to Colfax after making a flight around Cape Horn, and a number of miles up the mountains as a preliminary trip to test the air currents. He rose to a height of 4,000 feet during the flight, but the weather was not clear enough to permit the attempt to cross the range. He at once prepared for another start.

After a second start he arrived over Blue Canyon at 8 o'clock. The altitude was about 4,000 feet and he began circling above Blue Canyon, going higher. Blue Canyon is twenty-two miles from Colfax.

Elmira, N. Y., September 23—Aviator Rodgers, the coast-to-coast aviator, left the ground at 10:30 a.m. Rough ground prevented a good start and he came down to escape telegraph wires. In landing some guy wires were pulled out and a hole torn in the elevator. Repairs will require an hour.

KINDNESS WINS CONFESSION.

"Third Degree" Could Not Get Burglar to Talk of Himself.

(Special to The Eagle.)

South Orange, N. J., September 23—The kindness of Marshal Maguire to a burglar has so touched the latter that he made a voluntary confession. The man, who was caught trying to escape from a house in the village, was locked up under the name of Thomas Dorsey. He owned up that he is really Thomas Egan, and a professional with a long prison record.

County detectives tried to get a confession with the "third degree." They failed. The marshal treated Egan humanely and with consideration when he was turned over to him, and Egan sent for him and told him:

"You treated me right, and I want to see that you get the full credit for my confession."

Egan, who is 52 years old, has spent twenty-one years in the penitentiary for various "jobs."

CASTELLANE A BROOKLYN BOY

Tony Castellane, better known as "Dare Devil" Castellane, who fell from the height of 400 feet while making an aeroplane flight at Mansfield, Pa., yesterday, and was crushed to death, is a South Brooklyn boy. He joined the Long Island school of airmen last summer, and had been flying in a Curtiss biplane, but before that was well-known as a trick bicyclist, loop-the-loop rider, and performer of other feats which required nerve. At one time he lived at Fourteenth street and Sixth avenue, and attended Public School No. 10. He started his career riding a wheel, and became a crack amateur. Later he took up trick riding, and was known as one of the best in the country. For a whole summer he thrilled the public who went to Paul Boynton's shoot-the-chutes by gliding down that steep incline on a monocycle. He also took up the art of loping-the-loop, and gave exhibitions all over the country.

Castellane was flying at the height of 400 feet yesterday when the plane turned turtle and crashed to the ground. His neck was found to be broken.

Castellane's wife witnessed his death. The body will be shipped to his late home here tomorrow.

EARL TRIES TO SETTLE STRIKE

Men on Irish Railroads Are Not Obeying General Order.

Dublin, September 23—Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, the Earl of Aberdeen, has taken hold in the attempt to settle the railway strike, and the lack of enthusiasm on the part of the men to obey the general strike order promises to make his task easier.

Though some of the porters on the Great Northern struck to-day the passenger service was little affected. Special trains carrying 20,000 delegates from Ulster to the anti-home rule demonstration at Belfast were operated without trouble. In other directions the service continued greatly restricted.

BIG SUGAR DEAL.

New Orleans, September 23—Approximately a million and a half bags of sugar, more than half the average Louisiana crop, was sold yesterday to the American Sugar Refining Company. It is estimated the deal involved about $20,000,000 and is the biggest in the history of the Louisiana sugar industry.

BROTHERS FIGHT TO DEATH.

Arkansas City, Ark., September 23—In a lonely spot near Lead Hill two brothers fought to death yesterday. Reuben Cantrell, 35, was slain, and Thomas Cantrell, 55, is dying. The fight was the outgrowth of a family feud.

COL. DADY NOT DEAD, NOR EVEN SLEEPING

Veteran Leader Replies in Kind to Attack of His Political Critics.

DENIES A. M. WHITE'S CHARGES

Michael J. Dady, Republican leader of the First Assembly District, is not politically dead yet, although at a meeting in Historical Hall on Thursday night the Rev. J. Howard Melish said: "We are met tonight to bury Colonel Dady." Dady, who was present at the meeting was asked today if he had aanything to say in reply to the attacks made upon him by Mr. Melish, Alexander M. White and the other supporters of Morris U. Ely in the contest for the Republican leadership of the district. Dady not only replied to the attacks in characteristic style, but he handed out a few charges against his opponents, in return, together with a couple of letters intended to show the sincerity of purpose animating Mr. Ely and his friends.

"Yes," replied Colonel Dady, "I have something to say in answer to Mr. White only. I do not consider that what the other speakers said deserves any consideration.

"The Rev. J. Howard Melish seemed more anxious to attack me because of my Irish ancestry than because of my politics, and I am informed since the meeting that Mr. White and Mr. Ely would rather have paid $250 than to have had Mr. Melish make his speech.

"John Hill Morgan, whom the organization which I represent, nominated and elected four times as member of Assembly from this destrict, did not seem to think that I had changed any sinc then, but rather that I was to blame for the falling off in the Republican vote last fall. Of course such a charge is too petty to give any attention to, as everyone knows that this district fell off only in the same proporiton as did practically all other districts in the State.

Denies All of Alexander M. White's Charges.

"I deny all of Mr. White's charges as follows:

"First, that Mr. Ralston went to a corporation and tried to stop the activity of any man against him under threat of loss of his job. He did ask a friend to speak to a gentleman in the Hamilton Trust Company in his favor. The same is being done with our friends by Darwin R. James and others in this campaign.

"Second, that we issued a fraudulent circular two years ago. I can only say that if in the haste of preparing a list of over one hundred names an error crept in that, it was only what happened in a circular which was sent out by Mr. White purporting to be signed by gentlemen of the Hamilton Club and afterward denied by them.

"Third, that Mike Hines of the Bowery did not attempt to vote any floaters in the Second Election District.

"Fourth, as to Mr. Ralston's downwright refusal to recognize the Second Election District Organization. The General Committee holds Mr. Ralston responsible for the men he nominates as election inspectors and Mr. Ralston nominated men whom he knew to be all right and a large number of whom had acted heretofore and were entitled to be continued.

Fifth, as to the turning down of Mr. Goodspeed. Mr. Goodspeed turned himself down by one of the most outrageous circulars issued under the most outrageous circumstances, and neither I nor the President of the United States could have gotten the men whom that circular affected to vote for Mr. Goodspeed in convention.

Some Things Mr. White Did Not Mention.

"Now, in addition: I did not hear White say anything about trying to influence a district captain to handle the financial end of his campaign in that part of the Assembly District known as the Third Ward, if he would leave Mr. Dady.

"I did not hear White say anything about a district captain of his in another election district in the Third Ward who had gone to a prominent lawyer and told him he would get several of the judges on the bench to give him references if he would support Mr. Ely.

"I did not hear White say anything about the capture from the Dady faction of poor James Lawler nor did he say anything about the capture of one George J. Hardy or an old-time friend of his who could tell the history of one of his campaigns, John Carney.

"I did not hear White say that when the campaign was on in 1909 and when the Campaign Committee was being made up and Mr. Ely was authorized in behalf of the First Assembly District to name a number of gentlemen to serve on the Compaign and Finance committees from the Union Republican Club, Mr. Ely wrote a letter, of which I will give you a copy, which might be interesting reading to the Republicans of the First Assembly District.

"I did not hear White say that Mr. Goodspeed, whom he said was turned down, had been using the stationery of the State of New York now that he is no longer a member of Assembly, for sending personal circulars and letters around to the voters to vote the Ely ticket and trying to fool them by making some of the voters believe he will still a member of the Legislature.

"All of the above things have been done by Mr. White and his friends, and many other things beside, of which I hold proof."

Colonel Dady Makes Public Some Correspondence.

Mr. Dady then furnished a copy of a letter from Morris Ely to Alexander White, to show that Ely was not acting in good faith when he was asked to cooperate with the Dady-Ralston organization in 1909 by sharing the membership on the district compaign committee with the regulars. The letter, which was sent to Mr. Koehl by mistake, is as follows:

ELY, BILLINGS & CHESTER,
Attorneys and Counselors-at-Law,
115 Broadway,
New York, October 5, 1909.

Mr. A. M. White, 5 Nassau Street, New York City.

Dear Alec—I am sorry that I did not have a chance to talk with you before going to Baltimore, but have referred William R. A. Koehl, whom you may remember as candidate for Congress last year, to you for decision as to the appointments to the campaign committee formed by the Dady organization to the Assembly Convention Saturday night. We have evidently stirred them up so that they mean to show new activity. The idea is to appoint as many as we wish from the Union Republican Club on the campaign committee. My own idea in the matter is that it would be better not to have our best men on that committee, if it should seem best to put anybody on it, in case we wish to appeal for funds to conduct the campaign along our own lines. If we are not going to do this I presume we had better put on the best men we have. I think you might discuss the matter with Mr. Koehl and think you might put the matter off, as I would like to have a chance to talk it over with you before going into it.

I will be back either late Wednesday or at any rate the first thing Thursday morning. Hoping you are in good shape again, I am, very truly yours, (Signed) M. ELY.

Mr. Dady also gave out copies of a letter to former Assemblyman Goodspeed, from William W. Wingate, to show that Goodspeed is using stationery furnished by the state, to influence voters in the primary contest. The letter, in part is as follows:

Dear Sir—I hold in my hand a letter signed by you, dated September 18, 1911, and directed to Mr. L. R. La Trobe of 179 Columbia Heights, in which you say: "I am very much interested in the success of Morris U. Ely as candidate for executive member," followed by some praise of Mr. Ely and then a request that Mr. La Trobe attend a caucus in your district and the meeting of the Union Republican Club on Thursday evening. This is one of a great many similar letters which you have sent out.

No fair-minded person can have the slightest objection to your letter to Mr. La Trobe, as it undoubtedly expresses your wish concerning the result of the present primary contest in this district. The objectionable part of this communication is that it is forwarded in an envelope which bears these words in the corner:

Assembly Chamber,
State of New York,
Albany, N. Y.

Your term as member of Assembly from this district expired on December 31, 1910.

This sort of practice is in line with a letter which you sent out last year on the very eve of the primary election and after being in consultation with leaders of the regular Republican organization up to the last moment, leading the mto believe that you were absolutely loyal to their cause, and even while that letter was being prepared, which charged the regular organization with acts which you have since admitted to be absolutely untrue, and have since stated that your reasons for sending that letter were because you thought the regular organization intended to turn you down for renomination as Member of Assembly from this district.

Your purpose in forwarding this present communication in the envelope above mentioned is perfectly plain and can be interpreted in only one way, namely, that you desire to deceive the voters into the belief t hat these communications are received from the present member of Assembly with all the powerful influence which goes with that g reat and high office.

How you can expect to retain the respect of this community and your own self-respect by such tactics is beyond my comprehension. Personally I feel sorry for you because in my opinion these methods are not of your own suggestions, but emanate from the minds of men in the Union Republican Club who during the last several contests have used very similar methods in the circulars and literature mailed to the voters of this district.

If you have fallen in with bad states I advise you to cut loose from them at once and return to your old friends who never lead you into such disgraceful political blunders while you were with them.

WM. W. WINGATE.

MAGISTRATE IS MERCIFUL

Judge McGuire Lectures Men, Old and Young, on Intemperance, and Lets Them Go.

Magistrate John C. McGuire to-day delivered several lectures in the Adams street court on the evil of indulgence in strong liquors. One of the men charged with intoxication admitted to sixty-nine years of life.

"And you have a family of children, I imagine?" said Mr. McGuire.

The accused proudly boasted that he had.

"A man of your age should stop it," said the Magistrate. "The next time you get drunk you may fall dead on the street. And how would you like that? How would your family like to have you found dead on the street?"

All that was left for the prisoner to say was that he would not like it and the magistrate suspended sentence.

The next one said he was Charles Martens, who admitted that a policeman found him in the gutter. Martens said that he was a gardener and did not get tipsy very often. He was over fifty.

"Martens," said Mr. McGuire, gloomily, "You are going to die in the gutter if you keep on in this way."

"I suppose I will," agreed Mr. Martens, despondently.

"You will, eh? You will!" ejaculated the magistrate. "Why don't you try not to? If you promise I will give you a chance and suspend sentence."

On his agreement to stop drinking, the magistrate let him go.

The next prisoner sadly said that he was a widower and that his children had been burned up, some years ago. So he had taken to drinking, he admitted.

"The man who says he was driven to drink simply accepts the situation and stays in it," said Magistrate McGuire, severely. "I have a good mind to send you to the workhouse."

"For God's sake, don't send me up, pleaded the man.

"It's for his sake that I do," declared the magistrate. "Should I send him away?" he said to the policeman who had arrested him.

"I think you might give him another chance," said the officer.

"I will," was the decision, and so the mournful man who had been driven to drink by adversity was allowed to go.

A bright young man-o-war's-man of the Dakota, whose home is in Georgia, had wandered into the Adams street station to report a robbery which had occurred in another precinct, and he was tipsy, and when the lieutenant told him to go to the other precinct to make his report, he sauced the officer, who had him locked up. He was lectured and let go.

WOMAN MAYOR'S FIGHT.

Topeka, Kan., September 23—Charging that the Hunnewell, Kan., councilmen refused to confirm Mayor Ella Wilson's appointments although she presented the names of nearly every reputable citizen of the town, a petition asking the ouster of the four councilmen was filed in the Kansas Supreme Court today by Attorney General Dawson.

By reason of these failures, the petition stated, two women friends of Mayor Wilson now are serving the city as City Clerk and City Marshal. The petition concluded with the statement that by reason of the failure of the councilmen to act "the city is made helpless and is prevented from providing protection for the life and property of its citizens."

BROOKLYN MAN CONVICTED.

Sentenced in Hartford With Two Others for White Slave Trafficking.

Hartford, Conn., September 23—State prison sentences have been given by Judge Curais in the Superior Court to three men tried this week for "white slave trafficking." The men were Frank Devine, said to be a saloonkeeper in Brooklyn, N. Y.; Tony Calandrilla of New York, and Nicholas Desando of this city, the last named having paid $50 for Mary Brennan, who was brought here by the others.

The federal government had agents ready to take the men had they escapped conviction on indictments for violating the law against interstate trafficking. One or more men said to have been in the band escaped the police. The girl appealed to a police officer on the street for protection and this led t o arrests.

DROWNED; WORE WHITE GLOVES

The body of a drowned man about 25 years old was found in the East River off Randall's Island this morning. A peculiarity of the finding was that there were white cotton gloves on the hands while there was but one shoe, a russet, on the right foot. The man was about 150 pounds weight, with smooth face and sandy hair. The clothing consisted of blue overalls, white underwear, black socks and a brown belt.

EVEN THE PLANTS ARE STOLEN IN FLATBUSH

A VARIETY OF ROBBERIES.

Servant Girl, Who Held Nine Jobs in Two Months, Charged With Stealing a Lot of Fine Clothes.

It was a sort of field day for all sorts and conditions of swindlers and crooks in the Flatbush court this morning, and incidentally it was disclosed that the burglars union, having stripped the Flatbush section of everything worth taking from the interiors of the cottages, the lesser lights of the soft shoe fraternity have descended to the mean trick of robbing front porches of potted rubber plants and palms, and have even gone so far as to despoil the flower beds in the yards of their foliage.

Two alleged offenders, who were charged with having gathered up belongings of Flatbush citizens from the inside of the houses, were also arraigned. One of them was a servant girl who, it is said, took a fancy to some furs and other elegant fall gowns of the latest design, and the other was a man masquerading as a Salvation Army worker, who is said to have tried to add to his private library by annexing a collection of magazines of the latest vintage.

William Garbe was the name given by the man who is alleged to have made off with the plants. He was observed by Patrolman George Davis of the Flatbush station about 1 o'clock this morning, prowling about 83 Clarkson street. Davis says the man abstracted a large palm from the piazza of 83, and then went next door to 85 and selected a choice assortment of leaves of the luxuriant coleus that ornamented the lawn.

Davis interfered at this point and took the man and his horticultural collection to the lockup. This morning he told Magistrate Geismar that too much Flatbush whisky, imbibed in celebration of the Jewish New Year, had affected him He was held in $100 bail for Special Sessions. George H. McKay and Henry Mangels, the owners of the plants, identified their property and left the court with the greenery under their arms.

This Girl Held No Less Than Nine Jobs in Two Months.

An alleged fondness for fine clothes proved the undoing of Matilda Westergard, a servant girl, who the police say, has had nine jobs in the past two months. She did a few days work for Mrs. Leah Hunt of 42 De Koven Court, wife of one of the directors of the American Vitligraph Company, and just after her departure, Mrs. Hunt missed a Russian pony coat, a fine fur muff, a blue gown, a black dress and a few other triffes, totaling in value about $600.

Detectives Coutant and Keisler of the Parkville station located Matilda in a furnished room on Atlantic avenue and recovered Mrs. Hunt's property, which was identified by her and her daughter Henrietta in court today. Matilda was charged with grand larceny and will have a chance to explain on Monday.

Frank Ford was the name given by the volunteer member of the Salvation Army. He said he lived at 37 Ashland place, but was disowned by a genuine officer of the Army who looked him over today. Amelia Ross of 731 Rogers avenue said that the man came to her house and asked if he could install one of the little tin boxes, into which coins may be dropped for the benefit of the Army. While the woman of the house was considering the matter, she says the man tried to get away with a pile of magazines valued at $4. Ford will have a hearing on September 27 and will have to languish in jail, unless he puts up $2,500 bail on a burglary charge.

TAFT IN ST. LOUIS

Takes Auto Ride, Will See Football and Baseball Games and Make Several Addresses.

St. Louis, September 23—President Taft arrived here at 7:58 o'clock this morning He was taken at once to the Mercantile Club for breakfast. While here he is to be the guest of the Million Population Club.

President Taft, after breakfast, was taken for a forty-mile automobile ride in St. Louis County. On the ride he witnessed, for a few minutes, a football game, and then went to a hotel for a brief rest.

He addressed the Masonic Club for five minutes and then went to the City Club for luncheon. He was scheduled to lay a cornerstone in the new Y. W. C. A. Building at 2:30, and then to witness a ball game between Philadelphia and St. Louis National League teams.

He will be a guest of honor at a private dinner at 6 o'clock, and at 8 o'clock tonight he is scheduled to speak at the Coliseum. He will leave the city shortly before midnight.

The President's reception here was non-partisan. At the Mercantile Club three former governors of Missouri, Stephens, Francis and Folk, Democrats, were on the reception committee.

At the Union station five companies of Boy Scouts were given a place of honor despite the protest of the union labor men, who had protested against the Scouts participating. A union band will furnish music at the Coliseum tonight.

The Central Trades and Labor Union recently passed a resolution prohibiting any union musicians from playing in any of the entertainments given to President Taft if the Boy Scouts took part in the entertaining in any way.

The objection of the union labor men was based on the theory that the Boy Scouts organization is a budding militia movement that later will be used to suppress strikes. A compromise, however, was reached which permitted participation of the Boy Scouts and the union labor men, but the union's resolution was not reconsidered.

The publication is gotten out aboard the cruiser Dixie, and it abounds in jokes and comical cuts, one in the first issue representing a sailor astride of a dirigible torpedo which is fitted with aeroplane wings and making a great flight over the ocean.

HYPNOTISM IN COURTROOM

Witness Recants Her Testimony After Being Removed From Presence of Defendant.

Chicago, September 23—A court hearing was adjourned yesterday by Judge Dolan on the allegation of Prosecutor Fetzer that Mrs. Cora V. Monro, defendant in a swindling case, was exerting a hypnotic influence over a witness for the state. The witness, Mildred Hildey, 17 years old, was taken to the judge's chamber, where she related her original story of how Mrs. Monro had defamed the witness' mother, and the court then held Mrs. Monro to a grand jury.

The girl when placed on the stand was seated so that she sat directly opposite Mrs. Monro. All the time she was testifying her eyes remained fixed on those of the defendant. In that position she told a story the exact reverse of the account of the swindle she had related to the prosecuting attorney a short time before.

"There is something wrong with this witness," he told the court. "There seems to be some influence here that is thwarting justice. It is impossible for the state to get the truth out of her."

In an instant the courtroom was in an uproar. The girl wept hysterically.

Judge Dolan brought the scene to an end by ordering Miss Hildey to come to his chambers. There she recovered her composure, and in the presence of the court and of the attorneys for both sides she recanted the testimony she had just given and gave the same account of the swindle that she had told Mr. Fetzer.

Mrs. Monro is charged with having obtained $1,250 from Mrs. Hildey for a share in a business to turn gray hair black. The prosecution asserts that the business was fraudulent, and for months nothing was sold.

DOG SPOT FINDS A PURSE.

Joseph P. Ryan, son of the custodian at City Hall, was sitting in the corridor of the building just after midnight this morning, talking with the night watchman, John Larkin. The dog Spot, Mayor Gaynor's favorite, was playing around when the two men noticed it had something in its teeth. They wrested it from Spot and found it to be a woman's pocketbook with the monogram, "G. M." Inside they found $2.9 in bills, three rings and a pearl necklace. There were also some cards. One of them bore the name, "Miss Genevieve McDonald" and a West Philadelphia address. Another was that of Mrs. Nunez Loring of Mount Vernon.

Mrs. Loring's card bore her telephone number and young "Joe" Ryan telephoned to her and asked her whether she knew Miss McDonald. She unhesitatingly said she did and that the young woman was staying with her. She was asked whether Miss McDonald had lost her purse and over the telephone Mrs. Loring said she had, and accurately described the contents. She said that Miss McDonald had been visiting the big buildings down town yesterday and had visited City Hall. After she got back to Mount Vernon she discovered the loss of her purse.

Ryan said he would go to Mount Vernon immediately, and started off. He said he had no doubt that he had found the rightful owner of the purse.

BROOKLYN MAN BURNED.

Covered With Blazing Paint and Benzine, Following an Explosion.

(Special to The Eagle.)

Sayville, L. I., September 23—Ralph Kraft, jr., of 1079 Bergen street, Brooklyn, was badly burned at his father's summer home on the bay front at Sayville last night. Kraft had lighted a match on entering a long-closed barn in which was stored paint and benzine when an explosion threw the blazing liquid over Kraft's clothing. He ran from the barn and neighbors from the Keator's cottage covered him with a horse blanket and then saved the barn from entire destruction.

Kraft was taken by Dr. G. H. Ross to Seney Hospital, Brooklyn. Kraft is an insurance agent of New York and Brooklyn. His father, Ralph Kraft, is a Bowery broker.

FRENCH REPLY READY.

Belief Congo Cession Is Only Question Remaining to Be Settled.

Paris, September 23.—The cabinet met with President Fallieres at his residence in Rambouillet to-day when a French reply to Germany's latest suggestions for an agreement concerning Morocco was approved unanimously.

The reply was submitted by Premier Caillaux and Foreign Minister de Selves. Since Germany's proposals were drawn after two long conversations between the German minister of foreign affairs, it probably will be found that France has accepted the arrangement proposed regarding Morocco itself, the question remaining for settlement being the details of the cession to Germany in French Congo.

Cologne, Germany, September 23—The Cologne Gazette today prints a Berlin dispatch which says:

"The first division of the Moroccan negotiations will reach an end today. Even if the French Cabinet council wishes changes in a few points these can be made very easily. Reaching an agreement in the matter of indemnity is no easy task, owing to the complication of the matters involved. French private interests play a role making a settlement of the details more difficult. The negotiators, however, believe that they conduct this second division of their work also to a satisfactory conclusion."

KILLED IN CRASH OF CARS.

Two men were killed and another will probably die through an unusual accident in the Melrose yards of the New York Central Railroad, early this morning. Four railroad cars rolled down an incline, colliding with another under which three men were working. This car was pushed ahead and the men crushed. The dead men are: Albin Loredo, 43 years old, a car repairer, of Valhalla, N. Y., and Joseph Lodes, 35, car repairer, of 1415 Edwards avenue, the Bronx. The third man, John Bailey, 30, a brakeman, of 253 East Fiftieth street, is in Lebanon Hospital, with mangled left arm and internal injuries, and it is said he will probably die.

SKEPTICAL UNCLE SAM SEEKS TO KNOW MORE ABOUT 'MIRACLE' GRAIN

Postoffice Inspector Dickson Will Have the Wheat Sold in Tabernacle Tested, He Says.

PASTOR RUSSELL IS LOYAL,

But He Doubts the Faith of Those Who Are Not Members of His Faithful Band.

Uncle Sam has decided to make an official test of the "Miracle" wheat sold at $60 a bushel at Pastor Russell's Tabernacle in order that the faithful who have invested their money, and a waiting world as well, may learn more fully of the astonishing merits of the precious grain.

W. W. Dickson, chief of the postal inspectors in Manhattan, has received a communication regarding the notice which appeared in Pastor Russell's semi-monthly, The Watch Tower, setting forth the unusual qualities of "miracle wheat." He promises to set going the wheels of inquiry. He says the Watch Tower notice may or may not represent grain that yields from ten to fifteen times the amount sown, and may be worth $1 a pound, as advertised. But he wants to find out. Accordingly he has mapped out a plan. It is likely that Inspector John N. Parsons, who generally conducts investigations into Brooklyn affairs, will have the task of testing the yielding qualities of "miracle wheat."

Pastor Russell said today that he had full confidence in the qualities of the grain, as noted in the Watch Tower, but he admitted that his confidence was based only upon letters written to him by "brothers" of the "millennial dawn" sect, and that he had never supervised the sowing and harvesting of "miracle wheat."

Inspector Dickson will ask that he be furnished with a sample of "miracle" wheat. It will be analyzed by Government chemists in Manhattan. Along with the sample, Inspector Dickson's men will find out who bought "miracle" wheat from Brother Dockey, the watchdog of the cereal treasury, so that it may be learned what interstate shipments were made of "miracle" grain.

Brother Dockey Says Supply of Wheat Is Limited.

Pastor Russell could not state today just how much "miracle wheat" there was on hand at the Tabernacle. He telephoned Brother Dockey to come right over to Pastor Russell 'shome at 124 Columbia Heights. Brother Dockey did so.

Brother Dickey announced that the supply was limited. It is still selling at $6 0a bushel, only there isn't enough for any one person to buy as much as two bushels. So Brother Dockey is selling preferably by the pound, still at $1 a pound. He had 20 0pounds left a few days ago, but someone—he thought it was another "brother"—telegraphed from California that he must have 100 pounds. So Brother Dockey is reserving 100 pounds until the Californian sends on $100. This leaves 100 pounds still in sale at the Tabernacle. Brother Dockey was loath to name the amount until Pastor Russell gave him permission.

An Eagle reporter yesterday bought one pound for $1. Brother Dockey wouldn't sell it for less, though the reporter shamelessly tried to "beat him down." Today Pastor Russell, in Brother Dockey's presence, made an offer to the reporter.

Pastor Russell Would Buy Back Reporter's Wheat.

"If you will bring that pound of wheat back I will pay you what you gave for it," said Pastor Russell.

The reporter indicated that his pound of "miracle wheat" was not for sale.

"It's pretty late to plant it now, unless you send it down South," reminded Brother Dockey.

Brother Dockey stated that less than 5 per cent. of all the "miracle wheat" sold at the Tabernacle went to people other than Pastor Russell's followers.

"Other people than my own," explained Pastor Russell, "wouldn't believe that this wheat contains extraordinary qualities. It is too much of a miracle for them to comprehend."

"It wouldn't do to try to fool our own people, either," Brther Dockey interpolated. "If we did that they would never have confidence in us again."

Pastor Russell says that as long as Brother Bohnet, Brother Flemming and other "brothers" continue to display generosity enough to hand over the proceeds from the sale of "miracle wheat" to the society, the grain will be sold at the Tabernacle. Regarding the advertisement in the Watch Tower, Pastor Russell says that, as Brother Dockey said yesterday, no guarantee is offered that "miracle wheat" possesses powers of extraordinary yield. Pastor Russell does say, however, that he was responsible for the notice being inserted in the Watch Tower and that he believes in "miracle wheat" and intended to have his readers, all over the world, fully understand that he thought highly of it.

DIX WIRES QUINN.

Queens Sheriff Warned to Preserve Order at Tuesday's Primaries.

(Special to The Eagle.)

Albany, September 23—Governor Dix today sent the following telegram to the Sheriff of Queens County:

"You are directed to use all means within your authority to preserve peace and order and to secure the enforcement of the laws in connection with the primary election which is to be held within your county on the 26th inst. You will be held strictly accountable for the performance of your duty.

"JOHN A. DIX."

So far as can be learned there is no hint of trouble at the polls on Tuesday, and the Governor's reason for sending the message is not known. A similar order was sent out in 1909 and in 1910.

PRIMARY DAY AT HAND; 5 CONTESTS TO SETTLE

Comparative Quiet Will Prevail Throughout the County on Tuesday.

FOUR DISPUTES DEMOCRATIC.

Dady-Ely Fight in First District the Only One Among Republicans.

What the Leaders Expect.

For the first time in years primary day in Brooklyn will be generally quiet.

Primaries for the election of members of county committees and of delegates to the various conventions will be held on Tuesday in all the districts, but there are only five contests for leadership that amount to anything in the twenty-three Assembly district of Brooklyn, including both parties. This is a remarkable state of affairs, probably due to new leadership in each party.

John H. McCooey, the Democratic leader, has succeeded in smoothing differences between factions in all but four districts. The new Calder-Kracke regime in Republicanism has discouraged primary fights effectually, so that there is only one contest, the old strife in the First District between the followers of Dady and Ralston on one side and of Morris U. Ely and Alexander White on the other. The refusal of Timothy L. Woodruff, the former Republican county leader, to furnish capital for fights on the "progressive" leaders also had its effect in smothering primary fights.

Summed up, the fights will be as follows:

Republican—Morris U. Ely against Michael J. Dady and D. H. Ralston in the First Assembly District. A scattering number of election district contests, principally in the Twelfth, to secure delegates to the Municipal Court convention.

Democratic—Second District, James Farrell against Leader John J. Bridges; Fourteenth District, D. J. Carroll against John H. McKeon, the present leader; Fifteenth, Thomas McQuade against John W. Carpenter, the present leader; Twenty-third, Philip A. Riley against James J. Monahan, the successor to P. F. Lynch by vote of the County Committee a short time ago.

Dady-Ely Contest in First District a Close One.

The Dady-Ely Republican contest in the First Assembly District has been the most conspicuous in the county. Each side expects to win, and the result is likely to be very close. Alexander M. White, who is with Morris U. Ely against Michael J. Dady, gave out the following statement last night:

"I have just seen this afternoon's papers containing Michael J. Dady's interview regarding the charges which I put up to him personally at the meeting at Long Island Historical Hall last Thursday evening.

"I have read these over, and find that many of his remarks are false, many are misleading, many are cunningly veiled insinuations, and the others are irrelevant. I will prepare an answer for publication which will cover the matter in detail, and I believe to the satisfaction of any one who may be interested."

John J. Bridges Picked to Win in the Second.

From all indications, there will be nothing like the old-time contest between the Democratic factions for control of the Second District, which is one of the strongholds of Democracy in the county. It was thought that former Alderman Colgan might be persuaded to lead the fight against Bridges again this year, but he declared himself out of the running some time ago, and the anti-Bridges faction selected Mr. Farrell as its standard bearer. With Colgan's withdrawal, much of the enthusiasm of his followers was dissipated, and Bridges is picked for an easy winner on Tuesday.

CARROLL AND M'KEON IN BITTER CONTEST

The primary contest in the Fourteenth Assembly District is the sharpest conflict that has occurred there in many years. Daniel J. Carroll, who is trying to wrest the Democratic leadership from John McKeon, is filled with hope that he will swamp his opponent; the supporters of McKeon, at the same time, are equally confident. Old timers who have been closely identified with politics in the old Fourteenth Ward for many years, many of whom are now ardent supporters of Carroll, are shaking their heads and admitting that the outlook for the success of the McKeonites is none too good.

There is little doubt that the campaign is one of the bitterest that the district has seen in a long time. The Carrollites have been very busy, and the district from one end to the other is flooded with their lithographs and transparencies. The McKeonites have been less active, and this is regarded as a strong factor in Carroll's hopes of success. Carroll's lieutenants declare that their opponents have been tearing down his banners and destroying his transparencies. The other side denies this.

Carroll declares there is little chance of his losing.

"Last year," he said yesterday, "I lost by a very small majority, little more than a hundred votes. That was without any tangible organization to support me. This time I have an organization with 1,128 members. If outings show anything as to which way the election will go, it can be said beyond all dispute that on my outing there were 2,148, while on the Seymour Club's outing there were but little more than 700. This was indeed a surprise to those who believed McKeon might win. I have posted a reward of $1,000 which will be paid in cash to any one who will furnish evidence and cause the conviction of any one using illegal methods at the polls."

It has been rumored throughout the district that Carroll is looked upon with favor at the county headquarters. Alderman Thomas J. McAleer has swung over to the Carroll side, carrying with him a contingent which may prove to be a serious loss to the McKeonites. A number of clergymen, who at the last primary assailed Carroll, have been won over by him, and many of the church organizations of young voters, it is expected, will cast their votes for Carroll. John McKeon, who is chief clerk of the Manhattan avenue court, was very cheerful yesterday.

"When Carroll declares that there will be a landslide in his direction," he said, "he is only fooling himself. The Seymour Club is in better condition than it ever was at any time, and we expect to go to the polls stronger than ever. We have not been so active this year because we realize that it is not necessary.

"There will be a large ratification meeting in the New Lyceum hall of St. Vincent de Paul tomorrow night, and we expect to have a crowd there that will let Carroll know that while we are not making a lot of noise we can hold our own when it comes to a crisis."

One of the issues which the Carrollites

Daniel J. Carroll,

advance is patronage to voters not in the district. Since the last primary McKeon secured three places, and, according to the arguments set forth by Carroll two of them were for men not living in the district.

The change which the population has undergone since the days of the late P. H. McCarren alter the situation from what it was then. An Irish population and a solid Democratic vote was characteristic of the old Fourteenth Ward. In recent years the population has experienced a large Jewish increase, and, with the passing of Senator McCarren, the Democratic vote was greatly weakened. This has taken place under the Tully-McKeon regime and the Carrollites charge political mismanagement.

CARPENTER EXPECTS TO WIN BY 1,000

It is expected that the race for the leadership of the Democratic forces in the Fifteenth Assembly District will be closer than ever before. James J. A. McQuade, who heads the fight against John W. Carpenter, claims more strength than ever, while the organization people declare that they can win with a comfortable majority. This will be the fifth contest between the two, although it is McQuade's seventh attempt to be a leader. Carpenter has headed the organization in the Fifteenth Assembly District since the district reapportionment five years ago. Prior to that McQuade had been in the Fourteenth Assembly District.

It is McQuade's theory that the deeper you push a cork into the water the faster it comes up. This is the principle upon which he is continuing each year after unsuccessful efforts to win a majority. Many of the supporters of Carpenter, who have been with him since he assumed the position, laugh as they declare, "If he keeps on running long enough he may get there."

It is feared that the McQuade faction has hurt itself by internal disputes, which, according to the Carpenter people have taken place quite frequently. Mr. Carpenter's side expects to win the contest by at least 1,000 majority.

Carpenter, although confident of success, has not been inactive and has left no stone unturned. He hopes not only to insure his election, but to swamp the opposition and thereby strengthen his organization. On several occasions McQuade has in public speeches hinted at bribery by Carpenter. This was supposed to be in the shape of buying his district captains. When Mr. Carpenter was asked about this he replied that he did not want any of the McQuade captains, even if they were to come over free of charge. Their presence, he said, would hurt him, rather than benefit him.

MONAHAN SAYS RILEY AGREED TO GIVE UP

Philip A. Riley, who is contesting the Democratic leadership in the Twenty-third Assembly District with James J. Monahan, is regarded by his friends as having a fighting chance. The Monahan faction refuses to concede even this. The Monahan men point out that they represent the regular organization in the district, and they control the appointment of the election inspectors. These two advantages, they say, are half the battle.

Riley, within a few weeks, has built up an organization with a membership exceeding 500. Among his supporters are many adherents of the late leader, Patrick F. Lynch, who deserted the regular organization as soon as Monahan was chosen by the County Committee to succeed him. Monahan claims that the Broadway and Bushwick parts of the district are solid for him. Flatbush and Flatlands are debatable sections. In each Riley and Monahan have a large following.

Brownsville, while ostensibly supporting Monahan, is said to be secretly favoring Riley. The issue there is neither Riley nor Monahan. Some of the voters are anxious to eliminate Hyman Rayfield the chief clerk of the New Jersey avenue police court, as a political factor.

James J. Monahan, in an interview last night, said that Riley, on Friday afternoon, made the positive declaration that he would abandon the primary fight.

"My meeting with Riley was prearranged on Riley's part. Through a personal friend of Riley, Mr. McCooey sent for me, and asked me to meet Riley, which I did. He told me that he was out of the fight. He also said that he was tired of it, and realized that he could not win. He even went so far as to say that he did not expect to carry his own election district. When we parted, we shook hands, with the understanding that the fight was off. I believe he would have kept his word, only for a few disgruntled members of his own organization, who forced him to go into it again."

EX-CONVICT INVENTOR HOPES FOR HIS FREEDOM

Bretton, Once Given a Life Sentence, Designed Aeroplane While He Was in Jail.

WEALTHY WOMAN GIVES BAIL.

Was Given Extraordinarily Severe Sentence for Swindling Servant Girl.

Harry Bretton, the gray haired ex-convict and confidence man, could not prevent a show of his satisfaction in the Queens County Court, before County Judge Humphrey yesterday, when he saw his counsel, Eugene N. L. Young, attacking one after another of the legal barriers that are keeping him in jail, face to face with a sentence to imprisonment in Sing Sing. Both lawyer and client believe the latter will shortly be freed.

Bretton wants to get out, that he may continue the promotion of the company that is to manufacture the aeroplane that he invented while in the Queens County Jail. One of the machines is now ready to be tried out, and blocks of stock have been taken up by persons with money who have seen the machine. Bretton does not want to go to Sing Sing and pass the pleasing prospect of profits along to others.

Bretton, who a year or more ago confessed to having taken money from a poor servant girl, on the plea that he was going to buy a ticket to Florida, where she was to find employment, was on this confession given a life sentence in Sing Sing by Judge Humphrey, the reason for this severity being Bretton's long record of inability to keep out if state's prison on one charge and another.

This sentence was appealed from, and it was while waiting in jail nearly a year for a decision from the Appellate Division that Bretton brought out the airship plans.

Then, on a certificate of reasonable doubt from the Supreme Court, he was given his liberty when a wealthy woman of Far Rockaway went his bail. He then left for the West, and was not heard of until long after the Appellate Division set aside the sentence of life imprisonment and directed that he be brought into court for resentence. When he did come back from Chicago, Judge Humphrey gave him a sentence of four years and five months in Sing Sing.

He was kept from a trip up the river by the application of Attorney Young for a setting aside of this sentence on the ground that the Appellate Division's decision required Bretton's presence in that court for sentence. This motion, while made before the summer adjournment of court, was not argued before Judge Humphrey until yesterday. Although opposed by District Attorney De Witt the motion was granted by Judge Humphrey, who ordered that Bretton should be taken before the Appellate Division for sentence.

Attorney Fights Hard for Client's Liberty.

This motion was no sooner granted than Mr. Young made a motion for arrest of judgment and the discharge of the defendant on the ground that the indictment did not charge a crime. Mr. Young pointed out that there was not a second count in the indictment charging grand larceny, but the only charge was that he had gotten money from the servant girl on a false promise. Mr. Young cited a case where the courts declared that the breaking of a false promise was not a crime. Judge Humphrey refused to grant this motion.

Mr. Young then made a motion to have Bretton's plea of guilty withdrawn on the grounds that the plea was to grand larceny, whereas there was no charge of grand larceny. This motion was denied. Another motion was then made that Bretton be admitted to bail. Mr. Young said he did not care how large the bail was made. He said the original certificate of reasonable doubt still existed as the Appellate Division had set aside the sentence. Judge Humphrey would not grant this motion, as he wanted the whole matter settled by the Appellate Division.

Attorney Young feels so sure of the strength of the points he has brought forward in Bretton's case that he declared as his client was led from the courthouse that he would be free as soon as the case is presented to the Appellate Division. Bretton shares the belief of his attorney and now believes he will not have to serve a term in prison.

LEONARD ANXIOUS TO RETIRE.

Washington, September 23—Major Henry Leonard, U. S. Marine Corps, the only American officer wounded in the attack upon Tientsin during the famous march of the allied forces upon Pekin during the Boxer uprising, has applied for retirement. He lost an arm at that time and feels that this incapacitates him for further service. For his gallantry in the Chinese campaign Major Leonard was advanced in his rank by Congress and made an extra number.

His retirement will depend upon the findings of the retiring board, which meets here September 26. Major Leonard is a native of this city. He commands the naval prison at Portsmouth, N. H.

ERRORS IN CHARTER BILL.

Albany, September 23—Several typographical errors have been found in the New York charter bill, and it will have to be reprinted again. An emergency message from the Governor will then be necessary for its passage before the end of the week.

CLAIMS FOR 'MIRACLE' WHEAT NOT MERITED

"Extravagant," Says Agriculture Department of a $5.00 a Bushel Variety.

CHEMIST'S ANALYSIS HERE.

A "MIRACLE" PUZZLE.

Stoners "Miracle" Wheat—$5 per bushel.
Brother Bohnet's Wheat—$60 per bushel.
Pastor Russell, at whose Tabernacle the Bohnet "Miracle" wheat is sold, says this brand is the same as the Stoner brand.
The Agricultural Department says Stoner "Miracle" wheat does not merit the extravagant claims made for it.
Find the Miracle!

The "miracle wheat" which is being sold at Pastor Russell's Tabernacle in Hicks street at $60 a bushel—small lots at $1 a pound—is not the only "miracle wheat" of which the Agricultural Department authorities at Washington have knowledge.

There is a wheat company in Philadelphia which is also selling the "miracle" brand of grain. The company bears the name of Stoner. Pastor Russell said yesterday that it was the Stoner brand of "miracle" cereal from which Brother Bohnet, who supplies some of the wheat sold at the Tabernacle in Hicks street secured the first grains, which Pastor Russell indorses.

The Stoner concern, in Philadelphia, sells its "miracle" wheat at only $5 a bushel. Careful calculation in arithmetic shows that this is $55 less than is charged at Pastor Russell's house of worship for the same brand of "miracle" grain.

"Does Not Merit Extravagant Claims Made for It."

The Agricultural Department has examined the Stoner brand of "miracle" wheat, the same grain from which Pastor Russell says that sold at his Tabernacle sprung, and an official of the Department has stated in a communication to H. W. Collingwood, editor of The Rural New Yorker, that "it does not merit the extravagant claims made for it."

The Rural New Yorker has a high reputation among agriculturists as an investigator of newly-discovered gifts from Mother Earth. When the editor heard about "miracle" wheat being advertised he wrote to the Agricultural Department, and the Department sent him a letter, as follows:

"As you know, the name 'miracle' is used interchangeably with others such as 'mummy,' 'seven-headed,' 'Egyptian,' etc., to designate the group known as Triticum compositum. To this group belongs also the 'Alaska,' which nearly three years ago was offered at the exorbitant price of $20 per bushel and was pronounced a fake.

"A number of years ago, however, a variety of wheat called 'miracle' was brought to our attention by a Mr. K. B. Stoner of Fincastle, Va., who claimed to have produced it in a miraculous manner—that is, as the result of prayer that he might discover or in some way produce an extraordinarily profitable wheat; hence the name 'miracle.' This wheat was afterward exploited by promoters.

"This variety does not belong to the Group T compositum before mentioned, but is closely related to the soft winter wheats of the Atlantic Coast, of which Fultz, Fulcaster, etc., are leading types. From our experiments with Mr. Stoner's variety we have found it to be satisfactory, but particularly for the region where it was first grown; it does not merit the extravagant claims made for it. It is a little better, perhaps, than the varieties grown in Virginia and vicinity only because it was carefully selected strain."

Pastor Russell Does Not Credit Production by Prayer.

From the above it may be seen that the Stoner wheat, that is selling at $5 a bushel in Philadelphia, is claimed to have been produced through prayer. Pastor Russell said yesterday that he didn't have any faith personally that "miracle" wheat had sprung up because Mr. Stoner had prayed.

"In Ezekiel the Lord said: 'I will call for corn and increase it,'" quoth Pastor Russell yesterday. "Now I think this miracle wheat is a sign that the Lord is increasing the wheat of the earth. As to Mr. Stoner having produced his brand of wheat through prayer, I do not believe that he did. But undoubtedly the Lord is signifying through this wondrous grain that He is now preparing to keep His word."

So far as the bread-making quality in "miracle" wheat is concerned the "divine" grain has nothing in it to make it worth fifty or sixty times the ordinary wheat dealt in at the Produce Exchange in Manhattan.

Dr. John C. Olsen, analytical and consulting chemist at the Polytechnic Institute, who is secretary of the American Institute of Chemical Engineers, yesterday analyzed some of the "miracle" wheat sold at the Tabernacle in Hicks street, to determine if the protein, or gluten, or "bread-making" quality, was developed to any remarkable extent.

Dr. Olsen's analysis shows that "miracle" wheat contains 14.07 per cent. protein. Government reports show that the maximum amount of protein in domestic wheat is 17.15 per cent., the minimum 8.58 per cent. and the average 12.23.

"The Water of Eternal Youth"

(From Home Queen)

The beauties of the Austrian court used a lotion which was so effectual in keeping the face smooth and free from wrinkles, even in the aged, that they named it the "water of eternal youth."

Someone has recently divulged the secret of this wonderful, though exceedingly simple, wrinkle lotion, which in her gratitude she has similarly dubbed as a preserver of youth: One ounce pure saxolite (powdered), dissolved in a half pint of witch hazel—that's all there is to it. Any woman can get these ingredients at her drug-store, put them together, and use the solution with entire safety. To bathe the face in the same brings immediate results, even in case of the deeper wrinkles and furrows. This is also effective for hanging checks and double chin.

BAD FAITH IS CHARGED BY LEROY T. HARKNESS

Says That Cullen Slipped in Veto Provision After Agreement to Elimipate It.

'WATSON DID IT,' SAYS TRAVIS.

Brooklyn Senator Says That Tammany Charter Makers Fooled Members of Committee.

Charging that only a desire to create confusion over the question of the Mayor's veto power in subway matters had led the Cities Committee of the Senate to insert an "eleventh hour" amendment, Leroy T. Harkness, assistant counsel to the Public Service Commission, made a statement last night which reflects seriously upon the committee. He states that he had agreed with Roy B. Smith, counsel to the Cities Committee, on certain amendments, which definitely removed the veto power from the proposed charter, known as the Cullen-Foley bill. He had even agreed to the publication of a statement to the effect that the veto power which caused most of the opposition to the charter had been eliminated. But, he says, hardly had he left Albany before a new amendment, about which he had not been consulted, was inserted, and he declares this act could only be an attempt "to undo our work by undermining the provisions we had agreed upon."

Senator Eugene M. Travis, the only Republican from Brooklyn on the Cities Committee, is inclined to agree with Mr. Harkness. Senator Travis makes the even more remarkable charge that the amendment was probably inserted after the meeting of the Cities Committee, following the arrival of Corporation Counsel Watson, about two hours after the meeting had adjourned. Travis says that Senator Cullen did not even read the proposed amendments to the bill at the meeting of the Cities Committee.

"Senator Cullen stated to the members of the committee," said Senator Travis, "that he held in his hand amendments to the bill which would remove in its entirety the veto power of the Mayor over all rapid transit legislation. We were given clearly to understand that there would be no question about it, and that the amendments were so worded as to satisfy every citizen that the veto power of the Mayor had been removed. But he did not read any of the amendments. We believed he was acting in good faith.

"This was about 4:30 o'clock on Thursday afternoon. Corporation Counsel Watson arrived about 7 o'clock, I believe. After the meeting, at which Cullen's amendments had been adopted, and Harkness had agreed to them, Watson undoubtedly had this extra provision inserted."

Mr. Harkness' statement is as follows:

"On leaving Albany on Thursday, after a conference with Ray B. Smith, counsel to the Legislative Charter Committee, objections to the proposed charter because of its attempt to amend the Rapid Transit Act, seemed to have been eliminated. Who had agreed upon the amendments to be inserted and had further agreed upon the following statement in respect thereto which was later issued by the committee:

"'In the opinion of the counsel to the committee and LeRoy T. Harkness, assistant counsel of the Public Service Commission for the First District, the effect of the foregoing amendments is to leave the powers and duties of the city authorities in relation to the rapid transit railroads precisely as fixed in the Rapid Transit Act, and in no wise affected by the provisions of the proposed charter.'

"This represented our professional opinion on the existing law which was reached by Mr. Smith after an independent examination and which I believe was shared by his associate, Mr. Cumming. We agreed almost without discussion that there was no real basis for the claim that under the existing charter the mayor has a separate right of approval over rapid transit contracts and franchises.

"Hardly had I left Albany after agreeing upon these amendments and the foregoing statement than the following amendment was inserted in Section 1447:

"'Notwithstanding the repeal by this act or any other act, any power now possessed by the Mayor, Controller or Board of Estimate and Apportionment under the Greater New York charter, as amended, in respect of franchise or contracts heretofore or hereafter granted or authorized pursuant to the Rapid Transit Act shall continue in the Mayor, Controller and Board of Estimate, respectively.'

"This remarkable provision could only be inserted in an attempt to undo our work by undermining the provisions we had agreed upon."

Senator Cullen is away in the country, and could not be reached last night to obtain his explanation of the action of his committee. He and Assemblyman James A. Foley stated on Friday, at the time the amendments were introduced, that their sole purpose was to leave the Mayor's power exactly as it is in the present charter. Mayor Gaynor has claimed that the present charter gives him a veto power over any subway matters. His claims to extensive power have been disputed by the Public Service Commission. The reason for Watson's trip to Albany was to see to it that this "color of power," or right now possessed by the Mayor, should not be abridged in the slightest degree, as was indicated in The Eagle dispatches from Albany. Laurence Tanzer, chairman of the Citizens Union charter committee, said, after reading this latest amendment, that its sole purpose was evidently to "raise a doubt," on which the Mayor would probably attempt to block the construction of subways by an appeal to the courts.

Should the Legislature, by passing the new charter with this proviso, ratify whatever power the Mayor now has in the existing charter, it is claimed that this would strengthen "the color if right" which the Mayor now believes he has. The opponents of the Mayor, therefore, will fight this latest amendment, and it may be withdrawn.

Senator J. F. Duhamel, of Coney Island, gave out the following resolution as indicating his position last night: "The Independence League Party of the Sixteenth District, heartily endorse the efforts of the Allied Civic Bodies of South Brooklyn to kill the proposed Charter which is so detrimental to the interests of our District and we hereby recommend a Charter to be prepared by a body of citizens duly elected by the people."

FORMER U. S. TREASURER IS LODGED IN THE TOMBS

SCHEME NETS $1,000,000.

Jared Flagg Is the Promoter, and F. Tennyson Neely an Important Figure.

Daniel M. Morgan, a former Treasurer of the United States; F. Tennyson Neely, on whom the limelight has been focussed before this, and Jared Flagg, who has also figured in the public prints, were the big fish caught in a dragnet spread by the Federal authorities yesterday, when one of the most important raids of recent years was engineered by the agents of the Government.

The three men mentioned and five others were committed to the Tombs in default of bail, which was set at high figures. According to Assistant District Attorney Abel I. Smith, who asked that heavy bail be fixed, the Government understands that Flagg has $1,000,000 "salted away."

Flagg's stock investment concern at 105 West Fortieth street, Manhattan, was the place raided. Besides those mentioned, the following were arrested: Alvin M. Higgins, Edward L. Schiller, Joshua Brown, Henry A. Jackson and James T. Schock. The charge was using the mails to defraud in connection with the operation of a sort of endless chain scheme to defraud investors in stocks.

The eight men were taken before United States Commissioner Alexander Gilchrist, jr., and Flagg was placed under $25,000 bail. He wanted to furnish $30,000 in cash, but there was no official to take charge of the $30,000 which he wanted to put up for his freedom. Bail for the other defendants was fixed as follows:

Morgan, $10,000; Alvin Higgins, credited by Mr. Smith with having had written the "come-on" letters for the concern, and F. Tennyson Neely, $10,000 each; Schiller, $5,000; Brown and Schock, described as "cappers," and Henry A. Jackson were put under bonds of $2,500.

The government has information which leads it to believe that Schock was a clergyman before he took to selling stocks.

Eight young women who were in Flagg's offices at the time of the raid were served with Grand Jury subpoenas after they had been questioned by Mr. Smith. Then they were permitted to go home.

The raid was conducted by United States Marshal Henkel, a corps of Post-office inspectors and detectives of the city police force. Postoffice Inspector Elmer L. Kincaid made the complaint.

The charge was that on September 9 Flagg and the other defendants used the mails to defraud Bertha L. Bentley of 133 East South street, Corry, Pa., and numerous other persons.

How Get-Rich-Quick Scheme Was Worked.

The complaint states that in the operation of the scheme Flagg and his confederates falsely and fraudulently represented to investors, residing in different parts of the country, that all money sent to him would be used in the purchase of shares of stock of corporations regularly dealt in upon the New York Stock and Consolidated exchanges for their use.

It is also claimed that by these purchases Flagg and his associates would be able to pay investors a large percentage by way of profits upon all money intrusted to them. These representations, Kincaid charges, were false and he alleges there were no transactions on the exchanges, and that such percentages as there were Flagg paid to his dupes out of the money they had sent on to be invested in gilt-edged securities on sale at the exchanges.

According to Chief Post Office Inspector Warren W. Dickson, his attention was drawn to Flagg's business in consequence of a visit he received from a woman calling herself Lillian Gibbs Keyes. During the course of the talk she said that Flagg was a financial wizard who was paying his customers at the rate of 1 per cent. a week or 50 per cent. per year. When Dickson heard this he set on foot a secret inquiry. This was carried on by Inspectors Kincaid and Deddy, who reported that Flagg was conducting business after the fashion of the notorious "Miller Syndicate" plan with the exception that he was more modest in the amount of the dividends he paid.

Morgan Said to Have Permitted Use of Name.

There was some interesting information dug up in reference to Morgan. They reported that he was interested in the Flagg enterprises to the amount of $200,000 and was reaping large returns through the use of his name.

Kincaid told his chief that Flagg had thousands of customers and that they had invested about $1,500,000 with him. The early investors were being paid dividends out of the money paid in by late investors, it was said. An interesting piece of information was that some of the customers were clergymen and others society folk.

Flagg admitted in court that twelve years ago he was arrested on twenty-five complaints charging him with being a common nuisance, convicted and sentenced to thirty days imprisonment and fined $500.

While the Government's inquiry was under way Neeley called on Chief Inspector Dickson, and declared that Flagg was an honorable man. Neeley threatened, it is said, to enter a complaint with Postmaster General Hitchcock if the Post Office inspectors were not called off. He was told to go as far as he liked.

Neeley was formerly a book publisher and became bankrupt in 1895, with liabilities of $359,000, with small assets.

A feature of the business was that every Saturday, after the dividend checks had been mailed, Flagg and his associates, male and female, had a costly banquet at the Beaux Arts. They were just going to another one when the raid spoiled the feast.

DROWNED YOUTH BURIED.

The funeral of William E. Hanson of 874 Fulton street, who was drowned last Saturday night in the Connecticut river, together with a girl friend, while on their way to a dance, was held from the Church of Our Lady of Mercy, on Schermerhorn street yesterday. The rector, James J. McAteer celebrated high requiem requiem mass. Present at the services were, besides his mother, Mrs. Anna Hanson, his brother and sister, were many friends and relatives. Among the many floral pieces was one from his employers, Abraham & Straus. William Hanson would have been 20 years old in December.

He was a graduate of the Academy of the Sacred Heart and a member of the Sacred Heart Society and the Church of Our Lady of Mercy. Burial was in St. John's cemetery.

INDEPENDENCE ONLY WILL SATISFY THE FILIPINOS

So Declares President Manibo of the Local Organization.

GIVES MANY STRONG REASONS

Says the Natives Are Badly Off, and That Americans Have Upper Hand in Everything.

Last night at its headquarters, 44 Lawrence street, the Filipino Independent Club, which was organized last August, held a meeting to advocate the independence of the Philippines. There were about 300 present, mostly Filipinos, and the clubhouse and speaker's platform was tastefully decorated with American and Filipino flags.

Speeches were delivered by E. Monteron, P. Mougahas, Juan Joyanan, F. Alcances and the president, Jose A. Manibo, who occupied the chair. Mr. Manibo delivered a long address which was in part as follows:

"There should be no question as to whether or not the Filipinos should have independence. It is no question of fact, but of law. The American law was founded upon the principles of consent and not upon the principles of force. In other words, the Filipinos must be and ought to be under the rule of the law of consent and not under the law of force.

"The maxim that the Filipinos are better off today than they were yesterday is without foundation; on the contrary, the conditions in the Islands are getting worse and worse every day. And that these are facts is proven by the following evidences:

"First—In the Philippines the Filipinos are expected to live so long as they do not interfere with the happiness of the Americans there. Thus in the islands there are two kinds of happiness—higher and lower happiness. The higher happiness is enjoyed by the Americans, while the lower happiness is enjoyed by the Filipinos.

"Third—There is liberty of speech and of the press, but it says that the Filipinos can write, publish and print whatever they please, provided they do not criticise the Americans, no matter how crooked their political theories may be.

"Fifth—Inequality of labor; that is, higher wages on the part of the American employees and lower wages on the part of the Filipino employees.

"Sixth—Social inequality, and by this is meant that in a place in the islands where Americans could get in, the brown Filipinos are to read the sign: 'Filipinos are not allowed.'

"Seventh—American officials turn their duties from public to private; that is, from public servants to trust managers.

"Ninth—Almost all higher offices, civil or otherwise, are filled by the Americans. This is especially true in cases of school teachers, the Americans are principals, while the Filipinos are their assistants, notwithstanding that they possess the same degree of education, right to life, right to liberty and right to purchase the political happiness of their own; that is, independence."

When asked why he preferred absolute independence to American protection Mr. Manibo replied: "Only by absolute independence can the Filipino hope to enjoy perfect and perpetual freedom. I will mention Cuba and Texas for illustration. What we want is not American protection, but independence and a neutral treaty, such as Belgium and Switzerland have, which will give us universal protection and government of, by and for the people."

NEW STYLES IN FOODSTUFFS

The opening of the Food Show at the Madison Square Garden last evening was attended by thousands of persons. The display quite equaled that of last year in every department, from the gigantic bottle, 36 feet high and measuring 12 feet at the base, which stands in the center of the hall, and the interior of which forms a unique booth, to the extreme ends of the garden, near which the army and navy are respectively stationed.

The exhibit of the Federation of Day Nurseries, under the direction of its secretary, Miss Marjorie Hall, consists of a nine-room nursery model, ingeniously peopled with dolls representing the various children and instructors. The industrial work of the blind is demonstrated by several efficient workers, and even the little children from the Sunshine Home interested crowds of people by their clever workmanship in weaving and basket-making.

An electric chair that restores life instead of destroying it is one of the original features of a breakfast cereal exhibit. A suction cleaner, said to hail from Brooklyn, and announced as the only one on the market that does not require electric power, is neighbor to a sugar refining exhibit, where the sweetest display at the show is 5-year-old Lottie Quinn, who distributes favors and smiles impartially.

There are paper bags for housewives to roast meat in, and loaves of cake the tops of which are spiked with the latest and most sanitary thing in the line of broom splints, properly washed and sterilized and ready for sale in sanitary packages.

At last night's display the field equipment of the United States Army, the culinary arrangements on a man-o'-war and the sanitary bottling and corking of milk bottles provided mechanical problems for crowds of interested spectators.

FUNERAL OF W. M. EVANS.

Funeral services for Willet M. Evans, who was killed in an automobile accident, was held last night. Canon Chase officiated, and in his eulogy paid a high tribute to the integrity of character and the warm-heartedness of the deceased. There was a Masonic service over his body by Cornerstone Lodge. He will be buried at 10 o'clock today at Cypress Hills Cemetery.

MORE PAID THAN AUTHORIZED.

Price to Be Paid Was 370 a Share for 2,000, but Some Holders Got 395, and Say It Was Excessive.

One of the most interesting transactions thus far uncovered at the Union Bank hearings was disclosed by Attorney James C. Cropsey today. A "clean-up" of $300,000 from the merger of the People's Bank with the Union Bank was shown by the testimony. Some $200,000 went to the stockholders of the People's Bank and $106,000 went into the pockets of the Union Bank contingent.

According to the testimony exacted from Cashier James T. Ashley, supplemented by the records and the evidence of the cashier of the People's Bank, such matters as "made to order" minutes, forged records and dummy companies, all played important parts in the putting through of this one deal. The stockholders, according to the sworn records, authorized the officers of the Union Bank to pay $100,000 less than the books show they paid.

The accounts of Robert P. Orr and of the Orr Contracting Company were used to cover up the record of the deal on the books of the Union Bank. Near the close of today's hearing Mr. Cropsey asked whether the bank examiners who looked over the bank ever asked any questions about the Orr accounts. When Cashier Ashley answered that so far as he remembered the state banking examiners had never asked any questions about these accounts, which some times carried debts for half a million, Mr. Cropsey got from him the names of the bank examiners who had conducted the examination of the bank during this period.

John Orr Took His Orders From Cashier Ashley.

John Orr of Parkville, a brother of the president of the Orr Contracting Company, was the first witness today. He was a stenographer in the Bank, and later became bookkeeper and receiving teller. John Orr was one of the incorporators of the Orr Contracting Company. He says he became an incorporator because James T. Ashley, the cashier of the bank, asked him. Like most of the other "dummies" who have testified, he "did what he was told" without ever asking whether the manipulations in which his name was used were legal. Ashley told him he was to become secretary of the company, and whenever Ashley asked him to sign checks or other papers he did so. According to his testimony he knew nothing about the fact that $110,000 was charged to the company's account on a certain day and credited a few hours later.

John Orr declared that the officers of the company had no meetings and that he knew nothing about its affairs. James T. Ashley, the cashier of the bank, gave the orders and the Orr Contracting Company's account was credited or debited, sometimes for a few dollars and sometimes for as much as half a million.

Robert P. Orr, the president of the Orr Contracting Company, returned to the stand today with his book of minutes of the company. A discrepancy developed the moment Attorney James C. Cropsey began to read from the minutes. The minutes of the first meeting told all about a meeting at which an organization was effected. According to the minutes, John Orr was present, but a few minutes before he had testified that he never attended a meeting.

"My brother probably forgot that he attended the meeting," Robert P. Orr explained. "He wasn't there more than two minutes."

Mr. Cropsey brought out that according to the records of the first meeting this must have required much more than two minutes.

Minutes of First Meeting Prepared in Advance.

"Well, the minutes of the first meeting were prepared in my office, and they were only read over at the meeting," President Orr explained.

"Prepared beforehand, were they?"

"Why, it's the usual thing for the attorney to dictate the minutes of the first meeting beforehand," Mr. Orr answered.

Mr. Cropsey also brought out that Robert P. Orr, the chairman of the meeting, was the only one of the incorporators who signed the minutes of the first meeting.

"Why didn't the others sign?"

"It wasn't necessary," Mr. Orr snapped. "You're trying to ridicule these minutes."

Mr. Cropsey continued to read from the minutes an account of the election of officers. According to the minutes, candidates for office always left the room while their election was being considered. It developed that the officers must have been elected while there was no one left in the room, because John Orr testified he wasn't present, and John P. Orr and James T. Ashley, the only others at the meeting, were elected to office. When questioned as to the election, Mr. Orr explained that the minutes were incorrect in stating that he and James T. Ashley left the room while they were being elected by themselves.

Mr. Cropsey was also interested in the bylaws. These bylaws detailed at length the duties of Mr. Orr as the head of the company.

"Did you actually control the company as these bylaws declare you should?"

"I had no share in the management of the company," President Orr replied.

"But how can you reconcile your being an officer of the company and having nothing to do with its management?" Mr. Cropsey wanted to know.

"I had confidence in those who ran it," the witness replied.

"According to the bylaws of the com-

MIRACLE WHEAT IN DEMAND ON THE PRODUCE EXCHANGE

Brokers Ask for Quotations on Pastor Russell's "Divine" Grain.

HAVE SOME "JUST AS GOOD."

Postal Authorities to Test True Value of Religious $60-a-Bushel Stuff.

Chief Postal Inspector W. W. Dickson, in Manhattan, said today that he was "preparing a case" in connection with the "Miracle" wheat which is on sale at Pastor Russell's Tabernacle in Hicks street, Brooklyn, the price still being $60 a bushel, with small lots to be had at $1 a pound. Inspector Dickson said he expects to have the case ready within a few days to place in the hands of Postal Inspector John N. Parsons, who handles Brooklyn Post Office investigations.

"My men have been pretty well tied up with the Flagg case in Manhattan and with handling the 'aerial special delivery' service at the aviation meet," Inspector Dickson explained today. "I am preparing a case in the matter of 'Miracle' wheat and expect to turn it over to Inspector Parsons in Brooklyn soon.

"It is not true that Inspector Kinkade has issued an order against this wheat being sent through the mails. This would not be done unless we knew for a certainty that this 'Miracle' wheat hadn't the yielding qualities claimed for it. We have no way of knowing this yet and at present no such order will be issued."

It was learned today that a complaint regarding the "Miracle" wheat being sold here has reached the office of the chief inspector of the Post Office Department in Washington. Chief Inspector R. J. Sharp has turned the complaint over to the Third Assistant Postmaster General, division of classification, and the matter, according to a letter written by Inspector Sharp, will be given proper attention at the earliest date practicable.

"Miracle" wheat is a matter of discussion these days on the Produce Exchange in Manhattan. Brokers are asking one another with some amount of sarcasm if they have "any 'Miracle' wheat for sale this morning." Benjamin F. Schwartz, a member of the Exchange, announces that he will supply Pastor Russell with wheat just as good as that sold at the Tabernacle at $60 a bushel and will charge Brother Dockey or Brother Bohnet or any other "brothers" only about $1 a bushel for it, giving persons interested in the success of the Watch Tower Bible and Tract Society a chance to make $59 a bushel profit.

Alexander Forbes, vice president of Peter Henderson & Co., 35 Cortlandt street, Manhattan, one of the oldest seed firms in the country, says that offers of "Miracle" wheat have often been made to the company but that the company would "run away" from any grain that carried the term "Miracle" with it.

"If Pastor Russell or anyone else came in here and offered us 'Miracle' wheat," Mr. Forbes said, "we would politely show him the door."

M. Reilly, a grain dealer at 175 Pacific street, offers to sell Pastor Russell wheat which is, says Mr. Reilly, as good as the advertised "Miracle" wheat, at 10 cents a pound, giving the Tabernacle people a chance to make 90 cents a pound profit.

Still Better Chance to Make $59.05 Profit.

J. C. Jube, superintendent of the Hecker flour mills in Manhattan, was shown a sample of "Miracle" wheat. He sent for his head miller, who examined the "divine" grain with great interest. Then the head miller disappeared and returned later with a sample package of No. 2 Red, soft winter wheat. In appearance it was the same as the "Miracle" wheat, and Superintendent Forbes said he would stake his reputation as a wheat man for years that the wheat the head miller brought in—it sells at 95 cents a bushel—was just as good as the "Miracle" brand. Both wheats were grown in Ohio.

The "Miracle" wheat was first grown in Pennsylvania, according to Pastor Russell. Brother Bohnet's contributed grains were grown in Ohio and Brother Flemming's in Indiana. The best wheat, according to grain experts, comes from none of these States, but from the Northwest and Canada.

According to Dr. John C. Olsen, the Polytechnic Institute chemist and an authority on pure foodstuffs, it is not possible to take the best Pennsylvania grain, plant it in Ohio and then have Pennsylvania quality grow. The result will be Ohio quality, for climate and soil will be determining factors. Dr. Olson does not see, accordingly, how "Miracle" wheat grown in comparatively poor wheat soil of an Eastern State can have extraordinary qualities when planted in also comparatively poor wheat soil this side of the region where the country's best wheat is grown.

LIVED WITH THE DOCK RATS

James McKenna Dragged From Strange Abode and Is Given 6 Months.

The murky, uninviting recesses of his home under the docks, where he lived with the rats, and from where he was taken by a policeman after a fight last night, will not know James McKenna for at least six months. Magistrate Naumer imposed a sentence covering that period this morning when he sent McKenna to the workhouse.

McKenna is 43 years old, and has made his home under the dock at the foot of South Fifth street, since last spring. He has been a source of continual uneasiness for the officials of the American Sugar Refining Company who occupy the docks at this point.

The sugar people have made every effort to get him out but without success. It was his custom to build a fire to cook his food and to keep himself warm. At the point where McKenna chose to live, big ocean vessels discharge their cargoes of raw sugar. It was feared that these might catch fire or that the docks or the frame buildings might suffer a similar fate.

How the vagrant managed to live there is beyond understanding. The place is overrun with rats, and those of the most ferocious variety. The sewerage and waste from the plant is emptied here and the atmosphere is awful.

The police of the Bedford avenue station were asked to look into the matter and last night Patrolman Frank Redlein was sent down by Captain Flood. When McKenna was about to emerge from his abode, the policeman nabbed him. He worked himself free and ran into the recesses of the docks. Redlein was forced to follow and finally managed to drag his prisoner out. When McKenna was arraigned in court he would have nothing to say.

NEW LINER RAMS A BIG WHALE

Leviathan Cut Almost in Two by French Steamship Rochambeau.

When off Nantucket yesterday and while running through a dense fog, the new French line steamship Rochambeau, bound from Havre for this port for the first time, rammed a giant whale, into the body of which the steel prow ran deep enough to almost cut the leviathan in two. The water was crimsoned all about the ship, while the carcass of the whale floated for a few minutes and then sank from view.

The fog that had been responsible for the death of the whale surrounded the vessel for forty-eight hours, during all of which time, and until the Rochambeau docked this morning, Captain Marius Casselin was on the bridge, with the result that he was almost exhausted when his ship was finally tied to her pier. The Rochambeau brought over a total of 1,065 passengers, 423 of whom were in the first cabins.

CALLS DADY'S ANSWERS "FALSE AND EVASIVE"

Alexander M. White Predicts the Colonel Will Lose Leadership Tomorrow.

CALLS HIS SCHOOL A BAD ONE.

Alludes to "Contemptible Piece of Political Oppression in First A. D.

Alexander M. White, who is co-operating with Morris U. Ely in the fight to put Michael J. Dady out of control of the Republican organization of the First Assembly District, branded the statements made by Dady last Saturday as "false and evasive" in every important particular, in a reply today. Mr. White says the Dady-Ralston combination will lose the district tomorrow. White answers Dady's insinuations, and backs up his own charges made at the meeting at Historical Hall last Thursday night with the names of the men he mentioned for proof.

White's reply to Dady is as follows:

"The statement of Michael J. Dady in Saturday afternoon's newspapers, in alleged reply to the five charges which I put up to him personally at the meeting at Long Island Historical Hall, would not be worthy of attention except for the fact that Republicans new to this Assembly district, and not acquainted with Mr. Dady, might be misled by his false and evasive answer. My friends know, and Mr. Dady knows, that any charges I might make would be the result of careful investigation.

Says Dady Does Not Reply to Principal Question.

"The principal question which I put to Dady was: 'You have had thirty years in which to establish a reputation as a straight, upright politician. Have you done it?' This question he still declines to answer, possibly on advice of counsel.

"Mr. Melish is well able to take care of himself, and Dady's effort to convert a humorous story into a racial attack is futile. Anyone familiar with the work of Mr. Melish and his freedom from prejudice will know what weight to attach to this diversion from the real issues.

"I will now take up Dady's answers in order. First—In regard to the interference by Mr. Ralston with the rights of a young man employed in a local trust company. Mr. Dady's explanation is false and evasive. The facts are that Mr. Ralston obtained a letter of introduction from Mr. Woodruff, who is a director in the trust company, to one of its officers, and the contents of that letter, combined with the warning reluctantly conveyed by the officer to Mr. Small, constituted a distinct intimation to him that his business future there was jeopardized unless he ceased his political work against Mr. Ralston. To his credit, he refused to be coerced, continued his activity against Mr. Ralston, and resigned his position with the trust company. It is well that the facts should be clearly stated. The young man is now in Portland, Ore., as Mr. Dady probably knows, but his brother, John S. Small, is in Brooklyn, and would be glad to corroborate these statements. It was a contemptible piece of political oppression.

"In regard to the fraudulent Dady circular, I have a copy of the same and a list of some of the names, the use of which was unauthorized. Dady's answer that a creeping error accounts for the inclusion among the indorsers of the names of judges and many persons known to be our friends and workers is absurd. Perusal of the circular and of the names so unauthorized, which I shall be glad to show to anyone interested, is sufficient proof of my charge.

Bowery Floaters in Dady's Polling Place, Repeats White.

"As to Mike Hines of the Bowery, I stated in my charge that he was in Mr. Dady's own polling place, and that the voting of floaters was attempted there. Dady merely denies that Hines himself attempted the voting of floaters, but does not deny that Hines was there nor that any such floaters were present. We have now here in Brooklyn two witnesses to the facts—our own special detective and a former employee of the Government Secret Service, who worked on the case at that time.

"As to Ralston's refusal to recognize the rights of our election district organizations, it should be noted that Dady carefully avoids denying this charge. Ralston said to me in the presence of witnesses, in answer to a complaint that he was not giving us our inspectors, 'I have the power, and I won't do it.' Such practice would destroy entirely the identity of the election district organization, which, by the bylaws of the County Committee, is defined as the unit of political representation.

"As to Mr. Goodspeed's renomination, the facts are these: Dady, with the evident intention of turning him down, sent to the newspapers a garbled report of a speech by Mr. Goodspeed on direct nominations. As a result, Mr. Goodspeed left Dady and issued his circular, a course that any man with self-respect would have pursued.

"Dady then introduces several charges of his own. He intimates that we tried to influence a district captain to handle the financial end of our campaign in the Third Ward. Mr. Ely and I have asked no one to handle our funds, either in the Third Ward or in any other part of the district, but have attended to such matters personally—and, I may add, with scrupulous propriety. Can Mr. Dady truthfully say as much for himself?

Dady Story "Untrue in Every Particular."

"He also intimates that a district captain of ours went to a 'prominent lawyer' and promised him references from several judges in return for his support of Mr. Ely. This story is untrue in every particular. It is an invention on the part of either of the 'prominent lawyer' mentioned, or Mr. Dady.

"Dady also complains that we are capturing his supporters. We admit it. What else could be expected in a successful campaign? For a veteran politician like Dady to be forced to confess that he is losing his men, must come hard.

"The personal letter from Mr. Ely to myself reached Mr. Koehl, the president of the Dady Club, by mistake. The matter contained therein as to the appointment of finance committees for the general election, was talked over thoroughly between Mr. Koehl and ourselves, and was perfectly understood between us. The publication of a private letter obtained by mistake would seem to be the only point the propriety of which might be questioned.

"As to Mr. Goodspeed's use of some left-over Assembly stationery, I did not know of it, nor do I see that it bears on the issue, nor that there was any attempt at deception.

"I doubt if any sensible man will characterize Dady's reply as other than sheer nonsense. The falsities and evasions are typical and are in line with his political reputation. His school was a bad one, and it has passed away. He will lose his leadership of the district at the primary tomorrow; and, with the election of Morris U. Ely, we may rightly expect a fair and manly administration, which will be to the benefit of our Republican organization."

TO USE SHAMROCK'S BOOM.

W. H. Todd Gives It to Playground for Use as Flagpole.

Lying in a big shed in the Erie Basin Dry Dock is the gigantic boom of the yacht Shamrock, last of the famous cup challengers to fly the Lipton pennant. The big spar, which has but recently undergone a complete overhauling and painting, will soon be removed to its future home in Erie Basin's new playground, and will be set up as a flagstaff. It will stand 120 feet high.

The spar is the gift of W. H. Todd, president of the Dry Dock Company, and has already been accepted by Park Commissioner Kennedy. The pole is made of steel and is hollow. To give it the proper rake and taper, a piece was cut from the small end, being replaced by a lighter and longer wooden pole to give it the appearance of a topmast.

All the wise men about the yard have been speculating on how the spar will be gotten out of the yard, but Mr. Todd has figured the plan out, and no trouble is expected. There is a rumor that Mr. Todd will make his gift complete by the addition of a beautiful flag.

ERTRASS IN WONDERLAND.

Received $5,000 Verdict Against Concern, and Has Since Been Wondering.

With a judgment of $5,000 obtained in 1910 for damages because of injuries, Paul C. Ertrass, a carpenter, came into court before Justice Jaycox this morning and asserted that there should be some way for him to collect the money, either from Wonderland, the predecessor of Dreamland at Coney Island, or its directors. Lawyer Samuel S. Whitehouse, representing the directors, opposed any idea that the directors were liable, and Justice Jaycox reserved decision.

In 1903 Wonderland was organized at Coney Island. Early in 1904 Ertrass was working at his trade in its erection and was badly injured. He filed a suit for damages on March 15 of that year. About two weeks later the directors of Wonderland met and made an assignment of the assets of the enterprise for the benefit of creditors and later Dreamland was put into being by the formation of the Dreamland Company.

Ertrass' suit against Wonderland went to trial on March 15, 1910, and a verdict was handed in by the jury, awarding him $5,000, which he has vainly tried to collect.

WILD BREAK IN STOCKS AGAIN SHAKES MARKET

Another Panicky Day on Exchange Due to Steady, Genuine Liquidation.

'TRUST SCARE' STILL POTENT.

"Bears" Have a Field Day, With All Securities Making New Low Records.

Liquidation broke out with renewed violence on the New York Stock Exchange today. News developments could not be held accountable for it, as nothing really new was added to current information on the subject of the trusts and trust prosecution, the uppermost topic in Wall Street discussion. Attorney General Wickersham was in New York to attend the conference on the reorganization of the American Tobacco Company, and was expected to make a statement. Fear of what he might commit himself to was said to explain the attitude of holders of stocks, but as the selling ran from one end of the list to the other, and spared neither St. Paul nor Steel, Reading nor Smelter, Union Pacific nor Amalgamated Copper, this idea was probably wide of the mark.

The opening of the market was fairly quiet, but still unpromising. Weak spots were uncovered, and as this took place others were revealed. The industrials were prominent for early losses, but by the early part of the afternoon such declines were scored as 4½ points in Steel common, 4¾ in American Cotton Oil, 4½ in Virginia-Carolina Chemical, 2⅞ in Smelters and about the same in Copper.

In the railroad list, Union Pacific showed a decline of 4½ points, St. Paul, 3¾; Northern Pacific, 2⅝; Great Northern, 2⅝; Atchison, 2¼; Reading, 4¾, and Canadian Pacific, 2½. Scores of stock made low records for the year. Bearishness was rampant, but the selling of real stock was the feature, and not the operations of the professional element, according to floor members.

There were rumors of all kinds of trouble brewing, in which prominent names were freely mentioned. Morgan people were spoken of as seriously disappointed over the turn of events which had brought the Steel Corporation into such prominence and its securities down with such a thud.

It was claimed by brokers that the corner has not been turned, and would not be until the trusts knew where they were at and where the Department of Justice was at, too. If the corporations were to dissolve, it was claimed by the pessimists, the trades unions should also be compelled to dissolve. They would have to, in fact. Results would be industrial chaos. Business, of course, could not survive the blows aimed at it. The railroads would lose 50 per cent. of their business. Dividends at the rate of 10 per cent. were doomed to a commensurate shrinkage. Companies paying 5, 6 and 7 per cent. would have to be satisfied with a more modest distribution of profits. Investors would feel the pinch, but bread lines in all the principal cities would show where the real pinch was being felt. Money would heap up, enterprise remain dead after being killed, and there would be a long period of depression, in which three men would be looking for one job. That kind of talk went on in almost every broker's office where two, three or more were congregated together, and helped the hesitating to come to conclusions as to what to do with their stocks. Selling gained in volume and continued at the expense of prices, until it looked as though today was to be the worst day of the year.

Toward the last hour there were fitful rallies which fractionally canceled losses, but did little more than help to sustain the nervous feeling. And as most people in the Street declared, while the air was surcharged with possibilities, nobody knew anything or could say that the sensational breaks were due to anything but general liquidation.

LIBERTE TORN TO FRAGMENTS IN TOULON PORT

Warship Was Seen Here During the Hudson Celebration.

FOUR BIG EXPLOSIONS

Fire Broke Out Near Magazines and Men Were Hurled Into Air or in the Water.

OTHER VESSELS DAMAGED.

Toulon, France, September 25—An appalling naval disaster attended with enormous loss of life occurred at daylight this morning when the battleship Liberte blew up in this harbor.

The latest estimate this afternoon places the number of missing from the Liberte at over 300. To these must be added many men from the other ships who were killed.

Several small boats which had gone from the other warships to the aid of the Liberte sank when the final explosion occurred.

Twenty men were killed and fifty injured on board the Democratie, and there were fatalities on the Verite and Republique. The latter was damaged and was obliged to dock hastily.

Four Successive Explosions.

The first alarm of fire was sounded sortly after 5 a.m. This was followed by four successive explosions of increasing intensity as the fire neared the powder magazines, when at 5:35 a deafening explosion literally tore the great warship to pieces and sent her to the bottom, a mass of twisted wreckage.

Armorplate Hurled Against a Cruiser

The force of the explosion was so great that huge fissures were opened in the steel armor and framework of the warship. A piece of armorplate was hurled against the cruiser Republique with great force, damaging her plates. Scores of bodies were hurled high into the air, with huge fragments of framework armor, bursting shells and the suffocating smoke from the exploded magazines.

Men Hurled High Into Air or in Water.

The awful upheaval came as the gray dawn of morning was breaking. On the first explosion the men rushed from their quarters and a hundred or more sought safety in plunging overboard. But the great body of men, officers and crew remained on the ship and were hurled high in the air or in the water as the culminating explosion tore the ship into fragments.

One report says the ship broke in two in the middle as she sank. Another gives a dramatic detail before she took her final plunge, when several of her guns discharged a requiem salute.

The Liberte was anchored in the roadstead, where she has been since the review of the fleet by President Fallieres. The review was on September 4, when the French national executive gazed upon the most powerful fleet that France has ever assembled. Premier Caillaux and his associates in the cabinet, together with many Senators and Deputies were present.

Over 26,000 in Recent Review.

Particular significance is attached to the display, as it was made on the very day that France communicated to Germany the terms upon which the republic offered a settlement of the Moroccan dispute with Germany. Formed in two perfect allignments were eighteen battleships, six of them of the "all big gun" type; nine armored cruisers, twenty-five torpedo boats and torpedo boat destroyers. The fleet was manned by 1,700 officers and 26,907 men.

Following the review the fleet resumed the autumn maneuvers and gun practice. On September 20 the armored cruiser Gloire was engaged in target work when a port gun exploded as a projectile was being inserted in the breech. One gunner was killed and thirteen others injured. Five of the latter subsequently died.

Disaster Came With Little Warning.

Today's disaster came with little warning. The fire was discovered about 5

The Attorney General and Infallible Newspapers.

It is about time to resume confidence in somebody. In Attorney General Wickersham, for instance. He has, to be sure, lost the confidence of several esteemed contemporaries, but he may yet regain it, if he should conduct the Department of Justice in accordance with their always daily and occasionally modest views. There is no telling when he will do so. And there is no telling but that he may very soon do so.

In point of fact, he has not yet shown his hand. And why has he not yet done so? Because esteemed contemporaries have not asked and even demanded he should not? Perish the thought! They never hesitate. They always unlimber their loudest thunders. The restraint exercised by the Attorney General is apparently due to the desire of the Steel Trust and of some other Trusts that they may have time, and a chance, to exhibit their rights and confess their wrongs, to display their resources and to admit their liabilities, to schedule their errors and to avow their desire to rectify them to the Department of Justice. All this in the hope that justice may be tempered with mercy and catastrophe stop just short of chaos.

It is not an unreasonable request. It was granted on the order of the United States Supreme Court to the Standard Oil Trust. That is a notorious malefactor, according to able lawyers, and a munificent benefactor of learning, religion and racial uplift, according to humanitarians, all at the same time. Attorney General Wickersham is inclined to give to other Trusts the chance Captain Scott gave to the coon he had treed, the chance to come down, if only the captain would not shoot. And the Attorney General, in the hope of economizing powder, shot and noise, intimates that he will confer with the Steel Folk and with these other Folk to discover what they may have to say, in advance of the dissolution of their pact or the reorganization of their interests and the conservation of their avails.

When the conference shall have ended, maybe precisely what the infallible papers now say should at once be required will then be not only required but mutually conceded. That would signify either that the infallible papers had been too quick or the Attorney General had been too slow. In either view only the element of time would be involved, and that only a short time. Now time was not only made for slaves, but it is also made for courts and for Attorney Generals. And certain other things are made by courtesy and justice for them, things that may humbly be called assumptions, and which only the precipitate would call presumptions.

An Attorney General is entitled to that; even this Attorney General. He used to have it even in the press. He still has it in the consensus of the bar and in the usage of the courts. We are not aware that he has done aught to forfeit it, and are minded to believe that those who say he has are in error.

Another assumption to be accorded to him involves learning and ability. His office has lost no cases of importance, but has gained every one of them, on account of which gain of them not only the devil is to pay, but a great many dollars into the bargain. The devil, who is an octopus, is paying up, and the dollars are being paid in or being returned to those from whom they were obtained, according to business but not apparently according to law—as adjudicated. The Eagle is convinced that the Department of Justice is entitled to the small limit of time the Attorney General has conceded, that the dissolving or rattled Trusts are entitled to a final conference and that the Attorney General is also entitled to the assumptions or presumptions of character and ability suggested, as well as to the incontrovertible fact of the success of the prosecutions his office has conducted and won.

Remains another consideration: The papers pursuing him say he was interviewed. He says he did not know he was being interviewed and that, had he known he was, he would have expressed himself for publication more guardedly than he did when he thought he was speaking only in a confidence not to be violated. This reduces the matter to the good faith of our contemporaries and to the credulity of the Attorney General. The good faith of contemporaries we would not impugn. The credulity of no Attorney General would we suspect. Every contemporary is dependent on correspondents at long range. That dependence is mostly justified by the facts. In the case of not a few it is necessitated by what may be called prestige. We apprehend that Mr. Wickersham was being interviewed for publication, did presume he was not, and should not have presumed he was not. His incredulity is improvable or at least needs stiffening. Doubtless this experience has stiffened it. The disposition of esteemed contemporaries to stand by their enterprising correspondents at long range needs no stiffening. The difference between the papers and the Attorney General can be accounted for on the basis of temperament and interest without trenching on the sacred domain of enterprise or veracity. And the more than military glee of the long range special correspondent needs elation no more than the lily needs painting or refined gold gilding.

The controversy which we would rather compose than aggravate should disturb the faith of none in the perpetuity of democratic-republican government. It will not perish from the earth, no matter who may be elected or defeated, this fall, or next year. Journalism of all kinds will go on. Government of one party or the other will survive—and wabble. Lawyers will administer the Department of Justice. Presidents will succeed one another whether any other success or not be predicable of them, and even Mr. Wickersham will find in some of the press a support others of the press affect to withhold from him now.

Keep Out.

It is probably true there are some in Wall Street who would like to create the impression that the industrial world is coming to an end. When that sort of thing is attempted there's a reason. What the weak are forced to sacrifice is picked upon by the strong at bargain counter figures, to be sold at fancy prices later on, which is a story almost as old as the thoroughfare itself. Otherwise stated, it is a case of the rich taking from the poor, the rich being operators while the poor are gamblers.

As the expected never happens in Wall Street, predictions concerning it are notoriously hazardous. Still, it is beginning to look as though the game of squeezing out the lambs had reached its limit. There is a point at which the ticker is subjected to control, lest the big become involved in ruin, too, which is to say the law of self-preservation operates. But what never should be forgotten is that the lamb was made to be shorn; also that sooner or later the pitcher will be broken at the well, or not far from it. That's a hint worth taking.

Wise as A Serpent.

For the information of a correspondent the Eagle begs leave to say that it does not know whether Pastor Russell "keeps a yacht," oceangoing or otherwise.

Much can be done with the receipts from Miracle Wheat at $1 a pound, always presuming the supply to be unlimited, meaning thereby not only the wheat, but the purchasers thereof.

With enough of both, a fleet of yachts can be acquired and maintained, but this proves nothing. It doesn't warrant even the inference that Pastor Russell owns a canoe.

Besides, it has been explained that the profits accruing from the sale of the miraculous grain are devoted not to the gratification of expensive tastes but to the promotion of the work in which the pastor is engaged.

More than once the Eagle has been asked for enlightenment as to the precise nature or character of this "work." And more than once it has endeavored to equip itself with information on the subject.

Gently, but firmly, it has been repaised. The more it has asked the less it has discovered. There may be a reason for this. It may be essential to the success of the work that the wisdom of the serpent shall be displayed.

It is.

Won't Be Vetoed by the Mayor.

If the charter is passed in its present form, it is contended that the Mayor's power under the rapid transit act must be determined by the courts.—Albany correspondent of the Times.

And the Mayor is convinced that the courts will determine it in his favor, which they might do. Then, except in the event of one contingency, so called, there would be no more subway development during the present administration. If the Interborough can have its way there will be "something doing." If not, not. But the Albany correspondent had more to say. He declared on what appeared to him to be good authority that, should the Legislature pass the charter in its present form, the Mayor would veto it because the framers of it had not acted in good faith with him, after which statement comes the following:

The Mayor some time ago asked the Corporation Counsel's office to keep a close watch on what was being done to the charter at the secret sessions held in the Hotel Knickerbocker.

It was kept, but so were some of the secrets, and now the Mayor is said to be disgusted. However, there won't be any veto by his honor. The committees know what they are doing, and they are "anxious to please." They have shown this by inserting the clause preserving the Mayor's present powers in rapid transit matters, and, as they know hostility from the Mayor would be fatal, they will not run the risk of provoking it. According to all accounts, action on the charter is scheduled for tomorrow. Whether votes enough to pass it can be coaxed or coerced remains to be seen.

If they can, the Governor will have an opportunity to make a contribution to his record, of which it will be time enough to talk when the Legislature has nailed its flag to the mast of a corporation. That hasn't happened yet.

The Ministers and Marriage.

The Rev. Israel Ainsworth of Revere, Mass., tells the Congregational ministers of Boston that he cannot see why ministers should unite people in marriage. He declares:

This is true, but it is not surprising. The Bible, New Testament as well as Old, was written by Jews; and among the Jews prior to the fourteenth century the presence of the rabbi was not required at a marriage ceremony; though at the nuptial feast, later, he often spoke. From the earliest times, in the history of the Jews, marriage had the sense of the purchase of a woman from her family by a man desiring to have her for a wife. The wife was loved and honored, she managed the home, but she was always "Be'ulah," the owned; and her husband was always "Ba'al," the owner.

Naturally, then, the "shadkan," or marriage broker, or matchmaker, who had no religious standing or function, often arranged the betrothal, which was absolutely binding under Jewish law; and as far as the ceremony was concerned it was entirely in the hands of the two families concerned, until the influence of outside customs came to be felt.

Protestant ministers marry people because the practice of making the marriage contract largely religious was retained in Protestant countries from the custom of the Roman Church. The attitude of that Church is admirably expressed in an article in the Catholic Encyclopedia, written by Professor John A. Ryan of the seminary at St. Paul:

Under the Christian dispensation, marriage is a religious act of the very highest kind, namely, one of the seven sacraments. Although Luther declared that marriage was not a sacrament, but "a worldly thing," all the Protestant sects have continued to regard it as religious, in the sense that it ought normally to be contracted in the presence of a clergyman.

Robert E. Doran.

That branch of the medical profession devoted to the study and treatment of mental disorders sustains a serious loss in the death of Dr. Robert E. Doran, who since May last had been superintendent of the Long Island State Hospital for the Insane at Flatbush. Dr. Doran was born in Albany, in 1870, and was a graduate of the Albany Medical College, where he studied under Dr. Albert Vanderveer, who has long been rated as one of the most eminent surgeons in this State. Had Dr. Doran not turned his attention to the care of the insane the knowledge and experience gathered under Dr. Vanderveer and in a subsequent period of service in the Albany Hospital would have helped him to high rank as a surgeon. Before coming to Flatbush Dr. Doran served as first assistant at the Willard State Hospital, of which Dr. Robert M. Elliott, formerly of Flatbush, is now superintendent, and also as medical inspector for the State Commission in Lunacy. In every field of endeavor Dr. Doran displayed skill and judgment of the highest order, which, together with an inexhaustible energy lasting up to the very moment of his fatal illness made him an invaluable agent of the State in the care of its unfortunate wards. He will be greatly missed.

A Notable Anniversary.

Brooklyn people of all denominations will join in congratulations to the First Reformed Church and its pastor, the Rev. Dr. James M. Farrar, on the celebration of the two hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the church organization. It is the oldest church of any within the limits of the old City of Brooklyn. Of all churches in Brooklyn today it is fifth in point of age, being outranked only by the Old Bushwick Church, now on Conselyea and Humboldt streets, which was established in 1640; by the First Reformed Church of Flatbush, organized in 1654; by the Flatlands Reformed Church, on Kouwenhoven place, organized in 1654, and by the Gravesend Reformed Church on Neck Road, organized in 1655. It is older by sixteen years than the New Utrecht Reformed Church, on Eighteenth avenue, and more than a century older than either St. Ann's Episcopal Church on Clinton street or the Sands Street Memorial Church, now on the corner of Henry and Clark streets.

Cromwell had been dead but a little while and Charles II had sat but a few months on the English throne when this church was founded in the village of Brooklyn. The cavalier colonies in the Old Dominion were just beginning to flourish. Puritan New England was slowly pushing back the forest from its still infant settlements. New Amsterdam was still Dutch, and gave no hint of its future greatness. Measured by Old World standards, the First Reformed Church is still young; measured by the standards of this country, it is venerable indeed. Yet it has none of the characteristics we naturally associate with great age. In all that makes a church vital and effective in the service of God it is rich to a surpassing degree. It has a fine edifice, a large and prosperous congregation, an able and singularly efficient pastor. So far as fallible human foresight can discern, it is destined to an indefinite period of splendid usefulness in a community of which it was and still is one of the foundation stones.

The whirligig of European politics has seldom made a more curious revolution than that which now converts Germany from a positive menace on the issue of Morocco to the most potent factor in the effort to preserve the peace between Italy and Turkey. Germany, more than any other power in Europe, has reason to fear a clash of arms over the Tripoli question.

As a partner with Italy and Austria in the Dreibund Germany must sympathize with the purpose of the former to secure the protection of her citizens in Tripoli and to safeguard other rights that belong to her by virtue of treaties with the Turkish Government. On the other hand, Turkey looks upon Germany as her best friend, and has been prompt to emphasize her regard and good will by valuable railway and commercial grants in Asia Minor. She knows that Turkey, with no navy worth speaking about, would be at an immense disadvantage were war to be waged in Tripoli; and Turkey, also recognizing that fact, undoubtedly looks to Germany to do all that possibly can be done to prevent an unequal conflict. It may also be assumed that Turkey is willing to give a substantial equivalent for German mediation either now or in the immediate future.

It is possible, ominous as the situation appears to be, to settle the dispute without bloodshed. Europe does not want war in Tripoli, with the probability of sympathetic disturbances in other Mohammedan countries in which Europeans have large and growing interests. All eyes are hopefully turned upon Germany, and no questions will be asked as to whether motives were selfish or otherwise if only the peace of the Mediterranean can be preserved.

A Near Libel.

Insurgents are very dissatisfied.—William Randolph Hearst.

No names being mentioned, this is not libelous. Otherwise it would be. As it is, it is an aspersion. What is true of one insurgent, being true of all, it is only necessary to take the case of Battle Bob, Senator from the State of Wisconsin, who is always satisfied. Never has he had the least fault to find with anything he has said, and he has been known to make a speech or two. Also, he is satisfied that never was the right thing done or said by anybody else. As to the minds of other insurgents, they are all in the same frame. If they want any more satisfaction, they should demand it from Mr. Hearst.

Moros Still Do Bloody Work.

The news of an affray with natives, in which Ensign Hovey of the little gunboat Pampanga was killed and three American sailors were badly wounded, comes from Zamboanga, the military headquarters of the Mindanao district in the Philippines. It is unaccompanied by any explanation of the outbreak. Yet every such trouble has an origin, sometimes in wrong on one side, sometimes in wrong on the other, but always in wrong of which somebody is the victim.

Moros, primitive Moros of the Zacan tribe, inhabit the Island of Basilan, off Mindanao, where Ensign Hovey was killed. Basilan has itself about 304 square miles, and its fifty-six dependent islands have fifty square miles more. The population is something like 8,000. The Moros are Mohammedans and always physically brave. They are often moved, however, by religious or semi-religious frenzy to deeds of violence, and are by all odds the hardest problem the United States Government has had to tackle in the Philippines. It was on May 3, 1902, that the first bloody lesson was taught to the Moros on the mainland of Mindanao in the destruction of the Sultan of Bayan's fort, in which affair some two hundred natives were killed. There has been more of bloodshed in dealing with the Moros than in handling any other race.

The task of the Americans in the Mindanao group of islands is not yet an easy one. In swamps filled with boas and crocodiles and giant lizards and scorpions; in a climate not kindly to white men, they are doing their best. Some are bound, like Ensign Hovey, to be martyrs to the bearing of the White Man's Burden.

The Queens Primary Fight.

There have been many indications of fear that the Democratic primary contest in Queens, an old-fashioned Cassidy-Gresser fight, would be characterized by more or less of fraud. A citizen of Jamaica wrote to the Eagle the other day with reference to an alleged ballot-box stuffing scheme, as follows:

Last night one of Cassidy's most prominent supporters, with two men, one of whom is an inspector of elections, at about 10:30 o'clock entered a restaurant at North Washington street, Jamaica, and remained there about one hour, during which the scheme was discussed, which, briefly stated, was as follows: Some of Cassidy's followers, when voting, are to put one or more extra ballots inside the ones they vote, and the inspector is to drop them quickly in the ballot box, notwithstanding protest or nonprotest; and, when the inspectors get a chance, they are to check off as many names as having voted as they know extra ballots have been put in the box.

The Eagle is confident, of course, that the high moral ideals of Mr. Cassidy would be vastly shocked if he knew of any such plan on the part of superservicenble henchmen. Mr. Cassidy has already pledged himself, if he wins the primary, personally to head the ticket for Borough President, if one has to be elected in Mr. Gresser's place. This means that he is willing to give all the voters "a whack at him," as the saying goes; and it is an entirely manly and creditable pledge.

It is commonly reported that both sides believe the Governor will decide to remove Mr. Gresser as Borough President if Mr. Gresser loses the primary fight and not to remove him if he wins. The Governor's delay in deciding the matter that has been before him for several months is the explanation of this belief. In our judgment Governor Dix, as a logical man, has no notion of being affected by the primary results. But the idea that he will be so governed is an element in the bitterness of the struggle in Queens.

We trust that in spite of the bitterness all criminal efforts to swell the vote on either side will be avoided. After-primary prosecutions are always regrettable incidents.

CLARKE FOR JUDGE.

A Correspondent Who Thinks District Attorney Ought to Be Promoted.

Editor The Brooklyn Daily Eagle:

The reported determination of the Democratic leaders to renominate John F. Clarke for District Attorney is at once a compliment and an injustice to that worthy official. Mr. Clarke has served twelve years in his present office and has achieved a record and a reputation unsurpassed, if, indeed, equaled, by any other prosecuting officer. He should go higher. It seems to me that the thing to do is to place Mr. Clarke upon the Supreme Court bench. He is qualified by experience, legal knowledge, industry and integrity for that exalted position. He has that much talked of requirement, namely, "the judicial temperament." In a word, he would be an ideal judge.

Mr. Clarke has been considered in former years in connection with a judicial nomination, but the belief among the nominating powers appeared to be that his leadership of the county ticket was necessary to "pull through" the remainder of the ticket. So he has been retained in the District Attorneyship. If there ever was any real ground for such a belief, certainly none exists today. There is no poverty of proper material among the Democratic lawyers of Brooklyn; it would not be difficult to nominate a man for District Attorney whose selection would be a guarantee of good faith by the party and an assurance that the high standard of administration would be continued by Mr. Clarke's successor. For I take it that the county ticket will be one which will commend the support of Democratic and independent voters. Surely the opportunity for success all along the line is so apparent that the leaders can hardly fail of sagacity to take advantage of it.

CHALLENGE OF THE CHURCH.

The challenge of the Church is the same as the challenge of steam and electricity and gravitation: Use me! It is a great power waiting to be developed, says Paul Moore Strayer, in Harper's Weekly. It is an immense organization that needs only to be harnessed to its task. It is a mighty institution that needs "promoting." It is a vast army that halts only for a plan of battle. And it challenges its laymen to adapt it to the need of the world of today and bring it to its highest efficiency. The clergy have tried it alone long enough. They are few among so many, and they are only such men as the others. Now the challenge is to the laymen. The men who have successfully organized and promoted other institutions must bring their special genius to bear up this institution. You cannot rally an army without a plan of battle, but with a campaign that promises results, and a readapted message, and a battlecry that rings true, there will be a movement in the Church of today which in enthusiasm and devotion will match the Crusades.

To promote the Church, to make it an effective implement for the doing of its work, and particularly to find an up-to-date method of propaganda by means of which the Christian message may be delivered to those who are now outside the direct influence of the Church—this is a task in which everyone who loves righteousness should be interested. For the basis on which politics is to be reformed and business socialized is public morality, and the Church is responsible for the morals of the people.

We are rapidly coming into agreement that the religious task of today is the task of economic justice and social equity. This is true of those within and without the Church. Some of those who have profited by the maladjustment are now open-eyed as to the moral issues involved. All the forces and movements making for social righteousness are leading irresistibly to the way of Jesus, which is the way of brotherhood. And the center about which all may unite and through which all may operate is the Church, against which the gates of death cannot prevail so long as it is the organized spirit of Christ.

A CLERICAL HUMORIST.

Among the clerical humorists of Ireland, says The San Francisco Argonaut, Father James Healy stands out prominently. On one occasion when a pretty child was proudly shown him by her mother he remarked:

"My dear child, you'll have a blue look-out as long as you live!"

The mother's face at first clouded, but immediately after brightened up when she saw the smile on Father Healy's face, for the child had blue eyes.

Once Father Healy was asked how he would describe a Scotsman, and in answer, assuming as he spoke the Scot's accent, said:

"Scot is a mon who keeps the Sawbath and iverything else that he can git."

PULLMAN'S LITTLE JOKE.

[From the Chicago Evening Post.]

S. S. Beman, the architect, had the most to do with the building of the town of Pullman, although acting on certain suggestions from the founder of the colony.

When plans had been completed and the perfunctory work of execution was under way the architect said to the car company chief:

"Now that we are well started, Mr. Pullman, I want to ask you if you have given any thought to naming the town."

"A great deal," said Mr. Pullman. "I think it is only fair that you should have recognition, and I have decided upon a composite name that will immortalize you and myself at the same time. We will do this by taking the first syllable of my name and the last syllable of yours."

SOCIAL WAR IMPENDING

Between the Chronicler and the Man Who Makes Snapshots?

It was not until instantaneous photography came to the aid of American civilization that we really learned how the other half lives, says an editorial in the Boston Evening Transcript. Carefully posed portraits of man, maid or matron, taken by the professional photographer in his studio, are well enough in the absence of more intimate and less studied social exhibits, but with instantaneous photography came what looked like the cold truth.

Some of these later revelations, it must be confessed, are a little disconcerting and even disillusioning. When the society reporter assured us forty times that "that charming ingenue, Miss Constance Courtright Auldrich, second daughter of Mrs. Percy Standish Auldrich, nee Binks, is a fawn-like, lissome creature, with a piquant, slightly retrousse nose, 'tip-tilted like the petal of a flower,' and willful, golden-brown hair that rebelliously blows about her pearly brows and threatens to eclipse the sparkle of her limpidly blue eyes," it is disturbing to find on the front page of a morning newspaper an instantaneous photograph of the young lady in the act of gnawing a sandwich at a Newport picnic, a photograph that seems to reveal a pudgy, pug-nosed face and a figure that might well pass for that of a fat woman in her fifties.

Again, it is painfully confusing to have displayed before us in a two-column cut a gawky and undistinguished male figure descending from a high stoop beside a nondescript creature with the ungraceful step of her who wars with the inhibitions of the hoble skirt, and to find the distressful caricature labeled "Mr. Rhinelander Van Astorbilt of New York and Newport, and the celebrated beauty, Miss Dorothy Candle Boylstonplace, whom he will wed next month at Dreary Crossing."

It is whispered that there is war between the society reporter and the instantaneous photographer. The former has the duty of representing America's social best as all that is chic, piquant, distinguished, graceful and lovely; but along comes the instantaneous photographer with his pitiless lens and gives the lie to everything that the society reporter has written. What shall the mere outsider think? Is the society reporter the only faithful chronicler of the envied upper classes and is the instantaneous photographer merely a revolutionist in disguise, determined to destroy the delightful illusions long cherished by the society column, and to convince the proletariat that their social betters are mere hideous caricatures of the human face and figure?

APPRECIATION.

Editor The Brooklyn Daily Eagle:

Allow me to congratulate you for your very coherent and sensible editorial under the caption of "The Verdict in Canada," in a recent issue of The Eagle. In comparison with the slapdash, one-sided, uneven comments of the other metropolitan dailies it stands out as a classic.

As an unsophisticated, hyphenated American who, on either side of the hyphen, can always discern two flags symbolic of all that stands for "the parliament of men, the federation of the world," I should like to see practiced the old-time family enjoinder, "Now be a little gentleman and give your younger brother the bigger half of the apple." Concessions may, but coercion never, can win back Canada to the conditions of twenty-five years ago, when, hat in hand, she, with her reciprocity proposition, was kicked downstairs at the Capital at Washington.

A SCOTCH-AMERICAN.

Brooklyn, September 24, 1911.

MELLEN J. MORGAN'S MAN.

"Mellen wears Morgan's collar," said a keen-visioned Bostonian one night last winter in an exclusive club in the Bay State town, speaking of President Charles Mellen of the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad.

Mellen never denies. He comes straight to the point—without evasion. He answered the thrust with a personal anecdote. He told how he sat in the old offices at New Haven and answered a long-distance telephone call.

"Mr. Mellen, this is Mr. Morgan," said the voice. "Will you go to St. Paul for me, and leave the details in my hands?"

Mellen agreed. He went to St. Paul and took a desk in the offices of the Northern Pacific there. For more than two months he did not know his position or his salary. He simply worked—eighteen hours out of twenty-four. He worked incessantly. Work is the gospel of Mellen's life. He took the Northern Pacific, which had just entered the rebuilding era under E. W. Winter, and made it a new line. Winter had not liked the Hill method of glorifying Great Northern. When Mellen succeeded as president of Northern Pacific he gritted his teeth, but he accepted the situation. And after he had worked at the disagreeable task for a term of years, Morgan—his taskmaster—permitted him to come East, to the New England of his friends and relatives, and begin the Mellenizing of what is today perhaps the richest traffic field of the entire world. Only the thickly congested sections of Great Britain can compare with it.

"And do you know," Mellen, says the report, calmly continued there, by the fireside of that Boston club, "that if Mr. Morgan were to order me tomorrow to China or Siberia in his interests I would pack up and go—much as I love the old town of New Haven and all New England."—Edward Hungerford, in Success Magazine.

AN ARMY TRIUMPH.

It cost a big lot of money—probably several millions of dollars—to mobilize the American troops now encamped in Texas, but results have already shown that it was well spent. And for this one reason, if not for others, the movement has enabled medical science to demonstrate that typhoid fever, the deadliest foe of armies in the field, is a preventable disease. Altogether something like 17,000 troops were sent to Texas, all of whom were inoculated with typhoid serum. As additional safeguards the most rigid hygienic and sanitary regulations that the Medical Corps could devise were strictly enforced. Result, only one case of typhoid fever has occurred in that entire army. Compare this showing with what happened to the troops—perhaps 150,000 in all—assembled in the Southern States during the Spanish war. Among those forces there were 28,000 cases of typhoid. The plain truth is that the army in Texas has achieved a magnificent victory—a bloodless one, it is true, but splendid in its gain for humanity.—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

HUMOR OVER THE BORDER.

[From the Boston Transcript.]

The future relations of the United States and Canada may present humorous aspects, on the Canadian side. The annexation bogey may be a good stage property to the Conservatives, to be worked on occasions when their constituents seem but languidly interested in their policy. The British lion may roar in the Canadian woods; the British fleet may be summoned over—it will not come; there may be hints from Ottawa that the British bayonet has not lost all its efficiency. We shall be amused; business between the two countries will go on as usual, the peoples of both saying of the Tory fulminations, "That is only the politicians' way!" Old-fashioned Englishmen, reading the Times in London, will ask, "What are the Colonials fussing about now?" and the Toronto Mail and Empire will ask those recreant Britons if they never heard of Chateauguay? To which the answer may be "Chateauguay? No. Who was he?" The gayety of the border is by no means eclipsed by the failure of reciprocity.

WITH PRESIDENT TAFT.

Hard Work That Newspaper Men Do on His Trip.

A half-dozen breathless newspaper correspondents descending upon a wayside telegraph station with reams of "copy" has produced consternation many times in the course of the President's trips, says the Philadelphia Record. The telegraph companies resort to great expense and elaborate preparations to prevent congestion or delay either of official Government business or newspaper reports. Extra operators are in many cases sent ahead of the President's party, to help out at small stations where the President is scheduled to speak; and capable managers of the telegraph companies keep up with the trains and prevent trouble.

Those who travel with him regard President Taft as a wonderful traveler. He never gets "peevish" or upset, whatever turn events may take.

He may be routed out of bed at 6 o'clock by shouts from a crowd at some small station.

"If you don't come out we won't vote for you," yells a lusty-lunged one.

"Hurrah for Bryan," calls another.

"Make him come out," demand the leaders of the crowd.

Time and again the President has slipped a raincoat or overcoat over his pajamas, and appeared with rumpled hair on the back platform to express an early-morning greeting to a country town. He figures that a President only travels that way once in two or three years, and the people have a right to demand a word from him.

When Secretary Wilson takes care of all official business en route, Major "Archie" Butt relieves the President of worry over social obligations or forms. Major Butt is an eminently capable official. He was President Roosevelt's military aid; he has a valuable record as an officer in the Philippines; and he has been one of President's Taft's closest friends and aids.

There is one other important official of the presidential tour who never appears at all. He is Chief Clerk Rudolph Forster, who runs things in Washington when the President is away; keeps the chancls open to the President's train; stops all unimportant matter before it reaches Taft, and handles the strings that touch the special car wherever it may be. Chief Clerk Forster was assistant also to President Roosevelt, and is another of the invaluable aids of the Taft administration without whom the machinery of the White House would speedily clog and tangle.

Reciprocity

To Uncle Sam, a ripened beau,
Canada,
There's pain in your coquettish "No,"
Canada;
Well-bred is he, with lots of dough;
John Bull, your papa, ought to know;
And then, bold Sam, he loves you so;
Canada, My Canada!

A maiden's "No" may turn to "Yes,"
Canada,
He'll come again, as you may guess,
Canada;
For checks, in courting, as in chess,
Sometimes mean more, and sometimes less;
And faithful wooers Time will bless,
Canada, my Canada!

MIRACLE WHEAT HAS AN ALASKAN COUSIN

Brought $20 a Bushel Until Petulant Government Got Out Fraud Stamp.

FARMER ADAMS' BONANZA.

Eagle Bureau,
608 Fourteenth Street.

Washington, September 26—This is the sad story of a little grain of wheat. No, that's wrong. Not a little grain—a whopping big grain—a whole head of whopping big grains. To quote Holmes' Dr. Watson, it was "simply marvellous." Not as marvelous, perhaps, as Pastor Russell's Miracle wheat, because that sells for $60 a bushel, whereas the wheat of this tale brought only $20, and was, therefore, only one-third as marvelous. But it was wheat with a big W; wheat that was going to revolutionize husbandry, make a multi-millionaire out of the humble farmer and fill the grain elevators of the world until they groaned in agony and finally burst, scattering their golden bounty to the four winds and feeding the wide, wide world forever and ever. All these benevolent things might it have done had not the United States Government, in a moment of petulence, stamped "Fraud" in big letters all over the rosy dawn of a new agricultural era and turned a Utopian future into a pathetic past.

This was "Alaska Wheat"—near relative of the "Seven Headed Wonder," "Egyptian Mummy" and other wheats of high degree, which perform all kinds of feats except when the experts of the Agricultural Department come to watch, in which case they seem to become victims of stage fright and are unable to give any better account of themselves than the plain farm varieties that go into our daily bread. Alaska wheat had fine prospects until the government stepped in. Its discoverer and promoter is said to have reaped several thousand dollars from it, at the rate of $20 per bushel. His tale had a pleasing beginning in mystery. His head of wheat came to him out of the great and little known Northland, where everything is big—the nuggets of gold, the beds of coal, the trees of the forests, the Kadiak bears and the mountain that was not climbed by "Doc" Cook.

Mysterious Stranger Gives Marvelous Wheat to Farmer Adams of Idaho.

Abram Adams, farmer, of Julietta, Ida., is the hero. Farmer Adams had been raising wheat off and on for years down home, but when he met a mysterious stranger while returning from a trip to British Columbia, and when that stranger handed him a single head of wheat, his eyes grew big with wonder and admiration. "I just picked it up in Alaska," said the stranger. The year was 1904, a memorable one for Farmer Adams, for he carefully carried that head of wheat back to Idaho, put it in the earth in the fall of the year and then paced up and down restlessly until the springtime should read the riddle for him.

The history of that mysterious head of what is told in the records of the Postoffice Department, in that particular bureau which is devoted to detecting fraudulent users of the mails. In the year 1908 articles began to appear in newspapers here and there, and that in at least one widely circulated weekly, from the pen of Oscar F. Day, concerning a "marvelous" wheat discovered by Farmer Adams. Two hundred and twenty-two and a half bushels to the acre was its record! Agricultural folks who read these articles wrote by next mail to Farmer Adams, asking how about it. In return they received printed circulars, with halftone engravings and big type and the word "Alaska," with an exclamation point after it, and the information that a limited supply of this prodigy of nature could be obtained from the Adams-Hobe Seed Grain Company, price $20 per bushel. It was the "cereal marvel of the world," to quote from this Idaho farmer's literature. According to his tale, he had devoted a lot of time to perfecting this wheat. Afterward he admitted to the Government that he had not, but had simply planted the single head received from the mysterious stranger in British Columbia.

Now, what happened to that head of wheat was this, according to the circular: It harvested seven pounds in 1905. Farmer Adams treasured that seven pounds until the spring of 1906. Then back to the soil it went. Presto! In the fall of 1906 he reaped 1,545 pounds. Step up, gentlemen! This is the marvel of the age. Only a few left, etc., etc.! into the earth (always according to the circular) went that 1,545 pounds of cereal marvel, so that the year 1907 yielded 53,000 pounds. Not quite such a good record, gentlemen, we admit. But think of the hailstorms we had. Besides 53,000 pounds at $20 a bushel was a pretty good little nucleus for a mail-order business.

By this time Farmer Adams' wheat was attracting not only bucolic, but scientific attention. The Department of Agriculture, the Ohio Agricultural Station, the Colorado Agricultural College and Professor Elliott of Washington State College all addressed themselves to the American farmer on the subject. Unfortunately they all said it was a fraud. On September 28, 1908, the Agricultural Department was unkind enough to write to the Postoffice Department:

"This wheat is an ordinary variety, grown in numerous places in mountain valleys, and is of low grade for flour and is only an ordinary yielder."

Post Office Department Takes a Hand

So the Postoffice Department sleuths investigated. They found that the Adams-Hobe concern was owned by Farmer Adams and his son-in-law, O. K. Hobe—who was perfectly willing to put his O. K. on Alaska wheat. The first two crops, it also appeared, had been planted in Farmer Adams' garden, where the soil was very fertile and drilled thin. For the two years the wheat had been sown in ordinary fields the yield had been no better than that of other varieties, and in some places not so good. Farmer Adams admitted in an affidavit that when the wheat was sown outside of his magic little garden it yielded from 25 to 30 bushels per acre—not 222½. It also developed that his circulars had been prepared by Mr. Day, who had written the newspaper and magazine articles, and that the Adams-Hobe Company was doing its mail order business with the East and South; practically none in the West.

On November 25, 1908, the Postoffice Department told the postmaster at Julietta to hold up any more mail that might come for Farmer Adams' concern, and then notified the farmer that it was from Missouri and would have to be shown a few things about the cereal marvel before he could get his letters. Farmer Adams came to Washington in a hurry and began to admit things. He admitted that his wheat, planted under ordinary farm conditions, yielded only about thirty bushels per acre, and that it was "not what was hoped for." He admitted that the claim of 222½ bushels per acre in "large tracts" was not true, and that the only large yield was the crop of 1908. But to back up his claims for Alaska wheat he brought down from Brookline, Mass., F. M. Slagle, who averred that he had knowledge of wheat, and believed that the Alaska grain would be a great yielder; better than other varieties.

Experts Find Nothing Marvelous in Alaska Wheat.

They sent Adams and Slagle over to the Bureau of Plant Industry, in Tama, Jim Wilson's department, to show Dr. Galloway and his experts what the cereal marvel could do. Now, it takes a mighty industrious plant to startle the Plant Industry Bureau, which on January 20, 1909, advised the Postoffice Department that there was no evidence to show that Alaska wheat was anything but the well-known Seven-Headed Egyptian, or Mummy, wheat, already cultivated in a small way in the Northwest. It appeared to be analagous to Little Club in yielding qualities, which at best is ranked about half way between the best and the poorest of milling wheats. Farmer Adams was told that if he could give Alaska wheat its right name, state that it was to be ranked with Little Club, both in quality, average yield and breadmaking properties, the department would have no objection to his selling it.

On February 25, Adams made an affidavit to the Postoffice Department, in which he agreed to allow the mail that had accumulated at Julietta to be confiscated, promised to destroy the circulars that he had on hand and also promised that if any new ones should be issued they should be in accordance with the views of the Agricultural Department.

Bobs Up Again at Rate of 206 Bushels to the Acre.

But Alaska wheat was not to be thus summarily cheated of its bright future—as a mail order proposition. On April 5 following, the Agricultural Department tipped off the Postoffice Department that a circular was going out over the name of the Alaska Wheat Seed Grain Company, of Julietta, Idaho, and St. Paul, Minn. It was the same old friend—Alaska wheat, now running as high as 206 bushels to the acre in Idaho, and selling, gentlemen, for the small sum of $20 per bushel. E. H. Hobe, brother to son-in-law O. K. Hobe, was running the St. Paul office. It was a perfectly good circular, with pictures and promises and injunctions like this:

DON'T WASTE TIME.

30,000,000 of Acres are Waiting for Alaska Wheat Seed.

Well, the Post Office Department acted sort of short and suddenlike. On April 19, 1909, it clapped a fraud order on the company and put an end to the mail business. The 30,000,000 acres are still waiting. Not only was it a fraud, declared Assistant Attorney General R. P. Goodwin, but it was a violation of promises made to the department, because the company had submitted one innocuous circular to the Government authorities and then issued an entirely different one to the public. Mr. Goodwin decided that the scheme could be treated "only as a deliberate and intentional scheme to defraud a credulous public."

So ends the story of Farmer Adams and the head of wheat presented to him by the mysterious stranger from British Columbia. In one of his circulars Farmer Adams admitted that he had heard of such a thing as Miracle Wheat, and Seven Headed Wonder, and Egyptian Mummy, but he did not claim to know anything about them. All he knew was Alaska wheat. Simple arithmetic shows that Miracle Wheat must be three times as good as Alaska wheat, because it costs three times as much. Just what the Post Office Department may or may not do to Miracle Wheat its hard hearted officials will not say. But over in the Bureau of Plant Industry even the stenographers giggle when you ask about it.

NEW TESTS FOR GUNNERS.

Life Made More Strenuous for Uncle Sam's Tars.

With various departures in the matter of modern battleship construction, it is the intention of the naval officials at Washington to follow out a new policy as regards target practice and marines manning the battleships that have recently returned from target practice have found new standards of marksmanship exacted.

According to the new standard, the range will be longer and the targets somewhat different. The tests of gunpointers will be more individual and considerations such as variable weather conditions, will be regarded with more significance than heretofore.

The greatest satisfaction is felt over the outcome of the target practice of the recently returned battleships, especially of the Delaware and Michigan.

TO ENTERTAIN MEN'S LEAGUE.

Folks who live up in the Stuyvesant section of the town are making up a great big party for a globe trotting trip during the present winter. The excursion is under the management of the Men's League of the Sumner Avenue Baptist Church, and it will start, rain or shine, from the church parlors at 8:15 o'clock tomorrow evening. The courier in charge of the party is Dr. Norman P. Hefley, and anyone who knows Dr. Hefley knows that there is not a place all the way around the world which is not just as familiar to him as a Brooklyn street corner. Dr. Hefley will be accompanied by his faithful stereopticon and his trusted moving picture machine.

The trip is to be made in relays and because of Dr. Hefley's stereopticon and moving picture machine those who take it will not have to go outside the confines of the auditorium of the Sumner Avenue Church.

THE REAL VICTIMS!

"BOUGHT AND PAID FOR" SEASON'S STRONGEST PLAY

George Broadhurst's New Drama at Playhouse Achieves an Unqualified Success.

CHAS. RICHMAN IS SUPERB,

And Julia Deane, Frank Craven and Marie Nordstrom Divide Honors. Play Human and Interesting.

William A. Brady (Ltd.) presents "Bought and Paid For," a play in four acts, by George Broadhurst:

Robert Stafford	Charles Richman
James Gilley	Frank Craven
Oku	Allen Atwell
Louis	Edgar Hill
Virginia Blaine	Julia Dean
Fanny Blaine	Marie Nordstrom
Josephine	Dorothy Davies

What proved to be without question the most virile and strongest play of the present dramatic season was produced at William A. Brady's The Playhouse last evening, when George Broadhurst's new drama "Bought and Paid For," was shown for the first time in New York. In these days in which cheap and tawdry musical comedy, exaggerated and florid melodrama and other theatrical fare unworthy of the name predominate it is a cause for genuine gratification to be able to give unreserved praised to so fine a work as this latest effort of Mr. Broadhurst.

It is, furthermore, an additional cause for gratification to be able to witness an able and conscientious actor in a character worthy of his abilities; and this was accomplished last evening in the role given to Charles Richman, who, not since the days of his appearances with Margaret Anglin in "Mrs. Dane's Defense," at the Empire Theater, has been seen to such advantage. The fear of producers, as was expressed in The Eagle last Sunday, that new productions are not always sure of their just due was, in a way, referred to by Mr. Broadhurst in a curtain speech he was impelled to make at the end of the third act and when he said that the future alone would tell how much the public really liked the new play.

If that part of the public that appreciates the development of a plot with vigor, naturalness, and strength; that believes the theater has some more definite purpose than to present the frivolous and the inconsequential; and that recognizes acting of a uniformly high order, is not blind to its opportunities, "Bought and Paid For" will remain in New York for many months to come. From this, however, it should not be understood that the play is either dull or deep. It unfolds a story of modern life, which, though it carries with it a powerful preachment against over indulgence in strong drink, is relieved with comedy that is natural and spontaneous and with dialogue that is uncommonly entertaining. The characters are widely contrasted, truthful and human and the one scene in the drama that, it must be confessed, is disagreeable, is absolutely essential to the development of the plot and to the purpose of the dramatist.

How a man of high attainments, unquestioned generosity and warm-heartedness may, by a few drinks too much, be turned into a cruel, bestial and revolting character is set forth with frankness, to be sure, but with such fine skill upon the part of Mr. Richman as to prove one of the most consummate achievements that the stage has shown in many a long day.

Robert Stafford, financier and multi-millionaire, is the character assumed by Mr. Richman. The man, a master in the world of finance, is attracted to Virginia Blaine, a girl of good education and unusual refinement of character, who, through adversity, is employed as a telephone girl in a large hotel. Stafford finally asks Virginia to marry him. The girl, though realizing that she does not, at the time, love Stafford as she feels a woman should love the man she is to marry, nevertheless consents.

Two years of married life find her genuinely in love with her husband and he with her, but the great blot on her happiness is Stafford's frequent over-indulgence, at which times he is turned into a brute. On one of these occasions, that forms the incident of the second act, Stafford, inflamed with passion and maudlin with the liquor he has taken, tells his wife, when she repulses him, that she has been "bought and paid for" with the money and gifts he has lavished upon her. Virginia flies to her own room but Stafford breaks in the panel of the door and gains admittance.

The next morning Stafford is, of course, remorseful and repentant, but he has hurt the sensibilities of his wife and she decides that the accusation he made in his drunken state, is virtually the truth. Virginia tells him that to retain her self-respect and to prevent the repetition of such a scene as occurred the night previous, there is but one course open to her. Either Stafford must give his promise never to drink again or she will leave him. The husband pleads with her against the ultimatum she presents, and tells her that as the head of the house he cannot be forced into making such a promise as she insists upon. Accordingly, true to her conviction, the girl leaves the luxury with which she is surrounded and starts out once more to earn her own living.

That she will never return to him unless he comes for her is the wife's final word as she passes from her husband's roof and that he will never capitulate unless she sends for him is Stafford's final word. The girl goes to the home of her sister, whose husband has formerly been employed by Stafford at a fat salary, but, who, when the final act opens, is once more a shipping clerk at a paltry wage. She obtains employment in a big store and struggles bravely to keep up. Her brother-in-law, not at all in love with the transition from ease to poverty, and knowing that Stafford is still deeply in love with his wife, but that each is too proud to give in to the other, conceives the idea of informing Stafford that Virginia wants him to come for her. Stafford wastes no time in reaching the little flat and Virginia rushes into his arms proud in her belief, which she conveys to him, that he has come for her unasked. Stafford allows her to think this until her sister finally blurts out the truth, whereupon he tells Virginia that as she has not violated her principles and has not summoned him, and as he has come and is willing to promise anything that will insure their future happiness, she has no reason not to return to his home. In this way the curtain is brought down upon an end that is unquestionably happy, but that does not sacrifice the preachment of the drama or its logic.

"Bought and Paid For" is by far the finest effort of Mr. Broadhurst. The story is developed in a manner that holds the interest from the rise of the curtain in the first act. The characters of the sister of Virginia, Fanny, and of her husband, James Gilley, are rich in humor and the dialogue between these characters and the others is as entertaining as has been offered in any recent play. Indeed the play is a deft mingling of humor, pathos and sentiment, in which the strong thread of narative is consistently and consecutively unfolded without waste of words or incident.

Charles Richman has seldom, if ever, given a finer portrayal than that of the husband and his drunken scene is acted with remarkable directness, force and tempestuosity while in the more pleasing scenes of the play the dignity, importance and success of the man, no less than his warm-heartedness and genuine affection for the wife, are each emphasized with unusual distinction and polish of demeanor and sincerity of style.

No less successful than Mr. Richman was Julia Deane as the wife. Miss Deane, in addition to making an uncommonly attractive figure, brought out the innate refinement of the woman, the strong sense of conviction and honor held by her and the tender love and sympathy she feels for her husband's weakness of character. Her emotionalism was never over done and her transition to and from the spheres of poverty to luxury was accomplished with the simplicity that is the true indication of art. Frank Craven achieved a striking personal success as the brother-in-law, James Gillies, a $14-a-week clerk, who is filled with an undue sense of his own importance and an amazing assurance. Mr. Craven acted the role with a fine appreciation of its humorous possibilities and with perfect naturalness. This was also true, in equal measure, of Marie Nordstrom as the sister. The Japanese butler of Allen Atwell and the French maid of Dorothy Davies were, in their way, equally as perfect characterizations as the others. The staking was uncommonly tasteful and complete.

All in all there was nothing lacking in either play or production to make it easily the most consequential which the present season has yet shown. It reflects uncommon credit upon playwright, producer and players and should, if keen enjoyment and appreciation of its first night audience count for aught, be destined to achieve an unusual and prolonged success.

THEATER TOPICS.

Liebler & Co. made a number of announcements yesterday concerning their immediate plans for New York. Mme. Simone, it has been decided, will open her season in "The Thief" at Daly's Theater, October 16, instead of October 9, as previously announced. This will give her an extra week of preparation, which she feels she needs before opening in English in a play which heretofore she has always acted in French. So that there may be no conflict of opening dates Magaret Anglin's season in the A. E. W. Mason comedy, "Green Stockings" will begin at the Thirty-ninth Street Theater next Monday, and Gertrude Elliott will start her New York season at her sister's theater, the Maxine Elliott, in Joseph Medill Patterson's "Rebellion" on Tuesday.

May Irwin has taken up her residence in New York and will meet on Monday Miss Crimmins, who has written a new comedy, "Mrs. Tompkins," for her immediate use. Rehearsals of "The Garden of Allah" will begin on the stage of the Century next Monday. At present Mary Mannering, Eben Plympton and Arthur Lewis are rehearsing on the roof, under the direction of Hugh Ford, with the author, Robert Hichens, in daily attendance. Next week, with the stage set, it is expected rehearsals will proceed much more speedily.

Miss Billie Burke will begin her annual engagement at the Lyceum Theater on Monday, October 9, in her new play, "The Runaway." Her new leading man this season is Aubrey Smith. Early in the spring Miss Burke will abandon her American season to avail herself of an opportunity to appear in Paris in a new play lately completed by Messrs. de Caillavet and de Flers, the authors of "Love Watches." In this piece, which is to be produced at the Gymnase Theater, Miss Burke, who is expert in French conversation because of her childhood and girlhood spent in Paris, will play the part of an American girl who speaks French with a slight American accent.

The four-act play, "A Butterfly on the Wheel," will be placed in rehearsal by Charles Frohman next Monday. Miss Marie Doro will appear in the chief part. "A Butterfly on the Wheel" will be acted first at Atlantic City, in October, after which it will come to New York.

The coming of Lew Fields' Company presenting "The Hen Pecks," at the Shubert Theater next week will be awaited with interest by many playgoers. Supporting Mr. Fields, who appears in this borough for the first time in two years are such well-known players as Blossom Seeley, Elizabeth Brice, Jessie Busley, Louise Carver, Rosalie Ceballos, Irene Castle, Marjorie Blythe, Ethel Wheeler, Frances Ross, Grace Palmer and Charles Mitchell, Charles King, Vernon Castle, Joe Kane, Thomas Murray, Hilarion Ceballos, Frank Whitman and Mr. and Mrs. Sam Watson.

Mayor Gaynor has been invited to attend the opening performance of "Naughty Marietta" at the Montauk Theater next Monday evening, October 2. "Naughty Marietta" is the comic opera by Victor Herbert and Rida Johnson Young in which Oscar Hammerstein presented his grand opera star, Mlle. Emma Trentini, last season at the New York Theater. The production will be presented in Brooklyn intact as it was produced in Manhattan. Lillian Russell will attend the opening performance at the Montauk to witness her sister's, Suzanne Westford's initial performance in the role of Lizette, in which part she succeeded Kate Elinore.

DETERIORATION OF POWDER

American Naval Officials Do Not Believe It Caused Liberte Disaster—Magazine Inspection.

Eagle Bureau,
608 Fourteenth Street.

Washington, September 27—American naval officers are not inclined to place much credence in the theory that the blowing up of the French battleship Liberte was due to decomposition or chemical changes in the powder stored in her magazines, principally for the reason that repeated experiments in powder decomposition by the department here have uniformly failed to produce explosions or even ignition.

These officers are intensely interested in what an investigation of the French disaster may bring forth, but they do not expect that it will or can be established that powder deterioration had anything to do with it. The smokeless powder used in the French and German navies is, in its essentials, similar to our own. That used in the British Navy is of an entirely different type.

Magazine protection and inspection in the American Navy is subject to rigid rules. Outside of the case of the Maine in Havana harbor there never has been a magazine explosion in a modern warship; and the Maine case is pretty generally admitted to have been due to a cause that originated outside the magazine itself.

"We have a thorough and constant system of magazine inspection," said Rear Admiral R. F. Nicholson today. Admiral Nicholson is acting Secretary of the Navy. "A daily temperature record is kept and litmus paper is used to determine whether any fumes or gases are given off by the powder stored in the ships. In addition, our modern ships have cooling plants by which the temperature of a magazine may be kept at the proper point in hot weather. Uniformity of temperature is desirable, not so much on the ground of safety, but for the preservation of the powder. The flooding of a magazine, if it becomes necessary, may be accomplished by the operation of a lever two decks above. It is not necessary to go to the magazine itself. The operation is a simple one and may be done in a few seconds. I should imagine that all the precautions which we take are also exercised in the French Navy and other navies."

The word magazine aboard a modern battleship is, perhaps, misunderstood. The dreadnought of today contains many magazines, and it should not be imagined that all of her powder is stored in one place. For her main battery there may be anywhere from sixteen to twenty magazines; for her smaller batteries a dozen. They are arranged so as to serve with the greatest possible dispatch the guns mounted in various parts of the ship.

Naval Constructor R. H. Robinson, who worked continuously on the building of the Connecticut at the Brooklyn Navy Yard and who is now stationed at the department here, says that magazine construction is not regarded as one of the intricate problems in modern warship building.

"Our magazines are all constructed so that they may be flooded, if necessary, very quickly," he said. "They are located below the water line, some of them at lower points than others. Until five or six years ago we had a system of flooding by allowing a natural flow of sea water to enter them through a pipe. This was deemed to be too slow, however, to meet possible emergencies. Water admitted through a pipe in one corner of the room might take considerable time to rise to a point where it was needed. So we have installed a sprinkling system, operated by pumps. By this means, water is admitted from overhead and evenly distributed all over the magazine. It is a simple operation. The magazines are cork lined, to prevent the transmission of heat. Magazine construction is one of the comparatively simple features of a battleship."

The ordnance experts of the Navy Department take little stock in the idea that deterioration of powder causes explosion. Many experiments have been made with the smokeless powder now used in our navy. It has been allowed to deteriorate naturaly and deterioration has been artificially hastened, but none of these experiments has produced an explosion. Kept under ideal conditions, the Navy powder in present use ought to last for twenty years after its manufacture. Dampness, heat or other unfavorable conditions will, however, cause much earlier deterioration. When powder aboard a ship is found to have degenerated, it is at once removed; but that is more because of its loss of ballistic qualities than because of any danger of its explosiveness. By ballistic qualities is meant the powder and efficiency of the powder.

Heat will deteriorate our smokeless powder, if constanly applied, but no heat ever encountered in one of our warship magazines has been known to explode it. Deterioration itself causes heat, but acceleration of that process by artificial means has never produced sufficient heat to ignite the powder. The highest magazine temperatures recorded in American ships have been found in small craft like torpedo boats or destroyers in the tropics, where under extreme conditions for a short time the thermometers have registered as high as 95 or 96 in the powder rooms. But from Navy experiments it has been found that even with deteriorated powder at least twice that degree of heat is required to ignite it.

Powder that has deteriorated, however, from whatever cause, is regarded with suspicion and is always removed from a ship. The main reason is because of loss of effectiveness. But apart from that, no implicit faith is placed in it, even though experiments have failed to show that it is actually dangerous. From its very nature, powder is a more or less uncertain substance, and no chances are taken with it. It goes on the black list immediately when it fails below the standard. The Government manufactures some of its own powder and the rest is turned out in private factories, under Government inspection. It is all of a uniform quality.

Ignited with a match in the open, it burns rather slowly, with a bright yellow flame. Confined, it burns with much greater rapidity, so that it practically explodes instantaneously, although not so quickly as the old black and brown powder formerly used. That powder, the kind which was stored in the magazines of the Maine, sent projectiles from the guns with a single kick. Modern smokeless powder exerts a force more like a shove, its gases expanding as it burns, so that the push behind the projectile is exerted for a considerable distance along the bore of the gun, while the shot is traveling toward the muzzle.

The only recorded case of the flooding of a magazine aboard an American naval vessel is that of the battleship Missouri, at the time of an explosion in one of her turrets. One of the magazines was then flooded as a precaution. In no other instance in our navy has this been found necessary. While magazines are frequently cooled, it is for the purpose of preserving the powder in its natural condition, and not from any well established idea that the high temperatures caused by abnormal conditions might result in an explosion.

BROOKS' COMET OBSERVED.

Brooklyn Institute members had last evening their only opportunity to view Brooks' comet from the observatory on the Academy of Music roof, and a goodly number availed themselves of it. The night was so clear that the comet was dimly visible to the naked eye, while with the telescope it appeared about like a nebula with the nucleus slightly toward the west. As is usual, the observation was in charge of Albert J. Brooks, president of the Institute's department of astronomy.

DECLARATION OF WAR ON TURKEY IS ISSUED BY ITALY AND OCCUPATION OF TRIPOLI IS EXPECTED IMMEDIATELY

Ottoman Government in a Conciliatory Reply to Italy Expressed the Hope That the Contemplated Measures for the Seizure of Tripoli and Cyrene Would Not Be Carried Out, and Gave Assurance of a Desire for a Peaceful Settlement—Rome Cabinet Acts Quickly in Its Decision to Proceed With the Military Measures Decided Upon—Report That Turkey Will Not Oppose the Landing of Big Force of Troops. Another Appeal to the Powers by the Porte Expected to Be Fruitless.

Rome, September 29—Italy has declared war on Turkey. The official announcement was made late this afternoon. It declared that the two countries were in a state of war beginning at 2:30 o'clock on the afternoon of Friday, September 29.

This is the hour at which the Italian ultimatum to Turkey expired, and followed a session of the cabinet at which the Turkish reply was considered and found unsatisfactory.

Though every indication pointed to this action by the royal government, there always was a possibility that the good offices of other governments would be successful in avoiding hostilities, and when the final decision of the cabinet was announced the excitement throughout the city was intense.

Throughout the earlier hours of the day the papers had issued special editions announcing that the Italian fleet was moving in plain sight of the coast, and intimating that war might be declared at any moment.

Conciliatory Note by Turkey.

The Minister of Foreign Affairs Signor di San Giuliano, received the Turkish reply from the Turkish Ambassador this morning and immediately went into conference with his associates in the ministry. It is understood that the Ottoman Government completely conceded Italy's economic claims in Tripoli, but evaded a direct answer demanded by this government, which had been set forth in its ultimatum that Turkey must say that she would not resist the proposed occupation of Tripoli and Cyrene. Instead the Porte sent a conciliatory note suggesting further delay. It was known that at the same time Turkey transmitted a note to the powers, in which it is assumed that she represented herself as the injured party and by inference, at least, sought their intervention.

The royal government decided to stand absolutely by their ultimatum of yesterday, and in the absence of the reply called for to declare Italy and Turkey in a state of war from the hour that the ultimatum of twenty-four hours expired.

Orders to Bombard Tripoli Reported.

It is reported that Admiral Aubrey has been instructed to demand the immediate surrender of Tripoli, and if this is refused or delayed, to give the population six hours within which to escape; at the expiration of which time he shall bombard the place until landing is possible.

Orders to Italian Fleet to Act Immediately.

The Minister of Marine is believed to have sent wireless orders to the Italian fleet off Tripoli to act immediately.

Italy will provide for the safety of Italian and all other foreigners in Tripoli and Cyrene, using to this end all the means at her disposal.

The blockade of the entire coast of Tripoli and Cyrene will be undertaken immediately, and a notification of this act will be sent to all neutral powers.

Report That Turkey Will Not Oppose Landing of Italians.

Paris, September 29—A dispatch to the Temps from Constantinople says the Turkish Cabinet, at the conclusion of its session last night, decided that Turkey would not oppose with force an Italian landing at Tripoli, and that this decision was sent to Rome as a reply to the Italian ultimatum.

Another dispatch to the Temps from Rome says that the Turkish charge d'affaires there called on the Italian Foreign Minister, Marquis di San Giuliano, at 9 o'clock this morning and remained with him for fifty minutes. He informed the Foreign Minister that Turkey had decided not to oppose the landing of Italians at Tripoli.

TURKEY CONCILIATORY IN REPLY TO ITALY

Constantinople, September 29—The Turkish reply to the Italian ultimatum demanding assurances that there will be no resistance to the Italian military occupation of Tripoli and Cyrene was communicated to the Italian charge, Signor di Martino, at 6:30 o'clock this morning.

The message was couched in friendly terms and expressed surprise at the action of Italy in view of the cordial relations existing between the two countries. It pointed out that Italian interests in Tripoli had not been threatened, and expressed the hope that Italy would desist from her contemplated measures.

Assurance was given of Turkey's desire for a settlement of the matters pending between the two governments.

The reply also stated that Italian subjects in Ottoman territory were exposed to no danger as the authorities afforded them protection, and added that the Turkish military measures had been suspended during the period of the negotiations for a settlement of differences.

Upon receiving the communication the Italian charge immediately telegraphed it to Rome. The impression in the diplomatic corps is that the note will not be satisfactory to Italy.

Every precaution has been taken to preserve order in the capital and throughout the provinces.

Paris, September 29—A dispatch to the Havas agency from Constantinople says that it is semi-officially announced that the Government recognizes completely the economic interests of Italy, but does not accept the proposed Italian military occupation of Tripoli. It appeals to the loyalty of Italy and to the justice of the powers. The Turkish reply will be transmitted through the Italian charge and telegraphed to the Turkish embassy at London.

COMPLETE ARMY CORPS IN ITALIAN EXPEDITION

Chiasso, Switzerland, on the Italian Frontier, September 29—The Italian fleet has been ordered to maintain a close blockade of the Tripolitan coast and prevent by force the landing of further reinforcements.

Secret instructions have been given for the strategic distribution of ships, also, along the Albanian, Macedonian and Syrian coasts the moment action is begun, to prevent any attempt by Turkey to attack the Italian coast through privateers, which would be easy from the Albanian coast which, on the opposite side of the Adriatic Sea, is but a few hours sail from the Italian coast and which is quite undefended.

The ships have been instructed also to defend not only Italians but all foreigners on Ottoman territory, landing forces if necessary or taking fugitives aboard.

The expedition consists of a complete army corps which will be used in its entirety if necessary. It will be commanded by General C. Caneva. His instructions are that the occupation of Tripoli and Cyrene shall be conducted with the least possible delay, but with prudence to avoid both foreign complications and unnecessary bloodshed.

Admiral Aubrey, in command of the Italian vessels in the waters of Tripoli, has been instructed, when the order to begin teh occupation is issued, to embark immediately the few Italians who may be left there and any foreigners wishing to leave. These, it is thought, will amount to about 100.

It is understood that the expeditionary corps will leave on Sunday. It consists of 36,000 men and will embark simultaneously on fifty transports at Genoa, Leghorn, Civita Vecchia, Naples and Messina, concentrating at Agosta, and it is affirmed that the King will be present

INDICT ELLIOTT IN BANK INQUIRY

Well-Known Brooklynite Is Charged With Perjury.

IS AT ONCE ARRESTED

Accused Lawyer Declares He Is Innocent of Charge Against Him.

OTHERS ALSO INDICTED.

Identity of Latter Is Kept Secret Until They Are Placed Under Arrest.

The Grand Jury this morning handed in four indictments against three persons, whose names have been prominently mentioned in the investigation before Deputy Banking Superintendent Dodge of the Union and Mechanics and Traders banks.

Later Gilbert Elliott, an attorney and real estate man, with offices at 44 Court street, was arrested in his office and arraigned before County Judge Moore, in Judge Dike's absence, on an indictment charging him with perjury.

Who the other two indicted are was not known this morning, but it is known that bench warrants have been issued and District Attorney Clarke's men are out after the indicted persons.

Elliott was brought into court by Detectives Mulcahey and Carey of Mr. Clarke's staff. He took his arrest calmly and before being arraigned made a statement for publication in the newspapers as follows:

"I wish to ask my friends to withhold judgment on my case until all the facts are heard, as I am entirely innocent of any intent to commit perjury."

Elliott was arraigned at 2 o'clock this afternoon before Judge Moore in the County Court. He appeared cool and composed as his lawyer, Martin T. Manton, entered on his behalf a plea of not guilty. He was given the privilege of withdrawing the plea within ten days, and entering any other plea that he might consider proper. After the brief proceeding Mr. Elliott was promptly admitted to bail.

Elliott Active in Civic and Church Work.

Gilbert Elliott is an attorney at law, with an office at 44 Court street. He has been prominently identified with the religious and civic interests of Brooklyn for many years. He was born in North Carolina, in 1866, lived for a time at Norfolk, Va., and, receiving his education in St. Louis, came to New York City. He was married to Emma J. Spence about twenty years ago, and has two children, Gilbert, who is now a senior at Harvard, and Isabel, who is a student at Packer Institute.

He was for several years vice president of the Brooklyn League, and is still a prominent member of that body. He has been prominent also in the Prospect Heights Citizens Association, and several years ago strongly advocated a subway into Brownsville, where the property of the various dummy companies, which he ran for the Union Bank, is located. At the last election, the Prohibition Party nominated him as its candidate for the Court of Appeals, and he received many votes.

Mr. Elliott has been a prominent member of the Episcopal church, and has addressed numerous church gatherings in this borough. He is a member of the church committee which protested against Sunday aeroplane flights on Long Island. He is a member of the Episcopal Church Club, and has taken a prominent part in the club's activities.

Clarke, in Statement, Explains the Indictment.

"The indictment for perjury against Gilbert Elliott arises out of an action which was begun by the Union Bank and the Essex & Lee Company against Ellsworth E. Bogart.

"In July, 1907, Sullivan and the directors executed a note for $150,000, which was carried in the bank as an asset. This note was subsequently divided up by each director taking an individual note for $16,000 odd.

"Sullivan, to appease Bogart, sent for Gilbert Elliott and had Elliott assign a mortgage which was held by the Essex & Lee Company for $28,000 to Bogart as security. Bogart took the assignment of the mortgage, believing that this would relieve him from liability on the $16,000 note.

"After the bank closed Elliott demanded the mortgage back, claiming that he, as president of the Essex & Lee Company, had no authority from the board of directors to make the assignment. Bogart refused to surrender the mortgage.

"An action was begun by Grout & Grout to compel the surrender of the mortgage and an application was made to the Supreme Court for an injunction restraining Bogart from disposing of or collecting on the mortgage.

"On the application for the injunction Gilbert Elliott made an affidavit in which he swore that when he executed the assignment of the mortgage it was without authority from or knowledge of the board of directors of the Essex & Lee Company.

"The indictment charges that this statement was false and untrue and alleges perjury."

As soon as it was known that the Grand Jury had acted in the Union Bank scandal there was a large throng in the courtroom awaiting their appearance before Judge Dike. When the foreman handed in the usual batch of indictments the clerk was seen to select out four of them and put them one side. Mr. Clarke then made a formal request that the Grand Jury be permitted to finish their Union Bank investigation before being discharged. It might take a week or longer, Mr. Clarke said, and Judge Dike consented.

Much Secrecy Over "Dead" Indictments; Search On.

The closest sort of secrecy was observed this morning after the Grand Jury reported to Judge Dike as to the identity of the persons named in the four "dead" indictments. It was known that two bench warrants were issued yesterday afternoon and the third this morning. The later, it is understood, was for the arrest of Elliott.

The fact that Mr. Clarke was somewhat dubious about there being more than one arraignment today was taken as an indication that the two persons sought after yesterday afternoon and this morning had not been located and, perhaps, were out of the State. The fact, too, that close business associates of David A. Sullivan were in court this morning was taken as showing their belief that the former head of the Mechanics and Traders Bank may have been indicted again. A hunt for Mr. Sullivan this morning failed to locate him.

When Elliott was brought into court, shortly before 1 o'clock this afternoon, Judge Dike had left the courthouse for the day and it was arranged to arraign Elliott before Judge Moore, who has been sitting in Kings County for two weeks in criminal trials. Elliott was accompanied to court by Lawyer Martin T. Manton, of Cochran & Manton, his attorney. Elliott was not permitted to sit in the courtroom, as was Sullivan when he was arraigned, but was conducted with little ceremony to the "pen" where he awaited with what patience he had until Judge Moore appeared to take his plea. Meanwhile he had secured a bondsman in the American Bonding Company in the amount of $5,000 and this was submitted to Mr. Clarke for approval.

Grand Jury Has Worked Hard, Says Clarke.

In asking for a continuation of the September Grand Jury into the month of October, Mr. Clarke said:

"The Grand Jury for this term entered upon work of investigation of matters upon which your honor instructed them when they were sworn in. During the month they worked with laborious care, spending not only their entire afternoons, but sometimes far into the evenings. They have not yet finished the work and they join in with me in asking your honor that you continue them for at least another week, by which time, perhaps, they will have finished. If not then, it will be a question for decision whether they be continued for a longer period."

"I am glad to grant the request," replied Judge Dike. "Obviously, it would not be fair to yourselves or to the public to halt you when you are only partly finished, when you have the matters all before you, and pass the work on to another Grand Jury, which would have to spend time in familiarizing itself with what you are already familiar. I shall hold over the October Grand Jury for a week."

CROPSEY SHOWS MORE FALSE STATEMENTS

Today's Union Bank hearing was short but interesting. Attorney James C. Cropsey brought out two statements containing false declarations relative to the Orr Contracting Company. The statements were taken from the bank files and purport to have been made by James T. Ashley and Robert P. Orr, the officers of the company.

One was dictated January 3, 1908, when the Banking Department was keeping a close eye on the bank. The other was dictated May 4, 1908, when the officers of the defunct institution were doing everything to get it reopened. The effect of both statements was to deceive the Banking Department and the public as to the fact that the Orr Contracting Company was a dummy concern, used to conceal profits and losses by the bank.

Joseph Michaels of 27 Eighth avenue, a director of the old Union Bank, went on the stand today and testified that he had returned the $5,500 commission which he got on the Peoples Bank deal to the bank. It was Michaels who introduced Samuels, the dummy broker, to Sullivan. Asked why a broker was necessary, Michaels replied:

"So that there would be a commission."

Cashier James T. Ashley had another session on the grill today. He made hard work of explaining how the $500 cash capital was paid in. There is no record to show that it ever was paid, and Ashley thought "it might have come in as a bonus or something," or that he "might have happened to have $500 in his pocket and paid it in."

Mr. Cropsey read to Cashier Ashley the following statement about the Orr Contracting Company, dictated by some officer of the bank on January 3, 1908, to deceive the Banking Department. The statement reads as follows:

"About the Orr Contracting Company, [illegible] New York City:

"This company owns the [illegible]

CHAMELEON PUZZLE.

Why is it that Leader McCooey, who in Brooklyn gave the impression that he was against the Gaynor Charter is now "brow beating" the weak-kneed Brooklyn Legislators to vote for it?

M'COOEY HELPS TO PASS CHARTER

Forces Brooklyn Legislators to Abandon Opposition.

AMENDMENT THE BAIT

It Provides That the Bill Shall Not Be Effective Until July 1, 1912.

VETO CLAUSE OUT, HE SAYS.

Brooklyn Leader Declares This Provision Has Been Absolutely Eliminated—His Missionary Work Effective.

(Special to The Eagle.)

Albany, September 29—If the Gaynor charter passes the Senate this afternoon, as seems most likely, Gaynor and Murphy have John H. McCooey, the Democratic leader of Kings County to thank. They could not have passed the charter, even through the Assembly, without his help, and from all appearances this afternoon, he has swung every Democratic Senator from Kings County into line for it.

McCooey worked from the time of his arrival yesterday afternoon until 3 o'clock this morning upon the Senators and Assemblymen who had emphatically declared their opposition, as he worked upon Senator Harden, the last of the Brooklyn men to give in, until nearly 1 o'clock this afternoon.

McCooey brought with him an amendment which gave the necessary excuse to the men who threatened to vote against the bill, to come out in favor of it. This amendment provides that the bill shall not take effect until July 1, 1912, and carries with it the possibility that the bill may be further amended by the next Legislature, which meets in January.

Brooklyn Opposition Collapses After McCooey's Arrival.

The boasted Brooklyn opposition to the Gaynor-Murphy charter withered and shriveled up over night after McCooey's arrival. McCooey declared his position this afternoon, in the interview below, and this, he says, defines his position whether the charter passes or not.

"Mr. McCooey, why do you appear so anxious to pass the charter?" he was asked.

"I have felt all along," responded McCooey, "that a charter would be passed and what I wanted was that it should be passed in such a way as to meet the approval of the people, and in such a way as to give them ample time to review it from beginning to end before it took effect.

"As has been said repeatedly the preparation of a charter for the government of the great City of New York is a tremendous piece of work. It should be approached calmly and dispassionately and the people should have every possible opportunity to review the work of the Legislature before the charter becomes effective. By this plan of making it effective July 1, 1912, every expert on municipal law, every active civic worker and every citizen who has any interest whatever in the government of the City of New York will have ample time and opportunity to go over every word, every line and every section of the charter, and if imperfections or undesirable provisions appear ample time is provided for the next Legislature to amend it.

"I really believe this is the very best solution that could be reached under the circumstances.

"The charter was prepared by the city administration, and is the first one so prepared. The Democrats have advocated the principle of home rule for cities and this is the first time in sixteen years that the city has had a chance to make this effective, through a Democratic legislature.

"The majority is not attempting to put the act into immediate operation as the Republicans did with the revision of the present charter. This seems to be a fair proposition, especially in view of the fact that the features against which so much criticism was directed have been removed.

McCooey Says Mayor's Subway Veto Is Removed.

"The absolute veto power of the Mayor over subway contracts has been eliminated. So has the paid Board of Education, and the Controller's power of audit has been restored. Existing law cannot be disturbed until another Legislature has a chance to remedy in detail the provisions of the proposed charter."

"Who wants the charter in Brooklyn?" McCooey was asked.

"The best answer to that question," snapped McCooey, "is that there will be no charter unless the people want it."

"Do you take the position that the veto power provision of the charter has been absolutely eliminated?"

"Absolutely," replied McCooey.

Without the 1912 amendment, which is to be introduced by Senator O'Brien of East New York, McCooey says the charter will not be passed.

Black Says McCooey Feared New Murphy Fight on Brooklyn.

Senator Loring M. Black, jr., was asked to explain McCooey's desire to have the charter passed.

"It is to save his county ticket and his organization," Black replied. "If he did not get his men into line for it, he would face a revolt in his organization. The old fight along the lines on which McCarren was attacked would be revived. Murphy would think McCooey had given him the double cross, and the Murphy district leaders in Kings would come out against McCooey."

Black refused to state his position on the bill in advance of the vote, but it is expected that he will vote for it. He hopes that the vote will be a tie until his name is called, and that he can then cast the necessary twenty-sixth, which will send the bill to Mayor Gaynor.

Even Senator Franklin D. Roosevelt, the leader of the anti-Sheehan-anti-Tammany "Insurgents" is prepared to vote for the charter this afternoon on the basis of the McCooey amendment. He says that it seems fair to him and he so advised Senator Thomas Harden, the most positive revolter against the whole charter up to this afternoon's conference with McCooey.

Roosevelt's pliability can be explained on the ground that he has been satisfied with a change in the reapportionment bill, which was made to get his vote on the charter. He had been protesting violently against the new Congressional district lines for his section and at a late hour last night it was decided to give him the kind of Congressional district he wanted so as to get his vote for the charter. Senator Loomis of Buffalo has retreated from his defiant position, and it is generally understood that he will vote for the Cullen-Foley bill.

Senate Action on Charter Delayed.

The charter did not come up in the Senate until after 1 o'clock. Then the clerk announced that the Foley bill, as passed by the Assembly last night had been received. Senator Grady requested that the bill be advanced to third reading without amendment. If this had been complied with the vote could have been taken at once. Senator Josiah Newcomb, however, objected and blocked the proceedings.

This brought an outburst from Grady, who threatened to keep the Senate in session until December if necessary. He also threatened to have the Rules Committee, by force of the majority, frame a new rule to meet this occasion. Newcomb retorted that they could go ahead if they liked with their special rule. The matter was dropped, temporarily, and direct nominations was taken up.

After the Foley bill has been amended by providing that the act shall not be effective before July 1, 1912, it will have to go back to the Assembly for concurrence. This action may be taken tonight. If the Senate passes the bill this afternoon. The Murphyites claim they will have no further difficulty in jamming the bill through the Assembly, because Assemblyman Andrew Zorn of Queens, who was absent yesterday, has arrived in Albany, and says he would have voted for it yesterday if he had been present.

Senator Harte of Long Island City is out of town, but is expected back in time for the vote. He said he was against the bill two days ago, but the leaders predict he will vote for it now.

Charter Vote Expected Tonight.

Despite the work of McCooey, one of the Tammany leaders admitted this afternoon that the charter was not out of the woods yet. He said it was "pretty close." This has given rise to a report that a recess may be taken until after election, but nothing definite has been decided on. It is the general belief that a vote on the charter will be taken tonight.

Brooklyn Senators Who Have Switched.

The Brooklyn Senators who were switched into line through McCooey's arguments are saying very little today. They are Barth Cronin, Thomas C. Harden, Felix Sanner and James H. O'Brien.

Black will not declare himself, although he was openly working for the defeat of the bill up to yesterday. Senator Harden said this afternoon that he had sought Senator Roosevelt's advice and had come to the conclusion that the new enacting clause solved the question so that he could vote for the bill. Harden was asked to introduce the 1912 amendment, but he refused. It is possible that Senator Wagner, who is recovering from an operation for appendicitis, may be obliged to repeat the "stunt" of former Senator Foelker on the racetrack bill, and be carried to Abany to cast the deciding vote.

LEAGUE WIRES SENATE.

Brooklyn Organization Renews Objection to Charter.

At the meeting of the executive committee of the Brooklyn League held in the league rooms last night the committee approved the sending of the following telegram to the Senate against the passage of the proposed charter:

"To the Members of the Senate, Albany, N. Y.:

"Practically unanimous sentiment of citizens of Brooklyn of all parties is against passage of any charter at this session.

"Brooklyn will especially resent adoption of proposed charter, provisions of which, however skillfully concealed, as for instance, in Section 1,447, will hinder and delay present plans for transit relief, and will remove all proper safeguards against extravagant expenditure of taxpayers' money.

(Signed) "RUSSELL BENEDICT,
"President the Brooklyn League."

It was also decided to oppose the Gittins racetrack bill.

Mr. Benedict's action in sending the message to the Senate was ratified last night by the executive committee of the Brooklyn League.

Polytechnic Institute Chemist Says Religious Grain Sprouts Only a Little Better Than $1 a Bushel Kind.

Eagle Bureau,
608 Fourteenth street,
Washington, D. C., September 29—The Department of Agriculture, through its Bureau of Plant Industry, furnished to the Eagle today a statement concerning Miracle wheat, which is being exploited at $60 per bushel, by Pastor Russell, in Brooklyn. The Eagle left with the Bureau a sample of Pastor Russell's wheat for analysis. It turns out to be a wheat well known at the Department, and which it has been growing on its experimental farms. There is nothing miraculous about it. In fact, in competition with another well-known brand of wheat its yield per acre is only one-half. Neither is the sample obtained from Pastor Russell by the Eagle as good in quality as one which the Department has just obtained from its own farm, where it is growing wheat originally obtained from K. B. Stoner, who claims to be the discoverer of Miracle wheat. Dr. B. T. Galloway, head of the Bureau of Plant Industry, forwarded this official report to the Eagle bureau today:

Report of the Department of Agriculture.

"A number of years ago a variety of wheat called 'Miracle' was brought to our attention by K. B. Stoner of Fincastle, Va., who it was alleged produced it in a miraculous way. The wheat has since been exploited by McCormick and other promoters. Note that this variety does not belong to the group of poulard wheat in which occurs the variety known variously as 'Mummy,' 'Seven Headed' and 'Egyptian,' is closely related to the ordinary soft winter wheats of the Atlantic coast, of which Fultz, Fulcaster and others are leading types. In our experiments with Mr. Stoner's variety, we have found it to be satisfactory, but not particularly better than other wheats like Fultz and Fulcaster. It does not merit extravagant claims made for it, though it is a little better perhaps in the district where it was developed than the varieties ordinarily grown in Virginia, but chiefly because it was carefully selected strain.

"A representative of this bureau visited Mr. Stoner's farm and made a report in which the most favorable statements are as follows: 'The yield had been from three to five bushels more per acre than that of other varieties grown on the same farm under the same conditions of culture, except the rate of seeding, which was three pecks per acres, while other varieties were sown at the rate of eight pecks per acre, which latter is the common practice of farmers in that locality. The straw is large, stiff and stands well without lodging. The grain has a red color, is rather hard, and in size is perhaps slightly larger than the grain of other varieties of this class of wheat.'

"As to the results since obtained with variety which has been under experiment by this bureau, in 1908 on the Arlington farm the wheat ripened several days later than the earliest wheat and from three to five days later than the average wheats. In yield in the nursery rows it compared as follows with Fultz: Miracle, lowest yield per row, 7¾ ounces, highest yield 10 ounces; Fultz, highest yield per row, 20½ ounces. This would allow approximately a yield of 33 bushels for the Miracle and 66 bushels for the Fultz.

"It appears to be the same as that which we are growing at the Arlington farm under our grain investigation No. 2883, which is Stoner's wheats, but the sample is not quite as good in quality as one we have just obtained from our plats."

John C. Olsen, consulting chemist of the Polytechnic Institute, today submitted a report of a test he has made of Pastor Russell's "Miracle" wheat, showing that 89 per cent. of the Russell wheat sprouted as against 83 per cent. of an ordinary $1 a bushel wheat used in competition.

ELEVENTH-HOUR WORK ON JUDICIARY SLATES

Hold Conventions Tomorrow, but Neither Party Has Its Ticket Ready.

STEWART URGED FOR FUSION.

Republicans Pretty Sure to Name Kelby and Benedict, and Democrats to Name Callahan.

The Democratic and Republican judiciary conventions are scheduled for tomorrow, but at noon today neither party had its ticket picked. Fusion between the Republican county organization and the Independence League is hanging in the balance, as a result of terms imposed by the Hearst men.

They demand, as the price of their support:

One other place on the county ticket.

The Republican leaders spent today in trying to iron out the difficulties in this arrangement, and also in connection with Queens Borough. It looked this afternoon as if a solution would be found, with no Queens man on the ticket. It was said that "Queens is hopelessly divided."

Charles H. Kelby will be one of the men selected for the Republican ticket tomorrow. The prediction today, made with authority, was that Robert Stewart and Russell Benedict were most likely to be the other two. It was said that an arrangement which would be satisfactory to the Hearst men was becoming more and more probable.

In the Democratic ranks there is also some confusion today.

Patrick E. Callahan, it is said, will certainly be nominated. Mr. Callahan, according to men close to him, has been so informed and is prepared to accept the nomination. The best information is that Surrogate Ketcham and either County Judge Humphrey or Surrogate Daniel Noble of Queens will be the others.

Joseph Cassidy of Queens and Surrogate Noble were in Brooklyn yesterday afternoon and held conferences here relative to a judicial nomination. Cassidy conferred with John H. McCooey in relation to the nomination of Noble and the rumor is today that an agreement was reached. Judge Humphrey has several years yet to serve on the bench and Noble retires next year. It is because of this fact, it is said, that he is being considered at the last minute.

John F. Clarke, it was definitely stated to-day, will not be a candidate for a Supreme Court nomination and will not receive one.

Quick Denial of Rumors of Non-Partisan Ticket.

There was a rumor today that men influential in both parties had suggested a non-partisan judiciary, with a ticket to consist of two Democrats and one Republican, and to have no Queens Borough or Independence League representation. This matter was taken to Congressman William M. Calder and to John H. McCooey, the respective leaders, and was denied separately. At Republican headquarters it was said that no attention would be paid to any such plan. Mr. McCooey smiled and said it was all a surprise to him.

The Republican convention will be held at noon tomorrow in Part 2 of the Supreme Court, on the second floor of the County Court Building. The Democratic convention will be in the same building, on the first floor, in Part 4 of the County Court.

There was a conference between William M. Calder, F. J. H. Kracke and other Republicans in reference to the Queens situation at Brooklyn headquarters this morning. A committee from Queens was present. The Kings County leaders were as far away as ever from getting any definite indication that Queens had a candidate the whole borough would support, when the conference was over.

Almet Reed Latson today announced that he would not be a candidate for a Supreme Court nomination. Representative Germans yesterday called on John R. McCooey and pressed the claims of Edward Riegelmann, assistant corporation counsel in charge of street openings. In the delegation were Henry Weismann, president of the German-American National Alliance of Kings County; John G. Roth, Frederick E. Heltmann, president of the German Hospital; Milton Hertz, secretary of the legal aid department of the alliance, and Carl Dannhauser, secretary of the alliance.

FORBIDS RAISES OF SALARY.

Board of Estimate Stops Increases in City Department Until May.

The Board of Estimate today adopted a resolution, introduced by Borough President McAneny of Manhattan, forbidding all salary increases in the city departments before May 1, 1912. The resolution was unanimously adopted.

The heads of several executive departments, including the fire, police and dock departments, not only asked for raises for numbers of their subordinates, but for themselves, and these requests and recommendations were incorporated in the 1912 budget.

The resolution adopted today eliminates all these projected increases, and will result in a considerable saving to the city.

TWO BALLOON RACES.

National and International Contest to Start at Kansas City Today.

Kansas City, Mo., October 5—Two balloon races, one international and the other national, were scheduled to start from here today. The contest for the James Gordon Bennett trophy brought together six giant racing craft, one French, two German and three American. Six American balloons, the three which entered the Bennett race and three others, fly for the Lahm Cup.

The pilot balloon early today was ready to be released at 4 o'clock in the afternoon. The others planned to follow at 4:30 and at intervals of five minutes thereafter.

Interest centered in the Bennett race on account of its international character. There is a chance that America will come into permanent possession of the trophy this year.

FUNERAL OF E. KIMBALL.

Funeral services for the late Ebenezer Kimball, for fifty years sexton of the DeKalb Avenue Methodist Episcopal Church, on DeKalb avenue, near Franklin, were held at the church today, the Rev. W. W. W. Wilson and the Rev. W. A. Layton, officiating. Mr. Kimball died on Wednesday at the home of his son Charles, at 324 Second street. The interment was made at Cedar Grove Cemetery. Mr. Kimball is survived by five sons and two brothers. He was born at Natick, Mass., and came to Brooklyn with his parents when an infant.

BASEBALL PUZZLE.

Now that the Giants have put all other teams out of the pennant race, will the voting giants of Brooklyn shut out the local members of the Murphy-McCooey charter team on Election Day?

WANTED PASTOR RUSSELL

Had Forgotten to Send Back Marriage License to Deputy Clerk Scully.

Acting Deputy City Clerk P. J. Scully, in charge of the Marriage License Bureau at Borough Hall, yesterday sent for Pastor C. T. Russell, who recently gained additional notoriety because "Miracle wheat" was being sold at $60 a bushel at his Brooklyn Tabernacle, to appear at the license office and give satisfactory explanation why he did not return a marriage license, as the law requires, to the bureau after performing a marriage.

Pastor Russell, however, has abandoned, temporarily at least, his interest in "Miracle wheat," and has gone off to Europe. He sailed yesterday on the Cunard liner Mauretania, and he did not call upon Clerk Scully before leaving.

Brother E. W. Brenneisen, who said he was Pastor Russell's secretary, visited the marriage license office and returned the missing license. Brother Brenneisen explained that it was all a mistake. His reason for Pastor Russell's neglect was accepted by Clery Scully, who said today that Pastor Russell had left himself open to a penalty of from $25 to $50 by not returning the license as required.

According to the records at the License Bureau, Pastor Russell, on Monday, performed a marriage ceremony for Allen Herbert Anderson, 29 years old, and Anna Elizabeth Feldner, 30 years old. The bridegroom is a Brooklyn, Md., farmer, and the bride lived in Baltimore. The witnesses to the marriage were Fennis Deerhold and Annie Appel.

The license states on the back that it shall be returned by the officiating clergyman. Pastor Russell returned only the certificate part of it. There is no perforated line between license and certificate to indicate that either is to be torn off and retained by the minister. Nevertheless, Pastor Russell ripped the document in two and returned only part of it, and the pieces had to be pasted together later at the License Bureau.

Brother Brenneisen's explanation to Clerk Scully was that Pastor Russell has been accustomed to performing marriages all over the country, and that in many cities it is not necessary for the clergymen to return the license, so that in this instance Pastor Russell separated license from certificate by habit, and had no intention of violating the law.

This is the second instance of the kind since the License Bureau was established in Brooklyn.

LECTURED AND FINED.

Bay Shore Youths May Be Jailed, Too, if They Don't Behave.

Charles W. Gardner, a son of E. J. Gardner, a well-to-do feed and grain merchant in Bay Shore, L. I., pleaded guilty before Judge Veeder in the United States Circuit Court late yesterday afternoon to a charge of using the mails for a scheme to defraud. Lloyd W. Harned, a member of another well-known Bay Shore family, also pleaded guilty to the same charge. Judge Veeder fined the two young men $100 each and sentenced each to ninety days in the Nassau County Jail.

After giving the two a lecture, Judge Veeder explained to them that they need not go to jail at once, but would be given until next April to lead a respectable life, and if they were good until that time he would suspend the jail term. Judge Veeder added that he would inquire later to find out if the two prisoners themselves were paying the amount of their fine; even if their fathers paid it now, they must repay the parents as an indication of their good intentions to live right.

Gardner and Harned advertised in the July number of a magazine that "George Bourne" of Bay Shore had a motorcycle which he was ready to "sacrifice for $50 on account of a European trip." Gardner was a clerk in the Bay Shore Postoffice—he has since lost his job—and he turned over all letters addressed to "Bourne" to Harned. They cleaned up $200 or $250 before they were caught. They have satisfied Assistant United States District Attorney Allen, who conducted the prosecution, that all their victims have been repaid.

After the arrests it was learned that Gardner was engaged to marry Miss Gertrude Meier, of 21 Rugby road, Flatbush. Miss Meier made a statement that she did not believe Gardner was guilty, and that she would stick to him and marry him whether he was found guilty or not.

"LOTTERY" FOR CHILDREN.

George Dixon, who looked old enough to be a war veteran, was summoned to the Adams street court this morning to answer to a charge of endangering the morals of children. The complainant was Officer Louis D. Dorr of the society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children.

"This man," said Mr. Dorr, when the case was called before Chief Magistrate Kempner, "keeps a candy store at 451 Warren street. He encourages the trade of children by a lottery. He has a bag of marbles, one of which is colored blue. The children, after making a penny purchase, are allowed to draw from the bag, and if they get the blue marble they are given another penny's worth."

"I don't encourage children to gamble," said Mr. Dixon. "Old people come in and draw. If they get the right marble they can select a penny pencil. But I told this officer that I would stop it."

Magistrate Kempner dismissed the summons on the understanding that the little blue marble would disappear from the bag.

G. S. GEDDES IN RENO; FILES SUIT FOR DIVORCE

It became known today that George S. Geddes of 328 Clinton avenue has filed an action for divorce in Reno, Nevada, against his wife, Elizabeth Geddes, charging her with "gross drunkenness."

George S. Geddes is of a prominent Brooklyn family. His father, the late George S. Geddes, sr., who lived for many years prior to his death at the Clinton avenue address, was reputed to be many time a millionaire. The elder Geddes was originally from Scotland, and had large interests in Australia. He was at one time a partner of "Silent Jim" Smith, in the Wall Street firm of Geddes & Smith—the same "Silent Smith" who was reputed to be worth $40,000,000, and who died several years ago in Japan while on his wedding trip.

The Geddes who is now in Reno, while he has never lacked for money, has never been quite the successful business man that his father was and his brother is. The papers in the divorce action, which were filed yesterday, cite that he married Elizabeth Geddes in Sydney, Australia, in September, 1905. The complaint states that her alleged "gross drunkenness" grew upon her until it had finally enslaved her completely, and he was compelled to quit living with her. He left her in Sydney and returned to America.

The couple have no children, and there is no contest expected in the suit, Geddes securing service on his wife through publication.

Geddes has figured as quite a character in Reno while waiting until the legal term of residence necessary for filing a divorce action was completed. It is said that he always wore a straw hat and carried a cane regardless of what the weather might be.

Not long ago he figured in the Reno police court in connection with troubles with his Reno landlady, one Miss Amy Bishop. In the course of an altercation with her she struck him and knocked him down, and then chased him from her yard with stones, later swearing out a warrant charging him with disturbing her. She declared that he owed her for board, having paid her only $5 in two months, and that he had tried to break into her house to get his clothing and effects, which she was holding for the board bill.

BIG MILK DEALER CONVICTED

George Kotcher Pays $250 Fine for Selling Adulterated Milk.

George Kotcher, a wholesale milk dealer at 1 and 3 Watkins street, was convicted in the Court of Special Sessions today on a charge that he sold adulterated milk, and was sentenced to 30 days in jail or to pay a fine of $250. He paid the fine.

The Health Department considers the conviction an important one for the reason that many retail milk dealers have been discovered selling adulterated milk in East New York and Brownsville. Each retailer arrested put the matter up to Kotcher and Health Inspector James J. Clark and his men stopped two of Kotcher's drivers and took samples of the milk, which, analyzed, showed that it had been adulterated. Assistant Corporation Counsel Harry S. Sullivan conductde the prosecution today.

Kotcher did a big business in Brownsville, selling some 8,000 quarts a day.

SAYS CHARGE IS TRUMPED UP.

District Attorney Declares It Was to Keep Witness From Testifying.

In the Jamaica police court this morning Assistant District Attorney Wallace J. H. Collins charged that a trumped up charge of assault had been brought against one of his witnesses in a homicide case, in order to prevent him from testifying against a man who is now under arrest. All the people in the case are Italians.

Collins made a motion before Magistrate Gilroy to dismiss a charge of assault brought by Alfred E. Palma against Frank Sinnitelli.

"I believe that Palma committed perjury in his affidavit," Collins told the magistrate. "Sinnitelli is the complaining witness against Ralph Allocco, who is charged with having murdered Nicolo Gioci on September 8, 1907. All my witnesses in this case have been intimidated."

In court today Sinnitelli declared that he knows nothing about the Allocco case. He said that he had been assaulted by a policeman in the Jamaica police station. Magistrate Gilroy said there was not enough evidence to enable him to receive a complaint to this effect. He held Sinnitelli in $500 bail on the assault charge preferred by Palma. Collins declared that he will take the stand in Sinnitelli's defense.

"COAT THROWER" SENT UP.

Armless Beggar Goes to Jail for Thirty Days.

Joseph Becker, 21 years old, an armless man, who has the "coat throwing" habit, which he uses to exhibit his stumps of limbs and thus frighten women into giving him alms, was sent to the workhouse for thirty days by Magistrate Dodd today.

Becker hails from Chicago and came East to find "easy graft." Yesterday afternoon he held up trolley cars on Myrtle avenue by standing on the tracks. When the cars halted he boarded them and scared the passengers by his coat throwing trick. Inspector Griggs summoned Sergeant O'Grady, who arrested Becker. The cripple had a pocket filled with coins. He even resorted to the coat throwing trick when arraigned in court.

SUBWAY DIGGER KILLED.

An Italian laborer, known to the gang with which he worked as "John Mike," was crushed beneath a slide of dirt and sand while working in the excavation for the Flatbush avenue extension of the subway at Prince and Willoughby streets today. Dr. Wagner, ambulance surgeon for the Brooklyn Hospital, was summoned, but the man died in the ambulance on the way to the institution.

LOST IN WOODS THREE DAYS.

Conservation Commission Engineer Safe in Adirondacks Camp.

Albany, N. Y., October 5—The State Conservation Commission today received word from Indian Lake that Division Engineer Albert H. Perkins, who had been missing in the Adirondacks since last Sunday, had been found.

Perkins was found in a very weakened and feverish condition. The information comes from John McSweeney, superintendent of Timothy L. Woodruff's preserve, near Raquette Lake.

FIRE IN A MAIL BOX.

Child Probably Dropped Into It a Lighted Match—Letters Damaged.

Dr. Emil F. Hartung of the Coroner's office mailed his tax bill and a check in payment thereof to the Department of Taxes last Saturday afternoon, dropping the envelope into a mail box at the corner of Saratoga avenue and Marion street. The next day he got it back from the carrier. It had been burned in two. Some one had evidently dropped a lighted match into the letter box, and the major part of the contents of the box was damaged. The Postoffice Department, which is investigating the case, believes that some child is responsible.

WORLD'S SERIES STARTS OCT. 14 ON POLO GROUNDS

THE World's series between the Giants and Athletics for premier honors in baseball for 1911 begins on October 14 on the Polo Grounds. A flip of a coin determined this. The games will alternate between the two cities.

The commission met in the room of John T. Brush, the Giants' president, who is ill and unable to leave his quarters. The following schedule for the remaining games was adopted: October 16, 18 and 20, at Philadelphia; October 17 and 19 at New York.

Should any of the games be postponed, on account of rain or from any other cause, the commission decided that the visiting nine shall remain in the city where the game was scheduled until it can be played. A postponement of any game, would, therefore, necessitate a change in the remainder of the schedule.

Umpires Klem and Brennan were detailed by the National League for the contests and Umpires Connolly and Dineen by the American League.

WOODRUFF IS DISCHARGED

Case Against Ex-State Chairman for Conducting Sunday Flights Dismissed.

(Special to The Eagle.)

Hempstead, L. I., October 5—When the case of the People vs. Timothy L. Woodruff, former Lieutenant-Governor of the State, charged with violating the penal code in conducting an aero-nautical exhibition on Sunday came up this afternoon before Justice Gittens here, Dean Potter, of the law firm of Grout & Grout, appeared for Mr. Woodruff, and on his motion the defendant was discharged. Lawyer Potter claimed that the complaint was defective and proved his claim by a recent decision of the Supreme Court.

TO SHIFT QUINN AND REGAN

Democratic County Plans—Republicans Talk of Cropsey.

In Republican circles it is said that Charles S. Devoy will be the organization candidate for sheriff, and that James S. Cropsey will probably be nominated for district attorney. Mr. Cropsey's record in the Union Bank investigation is counted as a campaign asset.

Among the Democrats, it is said that Sheriff Patrick Quinn will be made deputy excise commissioner, and that James Regan will secure the nomination for sheriff on the Democratic ticket. County Clerk Molloy and Register Frederick Lundy will be renominated, it is said.

Denis J. Donovan, formerly superintendent of the Bureau of Buildings, under Bird S. Coler, has been approached by the Independence League with a proposal that he run for district attorney. He has the matter under consideration.

PIERREPONT ST. PAVEMENT.

Chief Engineer Schmidt Tells of Its Rehabilitation.

Regarding complaints which residents and business interests along Pierrepont street have been making regarding the condition of the pavement, Chief Engineer H. H. Schmidt of the Highways Department said today:

"The present pavement along Pierrepont street has been in place for twenty-four years, which is a long life for a single pavement. The contractors have come across wooden blocks, rotten planks, boulders and other remains of old pavements, which preceded the present one. The pavement was so old that repairs were necessary often.

"The natural growth of the locality has been responsible for much of the disordered condition of the street. That part of the street between Henry and Fulton streets has changed from a residential to a business street, and vaults and foundations have been built, with electric and telephone service installed so that it has been frequently necessary to tear up the pavement.

"We are now laying a new pavement. It is a great job to remove the debris of all these former pavements, and lay in a new foundation. This foundation will be of concrete, and will be finished by October 14. The pavement will be of asphalt and will be finished two weeks later. After that the street should be in good condition for a long time."

SMALL FIRE IN CHURCH.

St. Stephen's P. E. Damaged $100 Worth by Blaze.

St. Stephen's P. E. Church, Patchen and Jefferson avenues, was damaged to the extent of $100 by fire about noon today. The firepot of tinsmiths repairing one of the windows on the east roof is supposed to have started the fire. Sexton Roberts saw the flames and informed the rector, the Rev. H. N. Merriman, who telephoned for the firemen. During the excitement Mr. Merriman lost a gold cross, which had been presented to him by the confirmation class and which was torn from his watch charm. Acting Chief Kane found the cross and returned it to the rector.

ORR AND JESUP TABLET.

At the monthly meeting of the Chamber of Commerce in Manhattan this afternoon a large bronze tablet, bearing in bas relief the portraits of Alexander E. Orr and Morris K. Jesup, was unveiled.

TRAPPED AS A BURGLAR, WOMAN PUZZLES POLICE

Coolness of Mrs. Weber, Who Entered House by Window, Baffles Questioners.

DETECTIVES LAID IN WAIT.

Although confronted with several charges of burglary and larceny, Mrs. Margaret Weber, who, it is believed, is familiar with the operations of a gang of expert burglars in the Greenpoint and North Side sections of the Eastern District, was unshaken today and refused to give the police any information about herself or any male accomplices who may have worked with her. She fell into the hands of the police when she walked unsuspectingly into a trap set for her last night. Her remarkable coolness and silence has completely baffled the police, although they declare they found in her possession loot gathered from several burglaries.

The woman was arrested at the residence of Mrs. Marie E. D'Ozeville, at 120 Milton street, early to-day. Mrs. D'Ozeville left her home last July, and during her stay at her summer home in Spring Lake, N. J., the house was closed. Eugene D'Ozeville, a relative living at 110B Nassau avenue, was given the keys and he paid occasional visits to see that everything was all right.

On Tuesday night, during one of these visits he found the place in disorder. A pane of glass in the diningroom had been smashed for the purpose of opening the latch, which held it shut. On the table were the remains of a lately disposed of lunch, the dishes still unwashed. There was a pack of playing cars and cigarette stumps were strewn promiscuously all over the floor. A cursory gdance over the place disclosed that some of the articles had been carried off, while in the corner was a large bundle, containing expensive table linen, handkerchiefs, clothing, toilet accessories and some trinkets of small value, all in readiness to be carried away.

Detectives Hide in House and Await Burglar's Return.

Yesterday the police of the Greenpoint avenue station were notified and when they had looked the place over were convinced that if their presence there had not become known they would be able to nab the thieves when they returned for the balance of the plunder. All afternoon the house was watched and when darkness came on Detectives Arthur Nelson and John Smith hid in the building.

Shortly after midnight Nelson, who was in the diningroom, heard the click of the latch on the broken window, as a hand thrust through the shattered pane, pushed it back. A moment later the window creaked, and the sash was slowly moved upward. In the darkness Nelson was able to discern the form coming through the opening. He waited until the intruder had landed safely inside. Then he drew his revolver and shouted:

"Hands up, or I'll shoot!"

There was no response. The figure slipped into the shadow of the mantel and was lost to view. Nelson pointed his gun at the ceiling, and pulled the trigger. There was a blinding flash and a deafening report. This seemed to have the desired effect.

"Never mind the shooting. I'll give up," came a mild, but firm, feminine voice.

Nelson pushed a button and the place was flooded with light. He saw standing before him a woman, about 30 years old, neatly dressed. She seemed unmoved when informed that she was under arrest and the shock of the revolver shot in the darkness had in no way unnerved her. She was taken to the Greenpoint station, where she said she was Mrs. Mary Schwartz, 26 years old, living at 135 Meeker avenue. Later she admitted she was Mary Weber and that she was 32 years old.

Twenty Pawn Tickets Found in Her Handbag.

The police searched a handbag which she carried and twenty pawn tickets were found. A gold watch, a memorandum book, a pearl-handled penknife, a necklace and some calling cards were found in it, which the police declare have been identified as stolen from the home of Mrs. Ernest Brown, at 540 Leonard street, when it was broken into on the night of September 7, and clothing and jewelry to the value of $200 taken. In the Milton street house was found an embroidered handbag, which was stolen from the Brown home. The police have not as yet been able to find out what goods have been pledged for the tickets which were found in the bag.

When the Brown residence was robbed the burglars entered by sawing away large iron bars on the windows, and looted the place while the family were sleeping. When the woman was taken into custody by Detective Nelson she was in her stocking feet. Her shoes were found in the alleyway. She is a married woman, but denies that she has seen her husband for about three months, declaring he is somewhere in New Jersey, but the town, she says, she does not know. It was necessary to scale a four-foot fence before she could gain access to the alley by which she entered. How she did this, she being in a weak condition, has completely puzzled the police.

The detectives have been looking for a woman for the past week in connection with the disappearance of the handbag from the shelter house in McCarren Park which belonged to the matron and contained considerable money and jewelry. The description of the thief corresponds to that of the prisoner.

When the woman was arraigned in the Manhattan avenue court, today, some of her coolness had deserted her, and she appeared to be nervous. Magistrate Dooley held her in $2,000 bail for a hearing on Saturday.

JAP-PORTO RICO ALLIANCE.

Miss Arcacin Monge Will Become Mrs. Lorenzo Adola.

There was talk around the marriage license bureau in the Borough Hall today of a Japanese-Porto Rico Alliance. The reason was disclosed when a clerk handed the reporters a license which had just been taken out by two persons who described themselves as follows:

Bridegroom: Lorenzo Asinova Adola, 32 years old, a Japanese steward, of 91 High street.

SAY NIECE HAS DELUSIONS

Uncle and Aunt of Mrs. Lyle Want Question of Competency Settled.

Supreme Court Justice Garretson this morning denied a motion for a jury trial of the question of the competency or incompetency of Mrs. Anna C. Lyle, 36 years of age, who lives with her two children at 39 Hampton place. Mrs. Lyle lives apart from her husband, who resides on Staten Island. The application for the trial was made by Lawyer Benjamin F. Norris, representing Mr. and Mrs. George W. White of 18 Pulaski street, uncle and aunt of Mrs. Lyle. They think their niece has delusions and may do her children injury.

In deciding against the trial Justice Garretson did not think the papers on the motion had sufficient facts to warrant granting it, but he said that a further application might be made.

"There are degrees of unsoundness of mind," said Justice Garretson, "and I don't know what the normal standard is. I'd like to see a man of a demonstrated normal mind, so we could use him as a standard."

Certain acts of Mrs. Lyle were alleged as being erratic enough to warrant the conclusion that she was of unsound mind. She claimed that certain persons were able to control her by electricity, and that certain of her relatives were trying to poison her, said her uncle's attorney. About two weeks ago she carried a glass of water to the nearest police station, and told the desk sergeant that it was poisoned. They sent her to the Kings County Hospital for observation, but she was discharged the next day. Mrs. Lyle's father is John Schaible, of 909 St. Mark's avenue. Mrs. Lyle is said to be worth about $30,000.

BLOCKED ELEVATED STEPS.

Two Well-Dressed Women Fined for Intoxication—Lawyer Goes Free.

Two well-dressed and handsome women left the Fifth avenue police court today weeping hysterically, after Magistrate Hylan had imposed a fine of $1 upon each, besides giving them a severe lecture, after finding them guilty on a charge of intoxication. An equally prosperous-looking man, who accompanied the women, was let off with a suspended sentence by the magistrate, because, the magistrate said, he had told the truth and admitted the intoxication.

The women were Miss Nora McCabe, 25 years old, of Freeport, L. I., and Mrs. Mamie Anderson, 40 years old, of 392 Eighth street, Brooklyn. The man is Howard Joyce, a lawyer, 49 years old, of 250 West One Hundred and Fortieth street, Manhattan. Special Officer John Robar of the B. R. T. had the trio arrested last night, at the Thirty-sixth street station of the Fifth avenue elevated railroad. He said they were sitting in a row on the stairway, blocking the passage, and that they refused to move when requested, their arrest following.

Joyce told the magistrate that they had had six drinks of beer and six drinks of whisky each, at Mrs. Anderson's house. The women denied the drinking.

FIVE YEARS FOR TOTING GUNS.

Two Men Who Held Up Pedestrian for 45 Cents, Sentenced to Prison.

Two young men were sentenced to five years each in Sing Sing prison today by Judge Foster, in the Court of General Sessions, in Manhattan, for violating the Sullivan anti-weapon law. They are John Moran, 22 years old, of 439 West Fifty-sixth street, and James Smith, 25 years old, of 522 West Thirty-ninth street, Manhattan.

The two were arrested on September 22, after holding up and robbing Robert Dunham of 45 cents in West Thirty-ninth street, Manhattan. When they were arrested, the revolvers were found in their possession. They held up Dunham, who lives at 109 West Thirty-seventh street, for beer money.

The two men pleaded guilty to the charge of carrying concealed weapons.

WOMAN FOUND UNCONSCIOUS.

She Was Lying on Sidewalk—Had Taken Laudanum.

Considerable mystery surrounds the case of a woman who was found laying face down on the sidewalk at the corner of Lorimer and Caiger streets, early today. The woman was unconscious when found, and was removed to the Williamsburg Hospital by Ambulance Surgeon Greenwald, who stated that she was suffering from laudanum poisoning. At the hospital she was somewhat revived, and, from what she said in semi-delirium, the police say they think that her name is "Allie Dorrie." She is about 30 years old, poorly dressed, and there was nothing on her by which she might be identified.

GROUT UNEXPECTEDLY EAGER TO TAKE STAND, BUT IS TOLD TO WAIT

Union Bank Investigators Are Startled by His Voluntary Appearance at Hearing in Borough Hall.

MR. CROPSEY IS OBDURATE.

"We'll Call You," He Tells Mr. Grout. Latter Outlines Offer of Testimony in a Statement.

Edward M. Grout created something of a sensation by interrupting this morning's Union Bank hearing to read a statement announcing his readiness to testify in certain matters. When Attorney Cropsey refused to let him take the stand at once he became piqued and there was a brief exchange of words between Mr. Grout and Mr. Cropsey. Mr. Grout's last words before leaving the room were: "However, when you notify me, I am at your disposal."

Mr. Grout's statement and his appearance at the hearing are taken as an indication that he has decided not to press his appeal from Justice Putnam's decision requiring his appearance as a witness.

Mr. Grout came into Room 2 in the basement of the Borough Hall shortly after the hearing began. He ignored Attorney Cropsey, who was cross-examining F. Sidney Williams, an employee of his office, and turning to Mr. Dodge, he said:

"I want to say a word which may facilitate your proceedings."

Mr. Dodge prepared to listen and in a voice which showed signs of agitation, Mr. Grout read a statement prepared before coming t[illegible]

The statement was as f[illegible]

Mr. Grout Tells What H[illegible] to Testify Abo[illegible]

I refused to obey your subpena six weeks ago because you refused to inform me as to what items or transactions you wished to inquire into, and to afford me access to the books and papers of the bank. But during the past six weeks your proceedings here have given me what you refused to give, that is, some information as to the subjects of inquiry, and by search in other records and papers and inquiry of others acquainted with the matters, I have been able to prepare myself with information on many of these subjects. The work and time necessary to do this have demonstrated the reasonableness of my original position, inasmuch as my evidence covers a wide range of items and transactions and a long period of time. But your proceedings and the research which I have been able to make during these six weeks now enable me to offer my evidence as to the following matters:

1. The circumstances of the reopening of the bank.
2. The retention of Ashley, Southworth and Smith.
3. The general conduct of the bank during my presidency.
4. The circumstances of and the reasons for the final closing.
5. The Sullivan notes, i. e., those of Haggerty, Molloy, Hulbart and the Remsen Bond and Mortgage Company, the Sullivan note of $250, the Bogart note, and the bank's real estate; especially in connection with the charge that the reports to the Bank Department were knowingly false as to said items.
6. The Orr Contracting Company, the Jonalemon Security Company, the Jerome Contracting Company, the Ashford Company, the Long Island Securities Company, the Opsion-Moore Company, the Essex & Lee Company, the Corporate Realty Company and the Metropolitan Holding Company, the companies used by the bank before first closing.
7. The Briarwood property.
8. The Liberty Avenue Theater property.
9. The Shetland Company.
10. The Curtiss-20th Century Company loans.
11. The Thomas and Heinze loans.

In the case of many of these matters, if details, dates and figures are to be asked, I shall have to request the aid of the books and papers of the bank and of Mr. Ashley while on the stand.

If you wish to inquire into other items of transactions, I must stand upon my original position and say that until you inform me, either directly or by further proceedings here, as to what they are and give me an opportunity to examine into them and into the books and papers of the bank, I must decline to enter upon them. In short, wherever your proceedings during the past six weeks and my research have supplied the information which I originally requested and which is necessary, I am ready now to testify; where such information has not been so supplied and you are and now willing to supply it, I am not and cannot be ready to testify.

EDWARD M. GROUT.

Cropsey Refuses to Permit Grout to Testify at Once.

When he had finished there was a pause.

"I am prepared to be examined now," Mr. Grout added.

Deputy Superintendent Dodge looked inquiringly at Attorney Cropsey.

"The day is filled," the latter said to Mr. Dodge.

"We will have a subpena served in due course."

Mr. Grout was nettled.

"No, not a subpena!" he said. "I am here now ready to testify."

"Mr. Grout gave no notice that he intended to appear," Mr. Cropsey said. "You will hear me out in that," he added, turning to Mr. Grout.

"Well," the latter replied sharply, "as it is easier to ask questions than to answer them, I thought that you would be ready at any time."

"Not this morning," Mr. Cropsey replied. "You will be notified when we want you."

"However," Mr. Grout added while Mr. Cropsey was still speaking, "when you notify me, I am at your disposal."

"Thank you very much." Deputy Superintendent Dodge said as the ex-controller turned and left the room.

James T. Ashley Charged With Perjury.

According to the testimony given at the hearing today by Frederick W. Flottwell, assistant cashier of the Union Bank, James T. Ashley, cashier of the bank, perjured himself in the testimony he gave at last week's Union Bank hearing. Ashley testified that he did not dictate a statement about the Orr Contracting Company, which was in the credit files of the bank. The statement was calculated to deceive the bank examiners as to the fact that the Orr Contracting Company was an arm of the bank.

"Ashley came to me at one time, and wanted information as to various companies with which the bank did business," Flottwell testified. "He seemed agitated with regard to them."

Flottwell testified that this was early in 1908, just before the bank was closed for the first time.

"I didn't have any information concerning the companies," Flottwell testified. "I didn't know anything about them. Then Ashley came to the credit

OVERWORK CAUSES SUICIDE.

Grocer Heins Averaged Only Two Hours Sleep a Night.

Overwork is the cause assigned for the suicide of John Heins, a grocer, who lived and had a place of business at Hancock street and Tompkins avenue. Heins, who was 37 years old, lived on the third floor over his store, and took his life by inhaling gas through a tube last night. His body was found in the kitchen by his wife, Anna. Dr. Jewett of 282 Hancock street was called, but the grocer was beyond medical aid.

Heins with a partner was doing a fine business. He worried much because he was unable to get what he called the "right kind of help," and spent most of his days and nights in the store. One of his friends said today Heins had not averaged two hours sleep a night for several weeks. This is believed to have caused temporary insanity.

APHASIA ON HIS BIRTHDAY.

Remarkable Case of a Man Who Was in San Francisco Earthquake.

One of the most astonishing cases of aphasia on record is that of Christian De Wein, 63 years old, a man of athletic build, with smooth face and gray hair, who is traveling through the country sightseeing. He lives at 2524 De Comb avenue, Berkeley, Cal. He suffered an attack in Union Square, Manhattan, this morning, and was taken to St. Vincent's Hospital, where he recovered in less than half an hour.

The remarkable facts are these: Mr. De Wein was in the San Francisco earthquake, April 18, 1906. He was in the Windsor Hotel, and escaped injury. A year later, almost to a day, he suffered an attack of loss of memory in Berkeley. Two years and a half later, in 1909, on his birthday, which is October 5, he had another attack. Today his birthday again, he had a third attack.

NO CAMPAIGN FUNDS RECORD.

Stephenson's Manager Got No Explanation of How $2,300 Was Spent.

Milwaukee, Wis., October 5—When more testimony was given before the senatorial investigating committee today that no detailed reports were kept of United States Senator Stephenson's expenditure of $107,793 primary campaign expenses, Senator Heyburn, the chairman, announced a ruling to the effect that where charges are officially made and no record can be given of funds admittedly spent, the presumption is that they were wrongfully used and the burden of proof is on the person against whom the charges were preferred.

Senator Sutherland cited an item of $2,300 which Edmonds, Stephenson's campaign manager, gave to D. E. Riordan, a former State Senator, who was to work for the Stephenson nomination at the primaries in 1908.

"Do you mean to say that you gave Riordan $2,300 without requiring of him any statement as to what he did with the money and that you did it knowingly when the State law required an explanation of any amount over $5?" asked Senator Sutherland.

"Well, I got no explanation from Riordan," said Edmonds.

TO AROUSE PUBLIC INTEREST.

Steers to Hold Meeting in Interest of South Brooklyn Waterfront.

Borough President Steers, Public Works Commissioner Calvin Tomkins are preparing a plan for arousing public interest anew in Brooklyn for the development of the South Brooklyn waterfront. The three officials have held frequent consultations recently, and it was announced today at Mr. Steers' office that the co-operation of civic organizations and others will be sought in the effort to have some of oCmmissioner Tomkins' ideas carried out.

A meeting with this in view will be held in the local board's room in the Borough Hall on next Wednesday night. The Borough President will preside and Commissioner Tomkins will speak. He will urge the establishment of an adequate railway system, a union freight railway terminal in the Erie Basin, the extension of the Bush terminal idea and other improvements along the South Brooklyn waterfront.

After Commissioner Tomkins has spoken, maps and lantern slides being used during his talk, general discussion on the subject will be invited.

The Eastern District ferry question is also likely to be taken up. After this meeting another one for the same purpose will be held at the Dock Department offices in Manhattan.

MAY DIE FROM FALL.

M. Frank Canney in Hospital in a Serious Condition.

M. Frank Canney, 33 years old and a traveling salesman, jumped or fell out of the second floor window of the house where he boarded, at 575 Putnam avenue, shortly before noon today. He was taken to St. John's Hospital suffering from a fractured skull, a broken right wrist and possible internal injuries. His recovery is considered doubtful. Family troubles are said to have preyed on his mind.

Canney comes from Boston, where his parents live. He went to board in the Putnam avenue house about two months ago. He said then he had a wife, but they were separated and she was living somewhere downtown. Canney seemed to be especially depressed when he ate his breakfast, and when later he did not go to business as usual he volunteered the information that he had troubles which he could not shake off.

An ambulance brought Dr. Thurig from St. John's. Asked how he got his injuries Canney told the physician he did not know.

GETS VERDICT OF $3,000.

Robbins Sued Nassau Railroad Co. for Personal Injuries.

A jury before Supreme Court Justice Clark this morning awarded a verdict of $3,000 in an action for the recovery of $50,000, in John N. Robbins, against the Nassau Railroad Company, for personal injuries alleged to have been sustained on July 28, 1909, on Avenue L, when a car of the defendant company collided with a wagon driven by the plaintiff.

It was alleged by Robbins that as a result of the accident he sustained a fracture of the skull, injuries to his arm and leg, and that his head is affected with a buzzing. Lawyer Oswald W. Jacoby appeared for Robbins and George Yeomans for the defendant.

"NO CHANCE AFTER DEATH."

Pastor Russell's Idea of the Millennium Comes in for Criticism.

Editor The Brooklyn Daily Eagle:

No chance after death. I can say amen to every word of the letter which appeared in The Eagle on the 21st inst. signed H. J. Latham. I was reading a sermon by Pastor Russell on "Salvation for All Mankind." He holds that during the millennium people who will not be saved by that time will have a chance to be saved, because Satan, who has blinded their eyes up to this time, will be bound for one thousand years. Upon reading this error I thought of what about the people who are already dead and the people who will have died before the millennium. Must they perish? According to this illogical belief they must.

Surely it would be unfair to those in the graves if such a thing could be. "Be not deceived; God is not mocked, whatsoever a man soweth that also shall he reap," we read in God's Word. What are we going to accept—God's revelation or man's reasoning?

No; there will be no second chance, even though Pastor Russell says there will be. It is now or never. I believe what the Holy Spirit reveals through the Word or the Bible. Behold, now is the accepted time; now is the day of salvation. Friend, accept Jesus Christ now as your personal Saviour, and make sure of where you will spend eternity.

Brooklyn, September 29, 1911.

Editor The Brooklyn Daily Eagle:

A large number of people in our own State as well as in other States would like to see Charles E. Hughes, Associate Justice of the Supreme Court, elected to the highest position in the gift of the American electorate, the Presidency of the United States, in 1912.

The people know that in Charles E. Hughes they would have a representative of American popular sovereignty.

Mr. Hughes as Governor of the State of New York won the respect of every individual who believes in the purity of the law and the impartial enforcement of it. While he stood in the way of the professional politicians, that oppos

STOR QUITS PULPIT; TWICE SEEN IN PARK WITH A YOUNG WOMAN

The Rev. E. B. Shaw Admits That He Was Indiscreet in Taking Early Morning Walks.

WENT TO ADVISE HER, HE SAYS

Church Officials Did Some Sleuthing.

Preacher Allowed to Resign—Got Letter of Exoneration From Deacons.

...itting to his officers that he had ...n guilty of indiscretion in accompany... a young woman member of his con...egation to Prospect Park for the pur...ose of giving her counsel and advice, the Rev. E. B. Shaw, pastor of the Memorial Baptist Church, Eighth avenue and Sixteenth street, has resigned and will leave the parish at the beginning of the new year.

Just two lines in the letters to the churches published in pamphlet form and circulated at the sessions of the forty-fifth anniversary of the Long Island Baptist Association, now being held in the Washington Avenue Church, led to the revelation of this rather sensational state of affairs at the Memorial Church. These are the lines:

Since writing this letter the pastor has presented his resignation, to take effect January 1, 1912, and it was accepted on October 11.

It became known, in the meantime, that men high in the Baptist denomination had counseled with the deacons of the Memorial Baptist Church and that grave charges had been made against the Rev. Mr. Shaw.

The charges were that the minister was seen in Prospect Park with a young woman member of his church at a very early hour in the morning, and that he was discovered there on two different occasions. He admits, men who went there to counsel with the officers say, that he was in the park with the young woman in question, but that he went there because she had asked for counsel and help and that he could not have her visit his own home because his wife was not there.

Men of the Church in Role of Sleuths

Men members of the church who had heard of the little episode of the pastor set themselves up for detectives. They watched the shepherd of the flock and saw him in Prospect Park about the time that the chickens were pluming their feathers and the chanticleers were getting ready to crow and the milkman was abroad in the land.

Of course, when this was reported to the officers of the church, they proceeded to get busy to see what could be done to bring about a change of pastors. Mr. Shaw was brought before the officers, so the investigators say, and he admitted to them that he had been guilty of indiscretion, but nothing more. It is known that it was suggested to Mr. Shaw that he had better leave the pastorate of the Memorial Baptist Church to be filled by another man and that if he would quit the field at once, three months salary would be paid to him.

Mr. Shaw preferred to present his resignation, and in the interim, up to the time of the holding of the meeting of the congregation to act upon it, some members of the church who were still his friends sent out many letters asking people to attend the meeting, so that when the evening came, it is charged, the room was packed with those who had not attended the services of the church in a long time and many of whom were unknown to the officers of the church.

Fifty Votes Against Accepting the Resignation.

When it came to a vote on the acceptance of the resignation, thirty ballots were cast in favor of accepting it and fifty against it, the fifty representing, it is claimed, the outsiders who had responded to the call for help. Notwithstanding this vote, Mr. Shaw insisted on having his resignation accepted as he looked upon the vote as a vindication.

One of the strange things that the congregation did, men of prominence in the denomination say, was to accede to Mr. Shaw's demand that he be given a letter exonerating him, that he might use it when he set to work to seek another charge. This was given to him and he now has a "clean bill of health" and can take a pastorate wherever he can find it, which is evidence, some say, that there is too much independence or lack of government, among the Baptists. Then the question is raised why a letter of exoneration was asked for if there was nothing from which to be exonerated.

Rev. Mr. Shaw Left His Pulpit to Take Care of Itself.

Another queer action on the part of Mr. Shaw, which is known to be true, remains unexplained. He packed his valise last Friday, went out of town without telling anybody where he was going and left no one to fill his pulpit on the following Sunday. The officers were too late to secure a preacher and were at their wits' end what to do, when the difficulty was bridged over at the morning service by one of the deacons reading a sermon of the great preacher of England, many years dead, the Rev. Charles Haddon Spurgeon. It has not been learned what was done at the evening's service, but Mr. Shaw is back in town, for he attended yesterday's session of the Long Island Baptist Association.

Some of the prominent Baptists in the Brooklyn ministry do not hesitate to say that the action of Mr. Shaw was unbecoming and that it is not quite just to other communities that he should be able, after such accusations have been brought against him, to take another charge and be, to all intents and purposes, in as good standing as a minister of the gospel as they are.

FIRST DEATH IN CHAPIN HOME.

Miss Mary A. Crane Succumbs at Jamaica Institution.

Miss Mary A. Crane, an aunt of Bruce Crane, the artist, died yesterday at the Chapin Home, Jamaica, L. I. Her death was caused by old age and general debility.

She was the first inmate of the home to die since its occupancy, two weeks ago. She was in her ninetieth year, and was born in New York City. She had been for about eight years an inmate of the Chapin Home, and was a member of the Universalist Church of the Divine Paternity, Central Park West, Manhattan.

Funeral services will be held at the home at 11 o'clock tomorrow morning.

THE WHOLE-THING PUZZLE.

Is the all-absorbing interest in the baseball championship series responsible for the present business stagnation, the dreariness in Wall Street, the lifeless state of the realty market and the determination of President Taft to keep away from the East for eighteen days more?

GAME AGAIN CALLED OFF

Athletics and Giants Are Resting in Quakertown — May Play Tomorrow.

Philadelphia, October 19—Rain caused another postponement of the playing of the fourth game between the Philadelphia Athletics and New York Giants for the world's baseball championship. The grounds were in a soggy condition and as a light rain was falling the umpires called up the members of the National Commission, and informed them of conditions. It was decided to call off the game for today, and it will be played here tomorrow if weather conditions permit.

When the postponement was announced there were nearly a thousand persons around Shibe Park hoping that the rain would cease and that the game would be played.

Death has entered the family of one of the Athletic's players but it will not break up the combination. Reuben N. Oldring, the Philadelphia centerfielder, was notified today that his sister, Lillian Oldring, had died last night in Mount Vernon, N. Y. She had been ill since July and the announcement of her death was not unexpected, but at the same time was a shock to him.

"My first impulse was to jump to New York," said Oldring today, "but considering the matter calmly, I have decided to stick to the team. It may seem strange for me to play baseball with my sister dead, but I can do her no good and at this critical stage of the world's series I feel I had better remain with the team." Oldring will go to New York today and expects to be back for tomorrow's game.

In case Oldring later decides not to play in one or any of the games, Strunk will play centerfield. Strunk is a good substitute. He played in four of the world's series games last year, making five hits and scoring two runs, his batting average being .278.

TO PROBE WOMAN'S DEATH.

Coroner Suspects Criminal Operation in Case of Catherine Graf.

Coroner Alexander J. Rooney and Detective Hoffman of the Brooklyn police squad, are investigating the causes which led to the death of Miss Catherine Graf in the Methodist Episcopal Hospital last Saturday night. The woman, who had been hurried to the hospital on Saturday morning, suffering from septicemia, following peritonitis, and an operation was performed with the expectation of saving her life, but she was too far gone, and her death resulted some hours later.

The officials at the Coroner's office are criticising the doctors who had charge of the case for failing to notify the Coroner, so that an ante-mortem statement might have been had from the dying woman. There is enough about the case to suggest that there was a criminal act somewhere, but there is nothing of that sort to reflect on the doctors who handled the matter, as far as the officials can learn. The operation was performed by Dr. Spence, assisted by one of the internes.

Miss Graf was 30 years old and had been employed in a department store as a saleswoman. She lived with a relative, Mrs. F. Roth, at 433 Bleecker street, just outside of the Brooklyn line.

The hospital authorities, it is understood, claim that it would have been useless to notify the Coroner to take an ante-mortem statement, for they say that the woman was comatose from the time she entered the institution.

Coroner Rooney has called upon the police to make an inquiry in advance of the inquest in the case, which will take place next week. The purpose of the police investigation is to find out who was responsible for the young woman's condition and to learn, if possible, if there was a criminal operation before she was taken to the hospital.

KILLED TRYING TO SAVE LIFE.

Policeman Fitzgerald's Widow Sues Railroad Company.

That Policeman Robert J. Fitzgerald died while doing his duty on the Brooklyn Bridge, and in an effort to save the life of a young man bent on throwing himself from the structure, came out this morning in a suit that Fitzgerald's widow is bringing against the Brooklyn Heights Railroad Company, on trial before Justice Jaycox and a jury in the Supreme Court. The policeman was struck by a trolley car and another policeman stopped the wouldbe suicide, who, scion of a wealthy family, is said to have reformed.

Mrs. Fitzgerald is asking $25,000 damages for her husband's death. On the night of January 10, 1908, Fitzgerald was patroling his beat on the bridge. Noticing a young man climbing over the structure the policeman started after him. A trolley car struck the cop, just as Sergeant Farrell hurried up and stopped the youth from jumping. At the time the wouldbe suicide gave his name of Waller, and said he was from Chicago where his parents were wealthy. He saw Fitzgerald's body tossed by the trolley car.

The body of Fitzgerald was claimed by a brother, it is said, who didn't know that the policeman had been married for a little over a year. Afterward, Mrs. Fitzgerald had herself appointed as administratrix of her husband's estate. Lawyer William R. Wilder, brother of Marshall P. Wilder, is attorney for Mrs. Fitzgerald. The trial is continued.

NO SHIP ASHORE.

A wireless message of unknown origin put the life saving stations along the southern shore of Long Island on edge today with a report that a full rigged ship was ashore between Bellport and Moriches.

The report was found to be untrue, after the Merritt & Chapman Wrecking Co., to whom it was addressed, had started a wrecking tug for the spot and asked vessels of two lines to aid the supposedly stranded craft.

ROBERT BACON'S HOME BURNED AT WESTBURY

Fine Colonial Mansion of Ambassador to France Completely Destroyed.

LOSS PLACED AT $250,000.

Westbury, L. I., October 19—The beautiful country home of Robert Bacon, Ambassador to France, was entirely destroyed by fire this morning. The loss is about $250,000. The building was a fine colonial mansion.

All that is left of it is a pile of smoking ruins.

The house was situated on the old Westbury road, in the famous colony of big estates of the aristocratic wealthy.

The fire was discovered at 6 o'clock this morning in one of the servants' rooms on the upper floor. It is supposed it was caused by a defective light wire.

An effort was made to put out the fire by use of hand extinguishers while the Fire Departments of Roslyn, Westbury and East Williston were summoned. When they arrived, though, the place was a seething furnace from top to bottom, and nothing effective could be done to save the place.

Mrs. Bacon, wife of the Ambassador, left the house last night for Manhattan, with her children, intending to sail this morning for France to join her husband, and the house was to have been closed this morning.

It is understood, though, that the fire so unnerved her that she postponed her sailing date.

The Bacon mansion is near such equally well-known places as those of Edmund D. Morgan, Howard Phipps, Harry Fayne Whitney and others.

Some of these people were still at their country estates and assisted the firemen in their efforts to save the Bacon home. One of the hardest working millionaire volunteers was Mr. Morgan, who was early on the scene, directing the efforts of the servants and the firemen in saving as much of the priceless bric-a-brac and furnishings as possible.

The house is on a steep hill and overlooks both ocean and Long Island Sound. Its elevated position seriously handicapped the work of the firemen because of lack of water. The only water near was from a deep well on the Bacon estate and this supply was inadequate.

At first the house burned slowly and with sufficient water might have been saved, at least partially, but the flames gradually gained headway until it was afire over its entire immense dimensions. It took nearly four hours for the big building to be entirely consumed.

Although some of the tapestries, paintings, bric-a-brac, silver, etc., were saved, enough of the furnishing were consumed to cause a loss on them alone of at least $100,000. The loss of the building itself is placed at $150,000. Some of the furnishings saved were taken by neighbors to their homes for temporary keeping.

EIGHT-YEAR-OLD BOY THIEF.

Stole Trayful of Rings From Store, Returned for Flags.

Frank B. Martini, 8 years old, who lives at 133 Van Brunt street, entered the Columbia Department Store, at 266 Columbia street, yesterday afternoon, and grabbed a tray of gold wedding rings and ran. Just as he was leaving Floor Walker Josephine Muith bounded out of the store, but could not reach him. Young Martini ran about three blocks, where he met a number of his companions, who comprise, it is said, a "tough gang," and who relieved him of all the rings.

It appears that the boys were about to have a parade, and Martini volunteered to go and get the flags. He returned to the Columbia store, and companions waited outside for him. Martini succeeded in getting possession of a nice bunch of American flags when Miss Muith caught him and he was handed over to Officer Higgins, of the Hamilton avenue station.

The boy was held today by Judge Wilkin, in the Children's Court, for sentence October 24.

CHAIRMAN BARNES NOT CALLED

He Will Testify Before Albany Investigating Committee Next Tuesday.

Albany, October 19—William Barnes, Jr., chairman of the Republican State Committee, who has been subpenaed as a witness in the investigation into the affairs of Albany city and county, which is being conducted by a special committee of the Senate, was ready to testify today, but was excused by Counsel James W. Osborne until next Tuesday at 11:30 a.m.

Mr. Barnes had been subpenaed to produce a list of stockholders of the Albany Journal Company, of which he is president, following the refusal of John M. Lindsay, secretary and treasurer of the company, to give the committee that information. Mr. Lindsay was declared in contempt.

The news had come to another brother, who was in attendance at the wedding, but was kept from the Rev. J. D. Burrell and the members of the family until after the ceremony was performed and the bridal couple had left the house.

Together with his brother the Rev. J. D. Burrell left Brooklyn today for Freeport, Ill., to be present at the funeral. Dr. Albert J. Lyman of the South Congregational Church will occupy the Rev. Mr. Burrell's pulpit next Sunday morning and evening.

NOT A CENT FOR 'RUZZIE;' LOSES HIS $50,000 SUIT

Sealed Verdict of Jury Holds There Was No Cause for Action.

EIGHT BALLOTS WERE TAKEN.

Jurors After Long Deliberation Could Find No Promise of Marringe to Griswold.

Russell Gardner Griswold, erstwhile chorus man, lost his $50,000 suit of breach of promise in the Supreme Court, Manhattan, today, when the jury handed up to Justice Brown a sealed verdict that "Ruzzielamb" had "no cause of action."

Neither Miss Helen Woodruff Smith, the handsome defendant, nor Griswold were in court to receive the result. Jacob Gordon, Griswold's attorney, was absent also, but Edmund L. Mooney, who has looked after Miss Smith's interests throughout the suit, heard the verdict with a great deal of relief. Mr. Mooney had begun to get worried because the jurors were out so long.

The verdict, which was handed up in Part XII, was sealed. The jurors filed into court at 10:30 o'clock, the regular hour for the session to begin, and took their seats in the box. The clerk then asked the foreman if a verdict had been agreed upon, and the foreman answered in the affirmative, at the same time handing up the sealed envelope. The judge opened the envelope and the clerk read the contents. A motion to set aside the verdict, on the ground that it was not in accordance with the evidence, was promptly denied and the famous case with its "eye-kiss" testimony, its references to Brunnhilde and Siegfried and Romeo and Juliet, was at an end.

There were eight ballots taken. The first resulted in a 7 to 5 vote in favor of Miss Smith. On the next ballot another juror went over to Miss Smith's side. The next ballot made it 9 to 3, then three more ballots were taken, with the result that only two stood out for Griswold. The seventh ballot made it 11 to 1, and the eighth settled matters.

The jurors were much impressed by the testimony of Mary Barrett, Miss Smith's servant, the only witness called by the defense, and the fact that the plaintiff's attorneys refrained from questioning her. Griswold had testified that Miss Smith had returned from the West, where she had gone to get a divorce, in October, 1907. The servant's testimony was a refutation of the plaintiff's statement. She said that Miss Smith did not return until November of that year.

CAN'T GET HER HUSBAND.

Against the protest of the wife, who said her husband, William King, was being kept away from her, Justice Blackmar today dismissed a habeas corpus proceeding brought by Mrs. Anna King, of 2527 Seventh avenue, Manhattan, against a stepson, George King, of 692 East Fourteenth street, Flatbush, to secure her spouse. William King is the aged proprietor of the large retail butcher shop at 581 Madison avenue, Manhattan, which is said to supply the wealthy Fifth avenue families, among them Vanderbilts, with choice cuts. He had to be assisted into the courtroom today from a taxicab in Livingston street. He appeared to be very feeble.

According to the petition of Mrs. King, who is about 57 years of age, some weeks ago her husband's son came to their apartment, while she was out, and got in by way of the dumbwaiter shaft. Then they took their father, who was ill, out and brought him to Brooklyn in an automobile. Since then they had refused to let her see him.

The son against whom the writ was issued said that he and his brother found out that their father was kept locked in the apartment while their stepmother was out, much to the detriment of his health. They got a message on October 3 from the janitor of the apartment, it is said, who had talked with their father. The latter asked the janitor to get in touch with his sons and have them come and get him.

After hearing the testimony Justice Blackmar decided to dismiss the writ and it was then stated that an application would follow to have the aged man declared incompetent. When the proceeding concluded, Mrs. King tried to get to her husband, who was being assisted out again to the taxicab. Relatives of the Kings and lawyers, however, prevented this and the wife had a crying spell.

ARRIVED HERE IN DISTRESS.

Four-Masted Ship Partly Dismasted on Outward Voyage.

The four-masted steel American ship Edward Sewall arrived in distress this morning at pier 15, Prentice's Stores. She sailed from Philadelphia three weeks ago, bound for San Francisco, with a cargo of sheet steel and machinery. Two days after the tugs had dropped her she began to roll badly in not very heavy weather, finally carrying away the foretopgallant mast, with yards and rigging attached.

Her captain decided to head for this port, and it took him two weeks to get here.

The cause of the trouble is said to be the bad stowage of the cargo. It evidently did not shift, as it is perfectly upright. Several of the crew left the ship as soon as the lines were made fast, saying that she is not safe and that they would not go to sea in her again.

PASTOR RUSSELL SUES EAGLE FOR $100,000

REFERS TO "ONION" BANK.

Objects to Inference in Picture That He Was Trying to Swindle Public.

In behalf of Pastor Russell, who is in Europe, a suit against The Brooklyn Daily Eagle for the recovery of $100,000 has been instituted by Edward W. Brenneisen, his agent.

The complaint alleges that Pastor Russell has suffered "injury to his reputation, good name, fame and standing" through the publication of certain articles concerning the sale of seed wheat, known as "Miracle Wheat," at $1 a pound at the Brooklyn Tabernacle, and particularly by the publication of the following cartoon, which appeared in The Eagle on September 23:

EASY MONEY PUZZLE.

If Pastor Russell can get a dollar a pound for Miracle wheat, what could he get for Miracle stocks and bonds as a director in the old Union Bank?

The attorneys for the plaintiff are Sparks & Fuller and Joseph F. Rutherford, and the action is brought in the Kings County Supreme Court.

The complaint recites that Pastor Russell has preached the gospel for thirty years, that he is the pastor of the Brooklyn Tabernacle and the London Tabernacle, that he is president of the Watch Tower Bible and Tract Society and of the People's Pulpit Association, and that through his work as "preacher, pastor, teacher and author he has the respect, esteem and confidence of many thousands of people."

Confidence in Pastor Russell Has Been Shaken.

This general confidence, according to the complaint, has been shaken by the suggestion that the $1 a pound seed wheat, known as "Miracle Wheat," is of no greater value than ordinary wheat, and by the cartoon reproduced above. It is further alleged that the plaintiff has been "brought into scandal and reproach and has been held up to odium, scandal, disgrace and contempt among his neighbors, friends and the readers of his Journal, books and other writings and among his parishioners and members of his congregations."

The complaint goes on to say that Pastor Russell, because of these publications, has received through the mails "insulting and insinuating letters and writings."

Particular objection is made in the complaint to the presentation of the so-called "Miracle wheat" and Pastor Russell in connection with the Union Bank.

Says "Onion" Bank Cartoon Represented Pastor as "Street Hawker."

It is alleged in the complaint:

"That the building shown in the picture, photograph, drawing or cartoon, aforesaid, is intended to represent and does represent the said Union Bank Building and the words across the top of the door, to wit, 'Onion Bank,' represent and were intended by defendant to represent said Union Bank; that the figure of the man standing in the door of said building * * * represents some officer connected with the bank, and that the old man in the street represents the plaintiff 'going through the streets carrying a package of "Miracle Wheat," and as a 'street hawker" crying out his wares for sale; and the words, "You're wasting your time, come on in here" * * * represent an invitation to the plaintiff 'to cease selling wheat and come on in the bank and join others in defrauding its depositors and patrons, that his, plaintiff's, time could be much better employed in said bank and greater returns could be realized by plaintiff engaging with those in the bank in fleecing, cheating and defrauding its patrons and depositors that the words "Easy Money Puzzle," appearing on said picture, photograph, drawing or cartoon, were intended by defendant to represent and do represent that both plaintiff and said Union Bank directors and officers were engaged in an unrighteous and unlawful scheme or business, and that plaintiff by misrepresentations, fraud and deception was obtaining 'easy money" or dishonest money or tained money, from the people."

The papers in the action go on to say that "the statements and representations made and attempted to be made and conveyed" were and are "wholly false and were printed, edited, composed and published by the defendant maliciously and with a wrongful intent of injuring the plaintiff" in his good name and his professional career as a preacher.

NO PRINCETON PRESIDENT YET.

Princeton, N. J., October 19—The Princeton University trustees meeting scheduled for today has been postponed for one week. The committee on the selection of a president is still unable to make a satisfactory report. The names now most prominently mentioned for the presidency are those of Dean Henry B. Fine, Professor John G. Hibben and President Garfield of Williams College.

GLIDDENITES HAVE SUNSHINE.

Make Early Start in Run to Charlotte.

(Special to The Eagle.)

Greensboro, N. C., October 18—The start of the 135-mile run, from Winston-Salem to Charlotte of the Glidden tourists was made under most alluring prospects. The sun is actually shining today and the roads thus far excellent. The 35 miles of excellent macadam over to this point, all built and maintained by Guilford County, would put to blush much of the boasted state roads of some of the Northern States. The famous revolutionary battle ground of Guilford County Courthouse was crossed on the way over. The start from Winston-Salem was made at 8:30 a.m., and after a street parade the cars were checked out one minute apart. The noon stop was made at Salisbury, 48 miles away.

THREE DEAD IN AUTO CRASH.

Huntington, Ind., October 18—Sterling Dubbs, 21 years old, his wife and 3-year-old child, were killed, and George Bechtold was probably fatally injured here, last night, when an automobile in which they were riding collided with a Wabash engine at a grade crossing.

TEALE A HOLDOVER IN OFFICE

Term of Public Administrator Ends, but He Will Stay Until After Election.

The term of Public Administrator Charles E. Teale expires today. Under an act passed by the Legislature at this session, his successor is to be appointed by the Surrogate. No appointment has been made by Surrogate Herbert T. Ketcham, and it is extremely unlikely that Mr. Teale's successor will be named until after election. Therefore, Mr. Teale will continue to act as Public Administrator of Kings County, under the public officers law, for several weeks longer.

Among the reasons advanced for the holding up of the nomination of Mr. Teale's successor, the chief one seems to be the fact that Charles H. Kelby, Republican candidate for Justice of the Supreme Court, is counsel to the Public Administrator. Surrogate Ketcham is also a candidate for the Supreme Court, and it is understood that he considers that under the circumstances he will leave the Public Administrator's office as it is.

The law passed by the Legislature was not a "ripper," in the ordinary sense of the term, because it did not cut off the public administrator before the end of his term. Mr. Teale's term, under his original appointment, was due to end today, and the bill only changed the appointing power from a board composed of the two Republican county judges and the Surrogate, to the Surrogate alone.

Under the old law, Public Administrator Teale was entitled to receive fees for the work he did. By the terms of the new bill the fee system is abolished in the office and the Public Administrator is to receive a salary which is to be fixed by the Board of Estimate and Apportionment, on the recommendation of the Surrogate. The salary has not yet been fixed by the Board of Estimate.

JUDICIARY NOMINEES STUMP.

Two Queens Men Make Themselves Known in Kings County.

Considerable comment is being caused by the active campaign being waged by the two Queens County candidates for Justice of the Supreme Court, William Willett, Democrat, and James Van Siclen, Republican. Van Siclen has already made a number of short speeches in Brooklyn, and Willett is planning to make at least three tonight. These men are the only candidates for the Supreme Court bench who have started to make speeches.

Other candidates have been asked to appear before mass meetings and address the voters, but they have refused, on the ground that the dignity of the office for which they are candidates is incompatible with stump speaking tours. It has not been customary in recent years for the nominees for Supreme Court positions to make public speeches during campaigns.

The use of lithographs and posters bearing the pictures of Supreme Court candidates, even, has been discouraged, and the three Democratic candidates, it is understood, have agreed not to issue advertising of that kind this year. Russell Benedict, on the Republican ticket, is the only candidate whose lithographic likenesses have been distributed in Brooklyn. At last night's non-partisan meeting of the depositors of the Union Bank, in Greenpoint, Mr. Benedict's lithographs occupied nearly every post of vantage in the hall.

Mr. Willett's friends have induced him to make speeches, on the ground that he must make himself known to the voters of Kings County. And, it is said, Mr. Willett holds that while it might be improper for a Supreme Court justice running for re-election to make speeches, it is perfectly proper for a candidate who is not a judge to make a strong campaign.

CANNOT BE SEPARATED.

Justice Clark Rules That Both Mr. and Mrs. Edwards Offended.

Supreme Court Justice Clark this morning handed down a decision refusing either husband or wife a separation, in the suit brought by Mrs. Anna L. Edwards, of 253 Garfield place, against Charles M. Edwards, in which both ask for the same relief from their marital infelicities. Justice Clark says that both have committed acts which might entitle either to a decree, but the fact that both had done so entitle neither to relief.

The Edwards were married on January 10, 1888, and have two children, the oldest being of age. Mrs. Edwards says her husband is a wealthy man, being the owner, she says, of considerable stock in the Sheffield Farms, Slawson-Decker Milk Company. She says he abandoned her in 1907, and went to live at 47 Seventh avenue, this borough. Before this his cruel and inhuman treatment, she says, caused him to strike her.

Denying her allegations of cruel and inhuman treatment, Edwards put in a counterclaim in which he said that her conduct toward him amounted to the same offense against the martial code. In his memorandum, Justice Clark indicates that much of the trouble between the couple was caused by the wife, who is a Catholic, who decided that because her husband had been divorced from his first wife it was against her religious principles to live with him as his wife.

RUSTY NAIL POISONED BLOOD.

John Garrett, jr., 2 years old, of 143 Navy street, was removed to the Brooklyn Hospital today in a serious condition, with one of his feet swollen to twice its normal size. A week ago he ran a rusty nail into his foot, and blood poisoning set in. It is said that the injury may prove fatal.

Washington, October 19—John Ridgeley Carter, for a year past Minister to Servia, Roumania and Bulgaria, has resigned from the diplomatic service.

WOMEN TEACHERS WIN; THEIR EQUAL-PAY BILL SIGNED BY THE MAYOR

Measure Is at Once Sent to Albany — Governor Dix's Approval Is Not Questioned.

LONG MEMORANDUM ISSUED.

Mayor Gaynor Says Additional Expense to Taxpayers Is Not Serious, and Subway Financing Will Save Enough.

Mayor Gaynor this afternoon signed the women teachers Equal Pay bill, passed by the Legislature in the last moments of its session, on an emergency message from the Governor. The bill, after having the Mayor's signature affixed, was at once forward by special messenger to Albany, where it must be signed by Governor Dix before becoming a law.

The Governor, in all probability, will sign the measure, and the women school teachers, after years of fighting under the leadership of Miss Grace Strachan, will have won a complete victory.

"After careful consideration I see that I should accept this bill for the city. It gives the women teachers in our common schools equal pay with the men teachers in all the grades. They now have equal pay in only some of the grades. The Legislature has passed this bill several times in recent years. Its will should not be vetoed again. The rule of equal pay to men and women teachers is nothing new. It already prevails in over one-half of the large cities of this country. Instead of lessening the number of men teachers it will increase it. The economical reason for appointing women teachers because they are paid less is removed by it.

Mayor Says Taxpayers Generally Favor the Bill.

"The principal objection is that the annual budget will be increased about $3,500,000. It is said that the taxpayers object. On the contrary, I find they generally favor this bill as a measure of justice and good policy. Moreover, the will of the whole community must be consulted in matters of government, and not merely that of the corporations and persons who pay the taxes. The interests and wishes of the rentpayers are no less important than those of the taxpayers, as every wise land owner knows. We should do better to always say rentpayers and taxpayers, instead of saying taxpayers only.

"And when we consider this addition of $3,500,000 to the next tax budget, it is not so great, after all. It is an increase of 4 mills in the rate. That means that one who now pays $100 in taxes will have to pay 40 cents more; namely, $100.40, by reason of this increase; that one who now pays $250 will have to pay $251; that one who now pays $1,000 will have to pay $1,004, and so on. I am perfectly content as a taxpayer to pay this small increase, and I believe the vast majority of taxpayers feel the same way.

"Not So Niggardly as Some Would Have Us Believe."

"They are not so niggardly as some would have us believe. We can save $3,500,000 in other ways. An offer of an operating company to put $100,000,000 into subway construction was recently rejected by the officials of the city. It is intended instead that the city shall put in all the money, notwithstanding that under the law the city has the very same ownership and control, and the operating company put up part of the construction money, or all of it. The interest on the bonds to raise $100,000,000 at 4½ per cent., which is the rate we now have to pay, will amount to $4,250,000 annually. Why not save that for teachers and schools?

"On the hearing before me on this bill one speaker pictured the property of this city as overwhelmed with taxation. I had to inform him that taxation in this city is relatively far lower than in the other cities of the state, and I might have added of the nation. Those who assert otherwise do so ignorantly, or else (which is the case of a few), from a settled purpose to decry and defame this city in every possible way.

"And we have good government here. I beg the people of this city to call off the list of heads of departments in our present city government, and say if they find one among them who is otherwise than absolutely honest, and competent to fill his place. I felt proud as Mayor of this city to listen to the address of Dock Commissioner Tomkins at the Deeper Waterways Convention at Richmond yesterday. It was a great credit to this city. And all the heads of departments are capable of taking the same part in similar national gatherings, and do so habitually. They are lifting this city up in the estimation of the nation, while others for personal, selfish and political reasons are trying to pull it down and degrade it.

"W. J. GAYNOR,
"Mayor."

DEAD AT 96 YEARS OF AGE.

Anne Grace Westall Lived 54 Years in the Eastern District.

Anne Grace, widow of Benjamin D. Westall, died yesterday of general debility, at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Louis H. Vogel, 55 Halsey street, only four days preceding the ninety-sixth anniversary of her birth. She passed away peacefully of heart failure, and a few minutes before her death was in full possession of her mental faculties. She was a remarkable woman for her age and was beloved by all for her simple goodness. Mrs. Westall was born in Dublin, Ireland, October 22, 1826. She was the daughter of Henry and Elizabeth Eskildson, and her grandfather was the Danish Consul at Dublin. She had lived for fifty-four years at 141 Rodney street before coming to her daughter's home. Her husband, who had been in the trucking business and was prominent in the Eastern District for years, died fifteen years ago. He was two years retired from business at the time. Mrs. Westall was a member of Christ Episcopal Church, on Bedford avenue, and leaves four children, Mrs. Louis H. Vogel, Harry Westall of Clinton, Conn.; Mrs. Grace Hussey and Mrs. Adolph Abels; twelve grandchildren and two great grandchildren, besides a number of great grandnephews, including George W. and Walter W. Westall of this borough. Funeral services will take place at the home of her son-in-law, Mr. Vogel, Friday evening, at 8 o'clock. Interment in Greenwood Cemetery.

Shibe Park, Philadelphia, Pa., Oct. 25

Quaker calm had settled over the town today when the time approached for the game. The fans were slow in arriving, although the weather was ideal, and it was no hardship to sit in the open.

Another probability much talked about was where the second game would be played if that of today went to a tie, a thing that nearly happened yesterday. The talk was wasted, for under the rules the two teams will stay here to reach a decision on the sixth game, if they have to remain until after the Christmas shopping rush is over. Should there be a tie this afternoon the players and an army of newspaper men will be right here tomorrow.

The argument about whether Murphy caught the last ball yesterday on foul ground or on fair will not down. The Athletics says it was a fair ball, but they naturally will not put a playmate in the bonehead class to an extent that would make him the most famous figure in the last ten years of baseball. On the other hand, there are a number of the experts present who claim that Murpny really and truly did make a brilliant catch that lost a thrilling game.

Say Doyle Tagged the Plate.

That Doyle slid over the plate was testified by nearly everybody, this morning, so that Larry just missed establishing another world's record in the dumb play class. He was so jubilant over getting home that he started to steal, changed his mind and jumped. When he did jump he overshot the plate nearly a foot, and Umpire Klem was right in his definition of the play, despite the denial by Doyle.

Jack Coombs was in bad shape this morning. In his anxiety to hurl with all his strength he caught his spikes on the rubber and hurt his foot, but he also strained himself in the upper muscles of the thigh. He has been attended by eminent physicians ever since the game, but an injury of the sort he sustained is not easily cured, and there is hardly a chance in the world that he will appear again in the series.

Chief Bender, the Indian pitcher of the Athletics, was on the warpath today. He wanted another chance at the Giants right away, and got the opportunity. The Chief resented the imputations that he was getting old and could not come back in a series like Mathewson used to do for ten years.

Coombs' Injury Exaggerated.

The stories about Coombs have been most sensational, but they are not true. He is in bed today, according to his wife, but he is not affected as was Doc Powers, the famous catcher of the Athletics, who was stricken on the ball field in 1909, and died within a few hours. Powers' affliction was an internal fracture, while that of Coombs is merely a strain in the groin.

Connie Mack Concedes Yesterday's Victory of the Giants.

Concerning the statement of Umpire Klem that Captain Doyle of New York did not touch the home plate when he scored the winning run in the tenth inning yesterday, Manager Mack said:

"I will make no protest. The Giants won the game and are entitled to the victory. Doyle was safe at the plate by fifteen feet and the question of whether he slid over the plate or alongside of it is a matter of minor importance. I never have and never will bicker over decisions of umpires. The game will stand as a win for New York."

THE GAME IN DETAIL.

First inning—Devore hit at the first ball pitched, which is the custom in this series and he fouled into the grandstand. He followed with a hard liner which Chief Bender caught with his bare hand. Doyle lifted a high fly to the standing crowd in right field for two bases. Snodgrass nearly caused Lord to make a bull like that charged to Murphy yesterday. Lord tried his best to catch a long foul fly. Had he done so, Doyle would have gone to third. Then Snodgrass flied out to Lord. Murray shot a long line drive squarely into the hands of Murphy, who made a perfect muff. Doyle scoring from second. Murray was caught napping by Bender and Davis. One run.

The Athletics' rooters greeted the home players at the bat with a tremendous din. Lord responded by perishing on a feeble grounder to Doyle. Oldring proved a mark for Ames, at whose fast shoots he took three lusty and vain swings. Collins also swung at three and missed them all. No runs.

Fletcher Overslid, but Was Safe.

Second inning—Merkle sent a high fly to Oldring which was absorbed after a nice run. Herzog was another who swung at the first ball pitched. On the second he slammed a hot line drive right into the hands of Barry, who dropped it, and Herzog was safe. He started to steal on the first ball to Fletcher and overslid the bag, but was safe because Thomas' throw to Barry was high and wide. Barry fractured his shoestrings in stabbing at the runner, causing a delay. Fletcher attempted to sacrifice and succeeded in fouling. He then struck out. Myers was thrown out by Collins on a sharp grounder. No runs.

Baker was another who hit the first ball pitched and he died on a fly to Devore. Murphy smashed a hot one to the right of Doyle, who knocked it down, but could not get it to first. Davis was out, Ames to Merkle, Murphy going to second. Barry struck out. Myers dropped the ball, but recovered in time to nail the batter at first. No runs.

Ames Gets a Hit.

Third inning—Ames hit the first ball pitched for a single to left between Barry and Baker. Devore batted the first ball, but it went foul by a few inches. He hunted the next one also and forced Ames, Bender to Barry. Doyle fouled the first ball into the grandstand. Bender pitched out for Devore, who retired to run. Doyle died on a skyscraping foul to Baker. Devore went down on the first ball pitched to Snodgrass, and was out on Thomas' perfect throw to Collins. No runs.

Thomas was given his base on balls. Bender was out, Fletcher to Merkle, Thomas taking second. Lord doubled over the temporary fence in right field, scoring Thomas. The stands shook with the cheers of the crowd. Meyers and Ames held a conference when Oldring came to the plate. Lord went to third on Oldring's out, Fletcher to Merkle. Collins lifted a fly to Devore. One run.

Fourth inning—Snodgrass lifted the first ball pitched to Oldring and was out. Murray went out by the fly route to Murphy, also on the first ball pitched. Merkle hit a ball over second base, of which Collins made a sensational stop and got the runner at first. No runs.

Four for the Athletics.

Baker drove a beautiful single to center and the stands began to tremble by the stamping of feet. On the hit and run play Baker went to third on Murphy's single to center. It was Murphy's second hit of the game.

There were two on bases with no one out. The din was terrific. Murray deliberately allowed Davis' long foul fly to drop safe in order that Baker might not score. Baker was safe at home on Davis' hit to Doyle, the Athletics' third baseman making a great slide to the plate.

With none out and Murphy on second and Davis on first, Barry stepped to the plat. Barry's first attempt was a trial at bunt, but he fouled the ball back of the plate.

His next attempt was a bunt and Ames in trying to field the ball to Merkle hit Barry on top of the head, Murphy and Davis scoring and Barry came all the way home on Murray's wild return of the ball to second in attempting to catch Barry.

It seemed as if pandemonium had broken loose. Thomas was the first man out in the inning by fanning.

Bender hit a ball over second which Doyle got by a beautiful run and threw to Merkle, who muffed it, but as Bender had stopped running Merkle was not given an error and Bender was safe.

It would have been an almost sure single for the Indian if he had run the hit out.

Lord drove a long fly to left center which Devore caught after a great run. Four runs.

Fifth inning—Herzog fanned on three pitched balls, the last strike almost hitting the batsman. Fletcher was an easy out on a puny grounder, Bender to Davis. Meyers drove a liner through the pitcher's box for a single. Crandall went in to bat for Ames. The New York pitcher was walked by Bender, but it seemed not intentionally. Devore struck out. He had three balls and two strikes when called out by Connolly. No runs.

Wiltse went into the box for the Giants. Oldring lifted a fly to Devore and sat down. Collins bunted, but Wiltse fielded the ball to first ahead of the fleet second baseman. Baker was out at first, Merkle unassisted. No runs.

Sixth inning—Captain Doyle was retired on a foul fly to Baker, which the latter got after a long run and sensational catch. Snodgrass drove a liner to left center, which Oldring took just off the ground after a long run. Murray was given his base on balls, the second one during the game. Murray was forced at second on Baker's throw of Merkle's grounder, Collins getting the put-out. No runs.

Murphy drove a long fly to center field, which Snodgrass misjudged and it went for a two-base hit. Davis advanced Murphy to third on his out. Doyle to Merkle. It was not an intentional sacrifice. Murphy scored on Barry's sacrifice fly to Devore. Thomas struck out on three pitched balls, one of which he had called by the umpire. One run.

Seventh inning—Herzog reached first on Barry's fumble of his easy grounder. Davis captured Fletcher's foul fly after a long run. Meyers again faced Bender, and the latter struck out his rival. Wiltse also struck out. No runs.

FUGITIVE IS SHOT.

Alleged Murderer Rounded Up in Adirondacks—Militia in Chase.

Gloversville, N. Y., October 26—Traced by bloodhounds to the Mountain Lake road north of this city, Charles E. Baker, the alleged murderer, was shot and seriously wounded by one of the pursuing party shortly after 1 o'clock today.

After the ineffectual attempts of the posse to capture Baker last night, and the serious wounding of two of their members by the pursued, Sheriff Vill telephoned to this city for reinforcements and the members of Company G, second regiment National Guard, were hastily assembled and rushed to the scene in automobiles.

"NELLIE BLY" IN CUSTODY OF A FEDERAL MARSHAL

Woman Manufacturer's Tactics in Barrel Company Case Cause Court to Act.

HER MEMORY IS VERY BAD.

Certain Books of Corporation Are Wanted—Mrs. Seaman Cannot Tell Where They Are.

In the continued examination into the affairs of the Iron Clad Manufacturing Company in the United States District Court, today, Judge Chatfield directed that Mrs. Elizabeth C. Seaman, known in public life as "Nellie Bly," owner of the Iron Clad, be taken into custody by a United States marshal.

Creditors of the Iron Clad are trying to get hold of certain books of the American Steel Barrel Company, the $2,000,000 concern which Mrs. Seaman once headed and which is alleged by the Iron Clad's creditors to be a subsidiary company of the Iron Clad. Mrs. Seaman, it is charged, has made every effort to prevent these missing books from getting into the hands of the creditors. She continued these tactics this morning, until Judge Chatfied said he would brook them no longer and directed a marshal to take her into custody pending further examination into the Iron Clad's affairs late this afternoon.

For a time, this morning, it appeared that a subpena would be issued against District Attorney Clarke. Mrs. Seaman had stated that the missing books were turned over to the District Attorney in connection with forgeries that were uncovered. When Mrs. Seaman heard that the District Attorney was to be subpenaed, she was not so sure that the books were at his office at all. Subpenas were issued against some of the American Steel Barrel Company employees, to appear in court late this afternoon, and an interesting probe after the books was promised.

George A. Wheelock, at one time interested in horse racing, and who said he now has a controlling interest in the Barrel Company, was the first witness this morning, after Judge Chatfield had stated that counsel were seemingly depending upon the court to furnish the necessary detective ability to locate the books. Judge Chatfield himself did the questioning. Wheelock couldn't say where the minutes of the last meeting of the Barrel Company were at this time. The books that are missing, he testified, he left with Lee Cochran, secretary of the company, at 15 West Thirty-seventh street, Manhattan.

Mrs. Seaman Sure Her Servants Do Not Know Books' Whereabouts.

When Mrs. Seaman was placed on the stand it developed that 15 West Thirty-seventh street is her residence. She was sure that neither her mother nor her cousin nor her cook nor her butler knew where the missing books were.

At this point an attorney for the creditors stated that the books that were particularly wanted were the ones containing the Barrel Company's minutes from November, 1910, to May, 1911, the six months proceeding the filing of an involuntary bankruptcy petition against the Iron Clad.

Mrs. Seaman testified that she didn't know where the books were. Then she recalled that she had had them removed, to be audited so that her case against the forgers might be the better prepared. Then she said that they might be at the District Attorney's office, either in the District Attorney's possession or in that of his accountant.

"I am going to get hold of these books or I will have the whole American Steel Barrel Company in court," said Judge Chatfield.

"Judge, those people," motioning to the lawyers, "are trying to get hold of the books because they hope to block my prosecution of the forgers," Mrs. Seaman charged.

"If the District Attorney or his accountant has the books I'll have them produced," said Judge Chatfield. "These lawyers will not have to get the information you say they want, but I must have the books."

"Can't I have a stay pending the completion of this examination?" asked Mrs. Seaman.

Marshal Gets Orders to Take Mrs. Seaman Into Custody.

"No," said Judge Chatfield, shortly. "The marshal will take Mrs. Seaman into custody. The clerk will issue a subpena to the District Attorney of Kings County."

A marshal stepped forward. James A. Allen, Mrs. Seaman's counsel, stated that attorneys for the creditors ought not to have the books because they were trying to have the American Steel Barrel Company adjudged subsidiary to the Iron Clad. He reiterated that they were separate concerns.

Mrs. Seaman wasn't sure that the District Attorney did have the books. She thought perhaps the handwriting expert, Kingsley, possibly had the books.

Judge Chatfield decided to find out what some of the Barrel Company employees knew about the books. Percy Gilkes, the clerk, issued subpenas against a man named Olmstead, who, Mrs. Seaman had testified, was at the head of the Williamsburg factory of the Barrel Company, and against some of the stenographers in the Barrel Company office at 17 Battery place, Manhattan.

R. R. PRESIDENT A SUICIDE.

New Yorker Ends Life in Boston, Owing to Ill Health.

Boston, October 26—The suicide of Lowery W. Goode of 111 Broadway, New York, president of the Cairo and Norfolk Railroad, a short line in Kentucky, was announced by the police shortly before noon today. Although Goode ended his life at his room in the Parker House at 2:27 a.m. Wednesday, news of his death was withheld. Goode, who had been in ill health for some time, came to Boston last Saturday to consult with two physicians. He was accompanied by his son, C. R. Goode of Palmerton, Pa.

The elder man did not receive much encouragement from the physicians, and he became despondent.

Goode was 55 years of age. He had been interested in railroad development and timber lands for many years.

BRYAN IS CURIOUS.

Would Like to Know Whom Trusts Want to Succeed Harlan.

South Sioux City, Neb., October 26—William J. Bryan, last night, when asked for an expression on national politics, said:

"I'd like to known whom the trusts want for supreme justice in place of Harlan. They have all the rest of the bench, and I am anxious to see whom they shall select for his place. When we shall have enacted a law compelling the President to make public the recommendations of candidates, we shall know more of the influences which select our supreme judges."

BLACK HAND KILLED PILATO.

Throat Was Cut Because He Interceded for Friends, Police Say.

Acting Captain Herbert Graham, in charge of the Queens Borough Detective Bureau, expects to make an arrest shortly in connection with the murder of Antonio Pilato, 23 years old, whose body was found in the meadows between Flushing and College Point yesterday. As told in yesterday's Eagle, Pilato's body was discovered by several Italians while at work on the meadows. His neck was cut from ear to ear and there were twenty-eight stab wounds on his body.

GRAND JURY DISMISSED DESPITE ITS PROTEST

Judge Dike Bases His Action on the Illness of Clarke and Goldstein.

INQUISITORS ARE INDIGNANT.

Wanted Permission to Continue Inquiry Into Union Bank Affairs.

Judge Dike today refused a request of the Grand Jury to be continued for another week in order to finish up some phases of the Union Bank investigation which has held the Grand Jurors together for a month and three weeks. Some of them, if not quite all of the Grand Jurors were very indignant at the refusal.

"Yes, we asked Judge Dike to continue us for another week," said one of the Grand Jurors, "and were turned down. Do we care because our request was refused? You can go as far as you like and say we most decidedly do care."

When Judge Dike was asked to continue the Jury he said:

"No, no! On account of the sickness of District Attorney Clarke and Mr. Goldstein I have decided to discharge the Grand Jury tomorrow."

It is currently reported that the Grand Jury has really done little during the month of September on the Union Bank situation. Up until the return of the Grout indictment there has been a mass of testimony upon different phases of the investigation. And then the campaign began. First there was the calling off of the public hearings before Deputy Bank Superintendent Dodge and then followed the attack of appendicitis upon District Attorney Clarke and the breakdown of Assemblyman Goldstein. Since then the Grand Jury has been marking time on the Union Bank investigation.

DISSOLUTION SUIT OF STEEL TRUST FILED

Washington, October 26—A petition asking for the dissolution of the U. S. Steel Corporation and some of its subsidiaries was filed in the U. S. Court in Trenton, N. J.

The petition was prepared by Jacob M. Dickinson, former Secretary of War, who had been retained by the Government as its special counsel in this case.

CORPSE HOLDS ROSARY BEADS

Body of Unidentified Woman Found in Buttermilk Channel.

The body of an unidentified woman about 40 years old was found floating in Buttermilk Channel, off Pier 15, South Brooklyn, this morning, by Patrolman Meyerstrick of Harbor A Squad. Clutched in the right hand of the woman was a string of rosary beads. They were fastened about the thumb and the fingers were tightly clenched over the beads.

The body, which had evidently been in the water about two weeks, was about 5 feet 5 inches in height, and was dressed in a long dark coat over a tight-fitting black and white check habit dress. The woman wore black lace shoes and black stockings, and white underwear. There was a gold crown on one of the upper jaw teeth. The body was taken to the Morgue in Manhattan. The police advance the theory that the woman was a suicide.

BIG MEN ARE NAMED.

Notables Figure in Case Against R. R. Educational Association.

The names of the late Paul Morton, who was Secretary of the Navy under Theodore Roosevelt; President Theodore P. Shonts of the Interborough Rapid Transit Company; President Brown of the New York Central, and other prominent men figured in the testimony today of George H. Baker, who took the stand in his trial before Judge Veeder in the United States Circuit Court in the government's prosecution of Baker and other indicted officers of the Railway Educational Association of 227 Monroe street. Baker during his testimony as to his career stated that these men were among the organizers of his railway organization. Baker testified also that J. P. Morgan & Co., the New York Central and other big railroad interests were shareholders in his association when it was organized in 1909.

RUMOR OF CZAR'S DEATH.

London, October 26—Indefinite rumors became current this morning in Vienna and Berlin that Emperor Nicholas of Russia had been assassinated. Careful inquiries failed to elicit the slightest confirmation of the report. The Emperor has been traveling recently in Southern Russia, and he is now stoping at the palace at Yalta.

POLICE STATION LIGHTS AIDED BURGLARS IN WORK

GOT AWAY UNDETECTED.

Wild Chase Over Housetops for Burglars in Same Section at Almost Same Hour.

There were two daring attempts at burglary in different parts of the Eastern District at the same hour this morning, and in one case the thieves were so bold that they used the lights of the Bedford avenue police station next door to the scene of their depredations in order to effect an entrance. In the other case a wild chase across the roofs, accompanied by shots and shouts, alarmed the whole neighborhood. The police made arrests in connection with both cases.

The robbery in which the daring thieves were aided by the lights of the police station was a descent upon a tool house of John Belsky, a packingbox manufacturer, at 169 North First street. The rear lights of the station house shine directly upon it. If any officer had looked out the window he might have seen the thieves at work.

Burglars Worked Without Interruption.

The thieves were not interrupted, however, and got away with a number of valuable tools. Belsky reported the loss, and Detective Richard O'Connor arrested Cornelius O'Brien of 692 Grand street, and Martin Samulevicch of 154 Bedford avenue, respectively aged 16 and 18 years, in the Manhattan avenue police court both pleaded not guilty and their cases were adjourned. The police say some of the stolen property was found in their possession.

The other case made a big noise in the neighborhood of Broadway and Cook street. There have been numerous burglaries in that vicinity lately. This morning Detectives James Doyle and John Dowling, Policeman Sudinsky, Sergeant Hart and Lieutenant Reissheider, all of the Stagg street station, went out together to keep watch at the corner mentioned.

About 2 a.m. the policemen heard a woman screaming out, hysterically: "Burglars! Thieves! Police! Police!" She had her head out of a window at 6 Cook street, and there was a baby in her arms. Heads appeared in dozens of other windows almost immediately.

Wild Chase Over Housetops.

The policemen saw, when the woman screamed, a man dash out of the shadows on the roof of a building at 685 Broadway, and make off across the housetops. They scattered and ran into stairways on both Cook street and Broadway and up to the roofs.

The building at 685 Broadway is a three story building, and August Westheim runs a department store there. A policeman got to the top of a house on Cook street just in time to see the man, who had been on the Broadway roof, making for a skylight. The officer gave chase, and as the man was about to enter a skylight, fired six shots at him, but without effect.

Two Men Hiding in Top Floors of Houses.

A search of the top floors of the neighborhood resulted in the capture of two men. One, who said he was John Landi of 543 Flushing avenue, was found crouching in a closet at the top of the house at 6 Cook street. The other, Frank Segor, who said 6 Cook street, was his home, was caught hiding on the third floor of 697 Broadway. The police say his father is a jeweler residing at 6 Cook street.

In the Manhattan avenue police court today Magistrate Reynolds held the two men captured in $1,000 bail each for a further hearing on charges of burglary.

SCHOOL SUPT. ON TRIAL.

Pupils Are Telling About Alleged Improprieties With Woman Teacher.

(Special to The Eagle.)

Freeport, L. I., October 26—The hearing of the charges preferred against Arthur L. Barnes, superintendent of schools, by the former janitor, John Lewis, were resumed today in the office of Lawyer Harry Clock, counsel for Lewis. Commissioner Cooley, the Board of Education and Samuel R. Smith, president, and the citizens committee, which is pushing the case were present.

County Judge Timothy M. Griffing of Suffolk County is counsel for Barnes.

The first witness was Edward T. Smith, who was assistant janitor under Lewis. He told of alleged improprieties between Barnes and a woman school teacher. Judge Griffing tried to bring out that bad feeling existed between Barnes and Smith because the former called him to task when a teacher complained that Smith insulted her. Smith denied he insulted a teacher.

A feature of the hearing is the presence today of Harold Van Riper and Clinton Brown, pupils of the school, who will tell what they saw in relation to their school superintendent and a teacher.

Other witnesses testifying today are W. Golder, a school janitor in the Woodcleft school, and George Fife, a janitor of another school in North Freeport. The hearing is exciting.

IMPALED ON PICKETS BY PANTS

Strength of Fabric Prevented Brooklynite From Leaping on Tracks.

(Special to The Eagle.)

Yonkers, October 26—A durable pair of trousers, a stout picket fence and a muscular policeman probably saved the life of Clarence Peck, a salesman, of 208 Java street, Brooklyn, yesterday.

According to the police, Peck made a commotion on Riverdale avenue, and fled before Patrolman McCue. After running through a vacant lot the Brooklynite tried to vault a high picket fence bordering a cut along the main line of the New York Central Railroad. He failed to clear it, and when the officer reached the scene Peck was impaled by his pants on the pickets. Had he leaped over the fence he would have fallen 17 feet to the bottom of the cut and on one of the four lines of track.

I., October 26—Upon a summons issued by Justice Frederick Wright, Principal Vanderwater of the Bayport School, must appear in the Islip Court tomorrow evening to answer charges made by Frank Wright regarding the whipping of his son, Percy. DISPOSSESS FOR DR. WILLIS.

Said, Too, That He Struck Hospital Attendant at Central Islip.

(Special to The Eagle.)

Patchogue, L. I., October 26—Yesterday the town constable posted a dispossess notice on the apartments of Dr. William Charles Willis, who is now in the Central Islip Hospital for the insane, following the tieing of his wife to a telephone pole a week ago.

His landlord here says the physician is in debt for rent for several months. The precept is returnable before Justice Green next Monday.

KEMPNER CAPTURES A FLIRT.

Magistrate Denounces Melville, Who Wrote to Girl Prisoner.

Chief Magistrate Kempner personally directed a scheme for the capture of Daniel D. Melville of 66 Willoughby street, a young man who had been writing to a pretty girl prisoner, with the result that he was arrested and the magistrate had a chance to lecture him today. The girl was Edna Michaud, a French Canadian, from Augusta, Me., who was arrested, charged with larceny, of which she proved her innocence. Plans had been made to have her sent back today to her home in Maine. Miss Michaud was directed to meet Melville by appointment last night, when he was arrested.

The charge against Melville when arraigned before Magistrate Kempner this morning was vagrancy, and he pleaded not guilty. He was asked why he had written to the girl and said that he could not tell, but that he meant no harm.

"I believe that you did mean her harm," said the magistrate. "I think you meant her a great deal of harm. I'll find you guilty of vagrancy and suspend sentence. I will put you in charge of Mr. Donohue, the probation officer. You'll have to find work, and earn an honest living. We'll see that you do."

SEEKING VOTES OF JURORS.

Assistant District Attorney Writes in Clarke's Behalf.

At Republican headquarters today they made public a letter written by Leroy W. Ross, Assistant District Attorney and head of the Democratic speakers bureau, which was turned into the organization by its recipient. It was as follows:

Dear Sir: I had the pleasure of meeting you while you were serving as a juror in the county court. As you no doubt know my chief, Mr. John F. Clarke, the present district attorney, is a candidate for re-election, would it be asking too much if I requested you to do all in your power to aid his canvass?

Yours very respectfully,
(Signed) LEROY W. ROSS.
Assistant District Attorney.

At the headquarters of the Republicans it was stated that it was customary for the District Attorney in this county at each election to send out appeals to jurors. Mr. Ross was asked if the letter was a general appeal of such a kind. He said it was not and that he was merely sending the letter, as it stated, to men he had met.

AERONAUT FELL 100 FEET.

Professor Martin Struck by Gust. Picked Up Unconscious.

(Special to The Eagle.)

Nassau Boulevard, Oct. 26—James V. Martin, flying in his aeroplane, which is a cross between a monoplane and a biplane, this morning had a narrow escape from death. Martin, who was formerly a professor of aeronautics at Harvard, took his hybrid machine out early and began to do some stunts around the field. He was up about 100 feet when a gust of wind caught him and the plane turned a flip-flap and landed on the railroad tracks. Martin was picked up unconscious and carried to one of the hangars. It was at first thought that he would have to be taken to the hospital, but he came to after about ten minutes. His most severe injury was a deep gash over his right eye, while he also sustained many body bruises. The plane was smashed to splinters.

RAPID TRANSIT IN QUEENS.

Board of Estimate Approves Routes. Mayor's Signature Alone Needed.

The rapid transit routes in the Borough of Queens, which form a part of the comprehensive subway system, were approved by the Board of Estimate at the meeting today. Thirteen votes were cast in their favor. Mayor Gaynor did not vote, although President Connolly of Queens tried to induce him to state his attitude. The Mayor refrained from voting because the routes will come before him for final approval.

At least 200 members of the transit committee of the Borough of Queens attended the meeting of the board.

The routes include the Fifty-ninth Street Line, in Manhattan, over the Queensboro Bridge, and the Woodside, Astoria and Roosevelt avenue extensions.

If the routes finally go through, it will be possible to reach almost any part of Manhattan from Queens for a five-cent fare.

CHINA YIELDS TO REBELS BY DISMISSING SHENG, BLAMED FOR THE RISING

Seeks to Avoid Open Rupture With Assembly and Further Antagonize Greater Majority of Chinese.

ARMY CHIEF REPORTED KILLED

Canton Said to Have Fallen, With Great Bloodshed—Cheng-tu Troops Mutiny and Slay Commander.

Peking, October 26—Sheng Hsuan-Huai, Minister of Posts and Communications, has been dismissed from office in accordance with the demand of the National Assembly made upon the Government yesterday.

An imperial edict issued today cashiers him forever on the ground that he was mainly responsible for the plan to nationalize the Chinese railroads in consequence of which the present rebellion arose.

The edict explains that the Government's project was intended to benefit the people, but Sheng Hsuan-Huai failed to carry it out successfully and transgressed the law while endeavoring to force the railroad scheme.

Minister Sacrificed to Avoid Open Rupture.

The Government has thus chosen to sacrifice the man considered by foreigners as the strongest member of the cabinet in order to avoid an open rupture with the Assembly and further antagonize the great majority of Chinese.

Sheng negotiated the loans for the nationalization of the railroad and opposed the provincial policy which would localize their construction and control.

The rebellious elements in the Provinces of Sze-Chuen, Hu-Peh and Hu-Nan formulated charges against the minister and the subject was taken up by the National Assembly yesterday. The advocates of the charges stated that they were not opposed to foreign loans but rather to the methods employed by Sheng and the results which amounted to a robbery of the people from whom the railways under construction were taken and sold to foreigners.

Sheng was not present, but his secretary attempted to read a written statement from his chief. The members refused to hear him and cried "decapitate Sheng."

No one defended the minister and when a motion was made to demand the degradation of the noted mandarin, not even the Manchu princes, who were plainly intimidated by the radicals, objected.

Tang-Shao-Yi, who formerly held the post, succeeds Sheng Hsuan-Huai.

The president of the cabinet, Prince Ching, and the vice president, who resigned their acquiesence in Sheng's plan, will be subjected to a severe inquiry.

The edict further releases from custody the president of the Sze-Chuen provincial assembly, and other leaders in the riots at Chong-tu.

Punishment is ordered for General Chao-Erh-Feng (reported assassinated) and Wang-Ter-Wen, the present and past viceroys of Sze-Chuen.

Commander-in-Chief Compelled to Retreat.

The Official Gazette announces that General Yin Tchang, commander of the imperial troops, has telegraphed that two rebel regiments, on October 22 (Sunday), attacked Santaoktoa, fifteen miles distant from Wu-Chang. The Government troops repelled the rebels. On Monday the rebels, using four guns, forced the Third Brigade of imperialists to retire, and occupied Tsaochichong. On Tuesday there was some scattered skirmishing, during which some rebels were captured and others defeated.

Tang-Shao-Yi, who succeeded to the Ministry of Posts and Communications, is known in the United States, where he received a part of his education. He is a reformed, and was closely associated with Yuan-Shi-Kai when the latter was degraded, three years ago. He is considered a strong man.

Commander Reported Killed and Canton to Be in Rebel Hands.

Shanghai, October 26—A Chinese newspaper in an extra edition today announces that the Minister of War, General Yin Tchang, commanding the Imperial forces, has been assassinated by his own troops.

The paper also states that Canton has been seized by revolutionists. Great bloodshed there is reported.

Peking, October 26—An official communication states that General Yin Tchang telegraphed to the government from Slacken yesterday that the Imperial troops had advanced to Shokou and he was following them. The General added that the army had engaged in a number of skirmishes with the rebels but no battle would take place until the Imperial army was fully consolidated in its position.

Cheng-tu Troops Reported to Have Mutinied.

Peking, October 26—The Chinese newspapers report that the troops at Chengtu, the capital of Szechwan province, have mutinied and killed General Chao Erh-Feng, commander of the Imperial forces, and joined the rebels who now hold the capital.

The American Legation is asking that more warships be sent to Chinese waters, as the present number is not sufficient to cover all the ports which are in danger. No American vessel is now available at Chang-Sha, where there are twenty-nine Americans.

FOR MOOSE ORPHANAGE.

Tulsa, Okla., October 26—Charles Page, millionaire, has proffered to the Loyal Order of Moose, twenty acres of ground near here as a site for the Moose Home for Orphans, now maintained at Mapelo, Ind. Free water, fuel, pasture and use of a canning factory is included in the offer.

REPUDIATION OF WILLETT BY HIS MATES

30 SAYS CALLAHAN

Ketcham Hits at Candidate Without Naming Him.

BOTH ISSUE STATEMENTS.

Declare They Were Assured Editorial Was Not Directed Against Them.

William Willett of Queens County, Democratic nominee for Justice of the Supreme Court, was repudiated today by his two associates, Surrogate Herbert T. Ketcham, and Assistant Corporation Counsel Patrick E. Callahan, who were nominated for Justice of the Supreme Court at the same Democratic convention which named Willett.

Both Callahan and Ketcham issued formal statements about the withdrawal of their complaint of criminal libel against William Berri, publisher of the Standard Union, in which they said that they had discovered facts which showed that there was strong grounds for the position taken by Mr. Berri in the editorial article on which their action against Berri was based.

Mr. Callahan, who was the first to issue a statement explaining the withdrawal of the libel action against Berri, named William Willett in his statement, saying that there was strong grounds for the editorial article so far as Mr. Willett was concerned.

Surrogate Ketcham did not name Mr. Willett. Both candidates stated that they had received assurances from Mr. Berri's counsel that no suggestion that either one of them had given any payment or consideration for their nomination had been entertained by either Mr. Berri or his counsel.

Following Callahan's issuance of the statement, he went over to the Surrogate's Court and had a conference with Mr. Ketcham. Mr. McCooey was in the conference, and at its conclusion he declared that he could not say anything about the action of either the Surrogate or Mr. Callahan.

Callahan Defends His Record and Nomination.

Mr. Callahan's statement follows:

To the members of the Democratic and Independence League Judiciary Conventions and to the public:

In view of recent developments and discontinuance of the proceedings against Mr. William Berri, I feel that in justice to myself, my family and friends, to you and the public to whom I am appealing for election, a statement from me is due.

It is common knowledge that I was nominated only after an insistent demand by the Democratic voters of the district. This demand could not be ignored. My nomination was not bought. No consideration of any kind was either paid or promised by me or on my behalf. I would not accept or be a party to a purchased nomination.

The very suggestion shocks my moral sense in view of the dignity of the high office to which I am aspiring, and the character which I have builded up in thirty years of practice at the bar in Kings County.

Naturally, I felt outraged when I read the editorial in the Standard Union to the effect that I had paid a consideration for my nomination, and resorted to what appeared to me to be the speediest method to obtain redress, and swore to the complaint against Mr. Berri.

My complaint was true. The "certain facts" which have since come to my attention were unknown to me when I made my complaint. Whether or not a candidate on the ticket with me had resorted to methods which I despise and would never sanction, I was ignorant. Both candidates on the ticket with me by their sworn complaints and statements made before said complaints were sworn to assured me that they were innocent of any of the insinuations made in the article complained of.

Since the proceedings were begun, "certain facts" concerning the nomination of Mr. Willett, before unknown to me, were brought to my attention. Those facts convinced me so far as Mr. Willet was concerned, there were strong grounds for the position taken by Mr. Berri and the Standard Union. I then realized that there was no intention to reflect upon me personally, although the unfortunate wording of the article referred to would seem to implicate me.

Furthermore, I have received the personal assurance of Mr. Berri's counsel that there was absolutely nothing reflecting upon me and upon my nomination. Thereupon, I gladly and willingly withdrew my complaint against Mr. Berri.

Know that my nomination by both the Democratic and Independence League parties was obtained by the cleanest methods, and was given to me only after insistence by the voters of both parties and that upon both nominations there rests not the slightest taint or suspicion. I feel justified in appealing to the honest manhood of the voters of this judicial district, regardless of party ties, for their votes and their support.

I ask this in vindication of a life which has been lived among them, open and above board to every act of which I invite the most earnest and careful scrutiny.

PATRICK E. CALLAHAN.

Surrogate Also Declares He Never Paid for Nomination.

Surrogate Ketcham's statement was as follows:

"To the Voters of the Second Judicial District:

"The imputation is made that I corruptly paid a price for my nomination to the position of justice of the Supreme Court.

"I have not at any time paid or promised any price or other thing for this nomination. No one has made that promise for me.

"There is not an act, record, scrap of writing or circumstance which I will not at once open to any inquiry to be made by an individual or any body of voters with respect to this accusation.

"My nomination was as clean and as righteous as any nomination that was ever made.

"I have lived in this county, with a short interval, for fifty years. I have stayed poor to be honest. I have an accepted reputation which supports my denial of this injurious suggestion. No lawyer in this community will be found to express his belief in the charge which imputes this iniquity to me.

"I am assured by counsel for Mr. Berri that neither he nor his client, Mr. Berri, conceives or suggests that have paid or promised any consideration whatever for the nomination in question.

"I joined earnestly in the prosecution of Mr. Berri for the publication in the Standard-Union of the first published intimation that I was guilty of this scandal. I labored faithfully to bring the prosecution to trial. I learned after the commencement of the proceeding, facts which persuaded me beyond question that there was strong grounds for the position taken by Mr. Berri in the Standard-Union article. I learned that he had no facts or suggestions of fact that justified the unfortunate phrases of the article which rhetorically included me in its accusations. I had in company with my fellow prosecutors alleged that the article was untrue with respect to each of the Democratic nominees.

"When I learned that this statement was improvident I realized that the prosecution was instituted mistakenly, and I thereupon signed the letter heretofore published containing a candid statement of the mistake which I had made and the proffer of every reparation that decency required of me.

"The only mistake on my part which required the withdrawal was my original confidence that with respect to all of the Democratic judicial nominees the article contained an unjust accusation.

"In beginning the prosecution I did only that which a man of honor would do. In consenting to its discontinuance I did only that which a man of sense must do when confronted with facts, perhaps essential to the prosecution, though without relation to his personal conduct."

Willett Sees McCooey, but Holds His Peace.

William Willett called on Mr. McCooey at Democratic headquarters before the Callahan statement was issued this morning. Neither he nor McCooey knew of the plans of Mr. Callahan at that time. Willett left Democratic headquarters just before the Callahan statement came out, and he left no word as to where he was going. He could not be reached at his home in Far Rockaway, his office in Jamaica, or his office in Manhattan, after the Callahan and Ketcham statements had been given out.

Before leaving headquarters this morning Willett was asked if he was going to reply to the newspaper comment on the withdrawal of the libel complaint against Mr. Berri. He replied that he did not know about it, but that he did not think he would make any reply, or that he would reply to the speech made by James C. Cropsey last night in which he said the "judiciary scandal was the worst in history."

Willett was asked to give his explanation of why the candidates withdrew their complaints, and he talked in a general way about the responsibilities of publishers and editors for alleged criminal libel, to give the impression that he had withdrawn the complaint because he learned that Mr. Berri, as publisher, was not criminally liable for the acts of an editorial writer.

Joseph Cassidy, the Democratic boss of Queens County, who offered Willett as the choice of the Democrats of Queens for the place on the judiciary ticket, had been subpenaed by Meier Steinbrink, counsel for Mr. Berri. It was learned today. When Steinbrink received the letter of apology from the three candidates, he sent a letter to Mr. Cassidy notifying him that his presence at the Adams street court would not be required yesterday morning. The letter was returned to Steinbrink this morning with the words "Receipt refused" written across it.

FACE HIS MISFORTUNE.

Girl Identifies Peetsch as Holdup Man.

The coolness of Anna Eichele, 16 years old, of 18 Hartman street, while she was being robbed a month ago, led to the arrest of a man whom she accuses today. She works for a jewelry firm in Manhattan. She was on her way home one evening, when a man pounced on her from the shadow and grabbed her silver mesh bag containing $1.40.

"If you scream, I'll kill you," he said.

The girl laughed and remarked:

"It's not worth getting killed about."

She held him for a couple of minutes in conversation, asking him how it felt to be a crook, and other trivial questions. But all the while she was studying his face, imprinting it on her memory.

When he left, with her bag, she gave a long, detailed description of him to the police of the Miller avenue station. Detectives McKeon and Ryan arrested a man fitting the description today, who said his name was Edward Peetsch of 229 Hemlock street. The girl picked him out from among fourteen other prisoners today in the pen at the New Jersey avenue police court. Magistrate Harris held him in $1,500 bail for a hearing on Monday.

MINSTREL SONG.

"I ain't done no-o-thin' to no-o-body."

COURT ACCUSED RUSSELL OF DEFRAUDING HIS WIFE

SERVANT GIRL WAS NAMED.

Preacher's Name Was Sensationally Linked With Those of Various Women.

Investigation shows that Pastor Russell, who has brought a $100,000 libel suit against The Eagle, left Pittsburg for Brooklyn soon after his wife's successful suit for a separation. Sensational evidence relative to his relations with women was introduced at the trial and caused the action to become notorious as the "jellyfish case."

Pastor Russell spent five years and much money in a fight to prevent his wife from getting a separation and to avoid the payment of alimony. He was beaten in every one of his appeals. The Superior Court of Pennsylvania, in deciding against him, said: "His course of conduct toward his wife evidences such insistent egotism and extravagant self-praise that it would be manifest to the jury that his conduct toward her was one of continual arrogant domination that would necessarily render the life of any sensitive Christian woman a burden and make her condition intolerable. * * * There is not a syllable in the testimony to justify his repeated aspersions on her character and her mental condition."

The Court of Common Pleas, to which Mrs. Russell appealed for alimony, denied Pastor Russell's plea that he was penniless. The court heard evidence showing that he had transferred property worth $217,000 to the Watch Tower Bible and Tract Society, of which he is the president. Referring to one transaction involving a sheriff's sale of property worth $20,000 for less than $200 the court said: "The purpose of this whole transaction was to deprive the wife of her dower interest and was a fraud on her."

The evidence produced against him in the alimony case was that he accumulated a fortune through stock speculation and donations from his followers, who are taught to believe that the millennium is due in October, 1914.

Has Property in Corporations He Controls.

None of this property is in his own name, but is carried in the name of various corporations which he controls. It required months of effort on the part of the attorneys for Mrs. Maria F. Russell to disclose the manipulations by which the United States Investment Company, a holding corporation, became the owner of the Russell properties. This company's charter shows that its capital stock of $1,000 is divided among Charles Taze Russell, who holds $900 worth; John A. Bohnet of Miracle Wheat fame, who holds $5 worth, and Ernest C. Henninges, who married Rose Ball, a girl whose name figures prominently in the Russell divorce suit, who holds the remaining $5 worth.

The Watch Tower Bible and Tract Society through which Pastor Russell is now conducting his operations is a business corporation chartered under the laws of Pennsylvania. It is this corporation that pays the expenses involved in propagating the Russell religion and to this corporation the Russellites, as his followers are called, make their donations and bequests. Some years ago these bequests, according to the evidence presented in the Pennsylvania courts, amounted to $65,000 a year.

Upon transferring his property to this society, Pastor Russell required the issue to him of one voting share for every $10 contribution. The minutes of the Society show that in this way enough voting shares have been issued to him to give him the control of the annual elections. When the Pennsylvania courts ordered him to pay alimony to his wife, Pastor Russell filed a plea that he had nothing with which to pay as he had transferred all his property to the society. The courts answered that the transfer was a fraud upon his wife and that Russell still controls the property since he controls the society.

Pastor Russell Never Ordained.

Pastor Russell has never been ordained. He began life selling shirts in Alleghany having inherited the business from his father. He then lectured on religious topics in various halls and churches and became known in Pittsburg and Alleghany as "the crank preacher." He soon got a following and sold out the five men's furnishing stores which he owned, devoting all his time to teaching his religious doctrines.

The record of his troubles with women begins soon after his marriage to Maria F. Ackley, in 1879. His wife, who is now living in Avalon, Pa., says she found improper letters written to him by the women book agents he employed to sell his books and tracts. Several years later she alleges she discovered proof of improprieties between her husband and Rose Ball. Pastor Russell's answer in court was that he had only caressed Rose Ball as a father. Evidence was introduced in court tending to show improper relations between Pastor Russell and one of his female servants. Pastor Russell testified that he had gone into the girl's room at night "to minister to the sick."

Several years later trouble arose in Pastor Russell's congregation in Alleghany relative to allegations that Pastor Russell was in the habit of locking himself in a room with female members of his congregation. Following an understanding between himself and his congregation Pastor Russell took a vow, of which the following is one of seven paragraphs: "And so far as reasonably possible, I will avoid being in the same room with any of the opposite sex alone, unless the door to the room stand wide open."

Since he has come to Brooklyn Pastor Russell has been before the public in connection with his relations to women on two occasions. In August, 1909, a woman, named Sophie Hassan, was discovered in the vestibule of his home on Columbia Heights, demanding access to Pastor Russell, to whom she alluded as "my bridegroom." She was sent to the Kings Park Asylum for observation. In December of last year rumors reached Pittsburg that Pastor Russell had been indiscreet in Brooklyn. There was no evidence of any indiscretion beyond an article which Pastor Russell published in the Watch Tower of January 1 of this year. In this Pastor Russell declares that the "fallen angels" have a habit of materializing on earth, assuming the form of some living person and committing disastrous crimes. He goes on to tell about a letter received from one of his followers in Australia. This follower's wife is alleged to have reported to her husband an incident which seemed to involve improper conduct on the part of Pastor Russell. "At such a distance," the article in the Watch Tower continues, "it is easy enough to prove an alibi; to prove that the editor was not there. But suppose the materialization in all of its particulars had transpired in Brooklyn. * * *

JUDGES NEED LAMPS.

Important Cases Must Wait for Want of Light.

Because there have not been any lamps in the ornate chandeliers in the Court of Special Sessions since the fire, Judges Salmon, Fleming and Olmstead were obliged to adjourn the court at 5:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon, postponing the trial of the eight cases that will consequently not be disposed of for a month.

The judges have frequently appealed for lights, but are yet waiting for them. Judge Salmon said to an Eagle reporter that unless lights are put in soon, some important cases may suffer long delays.

NOTED AMERICANS IN WRECK

Train Filled with Passengers for the Lusitania in Collision. All Escape Injury.

London, October 28.—The American boat train which left Euston Station at noon to-day filled with Americans and other passengers for the steamer Lusitania, sailing from Liverpool for New York, ran into the Trent Valley local train at Colwich, about six miles south of Stafford, at 2:30 o'clock.

None of the passengers on the boat train was injured, but three of those on the local train were hurt, two seriously and the third slightly.

Alarming reports were at first circulated, one from Stanford saying that a score of people had been killed. This was promptly denied by the officials of the London and Northwestern Road, which operates the line. They described the accident as not serious. Later it was learned that only three persons were injured and those were on the local.

Among the passengers on the boat train were the American Ambassador to France, Mr. Bacon, and Mrs. Bacon, and Leland Harrison, second secretary of the American Embassy in London.

Howard Gould, A. D. Juilliard, Gardiner K. Clark, James Bishop, W. D. Grant, Charles F. Forbes and family were on the passenger list of the Lusitania, but it is not known whether they were on the train.

After a brief delay the boat train was able to proceed, and it was expected that it would arrive at Liverpool in time to catch the steamer.

WANTS WIFE TO RETURN.

She Went Away in June, and Says in Letter She Is Sorry.

Captain John F. Heine of the fishing schooner Gussie, who lives at 68 Conklin avenue, Canarsie, is making every effort to find the present whereabouts of his wife, Minnie, who disappeared from his home on July 6, this year. Mr. Heine says that he can give no reason for his wife's sudden disappearance, as they had always been happy and that never a harsh word passed between them. They have been married thirteen years.

One month after she went away she wrote a letter to her sister. This letter was postmarked Youngstown, Ohio. Nothing was heard from her again until about two weeks ago when another letter postmarked Cleveland, Ohio, was received by Mr. Heine. In this latter she said that she was sorry for what she had done, and, as she had seen no account of her disappearance in any of the papers she concluded that her husband must be glad she went away. She finished the letter by saying that if he wanted her to return or to hear from her to put an advertisement in a certain paper for three days in succession and to start it with "Minnie." So Mr. Heine has inserted the following:

"Minnie, your son and husband want you to return home at once. Please do not delay. Son sick. Please write.

"JOHN HEINE."

Canarsie expects Mrs. Heine's return soon.

BALLOON TRIAL FLIGHT OFF.

Strong Wind Considered Too Risky by Vaniman.

Atlantic City, N. J., October 28—Melvin Vaniman, at 8 o'clock this morning, officially called off the trial flight of the airship Akron, scheduled for this afternoon. A twenty-mile an hour northwest wind and threatened storm made the trip too risky.

"I will go up Monday, or the first calm day thereafter," Mr. Vaniman announced.

The flight was to have been made over the ocean and Atlantic City to test out all parts of the great balloon in preparation for an attempt to cross the Atlantic to Europe.

TELLS OF TRADE IN TRANSFERS

Railroad Man Says Levinsky Helped to Cheat Company.

Frank Levinsky of 405 Ellery street was arrested this morning by Detective Walter Conlon of the Adams street court charged with unlawfully dealing in transfer tickets, owned by the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company. Philip Roth, an investigator for the railroad company, was the complainant, and he said that the prisoner had been acting as a go-between for dishonest car conductors.

Roth found, he declares, that the man was in the habit of getting bundles of transfers from conductors on one line and giving them to conductors on another line, in exchange for another bundle of transfers. It is alleged that the conductors turned in the transfers and "knocked down" on the cash fares.

The prisoner pleaded not guilty. When he was arrested he had five transfer tickets in his pocket and a conductor's punch. He was held for an examination on November 2.

FATHER WILSON TO WOMEN.

Urges Kings Daughters to Avoid Being Mere Ritualists.

The annual meeting of the Daughters of the King of the Diocese of Long Island was held at St. Stephen's Church yesterday. There was a large attendance from the city and from the various chapters on Long Island.

The early part of the afternoon was devoted to the transaction of business. At 4 o'clock evensong was said, and the sermon was preached by the Rev. Andrew Chalmers Wilson.

Father Wilson urged the daughters to avoid being ritualists merely and said:

"One of the most unchristianlike things in the world is the attitude of good, pious women toward the Magdalene. Once the sinner has repented our Lord says, 'Go and sin no more.' If He forgets the sin as should we," He went on to say.

"The work of your order must be done at the altar. No prayer is ever unanswered. The answer may be long delayed, but in the end God always gives more than we ask."

3 RESCUED FROM LAUNCH.

Barnegat, N. J., October 28—The small launch Rover went ashore last night off Nero and Captain J. McDonald of Mays Landing, N. J., with his wife and two children were rescued with great difficulty by the lifesaving crews of Barnegat and Forked River stations.

HANKOW RECAPTURED BY CHINESE TROOPS

All Day Battle In Which the Rebels Suffered Severe Losses.

FIGHTING DURING HEAVY RAIN.

Ching-Kiang, Regarded as Keystone to Defense of Shanghai, Reported Ready to Fall.

Siaokan, China, October 28—(From a correspondent with the Imperial Army under General Yin Tchang)—The native city of Hankow was recaptured from the rebels, yesterday, after sanguinary fighting that lasted all day.

Large quantities of guns and ammunition fell into the hands of the Imperialists. The casualties among the latter numbered about 200, while the rebels lost about 400 men.

Two engagements were fought. The first was begun at 6 o'clock in the morning south of Shekou, at Saotao Bridge, toward Liuchiamiao. Supported by the warships, the Imperial troops forced the rebels from their position at Liuchia Temple, which was captured at 11 o'clock.

The fighting was recommenced in the direction of the Tachih Gate at Hankow. The rebels were strongly entrenched west of the race course. The Imperialists forced their way across Saotao Bridge and seized the town of Liuchia. Driving the enemy before them, the loyal troops victoriously entered the native city of Hankow.

The Imperialists lost about 40 killed, including a captain and two lieutenants, while 150 others were wounded. The rebels lost 450 men.

Field and mountain guns were captured by the Imperialists. Fifty medical officers at Liuchia and Shekou are doing excellent work.

Peking, October 28—The Minister of War General Yin Tchang, in a report to the government received today describes a victory over the rebel forces in the vicinity of Hankow as follows:

The first division of the Imperial army advanced from Shekou yesterday attacking the position of the rebels. The Imperialists crossed Saotao bridge, defeating the enemy with much slaughter and capturing large quantities of guns and ammunition.

Liuchia was seized and the army flushed with victory, advanced and occupied the Chinese city of Hankow.

General Yin Tchang is now at Siaokan otherwise known as Kilometre Twenty. He further reports that he has sent detachments of troops to Tchow and Yingchong Ju which district it is reported the rebels are assembling. These detachments will also protect the railway communication which is threatened by the revolutionists.

Fighting During a Heavy Rain.

Yesterday's fighting took place during a heavy rain. The troops fought with great valor.

The government has succeeded in obtaining a large loan from a French and Belgian syndicate. The amount is not divulged but the issue price is 96 with 6 per cent. interest.

The Board of Foreign Affairs announces that the train service on the Peking-Hankow Railway will be resumed next Monday.

The foreign board also states that 3,000 loyal troops are marching on Chang-Sha, the capital of Hu-Nan Province, which is in the possession of the rebels. The troops are proceeding from Yu-Chow. The recapture of Pihsien, a city in Sze-Chuen Province, by the government forces is officially confirmed.

The adherents of Yuan-Shi-Kai, who has been placed in supreme command of the land and naval forces, met today with prominent radical members of the National Assembly, who are planning for an entirely new Chinese cabinet, a constitutional government and the immediate summoning of a parliament.

Yuan-Shi-Kai has postponed his planned departure from Changte for the south, and it is expected that he will soon return to Peking in the capacity of premier.

Canton is practically in a state of independence. The city has declined to contribute men or money for the support of the Government in the present crisis.

The Central Government demanded a large sum as a special military contribution, but the Viceroy of Kiang-Tung, after consultation with the gentry, curtly replied that it was impossible to supply the funds, as at a meeting of gentry it had been determined to refuse the demand and that Canton should look after her own interests. The business of the city is proceeding peacefully.

Government Cause Near Shanghai Desperate.

Shanghai, October 28—Whatever the situation around Hankow, matters have grown more desperate for the government cause in the vicinity of Shanghai and along the lower part of the Yangtse River. There were persistent reports to-day that Ching-Kiang, 150 miles above Shanghai, was about to fall into the hands of the rebels. Ching-Kiang is the first of the series of lower river forts above Shanghai and is regarded here as the keystone of the defense of the city. If it falls it is conceded that all the forts below it as far as Wu-sung will quickly follow. Wu-sung, ten miles above Shanghai, marks the city's last line of defenses.

West of Shanghai, the wealthy city of Su-chow is threatened, while above Ching-kiang three important cities, Nan-king, Yang-chow and Wu-Hu, are believed to be in danger. All four of these cities reported today that while the situation was still quiet, there is open sympathy for the rebel cause and probably little effective resistance will be offered to attack.

At Ching-kiang it was hoped that trouble might be avoided if the revolutionists could be prevailed upon to await the outcome of the parleys at Peking. There are many high Manchu officials stationed there and a massacre is feared if the city falls.

It is believed in Shanghai that Shang Hsuan-Huai, the dismissed Minister of Posts and Communications, is coming to Shanghai, where he has a magnificent home. More than two hundred pieces of his baggage have arrived here from Peking addressed in the care of a foreigner.

The business situation is still precarious. The money market is in an alarming state on account of the vast amounts of specie withdrawn from the bank here by Peking and other centers.

In Amoy revolutionary sympathy has developed to such an alarming extent that Teotai Ching, the only high Manchu official in Amoy, today sent his family to Su-chow, the capital of the province, for protection. As a precaution all the members of the household on their voyage northward wore the clothing of the native Chinese, discarding their Manchu robes.

Government Again Controls Railroad Line.

Washington, October 28—The control of the entire line of railway communication from Peking to Hankow by the imperial Chinese forces was reported to the Chinese legation here today, in cablegrams from Peking. These dispatches confirmed the reports of an imperial victory north of Hankow yesterday and added that the Imperial forces had captured the railroad station in Hankow.

The messages received by Yung Kwai, charge of the Chinese legation, and forwarded by him to the State Department, stated that the government forces had attacked and captured several of the positions held by the rebels north of Hankow, including Liu Chiao Nao, twenty miles northeast of the city. The insurgents retired from the Imperial troops, and the latter successfully stormed the railroad entrances to Hankow, according to the legation messages.

SERGT. KESSEL TRANSFERRED

Guardian of Brooklyn Borough President Put on Patrol Duty; Steers Much Incensed.

Police Sergeant John Kessel, who has been the police watchdog at the door of the office of the head of the administration in Brooklyn Borough Hall for about eighteen years, has been transferred by Commissioner Waldo to do patrol duty in a Brooklyn precinct.

When Borough President Steers reached his office in the Borough Hall this morning and found that this transferral had been made without any notification of it having been sent him, he was very indignant.

The reason for Commissioner Waldo's action is not known, but officers of the borough administration have their own opinion in the matter. The passing of Sergeant Kessel gave rise to a report that Commissioner Waldo was taking this means of impressing upon Borough President Steers, a member of the Board of Estimate, that there ought to be more policemen. This theory was strengthened when information came from the Bronx that the police officer who has been stationed at the Borough President's office there had also been transferred.

Borough President Steers said today that he should at least have been notified that Sergeant Kessel was to go. Had he known of it beforehand he would have made an effort to prevent it. It is likely that he will not let the matter rest, however.

The Borough President paid high tribute to Sergeant Kessel's ability as a police officer. He said that the Sergeant was peculiarly fitted for the duties of handling the numerous cranks who daily visit the Borough President's office. Kessel has an instinctive ability to recognize a crank the moment he enters the doorway, and furthermore, he possesses a tact born of years of experience with undesirables.

Kessel also has a wide acquaintance with men in public life in Brooklyn, and is popular with all those who have occasion to visit the officials at the Borough Hall. Mr. Steers regretted exceedingly that Kessel must now "pound" the pavements.

Kessel has been the policeman at the Borough Hall through every borough administration, and served there under the last two Mayors of Brooklyn before consolidation.

THOUGHT WHALES SUBMARINES

Sayville Fishermen Say Big Haul Resulted From Whales.

(Special to The Eagle.)

Sayville, L. I., October 28—Captain Albert Tuthill, with the Bishop moss bunker fishing gang, reports making a very large haul of fish in Ambrose Channel yesterday. They believe their success was due to a pair of whales swimming about the fish keeping them together in a solid body, seemingly for their benefit.

The fishermen at first sight took these whales as a part of a fleet of submarines as rear guards to the North River fleet of warships. Captain Tuthill said the whales were as large as his schooner.

TEN GIRLS OVERCOME.

Found in Their Rooms Nearly Asphyxiated by Coal Gas.

Syracuse, October 28—Ten girls, ranging in age from 25 to 30, and all employed as waitresses in the Onondaga Hotel were overcome by coal gas early today in their rooming house. Four of them are in a hospital and six others are being cared for at the hotel where they were employed. The victims are: Julia Dutchebe, Katie Pelc, Katie Kladon, Mary Selska, Katie Chakelski, Mary Lubis, Katie Kulis, Annie Porlek, Annie Judge.

The failure of the girls to report for duty at 2 o'clock this morning led to an investigation. They were all found unconscious. Some of them were partly dressed, others were nearly lifeless in bed. The physicians attending them expect that all will recover. The gas escaped from a coal stove used as a heater for a suite of four rooms occupied by the young women.

TEACHER GETS DIVORCE.

Eleanor B. Weed Hired Detectives to Trail Husband.

Eleanor B. Weed, a Brooklyn School teacher, was today granted a divorce from her husband, Leonard A. Weed, by Justice Maddox, in the Supreme Court, at Mineola, L. I. The decree was asked for on statutory grounds.

The couple formerly lived at 1313 Pacific street. The plaintiff had hired private detectives to trail the defendant, and it was testified to that on July 21 last the detectives traced Weed from the Flatbush avenue station to Coney Island, where he met a woman, with whom he afterward went to a Coney Island resort.

LIFE TERM FOR UNION LEADER.

Convicted of Murder—Admits Causing Death of Another Man.

Chicago, October 28—Maurice Enright, labor union organizer, was today found guilty of the murder of Vincent Altman and his punishment fixed at life imprisonment. Enright shot Altman, also a labor organizer, in the barroom of a downtown hotel.

In a long confession, made shortly after his arrest, Enright admitted that he killed William Lyons, a labor union delegate, but denied that he had any part in the killing of Altman.

ACCUSED WOMAN'S PRAYER.

Ontonagon, Mich., October 28—In an interview last night Mrs. Laura Stannard, who is charged with murdering her husband, said: "I have prayed always that God would prove my innocence. I have also told in my cell to converse with the spirit of my dear husband and father of my children, and ask him to do the right thing by me now as I always did by him in life, if it was in his power."

AUSTIN DAM MISTAKE.

Olean, N. Y., October 28—That the "bedrock theory," specified in the plans for the Austin dam, was omitted in the work of construction is the conclusion of Alexander R. McKim, New York State inspector of dams and locks, who has just returned from an inspection of the scene of the Austin disaster. "It was an appalling mistake," said Mr. McKim.

FEDERAL INVESTIGATION OF McNAMARA PLOT IN USE OF DYNAMITE

Information in Possession of District Attorney That Explosive Was Transferred From State to State.

J. J. MC NAMARA OFFICE USED.

Claim That It Was the Headquarters. Petition Asks County Court for Possession of Evidence.

Indianapolis, Ind., October 28—That, according to information in the possession of the United States District Attorney, a conspiracy unlawfully to transport dynamite from state to state has existed, with headquarters in the offices of John J. McNamara here, is the statement of a petition filed in the County Criminal Court today, praying for possession of evidence in the case to be used in a Federal Grand Jury investigation.

John J. McNamara is now under arrest in Los Angeles, awaiting trial in connection with the dynamiting of the Los Angeles Times building. The trial of his brother, James B., in the same case, is now in progress.

John J. McNamara is the secretary-treasurer of the International Association of Bridge and Structural Ironworkers. Ortie E. McManigal, in a confession that proves a basis for the trial of the McNamaras, alleged that he was a confederate of the brothers in a conspiracy which involved murder and destruction all over the country.

John J. McNamara, James B. McNamara, Ortie E. McManigal, "and others working in concert with them," are the persons alleged by the United States attorney for this district, Charles W. Miller, to have engaged in the conspiracy. Dynamite and nitroglycerine were unlawfully transported on passenger trains in interstate commerce through Indiana, Illinois, Pennsylvania, Missouri and California, according to the petitioner.

Admission, incriminating letters and other evidence, the petitioner recites, are contained in books, papers and boxes of explosives and weapons seized by the police in a raid on the office in the city of the International Association of Bridge and Structural Iron Workers of which John J. McNamara is secretary. Evidence, it is charged, was also found in a box at the home of D. Jones, an iron worker, and was found at the lodgings of John J. McNamara.

HURT, TELLS OF CAR CRASH.

But Authorities Have No Record of Locomotive-Trolley Smashup.

Thomas Appleton, an employee at the Eastern District Hospital, living at 1455 Metropolitan avenue, was severely cut about the face and hands today in an accident about which no one but he seems to have any definite information. The accident, as Appleton told at the hospital when he showed up there today, occurred at Flushing and Metropolitan avenues, an electric locomotive of the Long Island Railroad crashing into a crowded trolley of the Metropolitan-Grand street line at 5 o'clock this morning.

But the police don't know anything about the accident, for there was no ambulance call.

Nor does the B. R. T. Company.

Nor does the Long Island Railroad Company.

Nor does the Public Service Commission, which receives reports of such accidents.

According to Appleton, however, the passengers narrowly escaped being killed. It happened in a heavy mist. The rear platform of the trolley car was smashed, the car thrown from the track and the passengers hurled in all directions. The speed of the Long Island locomotive was scarcely checked, and it dashed on to Long Island City, the engineer apparently ignorant of the collision. There was no flagman at the crossing at the time.

The B. R. T. said today that one of its cars had a wheel guard caught in making the crossing at Flushing and Metropolitan avenues at 5:54 this morning, causing a delay in traffic.

WIDOW WITH BROWN HAIR.

Such Is Wanted by Westerner, Who Writes a Minister.

(Special to The Eagle.)

Patchogue, L. I., October 28—Throughout Long Island there appears to be a veritable epidemic of romantic marriages and elopements. These episodes having been truthfully reported by local correspondents of the metropolitan newspapers, seem to have spread beyond the zone of the Greater City, for the Rev. Ira W. Henderson, pastor of the local Methodist church, received the following rather startling communication a day or so ago:

"Rev. I. W. Henderson, Patchogue, L. I.

Dear Sir: The enclosed clipping (from a Springfield, Ill., newspaper caught my eye. I presume you know the young widows. If you do, and one of them has brown hair and eyes, age about 30 to 35, and say about 125 pounds weight, without encumbrance, you can tell her, or them to be wise and contented and look to the West and to furnish the 5x9 address to the writer hereof. I cannot, of course, divulge any names for fear this might be printed but I can furnish the name of a man, a thorough gentleman, in business and doing well, who wishes to meet just such a woman as I have described. Further information and references will be given in confidence and this letter must be treated so too. Should either of them wish more details, tell them to write to P. O. Box —, Hurst, Ill."

The clipping in question referred to the marriage of Mrs. Emily Robbins, aged 50, and Homer D. Raynor, aged 32 years, at the Methodist Church, at the close of the morning service, on October 8. The story, beyond stating the facts of the wedding, goes further to saying that six young widows of the village who witnessed the ceremony were dreadfully put out because the elderly widow had been chosen by the middle-aged bridegroom while each one of the comely young widows had tried in vain to capture the comfortably fixed widower, Raynor.

THE BEST TO THE LAST.

A special musical programme will be rendered by the McClure Instrumental Trio. This meeting is for men. We are inviting them to bring their vital questions for Dr. Boynton to answer.

WILLETT SECURED LOAN OF $20,000

Judiciary Nominee Explains Borrowing a Large Sum.

ISSUES A STATEMENT

Says $10,000 Was for Campaign Use, $5,000 to Pay Note, $5,000 for Stock.

DISTRICT ATTORNEYS ASTIR.

Will Make Inquiries in Two Counties.

Callahan May Tell About "Certain Facts."

William Willett of Far Rockaway, Democratic and Independence League candidate for Justice of the Supreme Court, who was repudiated by his two associates on the Democratic ticket, Surrogate Herbert T. Ketcham and Assistant Corporation Counsel Patrick E. Callahan, yesterday, issued a statement of his financial affairs during the past thirty days, at his Manhattan law office, 141 Broadway, last night.

He says he had to borrow $20,000 within the past month, of which $10,000 was "for the purpose of spending it, if that much was needed, during the present campaign." He met a note which had come due with $5,000, and purchased stock, with $5,000, from Louis Walter, jr.

Mr. Willett, who was pointed to by Mr. Callahan as affording some ground for the editorial in the Standard Union, for which William Berri, its publisher was arrested on a charge of criminal libel, plunged right into the heart of the controversy with his statement. He admitted that his financial affairs are assumed to be the foundation for the Standard Union editorial, which was entitled "Tammany's Touch on the Judicial Ticket," and which contained a reference to the nominations as follows: "As to one of them there is already a rumor of a shocking scandal involving the payment of a large sum of money."

Mr. Willett affirms in the statement that he never in his life paid one dollar for a nomination and that he never earned a tainted dollar.

News of Statement Spreads Quickly, and Calder Comments.

The news of his statement, following upon the heels of the statements of Ketcham and Callahan that they had been assured that no suggestion was made by either Mr. Berri or his counsel that they had paid any consideration for their own nominations, created a tremendous sensation throughout the city last night. It was referred to at the Union League Club Republican meeting by James C. Cropsey, and the word was passed along from clubhouse to clubhouse until all the politicians in town were discussing its effect.

Congressman William M. Calder said, after hearing the statement:

"It is plain from the statements of Surrogate Ketcham and Mr. Callahan, Willett's two associates on the ticket, that they believe that very questionable, if not corrupt, methods were used in connection with the Democratic judiciary convention. It is well known that Tammany has used these methods in connection with its nominations.

"The only way the people of Kings can show their resentment and their determination to end such scandalous Tammany methods is by voting against the entire Democratic ticket. I think all thoughtful and conscientious citizens will do this."

District Attorneys to Inquire in Two Counties.

The District Attorneys of two counties will take up the scandal without delay and seek for evidence which will show whether or not a crime has been committed. District Attorney Frederick De Witt of Queens County stated last night that he had arranged for a conference with County Judge Humphrey on Monday morning, and if anything should be discovered as a basis for criminal proceedings he would take the matter up. There is no Grand Jury sitting in Queens County at the present time, but it is possible that an extraordinary Grand Jury would be empaneled to consider it.

Acting District Attorney Robert H. Elder said, last night, that he would take up the investigation of the matter at once, using the statements of Ketcham and Callahan as a starting point. He said that he would take up the question of jurisdiction first. If any money was passed in Queens County, he wished to be sure before beginning to investigate all the circumstances, that the authorities of Kings County would have jurisdiction. The fact that the nominating convention was held in Kings County, he said, might give his office jurisdiction.

William B. Stewart, chairman of the Grievance Committee of the Queens County Bar Association, announced last night that a meeting of his committee would be held on Monday evening, at which Mr. Callahan and Surrogate Ketcham would be asked to explain what they meant by "certain facts" which they said had been called to their attention and led them to withdraw their complaint of criminal libel made against Mr. Berri.

Callahan May Have Statement as to the "Certain Facts."

Mr. Callahan was asked over the telephone last night if the "Certain facts" to which he referred in his statement, coincided with Mr. Willett's explanation of them as furnished in the Willett statement.

"I will have no further comment to make," he said, "until I have read Mr. Willett's statement carefully."

A statement from Mr. Callahan is expected tomorrow. The information he received concerning the "certain facts" he mentions, did not come from Mr. Berri or his counsel, it was learned last night.

William Randolph Hearst, whose followers in Kings County placed Mr. Wil-

WILLETT'S STATEMENT.

In view of the extraordinary statements made by my associates on the ticket, I deem it justice to myself to make a plain statement of my financial affairs during the past month, which is now assumed to be the foundation for the Standard-Union attack.

I have had occasion to borrow from certain banks the sum of $20,000, and no more, within about thirty days. Five thousand dollars of this sum was used to take up a note of $5,000 due October 22, 1911. On September 30, 1911, I bought, for $5,000, from Louis T. Walters, Jr., sixty-three shares of the Automobile Building Company stock, all of which stock, except said sixty-three shares, was controlled by Willett & Frost, and the purchase of the stock was therefore highly desirable. The purchase also included twenty-four shares of the Cabinet Land Company stock. Mr. Walters stated that he was in urgent need of money, and I was more than glad to get the stock at the price paid. The other $10,000 was borrowed for the purpose of spending it, should that much be needed, during this campaign, and I have nearly all of it yet.

I have never in my life paid one dollar, either directly or indirectly, for any nomination and have never earned a tainted dollar.

I was induced by my associates to cause the arrest of Mr. Berri, who, I afterwards learned, could not be held personally, as personal knowledge of the article could not be traced to him.

Mr. McCooey presented me for signature the letter of withdrawal with Mr. Ketcham's signature attached. I disapproved of its terms, but signed it because the others did so, and because Mr. McCooey urgently requested it.

The Standard-Union was guilty of criminal libel, but there was not sufficient evidence to connect it personally with Mr. Berri. I shall give the Standard-Union an opportunity to prove its libels in court.

WILLIAM WILLETT.

ASK MAYOR FOR A BUREAU.

Retired Policemen Seek Odd Jobs Through City.

During the past week a delegation from the Veteran Policeman's Association has called twice at the City Hall to interview Mayor Gaynor and ask his aid in having an employment bureau established for the members of the association. The delegation included Sergeant Mahoney and Patrolmen Conroy and Wanzer. They were named at a recent meeting of the association, after a discussion of the proposed plan at length.

The Veterans—former members of the uniformed force retired on pensions—feel that they might get employment frequently if some sort of a bureau were maintained under the direction of the city. They mention the Mayor's remarks some months ago when he was quoted to be effect that special officers ought to be under the eye of the regular police department. There are many times, say the veterans, when banks and other corporations or firms need the services of the police, and if they were encouraged would be likely to employ former policemen.

A QUIET RAID.

Six Are Charged With Being Common Gamblers.

Second Deputy Police Commissioner Dougherty, on whom, now that William J. Flynn has left the department, devolves the duty of getting after the gamblers, raided an alleged gambling resort at 907 Fulton street last night. The raid was barren of sensations, as the attacking party was not obliged to use axes or force an entrance in any way. They got in very easily, collected some Klondike tables, dice and racing sheets and placed several men under arrest on "John Doe" warrants.

The place is a flat above a store. It was raided a month ago. This time the evidence was collected by James C. White of the Central Office, who had been watching the building for sometime, and who made the complaint.

On the John Doe warrants the police arrested Frederick Baer of Manhattan, Thomas Kelly of 91 Verona place, Charles Adams of 137 St. John's place, Joseph Smith of 15 Vine street, Jenerno Poneria of 494 President street and James Morgan of 212 Columbia street. They were all charged with being common gamblers. They were taken to the Classon avenue police station, where they were held in $500 bail each.

RECIPROCITY LOST BY 35,774.

Comparatively Small Popular Majority Against Laurier.

Ottawa, Ont., October 28—That the Laurier government and reciprocity were beaten by a comparatively small popular vote is indicated by official returns received from 195 of the 221 constituencies.

In the 195 constituencies, 1,001,556 votes were cast, and the majority against Laurier and reciprocity was only 35,774. In the City of Toronto alone the popular majority for the Conservatives was 25,000.

MINISTER UNABLE TO SLEEP.

Washington, October 28—Inability to sleep has caused the Rev. John Reid Shannon, pastor of the Metropolitan M. E. Church, to resign.

St. Paul, Minn., October 28—Dr. James S. Montgomery, pastor of the First Methodist Church here, has accepted a call to the Metropolitan M. E. Church in Washington, D. C., known as the "Administration Church."

PISTOLS IN SUPREME COURT.

Washington, October 28—Pistols doubtless will be used in the Supreme Court, if the court acts favorably upon a request to review a case, presented to the tribunal today in printed form. It involves the validity of a patent for an automatic pistol. In making the application for the review, a manufacturing Company forwarded to the court some pistols to illustrate the points in controversy.

WRECK DELAYED LUSITANIA.

Liverpool, October 28—The section of the American boat train which was in collision with a local train at Colwich this afternoon arrived at Liverpool only one hour and a half late. No one on the boat train, however, was injured. The Cunard Company held the steamship Lusitania for a couple of hours awaiting the arrival of other passengers sailing for America.

NO CHILE-PERU WAR.

Washington, October 28—Fear excited in Peru by the gathering of Chilean forces in the north had been diminished by a formal statement of the Chilean government that those troops were simply executing ordinary spring maneuvers, and were not intended to operate against Peru. Word of this reached the State Department today, following an announcement that the Colombian-Peruvian boundary dispute had been adjusted.

GIRL KISSED PASTOR AND SAT ON HIS KNEE

But Mr. Russell of the Tabernacle Only Submitted to It to Be Kind.

MAY HAVE FELT HER PULSE.

He Sometimes Ministered to the Sick, Locked in Another Girl's Room Innocently.

(Special to The Eagle.)

Pittsburg, October 27—The suit for a separation brought by Martha F. Russell against Charles Taze Russell, her husband, popularly known as Pastor Russell, who has just entered a libel suit against The Brooklyn Eagle, is remembered here as one of the most sensational court proceedings in the history of Alleghany County.

Pastor Russell's advertising methods had already attracted a good deal of attention to himself, and while many referred to him as "the crank preacher of Alleghany," his unsual lectures and effective publicity methods drew good-sized crowds to his Bible House on Arch street. When the fact that Pastor Russell's wife was suing him for a separation became public much general interest was aroused and the courtroom was thronged during the proceedings.

The testimony which elicited the most comment concerned the relations of Pastor Russell with Rose Ball, a young woman stenographer employed by Pastor Russell in the Bible House on Arch street. This testimony was given by Mrs. Russell on direct examination on Thursday, April 26, 1906. It was ruled out by the Court on the ground that the incidents to which reference was made were said to have occurred on a date which precedes the dates mentioned in Mrs. Russell's bill of complaint. Pastor Russell recurred to the incidents when he went on the stand several days later, and gave his version of what had happened. Rose Ball was not called to the stand, as she left for Australia shortly before the case came to trial.

The verbatim record of this testimony, taken from the official report of the case on file in the office of the Prothonotary of Alleghany County, is as follows:

Q. I want you to tell us what your husband did in company with this woman Rose, in your presence and in your home.

A. In the first place, I considered it—(Objected to and witness was not permitted to finish.)

Q. Tell us what you saw and what he said what was done.

A. One evening I spent the evening downstairs, and our library and bedroom were next to each other upstairs on the second floor, and I spent the evening downstairs reading, and I went upstairs about 10 o'clock to my room, and I suppose that he was either in the library or had retired, and when I went up there I found that he was in neither place, and I stepped out in the hall and I found that he was in his night robe, sitting beside Miss Ball's bed and she was in bed. On other occasions I found him going in there and I found she called him in and said she wasn't well and wanted him in, and I objected to this, and I said that it was highly improper, and I said: "We have people about the house, and what kind of a name will be attached to this house if you do that sort of thing?" and he got angry.

Pastor's Wife Tells of His Alleged Nightly Visits.

Q. You state that you found him doing this at other times. How often after that?

A. I found him a number of times; I don't remember how often.

Q. In her room?

A. Yes, sir. And I found him in the servant girl's room as well, and I found him locked in the servant girl's room.

Q. Did he make any explanation why he was in the girl's room?

A. No, he did not; he just got angry.

Q. What did you say to him about this conduct and what did he say?

A. I said to him: "We have a great work on our hands," and I said, "In this work you and I have to walk very circumspectly before the world, and if you are going to do things like this, what will happen? Suppose you are all right, don't you suppose people will talk about things like this?" and I said, "I am not satisfied with it," and he said he wasn't going to be ruled by me. But I felt distressed about it.

Q. What did Rose do at the Watch Tower?

A. She attended to the correspondence.

Q. Where was her desk with reference to the desk of Mr. Russell of the Watch Tower Society?

A. It wasn't near his; it was in the office.

Q. When would he go to the Watch Tower in the morning?

A. I don't remember; he generally went down alone.

Q. Who would return with him?

A. She came with him in the evening and they came about 11 o'clock, and the young men that were in the office—she was the only girl, and the young men would go home, and he wouldn't allow her to go home with them, and she must wait and always go with him.

(Objected to.)

Q. I want the mere fact. Did this girl Rose go home with your husband?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And the young men came home ahead of them?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. State to the court and jury what talk, if any, you had with this girl Rose, in regard to her relations with your husband, which you communicated to your husband?

This question was objected to and it was changed to read as follows:

Q. You are to tell what you stated to your husband that Rose had said and his reply to you.

Mrs. Russell Says Girl Told Her of Pastor's Caresses.

A. I told him that I had learned something that was very serious, and I didn't tell him right away. I let a day elapse until I felt I had control of myself and could talk and then I told him that I had something very serious to tell him about this matter, and he said, "What is it?" and I said, "Rose has told me that you have been intimate with her, that you have been in the habit of hugging and kissing her and having her sit on your knee and fondling each other, and he tells me you bid her under no account to tell me, but she couldn't keep it any longer. She said if I was distressed about it she felt that she would have to come and make a confession to me, and she has done that.

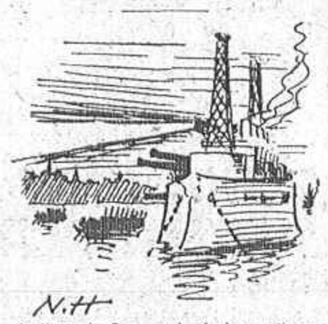

(By the court.)

Q. What did he say?

A. He tried to make light of it at first and I said, "Husband, you can't do that. I know the whole thing. She has told PROTECTION PUZZLE.

Will Uncle Sam, out of sheer pity, order the monster fleet of warships to anchor off Bay Ridge and land detachments of marines and bluejackets to police its unprotected streets?

KIDNAPPED BOY TURNS UP.

Disappeared September 28, and Is Found in Girl's Clothes.

The police of the Flushing avenue station last night located Antonio, the 5-year-old son of Giacomo Silvato of 162 Stone avenue, who was kidnapped on September 28. The boy's disappearance was reported two days after it occurred.

The lad was picked up at Park and Grand avenues by a woman who said she was Lizzie Fiachetti of 22 Franklin avenue. When Antonio was kidnapped he wore a sweater, trousers and shoes and stockings. When he was found last night, carrying in his hand a card bearing his name and address, he wore a white dress and a straw hat trimmed with flowers.

When the child reached the station house, where the father claimed him upon being notified, the police weren't sure whether it was a boy or a girl they had.

BROOKLYN GIRL STRANDED

Spent Her Money in Western Cities and Had to Work For a Pittance.

(Special to The Eagle.)

Joliet, Ill., October 28—Gertrude Rauchfuss, a young Brooklyn girl who, three days ago became stranded here penniless on her way from Chicago where she had lived in luxury while her money lasted, left today for Brooklyn. She had sent word of her plight to her guardian in Brooklyn and he immediately forwarded by wire $5 and the price of a ticket to Brooklyn.

Miss Rauchfuss, who is only 20 years old, was picked up here last Wednesday by the police and after being released she got a job in a local store. Ten minutes later came the message with money from her guardian. She threw up her position without a moment's delay and started for the East.

The girl's parents are dead and she is reported to have fallen heir to a good deal of property. She says she is unable to save her money and as soon as she gets a check fro mher guardian she spends the money freely. Until the next check arrives she often has had to work in stores and factories to save herself from starvation. At one time she worked for a week in a Chicago factory, and received $2 in wages. She couldn't live on that, she said, and set out hunting for a new place. On her wanderings she came to Joliet.

The last time she was provided with money she invited two of her friends to stay with her in an expensive Chicago hotel, where they lived sumptuously for a few days, and then the battle for existence began anew.

TWO BISHOPS CONSECRATED.

Imposing and Unique Ecclesiastical Ceremony in Pennsylvania Diocese.

Philadelphia, October 28—The Rev. Dr. Philip Mercer Rhinelander and the Rev. Dr. Thomas J. Garland were raised to the episcopate today in the Church of the Advocate in the presence of one of the most imposing assemblages of ecclesiastics and laity ever brought together in a Protestant Episcopal church in this city. Dr. Rhinelander became bishop coadjutor of the diocese of Pennsylvania and Dr. Garland, the suffragan bishop of the same jurisdiction.

The venerable Bishop Tuttle of Missouri, presided at the consecration, and the sermon was delivered by Bishop Brewster of Connecticut.

The occasion was an epoch in the history of the Pennsylvania diocese, the mother of all Episcopalian dioceses in America, as it was the first time in this country that two bishops have been consecrated at the same service for the same jurisdiction.

A ROLL OF CROPSEY MONEY.

Partisan Wanted to Bet Very Badly.

A man who displayed a roll of yellow backs as big around as the thigh of a calf, all of which he said he was willing to bet that Cropsey would be elected District Attorney, made the rounds of the cafes in the neighborhood of Broadway and Gates avenue, last night.

The man said that he was willing to give any odds and in one place where he stopped just long enough to see if anybody would cover any of his roll he declared that Cropsey would win by 40,000. Acting District Attorney Elder told an Eagle reporter today that Clarke would carry the day by from 10,000 to 12,000. Take your choice.

B. R. T. GUARD INJURED.

Samuel Marcus, 22 years old, of 208 Scholes street, who is employed by the B. R. T. as a guardd, fell from the elevated structure at Manhattan Crossing and Broadway, last night, while walking along it to the yards. He was cut about the head and sustained internal injuries. He was removed to the Bradford Street Hospital.

FREIGHTER CUT IN TWO.

Seattle, Wash., October 28—During a dense fog at midnight the steamship Iroquois, outbound from Seattle with passengers for Victoria, cut in two and sunk the freighter Multnomah from Tacoma for Seattle.

All on board were saved. The Iroquois was undamaged.

UPRISING IN HONDURAS.

Tegucigalpa, Honduras, October 28—There has been quite an uprising in the south and southwest of Honduras. For a time the affair appeared rather serious, but the government insists that the movement has now been thoroughly suppressed.

212 PAGE NEWSPAPER.

Davenport, Iowa, October 28—To celebrate the completion of its new newspaper building, the Times of this city to-day issued a special edition of 212 pages, said to be the largest newspaper ever issued in the United States.

News Surprises Archbishop Farley.

Dispatches from Rome to the effect that Archbishop Farley would be created a Cardinal were shown to His Grace at the Archepiscopal residence in Manhattan last evening upon his return from a day's visit out of town.

"I cannot believe it," he exclaimed, and evinced great surprise at the news. "I cannot believe it," he repeated, "notwithstanding that the news appears to be from a trustworthy correspondent whom I know well. However authentic they may be, you know it is entirely unsafe to credit unofficial advices in such a case as this. It is very unusual to announce such matters a whole month in advance."

The Archbishop excused himself, but returned a moment later with a broad smile on his face. He had in his hand a cablegram just received from Rome which read: "Heartiest congratulations. Your Eminence."

It was sign "Mgr. O'Kelly," an intimate friend of the Archbishop and editor of the Rome, an English paper published in the Vatican City.

Nohwithstanding this seeming confirmation, the Archbishop was not inclined to accept the news as a fact, reiterating that while if true it was highly welcome, he could not believe it.

Praise for Other American Appointees

His Grace, or as he will hereafter be known, His Eminence, referred to Archbishop O'Connell who is also to be made a Cardinal and paid to him this tribute:

"He is one of the most eloquent Bishops of the country as well as learned. He lived in Rome a number of years as rector of the American College, and consequently had the opportunity of acquiring an extensive fund of ecclesiastical learning, which all persons long resident in Rome do acquire. He is highly esteemed by the Holy Father as he was by Pope Leo XIII."

The Archbishop also spoke in praise of Mgr. Falconio, Apostolic delegate in the United States, the third American of the new Cardinals to be created.

"Mgr. Falconio is held in high esteem by all the Bishops of the country. He is a most amiable gentlemen."

Archbishop Farley retired early without receipt of any official confirmation of the news that had been brought to him. In looking over the full list of those to be appointed he exclaimed, "My, what a bunch of us." The secretary pointed out that the Jesuit Van Rossum would be the first Redemptorist appointed to the Sacred College of Cardinals in many years.

In contrast to the present early announcement the Archbishop had pointed out that he remembered when Cardinal McCluskey was appointed in the early '70's, no announcement was made until the week before the appointment. The Archbishop referred to his diary to refresh his memory on this point and added again it was very unusual to announce such matters a whole month in advance. His Grace said if the news came true he expected no official notification of the fact until after the Consistory.

Announcement Causes Surprise in Rome.

Both the announcement of a Consistory and the names of those who are to be elevated to the Cardinalate caused much surprise here. The intentions of the Pope were kept entirely secret, the general absorption in the war aiding materially in maintaining the secrecy.

The selection of the new Cardinals is the subject of interesting comment, owing chiefly to the recognition the United States has received. That country has been granted three Red Hats, which gradually will become a kind of acquired right for the American Episcopacy. Mgr. Falconio is an American citizen, and with Cardinal Gibbons and Archbishops Farley and O'Connell, will bring the number of American prelates in the Sacred College up to four.

The elevation of Archbishop Farley has created a general excellent impression, as, besides his eminent qualities, he is head of one of the most important Catholic centers of the world.

Archbishop O'Connell, who is very

QUICK WIT AT THEATER FIRE.

Panic Averted by Police Captain, Who Takes Stage.

The quick action of Police Captain William F. Boettiler, of the Clymer street station, averted a panic when fire was discovered in the rear of the second balcony of the Amphion Theater, at Bedford avenue and South Tenth street, toward the close of the matinee performance yesterday. It was with difficulty that the theatergoers were quieted by the police captain, who jumped upon the stage and became master of the situation. The fire was extinguished with slight damage.

The blaze was in the coatroom, which is in the rear of the top gallery. It is believed to have started from a lighted stump of a cigar or cigarette carelessly tossed aside. It was discovered by Edward Jarret, an usher, who made his way quietly downstairs and quickly informed the manager, Meyer Solomon. At this moment Captain Boettler entered the lobby with Detective Chris Cummiskey, to determine the character of a Sunday conert for today. The captain instructed Bicycle Patrolman John Wegge, who was passing, to turned in an alarm and then entered the theater with Cummiskey.

By this time the smoke was curling through the ventilators an dthe electric lights on the ceiling were dimmed. The audience was on the verge of rushing for the exits when the captain rushed the aisle and leaped upon the stage.

"I am the captain of the police," shouted the captain. "There is positively no fire in this building. That smoke is coming from a fire down the street, so that if you'll sit still there is no danger."

He then ordered the ushers to close the doors at the front of the house "so that no more of that smoke can come in" and instructed them to open the exits on the sides. Meanwhile two young women ushers had fainted during the excitement.

When the firemen arrived they stretched a line of hose up the stairs and through the hallways which lead to the lodge rooms in the front. It was necessary to chop away parts of the floor before the fire was out. All during the time that the continuous thud of the falling axes were reaching the ears of the audience, Captain Boettler was busy keeping the crowd quiet.

HEMPSTEAD MORALS LOW

Methodist Minister, Asked to Assist in Parade, Makes Startling Reply.

Hempstead, L. I., October 28—In an interview with an Eagle reporter tonight the Rev. W. H. Burgwin, a well known Methodist pastor, now in charge of the local church of that denomination, declared that he considered the moral tone of Hempstead very low.

This statement is similar to one that it is alleged he incorporated in a letter a day or two ago that he sent to Mrs. Alonzo M. Onderdonk, one of the foremost women of the place. The letter caused a sensation and the minister's added utterances will intensify it, particularly coming so close upon the speech of George B. Cortelyou here Thursday night, who had a far better word to say about Hempstead's morals.

It seems that a number of prominent Hempstead people arranged a parade and pageant of nations to be given here for the benefit of the library. Similar entertainments have been given in different Long Island villages and the most prominent men and women have aided in them.

A letter was sent to the minister and his wife asking them to assist and asking Mrs. Burgwin to be one of the patronesses.

Although the minister had no copy of the letter at hand tonight and one could not be obtained from other sources, he told in effect what he had written to Mrs. Onderdonk in reply.

"I told her," he said, "that I was in favor of a library, that I deplored the fact that Hempstead had none; that many smaller villages had one, but that I could not lend my support to an operatic affair of this kind, because, in my judgment, the opera and such things would tend to lower the morals of the community, especially among the young."

"Why do you think so," he was asked, but Mr. Burgwin made no reply. After an interval he continued:

"In my pastoral calls and in my observation generally I have found that the moral tone of Hempstead is very low."

Mr. Burgwin was pressed for a more specific statement as to the reason for his beliefs, but he declined to give it.

Some of the most prominent people in the public eye today live in Hempstead, and those who know of the minister's characterization of the village do not agree with him.

SUBPENAS NOT YET SERVED.

Delay in Printing Government Allegations Held Them Up in Trenton.

Trenton, N. J., October 28—When the office of the United States marshal and that of the Circuit Court clerk closed today the subpenas issued in the suit of the Federal Government against the United States Steel Corporation were still lying on the clerk's desk awaiting word from Washington to be served. No attempt will be made to serve them until Monday.

Washington, October 28—The subpenas for the defendants in the government's dissolution suit against the Steel Trust will be filed on Monday if it is possible for Deputy Marshals to do the work in one day.

Attorney General Wickersham wanted to have each of the subpenas accompanied by a copy of the government's allegations. It was impossible for the private print shop which printed the bill to furnish the required number of copies until today. They have been sent to Trenton.

TOBACCO TRUST DIVISION.

Government Likely to Insist on Different Plan Than One Proposed.

Washington, October 28—Attorney General Wickeraham will go to New York tomorrow to appear next week at the hearings on the proposed reorganization plan of the American Tobacco Company. J. C. McReynolds and Edwin P. Grosvenor, special assistant attorneys general, who prosecuted the Tobacco case, will appear with the Attorney General. A statement of the Government's attitude toward the proposed reorganization will be filed with the United States court as soon as the hearings begin. It is understood that the government may insist on a different division of the ownership of certain brands than is now proposed. The Government's attorneys think a different division would be more conducive to competition.

MR. TAFT CHANGES PLANS AND WILL REVIEW FLEET

President's Intention to Visit New York for Purpose Is a Surprise.

VAST CROWDS SEE SHIPS.

The greatest marine show ever staged on the Hudson will be reviewed on November 2 by the commander-in-chief of the army and navy, the President of the United States. News that the President's plans had been modified to permit this reached the fleet yesterday.

The news was in the nature of a surprise. It had been supposed until yesterday that only Secretary of the Navy Meyer would review the fleet, but now, in the face of the added attraction, the Secretary's review will be overshadowed.

The President will pass up the river in the Mayflower between the lines of fighting craft, and as the Mayflower slips past the big fighters each will boom forth a 21-gun salute. It will be the first time a President of the United States has ever reviewed a fleet in the Hudson, and the armada which will be gathered there will surpass anything that has ever been seen in American waters.

Greater Part of Fleet Already at Anchor.

The bulk of the great fleet is already at anchor. This morning two-thirds of the entire force is spaced out in the Hudson. All day yesterday the gray visitors kept coming in through the sea gates and silently stealing to the places assigned them. At evening they were still coming and on the broad Atlantic more were on the way. By 5 o'clock in the afternoon twenty-one had entered the Hudson. There were six battleships and fifteen torpedo boats and destroyers. This is the list of the new arrivals:

Battleships—Iowa, Indiana, Kansas, Delaware, Idaho and Massachusetts.

Destroyers—Terry, Drayton, McCall, Trippe, Paulding, Monaghan, Worden, Patterson, Ammen, Burrows.

Torpedo Boats—Morris, Porter, Blakely, Dahlgren and De Long.

Of the arrivals the monster Delaware, which is the most powerful ship afloat, is new. She is still a youngster in the navy.

Ever since Tuesday the armada has been gathering. On that day fourteen vessels cast anchor in the Hudson. Next day two or three more swelled the total, and Friday they began to drift in at very short intervals. Twenty-two joined the fleet then, so that there are now some sixty or seventy craft in harbor, if not more. The entire Atlantic Fleet of 102 vessels will be on the ground Monday, all prinked out for the great spectacle.

Most Notable Display New York Has Ever Seen.

New York has seen notable displays of the country's naval strength in the Hudson before this—when Dewey came home, for instance, and during the Hudson-Fulton celebration—but never anything to approach this. Seen from the green embankments of Riverside Park yesterday, the sight was magnificent. As far as the eye could reach stretched the lines of gray fighting machines, their color blending with the hue of the river and the dull skies overhead. In the center were the ugly, squat battleships, and nearer the Jersey shore the rakish torpedo boats and destroyers. The veteran Connecticut, the flagship, had dropped down the river during the day, and taken up a position off Fifty-seventh street. She was first in the line.

From Fifty-seventh street as far as the eye could reach, the bulky shapes getting dimmer and dimmer in the perspective until a bend of the river hid the rear guard, the pride of Uncle Sam's Navy lay sullen on the tides. There was a space equivalent to the distance covered by two city blocks, between each two.

Next to the flagship, on which was Admiral Osterhaus, was the Michigan, which recently made a world's record at target practice. The figures of the last target practice have not yet been announced but it is rumored that the Connecticut may turn out to be the winner.

Next to the Michigan was the Delaware and then the North Dakota, off Sixty-third street. Tehes are the daisies of the fleet and with the Utah and the tremendous Florida, which has just been finished at the Navy Yard and will take her place in line on Monday, they form a squadron which is practically invincible.

Rear-Admiral Bradley Allen Fiske, who won undying fame as the navigator of the Petrel at Manila, commands the Fifth Division and the Petrel—tiny vessel—is also in the line.

Immense Crowds Gather to See the Ships.

Not since the Hudson-Fulton celebration have there been such crowds along the river front as there were yesterday afternoon and Commissioner Waldo has made preparations for a much larger one which is expected today.

Until the evening shadows fell the embankments on each side of the river were black with people, and at each boat landing hundreds pushed and crowded to get on the gang-planks leading to the launches. Many were the pleas made to the midshipmen on the floats by those who were anxious to board one or other of the warships. One man said that he was a friend of Charley Murphy. But it didn't seem to work.

The rivermen who had boats to let reaped a golden harvest. They were right on the job from the time the sun went up and many a boatload of sightseers went out from their landings to circle the fleet at a cost of 50 cents a head. If there hadn't been police stationed at the heads of the gangplanks at each prominent dock many persons would have fallen into the river and possibly there would have been some loss of life.

Shore Leave and Pay Make Jackies Happy.

The sailors were the happiest individuals in the city last night. Thousands of them were paid off and with a month's wages in his trousers pocket and forty-eight hours shore leave, Jack was ready to entertain his friends ashore and go the limit regardless of expense. It is estimated that there are 25,000 men on the great fleet. As each man's month's pay will amount to $25 or $40 at least, and in many cases more than that, about $1,000,000 will be spent in this city in the next few days. Naturally the shopkeepers all over town are welcoming the sailor lads with open arms and are mighty glad they came.

Of course the girls were there to greet the jackies, and many of them soon found friends in the throng. One happy tar was seen rolling along with a pretty girl hanging to each arm, as if afraid that he would leave if she let go, and never, never come back again.

Of the five divisions of the fleet, the second is commanded by Rear Admiral Ward and his flagship, the Minnesota, heads it. The Minnesota is moored off 106th street, with the Missouri, Ohio and Mississippi strung out behind. Rear Admiral Howard's flagship, Virginia, heads another division.

The real veterans were the battleships Massachusetts, Iowa and Indiana, all of which took part in the Spanish War. They are somewhat out of date now in comparison with the more modern craft and the sailors irreverently refer to the old-timers as "the old crab fleet." They had been called out of half-reserve by the back channel of the Philadelphia Navy Yard to take part in the mobilization.

Battleships as a Good Insurance Investment.

One of the high ranking officers of the fleet, yesterday, in talking to the newspaper men said:

"There is one thing of which you should not lose sight. The taxable property of the United States amounts to $137,000,000,000, and the expense of keeping up the Navy, adding four new battleships a year, would be about $137,000,000. That insures your peace, and the rate of insurance is one dollar in a thousand. Isn't it a worth-while investment?

"There is a whole lot in this idea of speaking softly but carrying a big stick at the same time. When human nature changes and a man can trust his neighbor so that police forces are no longer necessary, then it is time to do away with your navy and your army."

The officer called attention to the fact that for a hundred years England had preserved her peace by the strength of her navy. "The navy makes not for war but for peace," he declaired, "and to have a mediocre navy would be useless."

The yachts Halcyon and Observation on their sight-seeing trips around Manhattan Island offer an excellent opportunity to see the warships. All points of interest are fully described by a lecturer. The starting point is Battery Pier, near South Ferry, daily at 10:30 a.m. and 2:30 p.m.

TAFT'S VISIT TO AID SEC. MEYER'S PLANS

Eagle Bureau,
608 Fourteenth Street.

Washington, October 28—There is joy among naval officers over the fact that Secretary Meyer has been persuasive enough to induce the President to change his mind on the subject of the big fleet review at New York and to secure his acceptance of the chance to review it, after he had already declined. Mr. Meyer met the President at the dedication of the naval training station at Lake Bluff, near Chicago, today, and soon after that came the news that Mr. Taft would be on hand to see the big naval demonstration in the Hudson. It was a keen disappointment to the Secretary when it was announced about two weeks ago that the President could not attend. Mr. Meyer has long realized that there is prospect of a serious check in the upbuilding of the Navy and if he can arouse popular interest in it he proposes to do so by every legitimate means. He is leaving no stone unturned to accomplish this and, while his reorganization policies have met with bitter opposition, it is generally admitted that the Secretary is one of the biggest boosters that the Navy possesses.

With the President making a Western campaign for international arbitration and world peace, it seemed a little queer for the Navy Department to be forwarding plans for the greatest militant spectacle ever seen in this country. Navy men realized it and they regarded the President's original intention to remain away as a wet blanket. But now everything is happy again.

The appropriation situation at the coming session of Congress will be materially helped out, so far as the Navy Department is concerned, if Mr. Meyer can enlist a popular interest which will be reflected in the attitude of Congressmen. He not only wants the people to see the Navy, but he has invited the members of the Naval Committees of both houses to be present, in the hope of impressing them. It will be hard to get money out of the House this winter but if there is any way to turn Chairman Padgett into a two battleship man, instead of an advocate of only one, it will be done. A crisis in navy development will be reached this winter, and the policy which will be the outcome may be of far reaching effect. If the United States comes down to the plan of building only one battleship a year and is involved in no war with a foreign power, the Government is very likely to adhere to the economical programme for a long time. Mr. Taft's presence at the review will undoubtedly stimulate general interest, and that is just what Secretary Meyer is seeking.

CAPPS TO GO ABROAD.

Constructor Who Opposed Meyer Plan Granted Leave of Absence.

Washington, October 28—Chief Constructor Washington L. Capps, formerly of the Brooklyn Navy Yard, and who opposed the Meyer plan of reorganization in the Navy and later was succeeded as chief of the Bureau of Construction and detailed to the Philippines, it is now said, will not be able to appear before any of the investigating committees at the next session of Congress should the reorganization question be reopened.

Mr. Capps was in the Philippines and in Europe on inspection duty last winter and naval orders issued today grant him leave of absence for four months beginning December 5 next, with permission to go abroad. It is understood he is going to Europe.

Constructor Capps is senior member of the board on hull changes now stationed in Philadelphia and it was stated at the Navy Department today that the vacancy his absence will create will not be filled. He is authorized to apply for a five months extension of the four months leave, if he cares to do so.

CELEBRATE SILVER WEDDING.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Kinkel Entertain Relatives and Friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Kinkel celebrated their silver wedding at their home, 140 Fifth avenue, on Wednesday night. The feature of the event was cutting of an immense wedding cake by Master George Loeffler, aged 7 years, the only Loeffler of the family.

Among the other guests were Miss Marcella Clark of Portwashington, also a sister of Mrs. Kinkel; the Misses Lauretta and Anna Slavin of Manhattan, Miss McDonald, John McCaffery, Mrs. P. F. Donovan, John J. Flynn and Mr. and Mrs. Meister, who furnished the wedding cake.

ARRESTED IN CHICAGO.

Wanted in this city on charges of grand larceny two men, described by the police as Daniel J. Feeney of 420 Hudson street, and Matthew O'Brien of East 129th street, Manhattan, were arrested in Chicago last night, according to a telegraph communication received by Inspector Hughes of the local police from Inspector Hunt of the Police Department of that city. Feeney and O'Brien, on Tuesday last, it is alleged by the police, purloined $710 given them to deposit by Peter Crottey, proprietor of a furnished room house at the Hudson street address.

SWEDE TAKES HIS LIFE.

Otto Holmquist, employed by a perfumery company, and living in a boarding house at 241 East Eighty-eighth street, ended his life, according to the police, late yesterday afternoon, by inhaling gas. A search of the man's effects indicated that he came of a well-to-do family in Sweden, where he had been an engineer in the army. A friend, who refused to give his name, said that Holmquist had been despondent of late over some unknown cause, which probably accounted for his act.

ACCUSED OF MURDER.

Arrested on a warrant charging him with the murder of Frank Gambell of Hudson, Columbia County, N. Y., in that city on January 15 last, a man described by the police as James Cutinal, 27 years old, a millwright, was taken into custody last night in a furnished room house at 195 East Houston street, Manhattan.

EUCHRE FOR HOSPITAL.

For the benefit of the Swedish Hospital, the Ladies Auxiliary gave a euchre and reception at the Imperial last evening. About 300 friends and patrons of the hospital were present and enjoyed the evening with cards and dancing.

HEARST STILL A PUZZLE AS CAMPAIGN NEARS END

Republicans Uncertain About His Coming to Brooklyn to Speak.

MANY MEETINGS ARRANGED.

Democrats Will Hold Big Rally Tomorrow Night at Academy of Music.

Republican campaign managers last night arranged for the hardest work of the county campaign during the coming week. The uncertainty as to what action William Randolph Hearst will take is still a surprising feature of the Republican plans. A statement issued by the organization in connection with a list of the meetings announced indicates the uncertainty.

"It is expected also that Mr. Hearst will speak on at least one night."

There will be meetings every night next week, in halls holding from 1,000 to 3,000 persons. At Republican headquarters all is jubilation, and all of the leaders are already calling the campaign a "Schieren year" and predicting the biggest kind of a county success. This feeling last night was reflected in the betting. In a downtown chophouse popular as the eating place of politicians there was lots of Republican money in sight and no Democratic takers. The Democrats are all waiting to see how the judiciary situation clears up before taking any long chances. Bets in blocks of $500 and $1,000 were offered, but were passed by.

The meetings that have been arranged are as follows: Monday night, October 30, New Eckford Hall, 206 Calyer street; Tuesday night, October 31, Schwaben Hall and Saratoga Hall, at Knickerbocker and Myrtle avenues, and at Saratoga avenue and Broadway, respectively; Wednesday night at Congress Hall, Vermont street and Atlantic avenue, and at Long Island Business College; Thursday night at Visitation Hall, Verona and Richards streets, and Linden Grove Hall, Evergreen avenue and Linden street; also at Metropolitan-Saenger Hall, Brownsville; Friday, November 3, at Liederkranz Hall, 152 Manhattan avenue, and Saturday, November 4, at Prospect Hall and the Eastern District Y. M. C. A. The speakers at these meetings will be James C. Cropsey, Charles B. Law, Charles S. Devoy, Edward T. O'Loughlin, Controller William A. Prendergast, ex-Congressman William S. Bennet, Elmer S. White, Henry Belden Ketcham, Harry F. Cochrane and Alfred J. Boulton.

Woodruff Will Preside at Prospect Hall Meeting.

Timothy L. Woodruff will preside at the Prospect Hall meeting and will thus indicate his general agreement with the conduct of the county campaign. It was at Prospect Hall that Mr. Hearst was originally scheduled to speak, but it could not be learned last night that the publisher was thinking of attending the meeting. Men in the local Independence League even went so far as to say they thought it doubtful if Mr. Hearst would come to this county to speak at all, and one prominent Republican said he wasn't sure Hearst's appearance would make many votes in this campaign.

In addition to the meetings scheduled above, the Republicans are planning smaller meetings in each district, at which the local candidates and orators will hold forth.

Democrats Will Have Big Meeting at Academy.

Democrats declared last night that the big Democratic mass meeting to be held tomorrow night in the Academy of Music would bring out some new angles of the Union Bank case that would supply the Republican analysts with food for thought for several days at least. One of the big leaders who is in position to know the subjects to be discussed said that there would be some interesting campaign developments.

Attorney General Thomas Carmody, Secretary of State, Edward Lazansky, Congressman William C. Redfield, Robert H. Roy, James S. Regan, Thomas J. Drennan and William Seward Shanahan will speak.

The other Democratic meetings scheduled for tomorrow night are as follows: Rocco Agoglia Hall, 168 Twenty-first street; Schfanenflugel's Hall, 357 Pulaski street; Democratic Club, New Utrecht avenue and Sixtieth street; Moleski's Hall, Fourth avenue and Twenty-third street, and Bleichner's Hall, Avenue D and East Fourth street.

VAN SICLEN AT PATCHOGUE.

Told Audience His Nomination Came Without Price.

Patchogue, L. I., October 28—James C. Van Siclen, Republican nominee for Supreme Court justice, delivered his first speech in Suffolk here tonight. He had a large audience, and was enthusiastically greeted by the people with bands, cheers and red fire.

He referred to the long-standing custom of judicial nominees in refraining from making speeches, saying that he had intended to take no active part other than to get acquainted with people, until his opponent violated the rule by delivering a speech in a brewery, on the high cost of living.

Mr. Van Siclen also said that the only reason he entered the campaign was to aid Republicanism in Queens, and that his nomination was obtained through honor and without price.

NEW CAMP ESTABLISHED.

A new Camp has been organized in the Woodmen of the World as Prospect Camp, No. 220, and the following officers have been installed: Past Consul Commander Fred J. Loew, Consul Commander William J. Harvey, Adviser Lieutenant Wilson A. Fields, Banker W. H. Kron, Escort E. E. Dodge, Clerk W. J. Ward, Watchman C. B. Dodge, Three-year Manager L. W. Murray, Two-year Manager J. B. Weldon.

WILL WED HER "KIDNAPPER."

The bottom appears to have tumbled out of the kidnapping of Frances Lacarrial, which was represented to the police on Friday as the act of a bold, bad trio. The mother of the girl received yesterday a letter from her daughter in which she said she meant to marry the man she loved. This, coupled with the statement of the detectives that they knew just where she was, caused a sudden subsidence of interest in the case.

me straight and I know it to be true." Well, he said he was sorry; it was true, but he was sorry. He said he didn't mean any harm. I said, "I don't see how you could do an act like that without meaning harm."

Q. What year was that?

A. In the fall of 1894.

(By Mr. Porter, attorney for the plaintiff.)

Q. Did you state to your husband at this meeting any endearing terms?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What were they?

A. I said, "She tells me that one evening you came home——" I asked her when did these things occur. I said to him, "She says they occurred down at the office when she stayed down there with him in the evening after the rest had gone, and at home at any time when I wasn't around."

Q. Now, about the endearing terms?

A. She said one evening when she came home with him, just as she got inside the hall, it was late in the evening, about 11 o'clock, he put his arms around her and kissed her. This was in the vestibule before they entered the hall, and he called her his little wife, but she said "I am not your wife," and he said, "I will call you daughter, and a daughter has nearly all the privileges of a wife."

Q. What other terms were used?

A. Then he said, "I am like a jellyfish, I float around here and there. I touch this one and that one, and if she responds I take her to me, and if not, I float on to others"; and she wrote that out so that I could remember it for sure when I would speak to him about it. And he confessed that he said those things.

Pastor Russell's explanation of the above incidents is contained in the following verbatim extract from his testimony given on the stand on Friday, April 27, 1906:

Q. Did you ever at any time undertake to humiliate, or did you ever do any act or say any words, such as using the expression, "jellyfish," or anything that would hurt Mrs. Russell's feelings in any way?

A. Nothing intentional, sir. If I might I would like to explain. We had in our family this Miss Ball that was referred to. Might I mention that?

Q. Yes, if there is anything of that kind.

A. We had a young man in the office by the name of Charles Ball, who came to us from Buffalo, and was deeply interested.

Q. What has that to do with the girl?

A. This was her brother. She wanted to come because her brother was here. After her brother died, she was lonely, and Mrs. Russell and I both thought a great deal of her. She was a very young-looking girl, wore short dresses, and Mrs. Russell and I thought it would be best to have her come into the room—in the same room with us—so she would read in our study in the evening. We had a large study. She kissed us both a good-night when she was going to bed, and we treated her in every way as a daughter, and told her that we considered her such, and she told us she considered us as her parents. This might be considered by Mrs. Russell as being something offensive, but I will explain it. This Miss Ball one evening came to me in the front room—or, rather, I heard someone sobbing, and I turned around to see, and she was crying at her desk, and I inquired what was the matter, and she didn't answer for quite a while, and finally she jumped up and came over and sat down on my knee, and was still crying, and I inquired what was the matter, what could be the matter. She said Mrs. Russell had been overworking her or something, and I tried to show her that she was mistaken, that Mrs. Russell wouldn't do anything of the kind, and I tried to allay her feelings.

"Another time she came and sat on my knee when there was some young man who was giving her attention more than she liked, and had been making himself unpleasant, and she was worked up and was crying. But she merely came to me as a father."

Q. She had been with you for some time?

A. Yes, sir; she had no relatives there, and we told her she could call herself by our name. She said the only reason she didn't do that she was afraid if her father heard of it he would think she had lost her self-respect for him.

Q. You treated her as a daughter in your home?

A. Yes, sir; she looked to be about 13. I don't know how old she was.

Q. She may have been older?

A. I heard someone say that she was only 10. She was a very young looking woman.

Q. Wore short dresses?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And grew up in your home?

A. Yes, sir. I should say that some time later Mrs. Russell told me that Miss Ball had come to her and said that there was one thing she should tell her—that she had kissed me at some time when she wasn't present.

Q. She went to tell her about that?

A. Yes, sir. Miss Ball was very conscientious and she thought that this was something Mrs. Russell should know, and when Mrs. Russell mentioned it to me I said, "That is so, that was all right, there was nothing improper about that," and I explained to Mrs. Russell——

Q. There was no further trouble about that?

A. No.

Q. They have mentioned that matter when you were found in her room.

A. I don't remember the occurrence, but it is very likely it would be true that Mrs. Russell might have come in and found me by the bedside with her hand in mine. I suppose I was feeling her pulse, I don't know anything else. It would be a common occurrence; I gave medicine in the family, and not only to our own family, but Mrs. Russell's sister living in the adjoining place. I used to be the family physician over there; they sent to me always for medicine. I happened to have some knowledge of medicine, but if anybody would get bad we would send for a regular physician.

Q. Anything of that kind that occurred was just in the interest of family health?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You would just as likely have gone into one house as another

BREAK IN WATER MAIN.

It Caused Some Inconvenience in Parts of New Utrecht.

There was consternation in parts of New Utrecht, yesterday, when the early risers discovered that there was no water to be had, owing to the break in the main that supplies the section. In a few places there was some to be had, and in a few minutes men, women and children, carrying cans and kettles, were scurrying through the streets in search of water. Some returned with bottles of seltzer and other waters that could be purchased.

The break was repaired in time for the cooking of the Sunday dinner, but while the stringency lasted there was a merry old time.

PEACH TREES IN BLOOM.

Americus, Ga., October 30—Hundreds of thousands of peach trees in this section are in full bloom and a failure of next year's peach crop is fen[illegible]y many orchardists. The warm weather of the past week has made the whole landscape look like a gigantic flower garden. Some growers, it is reported, are contemplating cutting out their trees and turning the land into cotton fields.

He was removed to the Cumberland Street Hospital.

"A LORD'S SERVANT SHOULD BE CLEAN"

Rev. Mr. Burridge of Bristol, England, Delivers First Lecture on Pastor Russell.

ASKS HIS CREDENTIALS.

Something More Than His Word Needed to Make Him Fit to Preach.

In the first of a series of seven lectures entitled "C. T. Russell's Teachings Examined," delivered last evening in the Bethany Church, Clermont and Myrtle avenues, J. H. Burridge, the well-known evangelist of Bristol, England, vigorously attacked the position, credentials and methods of Pastor Russell of the Brooklyn Tacernacle. Mr. Burridge showed that the Brooklyn preacher should have no claim on the conscience of sensible Scripture-abiding Christians either in this community or in any other. In part the speaker said:

Pastor Russell's Position Is Glorified or Else He Is a Gigantic Fraud.

"Pastor Russell," the speaker said, "takes a position that is either the most dignified, the most glorified, and the most privileged, since the apostles or that of the most gigantic fraud ever imputed upon the credulous public. It is important that we should know which of the two it is. One of the things of Pastor Russell's in which people are so often deceived is his championing of the Scriptures. What he teaches is the subversion of what we call the orthodox teaching of the Scriptures. There is not a doctrine of our holy belief which he does not pervert. He continually tells up that the time for a full enfolding of the Scripture has come, that not even the apostles themselves knew the meaning of the Scriptures as they are interpreted today—interpreted, that is, by Pastor Russell."

Mr. Burridge then quoted from the writings of Pastor Russell to show the truth of his contention. Taking up Volumes 1 and 2 of his work, entitled "Divine Plan of the Ages." The speaker read from their pages, and said in part:

"The writer warns his readers not to listen to modern or ancient theologians, but to listen to what he has to say. He is going to discover that they were all wrong and in error, because he has found something in the Scriptures which they have not. The writer says that these have been concealed designedly by our Lord until the 'due time' comes, which is the time of Pastor Russell. He tells us that the Lord is on the earth today, and that he is the one to say, 'There stands one among you whom you know not.' Here we find his position.

"It is the position of a man who has testimony committed to him in the last few days of revelation that his is the 'due time' for the 'light to shine forth,' and that he is making that known which has never been known before or understood before. To give relief to his perverted truth he places it on a basis of former errors. That is just what he does. I believe that he greatly trusts to the ignorance of the large majority of men regarding prophetic truths, and that as a result of this ignorance, when someone comes forth with some uninterpreted parts of Scripture we are inclined to believe them.

Wants to See Pastor Russell's Credentials.

"You have only to read his writings to find out his egotism, which has been spoken about by his former wife, and his disregard for all other theologians, who, he says, are in error. But where are his credentials? Have we nothing but his word? We find in Scripture that servants must be clean and commend by their lives that which they teach by their lips, and this is even more paramount today. You never find Paul bringing suit against his defamers to replenish his coffers. Meekness becomes a servant. He should be gentle to all men. What is there in the public life of this man to commend him to us in this position, or to give him a claim over our consciences? I think we shall find quite the reverse.

"I have no personal motive or intent in this except to turn the ears of people against him. At least the people that I know would not let him teach among them. The case of his divorce by his wife is public property, so I am sure we are not doing him an injustice by bringing out certain facts in that case which show that he ought to have no claim on the people. First, his wife testified that his conduct was such that it made life intolerable to any Christian woman. Second, she also testified as to his improper conduct in relation to other women. Third, his efforts to practice fraud on his wife and his use of the corporation of which he holds control. Fourth, his efforts to evade the payment of alimony to his wife, by fleeing from Pennsylvania to New York. Fifth, he carries on his work by means of a business corporation. Besides this you know the trouble brought on by all this among his own people so that he was compelled to promise to do differently.

"This I may say is the great teacher that we have before us in this city. I feel that it is important to say that we have only to wait for three years to see the whole system go to smash. But he is ingenious and will try to get out of it. We all know that his system is false yet we have to be warned about it.

Pastor Russell's Principles of Interpretation.

"His principles of interpretation are first, to spiritualize all the Scriptures that speak of a second advent because he denies a visible appearance. Second, in the most arbitrary way he makes symbolic every passage of Scripture he desires and then make it to symbolize just what he wishes. He goes on developing his theory and has aptitude for bringing in Scripture to make it appear to the unwary fully confirmed by Scripture. He takes the dark and obscure passages because he can twist them the more easily and thus whips simple-minded people into line. Furthermore, Pastor Russell is a great Greek scholar. All errorists are great Greek scholars. But let me warn you against Greek scholars."

Dr. Burridge then went on to show by various examples that Pastor Russell had used his knowledge of Greek to pervert the meaning of certain passages. The dates and subjects of the remaining lectures by Mr. Burridge on the Russell system are as follows:

October 26, "Mr. Russell's Christ and the Christ of Scripture."
October 31, "Mr. Russell's Atonement and Time of Scripture."
November 1, "Mr. Russell's Way of Salvation and Second Chance."
November 2, "Mr. Russell's Ideas of the Dead and Resurrection, Compared with Scripture."
November 3, "Mr. Russell's Prophecy and Date Setting."
November 6, "Mr. Russell's Teachings on the Coming of Christ."

THANKSGIVING DAY SET.

Proclamation by President Taft Fixing November 30 as the Date.

Chicago, October 30—President Taft today issued his annual Thanksgiving proclamation, calling upon citizens of the United States to celebrate Thursday, November 30, next as a day of thanksgiving and prayer. The proclamation reads as follows:

The people of this land, having by long sanction and practive set apart toward the close of each passing year a day on which to cease from their labors and assemble for the purpose of giving praise to Him who is the author of the blessings they have enjoyed, it is my duty as chief executive to designate at this time the day for the fulfillment of this devout purpose.

Our country has been signally favored in many ways. The round of the seasons has brought rich harvests. Our industries have thrived far beyond our domestic needs, the production of our labor is daily finding enlarged markets abroad. We have been free from the curses of pestilence, of famine and of war. Our national councils have furthered the cause of peace in other lands and the spirit of benevolence has brought us into closer touch with other peoples, to the strengthening of the bonds of fellowship and good will that link us to our comrades in the universal brotherhood of nations. Strong in the sense of our own right and inspired by as strong a sense of the rights of others, we live in peace and harmony with the world. Rich in the priceless possesion and abundant resources, wherewith the unstinted bounty of God has endowed us, we are unselfishly glad when other peoples pass onward to prosperity and peace. That the great privileges we enjoy may continue, and that each coming year may see our country more firmly established in the regard and esteem of our fellow nations, is the prayer that should arise in every thankful heart.

Wherefore, I, William Howard Taft, President of the United States of America, designate Thursday, the thirtieth of November, next, as a day of thanksgiving and prayer, and I earnestly call upon my countrymen and upon all that dwell under the flag of our beloved country, then to meet in their accustomed places of worship to join in offering praise to Almighty God and devout thanks for the loving mercies He has given to us.

In witness thereof, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed.

Done at the City of Chicago, this 30th day of October, in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and eleven, and of the Independence of the United States of America the one hundred and thirty-sixth.

BY THE PRESIDENT.
P. C. Knox, Secretary of State.

NEGRO DYING IN HOSPITAL.

His Sweetheart Is Locked Up Charged With Shooting Him.

Ward Meyers, a negro messroom steward on the U. S. S. Connecticut, is dying in the Brooklyn Hospital with a bullet wound in his abdomen, and Rhoda Wilson, a young negress, is locked up in the Raymond street jail on a charge of having shot him. Park M. Lee had been for three years in love with Rhoda, whose home is at 319 Gold street. Lee, laden with gifts for the girl, reached her home about midnight last night and found her entertaining Meyers, whose acquaintance Rhoda had made through Lee.

There was a dispute between the woman and her lover, and he told her that life was not worth living any longer. He had on a previous occasion given her a .38 caliber revolver, and he told her to get it and shoot him. That is the story Rhoda told to the police this morning. She had no intention, she says, of shooting anyone, but she got the revolver and began to fool with it.

Meyers was shot in the abdomen, and the police believe that Rhoda deliberately fired the revolver at him because she wanted to appease the jealousy of Lee. She says the shooting was accidental.

The noise of the shooting brought in the neighbors and Detective Cunningham of the Adams street station, who was nearby, ran to the house. He called an ambulance and Meyers was hurried to the hospital, where the doctors say the chances of his surviving are very slender.

Lee was arrested by the detective as an essential witness. He, too, declares that the shooting was accidental.

This morning Chief Magistrate Kempner, sitting in the Adams street court, heard Rhoda's plea of not guilty. She was held without bail until November 2 for examination.

BADLY BEATEN IN THEATER.

Cuban's Nose Broken and Eye Blackened—Special Officer Accused.

According to John Commento, a special officer in the Columbia Theater, there was almost a panic there last night, due to the noise made by Richard Bruen and Sergio Vassalo, two Cubans, who insisted, he declared, in taking seats on the side reserved for women. Patrolman Conlin of the Adams street station had placed the two Cubans, who were white and well dressed, under arrest, on Commento's statement. Commento did not have a scratch on his person, but he declared that the taller of the Cubans, Vassalo, had thrown him down a flight of stairs in the theater.

Chief Magistrate Kempner, who was sitting in the Adams street court when the men were arraigned, took much interest in the case, for Vassalo's coat was smeared with blood, his nose was broken and his left eye was closed and discolored. He could speak no English, and had been in the country only a few weeks. His chum, who spoke the language well, said that Vassalo had been beaten by the special officer.

Magistrate Kempner held the young men for further hearing in $100 bail each. Vassalo later made a complaint of felonious assault against the special, and he, too, was arrested.

32 YEARS FOR WHITE SLAVER.

Morris Cohen, Penniless, Must Serve Time for $5,000 Fine.

Mrs. Lena Cohen, who was found guilty of conspiracy to violate the laws of the United States prohibiting the shipping in interstate commerce of girls for immoral purposes, was today sentenced by Judge Hough in the Criminal Branch of the United States Circuit Court in Manhattan, to serve a term of five years imprisonment in the women's prison at Auburn, N. Y. Morris Cohen, who was convicted with her, was given a two years term at Atlanta, Ga., and fined $5,000. The fine to the man, who is penniless, means his serving thirty years additional to the time fixed by the sentence.

Jennie Lureyya of Bridgeport, Conn., who was indicted with the Cohens, pleaded guilty and as she was used by the government as its chief witness, was let off with a suspended sentence.

MAN-O'-WARSMAN RAN AMUCK.

John Schoenfield, a man-o'-warsman from one of the ships at present berthed in the North River, was held this morning by Magistrate Kempner, sitting in the Adams street court, for the Grand Jury on a charge of carrying a dangerous weapon. He had a big knife and was running amuck with it on Sands street, early this morning, when Patrolmen Finn and Cone of the Fulton street station arrested him.

Dr. Dorchester graduated from Wesleyan University in the class of '74, and while an undergraduate became a member of the Psi Upsilon fraternity.

NAMING OF CARDINALS OFFICIALLY CONFIRMED

Prelates Honored by the Pope Will Start for Rome by November 10.

FUTURE AMERICAN POPE TALK

Gossip in Rome That the Way Is Being Paved to This End.

Washington, October 30—Mgr. Diomede Falconio, the papal delegate, who has been elevated to the cardinalate along with Archbishops O'Connell of Boston and Farley of New York, was today summoned to the consistory at Rome, November 27.

Official notice of the appointment of the new cardinals reached Mgr. Falconio today. All three prelates probably will sail not later than November 10.

Falconio Will Not Return to America.

Mgr. Falconio does not expect to return to America, as his position will be advisory to the Pope. The Rev. Bonaventure Cerretti, the auditor of the papal delegation, will act as charge d'affaires until the appointment of an ablegate to succeed Mgr. Falconio.

Many telegrams of congratulation from the Catholic clergy and laity and other friends in this country and Canada, and in Europe, have reached the newly selected member of the College of Cardinals.

Mgr. Falconio said he hoped to sail by the date mentioned. He expressed his appreciation for the kindness of the American people since he came to Washington.

"I have become greatly attached to the American people, because I am an American," said he. "My work in Washington as representative of the Vatican has been most pleasant. I leave here with many regrets, but must obey the call to other fields."

Rome, October 30—Comments on the approaching consistery, when seventeen cardinals, including three from the United States, will be created, continue to emphasize the great significance of Pope Pius' decision to grant to America four representatives in the Sacred College. By some it is asserted that the way is being paved for the future advent of an American Pope.

By such it is pointed out that the largest aggregation of Catholics in the world is to be found in the United States and its possessions, the Philippine Islands, Hawaii, Porto Rico and Guam. Not only are the Catholics of America superior in numbers but in deep religious feeling, piety, loyalty to the Holy See and in wealth and generosity. An Irish-American Pope is suggested for the day when it shall be considered no longer necessary for the papacy to be held by an Italian.

The American College faculty and students are rejoicing especially over the elevation of Archbishop Farley of New York and Archbishop O'Connell of Boston, as they are alumni of the college. The former was one of the original thirteen students when the college was founded by Pope Pius IX. The latter was both a student and a rector, and is the first rector to be raised to the purple.

The objections made by some that Mgr. Kennedy, rector of the American College being an American, cannot be appointed Apostolic Delegate at Washington, are confuted by the fact that the present Pope, for the first time, made a departure from the rule, nominating Mgr. Fruehwirth as Papal Nuncio to Munich, which arrangement is working well. Mgr. Kennedy is described as a Romanist to the backbone.

SHANNAHAN'S FRIENDS RALLY

And Pledge Him Support in Municipal Judgeship Campaign.

Three hundred friends and neighbors of William Seward Shannahan, candidate for Municipal Court Judge in the Sixth District of Brooklyn, met yesterday afternoon at Acme Hall, Ninth street and Seventh avenue. There were present representatives from all parts of the district.

The meeting was an informal one, and was called to order by Peter P. McLoughlin, who stated that it was simply a gathering of friends and neighbors of Mr. Shannahan all desirous of aiding in his election to the Municipal Court bench. He reverenced the record of Judge Shannahan in the Legislature, praising it heartily, and stated that the fact that Mr. Shannahan had been selected for this important judgeship by Mayor Gaynor should be sufficient guarantee to the voters of his exceptional qualifications for judicial office.

Remarks were made by ex-Assemblyman John F. Kearney and John C. L. Daly, ex-Judge Travers of Flatbush and Francis J. McLoughlin. All paid a tribute to the independence, zeal and integrity of Mr. Channahan and made suggestions calculated to aid in bringing about the election of the candidate.

Mr. Shannahan, replying, sincerely thanked his friends and neighbors for their promise of energetic work in his behalf.

Each person present pledged himself to work unceasingly during the remaining days of the campaign to roll up a majority for Mr. Shannahan.

WIFE AFRAID OF T. J. YOUNG.

Accuses Him of Beating Her—Treated Badly for Seven Years.

Thomas J. Young, 44 years old, living at 1910 Fourth avenue, was held in $100 bail today by Magistrate Hylan, in the Fifth avenue court, for examination on November 2, on a charge of assaulting his wife, Mary F. M. Young, who was in court and showed the effects of a severe beating, her left eye being badly discolored. The woman was in a very nervous condition and told the judge that she had been receiving cruel and inhuman treatment for seven years. She said that she had been frequently beaten, and that her husband had deserted her from time to time for periods of as long as three months.

In her affidavit she stated that last week she was beaten with a club, being knocked to the floor, and that from the effects of the beating she suffered a hemorrhage of the mouth and nose. The magistrate admonished Young to keep away from his wife until after the hearing on November 2. The woman was much worried at the possibility of Young disregarding the judge's warning, and told the court that she was afraid to go to her home for fear that her husband would return and again attack her. Magistrate Hylan told Young that if he even went near his wife it would go hard with him.

$12,000 CHURCH OFFERING.

Patchogue Methodists Generous Yesterday—Will Pay for Improvements.

(Special to The Eagle.)

Patchogue, L. I., October 30—A $12,000 offering was taken at the morning service in the Methodist Episcopal Church here yesterday.

During the past summer extensive improvements have been made to both the exterior and interior of the edifice, these improvements exceeding by far the conservative estimate of the church board. As a result, many of the church people were in a quandary to know how the expense was to be met.

The young pastor of the church, the Rev. Ira W. Henderson, took an optimistic view of the situation, and during last week had letters sent to every member of the church and others, warning them of the offering to be asked for yesterday. The result was that through the earnest appeal practically the entire amount needed to pay for the improvement was raised.

The church was crowded to the doors in the evening, when the annual rally-day exercises were given by the Sunday school. An orchestra of twenty pieces and the choir of twenty voices augmented the customary programme.

MAN AND WIFE NEAR DEATH.

Elderly Couple Almost Asphyxiated by Gas in Their Home.

Hugh McGraw, 63 years old, and his wife, Margaret, 73 years old, who live at 412A Eighteenth street, narrowly escaped death today when shortly before 11 o'clock they were overcome by illuminating gas. Mrs. McGraw was cooking luncheon on a gasrange in her kitchen, and, after putting the food on the stove, went into the dining room. She talked with her husband for a few minutes, and he then started to read to her. That is the last they remember.

Some time later Mrs. James Cleary, who lives in the same house, was passing through the hall and noticed the odor of gas. She traced it to the apartment of the McGraw's and tried the door. Finding it locked, and being unable to get any response to repeated knocks, she notified the police of the Fifth avenue station, who sent an officer around to investigate. The policeman went up the fire escape and entered the kitchen. He discovered that the gaspipe attached to the stove had become loose and that gas was escaping. After turning it off he found the two elderly people, both of whom were unconscious. He sent in a hurry call for an ambulance, and Dr. Barber of the Seney Hospital responded. The physician worked over them for over an hour. The man soon responded to treatment, but the woman required heroic methods to restore her to consciousness. Finally the doctor brought her around, and while both she and her husband were very ill, it was not necessary to remove them to the hospital. It is thought that Mrs. McGraw, in passing from the kitchen to the diningroom displaced the gastube and that both husband and wife were overcome before they were aware that anything was the matter.

NEAR DEATH IN AUTO CHASE.

Officer Mesle's Motorcycle Smashed as He Leaped Into Big Car.

John Mesle, a bicycle policeman, chased a speeding auto, in which were the owner, Edward T. Maynard, a stockbroker, of 1414 Pacific street, and his chauffeur, John Fink, 1418 Fulton street, for nearly two miles yesterday and narrowly escaped serious injury or death at the end of the chase when, he alleges, the man in charge of the machine suddenly stopped athwart his path. He made a flying leap from his motor cycle just as it crashed into the automobile, landing in the auto himself on top of the occupants, while the machine he had been riding was smashed against the guards. He was painfully scratched and bruised, and alleged in the Flatbush police court today that a deliberate attempt had been made to injure him.

Fink was fined $25 and the case against Maynard was set over until tomorrow, as he was not in court today.

There were fourteen other cases of auto speeding in the Flatbush police court today, and all were disposed of with fines ranging from $1 to $15. Mesle and two companions had rounded them up yesterday.

Cole, D.D., took part in the service. The pallbearers were Charles H. Lansing, William Russell Johnson, William H. Smith, C. Ritter, D. Livingstone, John Oliver, E. Bearfield and M. P. Saunders. THREE-ALARM BLAZE.

Fire in Krantz & Co.'s Plant Did $100,000 Damage.

A three-alarm fire occurred early yesterday morning at 160 Seventh avenue. It was the plant of H. Krantz & Co., manufacturers of electrical supplies, and for a time it looked as if adjoining factories were doomed. The fire was discovered by some passerby, and an alarm was turned in, but by the time the firemen arrived the flames had spread throughout the entire plant, so that it was impossible to save any part of the factory.

The large plant of the Royal Metal Furniture Company, on one side, and that of the American Cordage and Rope Company on the other, were in great danger, but were saved.

John Harlingan of Engine Company No. 151, while fighting the fire from a ladder, was cut about the head and shoulders by falling glass, which came from a window above him.

The plant occupied a three-story brick building in Seventh street, and a four-story one in the rear. Both were totally destroyed, and the loss, it is claimed, will exceed $100,000.

PASTOR RUSSELL SILENT TO HIS WIFE FOR MONTHS

Would Address Her Only by Letter, and Then in Terms of Reproach.

ORDERED OUT OF SICKROOM.

Wife's Counsel's Brief in Separation Suit Charges Husband With Sending Offensive Messages by Rose Ball.

(Special to The Eagle.)

Pittsburg, Pa., October 31—Surprise has been expressed here by those who know Pastor Russell at the assertions contained in the last issue of the People's Pulpit, of which many copies are being circulated in this city. One feature of this issue is Pastor Russell's explanation of his trouble with his wife. He makes in this issue the same charges against his wife for which the Superior Court of Pennsylvania has declared there was not a syllable of justification in the evidence which Pastor Russell presented in court in his vain endeavor to prevent his wife from getting a separation.

Some of the specific statements about Mrs. Russell in Pastor Russell's paper, which have aroused comment here, read as follows: "She came under the influence of what is popularly known as 'Woman's Rights,' and, because she could not have her own way and write what she chose for the columns of my journal, The Watch Tower, she endeavored to coerce me and took one step after another, apparently determined that, if she could not coerce, she would crush and destroy my life and influence."

To those here who recall the Superior Court's characterization of Pastor Russell's conduct toward his wife as evidencing "insistent egotism, extravagant self-praise and continual arrogant domination," and the same court's reference to Mrs. Russell as a "sensitive Christian woman," Pastor Russell's present explanation of their difficulties is not convincing.

A review of this part of the testimony in the separation suit which called forth criticism of Pastor Russell's conduct by the court is contained in the libellant's brief, prepared by Congressman Stephen G. Porter, who was Mrs. Russell's attorney throughout the long court proceedings in which Pastor Russell was repeatedly defeated. In this brief, which was submitted to the Superior Court, to which Pastor Russell carried the suit after the jury in the Court of Common Pleas had rendered a verdict against him, Congressman Porter says:

"The testimony clearly shows that the relations between libellant (Mrs. Russell) and respondent (Pastor Russell) had become somewhat strained prior to the year 1896, about which time respondent ceased speaking to his wife, and holding all his communications with her by letter.

Letter of Pastor Russell to Wife Key of Situation.

"His letter to her of July 8, 1896, may be fairly considered the key to this case, as it shows respondent's notions of marital life, and his treatment of his wife is in harmony with the spirit of that letter. In the letter he states (Exhibit 3):

"'I am convinced that our difficulty is a growing one generally; that it is a great mistake for strong-minded men and women to marry. If they will marry, the strong-minded had far better marry such as are not too intellectual and high-spirited, for there never can, in the nature of things, be peace under present time conditions where the two are on an equality.'

"Later in the letter he states:

"'For the past three years you have been cruelly forcing upon me the evidence that we both erred when we married; that we are not adapted to each other. The last month has fastened this conviction upon me much against my will.'

Pastor Sulked for Weeks at a Time.

"While professing at all times to be guided by the Word of God the undisputed evidence is that he would sulk for weeks at a time and not speak to his wife, and would resort to the pen to have any communications with her; instead of approaching her personally to try to secure reconciliation of their differences and praying with her as a godly man would have done, he went about among her associates and told them she was under the hypnotic influence of Satan in the form of her sister, who was his father's second wife.

"It will be noted here that Mr. Russell in this letter of July 8, 1896, in stating his conviction that they made a mistake in getting married, and that that conviction had been growing on him for three years, which would make it begin in 1893. The dispute about the editorship of the paper began in 1896; therefore it could not have been the dispute about the same that forced the conviction upon Mr. Russell that their marriage was a mistake, and which conviction he says had been growing on him for three years.

"During the letter writing period Mr. Russell refrained from either bidding his wife good morning or good night; and though he denied this on the witness stand, his letter of July 8, 1896 (Exhibit 2), clearly contradicts him, for in that he states:

"'To avoid misunderstanding, let me say, under the circumstances it properly devolves upon you to make the advances on the line of social amenities between us. It would be improper for me to take the initiative in the matter of amenities such as, 'good morning,' 'good night,' etc.'

"The atmosphere of this home from July, 1896, to the time when she withdrew from it in November, 1897, was filled with unbearable silence and utter neglect. This, of itself, was an indignity of such a character as to render the condition of a woman of Mrs. Russell's delicacy of feeling intolerable and her life burdensome.

"Nagging and Cutting Sarcasm."

"To this, libellant testified, was added nagging and cutting sarcasm. 'You are my wife only in a legal sense' (Exhibit 14, page 6), and by stating to her: 'A wife has no rights which a husband is bound to respect,' and calling her a blasphemer, as testified by libellant in describing a scene that occurred in the Watch Tower office, where the respondent took her by the arm and forcibly ejected her with the statement: 'Get out of here, you blasphemer.' This is not contradicted by the respondent; in fact, it might be said that the case is somewhat remarkable for the great number of failures to contradict the libellant by respondent when he had amply opportunity to do so.

"Another incident in the fall of 1896, to which libellant testified, and was uncontradicted, by the respondent was: When leaving home for the far West she helped him get ready, and then putting her hand on his arm, she said: 'Husband, you are going far away. There are lots of railroad accidents, and we might never meet again. Surely, you don't want to leave your wife in this cold, indifferent way.'

In reply, he pushed her back, slammed the door in her face, and departed on his journey.

"'Again, libellant testifies, that in the latter part of December, 1896, she was taken sick with a severe form of erysipelas. When she had been ill for about two weeks respondent went to New York, was gone nearly a week, and when he returned he did not so much as enter that sick room and see his wife; but after taking his breakfast in their apartments, he goes to his office and remains until night, and then between 9 and 10 o'clock goes to the sick room, not to comfort and cheer; but to order libellant out of the room. As a direct result of this treatment, libellant testifies, and it is not denied, that she was thrown into a violent fever that night and a heavy backset followed. The erysipelas, which had been confined to head and face, thereafter involved the whole person, and was most distressing and dangerous.

"Even if defendant did attend to her himself at nights when at home, in preference to hiring a competent nurse, it is evident from the testimony of libellant that he did not do it in a way becoming to a kind husband, for libellant testifies that in the midst of a nervous chill he told her himself that it was a judgment of God upon her, and that if she could not control her nerves he would leave her alone, for it was not his duty to attend to her.

Sent Offensive Message to Wife by Rose Ball.

While respondent denies that he ever told the libellant directly that her sickness was a judgment of God, he admits that he did say this to Rose Ball, with the intention of having her repeat it to his wife. This Rose Ball is the same girl that the respondent admitted was in the habit of sitting on his knee and kissing him, and would naturally be the most offensive messenger by whom he could send a message to his wife. And she didn't fail to carry it to the bedridden wife.

"Finally, however, she did recover, after about nine weeks illness. She was again about the duties of her home in the spring and summer of 1897, when one day, in the presence of this same Rose Ball, he demands of his wife an itemized statement of her outlays. Something he had never required before, probably because he realized that she had made more of his money than he did. Such a demand at any time would be inexpressibly humiliating to her, and when made in the presence of Rose Ball would be inexcusably and utterly intolerable."

In rendering its decision against Pastor Russell, the Superior Court recurs to many of the above matters and partly bases its decision on the facts which they disclose.

Evangelist Burridge Continues to Examine Pastor Russell's Teachings.

Continuing his course of seven lectures entitled "C. T. Russell's Teaching Examined," J. H. Burridge, the well known evangelist of Bristol England, delivered the second address last evening in the Bethany Church, Clermont and Myrtle avenues, on the subject, "Mr. Russell's Christ and the Christ of the Scriptures." Mr. Burridge took up Pastor Russell on the divinity of Christ and showed that Christ as taught by the Brooklyn preacher is entirely different from the Christ of the Scriptures. He also made it apparent that Pastor Russell's statements in his works on the subject are both inconsistent and contradictory.

The speaker went on to give some of the clearest passages of Scripture that show that Christ was divine, as opposed to Pastor Russell's theory.

Mr. Burridge closed with various readings from the books of Pastor Russell to show the truth of his contentions regarding the falsity of the preacher's doctrine. Tonight he will speak on "The Atonement of Scripture and Mr. Russell's Atonement."

ON DAY SET FOR WEDDING RICHESON IS IN COURT

Accused Clergyman Haggard and Pale at Hearing, which Is Adjourned.

RIDES IN VAN WITH "DRUNKS."

Continuance of Case Due to Fact That Grand Jury Has Not Yet Reported.

Boston, October 31—When the case of the Rev. Clarence V. T. Richeson, pastor of Immanuel Baptist Church, Cambridge, who is charged with murdering Miss Avis Linnell, was called in the Municipal Court, today, the hearing was postponed until November 7. The minister was in court only two minutes. This is the day on which the accused clergyman was to have been married to Miss Violet Edmands.

Mr. Richeson appeared tired and wan after his eleventh day in jail, and he could scarcely be distinguished from any of the score of other prisoners who were crowded into the pen with him.

The Richeson case was called so soon after the minister's arrival in court, and disposed of so quietly, that few of the spectators knew of it. Clerk Ingalls went through the formality of pronouncing the hearing further continued until next week, Tuesday, November 7.

The prisoner then stepped down from the dock, was escorted through the door and taken to the Tombs to await his return to the Charles street jail.

The continuance of the hearing this morning was a formality, being made necessary owing to the fact that the Suffolk County Grand Jury, which has considered for three days evidence presented by District Attorney Joseph C. Pelletier against Mr. Richeson, had not made a report on the case.

The Grand Jury was to resume its sitting at 2 o'clock this afternoon. It has been expected that the request of the government for a continuance would be objected to by the defense, but Assistant District Attorney Thomas D. Lavelle and Philip R. Dunbar, attorney for the defense, held a short conference this morning and when the case came up there was not a rumble in the machinery of court formalities.

Newspapermen in the courtroom had scanned closely the dock in which were the score of prisoners, most of them under arrest for intoxication, in the hope of identifying the clergyman.

The minister, whose neat appearance had been remarked everywhere while he enjoyed his liberty, could scarcely be distinguished from the other prisoners. Even when Mr. Richeson rose and faced the court he was not recognized. His face was haggard and pale and his clothes appeared ill-fitting. His hair, however, was neatly combed.

Later in the day the accused clergyman made his second trip to jail in the prison van which carries the prisoners from the Tombs. As on his first trip, following his appearance in court after his arrest on October 20, at the home of his fiancee, Miss Violet Edmands, his companions on this ride were his ill-kempt brethren of the detention pen, who were in the court with him. In contrast to this ride was that which the accused clergyman had originally planned for the day of his marriage to Miss Edmands.

MOUNT SINAI SUNDAY SCHOOL.

Lectures Announced by Superintendent Samuel Cohen.

What was probably the most interesting session of the Sunday school of the Temple Mt. Sinai was the one held last Sunday morning. The attendance was almost double over the previous Sunday morning, which was the opening day, and a number of new teachers also enrolled.

After the Sunday school session was at an end, Samuel Cohen, the superintendent, announced a treat for the children and teachers for next Sunday morning—namely, a lecture by Deputy Health Commissioner Fogerty of Brooklyn. Commissioner Fogerty is the first of many prominent men who it is believed will lecture to the children on various Sundays during the winter.

The next business in order was suggested by one of the teachers, namely the reorganization of the Culture Club. This was accomplished with the election of Miss Rebecca Bloom as president; the Rev. Dr. Cantor as vice president; Miss Bertha Lewis as secretary, and Miss Hannah Ascher as treasurer, and with the Sunday school board, consisting of Samuel Cohen, Dr. Pulvermacher, Mr. Hahn, Mr. Lieben, Mr. Altman and Mr. Ascher as honorary members. The first formal meeting of the club will be held in the vestry rooms next Sunday afternoon, at 3 p.m. Plans are being rapidly perfected for the Chanaka entertainment, which will be held on December 17.

UNKNOWN ESKIMO TRIBE.

Still Hunt With Bows and Arrows and Use Stone Implements.

Winnipeg, Manitoba, October 31—The Right Rev. Dr. Holmes, Bishop of Athabasca, who has just returned from a voyage down the great Mackenzie River, announces the existence of a hitherto unknown tribe of 1,000 Eskimos living east of the Mackenzie River and between the Great Bear Lake and the Arctic Ocean.

The Eskimos still hunt with bow and arrows and use stone implements. The Bishop says the Eskimos have a higher intelligence than the ordinary Indians and are apt and eager to learn, but at present there are only two teachers along the 12,000 miles of the Mackenzie.

BROOKLYN GIRL'S TRIUMPH.

Promising European Career of Lillian Voss, Pupil of L. Mollenhauer.

From Europe comes the expected report that Miss Lillian Voss is arousing quite a stir over the beauty and general excellence of her piano playing. Miss Voss is a daughter of H. F. Voss, a prominent Brooklyn merchant. The report mentioned above was expected to be favorable by a good judge, who was her early teacher, viz., Louis Mollenhauer, director of the Louis Mollenhauer Conservatory of Music, 1844 Caton avenue.

Mr. Mollenhauer said yesterday concerning the foundation of Miss Voss' skill under his tuition:

Lillian Voss.
Brooklyn Pianist in Europe.

"Miss Voss studied with me for a number of years. Her progress was phenomenal. At an early age she played the piano score of Cesar Franck's extremely difficult "Sonate," for piano and violin, before a gathering of renowned New York pianists. They joined with me in the opinion that she had a most remarkable future." Mr. Mollenhauer added: "I then predicted for Miss Voss that she would become one of the greatest, if not the greatest, living woman pianist the world has ever heard. If she should be sent to study with some great master in Europe, where she would be in a musical atmosphere."

At Mr. Mollenhauer's suggestion, Miss Voss was sent by her father to Xaver Scharwenka, court pianist to the Emperor of Austria-Hungary, royal Prussian professor and member and senator of the Royal Academy of Fine Arts in Berlin. Miss Voss has continuously had Scharwenka's personal instruction and is now studying with him for the third year. Mr. Mollenhauer said in conclusion:

"Miss Voss' friends and I personally are looking forward to see fulfilled the prediction that I made some time ago. I know that it will come true."

BROTHERS REUNITED.

(Special to The Eagle.)

Patchogue, L. I., October 31—Herbert A. Rowse, an Ocean avenue merchant, was the most surprised man in town yesterday, when an apparent stranger came into his store and entered into negotiations for the purchase of a bicycle. Finally the stranger remarked: "Herb, I guess I'll have to introduce myself. I am your brother Angus."

The two brothers had not met in twenty-four years. When a youngster, Angus Rowse left his home in Brooklyn to seek his fortune in the West. He was employed for some years as a cow-puncher on a Western ranch, and finally settled in business near Denver, Col.

Some weeks ago Angus Rowse was seized with a desire to come East and hunt for his five brothers. He met several of them in New York and Brooklyn, and finally came out to Patchogue yesterday to pay his respects to another brother, Herbert.

FERRYBOAT DECISION STANDS.

Municipal Craft May Not Carry Explosives Without Federal Authority.

Word was received at the United States District Attorney's office today from Solicitor General F. W. Lehman, in Washington, that the United States Supreme Court had refused to grant Corporation Counsel Watson of New York City a writ of certiorari to review the decision of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals that municipal ferryboats may not carry petroleum and other explosives under toll rates unless the city has first got permission from the Government steamboat inspectors.

This final decision in this matter comes at the end of two years of Federal litigation, and applies to municipal craft not only in this city, but in cities all over the country.

Colonel William J. Youngs of this Federal district was the first United States attorney to bring this question up.

YOUNG BRIDE SEEKS FREEDOM

Says Youthful Husband Had a Wife When He Married Her.

Claiming that her husband had another wife before marrying her, Mrs. Charlotte Keyes Clarke got an order today from Justice Garretson appointing her mother guardian in a suit for the annulment against James Russell Clark. Mrs. Clarke lives at 98 Ralph avenue. She is only 16 years of age.

According to the papers the young couple were married on June 4 last and went to housekeeping at 1252 Gates avenue. The plaintiff's mother is Mrs. Robert C. Wilson, whose husband, a retired merchant, after the marriage became suspicious of Clarke and started an investigation the result of which brought his stepdaughter back home and started the annulment action. Clarke's first wife, it is alleged, was Miss Ellen M. Pratt, now living at Glendale, L. I.

TERRY PETITION INVALID, SAYS APPELLATE COURT

First District Assemblyman Loses on Appeal From Supreme Court Order.

PROPOSES FURTHER APPEAL.

Independent Candidate Is Held Responsible for Agents Who Secured Forged Signatures.

Supreme Court Justice Blackmar's decision throwing out the certificate of the "Terry Nominators," indorsing the independent candidacy of Assemblyman Edmund R. Terry for re-election in the First Assembly District, was today affirmed by the Appellate Division.

When the decision was handed down, Mr. Terry was one of the first to hear of it and he promptly said that he would go to Albany immediately and endeavor to have the Court of Appeals pass upon the question involved.

Justice Burr writes the memorandum in which his associates all concur upholding the validity of Section 123 of the Election Law which provides that any sheet of a certificate which contains 5 per cent. or more of its names which are forgeries the sheet shall be thrown out. Justice Blackmar found forgeries on five of the sixty sheets which nullified fifty-nine names on those sheets. This left the certificate short of the necessary 500 names.

Justice Burr lays down the rule that any candidate wishing to run independently must be made responsible for the acts of his agents in obtaining signatures to the petition. If they procure fraudulent signatures, then he must suffer to the extent of failing to secure the certificate, although it does not prevent his friends from voting for him by writing his name in the proper place on the official ballot.

"It would tend to embarrass and not facilitate the election," says Justice Burr, "if the official ballot, now sufficiently unwieldy, were further encumbered by the appearance thereon of the names of candidates whose certificates were the result of forgery and fraud."

Justice Burr then tells what is necessary to make a valid certificate and concludes by affirming the lower court granting an order enjoining the Board of Elections from printing on the ballot the certificate of the "Terry Nominators."

HAS NO LOST ANIMALS NOR JOBS FOR THE IDLE

Miss Madigan of 123 Wolcott Street Victim of a Practical Joker.

HE IS NOW BEING HUNTED FOR.

Many Persons Humbugged by Fake Messages Apparently Signed by Miss Wolcott or Her Nephew.

Miss Nellie Madigan, who lives with her nephew, former Assemblyman James Burns, at 123 Wolcott street, begs to announce through The Eagle that she hasn't found any lost cats; that she hasn't any positions to offer anybody, at good wages or otherwise; and that no missing poodle-dogs have found their way mysteriously into her home. Miss Madigan states all this not only emphatically, but angrily and indignantly.

Some persons have been playing what they consider a joke on Miss Madigan, although she herself says that she fails to see where the humor of it is. People who have advertised for positions or that they have lost cats or dogs or other pets have been receiving postal cards, signed with Miss Madigan's name, to the effect that Miss Madigan has the jobs to offer or has found the missing animals.

Consequently Miss Madigan's life has been miserable during the past week by insistent strangers who have come to her house by trolley car, carriage, automobile or a-foot, demanding positions or lost pets. Furthermore, she has received nearly a score of letters and postal cards through the mails from persons who wished to inquire about positions or missing animals.

Forced to Complain to Postmaster Voorhies.

The "joke" has become so annoying to Miss Madigan at last that she has complained to Postmaster Voorhies. Postal Inspector John N. Parsons has been called into the case and is investigating. Some of the people who come to Miss Madigan's home after jobs or animals were willing to leave with her the cards they had received, bearing her forged signature. These cards she has turned over to Inspector Parsons. Some were mailed from the main postoffice and some from Station L. Miss Madigan has her suspicions as to her annoyers, and has given their names to Inspector Parsons. The handwriting on all the cards seems to be the same.

Yesterday afternoon an aged negro woman came to her house. The visitor had advertised the loss of a pet cat, and someone had written her in Miss Madigan's name that the cat could be recovered at 123 Wolcott street. When the negro woman found that Miss Madigan didn't have her cat she was indignant and accused Miss Madigan of playing a joke. A joke was farthest from Miss Madigan's mind. She grabbed the postal card and the negro woman demanded it back. Finally a policeman was called in and Miss Madigan dared the officer to take possession of the card. He didn't try to, and Miss Madigan has placed the card in Inspector Parsons' hands.

How the Joker Worked.

Edward Spruil of 140 Prince street was one "victim" who was directed by postal card to call at Miss Madigan's home for a job. This card was signed with ex-Assemblyman Burns' name. It read:

"I want a man of your qualifications. Call at 6:30 p.m. today, October 30, at 123 Wolcott street, South Brooklyn. Take Crosstown cars."

Another card was addressed: "Please deliver this letter at No. 56 Livingston street, Brooklyn." Someone at that address called at Miss Madigan's home to recover a dog, because the person had read on this card:

"I found a little white poodle dog at Clinton st. and Atlantic ave. Please call on Jim Burns, 123 Wolcott st., and you can have him. Call about 10:30 a.m. or at 5 p.m. today. Take crosstown car. Respt., Jim Burns, 123 Wolcott street, Twelfth Ward, Brooklyn."

Another person applied to Miss Madigan for a job, having received this communication on a postal card:

"Please call at ½ to 7 p.m. Friday, October 27, at 123 Wolcott st., on Miss Madigan. Car fare paid; good wages. Respt. Miss Madigan."

LECTURE ON VENICE.

John D. Harrison Entertains Kings County Historical Society.

Members of the Kings County Historical Society listened to an interesting lecture on Venice last night at Kings County Historical Hall, 41 Amersfort place. John D. Harrison, a brother-in-law of Charles A. Dillons, president of the society, was the lecturer. Mr. Harrison is an extensive traveler and has taken many first-hand views of places visited and points of particular interest and note on his trips. The lecture was illustrated by a number of lantern slides made from these pictures. Especially fine views of the canals and old palaces were shown.

The lecture is one of a series of talks and lectures given by the society throughout the season on historical subjects. The next will be on Tuesday, November 21, when the society will present Henry Steigner of New York in a dramatic reading of Edmund Rostand's great historic drama of the life of Napoleon's only son, "L'Aiglon." This will be in costume.

On Tuesday, December 19, Major W. H. Coughlin will give an illustrated lecture on Brooklyn in Colonial times, which should prove entertaining and particularly valuable to the members of the society, interested as they are in the history of Kings County.

JOLLY HALLOWEEN SPREAD.

A clever and enjoyable Halloween party was held at the residence of Miss Angelus Fitzpatrick, on Sterling place, last evening. About twenty-four were present and the young folks enjoyed many Halloween games, dancing and a musical programme. Many of the girls were prettily costumed for the event, including Miss Viola White as the Letter Girl, Miss Gloria Le Vere as the Pumpkin Girl, Angelus Fitzpatrick as Bo Peep, and many others.

In addition to being a Halloween party, the affair was a birthday celebration of Miss Angelus Fitzpatrick, and the young hostess received a number of pretty gifts.

FIFTEEN MILLIONS INCREASE IN BUDGET

$189,210,950.33 Is Needed to Run the City Departments in 1912.

SOME BIG MANDATORY ITEMS.

New Direct Tax of State and Equal Pay for School Teachers.

The budget for 1912 is $189,210,950.33, an increase of $15,243,115.16 over this year's total.

While it was stated that no announcement could be made as to the tax rate for next year, which is subject to the condition of the general fund at the close of this year, and cannot be determined definitely until all 1911 statements have been returned to the Department of Finance, it is evident, from the amount of the budget, as compared with the assessed valuation of real and personal property, that the average rate for all boroughs during 1912 will be from 1.85 to 1.88, against 1.73 for 1911.

Included in the budget increase above alluded to are mandatory items footing up to $9,244,051.83. The largest of these is to cover the new district tax of the State, for $4,361,345.65. For the fulfillment of the terms of the Grady teachers' equal salary bill, $3,850,000 had to be added to the educational budget, while the total included for debt service (interest and redemption fund) is $1,092,706.18.

The tentative budget, as it was framed by the Budget Committee up to Monday night, had amounted to about $188,800,000. The approval of the equal pay bill by Governor Dix meant a large jump over these figures. The first estimate of the cost of putting the equal pay principle into effect being $4,000,000. Accordingly the board labored, as its committee had labored throughout yesterday morning, to cut out all tentative allowances which might be eliminated. That its work was successful was attested by the fact that the budget, as finally adopted, was $550,000 lower than the figures of the night before, and with the allowance for the Grady bill included.

The largest cut-down was in the item for tax deficiency redemption. This was slashed $2,700,000, leaving it at $10,000,000 as for 1911. One hundred and ninety-four thousand was taken from the allowance for the Department of Health, leaving that department still $340,000 above this year's allowance. Two hundred and thirty thousand was taken from the allowance for the Department of Education, of which amount $138,000 will be raised by corporate stock sales, the items involved being proper corporate stock charges. The Department of Charities was cut $93,500 under its tentative allowance, while the Borough Presidents, all together, were cut $133,205. In brief, outside of the reduction from the tax deficiency item, $1,700,000 was clipped from 140 different items in the tentative budget.

The Board of Health was reduced $40,000 on its allowance for child hygiene. Its requisitions for funds for research was set aside, and the proposed allowance for extending the scope of the Otisville Sanitarium was chopped out likewise. Even Mrs. J. Borden Harriman's plea, on Monday, for an increase in the number of milk stations to be purchased by the city, proved ineffective. The purchase of 55, as provided for in the tentative budget, was allowed.

Before signing the budget, President McAneny said:

"I wish to qualify my action in signing this budget by making this statement for the record: 'I do not accept as proper the cuts that have been made in the tentative allowance for the Department of Health. I believe that these have been made in such a manner as to interfere with that continued progress of the Health Department which is essential to good city government.'"

Mayor Gaynor said that while he signed the budget as a member of the Board of Estimate, he voted with full reservation of the privilege allowed him to approve or disapprove any action the Board of Aldermen might take.

"As to the matter," he said, "I shall, when the budget is returned from the Board of Aldermen, act in accordance with my own best judgment, independently of the action which the Board of Estimate has taken. I believe that is the intent of the charter."

Later the Mayor said:

"The increase in the sums allowed the departments whose heads are appointed is normal—less than $2,500,000. The great increase is in items outside of the expenses of the city government. This year the State returns to a land tax. This makes an item of about $4,500,000 of State taxes, which has nothing to do with the expenses of the city government, but has to be added to our city budget and levied and collected for the State.

"Then there is an item of $10,000,000, part of a large sum which accumulated for years under past administrations, instead of each yearly deficiency having been included in the next ensuing budget and tax levy as required by law. It was a great wrong to allow such yearly deficiencies to accumulate instead of putting each in the current budget and tax levy."

NAPHTHA ON AFTER DECK.

Carrying Explosive to South America, S. S. Zulia Has No Passengers.

The Red D line's steamship Zulia sailed at noon today under unusual circumstances, from Pier 11, Pierrepont's stores, for Mayaguez, P. R.; Curacao, La Guayra and Maracaibo, as she carries no passengers. This is due to the fact that she takes out on the after deck several hundred cases of naphtha to La Guayra. Under the Federal regulations a ship must not carry naphtha or gasoline except by special permit, and even then is not allowed to carry passengers, so that those booked for the Zulia must await the sailing of the Caracas, a week from today.

Curiously enough, shipping men believe that cotton is a far more dangerous cargo than naphtha or gasoline, but there are no restrictions on its being carried on passenger ships. A vessel carrying the smallest amount of loose black powder must fly a red danger flag, while she may carry any quantity of fixed ammunition without doing so.

HUSBAND GETS DIVORCE.

Supreme Court Justice Garretson yesterday granted a final decree of absolute divorce to George E. Gibson from Emma L. Gibson, to whom he was married on February 22, 1892. The three daughters, Estella, Gertrude and Eloise, are given into the custody of their father, who lives on Graham avenue, in this borough. According to the testimony Mrs. Gibson deserted her husband for one Arthur Richard Abernathy, an ice dealer, with whom she was said to be living for some time at 727 Lexington avenue.

Miss Elsie Preston To Marry a Philadelphian.

In the course of a Halloween luncheon given by Miss Alice Decker at her home, 169 Lefferts place, yesterday afternoon, Miss Elsie Preston announced her engagement to Samuel S. Poor of Philadelphia. The announcement was made informally and unexpectedly, and was the greatest surprise to the guests. At this luncheon Miss Decker had, besides Miss Preston, Miss Ethel Dahn, Miss Winifred Tate, Mrs. John Thurlow (who was Miss Isabelle Williams), Miss Grace Allen, Miss Sarah Ivins, Mrs. Harold Millbank (Miss Edith Little that was), Miss Janet Burns, Miss Alice Dahn, Miss Helen Millard, Miss Marjorie Decker and Mrs. Francis Westbrook (Miss Madeleine Dickie before her marriage).

Miss Preston is to be married almost immediately. Her wedding is to take place on the evening of Monday, December 4, from her home, 912 St. Mark's avenue. It will be an evening wedding, with a small ceremony, but a large reception following.

Miss Decker's luncheon was a real Halloween affair, with its table decorated with yellow and white chrysanthemums and autumn leaves. Its candelabra were adorned with pumpkin colored shades. Afterward the newly announced bride to be and the other guests played bridge.

The coming bride is the younger daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Wesley Preston. For several years she has been very much of a figure of society. She is decidedly attractive and will be best remembered in time to come as the girl who in all likelihood was the best society amateur actress Brooklyn ever had. Her greatest success in this field was as the "leading lady" of Miss Rebecca Lane Hooper's plays, and also of the Packer plays. She was to have been in the Packer play this winter, but, of course, she is now resigning from the cast.

Mr. Poor is a son of William Poor of Philadelphia and he has practically not been seen at all in Brooklyn as yet. Miss Preston is to make her home in Philadelphia after her marriage.

Gay Halloween Dance Given for E. H. Driggs, Jr.

One of the very gayest of the Halloween festivities of last night was a Halloween dance given in honor of Edmund H. Driggs, jr., by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Edmund H. Driggs, at their home, 940 Ocean avenue, Flatbush. Young Mr. Driggs is the famous halfback of the Adelphi football team, and he has an admiring following. Yesterday was his seventeenth birthday.

The large company of very young girls and men that were present and took active part in the dancing and the sports included a number of collegians, especially a delegation from Princeton. Among these girls and men were:

Miss Helen Williamson and Miss Alice Williamson of Newark, Miss Edna McCabe, Miss Edith McCabe, Miss Helen Plant and Miss Olive Plant of Washington, D. C.; Miss Edna Hodgman, Miss Helen Hodgman, Miss Ruth Wayland, Miss Gladys Wayland, Miss Olive Dow of Providence, R. I.; Miss Janet Watson, Miss Elizabeth Watson, Miss Hazel Hutchinson, Miss Anna Morris, Miss Mildred Tompkins, Miss Marjory Foote, Miss Frances Solliday, Miss Cobb, Miss Viola Cobb, Miss Esther von Glahn, Miss Dorothy Langhaar, Miss Elsa Levermore, Miss Genevieve Bowden, Miss Edith Knowles, Miss Helen Moffat, Miss Edyth Strain, Miss Lillian Strain, Miss Louise Schlegel, Miss Dorothy Ibbotson.

The library was dark and mysterious, with pumpkin lights and witches, black cats and skulls everywhere. Autumn leaves and chrysanthemums decked the drawingrooms. The opening dance began with great spirit, for all were masked for it, and quite unrecognizable, and the girls chose partners. Halloween favors were distributed every fifth dance, one very successful one being a pumpkin ring, a ring that had a shaking pumpkin on a spiral. For the supper dance all were given tall, pointed witches' caps of pumpkin color and black. These were worn through supper and lent a picturesque air to the proceedings. Despite the damp night, the big piazza of the Driggs house was a very popular place.

Alpha Alpha Sigma Has Halloween Party.

Ghosts were a feature of the Halloween Party of Alpha Sigma at the residence of Miss Emma Lakeland, Neptune avenue and Ocean Boulevard, last night. They really made up the "receiving line." As each man and girl arrived a ghost at the outer door received the couple solemnly. Finally, he let the girl in in grisly fashion. The girl hurried upstairs, only to have another ghost jump out at her terrifyingly. What "initiation" the men went through remains a secret.

This gives the keynote of the Alpha Alpha Sigma affair. The entire Lakeland house was darkened and made pretty and effective for just such an occasion as this by lighted pumpkins and peculiar lamps. The floral decorations were yellow chrysanthemums and laurel leaves. At the supper the ices were little pumpkins.

There were games and "stunts" and dancing. Miss Edna McGuire, in a Spanish gypsy dress, read fortunes in an extravagant manner. In the darkest of the rooms Alfred Korber recited two of Poe's weirdest stories, "The Pit and the Pendulum" and "The Black Cat." Two of the evening's ghosts were Leon Woodworth and Charles Wardell. The "frat's" "hostesses"—for the night were—Miss Marion McGuire, Miss Anne Verplanck, Miss Marguerite Beggs and Miss Annabel McCurrach. Among the others taking part were Miss Anna Given, Miss Helen Singleton, Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Case, Harold Pearson, Miss Theodore Steinbughler, Louis Singleton, Andrew Adams, George Hendrickson, Watson Moss, Frederick Crippen, Miss Louise Korber.

Miss Charlotte Traendley in cerise satin.

Miss Edna Vanderbilt in blue meteor crepe.

Miss Ruth Bosling in pink crepe de chine.

OLYMPIC CHANGES HANDS.

Old Hyde & Behman Playhouse Under New Management Again.

The famous old theater of Hyde & Behman changes hands again. This time it comes under the entire management of a well-known Coney Island man, Herman Wacke of Surf avenue and also of the Bowery.

The deal whereby Mr. Wacke takes hold of the Olympic, on Adams street, was consummated yesterday. It is his intention to improve conditions at the Olympic, making it a first class vaudeville house as well as a photo play house. It was understood that two other well-known men from Coney Island were also in the deal, but the lease that was filed yesterday, in the Register's office, states that Mr. Wacke is the sole proprietor and will add this to his many enterprises.

A delegation of Coney Islanders are to journey to the Olympic for a treat at Mr. Wacke's expense after the busy times of the election.

$2,500 FOR INJURED KNEE.

Miss Clara Fesler, residing at 370 Carlton avenue, was this morning awarded a verdict of $2,500 against the Brooklyn Union Elevated Railroad by a jury in the Supreme Court, before Justice Crane.

Jay S. Jones, representing Miss Fesler, claimed that on June 12, 1909, while at Culver Depot, Coney Island, where the elevated trains run into pockets, as she was stepping from the station platform to the platform of a car, Miss Fesler's foot was caught between both platforms and she received an injury to her right knee. She has suffered since the accident. Elliott, Jones & Fanning were attorneys for the plaintiff.

SAYS PASTOR RUSSELL IS "MORALLY UNFIT"

'HIS TEACHING BLASPHEMOUS.'

Pastor's Doctrine of the Atonement Said to Be Absolutely Contradicted by the Scriptures.

Pastor Russell's doctrine on the atonement and that of the Scriptures was compared and contrasted last evening at Bethany Church, Clermont and Myrtle avenues, by J. H. Burridge of Bristol, England, who delivered his third of the series of seven discourses dealing with the teaching of the Brooklyn preacher. Mr. Burridge took up the second great fallacy in Pastor Russell's beliefs and showed that the doctrine he preaches on the atonement of Christ is not only not founded upon Scripture, but is absolutely contradicted by it.

Reviewing the ground gone over in the last two lectures on the two previous evenings, the speaker said in part:

"In every sense the Brooklyn preacher has shown himself unworthy of the Gospel. Morally he is unfit for the Christian ministry, and we find that it is clearly set forth in Scripture that if the life of the preacher does not back up the preaching, the latter is unprofitable to the preacher. The conduct of Pastor Russell, which is public property, would make him amenable to Scriptural chastisement. The Church of England would have taken away his gown. Yet this is the great preacher who claims he has the most important message of the day. He is the man who really takes a position greater than any since the time of the Apostles. He tells us that the Scripture has been designedly concealed and that the time for its revelation has just arrived with the coming of Pastor Russell.

His Teaching Described as Blasphemous.

"We have seen his blasphemous teaching in regard to the divinity of Christ and how he takes passages of Scripture and applies them to his own imagination of Christ, perverting the meaning to one of his own with no basis in Scriptural interpretation of the present-day church. I ask you, in the face of such trifling with the word of Scripture, can we listen to a man treating one of the fundamentals of our belief in this way? He is determined to reduce the word of God in the minds of men and to ignore the character of God altogether. What we have seen shows that he ought to have no claim on the children of God, who ought to be warned against him."

Mr. Burridge then went on to show what the atonement of Scripture is, namely, that the death of Christ was the atonement, and that this work should be kept distinct from His life. In opposition to this, which is clearly based on Scripture, as the speaker explained, Pastor Russell teaches that the atonement of Christ began with his entrance into public life and lasted for three and a half years. This doctrine is entirely contradictory to that outlined in Scripture. In all this the speaker substantiated his claims by direct quotations from the writings of the Brooklyn preacher. In closing, Mr. Burridge said:

"You begin to see what license this man takes with the Scriptures and with words. I have never met, in the writings of any man, one who takes such license with words and so violates human language as this man has done. With his violations of language one could teach anything imaginable. He is most inconsistent and contradictory in his own statements, and this is what 'bamboozles' people so much."

HICKORY CLUB ORGANIZED.

Is a Social Body, but Will Take a Hand in Politics.

The first regular meeting of the newly organized Hickory Club, a social organization composed of young men in the Bedford section of the Seventeenth Assembly District, took place last evening at the clubhouse, 248 Lexington avenue. The election of officers was held and James Monahan was chosen to head the organization.

The Hickory Club has taken its name from the Old Hickory, which formerly occupied headquarters on Putnam avenue, near Bedford. The members of the new organization are young men. Although organized merely as a social club, the Hickorylites are following somewhat the ideals of their predecessors in proclaiming the principles of Democracy. A feature of the meeting was the adoption of a resolution by the members indorsing Charles H. Hemmerle and John J. Canavan, Democratic candidates for Assemblyman and Alderman respectively, and pledging their support to the entire Democratic county ticket.

MAYOR ON ADVERTISING.

Will Address Fiftieth Dinner of Advertising Men's League.

"What I Think of the Advertising I See" is to be Mayor Gaynor's topic at the dinner of the Advertising Men's League at the Aldine Club this evening.

The league is making a special effort to identify itself with the commercial progress of the city, and Mayor Gaynor's acceptance of the invitation to make an address before its members is regarded as evidence of his desire to encourage the public-spirited purposes of the organization.

Other speakers at the dinner will be E. D. Gibbs of Philadelphia and S. Roland Hall of Scranton. William H. Ingersoll will preside.

PASTOR RUSSELL SOUGHT TO SHOW WIFE WAS INSANE

Records in Separation Suit Tell How He Circulated Stories of Her Mental Weakness.

COURTS SCORED PREACHER.

Mrs. Russell Feared He Would Secure Her Incarceration in a Private Asylum.

(Special to The Eagle.)

Pittsburg, Pa., November 2—It appears from the official records of the separation suit brought by Mrs. Marie F. Russell against her husband, Pastor Russell, now of the Brooklyn Tabernacle, that he at one time endeavored to spread the idea that Mrs. Russell was insane. Her fear that he would have her incarcerated in a private asylum and get rid of her in that way is one of the things that induced her to appeal to the courts for protection.

Pastor Russell's conduct in this connection was scored by the courts, and the evidence concerning it was a strong argument for Mrs. Russell with the jury and later with the judges to whom the case was appealed.

According to the evidence brought out in the separation suit, Pastor Russell started in to spread the idea that his wife was insane at a secret meeting of his followers. Congressman Stephen G. Porter's summary of the evidence on that point as contained in the brief which he submitted when the case was appealed reads as follows:

Called Assembly of His Followers and Declared Wife Was Weakminded.

"That next evening (the evening following the humiliation of his wife in the presence of Rose Ball respondent (Pastor Russell) called an assembly of his followers to this city for a secret meeting at the so-called Tabernacle; and another similar meeting on Sabbath evening, the fifth instant. These meetings were attended by about sixty people, a number of whom were from a distance. The respondent confesses that at this meeting he stated that his wife was weakminded and under the spell of a Satanic hypnotic influence which proceeded from her sisters. This statement was nothing more or less than a genteel way of stating that his wife's mind was unbalanced; and notwithstanding the fact that Mrs. Russell was within the building at the time this meeting was held, she was locked out under the direction of the respondent.

"In addition to this statement which he made to this assembly, Mrs. Helen Brace testified, and it was not denied, that his wife was suffering from mental aberration. We find also in a letter to Mr. Brown (Exhibit No. 5), just three days after that meeting of September 5, 1897, a similar statement, as in this letter he tells Mr. Brown that his wife's mind is poisoned and that she is semi-hypnotized by her sister. 'Weak-minded,' 'mind poisoned,' under 'Satanic hypnotic influence' and 'mind unbalanced' were the expressions that he used to many people concerning his wife. The only charitable excuse he could find for her is that she was passing through a critical time of life, which was not true, but which, had it been true, would have made his conduct toward her only the more brutal. Bear in mind the fact that those people of the Russell organization knew Mrs. Russell through her writings and hearing these reports from the lips of her husband, of course would think that he was putting it in the mildest possible language owing to the fact that he was her husband and wanted to shield her, and would naturally conclude that she was insane.

Warned Wife's Relatives and Friends Not to Harbor Her.

"But this is not all, the very next day after that meeting of September 5, 1897, respondent sent insulting and threatening letters to libellant's (Mrs. Russell's) relatives and intimate friends, warning them under threats of legal proceedings and suits for damage, not to harbor libellant or have any communications whatever with her. He had already turned his whole congregation against her by the meeting of September 4 and 5, 1897, from which she was excluded, and now, September 6, 1897, is endeavoring to cut her off from the last natural ties, her own relatives and a few loyal friends, among them the respondent's own father and his wife, who was the sister of the libellant. The conduct of the respondent in proclaiming to the little world in which he and his wife lived, that his wife was mentally unbalanced was, as was well said by the court in its charge to the jury, a great indignity, in fact, it would be almost impossible to conceive of one which would be greater; and surely was such an indignity as when coupled with other matters heretofore referred to, as 'to render the condition of any woman of ordinary sensibility and delicacy of feeling intolerable and her life a burden.'

Superior Court Scores Acts of Pastor Russell.

That the Superior Court of Pennsylvania agreed with Congressman Porter's characterization of Pastor Russell in this respect is evident from the text of its decision in the Russell case. The decision, which was written by Judge Orlady, reads, in part:

"The indignities offered to her in treating her as a menial in the presence of servants, intimating that she was of unsound mind and that she was under the influence of wicked and designing persons, fully warranted her withdrawal from his house, and fully justified her fear that he intended to further humiliate her, by a threat to resort to legal proceedings to test her sanity. There is not a syllable in the testimony to justify his repeated aspersions on her character and her mental condition, nor does he intimate in any way that there was any difference between them other than that she did not agree with him in his views of life and methods of conducting their business. He says himself that she is a woman of high intellectual qualities and perfect moral character."

Evangelist Burrell Renews Attacks on Pastor's Teachings.

Evangelist J. H. Burridge of Bristol, England, renewed his attacks against the teachings and doctrines of Pastor Russell at the Bethany Church, Clermont and Myrtle avenues, last evening, when he delivered his fourth lecture in a series of seven, entitled "C. T. Russell's Teaching Examined." Mr. Burridge's subject, last night, was "Mr. Russell's Way of Salvation and Second Chance," and in his treatment of this he showed that on this point, as well as on all others, the beliefs of the Brooklyn preacher are contradictory to the teachings of Scripture, even though Pastor Russell endeavors to substantiate them by applications of passages in Scripture in a perverted meaning, which often attracts the unwary.

WILL PROTEST TO P. S. BOARD.

Bay Ridge and Fort Hamilton Opposed to New Telephone Rates.

At a regular meeting of the Bay Ridge and Fort Hamilton Citizens Association, held last night at New Utrecht Hall, in Bay Ridge avenue, a communication was read from Park Commissioner Kennedy in reference to the opening of Ninety-second street, stating that owing to the fact that the Sewer Department had failed to secure his sanction in running the sewers, he would take no action.

A letter was received from the Public Service Commission in reference to the Subway question assuring the association that its demands would receive due consideration.

One of the members moved that a protest be registered with that commission in regard to the new telephone rates which are to go into effect in December, stating that although Borough Park and Flatbush would receive reduced rates to Manhattan below 110th street, Bay Ridge instead of being benefitted by the new schedules, would have higher rates to Astoria and Long Island City.

Another member reported that about 750 children were on part time in Public School No. 127, Fort Hamilton avenue and Seventy-ninth street, although the total registration was but 700 two years ago. He stated that this condition was conducive to truancy, as the added freedom created temptation to remain on the streets during the entire day.

Ex-Judge Walter L. Durack gave an excellent discourse on the constitutional amendments to be voted upon at the coming election and explained each of them in detail. He expressed himself as favoring the increases in salaries, arguing that owing to the deplorable condition of modern politics, the candidate for office is compelled to pay out large sums in strictly legitimate expenses and unless he is very wealthy, he must labor under a great burden.

President William E. Cleary supplemented Judge Durack's remarks by recounting the history of the canals of New York State and the great good which they have done to the commerce of the State. He advised support of any amendment enacted to conserve the canals.

SIOUX FIGHTS WOODEN INDIAN.

Chicago, November 2—Joe Mesicana, a Sioux Indian who has been visiting the sights yesterday, believed that he had been insulted by a wooden Indian in front of a cigar store. He circled around the block and came upon his opponent from the rear, leaped on his back and began pummeling him. When the fight was stopped by a policeman, the wooden Indian and the Sioux were rolling on the sidewalk.

"You are unreasonable," declared the physician.

"Why so, doc?"

"You stuff yourself with twelve kinds of rich food, and then kick because you have to take two kinds of medicine."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

MANCHUS BURN HANKOW; MASSACRE POPULATION

Soldiers, Infuriated by Earlier Rebel Successes, Beyond Officers' Control.

PEACE PARLEYS ARRANGED.

Leader of Rebel Army Requested to Suspend Hostilities Pending Result of Negotiations.

Peking, November 2—The German Legation today received a wireless message from the vicinity of Hankow stating that the imperial forces are now burning the native city of Hankow, and confirming yesterday's report to the Chinese war board that the imperial troops massacred men, women and children during several days fighting.

It is evident that the Manchu soldiers are infuriated over earlier Chinese successes and that they have gotten out of hand of their officers.

Letters from a correspondent at Sin-Yang-Chow, written some days ago, declare that General Yin Tchang's troops were beyond control. They are described as insubordinate and as having looted the villages north of Hankow.

General Yin Tchang, who has been removed from his command at Hankow to become chief of the general staff, returned to Peking today.

It is believed that Yuan-Shi-Kai arrived at the imperialist headquarters at Siaokan too late to stop the massacres which had already been begun.

It is thought that the effect of the atrocities committed by the government soldiers will have a serious bearing on the situation. The blood of the Chinese is up, as is indicated by their desperate defense of Hankow, which has caused the greatest surprise among Europeans, who did not expect the Chinese on either side to fight seriously. The foreigners at Hankow probably will be able to protect their concessions, as they have ten or twelve gunboats at their disposal, though some loss of life among the foreigners may be expected.

Working for Peace.

The Government's plans for bringing about peace moved forward rapidly today, with the throne and the National Assembly working together. The throne ordered Yuan Shi Kai, the new Premier, to return immediately to Peking, and simultaneously the National Assembly in its official capacity telegraphed General Li Yuen Heng, requesting him to suspend hostilities pending the result of the endeavor to settle the differences of all parties.

From a semi-official source, it was learned that a subordinate of Yuan Shi Kai already has conferred with General Li Yuen Heng. The latter expressed pleasure at the recent developments in Peking and agreed to meet Yuan Shi Kai for a discussion of the situation.

Prince Ching, the old Premier, who is the only high Manchu official left in the Capital, has agreed to memorialize the throne with the following suggestions: First, that all laws opposed to constitutional methods be annulled immediately; second, that the election of members of Parliament be undertaken without delay; third, that the Provincial assemblies throughout the empire be granted coordinate authority with the Provincial administrative officials; fourth, that in order to avert an open rupture with the Manchu royalty a plan be drawn up to provide for the support of the Manchu bannermen and pensioners, and that the "banners"—the eight divisions of the imperial Manchu military—be disbanded; fifth, that the Manchu bannermen adopt Chinese surnames, and sixth, that a formal proclamation be issued announcing that military force will not be used against the revolutionaries.

The drafting of a constitution is likely to prove a matter of difficulty because of the difference of opinion regarding the type of government to be adopted. The National Assembly is practically agreed upon a constitution based upon that of Great Britain, but the Southern provinces, which must be conciliated, are still firm in their desire for a more republican form of union. This controversy is the main difficulty which Premier Yuan Shi Kai is expected to overcome.

Shanghai, November 2—A wireless message from Hankow today says that the revolutionists dynamited the arsenal at Han-Yang to prevent its seizure by the imperialists.

There is some evidence of renewed activity on the part of the insurgents on the lower Yang-tse-kiang. Well informed persons assert that the imperial edicts granting a constitutional government and other concessions have not reached the mass of rebels, being purposely withheld until their leaders are absolutely assured of the sincerity of the Manchu promises.

The Viceroy of Kiang-su at Nanking shows determination to support the government. The new troops have been disarmed and stationed outside the walls where their encampment is covered with the guns of the old Manchu troops. Five hundred old troops have been sent to reinforce the soldiers occupying the forts at Chin-Kiang.

The officials at Wu-hu and Anking also have asked that reinforcements of soldiers be sent to those cities.

The Cotton Yarn Guild adopted a resolution today authorizing the repudiation of forward contracts on the ground that the trade has been disordered by the revolution.

Tokio, November 2—Revolutionary activity at Sikdon is rumored following reports intimating the danger of an uprising in other parts of Manchuria. Some fear is expressed over the situation. Should the Chinese rebels ally themselves with the Mohammedan element the movement might spread rapidly through the three Eastern provinces.

Doubt is expressed here that Yuan-Shi-Kai will be able to perform the task undertaken. He has many inveterate enemies among the influential mandarins who could hardly become reconciled to a policy that assured Yuan a long tenure of office. It is also feared that the revolutionists will not be disposed to compromise in view of the weakness of the Manchu court now so clearly exposed.

HOT MEETING PROMISED.

Lynbrook Village Factions Accuse Each Other in Fight.

(Special to The Eagle.)

Lynbrook, L. I., November 2—A mass meeting will be held in Bates Hall Monday night, which is likely to bring out some startling facts in regard to alleged "dirty practices" in the control of village affairs.

Each of the rival factions is accusing the other in regard to the conditions.

The evening service will also be unusual musically. Mrs. Robert Wark will be the soprano soloist, the choir will sing an anthem and Miss Ada M. Fare will be heard in several violin solos.

VICTIM OF A JOKER.

Miss Dorothy Clement Not Engaged to Mr. Dean.

Somebody with a distorted sense of humor is responsible, according to Miss Dorothy Clement of 585 East Seventh street, Flatbush, for the printing of a fictitious announcement of her engagement. In the printed notice appearing in The Eagle of October 13 it was stated that she was engaged to Elmer Dean, and that the announcement of the engagement occurred at a reception held at her home on Columbus Day.

Miss Clement did give a party to a few of her closest friends on Columbus Day, and Mr. Dean, whom she has known only since last summer, when they met at Greenwood Lake, was one of those present. That they are now engaged, or ever were betrothed, however, Miss Clement denies, and she can explain the notice only as the prank of one of her friends. She thinks that, maybe, the double "hoo-doo" of Friday, the 13th, may have had something to do with it.

NO BEQUEST FOR SUSPECT.

Mrs. Vermilya Not Benefited by Will of Man Who Died Mysteriously.

Chicago, November 2—Mrs. Louise Vermilya, who is under police surveillance at her home, in connection with the death of Arthur Bissonette, in a statement last night denied that she was benefited by the death of the police officer.

Her statement in this connection is verified by the will of Bissonette, which was filed for probate yesterday and which leaves practically the entire estate, valued at $1,350, to Miss Lydia Rivard of Marshall, Minn., whom Bissonette was to have married soon.

One peculiar feature of the will was the signature of Mrs. Vermilya as a witness.

"I did not benefit by Arthur's death," said Mrs. Vermilya. "I got no insurance and if he left anything in his will to me it was without my knowledge.

"He had asked me to marry him, but I had put him off. I gave him several reasons why we should not marry. The difference in our ages was one; we also held different religious beliefs. There were several points that I brought to his notice, but he always insisted that should not make any difference and that he was willing to overlook any differences if I was.

"Although I did not think we should undertake such a step I promised to marry him. I could see that he was very fond of me."

In telling of Bissonette's reported engagement to Miss Rivard, Mrs. Vermilya said: "I think he used to go with her years ago, but he told me that was all over. He told me once that she had done a great favor for him and that some time he intended to repay it. That is probably the way he took to do it."

Regarding her husbands, Mrs. Vermilya said: "My first husband died from acute alcoholism. Charles Vermilya, my second husband, died from gastritis, but there was no suspicion of anything wrong in connection with his death. Samples of his blood were tested at my request and it was found that gastritis caused his death. I never had a step-daughter named Lillian."

WILL REPRESENT PAPERS.

Unique Garbing to Be a Feature of Baptist Temple Fair.

What promises to prove a very interesting carnival is to take place at the Baptist Temple on Monday night, November 6, under the auspices of the social committee of the Baptist Temple. One of the objects of the carnival will be the competition for the best costume or decorated float representing the title of one of the daily newspapers in Brooklyn and Manhattan; handsome trophy to be awarded to the successful contestant.

The newspapers are to furnish the judges and upon them will depend the awarding of the prize to the person most uniquely dressed. The Brooklyn Daily Eagle is to receive representation in the contest and an elaborate costume is now in course of construction, whereon an Eagle's hand will be cleverly duplicated; wings outstretched attached to the costume will make it one of the most conspicuous in the competition. Every paper in the city will be represented.

GIANT SCOTTISH SAILOR RAN AMUCK ON FREIGHTER

Full of American Spirits, He Terrorized Crew of the St. Stephen.

THEN TACKLED 3 BLUECOATS.

They Finally Captured Him, With Aid of Dock Watchman, After Fierce Struggle—Sent to Jail.

Donald McLean of Scotland, weighing 200 pounds, and standing nearly 7 feet in his stocking feet (although he was, of course, fully shod this morning), was a pacific and a benign giant as he appeared before Magistrate Geismar in the Manhattan avenue police court today.

It appeared that Donald is a sailor on the British freight steamer St. Stephens, which arrived here from the West Indies on Tuesday and was berthed yesterday at the South Fourth street dock of the American Sugar Refining Company, to discharge her cargo of raw sugar. The sailors were given shore leave in the afternoon. McLean made a tour of the local saloons, and was much impressed with the quality of the whisky which he declared "was as good as that of Bonnie Scotland."

Late in the afternoon McLean returned to the ship. He was in an ugly frame of mind. He is master-at-arms on the ship and is a beautiful specimen of the physical man. His prowess as a fighter is well known among the members of the crew, and when he started to fight most of them fled to their quarters. McLean bested a group of fourteen seamen who had the courage to oppose him in concerted attack. With a belaying pin he drove them before him into the mess room. For three hours he stood on guard and would allow no one to enter or leave.

The captain, as a last resource, went ashore and communicated with the Bedford avenue police station.

"No three of the men in your mighty kingdom can take him in," he told Lieutenant Kelly, excitedly. But the lieutenant thought that could hardly be possible, and Patrolmen Patrick O'Donnell, John Freestone and Theodore Shedlekor were sent down. When they found that the man was aboard a vessel flying the British flag they hesitated and debated whether or not they had any right to intrude. While they were discussing it the fear-stricken sailors pleaded with them through the port holes to help them.

O'Donnell explained to the captain that if they could get the man ashore they would lock him up, but they dared not attempt to take him into custody while he was virtually in the dominion of the United Kingdom.

Finally O'Donnell decided to go aboard and attempt to quiet McLean. He mounted the rope ladder, with the other bluecoats following. As he was about to set foot on the deck, McLean sprang at him and he stepped nimbly aside just in time to miss a vicious blow which was launched at him with a belaying pin. He then seized the sailor around the neck. McLean recovered himself and grappled with O'Donnell. The pair toppled over the guardrail and O'Donnell was plunged to the dock nearly ten feet below, narrowly escaping a plunge in the river. He landed on a pile of sugar bags and was unhurt.

The imprisoned sailors rushed from the messroom. By a union of effort they seized the giant, and, lifting him off his feet, before he could recover himself threw him off to the dock. The bluecoats fell upon him and, assisted by a score of night watchmen from the refinery, they engaged in a desperate struggle. At the finish McLean was so badly done up that he needed the attention of an ambulance surgeon.

When he was arraigned before Magistrate Geismar, in the Manhattan avenue police court, today, he said he had no recollection of the exploit and was sentenced to five days in jail.

PASTOR RUSSELL SCORED BY THE REV. R. H. CLIFFORD

Bethany Reformed Church Preacher Has Written Pamphlet in Answer to Attacks.

DOCUMENT IS VERY SEVERE.

Author Accuses Pastor Russell of Being an "Egotistical Would-Be Theologian."

Ever since the Rev. Philip H. Clifford of the Bethany Reformed Church on Carlton avenue, near Myrtle, announced this week's series of lectures by Evangelist J. H. Burridge on Russellism he has been attacked by word of mouth as well as in signed and anonymous letters.

As a result of these attacks, which he believes to have been engineered from the vicinity of Russell headquarters, 13-17 Hicks street, the Rev. Mr. Clifford has written a scathing estimate of Russell and his teachings, which he will publish in pamphlet form. Some of those who wrote to the minister of Bethany Reformed Church accused him of cowardice in getting Evangelist Burridge to do something he did not dare to do himself.

The Clifford statement is a strong answer to these charges. The Brooklyn preacher alludes to Pastor Russell as an egotistical, self-centered, know-it-all, would-be philosophical theologian; points out the apparent deception involved in calling the Bethel Mission by the name of "Brooklyn Tabernacle," which makes outsiders believe that Russell is the successor of Dr. Talmage, and bitterly denounces Russell's misconstruction of the Scriptures.

Several times during the past Mr. Clifford has announced from the pulpit of his church that it was he who was asked to receive Evangelist Burridge in his church to deliver the Russell lectures. He also announced that consent was only given after consultation with the consistory. Notwithstanding these announcements letters making personal attacks upon Mr. Clifford have continued to come in and this decided him to make a public answer.

Text of the Rev. Mr. Clifford's Pamphlet.

The title of the pamphlet is: "The Rev. P. H. Clifford of Bethany Reformed Church Arraigns Pastor Russell and His Falseness in Interpreting God's Word."

The text is as follows:

"'Why have you given your church and pulpit to be used for the purpose of examining Pastor Russell's teachings?' This question has been put to me by many during the past week. A few have been presumptuous enough to suggest that I had J. H. Burridge of Bristol, England, because of my own inability to meet Mr. Russell. My own members know better, and will testify that in the past ten months I have preached a number of sermons on prophetic themes and warned my hearers against Mr. Russell, who, according to his writings and the published records of his life, is a wolf in sheep's clothing.

"Any man who, like Mr. Russell, seeks to impress the general public with his orthodoxy and spirit of devotion to God's written word and at the same time subtlely subverts it to further his own ends is one of the most dangerous of false teachers, who makes prey of the general ignorance of Scriptural teaching.

"This Mr. Russell poses as a champion of the Bible and declares that all Godly and noble men from the days of Christ to the present time have not understood God's Word and therefore have not been able to teach its truths, but he, Mr. Russell, declares himself to be especially raised up to set the Church and the world right. A man making such claims ought to at least have a clean slate of credentials, and be free from inconsistent and studied subtle paragraphs in his writings. If ever the devil used the leaven of false teaching in a dishonest way he never surpassed the way he is doing it through Mr. Russell.

Refers to Russell as a Would-Be Theologian.

"Mr. Russell's position is that of an egotistical, self-centered, know-it-all, would-be philosophical theologian. According to his own statements in his books, in the world of theology he is 'It.' His credentials are public property and according to trusted records he is questionable in his relations with women, he is separated from his wife in whose favor the courts gave their decisions, and whom the judges pronounced an intelligent and sensitive Christian woman.

"Mr. Russell advertises that he has the Brooklyn Tabernacle which deceives the people in England and outside of Brooklyn into thinking that he is pastor to Dr. DeWitt Talmage's old pulpit. The Brooklyn building in which he and his followers meet is a small mission building formerly called the Bethel Mission.

"Again, Mr. Russell advertises that he has the London Tabernacle, which makes the general public think he is preaching in the old pulpit of the great and sainted C. H. Spurgeon. The Rev. Dr. A. C. Dixon is at present pastor at Spurgeon's church, the London Tabernacle. This artful deception in advertising he may claim is unintentional and one might believe him, but he practices the same kind of deception in his books and for that reason I judge him in the matter.

"Russell's reported credentials are such that no orthodox body could accept him as a member, and to sanction him as a public teacher and preacher would be impossible.

"I did not invite Mr. J. H. Burridge to Bethany Reformed Church. Others sought me out and requested me to obtain the use of the church for these lectures. I gladly welcomed my worthy brother and the friends of the sainted George Mueller of Bristol, England. My consistory, too, welcomed him, and now that we have heard him we are doubly glad. At first we hesitated to let the church be so used, because we did not care to help advertise Mr. Russell, but consideration convinced us that we could not advertise him more than he already is, and; feeling it was high time to have some church publicly examine Mr. Russell's teachings, and try to help some of the many of those whom he deceives, we threw open the doors of Old Bethany Reformed Church.

His Teachings Referred To as a Mixture of "Isms."

"Mr. Russell's teachings are a mixture of half a dozen or more isms of the centuries, but so put as to deceive some of the best men and women. While professing to believe in our Lord Jesus Christ, he, Mr. Russell, denies Christ's deity. If the first chapter of the Gospel's account of John does not teach the deity of our Lord Jesus Christ then the doctrines cannot be taught in human language. Mr. Russell claims to accept Scripture. * * * Either Mr. Russell must honestly accept Christ not as a spirit, being made flesh, which he teaches, but as God manifest in the flesh, as Scripture teaches, or else be honest enough to declare the Biblical teaching wrong.

"No, he will not do the latter; that would open the eyes of the general public, so he, in devilish deception states that he accepts all Scripture and hypocritically subverts it to his own ends. * * *

"Death, according to Mr. Russell, is extinction or annihilation. If all this is not the most foolish and dangerous teaching and unsurpassed blasphemy, then I have yet to learn it. Nothing in the history of Christianity is more blasphemous than Russellism.

"Mr. Russell's system reminds me of a very fine cake, which is made of all that is good and best, but in which there is enough poison to kill anyone partaking even of a few crumbs of it. He, while representing himself to champion the Bible and its inspiration, in the most artful manner, subverts it to support his most damnable heresy.

"His position is egotistical.

"His credentials are stained and most questionable.

"His manner and method of interpretations of the Scriptures is subtle and denies the fundamental teachings of Scripture.

"Follow Russell and you will rue it. Read John iv:1-6."

Pastor Russell Prophecy and Date System Analyzed.

Evangelist J. H. Burridge of Bristol, England, who has been conducting a series of lectures at the Bethany Reformed Church, Clermont and Myrtle avenues, during the past week on the subject, "C. T. Russell's Teaching Examined," took up last evening the topic, "Mr. Russell's Prophecy and Date System," in the sixth lecture of the course. He impressed upon his hearers the importance of the Scriptural doctrine regarding the prophecies and their fulfillment and explained just what this doctrine is before he touched upon Pastor Russell's theory. The prophecies in Scripture he believed to have an undoubted connection with the people of Israel instead of with the people of today and with this time, as the Brooklyn preacher claims.

After reading various passages from Scripture which tell of the distinctive happenings that will accompany the coming of the Lord, Mr. Burridge showed that these events bear no resemblance to events of the present day. While Pastor Russell believes the coming of the Lord is at hand, and that these happenings, as told in Scripture, are present day occurrences, the speaker said such claims are absolutely false.

"Oquaga Lake Set" Give an Innovation.

What is known as the "Oquaga Lake Set, young Brooklynites who meet at Oquaga Lake each summer and during the winter get together occasionally in this borough, had an innovation last night that proved a complete success. Instead of meeting in town for a dance as usual, they all journeyed to the Brighton Beach Casino, and there had a dinner and a dance. Mrs. Ida G. Page, Mrs. Sarah E. Laron and Mrs. G. E. Stellner chaperoned the party.

The dinner was in green, and the dance orders were of that color. Professional singers amused the company between courses. A feature of the evening was that nearly every girl present wore one of the little theater caps of lace and gold. Among those taking part were:

Miss Amy Bade, in blue net over blue satin.

Miss Virginia Sayles, in American Beauty chiffon.

Miss Kathleen Lauder, in pink chiffon over pink satin.

Miss Edna Schelling, in white lace over pink.

Miss Rose Helmle, in rose chiffon.

Miss Gertrude Page, in pink chiffon over pink satin.

Miss Victoria Carter, in American Beauty chiffon.

Miss Florence Isaacs, in pale yellow trimmed with beaver.

Miss Daisy Laron, in black lace.

OUTLOOK IN NINTH A. D.

The political outlook in the Ninth Assembly District augurs success for the Republican candidates, the leaders there say. There is declared to be very little doubt as to the outcome of the election, and the local candidates are the only ones on the Democratic side who are expected to put up a good fight.

Alderman John J. Meagher, who has served two years, is running for re-election and has quite a large following, but has been criticised to some extent by the people of Borough Park for his alleged neglect of that district. Assemblyman Edmund O'Connor also is popular, and has likewise served two years.

These men depend on the splitting of the ticket by many of the voters, and believe they will win. James L. Fream, the Republican candidate for Alderman, is putting up a determined fight, while Albert H. T. Banzhaf, the nominee for the Assembly, is very popular in Bay Ridge and Fort Hamilton.

REP. CALDER TO OPEN FAIR

A fair under the auspices of the Prospect Avenue Methodist Episcopal Church will begin Wednesday and last until Saturday. Representative Calder is to make the opening address. The Sunday school rooms will be the scene of the fair and the booths will be decorated to represent an apple orchard in blossom. There will be many usual and unusual departments. The tearoom will be in charge of Mrs. Thomas Griffin, the candy booth in charge of Mrs. C. A. Maddock and the girls of Mrs. Schuhman's class. The home-made food counter will be conducted by Mrs. Dailey and Mrs. Heaton.

The grocery store will be run by the men of the choir, while the women will have the fancy booth. The domestic goods will be in charge of the Ladies Aid Society, and the flower stand will be looked after by William Hegarty. The toilet articles will be in charge of Miss Anna Hallock. The tulip flower bed, an interesting innovation, will be under the supervision of Miss Seaman. The hardware booth will be directed by the Sunday school. The orange booth, another new idea, will be conducted by Mrs. Styles. Coney Island and its many sideshows will be under the supervision of the Sunday school secretary, Robert Anderson. On Saturday afternoon there will be a special entertainment for the children and each one will be given an ice cream cone free. There will be no guessing or voting contests and no chances.

The general fair committee is composed of Mrs. William C. Bronson, chairman; Mrs. Thomas Griffin, Mrs. C. A. Maddock, Miss I. B. Seaman, Miss Anna Hallock, William Hegarty and William C. Bronson. The proceeds of the fair will be devoted to the $3,000 organ fund the church is raising.

REPUBLICANS CONFIDENT.

Expect to Make Clean Sweep in the Seventh A. D.

The Republicans of the Seventh Assembly District are confident of success in the coming election. They expect to make a clean sweep of the district and it is predicted that Charles F. Vachris, who is on both the Republican and Independence League tickets, will win by a large majority, while Michael J. Smith, who is running on the Republican ticket, is supposed to be equally sure of election.

Charles S. Devoy, the nominee for County Clerk, is expected to poll a large majority in this district, as he has lived in that section for many years and has a large constituency.

The sentiment against Clarke is strong, and the Republican judges are certain to receive an overwhelming vote, the leaders say.

ITS 32D ANNIVERSARY.

The Bowery Mission will celebrate its thirty-second anniversary on Wednesday, November 8. Miss Fanny Crosby, the gifted poetess, will be present. Miss Crosby was one of the first workers in the Mission, and in former years attended its annual meetings regularly, generally contributing an appropriate poem. It was after one of the nightly meetings of the Mission that she wrote her famous hymn "Rescue the Perishing." The Mission and the workers of the Mission, are looking forward with great interest to her visit. Reports of the work which will be submitted are of the most interesting character.

WATCH NEW BALLOT LAW, SAY KETCHAM'S FRIENDS

A Vote for Kelby Will Be a Vote Against the Surrogate.

THINK CONDITIONS CHANGED.

Only Sure Way Is to Place "X" in Front of Each Judicial Choice.

There is more uncertainty this year in the minds of voters as to the method to use to split a ballot than has been apparent for many years. Inquiries have been general throughout the borough, the judiciary situation having bothered many would-be voters of split tickets.

The reason for this state of affairs is the recently enacted Levy law on the election rules, as amended in Chapter 649 of the Laws of 1911, Section 365. The voter who wishes to split his ticket this year is confronted by entirely different rules than obtained last year. Heretofore, for instance, if there were three judges to be elected, a cross in front of one man's name had an entirely different effect than it has now.

The uncertainty as to how to vote for the various judiciary candidates has been brought about by questions that have been propounded by friends of Surrogate Ketcham, who believe that many who vote against Willett will select Kelby at the head of the Republican column, and directly opposite Ketcham in the Democratic column, thereby voting unfairly against Ketcham. There are men who wish to vote for Ketcham and Kelby, whose names appear on the same line under the Democratic and Republican columns. These men, whether voting under the Star or the Eagle for the rest of the entire ticket, are nonplussed as to just how to mark their ballot, and the general provision of the Levy law are unknown to most of them.

Individual Cross Means a Direct Vote Against the Other Man.

Heretofore, if a man wished to vote for one man of a judiciary ticket outside of his regular party, he marked a cross in front of the candidate's name and a cross at the head of the column. The only judge to be counted for then was the one for whom the cross had been inserted and the rest of the candidates received no vote at all, the contention being that it was not fair to single out any one of the opposing trio. Thus a ticket holding three judgeship nominations, marked with a cross in the Democratic column, and supplemented by a cross in front of one of the Republican nominees for the judiciary, only meant a vote for that one Republican judge and cut out all of the rest of the judiciary nominees. Under the new law such is not the case, but the individual cross means a direct vote against the other man on the same line. Thus, in this year's column, if a Republican wished to vote for Judge Ketcham and also for Charles H. Kelby, he would have to mark each separately with a cross, irrespective of his party cross at the head of the column. He would then have to further mark a third cross for one of the other candidates in either column, or his ballot would be good for only two judiciary votes, irrespective of how he had marked the top of the column. For example, should a voter care to cast a ballot for the Democratic ticket, for Charles H. Kelby in the Republican column, and against William Willett, jr., he would put a cross under the star and then mark individual crosses for Kelby, Ketcham and Callahan.

Colonel Bell Explains How to Split the Ballot.

Colonel James D. Bell, when asked about the matter in the Corporation Counsel's office this afternoon said:

"Yes, there has been much discussion about how to split your judiciary ballot this year. The law is new and not generally understood and every voter should make himself acquainted with its provisions. Heretofore a cross in front of a candidate's name did not single his opponent out for a loss of vote where there were more than two candidates for office. Now, however, if a man marks a cross for a candidate, it does single his opponent out and loses him a vote. To that extent the Levy law has changed matters. If a man votes for Kelby this year he votes against Ketcham, for instance, and if he has marked his cross at the head of the Democratic column he would then be voting for Kelby, Callahan and Willett on the judiciary situation. The safest way to mark a ballot now is to place individual crosses for the three Judges irrespective of the placing of your party cross. That may result in what is termed surplusage, but in no way invalidates a ballot. Many people believe surplusage spoils a ballot, but that is an erroneous idea, for a man may mark the top of the column and then mark each candidate individually. It is further an erroneous idea to suppose that one cannot mark two men on the same line when there are more than two candidates such as in the judiciary case this year. Anyone can vote Ketcham and Kelby whose names are alongside of each other. In order to vote for a third man, however, he must then mark a cross for his third candidate irrespective of his party column. A friend of Judge Ketcham's asked me the same question only a few minutes ago. He is a Republican and wants to vote for the Surrogate and Kelby. I told him to mark his ballot at the top of the Republican column and to put crosses in front of both Ketcham's and Kelby's names and another in front of his third choice, Callahan, Benedict or whoever is his man. The main thing to remember is that the new law takes a vote from the man whose opponent has been marked with a cross. The Levy law contends that the intent of the voter in that case is to vote against this candidate. Heretofore such a mark has not been so interpreted, but acted against all of the candidates in the same column."

KETCHAM AND McCOOEY.

Thomas P. Peters Considers Them Both in Campaign Speech.

At Decorior Hall, on Gates avenue, last night, Thomas P. Peters addressed a large gathering of Republicans on the issues of the campaign. He paid particular attention to Surrogate Ketcham, Democratic candidate for justice of the Supreme Court, and the appointment of Leader McCooey as the Surrogate Clerk. He said in part:

"Let us examine closely the action he took when he made Mr. McCooey his chief clerk and fixed his salary at $9,000 per year.

"Last spring an effort was made to have the Board of Estimate recommend a higher salary for Mr. Ketcham's clerk. The Board of Estimate refused the request. The Democratic organization in Kings County then prepared a bill which passed and became known as 'Chapter 688 of the Laws of 1911.' This chapter did violence to every provision of the City Charter and of the Civil Code, which have just been quoted. In the first place, it took out of the hands of the Board of Estimate the right to recommend the clerk's salary.

"Under the law the new clerk was to be given a fixed term of office. In the present case, had Surrogate Ketcham succeeded in being elected to the Supreme Court, Mr. McCooey would have continued to hold his office for four and one-half years, regardless of how little confidence the new Surrogate might have felt for him.

"Surrogate Ketcham's faults lie in the fact that he was willing to see this law enacted without, so far as I know, uttering a word of protest. He was willing to give to the Democratic leader of this county, who is not a lawyer, this important position. He was willing to leave this Democratic leader (not a lawyer), as a heritage to his successor. He placed his salary at a figure within $1,000 of his own salary.

"The evil of Mr. Ketcham's act in giving Mr. McCooey his high salary is better seen when we read the last sentence of the bill, which says:

"'The compensation of the chief clerk shall not be decreased during his term of office.'

"Thus, for five years did Surrogate Ketcham rivet upon Kings County, John H. McCooey, at a salary of $9,000 per year."

CADMAN IN BEDFORD BRANCH.

The Sunday afternoon auditorium meeting for men will open tomorrow at 3 o'clock in the Bedford Branch Y. M. C. A., Bedford avenue and Monroe street. The address will be delivered by the Rev. S. Parkes Cadman, D.D. Dr. Cadman was compelled on account of his health, to cancel all of his Sunday afternoon Y. M. C. A. engagements for the season, this being the only exception he has made.

The men's meeting is really a conference and an unusual feature is the answering of questions by Dr. Cadman. The subject announced for tomorrow afternoon is "Brooklyn's Greatest Need."

A special musical programme will be rendered by Victor's Royal Venetian Band, Calefaty Victor, conductor. Donald Chalmers will be the vocal soloist and will direct the singing of the audience. All men are welcome.

HOPE TO RAISE $5,000.

Annual Fair of Holy Innocents Parish Is Under Way.

There was a large attendance last evening at the opening of the annual fair at Holy Innocents Parish House, corner Cortelyou road and East Seventeenth street. The Dramatic Society and the Ladies Aid Society combined forces in the interest of the fair, which will continue until November 11.

Several booths have been erected, the one of the Dramatic Society in pink and that of the Ladies Aid Society represented in yellow and white. The refreshment room also is arranged in yellow and white. The Rev. Father Costello, pastor of the church, made the opening address last evening and felt assured by the numbers present that the $5,000 expected to be raised toward the building fund was certain to be realized.

The special event of today will be the presence of the children. Special entertainment features have been provided, principal among which will be a Chinese laundry, designed to take the place of the old-time grab-bag. There will also be the old-woman who lived in her shoe and other attractive personalities.

"PASTOR" RUSSELL A CLEVER FINANCIER

Duped Prominent Pittsburg Clergymen Into Supporting Cemetery Scheme.

HIS "DUMMY" TRANSACTIONS.

Ministers Didn't Know They Were "Boosting" Deal of Man They Opposed.

(Special to The Eagle.)

Pittsburg, November 4—That "Pastor" Russell succeeded in getting the four leading clergymen of Pittsburg, including the Episcopal bishop of this diocese and the Rev. S. Edward Young, now pastor of the Bedford Presbyterian Church of Brooklyn, to lend their names and influence to further the financial prosperity of a cemetery which he controls, is shown by some hitherto unpublished records on file in this city.

The story of this cemetery deal involves a variety of dummy transactions that would do credit to a Wall Street banking expert.

So cleverly did Russell manipulate the deal that the Rev. Cortland Whitehead, the venerable Episcopal bishop of this diocese; the late Rev. Dr. B. F. Woodburn, for forty years a leader of the Baptist clergy here; the Rev. S. Edward Young, the leading clergyman of the Presbytorian Church, and the Rev. J. W. Witherspoon, the leading minister of the United Presbyterian Church, which is probably the most powerful church organization of this city, all of whom were bitterly opposed to Russell's teaching and methods, accepted the position of trustees on the Russell cemetery board before they found out that they had been duped.

The "Pastor" Sees a Good Chance for a Cemetery.

"Pastor" Russell, who has always been counted as a good judge of Pittsburg real estate, a few years ago discovered a plot of ground lying along the old Ruysville road, which is a continuation of Federal street just beyond the city limits, that appealed to him as admirably adapted for cemetery purposes. He figured that there was a good opening for a cemetery in Pittsburg and was looking for a suitable plot of ground to get one started.

The property was purchased for $27,000 by Brother W. E. Van Ambergh, who was a railroad man in the South before he became a Russell Pilgrim and assumed the important duties of treasurer of the Peoples Pulpit Association, which is one of the big Russell corporations. Van Ambergh is now one of the big financial men in the Brooklyn headquarters.

Van Ambergh was pretty well-known in Pittsburg as a Russell satellite, so it was not deemed advisable for him to hold title to the property. Moreover, Van Ambergh is one of those who are supposed to be serving the "Cause" for $10 a month and expenses, and it might have occasioned surprise to find him the possessor of a $27,000 piece of property. At any rate Van Ambergh, very shortly after acquiring the property, sold it for $30,000 to the United States Investment Company.

Courts Declared Transfers of Russell to Be Frauds.

This investment company is a dummy corporation to which "Pastor" Russell transferred a lot of oil stocks, mining stocks and other property at about the time his wife was trying to collect the alimony awarded to her by the courts. Some of transfers which "Pastor" Russell made at this time, were made, the courts declared "in fraud upon his wife." Although it at one time held property worth more than $50,000, this company is capitalized for only $1,000. Of this total "Pastor" Russell holds $980, Brother Bohnet, of Miracle Wheat fame, holds $8 and Brother Ernest C. Henningea (who married Rose Ball and departed with her for Australia shortly before Mrs. Russell's suit for separation came to trial, owns the remaining $5.

It is from the United States Investment Company that the Rosemount, Mount Hope and Evergreen United Cemeteries bought the land, which thus lost all direct association with "Pastor" Russell's name. Through some of his friends and followers "Pastor" Russell had persuaded the four eminent Pittsburg divines to lend their names to the cemetery project. In some way not clearly explained this cemetery was supposed to benefit poor people. On April 18 1905, the Rosemount, Mount Hope and Evergreen United Cemeteries was incorporated under the laws of Pennsylvania by the following: John G. F. Kuehn, John G. Messner, J. H. Giesey, C. J. Woodworth and J. Adam Bohnet, all Russellites.

The original board of trustees included John G. F. Kuehn, John G. Messner, J. H. Giesey, C. J. Woodworth, C. T. Russell, W. W. Giffen, H. A. Guepner, William M. Wright, Francis Winton and the four Pittsburg clergymen to whom reference has been made—Bishop Cortland Whitehead, the Rev. S. Edward Young, Dr. B. F. Woodburn and the Rev. J. W. Witherspoon.

So far as can be learned, the four reverend men did not attend any of the meetings of the board of trustees, which were held at the Russell headquarters, in the Bible House, on Arch street, Allegheny. If they had, they might have learned that, by virtue of a secret agreement, duly filed in the proper recording office in Pittsburg, although its text is known only to the real insiders, the United States Investment Company retains an important measure of control over the property it sold to the Cemeteries Corporation. The agreement carefully prescribes what the Cemeteries Corporation may do with the property, and forbids its sale without the consent of the United States Investment Company.

"Treasurer and President" Was Only a Figurehead.

J. G. Messner, an insurance agent, with an office at 324 Fourth avenue, who was president of the board of trustees, says that he himself knew precious little about the business.

"Russell told me to act as treasurer and president of the board of trustees," he said to an Eagle representative who questioned him about his connection with the cemetery deal.

"The business was all done somewhere else. Then one day Russell telephoned to me: 'Messner,' he said, 'I know you're a busy man. I've got a girl in the office here who can handle the money for the Cemeteries. Just send me a check for what money you have on hand, and I'll take care of the business from now on.' I sent him a check for several hundred dollars, which, for some reason, he kept on hand and didn't cash. I only learned of this later, when I got notice that the bank in which the money was deposited had failed."

Messner was asked what had become of the property.

"I believe it is being run by some of Russell's local representatives," he answered. "I understand they are selling a good many lots and doing quite a business. It has a beautiful location and probably was a good investment."

It was this cemetery deal which helped to open Messner's eyes to Russell's operations, and he severed his connection with the Russellites soon after it was put through.

Pastor Had No Idea Russell Was Connected With Scheme.

The Rev. S. Edward Young, pastor of the Bedford Presbyterian Church of this city, when shown the above dispatch at his home at 1035 Prospect place, wrote out the following statement:

"I recall that several years ago—probably seven or eight years—I was asked to serve as trustee of a new cemetery which had some such name as the Rosemount, Mount Hope and Evergreen United Cemeteries; that Bishop Whitehead of the Protestant Episcopal Church diocese of Pittsburgh, Dr. Woodburn, pastor of the First Baptist Church, Allegheny, and other ministers and laymen well-known to me, were to be fellow trustees.

"Upon being persuaded in my own mind that the enterprise was hardly the sort of one I had been assured it would be, I served notice that my name should be dropped from the list of trustees. I never attended a meeting of the trustees or any meeting with anybody in connection with the matter, and really do not know what became of the enterprise, whether it took actual form and became operative or not. I put no money in it, had no stock in it, no promise of stock or other interest. The Eagle's dispatch is the first intimation I have had of Pastor Russell's relation to the properties."

PRAISE FOR MADERO.

Lecturer Before Brooklyn Institute Speaks of Problems of New Mexico.

In his Brooklyn Institute lecture on "Mexico in 1911," in music hall, Academy of Music, last evening, Frederic Monsen had much to say of Madero, whom he first met about twelve years ago. The lecturer found Madero a charming companion and an agreeable man, and said that he rules through kindness and love. The Madero family owns an immense, well-administered estate, on which is a large cattle range. Had the revolution not succeeded this estate would have been lost.

Mr. Monsen said that out of a population of 16,000,000, 12,000,000 are natives who are poor, ignorant and without schools, so that there was no hope of their improvement under the old regime. The meeting between President Taft and President Diaz was recalled and the tributes which the "Grand Old Man of Mexico" received. There were many pictures of the two men and of places connected with their political life.

Among the numerous illustrations was a series of interiors of cathedrals, bits of rarely beautiful scenery and portrait studies of Mexican girls and women, shown to an accompaniment of Mexican national music. This was played upon the organ by Willis Alling of Manhattan.

BOY SAT ON THIRD RAIL.

Passengers on Brooklyn Bridge Thought It Was a Miracle.

Crowds passing over the Brooklyn Bridge yesterday afternoon witnessed something little short of a miracle, when before their startled gaze they saw a small boy leap over the railing between the walk and the south track on the Manhattan side, near the trainshed, and land on the third rail of the elevated road track in a sitting posture. A moment later he had landed safely on his feet between the tracks, but minus the greater portion of his short trousers and badly burned.

Charles Moffit was the boy's name. He said he was 9 years old and that he lived at 85 Catherine street. He was walking across the bridge to Brooklyn, carrying a bundle, which he was swinging to and fro. As he was peering over the railing and still swinging the package it left his hand and flew over the railing, landing on the elevated tracks. Without hesitation the boy leaped over the railing and landed squarely on the third rail. Fortunately for him, his legs and hands were up in the air, and consequently no circuit was formed. Almost immediately he bounced off the rail and came down between the tracks squarely on his feet. He was removed by Bridge Policeman Schnitzler and attended by Dr. Orr of the Hudson Street Hospital.

CHRYSANTHEMUM IS QUEEN.

A Splendid Exhibition of Flowers Opens in Manhattan.

Crowds of people visited the National History Museum, in Manhattan, yesterday to look at the annual exhibition of the Horticultural Society of New York. Chrysanthemums made up the principal portion of the show, and were given the choicest places, but the specimens of roses and orchids shown were a very great credit to the society. Growers in Westchester County, New York, and in New Jersey were well represented, but there were several exhibitors from Long Island, including John T. and Herbert L. Pratt of Glen Cove, Percy Chubb of the same place, J. D. Cockroft, Northport; Charles Weber, Lynbrook, and Doubleday, Page & Co., Garden City. Mr. Weber exhibited the new carnation "Brooklyn."

Enormous chrysantnemum plants 10 feet in diameter, attracted much attention from everybody who entered the lower floor of the museum, where the exhibition was held. The plants had been trained so that they were symmetrical, and the flowers covered the plants, making a wonderful sight. There was one plant growing white flowers, another pink and another yellow. One of these enormous plants has 1,200 blooms, and another nearly 1,500. They were exhibited by Adolph Lewissohn, and were grown by his gardner, John Canning, at Ardsley, N. Y. Samuel Untermeyer of Yonkers is a very large exhibitor, and he, like Mr. Lewissohn, has captured a number of prizes. There is a magnificent spectacle in the rotunda of the museum made by the chrysanthemums, while in the wings are found the roses and orchids. Among the latter is found the new rose "Sunburst," which is shown by Charles H. Totty of Madison, N. J. There has not been an exhibition of flowers in Manhattan for many years where orchids came out stronger than they do in this one.

SAYS PASTOR MET GIRL ON DAY OF TRAGEDY

Police Claim New Witness Will Furnish Important Evidence at Trial.

WAS ACQUAINTED WITH BOTH.

Boston, November 4—A new witness against the Rev. Clarence V. T. Richeson, the indicted Cambridge minister charged with the murder of Avis Linnell, has been uncovered by the prosecution, and it is promised that his story will strengthen the stories of other witnesses.

The new figure in the case is Herbert Q. Collins of Whitman. Collins has been served with a subpena. That Collins saw the Rev. Mr. Richeson and Miss Linnell together, conversing in the South Station, on the Saturday afternoon the girl died, is the important feature of the story which Collins tells. With evidence of this character in hand the prosecution declares it will trace the minister's movements from Tuesday through to Saturday, Collins supplying the necessary additional facts to complete a chain of evidence showing that Mr. Richeson and Avis Linnell met by appointment shortly before the girl took poison.

Collins claims to have known both the girl and her companion well.

The pulpit of Immanuel Baptist Church of Cambridge, of which Mr. Richeson is still pastor, will be filled tomorrow morning by the Rev. W. J. Stewart, D. D., of Woburn, who will preach on the text "Man's Place in the Plan of God." In the evening he will speak upon "The Division of Jacob."

The uncertainty which has prevailed as to the personnel of the counsel for the defense of the Rev. Clarence V. T. Richeson, the Cambridge Baptist clergyman under arrest on a charge of murdering Avis Linnell, the Hyannis music pupil, was renewed today by announcement that John L. Lee, the Lynchburg, Va., lawyer, who left here yesterday after a stay of several days, had withdrawn from the case.

In addition, Congressman Robert O. Harris, who has been advisory counsel for Richeson and who verified the announcement regarding Attorney Lee, declared that he himself was "withdrawing from the case as fast as possible," compelled to do so on account of his Congressional duties. It was further affirmed that Richeson's leading counsel would be a Massachusetts lawyer, who has not yet been selected, however.

Mr. Richeson will not be arraigned in the Superior Court on Monday to plead to the indictment against him, as was expected, as Congressman Harris has asked District Attorney Pelletier to defer the arraignment for a few days and his request has been granted.

Putnam, Conn., November 4—It became known today that Miss Violet Edmands, fiancee of the Rev. C. M. Richeson, is in seclusion at Pomfret, together with her father, mother and a nurse. The Edmands arrived at Pomfret last Sunday evening in a big touring car and registered at a hotel there under the name of Smith. During the week they arranged to lease a cottage at Pomfret and today their identity was learned. Miss Edmands is said to be in a nervous state and is being attended by a physician.

HAD LONG WALK AT MIDNIGHT.

That Is Why Mr. Dempsey Complains of C. I. and B. Service.

Complaint regarding night service afforded the Hamilton ferry district by the Coney Island and Brooklyn Railroad, has been filed with the Public Service Commission by J. F. Dempsey of 139 West Ninth street.

In a letter to the Commission Mr. Dempsey states that one night last week, after attending a theater he boarded a Smith street car at Fulton street, and received a transfer to the Hamilton ferry line. At the depot at Smith and Ninth streets, he was informed at 12:15 o'clock in the morning, that the last car for the ferry had left the depot at 11:45, and that there would not be another one until early morning. Mr. Dempsey had to walk to his home. He thinks Hamilton ferry cars should be operated at intervals all night.

Mr. Dempsey complains also regarding the condition of street and sidewalk at Hamilton avenue and Ninth street, due, he says, to negligence of C. I. and B. employees. A month ago, Mr. Dempsey tells the Commission, the tracks were being repaired. When the employees quit the job they left behind a load of dirt and a lot of granite blocks. The rains have leveled the dirt but the granite blocks are still scattered around, some of them on the sidewalk.

Mr. Dempsey complains further to the Commission that no lavatory is provided by the company at the Smith street barns for passengers who transfer at that point.

RENO DIVORCE FOR STEINEKE.

(Special to The Eagle.)

Reno, Nev., November 4—"I tried my very best to get my wife to come back to our home and live with me, making several efforts. I even begged her to do so, but she persistently refused and would give me no just reason for her actions toward me. Finally I gave up in despair and have made no further efforts," declared Andrew C. Steineke, a carriage manufacturer of Brooklyn, during the trial yesterday of his action for divorce against his wife, Susie E. Steineke, whom he had married in New York in 1903.

The couple lived together for six years. His allegations in the complaint filed in the latter part of August were those of desertion, in 1909. To these the wife made answer upon being personally served in Brooklyn with a summons, denying that she had left him and refused further to be a wife to him. She denied that he had been a dutiful husband to her, but her attorneys tried not to press her denials at the hearing of the case and the court ordered a decree granted to the plaintiff.

The couple have no children. Steineke may decide to give up his Eastern interest and make his future home permantly in the State.

DEATH OF M. W. HUTCHINS MAY HASTEN BANK PROBE

Work of Investigating the Union Concern's Affairs Likely to Be Readjusted.

TO BE RESUMED ON THE 10TH.

Dead Chief Examiner Was a Leader Among Banking Dept. Clique Opposing Investigation.

It is expected that the death of Chief Bank Examiner Melburn W. Hutchins will have an important influence in hastening the conclusion of the Union Bank investigation which stands adjourned until November 10. The further examination of Hutchins was expected to be a principal feature of some of the future Union Bank hearings, and now there will probably be a radical readjustment in the programme of the investigation.

Hutchins had always been regarded as the mainstay of that clique in the Banking Department which has fought the Union Bank investigation from the beginning. He represented the Cheney and Williams administrations of the department, under which the Union Bank crowd was permitted to carry on its crooked work, and Hutchins has been loyal to his former chiefs. Ever since Hutchins testified at a Union Bank hearing as to his close personal relations with David A. Sullivan at the time when the latter was doing just about as he pleased with the funds of the bank, strong pressure has been brought to bear on Superintendent of Banks Van Tuyl to dispense with Hutchins's services.

Van Tuyl stuck to Hutchins, however, to his own disadvantage as many believe. The superintendent and the chief bank examiner had planned to leave together for New Orleans in a few days to attend the bankers convention. Superintendent Van Tuyl has leaned heavily on Hutchins ever since he has been at the head of the Banking Department. The late chief bank examiner's long experience in the department made him familiar with all the ins and outs of the work, and Superintendent Van Tuyl permitted him to run things at 60 Broadway, Manhattan, pretty much as he pleased.

It is an open secret that the Union Bank Grand Jury's recent presentment with regard to "certain high officials in the State Banking Department" was aimed primarily at Hutchins. Assemblyman Goldstein and Attorney James C. Cropsey were going after Hutchins hard when Superintendent Van Tuyl's action, in suddenly calling off the investigation, put an end to their activities for the time being. Neither Goldstein nor Cropsey will make any further effort to discredit Hutchins, and further references to him will be incidental.

One of the indirect results of the death of Chief Bank Examiner Hutchins may be the removal of Special Deputy Bank Superintendent Edward Lane Dodge from direct connection with the Union Bank investigation. Mr. Dodge is one of the ranking men of the department, and Superintendent Van Tuyl may decide to reward him for his successful work in directing the Union Bank examination by putting him in Hutchins' place.

The funeral of Mr. Hutchins will take place on Wednesday at Malone, N. Y.

PAYS TAX UNDER PROTEST.

Mr. Schlegel Considers Increase in Value of His Property Confiscatory.

Charles J. Schlegel of 11 St. James place, has taken occasion to write The Eagle expressing his views on what he calls "excessive taxation." Mr. Schlegel has sent a copy of the letter which he sent to the receiver of taxes at the time of paying his last assessment. In communicating with this paper the writer says that he is acting at the request of others, and that there are many who feel as he does. There has been much said apropos of the high rate of taxes and Mr. Schlegel's letter, which throws a new light on the subject, explains itself. It is as follows:

"Receiver of Taxes:

Dear sir—Inclosed please find check for $133.38 to pay 1911 taxes on my house, 11 St. James place. May I say respectfully to you and through you to the proper authorities that I pay this tax under protest.

"Why you increase the assessment on my house $1,100 over last year I do not know, for it is not worth one cent more than a year ago. The increased assessment is in unjust inflation, exorbitant and excessive and a close act of confiscation. Why a young man should struggle to get a home of his own and practice much self-denial to attain and hold it and then have the city levy such heavy taxes as to force him to sell it is an enigma to me.

"I see danger ahead unless we correct this by trimming down some of our municipal expenses, and unless we do this surely some of our respected families will leave city and State, and good citizenship will surely suffer thereby through the loss of removals of good families to out-of-town places. Yours truly,

"CHARLES J. SCHLEGEL.

EUCHRE AND RECEPTION.

St. Brendan's Church Parish to Have a New Schoolhouse.

A euchre and reception will be held on Friday evening, next, a Stauch's, Coney Island, the proceeds of which will be devoted to the construction of a school for the children of the parish of St. Brendan's Roman Catholic Church at Twelfth street and Avenue D, Flatbush. St. Brendan's bids fair to be one of the largest parishes in the diocese of Brooklyn within a few years. Under the Rev. T. A. Hickey, the rector, the parish has prospered and is now in an exceedingly flourishing condition.

Since Father Hickey took hold the organization of the parish has progressed and half a dozen societies, including a live and successful young men's lyceum are organized, working together in harmony and growing rapidly. The parish has now a well equipped chapel and a rectory but the need has been felt of a modern school which will take care of the future growth of the parish as well as fulfill its present requirements. Upon the success of next Friday's euchre much depends.

TO GIVE MINSTREL SHOW.

Visitation Parish Plans for Big Event on Thanksgiving Night.

Visitation Parish Hall is to be the scene of great hilarity on Thanksgiving night, when the Visitation Lyceum, connected with the Church of the Visitation of which the Rev. Father Gorman is the acting pastor, is to give a minstrel show. For several months the young people of the parish have been rehearsing for the event. The proceeds will be devoted toward the expenses of the hall.

Thomas Grogan, president of the Holy Name Society; Miss Elizabeth Callahan, president of the Sacred Heart Society and Miss Catherine Callahan are in charge of the committee of arrangements.

AN ADDRESS ON SOCIALISM.

The Flatbush Free Forum will open its winter course of lectures this evening in the large hall, Savoy building, 552 Flatbush avenue. The lecturer will be George H. Goebel. His subject will be "Socialism."

DIDN'T AUTHORIZE USE OF NAME

Editor The Brooklyn Daily Eagle:

In a recent article published in your paper, a candidate running for office, the territory of which includes the Thirty-first Ward, used the name of the Van Sicklen Taxpayers Association in saying that he was in league with said association to secure a 5-cent fare to Coney Island.

As secretary of the Van Sicklen Taxpayers Association, I beg to advise you that it is the sentiment of this organization that its name should not be, and was not, authorized to be used in any shape, manner or form by any candidate running for office of any description.

DAVID GROSS, Secretary.

OVATION FOR DE PACHMANN

The piano recital by Vladimir De Pachmann yesterday afternoon at Carnegie Hall was an exposition of pure piano playing. There was a stronger note in the famous pianist's work than usual. This was nowhere more emphasized than in his final encore, an improvisation by himself. A Chopin interpreter by reputation, it was proper that De Pachmann should play a large group of Chopin's composition. Eight Chopin numbers, including encores, were given by the soloist yesterday.

The programme began with Beethoven; Sonata, opus 53, with its divisions, "Allegro," "Introducione," and "Rondo." In the final division De Pachmann did his most sympathetic work. The Chopin Fantasie was interpreted in perfect accord with the meaning of the composer. The beautiful chant-like melody introduced in the later moments of the Fantasie, and the elaboration of tuneful themes, were all interpreted with clear and exquisite touch, in which sentiment, sweetness, and brilliancy were each regnant at contrasting moments. The two Preludes, 23 and 16, were impressively lovely, and the familiar Nocturne No. 2 was wooing in its tone and swing, rather than barbaric, which some pianists conclude is its proper atmosphere, judging from the way they play it. The C major Mazourka, and C sharp minor Scherzo, were marvels of tone and touch, and the audience showed its approval.

The four final numbers were Mendel's "Spring Song," Schomann's "Vogel als Prophet," Liszt's "Mazourka Brilliante" and Weber-Pachmann's "Perpetuum Mobile." The second number was finely expressive, and the glancing brilliancy of the last two was phenomenal. De Pachmann was brought back again and again upon the dimly-lighted stage, for he played in a twilight of his own ordering. The scene was an awe inspiring one, with the excited audience crowding to the front of the stage, cheering and waving programmes and handkerchiefs at the artist. He played for one encore, Godofsky's "Tambourin."

ARREST EX-CONGRESSMAN ON CHARGE OF SWINDLING

Harry Marcy Coudrey Accused of Using the Mails to Defraud.

INDICTED BY U. S. GRAND JURY

Generally Regarded as Millionaire, and Held Prominent Place in St. Louis.

Harry Marcy Coudrey, formerly Democratic Congressman from the Twelfth District of Missouri, was arrested on Park Row, Manhattan, yesterday by agents of the Department of Justice, on an indictment returned against him and eight other officials of the Continental Life Assurance Company and the International Fire Assurance Company, by the St. Louis Federal Grand Jury last Saturday, charging him with using the mails to defraud.

Coudrey had just finished dining with a friend at a restaurant on Park Row, in the same building as the Department of Justice. Agents Poulin and Pignuolo, who have been looking for Coudrey since last Monday, were just returning from a trip uptown, where they had been looking for Coudrey, when they bumped into him in front of the Park Row Building, in which the Department of Justice is located. He was known to Pignuolo and admitted his identity when questioned. Coudrey made no protest and said he was willing to go back to St. Louis at once, and left for that city shortly after his arrest.

Coudrey, until three weeks ago, was the president of the Continental Life Assurance Company and the International Fire Assurance Company of St. Louis. An investigation by the Government resulted in the indictment of Coudrey and eight other officials of the two companies, and the appointment of a receiver. Since the indictment Coudrey could not be found, but it is said he was in New York almost since the investigation started. It is said that he was in this city trying to promote a "get-rich-quick" scheme.

Harry Marcy Coudrey is one of the best known men in St. Louis. He is a member of a dozen clubs, and generally regarded as a millionaire. He was elected to Congress in 1906, but was not seated until the close of the first session because of an entanglement in the counting of votes. He was elected again in 1907 and also in 1909, finishing his third term last March. He was the author of the bill regulating the size of women's hatpins in the District of Columbia, and also introduced a bill which called for a fine of $50 for the owners of public clocks that did not keep correct time.

Among other things that is charged against Coudrey, according to the Department of Justice, is that while a member of Congress he promoted various business schemes, using the letterhead of the House of Representatives and other stationery of the Government. It is claimed by the Department that he used the Congressional Office Building as an office to carry on the businesses in which he was interested.

When the investigation began in St. Louis into Coudrey's connection with the Continental Life Assurance Co., it is also said by the Department, he was promoting a concern known as the Lincoln National Holding Company, which was to be capitalized at $15,000,000. Coudrey is 44 years old, and his family is highly regarded in St. Louis.

REV. MR. LAWSON RESIGNS.

Former Brooklyn Pastor to Quit Waterbury—Fought for Puritan Sunday.

(Special to The Eagle.)

Waterbury, Conn., November 4—The Rev. Albert G. Lawson of the First Baptist Church, formerly of Brooklyn, announced at last night's service that he would tender his resignation on Sunday. This follows a stormy three years service during which he has fought all sorts of lawbreaking and Sunday amusements. He succeeded the Rev. Oscar W. Haywood, now in New York City.

Mr. Lawson was the means of defeating William B. Hotchkiss for mayor and turning the city over to the Democrats. Despite some of the objections of the congregation, Mr. Lawson never swerved from his mission of fighting for a strict Puritan Sunday. He got little help from the Protestant clergy, and the attitude of most of the Catholic clergy was that a game of ball on Sunday afternoon for a man who had worked in a stuffy shop all week was neither harmful nor reproachful, providing the game disturbed no one and he had attended divine service in the forenoon.

Lawson saw most of the principles for which he fought defeated, but he kept on fighting. His family, it is understood, is behind the move to have him leave Waterbury. His wife would not come here and because of failing health Mr. Lawson has been living here with his daughter.

Lawson will return to Brooklyn to live and perhaps go later to Colgate University as secretary, a post he held before he was pastor of the Greenwood Baptist Church in Brooklyn for eighteen years.

MONOPOLY IN KINDLING WOOD.

New York Company Alleges Conspiracy Against Two Concerns.

Claiming that the defendants to the suit are a monopoly of the kindling wood business, the Graham Wood Company of New York yesterday began an action in the Supreme Court, in Manhattan, for $50,000 damages against the Standard Wood Company of New Jersey and the Greene Manufacturing Company of New York.

The Graham company claims in its complaint that the Greene Manufacturing Company refused to sell kindling wood machinery to it and that this refusal is due to an agreement entered into in 1905 by the defendant companies, and that this agreement was for the purpose of restraint of trade and the monopoly of the kindling wood business.

The complaint relates that the Greene Manufacturing Company is in possession of the patent rights of the machinery which the Graham company sought to purchase.

"PASTOR" RUSSELL A CLEVER FINANCIER

Duped Prominent Pittsburg Clergymen Into Supporting Cemetery Scheme.

HIS "DUMMY" TRANSACTIONS.

Ministers Didn't Know They Were "Boosting" Deal of Man They Opposed.

(Special to The Eagle.)

Pittsburg, November 4—That "Pastor" Russell succeeded in getting the four leading clergymen of Pittsburg, including the Episcopal bishop of this diocese and the Rev. S. Edward Young, now pastor of the Bedford Presbyterian Church of Brooklyn, to lend their names and influence to further the financial prosperity of a cemetery which he controls, is shown by some hitherto unpublished records on file in this city.

The story of this cemetery deal involves a variety of dummy transactions that would do credit to a Wall Street banking expert.

So cleverly did Russell manipulate the deal that the Rev. Cortland Whitehead, the venerable Episcopal bishop of this diocese; the late Rev. Dr. B. F. Woodburn, for forty years a leader of the Baptist clergy here; the Rev. S. Edward Young, the leading clergyman of the Presbytorian Church, and the Rev. J. W. Witherspoon, the leading minister of the United Presbyterian Church, which is probably the most powerful church organization of this city, all of whom were bitterly opposed to Russell's teaching and methods, accepted the position of trustees on the Russell cemetery board before they found out that they had been duped.

The "Pastor" Sees a Good Chance for a Cemetery.

"Pastor" Russell, who has always been counted as a good judge of Pittsburg real estate, a few years ago discovered a plot of ground lying along the old Ruysville road, which is a continuation of Federal street just beyond the city limits, that appealed to him as admirably adapted for cemetery purposes. He figured that there was a good opening for a cemetery in Pittsburg and was looking for a suitable plot of ground to get one started.

The property was purchased for $27,000 by Brother W. E. Van Ambergh, who was a railroad man in the South before he became a Russell Pilgrim and assumed the important duties of treasurer of the Peoples Pulpit Association, which is one of the big Russell corporations. Van Ambergh is now one of the big financial men in the Brooklyn headquarters.

Van Ambergh was pretty well-known in Pittsburg as a Russell satellite, so it was not deemed advisable for him to hold title to the property. Moreover, Van Ambergh is one of those who are supposed to be serving the "Cause" for $10 a month and expenses, and it might have occasioned surprise to find him the possessor of a $27,000 piece of property. At any rate Van Ambergh, very shortly after acquiring the property, sold it for $30,000 to the United States Investment Company.

Courts Declared Transfers of Russell to Be Frauds.

This investment company is a dummy corporation to which "Pastor" Russell transferred a lot of oil stocks, mining stocks and other property at about the time his wife was trying to collect the alimony awarded to her by the courts. Some of transfers which "Pastor" Russell made at this time, were made, the courts declared "in fraud upon his wife." Although it at one time held property worth more than $50,000, this company is capitalized for only $1,000. Of this total "Pastor" Russell holds $980, Brother Bohnet, of Miracle Wheat fame, holds $8 and Brother Ernest C. Henningea (who married Rose Ball and departed with her for Australia shortly before Mrs. Russell's suit for separation came to trial, owns the remaining $5.

It is from the United States Investment Company that the Rosemount, Mount Hope and Evergreen United Cemeteries bought the land, which thus lost all direct association with "Pastor" Russell's name. Through some of his friends and followers "Pastor" Russell had persuaded the four eminent Pittsburg divines to lend their names to the cemetery project. In some way not clearly explained this cemetery was supposed to benefit poor people. On April 18 1905, the Rosemount, Mount Hope and Evergreen United Cemeteries was incorporated under the laws of Pennsylvania by the following: John G. F. Kuehn, John G. Messner, J. H. Giesey, C. J. Woodworth and J. Adam Bohnet, all Russellites.

The original board of trustees included John G. F. Kuehn, John G. Messner, J. H. Giesey, C. J. Woodworth, C. T. Russell, W. W. Giffen, H. A. Guepner, William M. Wright, Francis Winton and the four Pittsburg clergymen to whom reference has been made—Bishop Cortland Whitehead, the Rev. S. Edward Young, Dr. B. F. Woodburn and the Rev. J. W. Witherspoon.

So far as can be learned, the four reverend men did not attend any of the meetings of the board of trustees, which were held at the Russell headquarters, in the Bible House, on Arch street, Allegheny. If they had, they might have learned that, by virtue of a secret agreement, duly filed in the proper recording office in Pittsburg, although its text is known only to the real insiders, the United States Investment Company retains an important measure of control over the property it sold to the Cemeteries Corporation. The agreement carefully prescribes what the Cemeteries Corporation may do with the property, and forbids its sale without the consent of the United States Investment Company.

"Treasurer and President" Was Only a Figurehead.

J. G. Messner, an insurance agent, with an office at 324 Fourth avenue, who was president of the board of trustees, says that he himself knew precious little about the business.

"Russell told me to act as treasurer and president of the board of trustees," he said to an Eagle representative who questioned him about his connection with the cemetery deal.

"The business was all done somewhere else. Then one day Russell telephoned to me: 'Messner,' he said, 'I know you're a busy man. I've got a girl in the office here who can handle the money for the Cemeteries. Just send me a check for what money you have on hand, and I'll take care of the business from now on.' I sent him a check for several hundred dollars, which, for some reason, he kept on hand and didn't cash. I only learned of this later, when I got notice that the bank in which the money was deposited had failed."

Messner was asked what had become of the property.

"I believe it is being run by some of Russell's local representatives," he answered. "I understand they are selling a good many lots and doing quite a business. It has a beautiful location and probably was a good investment."

It was this cemetery deal which helped to open Messner's eyes to Russell's operations, and he severed his connection with the Russellites soon after it was put through.

Pastor Had No Idea Russell Was Connected With Scheme.

The Rev. S. Edward Young, pastor of the Bedford Presbyterian Church of this city, when shown the above dispatch at his home at 1035 Prospect place, wrote out the following statement:

"I recall that several years ago—probably seven or eight years—I was asked to serve as trustee of a new cemetery which had some such name as the Rosemount, Mount Hope and Evergreen United Cemeteries; that Bishop Whitehead of the Protestant Episcopal Church diocese of Pittsburgh, Dr. Woodburn, pastor of the First Baptist Church, Allegheny, and other ministers and laymen well-known to me, were to be fellow trustees.

"Upon being persuaded in my own mind that the enterprise was hardly the sort of one I had been assured it would be, I served notice that my name should be dropped from the list of trustees. I never attended a meeting of the trustees or any meeting with anybody in connection with the matter, and really do not know what became of the enterprise, whether it took actual form and became operative or not. I put no money in it, had no stock in it, no promise of stock or other interest. The Eagle's dispatch is the first intimation I have had of Pastor Russell's relation to the properties."

PRAISE FOR MADERO.

In his Brooklyn Institute lecture on "Mexico in 1911," in music hall, Academy of Music, last evening, Frederic Monsen had much to say of Madero, whom he first met about twelve years ago. The lecturer found Madero a charming companion and an agreeable man, and said that he rules through kindness and love. The Madero family owns an immense, well-administered estate, on which is a large cattle range. Had the revolution not succeeded this estate would have been lost.

Mr. Monsen said that out of a population of 16,000,000, 12,000,000 are natives who are poor, ignorant and without schools, so that there was no hope of their improvement under the old regime. The meeting between President Taft and President Diaz was recalled and the tributes which the "Grand Old Man of Mexico" received. There were many pictures of the two men and of places connected with their political life.

Among the numerous illustrations was a series of interiors of cathedrals, bits of rarely beautiful scenery and portrait studies of Mexican girls and women, shown to an accompaniment of Mexican national music. This was played upon the organ by Willis Alling of Manhattan.

BOY SAT ON THIRD RAIL.

Passengers on Brooklyn Bridge Thought It Was a Miracle.

Crowds passing over the Brooklyn Bridge yesterday afternoon witnessed something little short of a miracle, when before their startled gaze they saw a small boy leap over the railing between the walk and the south track on the Manhattan side, near the trainshed, and land on the third rail of the elevated road track in a sitting posture. A moment later he had landed safely on his feet between the tracks, but minus the greater portion of his short trousers and badly burned.

Charles Moffit was the boy's name. He said he was 9 years old and that he lived at 85 Catherine street. He was walking across the bridge to Brooklyn, carrying a bundle, which he was swinging to and fro. As he was peering over the railing and still swinging the package it left his hand and flew over the railing, landing on the elevated tracks. Without hesitation the boy leaped over the railing and landed squarely on the third rail. Fortunately for him, his legs and hands were up in the air, and consequently no circuit was formed. Almost immediately he bounced off the rail and came down between the tracks squarely on his feet. He was removed by Bridge Policeman Schnitzler and attended by Dr. Orr of the Hudson Street Hospital.

CHRYSANTHEMUM IS QUEEN.

A Splendid Exhibition of Flowers Opens in Manhattan.

Crowds of people visited the National History Museum, in Manhattan, yesterday to look at the annual exhibition of the Horticultural Society of New York. Chrysanthemums made up the principal portion of the show, and were given the choicest places, but the specimens of roses and orchids shown were a very great credit to the society. Growers in Westchester County, New York, and in New Jersey were well represented, but there were several exhibitors from Long Island, including John T. and Herbert L. Pratt of Glen Cove, Percy Chubb of the same place, J. D. Cockroft, Northport; Charles Weber, Lynbrook, and Doubleday, Page & Co., Garden City. Mr. Weber exhibited the new carnation "Brooklyn."

Enormous chrysantnemum plants 10 feet in diameter, attracted much attention from everybody who entered the lower floor of the museum, where the exhibition was held. The plants had been trained so that they were symmetrical, and the flowers covered the plants, making a wonderful sight. There was one plant growing white flowers, another pink and another yellow. One of these enormous plants has 1,200 blooms, and another nearly 1,500. They were exhibited by Adolph Lewissohn, and were grown by his gardner, John Canning, at Ardsley, N. Y. Samuel Untermeyer of Yonkers is a very large exhibitor, and he, like Mr. Lewissohn, has captured a number of prizes. There is a magnificent spectacle in the rotunda of the museum made by the chrysanthemums, while in the wings are found the roses and orchids. Among the latter is found the new rose "Sunburst," which is shown by Charles H. Totty of Madison, N. J. There has not been an exhibition of flowers in Manhattan for many years where orchids came out stronger than they do in this one.

SAYS PASTOR MET GIRL ON DAY OF TRAGEDY

Police Claim New Witness Will Furnish Important Evidence at Trial.

WAS ACQUAINTED WITH BOTH.

Boston, November 4—A new witness against the Rev. Clarence V. T. Richeson, the indicted Cambridge minister charged with the murder of Avis Linnell, has been uncovered by the prosecution, and it is promised that his story will strengthen the stories of other witnesses.

The new figure in the case is Herbert Q. Collins of Whitman. Collins has been served with a subpena. That Collins saw the Rev. Mr. Richeson and Miss Linnell together, conversing in the South Station, on the Saturday afternoon the girl died, is the important feature of the story which Collins tells. With evidence of this character in hand the prosecution declares it will trace the minister's movements from Tuesday through to Saturday, Collins supplying the necessary additional facts to complete a chain of evidence showing that Mr. Richeson and Avis Linnell met by appointment shortly before the girl took poison.

Collins claims to have known both the girl and her companion well.

The pulpit of Immanuel Baptist Church of Cambridge, of which Mr. Richeson is still pastor, will be filled tomorrow morning by the Rev. W. J. Stewart, D. D., of Woburn, who will preach on the text "Man's Place in the Plan of God." In the evening he will speak upon "The Division of Jacob."

The uncertainty which has prevailed as to the personnel of the counsel for the defense of the Rev. Clarence V. T. Richeson, the Cambridge Baptist clergyman under arrest on a charge of murdering Avis Linnell, the Hyannis music pupil, was renewed today by announcement that John L. Lee, the Lynchburg, Va., lawyer, who left here yesterday after a stay of several days, had withdrawn from the case.

In addition, Congressman Robert O. Harris, who has been advisory counsel for Richeson and who verified the announcement regarding Attorney Lee, declared that he himself was "withdrawing from the case as fast as possible," compelled to do so on account of his Congressional duties. It was further affirmed that Richeson's leading counsel would be a Massachusetts lawyer, who has not yet been selected, however.

Mr. Richeson will not be arraigned in the Superior Court on Monday to plead to the indictment against him, as was expected, as Congressman Harris has asked District Attorney Pelletier to defer the arraignment for a few days and his request has been granted.

Putnam, Conn., November 4—It became known today that Miss Violet Edmands, fiancee of the Rev. C. M. Richeson, is in seclusion at Pomfret, together with her father, mother and a nurse. The Edmands arrived at Pomfret last Sunday evening in a big touring car and registered at a hotel there under the name of Smith. During the week they arranged to lease a cottage at Pomfret and today their identity was learned. Miss Edmands is said to be in a nervous state and is being attended by a physician.

HAD LONG WALK AT MIDNIGHT.

That Is Why Mr. Dempsey Complains of C. I. and B. Service.

Complaint regarding night service afforded the Hamilton ferry district by the Coney Island and Brooklyn Railroad, has been filed with the Public Service Commission by J. F. Dempsey of 139 West Ninth street.

In a letter to the Commission Mr. Dempsey states that one night last week, after attending a theater he boarded a Smith street car at Fulton street, and received a transfer to the Hamilton ferry line. At the depot at Smith and Ninth streets, he was informed at 12:15 o'clock in the morning, that the last car for the ferry had left the depot at 11:45, and that there would not be another one until early morning. Mr. Dempsey had to walk to his home. He thinks Hamilton ferry cars should be operated at intervals all night.

Mr. Dempsey complains also regarding the condition of street and sidewalk at Hamilton avenue and Ninth street, due, he says, to negligence of C. I. and B. employees. A month ago, Mr. Dempsey tells the Commission, the tracks were being repaired. When the employees quit the job they left behind a load of dirt and a lot of granite blocks. The rains have leveled the dirt but the granite blocks are still scattered around, some of them on the sidewalk.

Mr. Dempsey complains further to the Commission that no lavatory is provided by the company at the Smith street barns for passengers who transfer at that point.

RENO DIVORCE FOR STEINEKE.

(Special to The Eagle.)

Reno, Nev., November 4—"I tried my very best to get my wife to come back to our home and live with me, making several efforts. I even begged her to do so, but she persistently refused and would give me no just reason for her actions toward me. Finally I gave up in despair and have made no further efforts," declared Andrew C. Steineke, a carriage manufacturer of Brooklyn, during the trial yesterday of his action for divorce against his wife, Susie E. Steineke, whom he had married in New York in 1903.

The couple lived together for six years. His allegations in the complaint filed in the latter part of August were those of desertion, in 1909. To these the wife made answer upon being personally served in Brooklyn with a summons, denying that she had left him and refused further to be a wife to him. She denied that he had been a dutiful husband to her, but her attorneys tried not to press her denials at the hearing of the case and the court ordered a decree granted to the plaintiff.

The couple have no children. Steineke may decide to give up his Eastern interest and make his future home permantly in the State.

DEATH OF M. W. HUTCHINS MAY HASTEN BANK PROBE

Work of Investigating the Union Concern's Affairs Likely to Be Readjusted.

TO BE RESUMED ON THE 10TH.

Dead Chief Examiner Was a Leader Among Banking Dept. Clique Opposing Investigation.

It is expected that the death of Chief Bank Examiner Melburn W. Hutchins will have an important influence in hastening the conclusion of the Union Bank investigation which stands adjourned until November 10. The further examination of Hutchins was expected to be a principal feature of some of the future Union Bank hearings, and now there will probably be a radical readjustment in the programme of the investigation.

Hutchins had always been regarded as the mainstay of that clique in the Banking Department which has fought the Union Bank investigation from the beginning. He represented the Cheney and Williams administrations of the department, under which the Union Bank crowd was permitted to carry on its crooked work, and Hutchins has been loyal to his former chiefs. Ever since Hutchins testified at a Union Bank hearing as to his close personal relations with David A. Sullivan at the time when the latter was doing just about as he pleased with the funds of the bank, strong pressure has been brought to bear on Superintendent of Banks Van Tuyl to dispense with Hutchins's services.

Van Tuyl stuck to Hutchins, however, to his own disadvantage as many believe. The superintendent and the chief bank examiner had planned to leave together for New Orleans in a few days to attend the bankers convention. Superintendent Van Tuyl has leaned heavily on Hutchins ever since he has been at the head of the Banking Department. The late chief bank examiner's long experience in the department made him familiar with all the ins and outs of the work, and Superintendent Van Tuyl permitted him to run things at 60 Broadway, Manhattan, pretty much as he pleased.

It is an open secret that the Union Bank Grand Jury's recent presentment with regard to "certain high officials in the State Banking Department" was aimed primarily at Hutchins. Assemblyman Goldstein and Attorney James C. Cropsey were going after Hutchins hard when Superintendent Van Tuyl's action, in suddenly calling off the investigation, put an end to their activities for the time being. Neither Goldstein nor Cropsey will make any further effort to discredit Hutchins, and further references to him will be incidental.

One of the indirect results of the death of Chief Bank Examiner Hutchins may be the removal of Special Deputy Bank Superintendent Edward Lane Dodge from direct connection with the Union Bank investigation. Mr. Dodge is one of the ranking men of the department, and Superintendent Van Tuyl may decide to reward him for his successful work in directing the Union Bank examination by putting him in Hutchins' place.

The funeral of Mr. Hutchins will take place on Wednesday at Malone, N. Y.

PAYS TAX UNDER PROTEST.

Mr. Schlegel Considers Increase in Value of His Property Confiscatory.

Charles J. Schlegel of 11 St. James place, has taken occasion to write The Eagle expressing his views on what he calls "excessive taxation." Mr. Schlegel has sent a copy of the letter which he sent to the receiver of taxes at the time of paying his last assessment. In communicating with this paper the writer says that he is acting at the request of others, and that there are many who feel as he does. There has been much said apropos of the high rate of taxes and Mr. Schlegel's letter, which throws a new light on the subject, explains itself. It is as follows:

"Receiver of Taxes:

Dear sir—Inclosed please find check for $133.38 to pay 1911 taxes on my house, 11 St. James place. May I say respectfully to you and through you to the proper authorities that I pay this tax under protest.

"Why you increase the assessment on my house $1,100 over last year I do not know, for it is not worth one cent more than a year ago. The increased assessment is in unjust inflation, exorbitant and excessive and a close act of confiscation. Why a young man should struggle to get a home of his own and practice much self-denial to attain and hold it and then have the city levy such heavy taxes as to force him to sell it is an enigma to me.

"I see danger ahead unless we correct this by trimming down some of our municipal expenses, and unless we do this surely some of our respected families will leave city and State, and good citizenship will surely suffer thereby through the loss of removals of good families to out-of-town places. Yours truly,

"CHARLES J. SCHLEGEL.

EUCHRE AND RECEPTION.

St. Brendan's Church Parish to Have a New Schoolhouse.

A euchre and reception will be held on Friday evening, next, a Stauch's, Coney Island, the proceeds of which will be devoted to the construction of a school for the children of the parish of St. Brendan's Roman Catholic Church at Twelfth street and Avenue D, Flatbush. St. Brendan's bids fair to be one of the largest parishes in the diocese of Brooklyn within a few years. Under the Rev. T. A. Hickey, the rector, the parish has prospered and is now in an exceedingly flourishing condition.

Since Father Hickey took hold the organization of the parish has progressed and half a dozen societies, including a live and successful young men's lyceum are organized, working together in harmony and growing rapidly. The parish has now a well equipped chapel and a rectory but the need has been felt of a modern school which will take care of the future growth of the parish as well as fulfill its present requirements. Upon the success of next Friday's euchre much depends.

The proceeds will be devoted toward the expenses of the hall.

Thomas Grogan, president of the Holy Name Society; Miss Elizabeth Callahan, president of the Sacred Heart Society and Miss Catherine Callahan are in charge of the committee of arrangements.

The Flatbush Free Forum will open its winter course of lectures this evening in the large hall, Savoy building, 552 Flatbush avenue. The lecturer will be George H. Goebel. His subject will be "Socialism."

DIDN'T AUTHORIZE USE OF NAME

Editor The Brooklyn Daily Eagle:

In a recent article published in your paper, a candidate running for office, the territory of which includes the Thirty-first Ward, used the name of the Van Sicklen Taxpayers Association in saying that he was in league with said association to secure a 5-cent fare to Coney Island.

As secretary of the Van Sicklen Taxpayers Association, I beg to advise you that it is the sentiment of this organization that its name should not be, and was not, authorized to be used in any shape, manner or form by any candidate running for office of any description.

OVATION FOR DE PACHMANN

The piano recital by Vladimir De Pachmann yesterday afternoon at Carnegie Hall was an exposition of pure piano playing. There was a stronger note in the famous pianist's work than usual. This was nowhere more emphasized than in his final encore, an improvisation by himself. A Chopin interpreter by reputation, it was proper that De Pachmann should play a large group of Chopin's composition. Eight Chopin numbers, including encores, were given by the soloist yesterday.

The programme began with Beethoven; Sonata, opus 53, with its divisions, "Allegro," "Introducione," and "Rondo." In the final division De Pachmann did his most sympathetic work. The Chopin Fantasie was interpreted in perfect accord with the meaning of the composer. The beautiful chant-like melody introduced in the later moments of the Fantasie, and the elaboration of tuneful themes, were all interpreted with clear and exquisite touch, in which sentiment, sweetness, and brilliancy were each regnant at contrasting moments. The two Preludes, 23 and 16, were impressively lovely, and the familiar Nocturne No. 2 was wooing in its tone and swing, rather than barbaric, which some pianists conclude is its proper atmosphere, judging from the way they play it. The C major Mazourka, and C sharp minor Scherzo, were marvels of tone and touch, and the audience showed its approval.

The four final numbers were Mendel's "Spring Song," Schomann's "Vogel als Prophet," Liszt's "Mazourka Brilliante" and Weber-Pachmann's "Perpetuum Mobile." The second number was finely expressive, and the glancing brilliancy of the last two was phenomenal. De Pachmann was brought back again and again upon the dimly-lighted stage, for he played in a twilight of his own ordering. The scene was an awe inspiring one, with the excited audience crowding to the front of the stage, cheering and waving programmes and handkerchiefs at the artist. He played for one encore, Godofsky's "Tambourin."

ARREST EX-CONGRESSMAN ON CHARGE OF SWINDLING

Harry Marcy Coudrey Accused of Using the Mails to Defraud.

INDICTED BY U. S. GRAND JURY

Generally Regarded as Millionaire, and Held Prominent Place in St. Louis.

Harry Marcy Coudrey, formerly Democratic Congressman from the Twelfth District of Missouri, was arrested on Park Row, Manhattan, yesterday by agents of the Department of Justice, on an indictment returned against him and eight other officials of the Continental Life Assurance Company and the International Fire Assurance Company, by the St. Louis Federal Grand Jury last Saturday, charging him with using the mails to defraud.

Coudrey had just finished dining with a friend at a restaurant on Park Row, in the same building as the Department of Justice. Agents Poulin and Pignuolo, who have been looking for Coudrey since last Monday, were just returning from a trip uptown, where they had been looking for Coudrey, when they bumped into him in front of the Park Row Building, in which the Department of Justice is located. He was known to Pignuolo and admitted his identity when questioned. Coudrey made no protest and said he was willing to go back to St. Louis at once, and left for that city shortly after his arrest.

Coudrey, until three weeks ago, was the president of the Continental Life Assurance Company and the International Fire Assurance Company of St. Louis. An investigation by the Government resulted in the indictment of Coudrey and eight other officials of the two companies, and the appointment of a receiver. Since the indictment Coudrey could not be found, but it is said he was in New York almost since the investigation started. It is said that he was in this city trying to promote a "get-rich-quick" scheme.

Harry Marcy Coudrey is one of the best known men in St. Louis. He is a member of a dozen clubs, and generally regarded as a millionaire. He was elected to Congress in 1906, but was not seated until the close of the first session because of an entanglement in the counting of votes. He was elected again in 1907 and also in 1909, finishing his third term last March. He was the author of the bill regulating the size of women's hatpins in the District of Columbia, and also introduced a bill which called for a fine of $50 for the owners of public clocks that did not keep correct time.

Among other things that is charged against Coudrey, according to the Department of Justice, is that while a member of Congress he promoted various business schemes, using the letterhead of the House of Representatives and other stationery of the Government. It is claimed by the Department that he used the Congressional Office Building as an office to carry on the businesses in which he was interested.

When the investigation began in St. Louis into Coudrey's connection with the Continental Life Assurance Co., it is also said by the Department, he was promoting a concern known as the Lincoln National Holding Company, which was to be capitalized at $15,000,000. Coudrey is 44 years old, and his family is highly regarded in St. Louis.

REV. MR. LAWSON RESIGNS.

Former Brooklyn Pastor to Quit Waterbury—Fought for Puritan Sunday.

(Special to The Eagle.)

Waterbury, Conn., November 4—The Rev. Albert G. Lawson of the First Baptist Church, formerly of Brooklyn, announced at last night's service that he would tender his resignation on Sunday. This follows a stormy three years service during which he has fought all sorts of lawbreaking and Sunday amusements. He succeeded the Rev. Oscar W. Haywood, now in New York City.

Mr. Lawson was the means of defeating William B. Hotchkiss for mayor and turning the city over to the Democrats. Despite some of the objections of the congregation, Mr. Lawson never swerved from his mission of fighting for a strict Puritan Sunday. He got little help from the Protestant clergy, and the attitude of most of the Catholic clergy was that a game of ball on Sunday afternoon for a man who had worked in a stuffy shop all week was neither harmful nor reproachful, providing the game disturbed no one and he had attended divine service in the forenoon.

Lawson saw most of the principles for which he fought defeated, but he kept on fighting. His family, it is understood, is behind the move to have him leave Waterbury. His wife would not come here and because of failing health Mr. Lawson has been living here with his daughter.

Lawson will return to Brooklyn to live and perhaps go later to Colgate University as secretary, a post he held before he was pastor of the Greenwood Baptist Church in Brooklyn for eighteen years.

MONOPOLY IN KINDLING WOOD.

New York Company Alleges Conspiracy Against Two Concerns.

Claiming that the defendants to the suit are a monopoly of the kindling wood business, the Graham Wood Company of New York yesterday began an action in the Supreme Court, in Manhattan, for $50,000 damages against the Standard Wood Company of New Jersey and the Greene Manufacturing Company of New York.

The Graham company claims in its complaint that the Greene Manufacturing Company refused to sell kindling wood machinery to it and that this refusal is due to an agreement entered into in 1905 by the defendant companies, and that this agreement was for the purpose of restraint of trade and the monopoly of the kindling wood business.

The complaint relates that the Greene Manufacturing Company is in possession of the patent rights of the machinery which the Graham company sought to purchase.

CONTRIBUTORS' FORUM

FRIEND OF FRY WRITES.

Butler's Action in Turning Down Assemblyman Is Criticised.

Editor The Brooklyn Daily Eagle:

To the voters of the Twelfth Assembly District of Kings—The turning down of Assemblyman Fry of the Twelfth Assembly District by Michael E. Butler is one of the most barefaced, brazen actions ever perpetrated on a respectable community as represented in the Twelfth Assembly District. It is the worst kind of politics and shows the nature and character of the man who is seeking to overthrow an honorable Democratic gentleman because he desires to be honest and live up to honorable convictions. Every voter, be he a Republican or Democrat, knows and understands that all political propositions coming under Mr. Fry's supervision have secured careful and conscientious consideration. If they were bad, his vote was against them. If good, his influence and vote were for them. Democrats of this character, Michael E. Butler seems to have no use for. The men that will wear the Murphy collar and dance to the cracking of the Murphy whip, men who will subvert conscience, political morality, self-respect, true and honorable manhood to debased political bossism are the men Murphy and Butler are looking for.

It was the fact that Assemblyman Fry insisted on representing his constituents and refused to obey the insolent commands of the Tammany boss of this district that led Butler to turn him down. Assemblyman Fry's independence and his demonstrated capacity for public service should have insured his renomination. Butler's aim was to reduce his legislator to the level of a performing dog that can be trusted at all times to do his bidding.

Butler's turning down of Mr. Fry is a handsome compliment to the Assemblyman's honesty and efficiency. What are you going to do about it? Teach Butler a lesson he will never forget. He well deserves a trimming. To openly defy public opinion and to treat with contempt the advice offered by the best elements of the party furnishes food for thought on the voter's part. At such a crucial hour it is high time for the people to rise up in their might and administer a crushing blow to both him and all his crew. This is still a free republic. We are still freemen, lovers of liberty and a square deal. Our glorious flag still flies over the land of the free and the home of the brave. Let us one and all array ourselves for the fray, put on the armor of battle and, like the heroes of old, go forth and redeem ourselves and our homes from the political tyrants that still infest the country.

Cast out boss rule and smash the political machine beyond all hope of repair. From every housetop proclaim the doctrine that the people still rule. Register an emphatic protest against the continuation of boss rule in the only way it can be effectively done. And that way is through the election of the Fusion candidates, for the Fusion ticket is neither boss-owned nor controlled. In fact no better men ever offered themselves for public service than those upon the Fusion ticket, men of sterling qualities, unquestioned ability, high character and unswerving loyalty to principle and duty. Vote for them and bossism will receive a deadly blow.

A new era of progress, efficiency and strict attention to public business will be ushered in. Stand up for your rights, Mr. Voter, rights which the bosses, by hook and by crook, have sought to weaken and purloin. It will be a manly and heroic stand on your part, and a cause for great rejoicing, if on next election day the Democratic boss-owned and controlled ticket is buried beneath such an avalanche of votes that the sun will never be able to penetrate to the bottom of the pile. Do your duty as freemen and lovers of liberty by burying the boss and turning his hirelings out. And that you can do by voting the Fusion ticket.

THE JUDICIARY SITUATION.

A Member of the Kings Co. Bar Advises Vote for All Republicans.

Editor The Brooklyn Daily Eagle:

That Mr. McCooey dominated the Democratic Judiciary Convention is self-evident. It is virtually proven by his own statements, sophisticated or unsophisticated.

That Mr. McCooey is the recognized deputy of and agent for Mr. Murphy, the boss of Tammany Hall, in Kings County, is also evident. If there had been any doubt of that before, such doubt was completely set at rest when Mr. Murphy sent him up to Albany to whip recalcitrant members of the Legislature into support of the abominable proposed charter for the City of New York, which was before that body.

That Mr. Joseph Cassidy, the Tammany leader in the Borough of Queens, advised with Mr. McCooey as to who should be the representative of Queens County, and that after determining to throw over Surrogate Noble and Judge Humphrey, Mr. Cassidy presented to Mr. McCooey the name of William Willett, jr., as the nominee for Queens on the ticket, and that Mr. McCooey adopted Mr. Willett, on such suggestion, is the statement of Mr. McCooey himself, and also of Mr. Cassidy.

That Mr. McCooey then passed the order to the convention to nominate his (Mr. McCooey's) employer, Surrogate Ketcham, Patrick E. Callahan and Cassidy's man, William Willett, jr., as the Democratic nominees for Supreme Court Judges, is also quite clear. Who doubts that the ticket in its entirety is a McCooey-Cassidy-Tammany ticket?

Ugly rumors of scandal about the business began to be talked of in different quarters, and the Brooklyn Standard Union made a distinct charge of crookedness against the ticket. All three of the nominees thereupon together instituted criminal proceedings in a Magistrate's Court; upon sworn information they obtained a warrant for and arrested Mr. Berri, the editor and proprietor of the paper. Mr. Berri had his witnesses, by the scores, subpenaed, and then the three complaining Democratic nominees, with one accord, themselves "crawled," admitted the existence of strong grounds for the accusations of the Standard Union, admitted that their proceedings were mistakenly entered and apologized for annoyance caused by them.

Messrs. Ketcham and Callahan have since said that they were not guilty. It was Willett who was the bad boy. Then why did they withdraw the proceedings and apologize? Why, they claiming that they were wholly free from any blame or misconduct, was not Mr. Berri's charge, as to them, a cruel and injurious wrong which compelled them or ought to have compelled them to force Mr. Berri to prove his case, as to them, or take punishment for wrongdoing? That was the time and then the opportunity for them to clear their skirts. They owed that action to themselves, to the people and to the office for which they were nominated. Strangely lacking in that judicial wisdom which fits men for the "bench," they did not do it! Instead, they admitted probable cause, apologized and withdrew their proceedings. Mr. Cassidy says Mr. Willett was "jobbed" into uniting with his two runningmates in the withdrawal, and was asked by them to sign it. He adds the inquiry: "Why did they want to withdraw and persuade Willett to join them in that act? He also makes the statement that it looked as if they, too, were somewhere in the wrong and afraid to go on and, therefore, paraded Mr. Willett to join in the recantation to shield themselves. These are not the statements of Republicans, but of Democratic Joseph Cassidy. It is a pretty kettle of fish all around in any way it is looked at.

The only safe votes for the voters is to keep the bench of the Supreme Court free from taint and above suspicion by "making the majority against them overwhelming—the voters must take no chances"—to adopt your forceful and most appropriate language as expressed in a conscientious and well-digested summary of the situation in your issue of October 30 last.

Messrs. Kelby, Benedict and Van Siclen are, all of them, good citizens, able lawyers and men of well-balanced minds, not liable to act with rashness or to be attacked with weakness—and they are not tainted or suspected of taint.

Vote for them and "take no chances."

MEMBER OF KINGS COUNTY BAR.

Brooklyn, November 3, 1911.

KETCHAM AND CALLAHAN.

It Isn't So Very Hard to Vote for Them, in Mr. Chase's View of Ballot.

Editor The Brooklyn Daily Eagle:

If I understand your attitude with respect to the judicial nominations, you concede that Messrs. Ketcham and Callahan are fitted by education, professional capacity and high integrity for the Supreme Court and would be entitled to the votes of good and thoughtful men except that they are "unequally yoked" with a gentleman whose election you oppose.

But you say that the ballot is so difficult to handle that voters who are not able to discriminate would better vote against good men in order to insure the rebuke of one.

It was stated in open court before Justice Scudder yesterday by both Mr. DeFord, the acting district attorney, and by Meier Steinbrink, counsel for Mr. Berri, that they had no evidence whatever against Mr. Callahan or Judge Ketcham that either of them was guilty of an offense such as was charged against Mr. Willett.

Now, there are only ten offices to be filled at this election. The ballot is unusually short and easy to understand. The people of Kings County have always shown a peculiar capacity intelligently to use the present form of ballot. They are entitled to resent the suggestion that they can not vote with wisdom. Again and again they have split their ballots with a keen selection of candidates when the problem was more difficult than that now presented.

All that is needed to demonstrate the moral which you preach is that voters shall follow the express suggestion of the ballot law and make a cross opposite the name of each candidate for whom they want to vote. If there is a lesson to administer this is the way to do it without involving the righteous with the guilty; and no more precise and significant means can be thought of for a necessary rebuke than to let the vote show that a wise and fair minded electorate has rejected the one alleged bad man and has emphasized their disapproval of him by sticking to the two concededly good men.

You have stated that you would welcome the election of Judge Ketcham and Mr. Callahan. You have expressly declared Judge Ketcham to be the candidate, above all others, pre-eminently fitted for the place. Can you not trust your neighbors and advise them not to burn down the house to kill the vermin.

QUESTIONS FOR M. J. SMITH.

Cassidy's Candidate for District Attorney Grilled Again.

Editor The Brooklyn Daily Eagle:

The election of Matthew J. Smith as District Attorney of Queens County would be notice to the gang that has so long disgraced it that the people want a perpetuation of their power. Full answers to the following questions by Mr. Smith would interest the public:

First. When, if at any time in your career, did you try a felony case or any lawsuit outside of a police magistrates court?

Second. Isn't your campaign conducted solely by the aid that comes from a compact organization, the component parts of which are bound together by the cohesive forces of self-interest and the hope of material reward if you are elected District Attorney?

Third. In the event of your election what will be your purpose in regard to Cassidy?

Fourth. When, if ever, have you placed yourself on record in opposition to political corruption in Queens County, and in favor of civic righteousness?

Fifth. What induced John P. Madden to have Mayor Van Wyck appoint you a magistrate?

Sixth. Does not your present political support come mainly from the corrupt and besmirched elements who are themselves responsible for the evils under which Long Island City is groaning and who are now anxious to make you District Attorney to save their own hides?

Seventh. Is there an army of officeholders and municipal employees now hired and taxed to make enthusiasm for you?

Eighth. When and where was your influence ever exerted against the grafters who corrupted the ballot in Long Island City, created sinecures, lavished fat contracts upon themselves and scoffed at the courts?

Mr. Smith need have no fear that by answering these questions he will bore the voters of Queens County. His conduct in the past is an earnest of what the public may expect if he is called to larger responsibilities and this is why I ask the courtesy of the Eagle's columns for the insertion of this communication.

DEFENDS DEMOCRACY.

Frederick W. Taylor Even Approves Proposed City Charter.

Editor The Brooklyn Daily Eagle:

Last week I gave a few reasons why the Democratic ticket should be supported. I now wish to answer a few of the Republican arguments and calumnies.

They accuse us of weakening the state civil service system by our taking of certain nominally competitive positions out of that classification.

The absurdity of this claim is only too evident when we consider how the Republican party has corrupted the Civil Service in the interests of its machine.

We have all heard of the so-called starchless civil service law signed by Governor Black; but many innocent souls have long believed that the law superseding it (passed during the administration of his successor) did away with its "starchless" features.

This, however, has not been the case, for in all important state examinations the rating for experience has generally been based upon the statements made in the candidate's application, which document gives the name of the candidate as well as his guarantors.

As a result, each candidate's identity has been known to the rating examiners, and there has been every opportunity afforded for the display of favoritism.

So much for that.

The same has also been true of the Federal Civil Service (likewise under Republican control), for many years, and in both Federal and State offices, it has been customary to appoint candidates without examination, and then arbitrarily to place them under a civil service protection which they have never earned.

As a result of this the Democratic State Government has been forced to completely reorganize more than one department thus far, and it may be forced to more or less completely organize them all.

One of the faults found with the proposed city charter has been its contemplated separation of the municipal and state civil service systems.

Why, bless your soul! The municipal Civil Service Commission has for over fourteen years been the most honestly run and most effective commission in the entire state. No chance for favoritism there, and no ratings based upon papers disclosing an applicant's identity.

Another complaint made has been the charge that the new election law was unfair in its provisions.

The new election law simply sought to deal equally with all the voters of the state. It extended the safeguard against fraud (heretofore existing in this city only) throughout the entire commonwealth, and by preventing the appearance of any name in more than one party column, it sought to end unholy combinations and treat all parties fairly.

As an attorney, I bow to the wisdom of the Court of Appeals; but the Constitution can be amended as to rural registrations, and the adoption of the Massachusetts style of ballot can by next year prevent unfair combinations while meeting the constitutional objections, which proved fatal to the sections in the present law designed to effect that end.

As for the proposed charter the wisdom of the changes contemplated by its framers can be easily demonstrated by a study of its contents. It is a good measure in every particular, and all the Democratic Assemblymen favoring its passage should be triumphantly returned.

BLAME FOR THE EAGLE.

W. H. Downes Suspects It Isn't Supporting Clarke—Hits at Fusionists.

Editor The Brooklyn Daily Eagle:

I am somewhat disturbed by your attitude in the current campaign regarding political parties. Only very recently thousands of people joined in giving praise to your very able paper, and deservedly so, too. To me as a reader and contributor to Eagle for thirty years, it was gratifying to know that the seventieth anniversary of The Eagle was so unanimously recognized. Why, then, have you changed so abruptly? Did you ever agree with the element that inspired the mind of the assassin of McKinley? Did you ever condone the cowardly attempt to assassinate our zealous and exemplary Mayor? No; on the contrary the columns of your excellent paper were replete with denunciations of the cowards who perpetrated these dastardly deeds. Yet you are now exercising your great intellect towards furthering the object of the very man, whose object is and has been to destroy the Democratic party. This you cannot deny, as you are doing all that is possible to defeat the candidates of the Democratic party, when you know full well that the prime factor in the Fusion arrangement is the man whose whole energy has been employed to disrupt, and if possibly destroy, real and true Democracy.

You have lent yourself to the Fusion element to defeat our excellent and able District Attorney, John F. Clarke, by giving prominence to a matter which has now been truthfully saddled on the Republican party. I refer to the Union Bank catastrophe. This has been thoroughly explained, and I hope to the satisfaction of all fair-minded people.

Then, again, you seem to enjoy picturing our Democratic organization as being docile and subservient to Tammany Hall. Is it not too bad that the so-called Republican or more recently, the Hearst-Republican organization can't keep us fighting in order to strengthen their hands?

The Eagle is well aware of my fight for autonomy, and I have not changed, neither have any of our Democratic leaders here. But autonomy does not mean to me that the two great Democratic organizations should be opposed to each other on common principles. If they were, the Fusionists, who must now take precedence of the old-fashioned Republican party, would have a walkover.

The only issues referred to in this campaign are Murphy and Gaynor. Well, I presume Mr. Murphy is proud of his name, although Mr. Prendergast, who says he came from fighting stock in Wexford, seems to have a special dislike for the name of Murphy. Well I never heard of a Prendergast being a fighter in Wexford, although I very often please my friends by singing the "Boys of Wexford." John Purroy Mitchel reminds me of some old herring women in Limerick. If you didn't buy their herrings you were sure of a tongue thrashing. His bitter attacks on our respected Mayor are beneath the dignity of a gentleman. In spite of all, the Democratic ticket is sure to come out victorious.

WHY HE'S A DEMOCRAT.

Daniel F. Fogerty Thinks Republicans Are Trying to Confuse Issues.

Editor The Brooklyn Daily Eagle:

The Democratic majority in the House of Representatives has faithfully kept all the promises the party made to the people. The Democratic party in power at Albany has fulfilled every pledge contained in its platform.

The Democratic officials of Kings County have given the people an administration that has never been excelled.

The Democratic candidates for the Supreme Court bench from Kings County—Patrick E. Callahan and Herbert T. Ketcham—have a record for honesty, efficiency, education and experience that has secured them the support and indorsement of thousands of prominent men of all parties.

Contrast this record with that of the Republican party in the nation, state and county. The G. O. P. has done nothing but break the pledges made to the people. The Republicans have, I admit, revised the tariff upward, whitewashed the Lorimer senatorial elective, made the "Black Horse Cavalry" fashionable, opened wide the doors of the "House of Mirth" and smothered the Alds-Conger scandal in an artistic manner.

However, the machine Republican would like to make the voters forget these modest effort, but he cannot make them forget that "Deeds count more than words" and that a vote for the Democratic ticket means a vote for the party that keeps all its pledges to the people.

SALARIES UNDER SURROGATE.

One Case Cited by "Rank Outsider" of Justifiable Increase.

Editor The Brooklyn Daily Eagle:

I have been investigating a little the swollen payroll of the Surrogate's office of Kings County, of which a campaign orator recently complained, with the following result:

An appointee of Surrogate Abbott, who entered the office in 1891 received an increase of annual salary of $100 the following year. Under Mayor Low his salary of $1,300 was cut $300. At another time he passed a civil service examination for promotion, received an increase of pay and as a result of over nineteen years service can show a position of trust, a good record and a net increase of $50 a year in salary over the modest stipend with which he started.

Surely that was a very proper salary to sweeten. Doubtless there are others. It is notorious in the city service that repeated requests by heads of departments for increase of salaries in more or less similar cases are refused by the Board of Estimate year after year.

This is not intended to prove that there are no conspicuous examples of recent increases of salary in the county service justified by long service or by technical skill.

VOTE FOR TERRY NO USE.

Since His Name Is Off Ticket It Will Help Tammany to Write It In.

Editor The Brooklyn Daily Eagle:

In your edition of the 2d inst. appeared a plea for E. R. Terry by R. A. Jessup. Jessup's plea is away off, unless he is working for Tammany's interest. Does not the learned gentleman, as well as crack oarsman, know that candidates are not elected by having their names written on the ballot by voters. Terry has no chance of election as Assemblyman of the First District, and what very few votes he will receive will be from his intimate friends, simply to show sentiment.

But to hades with sentiment when you are endeavoring to give Murphy a back seat. If the Democrats of the First Assembly District will vote for the Republican candidate for the Assembly then there will be a chance of Murphy joining McGinty at the bottom of the deep blue sea.

FOR MR. CROPSEY.

Chester H. Beebe Has Faith in Republican Nominee for Dist. Attorney.

Editor The Brooklyn Daily Eagle:

To the voters who are anxious to secure men of ability and integrity—those who are not ruled by party or politician—this election is of particular interest.

James C. Cropsey, the Republican nominee for District Attorney, is a man of ability, determination and character. As a public servant in the office for which he has been nominated, Mr. Cropsey would would wield a powerful influence for good.

Mr. Cropsey's short tenure of office as Police Commissioner has revealed the fact that he is a man big enough to do his own thinking, drawing his own conclusions, and living up to the dictates of his own conscience. That he is a man of determined action, has been made known to all.

Mr. Cropsey has been known to the writer for some years. The writer is a musician to whom Mr. Cropsey could not, if he would, render any official act of kindness.

I write not for the interest of Mr. Cropsey, but for those who would like to vote for a good, clean, level-headed man, big enough to follow "duty."

An Error Very Willingly Corrected by The Eagle.

Editor The Brooklyn Daily Eagle:

My attention has been called to your editorial in the issue of Sunday, October 22, under the heading: "Prospects of a Lively Time in the Berri Hearing," in which it is stated that my father, the late Justice Charles H. Truax, was assessed $40,000 for a renomination for Justice of the Supreme Court in 1909. I wish to state with full knowledge that Justice Truax was never assessed, was never requested for an assessment, and never contributed one cent for his renominations. Your informant on the subject has certainly been misled. Trusting that you will print this letter on the same page as the editorial, I am very truly yours,

PACKER ALUMNAE MEET.

They Learned Particulars of the Celebration of Founder's Day.

The Alumnae Association of Packer Institute held its fall meeting Saturday morning and heard reports from the various standing committees, and after the business meeting they lunched together. The greatest interest was in the report of the committee on Founder's Day, which occurs next Thursday, November 9. It is expected that all the alumnae living in Brooklyn and adjacent cities and towns will be present on the occasion of this first celebration of so important an event, which will occur annually hereafter. Dr. Glentworth R. Butler will preside in the absence of President Babbott. The procession of students and alumnae will be picturesque. The present seniors will lead it. They will be costumed in gowns illustrating the fashions since the founding of the institute in 1854. Each class will carry its distinctive banner.

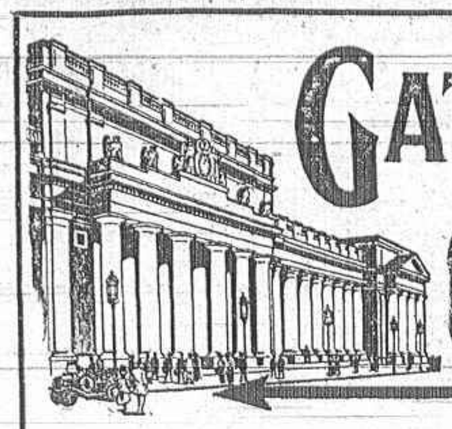

Among the songs to be sung will be one written by Miss Sarah J. Day of Englewood, N. J., who was graduated about a dozen years ago. The music has been composed by R. Huntington Woodman, the director of music of the institute, and organist of the First Presbyterian Church.

Addresses will be made by Judge George C. Holt, "Personal Recollections of the Founder"; Miss Laura J. Wylie, head of the English department of Vassar College and for many years a member of the Packer faculty, "Educational Ideals"; Mrs. Charles N. Judson, an alumna, "Packer Customs, Old and New"; Miss C. J. Davis, "The Early Days of Packer." The Rev. William Packer will pronounce the benediction.

The committee is composed of Mrs. George S. Frank, chairman; Mrs. Edwin L. Snedeker, Miss Elizabeth Goodwin Chapin, Mrs. Lorenzo C. Caruana, Mrs. Otis Carroll, Miss McKean, Miss Jones and the Misses Gray.

NEW PARSONAGE.

Plans have been prepared for the erection of a $3,500 parsonage on the grounds of the Baptist Church at Port Washington. It is expected that work on the new building will commence shortly. Contributions amounting to $1,200 have been received up to date.

MRS. BLATCH SAYS WOMEN HAVE SHIRKED THEIR DUTY

Must Go Back and Pick Pp the Stitches They Have Dropped.

THEIR MISSION IN THE WORLD.

Great Moral Issues the Subject of Interesting Addresses to Church Folk.

"It is just as possible for family life to be made a dirty pool as it is for political life to become a pool of corruption," said Mrs. Harriet Stanton Blatch, speaking at the Parkside M. E. church last evening upon the subject of "Great Moral Issues." "The fact that such things are within possibility, however, does not deter good men and women from entering into family relations; neither should it be any reason why decent people should keep out of politics. Those things rest entirely with the individual. They can lift family life up or they can cast it down and degrade it. That the political life of Brooklyn at the present time should have been discovered to be an exceedingly dirty pool is no reason why it should be permitted to remain so. It is no reason why decent people should keep away from it. On the contrary, they should unite energies in an effort to clean it up; to clear it of its corruption and disease breeding tendencies."

Mrs. Blatch in the course of her remarks, spoke much of the women of the eighteenth century, referring to them as great producers of national wealth; as labor organizers in their relations with the masses of the people living on the great estate where the loom and spinning wheel predominated, their care of the aged, the infirm, the education of the young and their apathetic attitude when relieved of all these responsibilities.

"Men," said Mrs. Blatch, "have been holding up their side of life magnificently. Their life is emphasized in business enterprise, great buildings, institutions, wonderful inventions. They have accomplished wonderful results. Women have shirked their duty. When the genius and enterprise of men took the loom and spindle from the house, when they built institutions for the care of the aged, the infirm and the education of the young, thus removing them from the domestic fireside, women folded their hands and were content to do nothing. Women put emphasis upon life itself yet they did not insist that the great governmental life should be conducted along the same lines in which they conducted their family life. They watched the great cities grow up but they did nothing to make them a safe and decent place in which to bring children up.

"A problem which should rest heavy on women's hearts is the appalling number of young people, especially young boys, brought into court every Monday morning for lawlessness. Men have built great cities, but normal boys and girls must have activity, some place for amusement, yet what has been given them? Streets—miles of them; acres of public buildings, churches, schools—dozens of them—without a playground. The streets are full of unruly boys—the seed sowing of the lawlessness which ends in the night court and reformatory. The woman of the Eighteenth Century bore a big burden, but she had no insight as to her duty, or she would have realized that she must follow the children, the poor, the infirm, the working people out into the world when they were removed from her household and made a part of the great national family, that the government might reflect her motherhood. It was woman's duty to develop the idea that she should be there looking after the welfare of less fortunate men and women. Men have established a great democracy for men. Women should have done the same for women."

Referring to local politics Mrs. Blatch said: "As I listen to speakers in the Twentieth Assembly District of Brooklyn, and the Thirtieth Assembly District of Manhattan, I am appalled at the absolute lack of any high ideals being presented to the people. The whole basis of the campaign is of personal benefit; getting some one's wife out of jail; getting drinks for somebody else; performing some petty office for an individual office-seeker. No thought is presented to the people that they are electing a man who is to represent their community interests properly, who is to secure for them proper legislation and then see to it that that legislation is inforced. Personal benefits alone are considered and the present political life of the city is an evidence of the result of such campaigns in the past. The women of the Eighteenth Century shirked her duty and the woman of today has got to go back and pick up the stitches which she has dropped."

THE ISSUE IN VERSE.

"R. T." Invents the Verb "To McCoo," and Is Otherwise Original.

Editor The Brooklyn Daily Eagle:

In "The Song of the Unsophisticated," some voter may find serious food for thought.

Oh, whose is this voice that so gently McCoos
To soothe the wild voter who rises in wrath?
And what does it sing when it pleads and it woos,
To vote the old ticket and keep the straight path?

"Ah, shun, my dear boy," says the siren, with sorrow,
"All issues sophisticate, native to Queens,
Never mind if they say, though they prove it tomorrow,
That Bill came across—had the stuff in his jeans.

"We are pure-minded patriots, out for the dough;
Will it come, has it come, to such anguish as this,
That candidates able and willing must go
Away with their hoodle and cheat us of bliss?

"No! Perish the thought—irrelevant quite—
As far from the subject as learning or law
Is far from the law job in which I sit tight
At nine thousand per, paid into my paw."

"Enrolled Republican" of Union Course Resents Attacks on Candidate.

Editor The Brooklyn Daily Eagle:

As a reader of The Eagle for more than thirty years, I wish to protest against its treatment of William Willett, jr., in this campaign.

I have known the Congressman for a number of years as a Christian gentleman of the strictest integrity, and it is inconceivable that the editor of The Eagle could know this man and write the way he does.

While it has been my privilege and custom to support the candidates of the Republican party since I have been a voter, I will cast my first Democratic vote for Mr. Willett at the coming election for Justice of the Supreme Court.

WANT TO KNOW ABOUT RUSSELL'S PAST RECORD

Eagle Gets Letters Denouncing Preacher's Methods and His Teachings.

SOME FORMER DUPES WRITE.

Evangelist Burridge Concludes His Lectures—The Rev. Mr. Clifford to Sum Up.

During the past week the Eagle has received quite a number of letters from individuals in different parts of the country who are desirous of obtaining copies of the Eagle telling about "Pastor" Russell's past record. Some of these are so bitter in their denunciation of his methods and teachings that it is impossible to publish them.

It appears from these letters that Russell has gained a large number of followers in widely separated sections of the country. The obligation to recruit other followers is one of the prime obligations of Russellism and this helps to increase the number of adherents wherever it has once taken hold. The city where Russell has prospered least and worked hardest is Pittsburg. There he was never able to overcome the effect of the various court decisions which charged him with having defrauded and maltreated his wife.

A typical experience of a Russell follower is contained in the following letter:

When I was quite young, and in the impressionable period of life, I was misled by Millenial Dawn, chiefly through the influence of others, and I remained under its wizard spell for several years. However, in the course of time as my spiritual perception grew clearer and my rational powers expanded, I awoke to find myself hopelessly out of harmony with the philosophy of M. D., and with the tactics of C. T. Russell, and as a consequence I and quite a few others rejected the former and severed our relations with the latter and are doing all we can to open the eyes of others.

New York City, October 31, 1911.

To the Editor of The Brooklyn Eagle:

I noticed from Sunday's issue of your paper, the 29th inst., that Russell (so termed "Pastor") of the "Brooklyn Tabernacle" has entered a libel suit against you, presumably for statements made in your paper.

This man has in some way obtained a very strong hold on the mind of a relative and from the fact that the continual study of his ideas has been so disastrous in result, I have been led to the belief that the same are misleading, if not dangerous. For this reason I am particularly desirous of obtaining facts relative to the man and his ideas (the inconsistencies of which are self-evident), and I assume from Sunday's issue of The Eagle that you have investigated the ideas advocated by him, together with his previous record, and that the result of this investigation is set forth in some previous issue. I would, therefore, be heartily thankful if you will inform me the dates upon which the result of your investigation was made public through the columns of your paper. I shall also be pleased if you will inform me whether copies of such issues may be had at your office.

I trust that you will have complete success in your defense of the suit brought by this preacher, who is, to my mind, a * * * deserving to be exposed through the medium of the newspapers.

ANXIOUS.

1217 Euclid street,
Washington, D. C.

To the Editor of The Brooklyn Eagle:

Please send me a copy of your daily paper for October 28, 1911. I tried without success to get one here.

Pastor Russell sued the Washington Post for alleged defamation of character and was awarded "one cent" damage. He is no doubt less the biggest * * * of the century, though, what a purveyor of some divine truth. Yet, whatever he has written that is truth is not new; and what is new is not true. I sympathize with his dupes, for I was once one of them.

DANIEL RHODES.

The series of seven lectures on the subject, "C. T. Russell's Teaching Examined," which Evangelist J. H. Burridge of Bristol, England, has been conducting every night during the past week at the Bethany Reformed Church on Clermont avenue, near Myrtle, was brought to a close last evening when "Pastor Russell's Teaching on the Coming of Christ" was compared with the same doctrine as contained in the Scriptures, and shown to be false. A considerable number of persons, including many of Pastor Russell's own followers, attended each lecture during the week, but last evening's congregation was exceedingly large.

Mr. Burridge followed his usual course in taking up the subject before him last night and began by outlining the doctrine on the "coming of Christ" as it is taught by the Scriptures and accepted by all right-thinking theologians. By a careful comparison, he then instructed his hearers in the fallacy of Pastor Russell's doctrine, which has absolutely no foundation in Scripture, although the Brooklyn preacher has endeavored to substantiate his beliefs by passages from Scripture. This perversion of the Scripture, the speaker has especially emphasized in order to show how by a transference of meaning, Pastor Russell has deceived unwary people into believing that his teaching is correct.

According to Pastor Russell, as Mr. Burridge explained, Christ is on the earth now and has been here since 1874, a date at which he has arrived after numerous calculations and consequent explanations. Furthermore, in 1914, the pastor teaches, the present dispensation will end, and then will begin the "Millenial Dawn." This belief is contradicted by Scripture, which tells us that the "coming of Christ" is an event, and not an invisible coming on earth.

The series of discourses on Pastor Russell has attracted so much interest, as well as comment, on the part of the preacher's followers that the Rev. Philip H. Clifford, pastor of the Bethany Church, has planned to give a resume of all the subjects treated by Mr. Burridge in his church on next Sunday evening. It is expected that all who have taken interest in the evangelist's talks will come to hear Mr. Clifford on this occasion.

RUSSELL GOT A DOLLAR IN WASHINGTON POST SUIT

Facts Relative to "Pastor's" Financial Enterprises Brought Out.

SOME OF THE TESTIMONY.

Something About the United States Investment Company Revealed in Cross-Examination.

(Special to The Eagle.)

Washington, November 7—"Pastor" Charles Taze Russell, who is now suing The Brooklyn Daily Eagle for libel, became known here five years ago, when he brought a similar suit against the Washington Post. The jury before whom the case was tried thought the sum of $1 was a sufficient balm for the "Pastor's" feelings and reputation. Following his usual course, "Pastor" Russell appealed the case, but compromised the suit just after the beginning of the second trial.

The appearance on the stand of Mrs. Russell, to whom the Pennsylvania courts awarded a separation from "Pastor" Russell, and Attorney Chapin Brown's skillful cross-examination of Russell relative to his various financial enterprises are believed to have persuaded the jury that Russell was entitled to just as little as they could give him.

The following questions and answers relative to the United States Investment Company brought out in the cross-examination are from the official minutes of Smith & Hulse, law reporters, taken on December 19, 1906, in the case of Russell versus the Washington Post Company.

"Pastor" Russell is on the stand and is being cross-examined:

Q. You say that for the last fifteen years you have been engaged almost exclusively in what kind of work?

A. In promulgating the teachings of the Bible in every way I know how, orally and by pen and by printed page.

Q. You do not mean to say that you are not engaged in other enterprises at the present time, do you?

A. I have no other business whatever, in the world.

Attorney Brown then asked about the United States Investment Company, Limited.

Q. Do you not know it was formed in 1896—that corporation?

A. I do not recall, sir.

Q. You were one of the incorporators at that time?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How much stock did you have in that?

A. I had practically all of it. The others were merely representative.

Q. You were connected with it and interested in that company?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Then when you said you had been engaged in this religious work almost exclusively for fifteen years, you did not take that into consideration, did you?

A. No, sir; I uld not consider that was a bu way. I was not gi ja ness. If I owned ional Bank here I a business I was ne share or one company have its o ce?

sir.

And you were the principal stockholder?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. The other parties interested in it (the parties referred to are J. A. Bohnet of Miracle Wheat fame and Ernest C. Hennings, husband of Rose Ball, whose name figured prominently in Mrs. Russell's separation suit) only had a nominal interest?

A. That was all.

Q. How long, after that corporation was formed did you sever your connection with it?

A. I could not give the exact year, not anticipating questions of this kind. I could have informed myself. I know it has been possibly somewhere along about nine years ago.

Q. That was a real estate corporation, was it not?

A. No, sir; it was just for any kind of business that it might wish to take hold of.

Q. You saw the charter?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you not have an Article 3 in that charter "for the purpose of buying and selling real estate, patent rights, stocks, bonds and other securities, merchandise and building houses?"

A. All those things were in one of those articles. The object of the matter was this: I had previously had a number of offices in various interests, and I wished to turn them all over to this company, so that I would be free of it, and so they would be managed without regard to my name, not wishing my name to be identified with it.

The United States Investment Company with which "Pastor" Russell did not wish his name identified, is the same dummy corporation which he used in the Rosemount Cemetery deal, the details of which were explained in a Pittsburg dispatch recently published in The Eagle. On February 12, 1900, he transferred stock in the United States Investment Company together with his interest in the proceeds of twelve pieces of real estate owned by him with title in the Investment Company to the Watch Tower Society. The value of this single transfer according to the society's records was $48,500. In a decision in Mrs. Russell's suit for alimony Judge Macfarlane of the Court of Common Pleas declares that this and other donations "are made with the same reckless disregard of the rights of the wife, and with intent to defeat her of any interest or claim she might have for her support."

NEW MUSICAL SOCIETY.

An attempt is being made to get together a small group of singers for the purpose of studying the old and modern a capella choruses, oratorios, cantatas, etc. The idea is to admit only persons who have had real experience in this work, making it possible to study the type of music such as the Musical Art Society in New York City is presenting. If twenty or more such voices cannot be found the organization will not be attempted. Probably there would be only one rehearsal each week, and if the work progressed satisfactorily a concert or two would be given each season. In order to perform such works the standard of singers must be high. N. Lindsay Norden, B.S., M.A., Mus. Bac., organist and choirmaster of St. Mary's Church, and instructor in music in the High School of Commerce, and director of the Commerce orchestra, Manhattan, is the originator of the idea. Applications, containing information as to ability, etc., should be mailed to Robert Von During, secretary, 230 Classon avenue. Notice of voice trials will be mailed if the plan proves successful.

First to Be Given in New St. Ambrose Hall.

The annual dance of the St. Ambrose Lyceum was held last night at St. Ambrose Hall, Tompkins and DeKalb avenues. This was the initial dance in the hall, which has been completed but a short time. POTASH MINES In the U. S. A.

There will be millions for the man who discovers a potash mine in this country that can be profitably developed. So far, the potash discoveries here do not threaten the German industry, but there are rumors that the tables may soon be turned. Play Your Piano From a Distance

This connection may remain invisible.

You can be seated with your audience when you play

The Tel-Electric Piano-Player

Music is most enjoyable when mellowed by distance. With the Tel-Electric you can play your piano even from a different room.

Radically Different From all Others The Tel-Electric Piano-Player is as unlike all other piano-players as it is superior.

It contains none of the faults common with the old style pneumatic player and offers you any number of advantages which are absolutely exclusive. It plays either without your assistance, or under your absolute control. It requires no pumping.

Wonderfully Responsive Piano-Player The mechanical features of the Tel-Electric are no less remarkable than its artistic qualities. The expression devices are the simplest and most responsive of all other players. By being away from the piano you are also enabled to judge perfectly the effects desired.

Don't Sacrifice Your Piano—Attach a Tel-Electric Player

If you now own a piano do not sacrifice it by receiving a small allowance on the cost of a piano player, but attach a Tel-Electric Piano-Player to it. If you do not own a piano you can secure your favorite instrument from us with a Tel-Electric Piano-Player attached. In either instance you will save money, and in both you will be buying more enjoyment.

To part no more forever.

IMPALED ON PICKET FENCE.

West Indian Negro Slashes a Hotel Maid, Then Leaps to Death.

After trying to murder Katherine Doyle, 21 years old, a maid in the Calumet Hotel, at 240 West Fifty-seventh street, Manhattan, by slashing her three times with a razor this morning, John C Weeks, a West Indian negro bellboy in the hotel, jumped off the roof, seven stories, into the court, landing on an iron picket fence on which he was impaled. He was dead when they reached him.

Weeks was infatuated with the young woman. He was 25 years old. He worked at night and she days. It was said at the hotel that she went out with him several times, but that two weeks ago she refused to have anything more to do with him.

The negro was at the hotel early this morning to see the maid. He talked to her as she was working on the second floor, and she refused his attentions. Then he became infuriated and pulled out a razor. The woman shrieked and Weeks slashed her in the throat, breast and abdomen and fled as he saw Superintendent Voehees of the hotel ascending the stairs.

Weeks ran to the roof with the superintendent following him. The negro ran to the edge of the roof, looked down and then deliberately leaped into the court. His body turned a little as he fell but it struck the iron spikes of the fence, 15 feet above the courtyard. Dr. Jones, who ran in, lifted the body off the fence. The man was already dead. Dr. Myers of Flower Hospital found the maid seriously cut and he took her to the hospital.

CONSOLIDATION IS PLANNED.

A Union of Nine K. of C. Councils in Borough Under Consideration.

A movement is on foot in Knights of Columbus circles in the Park Slope and Bedford sections of the borough to bring about a consolidation of the different councils in those vicinities. The movement was started in Columbus Council, No. 126, the second oldest council in the Borough of Brooklyn.

The councils which have the matter under advisement and have appointed committees to look into the proposition are Columbus, America, Bedford, Lafayette, Carroll, Commodore Barry, Christopher Columbus and Fort Greene.

It is the intention to form one new central council, with headquarters near the present terminus of the subway at Atlantic avenue. The matter has received the indorsement of the state deputy of the order and the district deputies in the districts which will be affected by the consolidation.

Among the men who are acting on the committee, which is composed of members of the above named councils, are:

MISCELLANEOUS.

DENTISTRY.

Dental practice is complex, requiring different kinds of skill for its various branches, just as all sciences do. The difference between filling a tooth and extracting one is as great as the difference between removing a cataract and reducing a dislocation.

I have specialists for each of the dental branches. When you come to me, an expert in the particular branch your case involves will treat you, after I have made an examination and assigned you to his care.

He will treat you painlessly, too, for painlessness and specialization are the two points emphasized in my practice.

Edward Everett Cady, D.D.S.,

Hicks of Long Island City to get the nomination and Cassidy wanted the place for one of his own men. The two became bitter enemies over the situation, and Willett went about Queens saying that Cassidy was so crooked he could hide behind a corkscrew. Two months ago, the story continued, Cassidy sent for Louis Walter and told him that if he could land Willett for $40,000, Willett could have the nomination.

This is the story Brady was asked to stand sponsor for. He hedged as far away from it as he could. He admitted he might have said Walter was the go-between from Cassidy to Willett, he admitted the old, long-standing feud between the two, and said their reconciliation had been a matter of comment in Queens. He said he knew nothing of his own positive knowledge of the way Cassidy and Willett got together. He also testified that John Cronin of Far Rockaway, he had heard, was to have been Willett's secretary if Willett had been elected.

He was asked if he hadn't said he understood Walter insisted on a cash transaction and on the receipt of the money before the nomination. He said that was the rumor. He knew nothing of a rumor that Cronin was said to have been a go-between in the Cassidy-Willett deal.

Van Sicien Will Be Called to Testify About League.

James C. Van Sicien, Supreme Court Justice-elect, who was mysteriously rejected by the Independence League for indorsement — William Willett being selected in his stead at the last minute—will be called to testify at the Willett inquiry before Justice Scudder in Long Island City.

Van Sicien will be questioned regarding his statement during the campaign that he had heard from many people that one could not get on the Independence League ticket without paying for it. Assistant District Attorney De Ford has heard it said that Van Sicien was "approached," and he proposes to quiz the Justice-elect along this line.

Before the session began in Long Island City today, De Ford instructed process servers to get notice immediately to Herman N. Hansen, Thomas M. Quinn and William J. Taylor, to attend court and be prepared to testify regarding the indorsement of Willett by the Independence League.

These three men were given the power to nominate the Independence League candidate for Justices of the Supreme Court. They met in Robert Stewart's office, 375 Fulton street, Saturday, October 7, and indorsed C. A. Hart, the Prohibitionist, Patrick E. Callahan and William Willett. Willett was substituted at the last minute for James C. Van Sicien. Taylor is the superintendent of sewers under Borough President Steers and Quinn is Sheriff of Queens County.

Assistant Dist. Attorney De Ford heard that Van Sicien was told he would have to "put up" to get the League indorsement. Van Sicien, the story De Ford has heard goes, said he would—aid in any legitimate way that could be pointed out, but that he would not pay for the nomination. Van Sicien was then informed, according to the story, that he could not have the indorsement, as it was thought to be worth $15,000 at least. As soon as Mr. De Ford heard this tale, he sent a man out hot-foot for Van Sicien. The men who are to testify in regard to the League indorsement will be subpoenaed if they do not attend willingly.

Quinn Is Asked if Willett Paid for Indorsement.

Thomas M. Quinn, Sheriff of Queens, was called to the stand and questioned about the Independence League indorsement of Willett. He was asked point blank by De Ford if Willett paid money for the Independence League indorsement. Quinn was a member of the Independence League committee delegated to pick a judiciary nominee. He testified that on Friday, October 6, a man named Maurice Geronimo telephoned him and made an appointment to meet him in front of the City Hall at Long Island City, and said he wanted Willett indorsed by the Independence League, which indorsement was generally understood to be within the gift of Quinn. About noon of the same day Geronimo, Willett, a friend of Willett not named in the testimony and Quinn met in Trommer's cafe in Ridgewood and discussed the nominations.

"Were you paid any money for the nomination?" asked Attorney De Ford.

"No," said the witness.

"Was anyone else paid any money?"

"Not to my knowledge."

"Was anyone else, directly or indirectly, either as a cash payment or a campaign contribution, paid any money as the result of the meeting in Trommer's Cafe?"

"Not that I know of."

Justice Scudder broke in to ask if Quinn knew Willett well. He said he didn't, and admitted he had little idea of his fitness as a judge.

Didn't Know Willett, but Nominated Him.

"And after knowing him a few minutes and talking with him you went ahead and nominated him?" asked the Judge.

"That's about it," said Quinn. Quinn testified that he left Trommers and came to Robert Stewart's office in Fulton street, Brooklyn, where the committee was meeting. Willett was then given the indorsement of the Independence League along with Hart and Callahan.

Quinn was asked if it were not the original intention to indorse Van Sicien instead of Willett. He said it was, but that the switch was made because it was thought a Queens County man was needed.

"Did you tell Van Sicien," Quinn was asked, "that he could secure the nomination for $15,000 cash?"

"I did not."

"Did you or Anyone else have a phone conversation with Van Sicien in which he was told that?"

"I did not and know of no one else who did."

After the examination of Sheriff Quinn the hearing adjourned until Monday morning, when Van Sicien will be called.

Willett's Partner Testifies Regarding Stock Deal.

Halstead Frost, the law partner of William Willett, was called to the stand. De Ford brought out that Willett had told him he paid 50 cents on the dollar for the sixty-three shares of stock of the Automobile Building Company.

"That would be $3,150 for all of the shares, would it not?"

"It would."

"And did you ever hear Willett say he paid $5,000 for that stock?"

"No, sir."

The witness went into the affairs of many corporations with the attorney, among them being the anonymous company. This, he said, was a holding company which owned stock in the Willett company.

A process server testified that he had been unable to find Marinus Willett, the brother of William Willett. Dr. Philip M. Wood of Jamaica, a director of the Bank of Long Island, was then called, and testified that Henry L. Crandall of Freeport, L. I., had approached him regarding his buying a second mortgage of $23,000 on the Seaside Improvement Company owned by Willett.

Crandall was then called to the stand, and he said he had gone to Dr. Wood on his own initiative and not as an emissary for Willett. He said he knew the mortgage was in the market and he wanted the sale. Richard Van Siclen, cashier of the First National Bank of Jamaica, said Cassidy had an account with them and that he had deposited $1,500 in cash on October 13. He also met a $12,000 note on October 17.

BURGLAR BEATS A WOMAN.

Mrs. Rose Leitner Knocked Unconscious and Her Flat Robbed.

Mrs. Rose Leitner of 1135 Fortieth street, Brooklyn, is ill at her home today as the result of her encounter with a burglar who robbed her flat after he had beaten her into unconsciousness yesterday afternoon. She is the wife of Samuel Leitner, manager of a manufacturer at 832 Broadway, Manhattan, and the couple have six children. Mrs. Leitner was in the kitchen about 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon when she heard steps in the front hallway. The five older children were in the street playing. Her baby, 14 months old, was asleep in the parlor. At the sound of the footsteps Mrs. Leitner passed through the parlor, where the baby lay asleep, and started to the hallway.

The hall door now open and a masked man entered. He pushed a revolver before her face and said:

"Not a sound!"

Then he grabbed her by the throat and dragged her to a rear room. She fought desperately, and he rained blows on her with the pistol butt and his fists. As she lapsed into unconsciousness he tore one of her earrings from her. She is sure that there was another man in the house, but in the struggle did not get a good look at him.

John McInerney, an inspector of the Kings County Lighting Company, who came to inspect the gas meter, found her unconscious. The house had been ransacked and $400 worth of jewelry, silverware and cash taken. Detectives Coutant and Geisler, of the Parkville police station, are working on the case.

WOLF FIGHTS RETURN HERE.

Brooklynite, Alleged to Have Led Dual Life, Rearrested in Canton.

(Special to The Eagle.)

Canton, O., November 10—Attorneys for Louis Wolf, alias George Larkin, the former Brooklyn rug manufacturer who is alleged to have led a dual life as a respected citizen and a pickpocket, today began habeas corpus proceedings to prevent Wolf from being returned to Brooklyn to answer a charge of larceny. A writ issued in Common Pleas will be heard today.

Wolf was freed by Judge Henry W. Harter yesterday afternoon, of the charge of picking pockets at an aviation meet here in September, because of lack of evidence. He was immediately rearrested for the Brooklyn authorities, by Canton officers. With Wolf is his young and pretty wife, who has been active in trying to secure his release from the day he was arrested. When he was jailed she told the story of his alleged dual life and said she had no idea of it until officers came to their home in Brooklyn to get her husband.

After being discharged Wolf said he would go over to the county jail and brush his hat. As he stepped out of the courtroom two Canton plain clothes men took him into custody.

HORSE HAD REAL 'HOSS' SENSE

Made His Way to Master's Store While Owner Slept on Ferryboat.

Morris Spielman, a baker of 69 Huron street, at 4 a.m. today, drove his rig aboard the Houston Ferry after making deliveries on the East Side of Manhattan. He left the rig in the wagonway and went to the cabin, where he fell asleep.

When the boat reached the Eastern District slip at the foot of Grand street, he slept on peacefully and the animal, unguided, left the boat behind the other vehicles.

The baker did not awake until the boat was nearing Manhattan on the return trip. He was nearly frantic when he learned the rig was gone, and was highly impatient until he could get back to Brooklyn. He went to the Bedford avenue station and a general alarm was sent out. He searched vainly for two hours, and then went back to his shop in a dejected frame of mind.

To his great surprise he found the rig standing in front. Nothing was missing from the wagon. The horse had made his way from the boat unguided a distance of more than two miles. The overjoyed baker gave the horse an extra measure of oats.

REBEL STUDENTS WAITING.

Dr. McCorkle Says He Will Confer With Junior President Soon.

Further than that he would let matters take their course, Dr. John McCorkle, president of the Long Island College Hospital, had little to say regarding the rebelling junior class, which refuses to attend the lectures of Dr. McCorkle's nephew, Dr. John A. Longmore. As none of these lectures will be held for several days to come, the students are awaiting developments as eagerly as is the president, but declare their intention of remaining firm against their lecturer in principles of medicine.

"I am going to have a talk with the class president, and perhaps in a few days can give you some more information," Dr. McCorkle said today, "but in the meantime there is nothing to say."

Dr. Longmore could not be seen, as he left home early in the day. The students confidently expect that when he sees that their feeling is strongly against him, the lecturer will resign, but they say nothing will induce them to give way.

LEADING MAN BANKRUPT.

Louis Leon Hall, Actor, Owes $2,515.17; Virtually No Assets.

Louis Leon Hall, leading man at the Amphion Theater in the Eastern District, has gone into voluntary bankruptcy. He filed his petition today in the United States District Court, with no assets, except $50 worth of wearing apparel, and $2,515.17 liabilities.

It was stated at the Amphion this afternoon that Hall's bankruptcy would not in any way affect the playhouse, but that Hall would continue as the star actor of the stock company, which is playing "The White Sister" this week.

Hall used to be with Corse Payton as a member of Payton's stock company.

MURPHY MAY HAVE CALLED HALT IN McCOOEY FIGHT

Foes of Kings County Leader Are Less Active Today Than They Were.

HE APPEARS UNRUFFLED.

Chain of Primary Fights, With McCooey as Storm Center, Sure to Occur Next Spring.

Just how the revolt, in the Democratic organization, against the leadership of John H. McCooey will take form has not been definitely settled among the leaders. McCooey yesterday heard from practically all the leaders in the county, who "dropped in" at headquarters to chat with him. Whether they came on request, or all of them arrived spontaneously, moved by a common impulse to gather in the chief's sanctum and shed a few tears over the defeat, was not made plain. At any rate, McCooey did not appear to be worried about his tenure of office when he was seen at the Jefferson Building this morning, although he declined to comment on the talk of insurrection.

It is said that a number of the district leaders who were most violent in their talk the day following election, put on very smiling faces when they went in to see McCooey and to assure him that they never contemplated asking for his resignation as county leader. James P. Sinnott, leader of the Twenty-third Assembly District, took a prominent part in "rounding up" the critics of Mc Cooey's management of the recent campaign. Sinnott is reputed to be very friendly with C. F. Murphy and it is surmised that he may have received orders from the Tammany boss to drop his contemplated action against McCooey, at least until after Murphy has had a chance to think things over in the calm of the "rest cure" at Mount Clemens, Mich., for which he departed today.

Whatever their motive was, the district leaders who were suspected of being on the point of declaring themselves in favor of a reorganization of the party, which would make some effort to satisfy the independent voters who administered such a drubbing to the local annex of the Tammany machine, have apparently decided to "lay low" for a few days. It is reported that among the visitors were Thomas R. Farrell, leader of the Tenth, who is mentioned as McCooey's probable successor; William Delaney, Daniel Carroll and James McQuade.

In the meantime, however, they are encouraging those who are talking of revolt, while not committing themselves. If nothing is done at the next meeting of the executive committee in December, there is sure to be a chain of primary fights started next spring which will tear the present organization to pieces. Under the new Direct Primary law the candidates are to be nominated by direct vote of the enrolled voters, and the primary election will be safeguarded from fraud in the same manner as a general election.

Leaders who realize this said today that some kind of a reorganization should be planned immediately to prevent a general warfare next spring on the eve of a Presidential and Gubernatorial campaign. Should it be believed that Tammany Hall would back McCooey at the December meeting of the executive committee, the anti-Tammany feeling will be increased many times, say these leaders, and the defeat of whatever ticket McCooey might have a part in naming next year would be certain.

MAY HAVE HEARD CALL OF SEA

Wife of Missing Christian Gregerson Can't Otherwise Explain Vanishing.

A general police alarm was sent out today for Christian Gregerson, 40 years old, of 523 Sixth avenue, who had charge of the freight department of a department store on Fulton street. He has not been home since November 1, and his wife, Mrs. Rosalie Gregerson, fears that he has met with foul play. She made a thorough search of all the morgues and hospitals before notifying the police.

Mr. GFegerson, up until six years ago, had followed the sea. His brothers were seamen, as his father's family had been for generations past. His wife thinks it possible that, if he is still alive, the lure of the sea may have drawn him again. She thinks he may write to her from some distant port to join him, or await his return from a voyage. He was always pining for the ocean. She objected to his resuming a seafaring life.

Mr. Gregerson owned a motor boat and kept it at the Ben Machree Boat Club, of which he was a member, at the foot of Bay Twenty-second street. The propellor was broken, and he left home at 5 o'clock in the morning, telling his wife he was going to overhaul the boat before he went to the store for work.

The missing man belonged to the Order of Owls. His position with the store was one of trust and responsibility and he was generally respected.

MRS. RIDGWAY DEAD AT 100.

Was Related to Former Mayor Murphy and Prominent Brooklynites.

Sophia Greenwood, whose husband died in Brooklyn fifty years ago, and who was the sister-in-law of the late Senator Henry C. Murphy, once the Mayor of Brooklyn and Minister to The Hague, and a sister of the late Joseph M. Greenwood, long a prominent lawyer of this borough, died yesterday at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Daniel Baldwin, at Middletown, Conn.

Mrs. Ridgway, though over 100 years old, was in the best of health until three years before her death of pneumonia. Last Wednesday she had taken an automobile ride of twenty-five miles, which she much enjoyed. She was in perfect possession of her faculties, excepting that of hearing, though not entirely deaf.

Mrs. Ridgway was born September 16, 1811, and had long lived in Brooklyn, her home for many years being at 151 Remsen street until 1899, after which she resided with her various relatives, by whom she was always welcomed. Her last home was with her daughter. She celebrated her 100th birthday at her daughter's home September 16, last, and was as lively and interesting as her many guests. The interment will be at Paterson, N. J., alongside her husband. Carriages will meet the 1:15 train from Jersey City on the Erie Railroad.

MAYBE ALMA PEDRO IS CRAZY.

Sent to Observation Ward in Kings County Hospital.

Alma Pedro, a well-dressed West Indian mulatto, who at one time had some vogue as a Tammany spellbinder, was sent by Magistrate McGuire from the Adams street court to the observation ward in the Flatbush Asylum today for investigation into his sanity. He shot and killed a man about six years ago and managed to get free, after a trial in which William Travers Jerome prosecuted, and since then he has been drifting around. The complaint against him was made by Francis H. Gilbert, one of the owners of the Saratoga Cab Company of 24 College place, who swore that Pedro had been threatening to kill him and imagined himself of divine origin.

TROUBLE IS BREWING AMONG REPUBLICANS

It's a Question of Leadership, the Same as That Confronting Democrats.

Pending the fight to depose McCooey, the Republicans are said to be quietly struggling with the problem as to who is to be their leader in Kings County. The fight, of course, is between Calder and Kracke. There is a lot of patronage connected with the county offices, and none of the rank and file know just how it is to be divided.

Calder has gone to Atlantic City and Kracke has gone away on an automobile trip with Borough President Steers. Other prominent Republicans have also gone out of town for a few days. The principal question among the men who remain in town is over the selection of an under sheriff to succeed J. M. Gray. The place pays $6,000 a year and is considered very suitable for a district leader.

It is reported that Sheriff-elect Law will make his selection from among three men, D. H. Ralston, leader of the First District; Lewis M. Swasey, leader of the Seventeenth, and former Sheriff Alfred T. Hobley, Republican leader of the Fourth.

At Republican headquarters today some hope for next year's campaign for the Governorship was found in an analysis of the Kings County election returns by Assembly districts. A genius at figures claimed that the returns indicated a plurality of far more than 100,000 for the Republican State ticket next year. His opinion was as follows:

"A review of the vote cast for members of Assembly in Kings County on Tuesday indicates a remarkable reversal of opinion as compared with the vote of last year when Governor Dix carried the county by a plurality of 25,270 over Stimson.

"The combined vote of the Republican candidates for member of Assembly in the county on last Tuesday was 109,904, as against 88,763 for the Democratic candidates, a Republican plurality for a State office of 21,141—making a change of practically 46,000 votes.

"This would tend to show if this average were maintained throughout the State, a plurality of far more than 100,000 for the Republican State ticket."

'DOUBLE CROSSED'--DRESCHER

Defeated Alderman Lays His Downfall to the Bath-House Trust.

Alexander S. Drescher, who was defeated for re-election as Alderman by James F. Martyn, the Republican nominee, in the Brownsville district, says that district captains were paid to work against him in the campaign; that he was the victim of treachery, prominent Republicans and Democrats who had promised him their support working against him, and that he was "double-crossed," as he puts it, in general. In addition to this bill of complaint, Mr. Drescher today made public the following statement:

"Dr. A. Chambers was untiringly active in opposing the creation of the Municipal Bathhouse at Coney Island. Not only were his efforts defeated before the Board of Estimate and the Board of Aldermen, but he failed irretrievably through every channel of law, and thus despite the attractive fund he with others raised to annihilate this great project. It appears quite evident that a similar fund was ingeniously gotten together from the same source to defeat me in my district, as there was no dearth of loose change, judging from the fine raiment, fragrant cigars and immeasurable other manifestations of suddenly acquired wealth by some of the ardent workers opposed to me. Justified amply in the accusation, the following telegram audibly tells its own story:

"'Western Union Telegraph Company,

"'Coney Island, November 8, 1911.

"'Alexander Drescher, 740 Howard Avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y.:

"'Congratulations on your defeat. Sorry you lasted so long. A. CHAMBERS.'

"If my career is to terminate in active life because I chose to benefit in many ways the hardworking people, then I am proud to step aside, well satisfied with the result.

"I still maintain I have no apologies to offer the Bathhouse Trust."

DIES OF STARVATION.

Johann Koch, 60 years old, with no occupation, was found dead in a wagon at the stable in the rear of a baker shop owned by Henry S. Levy, at 109 Thames street, this morning. The discovery was made by Isaac Zahn of 119 Thames street who was about to take the wagon out. Dr. Sullivan, of the German Hospital, who was summoned, said the man had probably died from exposure and improper nourishment. The record at the Coroner's Office gives the cause of death as starvation.

Lincoln Center, Kan., November 10—Petitions were circulated here today asking that the sending out of reports of the "tar and feather" case, which goes to trial here next Wednesday, be prohibited for the sake of the honor of the community. Fourteen men are charged with the tarring of Miss Mary Chamberlain, a school teacher, last summer.

STREET SWEEPERS JOIN CART DRIVERS' STRIKE

had 125 men collected there ready for work. The reporters counted just fifty-two.

Mayor Gaynor Says the Strikers Cannot Get Back.

Mayor Gaynor gave out a statement about the strike just before noon. The Mayor, being asked several questions about the strike, said:

"I can best answer your questions by saying that the city officials are not trying to 'break' any strike. The drivers of the ash and garbage wagons have quit their jobs and their places are being filled by others. They are not to be taken back. There is a great misunderstanding on this head. The Commissioner could not take them back if he wanted to. He can employ such men only from the Civil Service list. When men in city departments quit they are struck from the payroll and their employment by the city is at an end. Their places then have to be filled from the Civil Service list. None of these men can ever be employed by the city again unless they undergo Civil Service examination and get on the eligible list again. That the Civil Service Board would ever permit them to get on the list again is not conceivable. None of them will get back. The labor leaders who came to see me demanded that the City of New York cease to remove ashes and garbage at night. I told them the day removal caused general complaint throughout the city of the ashes flying in the faces and eyes and clothes of people and of the smell of the garbage. That we therefore changed to night removal, as is the method in many or most cities here and abroad. They then said that the city should have two men to each cart instead of one, and that the men should be paid more. They said the job was too lonely for one man in the dark winter nights. They also said the job was too cold at night, although the work ought to keep any man warm. I told them that the night service would not be discontinued. I also reminded them that the case was not like employment by a private individual. That the Commissioner could only employ the number of men provided for in the budget. That he could not spend money which had not been appropriated for him. That the men were in public employment. The cans are made of a size for one man to handle, not two. I also pointed out to them that the men worked only eight hours a day, and were paid much the highest wages paid anywhere for such services. It was all useless. These men were bent on making the officials and people of this city knuckle down to them. The householders of this city will bear any inconvenience before they will allow that. It is the meanest and most arrogant piece of business ever known. The city is paying these men wages far higher than they can get elsewhere, and we also had a pension bill passed for them last winter. And yet they turn around and do this mean thing. This city will knuckle down to nobody, but will treat everybody justly."

Ashton Looks to Courts to Interfere for the Men.

William H. Ashton, general organizer of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters, made public today a letter the teamsters had received from their counsel, Mann Trice, who said that if it could be established that the Street Cleaning Department drivers were required to load and unload cans of garbage weighing from 180 to 300 pounds into a car eight feet high and that in rain, sleet or snow—the department refusing to allow the driver any help—with the result that the men had been injured as well as overworked, that the courts would undoubtedly "temper such unreasonable and unjust regulation with the season of reason and justice."

Strikebreakers Pelted With Bricks in the Bronx.

There was one serious riot in the Bronx during the morning. Two groups of carts were attacked by about 200 Italians, who showered the strikebreakers with bricks and tried to cut the harness of the horses. Mounted police charged the crowds and the reserves of the Morrisania station were called out. They were pelted with bricks, but clubbed a pathway through the rioters with their nightsticks. Much of the garbage was dumped and the carts were escorted back to the stables half filled with refuse.

A mob stoned another group of carts at Fifteenth street and Ninth avenue. Two out of three men on one of the carts deserted it and ran. Two arrests were made.

Street Commissioner Edwards had hoped to have 2,000 men furnished him today, but he only got 200. As far as could be seen in a hasty survey of the downtown sections, the strike had brought about practically a complete tie-up.

When a squad of carts of the Street Cleaning Department reached Cortlandt avenue and 148th street today they were met with a concerted effort on the part of a throng that completely filled the streets, to cut the harness and drive the strikebreakers back to the stables. During the fight that ensued, Henry Wilson, 19 years old, a driver of one of the carts, was struck on the head with a brick that was thrown from a roof. He fell from the cart to the street, and the horse, taking fright, when it was struck by a bottle started running away, both wheels of the wagon passing over Wilson's legs.

SKELETON IDENTIFIED.

Bones Found in Brookville Field Those of Half-Witted Boy.

(Special to The Eagle.)

Glen Cove, L. I., November 10—It was determined today that the skeleton which Franklin W. M. Cutcheon yesterday found in a field near Brookville, while following the hounds of the Meadowbrook Hunt Club, was that of a half-witted German boy known as Herman, who disappeared last June.

Herman was employed by Thomas L. Bennett, a Mill Neck farmer, and last June suddenly became insane. He imagined that he was about to be taken up to heaven and was ordered by the Heavenly Father to discard his clothes.

He arrayed himself in old meal bags and then suddenly disappeared. No trace was ever found of him.

Acting Coroner W. E. Luyster of Glen Cove identified the skeleton by a peculiar formation of the teeth and by the fact that there were no signs of clothing around. There were decayed portions of meal bags lying around the skeleton.

Nothing can be learned of how the lad met his death.

LAY DYING IN STREET.

Unknown Laborer Found on Elmhurst Street Corner.

A man whose name cannot be learned was found in a dying condition on Broadway, near Victor place, Elmhurst, shortly after 2 o'clock this afternoon. He was removed to the Flushing Hospital. Ambulance Surgeon Booth and Dr. Schweickhardt of Elmhurst were both puzzled as to the cause of the man's condition.

A passerby said he had seen the man at the corporation yard, about four blocks away, drawing his pay from the city, by whom he was employed as a laborer.

It was said there that the man's name was not known to them, and that he had been employed about a week.

He was about 40 years old and poorly dressed.

STOUT STRINGS TIED TO "PASTOR'S" GIFTS

Russell's "Donations" to Watch Tower Bible and Tract Society Not So Generous.

KEPT REALTY IN HIS CONTROL

Loans From Various Women Figure Largely in the Transfer Papers. Voting Trust, Too.

One of the clever donations made by "Pastor" Russell was that of his extensive Pittsburg properties to the Watch Tower Bible and Tract Society. "Pastor" Russell declares on all possible occasions that he has donated all his earthly goods to the Lord, but he fails to add that there is a string tied to every single donation. This string consists in a polite demand for voting shares in the society at the rate of one share for every $10 worth donated. Moreover, he retains the presidency and actual control of the society.

Extracts from the minute books of this society, which were obtained by court order at the time Mrs. Russell was fighting to secure enough of her husband's fortune to enable her to live, throw an interesting light on these donations. They also show "Pastor" Russell's success in getting liberal donations from his women followers:

How One "Donation" Was Made.

The following copy from the minute book of the Watch Tower Society, pages 39 to 41, figured prominently in the alimony proceedings against "Pastor" Russell, as Exhibit 4. It reads as follows:

"March 1, 1898—By order of the board of directors, the following letter from Bro. C. T. Russell is spread on the minutes of the society.

(Signed) "E. C. HENNINGES,
"Acting Secretary.

"'I herewith tender to the Watch Tower Bible and Tract Society as a gift (subject to a mortgage and certain obligations of indebtedness, etc., hereinafter named) the building now occupied in part by the society, known as the Bible House, and situated in the First Ward of Allegheny City, Nos. 56, 58 and 60 Arch street. A waranty deed for same (dated March 1, 1898,) accompanies this letter. I beg that the society will accept the gift and use it for the furtherance of our Maser's cause.

"'There is against the said property a mortgage of $15,000, bearing 4½ per cent. interest per annum, dated December, 1897, at five years, owned by the Public Library of Philadelphia. The property was appraised recently at $36,000, but I have valued it in the deed at $34,000, leaving an equity of $19,000. Included in which are several obligations, which, in accepting this gift, the society assumes. These amount in all to nearly seven thousand dollars ($7,000), more or less, of which may eventually become gifts to the society from the present creditors. They are:

(1) A loan from Mrs. Clara B. Johnson (now of Scranton, Pa.), interest at 6 per cent. per annum $1,500.00
(2) A loan from Bro. W. Hope, of Shoal Lake, Man., Canada, interest at 4 or 6 per cent per annum 1,412.00
(3) A loan from Mrs. Mary Turner, now of Bennett, Pa., interest at 6 per cent. per annum (subject only to personal demand—otherwise a gift) 1,000.00
(4) A loan from Mrs. M. V. Pennington (now of Fredericton, N. B., Canada), interest at 8 per cent., payable until her death, when the debt is cancelled 800.00
(5) A loan without interest, subject only to personal demand, from Mrs. Fannie Rathbun, Bay City, Mich.... 199.35
(6) A loan from Mrs. Dr. Tackabury formerly Mrs. G. D. Clowes, of Fostoria, Ohio, at 6 per cent. per annum 600.00
(7) Mrs. Lena Guibert (now of Allegheny, Pa.), payable if called for personally or by order 53.00
(8) Mrs. L. E. Boos (now of Allegheny, Pa.), at 6 per cent.—a loan payable on demand, with notice 1,000.00

Total $6,965.35

"'Some of these obligations are represented by notes of hand, and some by book account credits.

"'Additionally I except and reserve (for so long as I shall live, and so long as the society shall occupy the premises) a study room and a sleeping room on the top floor, and office space on the first floor as at present.

"'If accepted as above (by the board of directors for the society), I request that the foregoing be recorded on the society's record books, and that I be given the usual credit in the society's voting shares, viz.: Twelve hundred (1,200) shares on this account.

"'Very truly, your brother and servant,
(Signed) "'C. T. RUSSELL.'"

The "Donation" Duly Accepted.

Having duly placed Brother Russell's letter on record, Brother Russell, who presided over the meeting of the directors of the society at which Brother Russell's letter was received, put the resolution as to accepting Brother Russell's donations in exchange for voting shares of the society of which Brother Russell is president. The exchange of the property for voting shares was agreed to, as the following extract from the minute shows:

"The gift of our brother, C. T. Russell, is, on behalf of the society accepted with appreciation, credit for 1,200 shares being given, and the acting secretary requested to spread our brother's letter and our acceptance on the minutes.

(Signed)

"C. T. RUSSELL, President.
"H. WEBER, Vice President.
"E. C. HENNINGES,
"ROSE BALL HENNINGES,
"O. A. KOETITZ."

This is only one of the many donations which Brother Russell made to the Watch Tower Corporation. They are recorded at intervals in the society's minute book. About the time that Mrs. Russell was trying to collect alimony they were particularly numerous, which induced the courts to declare that some of them were a fraud on her, and that they were made with intent to defraud her.

Despite the Court's declaration, Russell continued to fight against paying any alimony to Mrs. Russell. He used every device known to the law to fight his wife's claim. Through Congressman Stephen G. Porter, her attorney, she finally appealed to the Court of Common Pleas for an attachment. It was promptly granted by Judge Macfarlane, to whom the appeal on behalf of Mrs. Russell was made. In his decision Judge Macfarlane said: "To refuse an attachment would be to allow any respondent to put his property in the hands of a friend who is amenable to his will, and then defy the power of the Court."

F. H. MC CONNEL DIES AT SEA.

Word was received today by Mrs. W. H. Smith of 1236 Bedford avenue of the death of her son, Frank Howard McConnell, on the steamship Baltic of the White Star Line. His death occurred Tuesday of heart trouble.

Mr. McConnell was coming to Brooklyn to visit his mother. He was a resident of Southport, England, and leaves a widow and a child. The remains will be brought to his mother's home, where the funeral services will be held. The interment will be in Greenwood Cemetery.

"MAY I RETURN LOOT?" ASKED POLITE BURGLAR

theater on Election night and went out to East New York on speculation. He needed some money and he adopted burglary to get it. He frankly admitted, from the time of his arrest, that he was guilty, and when he was "finger printed" by Lieutenant Morris Eckler at local headquarters there was additional evidence against him. His finger prints tallied to a dot with those which were found on the outside of a wine bottle which has been handled. The mark of his right thumb was also plainly imprinted on a broken pane of window glass, which he had shattered in his efforts to get into Mrs. Swift's house.

Mrs. Swift Disturbed Over Notoriety.

Mrs. Swift took pains to call up an Eagle reporter this afternoon to tell him the sequence of events which led to the capture of the burglar. She was disturbed over the notoriety that the case had brought her, but she wished to have it distinctly understood that the arrest was made through her act and that the police simply responded to her call when she had the burglar practically in her custody.

"It was so simple," said she. "The man, I am convinced, is not responsible for his actions, but whether he is responsible or no, I was glad this morning that he was in custody and that I had received my property. As a matter of fact, I would rather have lost it all than have had the notoriety that this case has brought me."

"I do not want to do an injustice to anyone, and I should hate to think that I was the means of sending a mentally incompetent man to prison. That is why I asked Magistrate Naumer this morning if it was not possible to have this unfortunate person sent to some place where his mental condition might be under observation."

NEWS FROM OLD QUEBEC.

Guide Mitchell Drops In With Interesting Items.

Guide Mitchell from Quebec arrived in town this morning to fulfill his engagement with the Department of Education for a series of lectures, entitled "Historic Quebec, the City of Samuel Champlain." To an Eagle reporter he gave the following items of news from that quaint old city:

A fine new monument to the famous French General, Montcalm, was unveiled on the Grand Allee on October 15. A large new wing is being erected to the Provincial Parliament Building. The old buildings have been removed and the work has been commenced on a magnificent new wing to the Chateau Frontenac.

The old and famous Champlain Market, under the Dufferin Terrace, has been demolished, and in its place is being erected a fine new station for the Grand Trunk-Pacific Railway, at a cost of $800,000. The piers for the new Quebec bridge across the St. Lawrence, which fell four years ago, are about completed.

COUNTY CANVASSERS TO MEET

Row Likely Over the Chairmanship, Who Has Patronage.

County Clerk Henry P. Molloy announced today that he had issued a call for a meeting of the Board of County Canvassers to be held on Monday of next week at 11 o'clock in his office in the Hall of Records. The board is composed of Brooklyn members of the Board of Aldermen, and like last year's board, will consist of twelve Republican members and twelve Democrats. Their work is to canvass the returns sent in by the election boards from every voting place in the city and certify to their correctness before the returns are filed as county records.

There is likely to be a lively row over the chairmanship of the canvassers, because the chairman distributes the patronage which consists of clerkships and accountants who do the figuring. Last year there was such a long deadlock over the selection that it had to be decided by drawing lots, after an agreement had been reached that the patronage be divided.

$10,000 PEARLS "VALUELESS."

Negress and Pawnshop Clerk Arrested for Robbery of Sophie Brandt.

Sophie Brandt, formerly one of the best known singers at the Metropolitan Opera House, lost over $11,000 worth of jewelry, she claims, on October 16. Detectives who worked on the case took the singer in a taxicab to 433 West Fifty-second street, Manhattan, this morning, where on the top floor they found a West Indian negress whom the artist identified as Nattie Porlley, who had been a maid for her up to the morning of October 16, when the jewels were missed. The negress was arrested. The police say she broke down and

MEN WHO KNOW RUSSELL WRITE TO THE EAGLE

They Have Learned What Manner of Man the "Pastor" Is.

MR. HALL WORKED WITH HIM,

But He Is Not Doing So Now—Connecticut Man Goes Daft Over R....ll's Doctrines.

The Eagle has received two interesting letters bearing on "Pastor" Russell, one from Denver, Col., the other from Cromwell, Conn. The Denver letter is from Frank L. Hall, who is doing social service work in that city. Mr. Hall was once a Russellite, but now belongs to the increasing number of those who have had their eyes opened to Russell's true character.

The Cromwell letter declares that a man worth $500,000 has gone daft over Russellism in that city. His letter follows:

Editor of The Brooklyn Daily Eagle:

I was surprised to read in your issues of the 28th and 29th of October that "Pastor" Russell had brought action against you for the publication of some news relative to his financial transactions as to "Miracle Wheat," etc., and as I was associated with him and his followers for a number of years and am quite familiar with his teachings, am surely interested in the outcome of this action.

Until about a year ago I thought him a man worthy of the greatest honor and esteem, even if he had his faults like all of us, but since that time evidence has come to my knowledge which leads me to believe he has fallen into the error common to practically all who become at all prominent in religous life, or, in fact, public life in any of its many lines of activity—he has adopted the methods of the world instead of the Lord Jesus, whom he still professes to follow.

Instead of interpreting the Master's words as Tolstoy and others did, and suffering what he believed to be wrong, abiding the Lord's due time for correcting injustices, he rather adopts the opposite course, and in this case needs, it seems to me, to apply the twenty-third of Matthew, ont only to others, but, first of all, to himself, particularly the third verse. A goodly number of his former "followers," I happen to know from correspondence and by meeting them at different times, will agree with me in this application of Scripture as well as to apply the title of "that servant" in a different way from what we formerly did.

We still believe him to be "that servant," as foretold in the latter part of Matthew xxiv, but instead of being the faithful servant, he is now the "wicked servant," and is, perhaps, fulfilling prophecy in a different way from what he did formerly, and the "fellow servants," it seems to us, have for some time past been getting ready to begin the work of sifting another "system" from its errors and wrong practices and teachings.

Quite likely the Boston representatives of this movement will inform you of their views if you are interested, and there are others also scattered all over the civilized world.

Am glad to say I am now associated with people whom I believe are above such practices as you describe, or at least they endeavor to put into practice the principles of the Golden Rule and also do something as well as talk about the "sweet bye and bye." I refer to the Y. M. C. A. and the Men's Forward Movement work of Denver and the entire world.

Was glad to see your paper on file in the Y. M. C. A. reading rooms here, and hope it may continue to come to us.

FRANK L. HALL.

3555 Zuni street, Denver, Col., November 2, 1911.

In the following letter Charles Collard Adams, M. A., secretary-treasurer of the Society of Middletown Upper Houses, offers his co-operation to expose "Pastor" Russell:

Editor The Brooklyn Daily Eagle:

I have seen a reference to the suit of "Pastor" Russell and the "Miracle wheat, $1 a pound," at the Brooklyn Tabernacle. I was an editor for some years, but am retired. If copies of your paper's articles and cartoons could be sent to me I would gladly send stamps in return.

We, in this village, have a resident, worth half a million, who has gone daft over Russellism, and has some followers.

I obtained, through a college friend in Pittsburg, a copy of the court record refusing to favor the motion of Russell to reopen his wife's divorce decree. It refers to 150 pages of evidence in the trial which gave her a divorce from him. Perhaps you have knowledge of the language of the record. I have it laid away for reference, and you can have it if it is desired.

I wonder that so many papers give Monday space to his sermons.

LUTHER LEAGUES IN SESSION.

Birthday of Famous Theologian Appropriately Observed Here.

The annual meeting of the combined Luther leagues of Brooklyn was held on Thursday evening, in St. Matthew's Evangelical Lutheran Church, Sixth avenue and Second street. The occasion was in the nature of a memorial to Dr. Martin Luther, whose birthday was commemorated yesterday. Special music was provided by the Brooklyn Lutheran Choral Society, under the direction of Organist Switzer, of Christ Church, augmented by the well-trained choir of St. Matthew's Church.

The principal speakers were the Rev. F. B. Clausen of Epiphany Lutheran Church, Manhattan, and the Rev. G. W. Enders, D.D., president of the Board of Home Missions and pastor of Christ Evangelical Church, York, Pa. George Interman, president of the Central Luther League, presided and a short address of welcome was made by the pastor, the Rev. G. B. Young, to which the president of the Central League responded. A profusion of flowers and autumn leaves made the altar unusually attractive.

Both addresses aimed to apply the principles of the great Lutheran leader to modern life. The power of the word of God was the keynote.

Dr. Enders dwelt more upon the statistical records of the lutheran church, calling attention to the fact that it ranks third among the Protestant denominations of this country; that if the colored race were not counted it would stand first, and that it is the largest Protestant denomination in the world.

WILL TALK ON AUSTRALIA.

Mari A. Cuming to Address West End Board of Trade.

The next regular meeting of the West End Board of Trade will be held at Day's Hall, Third avenue and Fifty-fourth street, on November 14. One of the features of the meeting will be an address by Mari A. Cuming, who has recently completed a tour of the world, and who will speak on "Impressions of Australia."

The business of the meeting will be the nominating of officers for the coming year, a discussion of the police problem as confronting the neighborhood in which the board is working; reports of the chairmen of the various standing committees and, probably, a resolution asking Governor Dix to take some action looking to the improvement of transit facilities.

CITY DEATH RATE LOWER.

Com'r Lederle's Figures Show October, 1911, Healthiest in 13 Years.

Health Commissioner Lederle announces that the number of deaths recorded during October, 1911, was 5,495, giving a death rate of 12.99 per 1,000, compared with 5,597 deaths and a rate of 13.73 in the corresponding month of 1910, a decrease of 102 deaths and 0.74 of a point in the death rate. The causes showing a decreased mortality were as follows: Typhoid fever, 10; scarlet fever, 5; tuberculosis of the lungs, 8; other forms of tuberculosis, 9; lobar pneumonia, 29; diarrhoeal diseases under 5 years of age, 164; appendicitis, 28; congenital debility and marasmus, 29.

Those causes showing an increased mortality were: Malarial fever, 4; measles, 2; whooping cough, 13; diphtheria and croup, 2; cancer, 53; heart and kidney diseases, 101; cirrhosis of the liver, 28. The infectious and communicable diseases amenable to public sanitary control continue to show a decreased prevalence, while, on the other hand, the causes of death, such as cancer, heart and kidney diseases and cirrhosis of the liver, which are outside the influence of sanitary intervention, show a considerably increased fatality.

Comparing the mortality in October, 1911, with the average of the corresponding month of the previous thirteen years —since the formation of the Greater City —corrected to correspond with the increase in population, the fact stands out prominently that the mortality during the past month was lower than that of any month of the period in question, the next lowest being that of October, 1910. The average death rate for the thirteen Octobers was 15.97 per 1,000, against 12.99 in that of 1911, the latter month showing a decrease of 2.98 points per 1,000; that is, if the former rate had prevailed during October, 1911, there would have been 6,718 deaths reported, as against 5,495, which actually occurred.

BURGLARS MADE GOOD HAUL.

Got $500 Worth of Jewelry From Grasekamp House.

Charles Grasekamp, who lives at 54 Clifton place, and who conducts a meat market at the corner of Grand avenue and Clifton place, next door to his residence, had his house entered on Thursday night, and jewelry which he values at about $500 stolen.

Mr. Grasekamp had gone to the theater on Thursday night but, as the play did not please him, he returned to his home at about 10:10 o'clock, leaving his family at the playhouse. His chauffeur went into the house to get his overcoat, and says that he heard two sharp whistles at the time. Neither he nor Grasekamp thought anything about it then and, after the chauffeur had returned, they drove around until shortly after 11 o'clock, when Mr. Grasekamp and his family returned for the night.

On entering the house, they found that it had been ransacked and that the jewelry was missing. The thieves had gained entrance to the house through the kitchen window and apparently had had plenty of time to complete their search. Mr. Grasekamp reported the robbery to the police, and they are now working on it. However, he has an idea that he knows who the thief or thieves are, and that the jewelry will be returned in the near future. He said, today, that he believed the persons who had taken his goods would attempt to make some sort of arrangement with him in order to escape arrest.

'NOLLE PROSSED' SCARED HER

Woman Imagined It Meant Terrible Calamity and Tried to End Life.

Atlanta, Ga., November 11—"Nolle prossed," coming from the lips of her attorney who was telling her of the outcome of a case against her, so terrified Mrs. Theresa Bates, a young Hungarian woman, that she tried to commit suicide here yesterday afternoon.

Unfamiliar with court terms the woman thought that some terrible calamity was about to descend upon her. When she heard the result of her case she dashed for an open window in the attorney's office on the fourth floor of an office building, and but for prompt action on the part of several men would have fallen to the pavement below. As soon as possible a clear explanation of the term was given and the woman felt like life again was worth the living.

PRENDERGAST BOOM FOR GOVERNOR LAUNCHED

Brooklyn Progressive Republicans Want the Controller Named.

BARNES TO BACK WADSWORTH

Roosevelt Expected to Come Out Strong for Prendergast, in Return for Favors Rendered at Saratoga.

"We are all behind Controller William A. Prendergast for Governor, and not Congressman William M. Calder," said one of the leading progressive Republicans of Brooklyn today, commenting upon an attempt to launch a boom for Calder's nomination yesterday. He expressed surprise at the attempt to make a demonstration for Calder in the newspapers, and said that the only reason he could see for doing it was to create a diversion which would permit Prendergast to be sprung as a "dark horse" later in the race. It has been the plan of a number of Brooklyn Republican leaders for months to present Prendergast's name to the State convention for the nomination for Governor. William Randolph Hearst is very friendly toward Mr. Prendergast, and it is believed would support him for the governorship.

Opposed to Prendergast, it is believed, State Chairman Barnes will back the candidacy of James W. Wadsworth, jr., of Livingston County, former Speaker of the Assembly, whom Roosevelt when Governor picked out for Speaker over the heads of the bosses, although Wadsworth was then a very young man. It is regarded as practically certain that the State Convention will have Wadsworth's name put before it next year, for it is believed that this is what Barnes has been working for since he took the State Chairmanship.

Roosevelt Believed to Be for Prendergast.

It is figured that Roosevelt will not be for Wadsworth in this contest, although he did support him for Speaker; but that the former President will support Prendergast. The Controller greatly aided Roosevelt last year in the fight on the "Old Guard" at the Saratoga convention, and there was some talk at that time of selecting him for the nomination in place of Stimson. Roosevelt, it is predicted, will not sit idly by and let Barnes dictate the ticket, after the way in which Barnes fought him at the Saratoga convention. Wadsworth is very friendly to Barnes, and he is generally understood to be opposed to many of the "Roosevelt policies."

Naval Officer Kracke is very close to Colonel Roosevelt and should a line of division occur in Kings County, Kracke would line up with his friend from Oyster Bay, it is thought, and would support Prendergast if he should be the Colonel's candidate.

The Republican leaders of acumen are already laying wires for the coming year. The first sharp division in the State will probably come over the selection of a Speaker of the next Assembly. Edwin A. Merritt, jr., of St. Lawrence County, is the leading candidate for Speaker, and is supposed to have Barnes' support. It is possible that the Roosevelt-Parsons group may oppose him for the place, on the ground that he lined up with the "Old Guard" at Saratoga, and if they do so, they have a nephew of Roosevelt, in the person of Assemblyman Theodore Douglas Robinson, to start the row. Robinson smashed the machine in Herkimer County and was elected this year after the hottest kind of a fight with the local Republican boss.

It is not yet known how the fifteen Republican Assemblymen from Brooklyn will line up in the event of a contest for the speakership, but it is understood that while Calder favors Merritt, Kracke would oppose him. This may precipitate a split in the Brooklyn organization, something the leaders wish by every means to avoid.

Prendergast, it was pointed out by his admirers, would make a strong candidate for Governor. He is a powerful speaker, and a stirring campaigner, and his record as Controller has won much commendation. He has been on the side of the Progressives, and is known throughout the State. His friends have been at work in preparation for 1912, and they report that they have secured pledges of support from a number of up-State counties. In case the Controller should be elected to the Governorship, Mayor Gaynor would have the appointment of his successor, who would serve until the first of January following the next general election.

FOR TOMKINS PLAN.

South Brooklyn Board of Trade to Report on Waterfront Improvement.

Hard at work in its advocacy of Dock Commissioner Tomkins' plan for the municipalization and full development of the South Brooklyn waterfront, the committee on piers and bridges of the South Brooklyn Board of Trade will in all likelihood have a detailed report in readiness for the next meeting of the organization, and may also suggest determined measures for the quick realization of the project.

Chairman J. William Haviland of the committee said yesterday that it was impossible to outline at this time the plan to be followed, but he intimated that an energetic campaign is in preparation.

"We are making a careful canvass of the large business interests along and near the waterfront and in due time will be able to inform the board and the public, through the press, of the exact sentiment among our residents and merchants. All I want to say now is, that the Tomkins idea is a good one and that the municipalization of our waterfront will prove of immense benefit not only to Brooklyn but to the entire city. If any opposition develops it will either be due to insufficient understanding of the subject or to selfish interests, and in the former instance we are ready with the proofs and in the latter we need not hesitate to go ahead without hesitation. "It is not true that private owners of waterfront property would suffer by the execution of the plan. The city is not in the habit of deliberately injuring big business interests and, as a matter of fact, the latter may ultimately become convinced of the justice of the plan.

"So far as we can see, all the important shippers of South Brooklyn favor the Tomkins plan. Certainly, the large majority of the members of the South Brooklyn Board of Trade is for it. Our waterfront has an immense future and immediate development is a necessity."

BOY FORGER PLEADS GUILTY.

He Admits Robbing Firm by Whom He Was Employed.

A 15-year-old boy, who first gave his name as Harry Grand, but who later said he was Harry Grandofsky, of 200 Sackman street, this borough, pleaded guilty to a charge of forgery in the Children's Court, Manhattan, yesterday. The lad was employed as an errand boy by Favor, Ruhl & Co., of 49 Barclay street, Manhattan, and the officers of the Children's Society say that he carried on his high-financing alone.

The firm noticed that collections mysteriously disappeared, and it developed that checks sent in had been taken, the indorsements forged and the paper deposited. Detectives learned that checks from Wheeling, W. Va., had been deposited in the name of "John Wilson," in a bank at Brownsville. Harry's description, as the depositor, was secured at the bank.

ROYALTY OFF FOR DURBAR.

Warm Send-Off for King George and Queen Mary.

London, November 11—King George and Queen Mary left London this morning for Portsmouth to board the new liner Medina, which will carry them to India for the imperial durbar, to be held in Delhi next month.

As this was their majesties' last appearance in the capital for nearly three months, their departure was made with much ceremonial. Accompanied by the Prince of Wales and Princess Mary and escorted by imperial Horse Guards, they drove in an open carriage over a roundabout way to Victoria Station.

The streets were lined with people, who gave the royal ones an enthusiastic sendoff. There was a great gathering at the station, those who had come to say farewell, including Queen Mother Alexandra, all the other members of royalty, the Ministers, officials of the India Office and diplomats. Among the latter was the American Ambassador Mr. Reid, with whom was Mrs. Reid.

Portsmouth, Eng., November 11—The Medina, carrying King George and Queen Mary to India, left the harbor at 2:30 o'clock this afternoon to the accompaniment of a royal salute by the guns of the warships and forts. Enormous crowds on the esplanada at Southsea cheered rousingly as the royal vessel passed out.

Along the seafront off Spithead eleven Dreadnoughts and attendant cruisers awaited the Medina and led her out to sea. The Admiralty yacht Enchantress, with the Lords of the Admiralty, immediately followed the Medina, and the four first-class cruisers, the Cochrane, Argyll, Defence and Natal, which, in command of Sir Colin Keppel, will convoy their majesties to the Far East, completed the pageant.

The fleet is due to arrive at Calcutta during the first week of December and two days later the party will proceed by train to Delhi, which they should reach on December 7. There will be elaborate ceremonies at Calcutta and the durbar proper, at which His Majesty will formally assume the title of King-Emperor, will be held at Delhi on December 12.

FIRST AID FOR PRODIGALS.

Andress S. Floyd Tells of His Soul-Saving Station.

A large audience assembled in the lecture hall of Plymouth Church last evening, to hear Andress S. Floyd, founder of the "Self Mastery Colony" at Union, Union County, N. J., speak on "My Family of Prodigal Sons." He told his hearers of the work that is being done to save men from jail by their own efforts and to give them another start in life.

Mr. Floyd and his wife preside over the colony at Union, where the intemperate, the stranded, the discouraged, the homeless and the prodigal sons come voluntarily in their hour of need. The method of treatment is akin to that of Judge Lindsay with homeless offenders. The men come without recommendation, and no payment is demanded for their stay. The colony is really a home for the friendless, for if one comes with a recommendation he will not be received. The applicant may come and go as he pleases, and his stay may be as long or short as is his will. All that is asked of him is seven hours a day work in any of the various occupations about the place, for which he receives board, clothing, tobacco and 50 cents or more a week.

The colony owns about fifty acres of land in Union County, practically all of which is good farm land. At present, Mr. Floyd told his hearers, he has about a thousand under his care.

PRISONERS HIS BENEFACTORS.

Collection Made Up to Pay Fine of Bluejacket.

Boston, November 11—In the detention pen of the Criminal Court yesterday, Jack Dawson, man-o-war's man, sat dejected with a jail sentence in prospect because he lacked $5 to pay a fine for having been too boistrous. To a convicted thief in the pen with him he confided his troubles, adding "the worst of it is that my enlistment is about up and I'll lose my rating."

The thief took up a collection among some companions in the pen and handed the sailor $5.20, explaining "me and my pals won't have much use for coins for some months to come, so take the stuff and welcome."

The sailor paid his fine and was discharged. His benefactors went to jail.

SEND SEAMEN HOME.

Crew of the William A. Park Befriended Here.

The nine shipwrecked seamen from the four-masted American schooner William A. Park, who were picked up off the coast of Newfoundland by the steamship Elaine, on October 9, and taken to Havre, France, then sent to this city by Consul Downing, of Havre, have returned to their homes. On their arrival in this city on Wednesday they were taken in charge by the American Seamen's Friend Society and helped on their feet in the way of lodgings, meals and clothing. The men lost everything, and were practically destitute. The society also furnished transportation for the men, all of whom, except the captain, came from Boston, Baltimore, New Bedford and other shipping points.

Captain William A. Reed of the wrecked schooner was profuse in his gratitude to the American Seamen's Friend Society for the aid given his men. He stated that they are sober and industrious seamen, who had been advanced all their wages and had nothing coming to them from the owners.

CHINESE STUDENTS IN STRAITS.

Without Funds Through Failure to Receive Remittances From Home.

Philadelphia, November 11—Nine Chinese government students at the University of Pennsylvania, who have found themselves without funds through the failure to receive their regular remittances, have been given a helping hand by the trustees of the institution.

The failure to receive funds from home is attributed to the revolution, and the students say they are willing to wait if the reformers ultimately win. The trustees have granted to the students extension of time in which to pay their tuition fees and dormitory expenses.

Chinamen in Twelve Institutions Ask the President to Intervene With the Powers.

Chinese student clubs of twelve universities and colleges throughout the United States sent President Taft today a resolution protesting against suggested foreign interference in the Chinese revolution and requesting him to use his personal and official influence to induce the Powers to abstain from arresting the conflict.

The resolution was adopted jointly by telegraph, acording to C. S. Huang, president of the Columbia Chinese Students Club. Signatory to the document are the Chinese Students Clubs of the following universities and colleges: Amherst, Columbia, Cornell, Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Michigan Agricultural College, Northwestern University, Ohio State, Purdue, Illinois, Missouri, Valparaiso and Wisconsin. The resolution reads as follows:

"Whereas we, the undersigned Chinese Students Clubs in the United States, believe that the present armed conflict in our country between the Government and certain provinces thereof will ultimately promote the welfare of China as a nation, the contending parties being united in the object which both are seeking to attain, namely genuine political reforms, though they are apparently at odds as to the manner and means of accomplishing that common object;

"Whereas, we believe further that irrespective of its real cause and its probable outcome, the said conflict, so far as it does not jeopardize the rights and interests of foreign Powers as sanctioned by treaty or the law of nations, is a matter which of right concerns China exclusively;

"Whereas, according to the press reports on the contrary, certain Powers are contemplating without just cause to intervene in the said conflict; and

"Whereas, we believe that such or any act of intervention in China by a foreign Power or Powers, being in itself a hostile act, will naturally and surely provoke ill feeling and just resentment on the part of the entire Chinese people and thereby needlessly create difficulties in the friendly intercourse between the Chinese Empire and the foreign Powers; be it

"Resolved, that we jointly petition and do hereby petition the President of the United States to exert his personal influence and exercise the good offices of the American Government to induce the Powers, one and all, to abstain from interfering in the forcible contest for national progress which now prevails in our country, to the end that good-will and friendship may continue to grow in the relations of China and foreign nations."

AMATEUR DRAMATICS

Following their original custom of presenting only first-class performances, and in a manner as near professional as possible, the Majestic Players have selected the three-act comedy, "The Butterflies," which they will give as their second performance for the season at Labor Lyceum on Thursday, November 23. In this play Franklin Whitmarr will be seen in the leading role of Frederick Ossian, and promises to score as decided a success as he did in the Majestic Players' first performance this season, "What Happened to Jones."

For the past two weeks the members of the cast have been busy rehearsing under the direction of Joseph M. Collins, who has gained quite a reputation for the way in which he stages all his plays. The cast of "The Butterflies" is as follows:

Frederick Ossian	Franklin Whitmarr
Andrew Strong	Harry W. Vough
Hiram Green	Frank Mantell
Barrington Green	Alexander A. Collins
Nathaniel Bilser	Frank Jenning
Coddle	J. Verner Palmer
Miriam Stuart Dodge	Evelyn Collins
Mrs. Stuart Dodge	Marie Palmer
Mrs. Ossian	Irene Collins
Susanne Green	Bertha Hamere

What promises to be the best production ever staged by the Mercedes Players attached to Our Lady of Mercy Church is the new three-act farce comedy, "It Keeps a Man Busy," to be presented November 23 at Prospect Hall. The society has been greatly strengthened by the admission of James Chew, who is well known in amateur theatricals in Brooklyn. Mr. Chew will play the part of Anthony Goodley, D.D. The cast, an excellent one, selected by the coach, Jeremiah F. Donovan, includes several members prominent for their parts in previous plays. Several amusing specialties are to be introduced, thus bringing the performance right up to the minute. It is confidently expected by the members and their many friends that the evening will witness a very successful production. As usual, dancing will follow the play. The cast will be:

Jones	James W. Reugan
Richard Heatherly	William A. Mahoney
Ebenzer Goodley	Edward T. Connell
Anthony Goodley	James M. Chew
William Bigbee	Lawrence J. Dowling
Thomas Holder	Vincent P. Morris
Fuller	Jeremiah Dee
Percival	John O'Kane
Terrence	James Hogarth
Clesie	Mary F. Wilson
Marjorie	Kathryn G. Kelly
Mrs. Goodley	Anna V. Dowling
Alvina	Mary W. Chew
Minerva	Mary Quinn
Gwendolyn	Gertrude Coakley

On the evenings of November 27, 29 and 30 the Parish Club of St. Benedict's Church, at the school hall, Herkimer street, near Ralph avenue, will present a minstrel show and vaudeville. The minstrel show is under the direction of Edward Atzert, who has for some time past been hard at work getting the different parts in shape. John Hudert, Pete Ferber, Fred Lang, jr., Andrew J. Fredericks, Joseph E. Williams and Joseph A. Bier will be seen as the end men, while Joseph Batton and William Cummings have been selected as the soloists. The programme of vaudeville, which will be given in conjunction with the minstrel show, has been carefully selected, and judging from present indications the entire affair will prove to be the huge success expected, as the different committees in charge of the undertaking have left nothing undone which would in any way enchance the ultimate success of this the first undertaking of the Parish Club.

DR. CADMAN'S CHURCH TO BE REDEDICATED

Central Congregational Beautified and Extensive Improvements Made.

A LARGE NEW ORGAN.

Fine Chancel, Choir Stalls and Rooms and Interior Newly Decorated.

After having been closed since early in the past summer, Central Congregational Church, which has undergone extensive improvements, bringing the edifice up to date in every way, will be reopened and rededicated at the service tomorrow morning. The improvements, with the parish house, have cost in the neighborhood of $65,000, and the money has all been provided. The pastor, the Rev. Dr. S. Parkes Cadman, will preach the rededicatory sermon in the morning, and there will be a special musical service in the evening, under the direction of Organist Frederick Preston. The large vested choir will sing, and the organ, one of the largest in Brooklyn, will be used. The details of the improvements are interesting.

When the parish house, on Jefferson avenue, was erected, it included as a part of the operation the building of an extension to the main church, this extension covering a plot of ground 15x63 feet, and consisting only of the rough inclosing wall construction; but the fact that this portion of the work was completed made it possible to carry out the later alterations within the period of time occupied, probably saving from two to three months in the completion of the work.

The main building, being principally of frame construction, made it necessary to build the extension as a separate part, and as conditions exist the new extension receives no strength from the building proper, but contributes to the strength of the main structure.

The problem of the choir arrangements was necessarily restricted by existing conditions, the form of the auditorium and the size of the choir anticipated forcing the acceptance of an elliptical plan, with the whole choir, under the direct leadership of the organist, from the organ console on the pulpit platform. The seating capacity is ample for a choir of sixty, and this without in any way trespassing upon the main church space.

The new organ requires more than twice the area of the old organ, and this feature made the division of the organ a necessity, a condition, however, which inures to the best advantage from a tone point of view. The organ is operated by an electric organ blower, placed in the basement. The choir rooms are in each case under the organ, where all possible space has been utilized for them and where lockers, music racks, etc., have been placed. The space under the choir gallery is connected with the parish house, so that entrance may be had by passing from the main church through the choir rooms.

The operation of the new organ made the introduction of electricity into the building a necessity, and in place of the old lighting fixtures, with their unsightly reflectors, there have been substituted the simple electric fixtures now installed, the three ceiling fixtures having sixty 100-watt Tungsten lamps, while a system of hidden lights furnishes the necessary illumination for the platform and choir stalls.

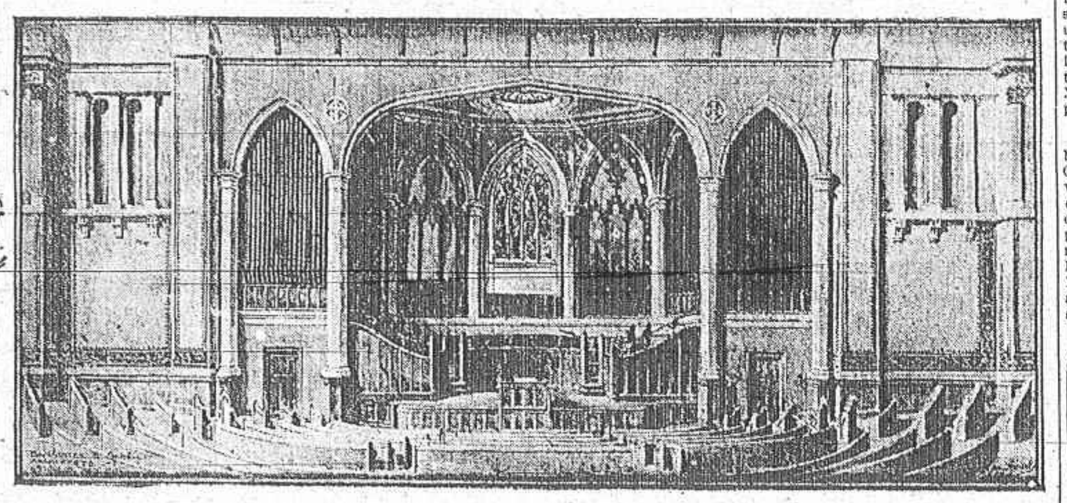

Some minor changes have been made which, while not apparent, are important. One is the placing of four short aisles in the rear of the main pew divisions; another is that by which the central section of pews at the junction of the aisles at the pulpit is made movable. In this way a large space can be cleared within a few minutes for the purpose of a wedding or other occasion. Another is the introduction of steam heat into the choir space from the parish house plant, necessary not only for the comfort of the choir but for the preservation of the organ.

To preserve soberness and quietness in the decorations a general tone was selected that would at the same time reduce the excessive width of the main auditorium and cause reflection of light to spread over unevenly lighted spaces. This was also helped by the installation of new windows, in light and harmonious colors, cut and leaded in simple patterns, with a slight enrichment added to the border.

With the new organ case and pews of oak, organ pipes of gold and a new figure window with light and strength of colors, a scheme was skillfully worked out. The two large wall panels have been covered with an allover interlacing design, while on the small panel, below the window, an ornament of conforming scale and color has been used, dividing the same into three sections to conform with the glass above. New carpets have been laid throughout the building, and the pulpit furniture, choir stalls and pews supplied with new cushions, in tones of green, harmonizing with the color scheme of the decoration. The exterior of the church building has been greatly improved by the removal of the storm doors from the main entrances, as well as by the removal of some of the gas lamps, while the entire structure has received several coats of paint, and now presents a fresh and inviting appearance.

C. MACK GIVES A BALL.

So Far, It Has Netted $400 for St. Joseph's Nursery.

An interesting feature of the bazar in aid of St. Joseph's Day Nursery that is being held at the parish hall, Dean street, near Vanderbilt avenue, is a donation from Connie Mack, manager of the Philadelphia Athletics, winners of the world's championship series. It consists of a regulation baseball, bearing the autograph signatures of all the heroes of his famous aggregation. Already the amount realized on the chance for the ball has reached nearly $400. The raffle will be held on Thanksgiving Eve, when the church will hold a euchre. By that time the amount of about $2,500 will be the total collection, it is expected.

There are many booths containing fancy articles, such as toys, cakes and dolls, as well as numerous articles suitable for the furnishing of the home. St. Joseph's Day Nursery houses nearly one hundred children daily.

The Rev. Ford C. Ottman, the well-known Bible teacher, will speak at the Fulton street noon prayer meeting each day next week.

158 ASSOCIATE MEMBERS JOIN BROOKLYN INSTITUTE

TREASURER'S GOOD REPORT.

It Shows a Cash Balance of $23,194.23 on October 31—Many Gifts Received.

A feature of the November meeting of the board of trustees of the Brooklyn Institute, held yesterday afternoon, was the attendance for the first time of William T. Evans of Montclair, N. J., who was elected a member at the closing meeting of last season, in June. Mr. Evans is a notable benefactor of the Institute and was introduced by President A. Augustus Healy. Several important gifts were accepted. Some of these have been mentioned in the newspapers, but these three, oil paintings, are more recent: A "Daphne," by William J. Baer, a Manhattan artist, from William A. Putnam and Walter H. Crittenden; a landscape with pool and trees, at the end of sunset, by George H. Bogart, and "The Dunes of Amagansett," by Arthur T. Hill, both from Charles A. Schieren, first vice president of the board. On Mrs. Schieren's motion Miss Emily Uuckles was elected a life member, and 158 new associate members were accepted.

President Healy presided. Others present were Samuel P. Avery, Henry H. Benedict, E. Le Grand Beers, George W. Brush, M.D.; John S. Frothingham, Frank Healy, Martin Joost, Elijah R. Kennedy, Clinton W. Ludlam, J. Adolph Mollenhauer, Horace J. Morse, Dick S. Ramsay, Francis H. Sloan, Herman Stutzer, Alfred T. White, Robert B. Woodward, the director; Professor Franklin W. Hooper and the acting curator-in-chief, Edward L. Morris.

The report of Treasurer Ludlam gave as its chief figures: Cash on hand October 1, $13,050.38; received during the month, $51,297.16; disbursed, $41,153.31; cash on hand October 31, $23,194.23. Professor Hooper's report mentioned the increased enrollment of new members, special events and that the Board of Estimate and Apportionment on October 31 had agreed to the budget of expenditures for the two museums and for the botanic garden and arboretum, and that Mayor Gaynor had asked the Institute for an itemized statement, which the Institute had sent on November 9. It said in part:

The enrollment this season of new members is 543, as against 485 a year ago and 482 in 1909. The experience during September and October indicates that we should take more radical steps for the increase in the membership, such steps to include the employment of a competent man to take charge of the increase.

The attendance to November 1 was 46,868, as against 30,892 a year ago, and 30,836 two years ago. The increase this year over last is 16,066. This very large number of most earnest people coming to the Institute (more than 1,500 per day on the average) indicates the vital influence of the institute in this community.

The most noticeable event during the month has been the series of readings from the Bible and related literature on Sunday afternoons by Miss Alice Chapman of Boston. The attendance on the first and second of these readings was a little over 1,300 each; on the third and fourth readings, 1,050 each, or the capacity of the Music Hall, from one to two hundred persons being turned away on each afternoon. There is no more effective teaching that can be done than through the simple and impressive reading of the Scriptures. The Institute could do no greater work than to employ Miss Chapman or other competent person to read the Scriptures and other related literature in all parts of the city.

E. L. Morris, the acting Curator-in-Chief, reported a considerable falling off in attendance for the month of October, the figures standing:

	1910.	1911.
Central Museum	22,573	17,704
Children's Museum	15,482	10,676

Gifts were reported as follows: From William J. Baer, William A. Putnam, Walter H. Crittenden, Charles A. Schieren, Stewart Culin, William T. Bather, Dr. William C. Braislin, Howard Cleaves, Austin Curtis, Mrs. C. Dower, Frank Morton Jones, John MacCullum, Miss Katharine H. Meigs, Robert W. Peavey, Prospect Park Zoological Garden, Robert H. Rockwell, Miss H. E. Tunison, Mrs. Van Woert and Mr. and Mrs. Zoebisch.

Besides these, report was made of numerous loans, purchases and exchanges.

Corresponding members elected were: Dr. Edgar F. Smith, president of the University of Pennsylvania; Dr. William F. Whitney, chief, chemist, General Electric Company, Schenectady, N. Y.; Dr. Julius Stieglitz, professor of analytical chemistry, University of Chicago; Dr. W. W. Milleband, Bureau of Standards, Washington, D. C.; Dr. Louis B. Kahlenberg, professor of chemistry, University of Wisconsin; Dr. Wilder D. Bancroft, professor of physical chemistry, Cornell University; Arthur A. Noyes, professor of chemistry, Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Boston; Dr. W. A. Noyes, professor of chemistry, University of Illinois, Urbana, Ill.; Charles E. Munroe, professor of chemistry, George Washington University, Washington, D. C.; Professor Theodore W. Richards of Harvard University.

BROOKLYN YOUTH IN TROUBLE

Arraigned in Court in Manhattan on Grand Larceny Charge.

Two youths of 17 years were arraigned yesterday before Magistrate House in the Essex Market Court charged with grand larceny and held in $2,500 bail each for further examination. They said in court they were Edward Bloom, of 266 New Lots road, Brooklyn, and Aaron Hymowitz, of 67 Forsyth street.

According to the story told in court by Detectives Harvey and Duthen of the Eldridge street station, they were walking along Forsythe street, when they saw Bloom carrying a large roll of cloth under his arm. The detectives followed the boy into a store and there they saw Hymowitz, with several other bolts of cloth.

The explanation given by the two youths did not satisfy the detectives, and they took them to the station.

As the detectives entered the station they met Hyman Weinstein of 52 Eldridge street coming out. When he saw the cloth he claimed, the detectives said, that it had been taken from his store twenty minutes before. He had just entered a complaint with the lieutenant.

FATE OF CHINESE THRONE RESTS ON ACTION OF YUAN

Partition of the Empire May Form the Basis for Pacification.

TIENTSIN ASSAULT DELAYED.

Rebels Fear Presence of Troops at Lanchu Whose Sympathies Are Doubtful.

Peking, November 12—(1:20 a.m.)—The fate of the throne apparently rests on the action of Yuan Shi Kai. The latest message from Yuan, who has been conducting negotiations with the rebel leader, General Li Yuen-Heng, indicates that a compromise is possible; that General Li was becoming less irreconcilable, but that there was a difference of opinion between General Li and his colleagues on the matter of policy.

According to foreign official telegrams from Hankow last evening, General Li, failing to exact better terms, might perhaps be prepared to agree to the partition of China, that portion of the country south of the Yang-tse becoming republican, Manchuria and Chi-li remaining monarchical, and the other provinces making their own choice.

Many of Li's followers demand the overthrow of the Government and scout the idea of dividing the empire. This is supposed to be the reason why General Li asked delegates from other provinces to meet at Wu-Chang, and appointed Hung-sing-ling, the most revolutionary leader, commander-in-chief, and retained for himself the Governor Generalship, which gives him greater freedom in administrative affairs. Huang-sing is making Hanyang his headquarters, where he is superintending the rebel defenses.

Prince Ching, the Acting Premier, and other high officials have guaranteed General Chang's safety, if he will go to Peking. General Chang has not yet agreed to do this, but remains at Lanchau with his troops, awaiting definite results from the Wu-Chang negotiations.

General Chang has not been permitted to resign his command, but has been granted so-called "sick leave."

The revolutionaries in Tien-tsin do not consider it wise at the present time to force the issue. They take this attitude because of the presence of the troops at Lanchau, whose sympathies are doubtful.

The Provincial Assembly at Mukden has vetoed the Russian loan and has informed the Viceroy that if it is taken up they will declare independence.

The government has made a request that the reported flight of the Emperor be officially denied.

The American Consul-General at Hankow, Roger S. Greene, reports that big guns have been mounted for an attack upon Han-Yang. Chinese officials report that the bombardment of Hanyang began yesterday.

Direct despatches from Kai-feng-fu, in Ho-nan province, say that the secession of that city has been delayed, owing to the opposition of the military.

FOR A CHINESE REPUBLIC.

Constitutional Convention at Shanghai to Establish It.

San Francisco, November 11—Details of a plan for a constitutional convention at Shanghai, at which the new Chinese republic will be established and a constitution adopted, was made public by leaders of the Chinese National Association here today.

Every province which has been taken by, has voluntarily joined the revolutionary cause will be represented and provision will be made for the admission of the other provinces later.

The delegates have been appointed by the revolutionary parties in the various provinces, but their actions will be submitted to a vote of the people for ratification after peace is restored. Eight

EAGLE RELIGIOUS EDITOR ANSWERS RUSSELL ATTACK

Franklin P. Sellers Tells How He Presumably Incurred the Dislike of the "Pastor."

DIDN'T PRINT SERMONS FREE.

Tells of Call From Man Whose Tale of Sorrow Was Inspired by Russellism.

Editor The Brooklyn Daily Eagle:

At the risk of being still further slandered, I must set down two or three things which I know about the "Pastor" Russell outfit. I have been quiet long enough. The first thing I know is that this borough has been literally strewn with a certain copy of the Brooklyn Tabernacle People's Pulpit, in an article in which several slurring references are made to the religious editor of The Eagle by leaving off the last letter of his name and boldly charging that this paper has been sold by him. The writer of the article is well known, but I have no desire to answer such a ridiculous charge in face of the standing which I am proud of having among the clergy of Brooklyn and, in fact, of the United States, who are not purchasing newspaper mention any more than I am receiving pay, except in the way of recognition by my honorable employers. I do possess a watch, highly prized, which was given to me as a testimonial by five ministers of the gospel, whose names are held in high esteem throughout this country and the world.

On the other hand, the religious editor of The Eagle has been approached not once, but many times, by agents of "Pastor" Russell, and his time taken up, hours together, in an endeavor to prove to him that the publication of "Pastor" Russell's sermons would add to the circulation of The Eagle at least 10,000 copies a week. I was told that I could have two columns a week at 25 cents a column. I had the temerity to say that that was too cheap, and this I suppose, increased his animus. It is not generally known, as acknowledged by Russell's agent, but it is true, that the only way in which the papers of New York City will print Pastor Russell's sermons, and this has been true for a year or more, is by his syndicate manager paying regular display advertisement rates, even if said sermons are dated Brooklyn, "On the Sea," London or elsewhere. The Eagle has charged for them, too, and probably made a sore spot in the Tabernacle outfit by so doing.

Another thing I know. For very good reasons I never attended a service held by "Pastor" Russell in the Brooklyn Academy of Music, never wrote a line about any of his meetings, nor about "Miracle Wheat," and therefore have never written any "sticker" about "Pastor" Russell or any of his followers. I have boldly said to his agents that I did not believe in his doctrines and that I knew his "Millennial Dawn" book had caused many a domestic entanglement. I am a private citizen and have a right to criticise any public teacher, but I have no right to defame anybody in print, and have never done so, and would be ashamed to pen the "Billingsgate" which "Pastor" Russell's editor has written under the heading "An Eagle Transformed." I am quite sure, also that "Pastor" Russell interviewed was never written by the "pastor" for he was on the sea, I am given to understand, when it was dictated.

Once more. Nearly two years ago a man of education came to see me one Sunday morning. He was from Chicago. His face bore marks of great trouble. He desired me to give him the names of some ministers who had previously held pastorates in Pittsburg, which city was the headquarters of the "Pastor" Russell outfit, before finding it probably more comfortable to come to Brooklyn.

My visitor, a true gentleman, had no harsh words for any one, but he was greatly distressed and was looking for a way out of it. He said that his married life had been supremely happy up to a year or two previously. There were two sons and two daughters. He had money in his own right; his wife had money in hers, they being about equally rich. It had been the custom, he said, for him to make in the household, as he was in a provision business, and it was agreed that neither was to use the other's surplus, about $5,000 each, but that his should go to the boys and hers to the girls. But the wife through constant visits from one of the Russell women agents, became enamored of the doctrines and told him her money would be given to "Pastor" Russell. This distressed him, and he tried to dissuade her on account of the agreement between them. Several conferences over the matter were held, but to no avail, and finally the wife said that if the husband did not stop talking about it she would give her money to Russell before she died.

The man was anxious to know what could be done. The sequel I never learned. I made bold to ask a Russell agent if "pastor" ever took money under such circumstances, and received the evasive answer that it would depend upon how the money was given. This was another way, probably, in which I got myself disliked and for which I am made subject to slanderous attacks. But the whole outfit is welcome. My stand-ing is secure because I try to behave myself, and am succeeding very well and have never been in the courts.

CITY-WIDE SEARCH FOR GIRL.

Thirteen-Year-Old Catherine Field Missing From Manhattan.

A city-wide search is being made by the police for 13-year-old Catherine Field, who until Friday morning lived with her family, Mrs. Mary Alice Geery, at 156 West Twentieth street, Manhattan.

According to Mrs. Geery, who reported the girl missing last night, the girl left her home on Friday morning with her school books. Inquiries at Public School No. 45, in West Twenty-fourth street, elicited the information that she did not appear at school.

Her disappearance was reported to the police of the West Twentieth Street Station and detectives were assigned to the case. Efforts to learn the whereabouts of the girl proved ineffectual.

The police last night sent out a general alarm for the girl, who is described as being four feet eight inches in height, weighing ninety pounds, having dark complexion, hair and eyes, and wearing when last seen a dark blue suit, a white shirtwaist and a black velvet hat.

NO MORE U.S. SHIPS FOR CHINA

Present Force Sufficient to Watch Interests of Foreigners.

Washington, November 11.—There are sufficient foreign vessels now in Chinese waters watching the interests of foreigners to take care of any emergency in the near future, according to advices received at the Navy Department from Rear Admiral Murdock, commander-in-chief of the United States Asiatic squadron. The gunboat El Cano left Peking for Hankow yesterday.

The apparent seriousness of the revolutionary situation at Yoo-chow is evidenced from the report that the Manchus there had surrendered to the rebels and that the Tartar general had been beheaded. Apparently anticipating that a similar fate would befall him should he fall into the hands of the rebels, the viceroy committed suicide. This information came to the Navy Department late today from Rear Admiral Murdock.

TELLS OF LORIMER "FUNERAL"

Church Bells Were Tolled and Mourning Badges Distributed.

Chicago, November 11—F. A. Sterling, editor of a newspaper at Rockford, who had testified that he heard that "high prices" were being paid for votes to secure the election of William Lorimer as United States Senator in May, 1909, was cross-examined before the Senatorial Investigation Committee today.

Referring to an anti-Lorimer meeting at Rockford, one of a series of meetings held when the United States Senate, after the first Lorimer investigation, voted to sustain the Senator in his seat, Sterling said that a minister made the remark that he had just come from one funeral to attend another, meaning he regarded Lorimer as politically dead. Sterling also said resolutions were adopted denouncing both Lorimer and Cullom.

He said the church bells tolled just as the meeting adjourned, and the ushers distributed mourning badges, the people at the meeting being asked to wear the badges 30 days.

Treaty Provides for Future Good Relations Between Germany and France.

Berlin, November 11—At the close of the debate, today, the Reichstag referred the Moroccan-Congo treaty with France to the budget committee to which the government is asked to make further explanation. The document today communicated to the Reichstag the notes which were exchanged at the time that the Moroccan agreement with France was signed.

In the notes which amplified the agreement, Germany agrees to the establishment of a French protectorate in Morocco and the abolition of her extra-territorial rights. France agrees that the Franco-German companies may execute contracts for public works in Morocco to the opening of Agadir to international commerce; and that all differences regarding Morocco and the Congo be submitted to arbitration "since the agreement is intended not only to remove all Franco-German points of contention, but also to further mutual good relations."

AUSTRIAN SON OF MARS SUES GIRL FOR $25,000

Lieut. Stars Says Miss McMurray Promised to Marry Him and Then Wouldn't.

NOW HE WANTS HEART BALM.

Tells Story of Great Sacrifices Made to Win Affections of Girl Who Jilted Him.

Hugo H. Ritterhause of 150 Nassau st., counsel for Lieutenant Eduard Starz of the Austrian army, yesterday filed a complaint in the Supreme Court in Manhattan in which the Austrian army officer demands $25,000 from Miss Helen McMurray of this city, for breach of promise of marriage.

In his complaint Starz says that he met Miss McMurray while she was in Vienna in August and September, 1910, and that while in those cities she promised to marry him, but later she broke her promise and consequently he wants balm for his wounded heart.

In reciting all that he did to make himself pleasing in the eyes of Miss McMurray and her father, Starz declares that he took a year's leave of absence from the army, thereby losing his chance of advancement to the office of second lieutenant; he sold his racing stable, in which he declares were horses of high class and first-class runners and fencers, at a great loss. He also declares that he was compelled to purchase, at "enormous cost," a civilian outfit and evening clothes. The reason of this purchase was because restrictions of other countries prohibited army officers from wearing their uniforms while not on official duty. All this he says he was compelled to do because his fiancee requested him to be with her while she was in France.

He also declares that he gave Miss McMurray many heirlooms which were of intrinsic value, and he also says that he spent a large amount of money sending her wreaths and bunches of flowers and roses. Finally his worry made him ill and at the solemization of his bride-that he thought was to be, and of her father, he went to a sanitarium to recuperate.

Then Miss McMurray's friends smiled at his Austrian pronunciation, and he went to England and began the study of English. All this occurred while they were in France.

In July of this year, he thought himself proficient enough in the English language to come to New York and claim his bride. But, alas! she saw him but once, and then only long enough to call the engagement off. After this one meeting she refused to receive him and failed to answer his letters, and so he determined to bring the suit.

CAUGHT ARMED ITALIAN.

Sergeant Burke Overhauls Fugitive After Half Mile Run.

For nearly half a mile Sergeant James Burke chased an Italian, armed with a knife, through the streets of Greenpoint late yesterday afternoon. The Italian was the alleged assailant of Edward Wood, a mechanic 28 years old, who lives at 21 Clifford place.

The trouble started when Wood and the Italian turned the corner sharply at Driggs avenue and Diamond street, each going in opposite directions, and ran into each other with terrific force. The Italian was thrown from his feet. There was an argument, and it is alleged that the Italian drew a knife and stabbed Wood in the right shoulder, across the latter nank unconscious from his assailant fled.

Burke was attracted by the fracas and started in pursuit. The fugitive ran on and among the hundreds of persons returning from the many factories in the district, and many of them jumped from his path at the sight of the knife. Burke finally overhauled him after a chase of nearly half a mile and he was locked up in the Greenpoint station charged with felonious assault. He described the Italian as Louis Damico, 23 years old, living at 116 Morgan avenue.

Wood's injuries were treated by Ambulance Surgeon Eckert, who came from the Williamsburg Hospital, and he was able to go home.

"PASTOR" RUSSELL FLAYED BY THE REV. P. H. CLIFFORD

Latter Calls a Halt on "Devilish Hypocritical Ways of Deceiving Individuals."

GETS ABUSE FROM SATELLITES

An Interesting Epitome of Recent Lectures by Evangelist Burridge.

As a final warning to the people of Brooklyn against the teachings of Pastor Russell, the Rev. Philip H. Clifford, pastor of Bethany Reformed Church, Clermont avenue, near Myrtle, delivered a lengthy sermon last night and emphasized the admonitions given by Evangelist J. H. Burridge of Bristol, England, who has just finished a course of lectures in the same church, on "The Teachings of 'Pastor' Russell."

The sermon of Mr. Clifford was in the main an epitome of Mr. Burridge's sermons, but here and there the preacher disclosed his own views on the different phases of the question. Since last Saturday Mr. Clifford has been the recipient of many letters of an abusive nature from Russellites in several parts of the State, condemning him for his opinion of Pastor Russell and for permitting Mr. Burridge to deliver his lectures from the pulpit. Mr. Clifford made answer to these letters in general, saying in part:

"Since The Brooklyn Eagle of Saturday, November 4, published my explanation of how Mr. J. H. Burridge of Bristol, England, came to give lectures in Bethany Reformed Church against C. T. Russell's teachings, and also making known my personal estimate of Russell's position, credentials and methods of interpreting the Scriptures, I have received communications piously abusing me for trying to hurt so holy a man as C. T. Russell.

"Some of his followers accuse me of falsely charging him with making the Brooklyn preachers a bad and wicked set of men. For the enlightenment of such and to open the eyes of the general public let me quote from Russell's own paper, the People's Pulpit, Vol. III, No. 40, where we find the following words:

Some Extracts From Pastor Russell's Official Organ.

"'When the preachers of Brooklyn had heard that Pastor Russell had come to their city to stay, they were vexed; yea, they were angry; yea, they gnashed upon him with their teeth as certain scribes and pharisees did toward the Master nineteen centuries ago. They said: "If this man gets the ear of the people, he will cause us no end of trouble." Our glory will become as a fading flower." Cold shivers run down our back when Pastor Russell advertises "No Collections." So they hated Pastor Russell, because he told the truth. The Brooklyn preachers did commune with The Eagle, saying: "Hie thee there, scratch Pastor Russell with thy claws; yea, become a vampire and suck his lifeblood. Destroy him, lest he take from us the sheen of our tinsel. And because of this attitude of the preachers, The Brooklyn Eagle made several attacks upon Pastor Russell."'

"'When such words are published in Mr. Russell's own paper, and the Brooklyn preachers so misrepresented to all who might innocently read them, how can any sane man think I am unjust in describing Russell as a bundle of selfish and devilish egotism?

"'To credit such actions to the able and godly men of the Brooklyn churches is one of Mr. Russell's methods of endeavoring to poison the minds of men against men who above all others would oppose the wrong of his new religion, which is a mixture of over a half dozen isms of the centuries.

"'Because C. T. Russell has succeeded in making false impressions regarding the ministers, and which he methodically continues to do in his publications; because his teaching is absolutely a subversion of Scripture; because while posing as a champion of the Bible, he artfully denies its fundamental teachings regarding the Person and work of our gracious Lord Jesus Christ; because Mr. Russell by his acts and words is a bundle of selfish egotism seeking to make prey of the innocent members of the churches, I as one of the Brooklyn ministers, for the sake of my own flock and in loyalty to the truth, use both my voice and pen to the public against such a man whom Scripture describes as 'a wolf in sheep's clothing.'

Has No Wish to Harm or Hinder Pastor Russell Unjustly.

"I do not wish to harm Mr. Russell or hinder him or any man in being true to honest convictions. But when a man like Mr. Russell teaches that all other teachers from the days of the apostles to the present are wrong and he himself is right; when making such a claim and not presenting a clean slate of credentials; when his methods of interpretation subvert the Word of God, he should expect that any honest man would be true to Scripture principle and warn all true believers against him.

"It is true that we cannot read a man's heart, but Christ tells us 'that out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh.' I judge Mr. Russell by his books, by his methods of interpretation of the Scripture, by his egotistical method of advertising, by his artful way of professing to respect ministers and at the same time publishing among his followers and to an innocent public such statements which I have above quoted from his paper, 'The People's Pulpit, Vol. III., No. II.'

"'I have been informed that though Mr. Russell advertises 'no collections,' he has received as high as $1,400 per day in money orders through the Brooklyn Post office. Does this not show that he is successful in hoodwinking the general public? Sometimes the most effective manner of getting a large collection is to advertise that none will be taken or lifted at a public gathering. So far as I can judge, Mr. Russell's method is to win the individual, and he knows the rest will follow, does follow, and he well demonstrates that it does follow.

"'I do not criticise his financial methods, but when he advertises that he will not lift a collection and makes meat of the same in his endeavor to belittle the ministers in whose churches the system of lifting an offering is followed, I call a halt, for it reveals more of his subtlety and devilish hypocritical ways of deceiving individuals.

Collections Necessary for the Support of Churches.

"'Ministers are not to be blamed because churches adopt as a method the taking up of public offerings for the support of the work. Personally I would favor Mr. Russell's method of individuals making private contributions, but the amounts received should be made public property and not that of an individual. For Mr. Russell to advertise any sentiments against ministers, because churches have and do take up public collections is but another illustration of how he takes advantage of everything which will deceive those who hear him, or who read his publications.

"'Let me plead with those who write me to be just in my censure of Mr. Russell, to be at least fair enough to look facts square in the face and be willing to judge their beloved leader as they are willing to judge the godly men of the Brooklyn pulpits whom Mr. Russell artfully and hypocritically seeks to condemn.

"'Mr. Russell in his volumes of "Millennial Dawn," as the "Divine Plan of the Ages," artfully presents truth in contrast with error, and when he has gone far enough to win the confidence of an orthodox believer he proceeds to pour in the oily teaching of Russellism which denies every fundamental truth of the Bible, God's love-letter to man.

"'Take, for instance, Mr. Russell's concoction of the truth regarding hell, or everlasting punishment. He gives the old argument of human reason, that 'God is love,' and to teach the orthodox view or doctrine of hell is not in keeping with God's character. He further takes the three Scripture words translated 'hell' or its equivalent and shows how those three words do but mean three different historical places. If any honest reader of Scripture will study the contexts wherever these three words occur he will find that the visible is but a picture to convey to the human reason an invisible thing. Romans 1:20 plainly tells us that we see the invisible, being understood by the things that are made. The best Biblical definition of what hell will be beyond the grave seems to me to be that of Rev. xxii:11, 'He that is unjust let him be unjust still; and he that is filthy let him be filthy still; and he that is unrighteous let him be unrighteous still.' In other words, man as a free agent works out his destiny and God seals it. The gospel is for whosoever will and hell is for whosoever won't. Mr. Russell's 'No hell' theory and his revival of the old thought that death is extinction, is very comfortable to stubborn, self-willed sinners, and to persons who would worship a God having mercy but with no sense of justice; but to nine out of ten men who will put their thinking caps on, such a God is spurious.

Rev. Mr. Clifford's Views on Future Punishment.

"'The God of the Bible will punish a wrong. In His love and mercy He has suffered for the sinner but if the sinner rejects His mercy and grace then he and all such sinners will get God's justice. If we sinning mortals punish wrong doers will not God punish wrong doers, especially when they despise His mercy and grace?

"'There is a hell here and hereafter, and though Mr. Russell may help you to feel comfortable in building around truth, under truth and over truth, he nor any other cannot blot truth out.

"'If there is no hell then there is no sin. If there is no sin then there is no Saviour. If there is no Saviour then there is no truth in the Gospel, and the Bible is wrong.

"'Mr. Russell is wrong and the Bible is right.

Life is short,
Death is sure,
Sin is the cause,
Christ is the cure.

How Mr. Russell Denies the Deity of Christ.

"'Mr. Russell, with his teaching regarding spirit beings, denies the deity of our Lord Jesus Christ. He teaches that Christ was a spirit, being higher than angels, and he became man. When Christ died on Calvary He ceased to be a man, and God exalted Him to be a higher spirit being than He was before becoming man.

"'Mr. Russell teaches that Christ's death was not for our sins, but to redeem Adam, in whom we fell, and by redeeming Adam, He, Christ, became our Saviour, therefore the salvation which man has in Christ is to be raised to a second chance where, with an inherited sinful nature his salvation will depend upon his obedience.

"'Mr. Russell might have been honest when he first started to accept such views of truth, but the way he uses language, the method of his gaining the public ear, his slanderous reports of ministers, his preaching humility to others while he practises the opposite, his subtle manner of subverting the Scriptures, his attitude according to published records toward his wife, his readiness to deceive the general public by advertising, such as my article in last week's paper described, all, with many other reasons, convince me that he is not a true man, that his method of teaching is intentionally wrong; and I warn all Christians to beware of Russellism. If I saw Mr. Russell was true and square and right in his intuitions and theology, I should be more happy to publicly praise him than I am to censure him in this manner.

Church Members Are Warned Against Mr. Russell's "Theology."

"'Again I warn church members against Mr. Russell's theology, if it can be called such; against his methods of raising money by advertising "no collections;" against his posing as a martyr when he really is the offending party; against his dishonesty in professing to teach the Bible when he simply subverts it to his own ends. Follow Russell and you will rue it.

"'Russellism is the biggest fraud of the centuries, and the secret of its gripping innocent people, some of whom are and have been worthy members of the various churches, is in that C. T. Russell takes advantage of the general ignorance of God's word. Devout and sympathetic study of the Bible will save the average Christian from the cancer of Russellism.

"'Daily Bible reading will save any humble follower of Christ from the errors of C. T. Russell, as well as from the foolishness of that which may be called hypercriticism.

"'The Bible needs that we do one thing with it, and that is read it. Its prophecies are as easily understood as any other portion. Let Russell alone. If you cannot let him go, then test all he teaches as well as what all other preachers teach by reading your Bible. Not by taking texts Mr. Russell quotes, but by ignoring Mr. Russell's books and reading the Bible in the spirit of dependence upon God the Holy Spirit, who will make plain its truth to all honest seekers.

"'I would to God that people would read their Bibles more and Russell and other men less.

"'In conclusion, the Rev. Mr. Clifford urged upon his parishioners the necessity of acquainting themselves with the contents of the Bible, so that when such insincere men as Mr. Russell present their doctrines supported by distortions of the Holy Book the laymen will be enabled to discriminate between the right and wrong.'

SPOOKS WALK AND TALK 'N BROAD DAYLIGHT

Philosophical Society Head Interferes With Their Business.

HAS LONG BEEN A BUGABOO.

Woman Cries Shame, but Will Not Do Just One Little Stunt Even for $3,000.

The spooks walked and talked in Brooklyn in broad daylight yesterday. They did slate writing, read sealed letters, floated about in a cabinet, did telepathic stunts and otherwise conducted themselves as self-respecting spooks should.

But the remarkable feature of the seance at which they did all these things was that they showed everybody just how they did it. Joseph F. Rinn, president of the Brooklyn Philosophical Association, was manager-in-chief of the spook fest, and every time a spook did a stunt he up and explained the same.

It all happened in the auditorium of the Long Island Business College, South Eighth street, where President Rinn was giving a little Illustrated lecture on "Spiritualism." He lectured convincingly and gave an absolute demonstration of the trickery and fake methods resorted to by spiritualistic mediums. They seemed to have anticipated that he would interfere with their business for several of them were on hand to protest which made the meeting somewhat turbulent and even more interesting.

"Is spiritualism based on truth, delusion or fraud?" is the question which Joseph F. Rinn set himself to answer, and when he [illegible] his audience was ready to agree with him that fraud and foolishness provide the sum of its mediumistic business.

Joseph F. Rinn has long been the bugaboo of the spooks in this particular neighborhood and he has vainly offered the various spirit mediums of the city much money if they would produce a single spiritistic phenomenon under conditions which would eliminate the possibility of fraud. He investigated Eusapia Palladino and showed how she did some of her tricks, and while May Tepper was doing stunts in Brooklyn a few years ago he vainly offered her a large reward if she would just do one or two little stunts for him.

He had a chance to offer another reward yesterday. A woman in his audience got up on her feet after the spooks had hoped about a bit and said it was a shame. Did Mr. Rinn have a license to give a show on Sunday? She was a medium who talked with real spooks. But when some of those present made up a purse of $3,000 which they offered to give her if she would do just one wee little spooky stunt she shook her head and retired.

Prof. Rinn took a dig at a few of the psychic research people in the course of his remarks, notably at Professor Hyslop, who really believes that the spooks do things, and who calls those things by long scientific names. Professor Hyslop, according to Spook Evocator Rinn, is "easy" and too eager to find what he is looking for.

Just to show up a little stunt in telepathy, which Professor Hyslop thoroughly believes, Mr. Rinn called four men to the platform. Every good spook demonstrator calls men to the platform. Then he gave them a book, and asked each one to write two sets of figures on the fly leaf. They did. Then the book was handed to another man in the audience, who was told to add them up. He had no sooner added them up than Mr. Rinn from the stage called out the total.

"Wonderful," chorused the women.

"Remarkable," said the men.

"You see," Mr. Rinn explained, "I wrote some figures of my own on the fly leaf at the back of the book, and knew how much they would total. It was easy enough to turn the book around in passing it to the last man, so he added up my figures."

Everybody agreed that it was just as easy as Columbus' famous stunt with the egg, once you knew how it was done.

While the lecturer was showing how easy it is to have the spirits answer questions written on slips by people in the audience, one man protested. He had brought his own paper and envelope, and he would defy Rinn to make the test with him.

Although this was putting it up to him a great deal harder than it is put to most mediums, Mr. Rinn accepted the challenge. It was agreed that the man was to write the name of some well-known character in history on his paper, fold it, place it in the envelope, seal it, and that then Mr. Rinn was to read the name.

"Abraham Lincoln," Rinn said as soon as he reached the platform with the envelope. It was torn open, and "Abraham Lincoln" was the name written on the slip inside.

"I rubbed alcohol on the envelope while walking to the platform with it," Rinn explained. "That makes it transparent."

The conclusion of the seance was a cabinet demonstration, in which Rinn wriggled out of his bonds and back into them, in full view of the audience, while the four blind-folded men who made up the charmed circle which received the demonstration heard the spirits ring bells, felt the soles of spirit feet and had other uncanny experiences which made the audience laugh until the tears came into their eyes.

PARIS PERSONALS

Eagle Bureau,
53 Rue Cambon.

Paris, November 4, 1911—Hotel keepers in France, and more especially those in Paris, are glad that the Morocco problem is practically solved. In a way to leave France a free hand in Morocco, and also disposing of territory in the Congo region in a way satisfactory to Germany. American travelers in France, and those in Paris more particularly, are also well pleased at the result, many doubtless on account of their future plans. These include a number from Greater New York, among whom may be mentioned: H. G. Monroe, Miss M. Ferguson, Miss Dorothy Rice, Mrs. Allen Pence, Mr. and Mrs. V. H. Stafford, Mr. and Mrs. D. H. Bacon, Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Horton, Mr. and Mrs. S. S. Howland, R. A. Graham, R. M. H. Brown, L. M. Street, H. Scott, Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Orr, Mrs. A. K. Wiley, Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Arnold, Mrs. H. W. Burgess and Mrs. A. Herrick.

The Rev. Dr. George Thomas Dowling, pastor emeritus of St. James Episcopal Church, Brooklyn, and Mrs. Dowling, who have just arrived in Paris, expect to remain here several months, and may then visit the French Riviera. They have been coming abroad for some years, and may reside in Europe permanently, probably in Paris.

Mrs. Jesse Underwood Sweet of Brooklyn, and her daughter, Miss Estelle C. R. Sweet, have just arrived in Paris, after an extensive tour of Germany and Switzerland. They will remain here for several weeks, and then visit England. They will return to Boston, to spend the winter of next year.

The Misses Marjory and Helen Stutzer of Brooklyn have just arrived in Paris, after an extensive tour of Brittany. They may remain here a week, will then visit England, and sail for home about the middle of the present month. While in Brittany they saw many interesting religious processions.

Mr. and Mrs. Kurt Ameuta of Brooklyn, with their son, Master Bernard Ameuta, have been visiting Switzerland lately, and have just arrived in Paris, where they expect to remain a few days only, before visiting Switzerland and possibly Italy. They will call for home either from Italy or else revisit Paris before returning home.

WOMEN HOLD A BANQUET.

Silver Gavel Presented to Hebrew Benevolent Society.

Very brilliant was the banquet given last evening at Willoughby Mansion by the Ladies Hebrew Benevolent Society of Greenpoint, in honor of the twenty-fifth anniversary of the organization. Two hundred guests were present at the banquet, and as many more, mostly young people from the Congregation Beth-El, came for the dancing later in the evening.

Mrs. A. Schwartz presided as chairwoman, assisted by the president, Mrs. R. Norek; the treasurer, Mrs. E. Judas, the secretary, Mrs. M. W. Casch; the conductress, Mrs. I. G. Hammerschlag, and Mrs. M. Rapp, Mrs. Levy, Mrs. Klein, Mrs. Levine, Mrs. May, Mrs. Lande, Mrs. Bender and Mrs. Karfol.

The welcoming address was gracefully made by Mrs. Schwartz. Mrs. Norek responded to the toast, "Our Aim." Mrs. Judas spoke on "Charity," and the conductress, Mrs. Hammerschlag, presented suitable badges to four new honorary members—the Rev. Dr. Samuel Piper, the Rev. Dr. Reuben Rinder, Max W. Casch and Charles Raphael. The feature of the evening, however, was the presentation to the organization of a silver gavel from the Congregation Beth-El, with which the society is especially identified. The presentation address was made by R. Norek and was a very interesting historical account of the origin and development of the society, and was very enter-

Mr. Casch referred to the seventeen women who became charter members in 1886 under the direction of the first president, Mrs. Bertha Hamilton, and vice president, Mrs. Rose Simons, and whose work so prosperously and richly had now assumed such large proportions as to include 125 members, a home for the aged and infirm, and had attained distinction in the accomplishment of many other benevolent enterprises. Remarks on the past were also made by ex-President Rachel May, and Moe Rapp concluded the speechmaking with an admirable toast, "To the Ladies."

Valuable assistance was given to the society by the many young men who served on the various committees. I. G. Schwartz acted as floor manager, assisted by Louis May. The reception committee included Nat Nathan, Albert Nachman, Theodore Kahn, Harry Stern, [illegible] Weise and Gustave Stern. The floor committee, under the chairmanship of Fred Winter, consisted of Abe Josephowitz, Edward Karfol, Ralph Heyman, Benjamin Frank, Murray Nathan and David Jones.

SCENES FROM GRAND OPERAS.

Scenes from the grand operas, unheard but charmingly pictured, was the attraction offered at the Commercial High School last evening, under the auspices of the People's Institute of New York and the Brooklyn Settlements. "Faust," "Aida" and "Hansel and Gretel" were the operas selected for representation. E. W. Ordway, who is in charge of the lecture and concert course to be given during the ensuing winter, directed the programme and gave various descriptive interpolations.

BROOKLYN'S REAL ORCHESTRA

Fine Concert at Academy by Catholic Oratorio and Orchestral Societies.

The Brooklyn Catholic Oratorio Society and the Brooklyn Orchestral Society joined in giving a symphony concert at the Academy of Music yesterday afternoon under T. Bath Glasson, conductor. And now it can surely be said that Brooklyn has her orchestra, and that Seattle and other far-Western towns, which are, as yet, to some Brooklyn people, as insubstantial as dreams, can no longer point a finger of inquiry at us. Herbert Braham has done fine work in orchestral music here, and so have other devoted musicians, but they have not given the big permanent realization of the orchestra as T. Bath Glasson has now given it. A composition of his was given yesterday. As he remarked after the concert, "I have written a song, may the Lord forgive me." "Crossing the Bar" was the composition sung by Frank Ormsby, the tenor. The melody has descriptive value, yet it is extremely "tuneful." In the song phrases, "When I Put Out to Sea," there is a quartet of muted horns, which suggests distance, and a wavelet motive of notes against clarinets and oboe describes the sentiment of "but such a tide, as moving seems asleep." In "I hope to meet my pilot face to face" the instruments climb over the voices in excellent mood. The song was applauded vigorously.

The introduction to the Third Act of "Lohengrin" was the first sample of the orchestra's work, and it had a tang and luscious flavor. Psalm CXXXVII, "By Babylon's Wave," the setting by Gounod, was as emotionally sad and wild yesterday as the music demanded, for the Oratorio Society had been well drilled, and it was enthusiastic also.

The Bantock Tone Poem, "Dante and Beatrice," which was a great number on the programme, was preceded by a lecture by Mr. Glasson. His picturesque talk had real substance. His picturesque not always tell what his Goddess is garbed in, but what the general impression of beauty or spirit is, so the composition by Bantock, is broad and yet beautifully sensuous, fine and forceful.

There is a kind of composition which seems to be a mere catalogue, while another sort of music is actually alive. The orchestra had here a first violin in John Lynch, with Celtic name and temperament; his work was of most effective quality. Mr. Glasson conducted with alternate decision and suavity, with dash or lash, or quietude. The agony of Dante over Beatrice's death, his sufferings during his exile, and the lovely personality of Beatrice, are all voiced by the music. The Beatrice and Dante themes, beautiful and lofty, the final mingling of them, typifying the beatific reunion of the poet and his most gentle Beatrice, are the important tonal parts.

Bantock is no copyist. It is only that the great pathfinder, Richard Wagner, once swept musicians' minds clear of everything but himself, that composers still sing his tones. Bantock has plenty of originality and melody.

The Coleridge-Taylor "Hiawatha Wedding Feast" was well and enthusiastically sung by the Oratorio Society. It is a splendid musical description of the Longfellow Red Man idyl. The strong, tuneful measures and the descriptions of nature and the Indian temperament are remarkably set forth by Coleridge-Taylor in this "Wedding Feast" music. The Symphony in B Minor, by Schubert, was another number played effectively by the orchestra, also accompaniments to "Comfort Ye My People" and "Every Valley Shall Be Exalted," sung by Frank Ormsby. The "Hallelujah Chorus" closed the entertaining programme. The singing of Mr. Ormsby was broad and convincing in the "Hiawatha" solo, and in the Handel numbers it was dramatic and sonorous.

FEDERATION OF WOMEN MEETS HERE TOMORROW

First Time State Clubs Have Gathered in This City Since 1898.

PROGRAMME FOR THE WEEK.

Chiropean of Brooklyn Prominent in Convention—A Thousand Delegates Expected.

The New York State Federation of Women's Clubs, embracing 309 clubs with an aggregate membership of 205,000, will open its annual convention at the Hotel Astor tomorrow, the first convention held in this city since 1898. A thousand women, delegates and alternates, will attend, and all day today there were arrivials at the hotel from up the State. The opening session will be held tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock, and three sessions a day will be held until the close of the convention Friday afternoon.

A leading feature of the week's activity will be a reception and supper tomorrow evening, at which the out-of-town delegates will be welcomed by the Brooklyn and Manhattan women, seventy-five clubs in this city having joined together, headed by Soroses of Manhattan and Chiropean of Brooklyn, to entertain the upstate women.

Chiropean will be prominent in the convention throughout the week. The club contributed the largest sum next to Soroses for the expenses of the convention. A number of the members of this Brooklyn organization, who will be active participants in the proceedings, have engaged rooms at the Astor, and will remain at the hotel day and night throughout the convention. Among them are Mrs. Henry N. Meeker, president; Miss Viola Bell, club hostess; Mrs. George Nichols, auditor; Mrs. J. O. Peck, treasurer; Miss Julia F. Ring, chairman of the executive committee and Mrs. Henry Hasler. Each of the Brooklyn clubs will have a banner displayed at its box in the ballroom, which will be used throughout the convention. Chiropean will have box No. 8.

At the opening session tomorrow it is expected the women will receive greetings from Governor Dix, Mayor Gaynor and Edward E. Brown, newly installed chancellor of New York University.

Thursday afternoon will be the holiday session of the convention. At that time the visitors will be escorted in groups to visit such parts of interest as invite them. All the art galleries, the studios, Brooklyn Navy Yard, Ellis Island and a number of theaters are to be open to the guests, and the subway is to run a Federation Special to convey all who do not travel in the automobiles loaned for the occasion. Commissioner Williams has agreed to throw open the Department of Immigration for their inspection and to make a speech. The President of the Board of Health will escort the women in person to the milk stations to show them how New York handles the pure milk supply. The Lyceum, Hippodrome, KinAmacolor and Belasco and Republic theaters, by the courtesies of their owners, have been offered in complimentary entertainment.

This evening Mrs. William Tod Helmuth, honorary president of the Federation, will give a dinner at the Astor to one hundred women invited "to meet the board of 1898."

Mrs. Eugene J. Grant of 379 Washington avenue is the second vice president of the State Federation. Mrs. J. Elliott Langstaff is chairman of the automobile drive through Prospect Park, Bay Shore and to the Navy Yard, where the Admiral will welcome the visitors.

Re-dedication of Central Church--Restoring the Lapsed

A Re-dedication;

by

The Rev. Dr. S. Parkes Cadman.

YESTERDAY was a great day in the history of the Central Congregational Church, and one which its large constituency will long remember. At the morning service the restored auditorium was completely filled with worshippers, and those who had not seen the renovations were gratefully surprised by the beautiful chancel, with its three arches and its chaste decorations. It is quite a building in itself, containing two organ chambers and four retiring rooms, as well as ample accommodation for a choir of eighty-five voices. The choir stalls are raised one above the other in three tiers, and over all is the handsome memorial window given by Mrs. Frank S. Jones, with its subject, "The Good Shepherd," a thoroughly artistic piece of work executed by the Gorham Company. Frank S. Jones has also been a large contributor to the benefactions and work of the Central Church and to Christian work generally.

The auditorium, which is probably the best in the city for acoustics and general convenience, presents an admirable appearance. The colors are softly blended and the effect of these, with the new windows which have been inserted around the building, is satisfactory in every way. The entire scheme reflects high credit upon the architect, the artists and the builders, as it also does upon the management of the trustees. The committee on the renovation of the church was composed of W. C. Humstone, chairman of the board of trustees; Henry Burn, E. M. Crampton, W. E. Edmister and F. J. Warburton.

Precisely at the appointed hour of 10:45, the robed choir, numbering fifty selected voices, could be heard in the distance, chanting the responses. Then came the processional hymn, "The Son of God Goes Forth to War," and as the choir entered the audience arose and joined in the singing, with the accompaniment of the new, powerful and tuneful organ, played by the organist and choirmaster, Frederic Preston. A feeling of worshipful reverence pervaded the whole assembly and the service went steadily forward, culminating as it went, until the sermon was followed by the anthem for the day, "Send Out Thy Light." This was taken from the Forty-third Psalm, set to Gounod's music, and was the passage which the pastor, the Rev. Dr. S. Parkes Cadman, had already selected for his text. After the benediction, Stainer's "Sevenfold Amen" was given with superb effect. And thus ended what was generally expressed to be one of the most helpful services ever held in this great church or in the city.

Central Church, as is generally conceded, has meant much to Brooklyn, to New York City, and in these last years to the Nation at large. Its record has steadily spread abroad because of its increasing usefulness. In its membership are many men of prominence in all walks of life. Seven judges of the various courts, three of them of the Supreme Court, are enrolled as members. Its pastors have been men of renown, both for character and gifts. In the little more than ten years of Dr. Cadman's pastorate, the church has raised nearly a million dollars, half of which has been given to benevolences. The church has a membership of 2,700, of which 2,000 have been taken in during Dr. Cadman's time. But it has always been content with the plain meeting-house and an unadorned and simple ritual. While it has helped to erect some of the best buildings in this borough for various missionary and philanthropic purposes, it has spent the minimum upon its own property, and though they have been made commodious and comfortable, costly material and adornment have been repressed.

Yesterday seemed to mark a new era in the history of this church. It has wisely conserved the Puritan ways, and yet relieved them of any narrowness of mere tradition, and the general effect was praiseworthy to the last degree. The robed choir was there in a chancel which lent itself in every way to the purposes for which it was built. The people took a larger and heartier part in the worship. One could feel their quiet and intense devotion as a congregation whose love and loyalty have never wavered, and whose fifty-six years of existence have been unmarred by a single dispute of any kind.

Dr. Cadman is being congratulated on all sides upon this happy result. The mutual ties which bind pastor and people were in full evidence in the service of yesterday. Many were present from other churches, bringing their greetings and good will. And the evening service, which was largely given over to music, as well as the morning, fulfilled the expectations of all who attended.

Dr. Cadman took his text from Psalm xliii:3-4: "O send forth thy light and thy truth; let them lead me; let them bring me unto thy holy hill, and to thy tabernacles," he said:

We are summoned at this hour to the highest employment of the human spirit, to the worship of Almighty God, whom we would reverently approach in the name of Christ Jesus, our Daysman and Lord. The circumstances which attend this worship invest it with unusual joyousness and meaning.

The Church, in her truest sense, is a spiritual body, which dwells in the believing souls of all faithful confessors. But she demands an outward and visible symbolism as an appropriate conveyancer of her inward graces to the perception of men. So around and over her altars the devout of all ages have erected their majestic buildings, and upon them they have lavished whatever was lovely and of good report. Here the ministry of light and truth has found a habitation, and from thence it has permeated the life around. The Christian sanctuary has thus stood as a constant witness for the celestial realms. It has been the domestic center of holiness and virtue. Its hallowed precincts have exhaled a sweet perfume upon the selfish and distempered atmosphere of the world. And those who sought within its borders their release from guilt, their surcease from pain and woe, have risen from its places of penitence refreshed and cheered, to follow after their Risen Head with wise and zealous effort. To all those purposes which the Church catholic fulfills we solemnly and prayerfully set apart this material structure.

And yet there is a sense in which we cannot rededicate this house of the Lord. It has already received those inducements of Christian life and sacred retrospect which have made it holy unto Him. The tides of human nature, purified by divine love have flown through these portals for more than thirty years past. Behind the rejoicings of today there lie the efforts and the sacrifices of five generations of devoted men and women who spent themselves and their substance for the advantage of this church. We have endeavored to make it more worthy of them, and more worshipful toward our Creater, because here His benediction has rested upon filial hearts which did not forget the meeting place of saints. In every process of the restoration we have tried to embody our conviction that this was the residence of Christ as Lord and Life Giver; that His real presence has always been manifested in the courts of His house. Here He has spoken words of comfort and of strength to His many brethren. In this building the Holy Spirit has exalted the thoughts and inspired the prayers of many who entered it in youth with the wonder of awakened love, and who left it in age to die in undisturbed peace. Here trusty and well-furnished guides have led your feet into the way everlasting. We recall today the saintly French, on whose memorial place to my right are the words: "A lover of God and of goodness," whose gentleness was strength; the apostolic Scudder, who is likewise described as an ambassador of Christ in this and other lands beyond the sea; and also the learned Behrends, of whom it is declared that he was a preacher and a theologian of rare spiritual insight and of intellectual distinction. As were the undershepherds, so have been the members of the flock, the vast majority of whom celebrate this day with us in hymns around the throne above. For they have won and have entered into the rest which remaineth for the people of God. We are their successors in a splendid heritage which owes them much. And many before me were brought here as children by their parents. Their earliest impressions were derived from the sight of their fathers and mothers bowing down before the Lord and giving thanks unto Him. After the shocks of grief and bereavement, the weary and the sad have stolen back to this chamber of consolation to be sustained and encouraged by the sympathy of its nearly fellowship. In our ordered psalmodies, the joyous have poured forth their melodies of deliverance and thanksgiving. And all alike, invaded by a common need for pardon and for cleansing, have left the dust-choked highways of life that they may refresh their souls with the benefits of that mercy which endureth forever.

The inward history of the thousands of lives this roof has sheltered can be read by no eye save that of God. But we know enough of our departed brethren and of ourselves to be sure that the real glory of this temple is not in any outward appearance, but rather in that it is inscribed on every part of it with the reflections and emotions of regenerated men and women who have bowed before this altar, confessed their sins, and received light and truth to go in peace and sin no more. Thus is this place made unutterably sacred by these former worshippers, whose voices summon us to a personal dedication of ourselves. And while we cannot in the deeper meaning of the word reconsecrate this church, we can reconsecrate our own selves. While all the hallowing of any spot of earth can have is already here in these precious memorials which I have indicated, it is our high duty to seek the aid of heaven that we may effectually preserve every function of such a sanctuary and make it still, as heretofore, the dwelling place of God and of His children. The sight of this added charm prompts us to seek what new persuasiveness and fascination we can give to the Gospel of our Master. If there are any influences which can radiate from these gates for the betterment of this city and this land, we covet them now. We would provide in our own spirits a more generous hospitality for the promises of God's loving kindness. And governed as we are by the dispositions of the Divine Spirit, we would continue to define our habits and desires, and to press forward to the enthusement of light and truth in that vocation of an unbroken chain of Sabbaths which awaits us.

The brave fidelity which led the Psalmist to pray that Light and Truth, the twin angels of the Divine Presence, may lead him to God's holy hill, to that temple of Mount Zion, which was for him the known reality of God's presence among men, is the predominant note of our worship today. He seems to have written a part of this psalm when he was faced by many a legacy of falsehood and of fear. He supplicates Jehovah that he should plead his cause against an ungodly nation, and deliver him from the deceitful and unjust man. He rebukes the disquiet of his own soul, and exhorts his spirit to hope in the God who is still the health of his countenance. Likewise, the church universal in the present moment has come to a period of trial, when after all her noble warfare, evil seems inexhaustible and still lifts up its head for the encounter. The intellectual and moral life of men and nations is ravaged by transgression and sin, and we are called upon, as churchmen, to know the annals of God's organization, and to assert that here is the only, the oldest, divinest and supremest institution in which heaven and earth are conjoined. Despite all blemishes, it has heavenly authority for this world and for the world to come. From its sacred books proceed the words which are spirit and life. Its sacraments are the visible tokens of salvation for all men. Its history is the heart of the modern world, which it has built to its present proportions and whose civilizations it has filled with gifts immeasurable. Its heroes and their conquests make a larger and more shining array than those of any other world movement. From the days of the Acts of the Apostles to the missionary wonders of the nineteenth and twentieth centuries, the Son of God has gone forth with light and truth in either hand to bring the millions to the holy hill of the Lord. And the time has come for us to boldly assert ourselves not only as believers in Christianity, but also in the Christian Church as the home of human welfare and the agent of God's gifts to His children. Not only for our own sake, but because we are a part of that church in its entirety in its divinity, in its holiness and in its beauty, do we set ourselves apart once more and declare our allegiance to those venerable truths which have always been the secret of our strength. For we are builders, not for time but for eternity, for inward beliefs, for deep, unassailable convictions, for the transformation of character, for the glow of awakened hearts, for the preservation of righteousness, and for the fulfillment of every purpose of Christ's decree. No outward obstruction in Legislature or state or among the social conditions of men, can finally defeat so precious a project as this. And in our service today we sit with our Master in heavenly places, we rejoice with the angels above to whom God's wisdom is made known in the church. For its sake the holy and the just have been sacrificed, and the noblest sons and daughters of time have lived and died in its establishment and defense. Every provision of the evangel sustains its claims, and we are pledged to their accomplishment despite the storms that assail us.

Yet, while the church with heaven both union, she is locked within the elements of the world, and to a certain degree she must be a part of the cosmic system. She is not in her perfect condition, complete and static but as the leaven hid in the meal, which is to leaven the whole lump. Even her most stationary elements obey to some extent the laws of change. Everything is liable to variation, and our Scriptures and our doctrines, while they are from one point of view permanencies, from another are flexible enough to change with every human being they touch. Mr. Moody once said: "God never repeats Himself," and souls, like bodies, live under the law of a ceaseless evolution. The church, with all her vast stabilities, must float on the tide of human development; and great as is historic Christianity, the Christianity of the future will be still greater. The light and truth which must yet come forth from our Living Head, the Risen Christ, will increase with the growth of men; and the invisible powers that operate in them will work upward and not downward, forward and not backward, until the spiritual realm which God has purposed is completely organized and victorious.

We must not be tempted by seductive programmes which seek the reformation of society from without instead of from within. Dr. Martineau has observed that our experience is adverse to the contrivances of the social mechanist, who forgets that his favorite arrangement of communities and institutional forces is nothing without the internal mind that controls it. Our sympathies in whatever direction they may tend but express ourselves. And the powers of society of which we hear so much, unless they be the powers of God in our hearts, are incalculable terrors. Political, economic and even educational reforms are exaggerated today. They have a very limited agency, and they usually disappoint the people who loudly call for them. The character of the individual is the chief care of the Church. She seeks to be productive rather than preventive. She knows that the true life of the community must be planted in the private affections of every one of its members, in the noble thinking of each several mind, in the pure demands of an enlightened conscience, and in the regenerating grace of the Divine Presence. This is why the church has endured after thousands of years, while other boasted ventures have vanished with scarcely a trace to recall them.

The atmosphere in which the Church must live if she is to continue to be the holy hill of God from whose providential eminence we may mark our course, is one of light, and that not of our own origin, but the light of God in her, in whose borrowed rays she shines resplendent. And over every dark cloud which men see today in the horizon of her prospects this light is ever shining. It was not extinguished by its great efforts in the past—it is renewed with every crisis and every peril. He Who first created the midday sun, and Who sent forth His Son Jesus Christ to be the light of the world, is still the Light Giver of the Church. And this is the message that has come unto us, that God is light and in Him is no darkness at all. If we remain in the light as He is in the light, then have we fellowship one with another, and the blood of the Covenant cleanseth us from sin. Let us see to it that the Church does not suffer for lack of the light of God, which shrivels every error and every evil, and makes the good to prosper. Surely here as nowhere else there should be a freer air and nobler radiance. If it be true, as some state, that the decay in church attendance and church conditions does not evidence a decay of a genuine Christianity; if the large percentage of our populations who are crowded into stifling homes and workshops and factories have felt no relief arising from our illuminating powers; if a literary delicacy and refinement carefully adapted to the selfish exigencies of a self-satisfied clique have taken the place of the burning messages of God's prophets, whose very words were words of flame, then let us approach the Giver of all good, Who owns the Church of Christ as His actual property among men, and beseech Him in the language of this text, "Send out Thy light, O God, and let it lead the multitudes to Thy holy hill." For that is the light of love and hope and life which we are to cast upon every darkened prospect and every remoter heart.

But as the Church lives and prospers in the light of God, and in that light alone as her Lord reveals it, so she enlists as her material, not the fables and devices of men, but all truth as it makes its appeal to the conscience and reason of the race, and especially the saving truths most excellent which proceed from the word of Christ. The people today, whatever may be their wrong directions, are for the open and for the real, and since the Church is the depository and the nucleus of those things, and the world cannot proceed aright without her force and her message, let us see to it, not only as individuals, but as churches, that we guard that which is committed to our care. Whatever dies among us dies because it was not fit to live; whatever survives, survives by reason of the Eternal Will. Shaking off the incumbrances of past theologies and past methods, the Church must address herself to the business of winning the people to the spiritual interpretation of their own existence, and this by means of the truth, unchanging and unchangeable, given her by God in Christ Jesus. And this she is doing. The time of a new departure is at hand. She has awakened out of sleep, and the moment is ripe for some seer to cry unto her and say, "Arise! Shine! for thy light has come, for the glory of the Lord has risen upon thee."

Brethren, as we have thus received, so let us impart, taking small account of restless and unstable things and acting as becomes the firm and convinced denizens of the Kingdom of God. A great teacher has reminded us that we are not to turn aside for every foreign colony of so-called opportunities. We are not to sow as those who desire to reap right speedily. Neither ought we to forget that the elements of difficulty enter into every project; for there is no sea without its tempest; no soil without its bramble, and no coast without its rock. But if we remain true to the petition of this text, and each and all serve our own generation by the will of God, then there will emerge a greater and more honorable and more useful and more universal interpretation of Christianity through the Church than men have yet known. Her holy hill shall be crowded with supplicating saints who shall come from the East and the West, from the North and the South, and enter into all her omnipotence and all her joy. Her lists shall be filled with those who demand the sanctification of all our doings. Consider this as the goal of your efforts. Consider that the Christianizing of America's output in business and education and politics would make an object lesson which could subdue the world for Christ. And then resume your task with the patience of hope and the labor of love.

In an interview by the newspaper men after the service, Dr. Cadman said: "I think this church is the greatest in the city. I would not leave it for any other. This occasion marks an epoch in the church's history and the ideas of proper, dignified Christian worship are being realized in this church for the first time. But the choral music will be merely an incentive to worship."

In the Religious Field

The New York State Conference of Religion will hold its twelfth annual meeting in the First Presbyterian Church, Binghamton, N. Y., this evening and tomorrow afternoon and evening. The Rev. J. H. Burridge, Brooklyn, N. Y.:

Dear Sir—Many thanks for your attack upon the errors and unclean life of so-called "Pastor" Russell, printed in the last Brooklyn Eagle. The statements that you have made should have been made long ago by the clergy of the City of Churches. I have been surprised at their silence in exposing this perverter of revealed and inspired truth.

May God bless every effort you put forth in your series of subjects, as announced in The Eagle. Only wish that I were present to hear them.

Very sincerely yours, in defense of the Word of God and coming of Jesus, WILLIAM EDWARD GRIFFITH, Minister.

Articles with regard to various phases of Pastor Russell's activities have been appearing in The Eagle since October 29, and will continue to find place.

The Shut-In Society will hold its twenty-seventh annual meeting in the Madison Square Presbyterian Chapel, 9 East Twenty-fourth street, on Wednesday. There will be two sessions, one at 10 A.M., when the Rev. Dr. Charles H. Parkhurst will be the speaker, and at 2 P.M., when the speakers will be the Rev. William Dallam Morgan and Dr. James Alexander Miller.

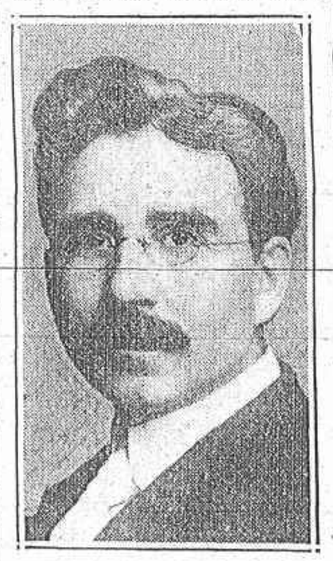

The Unpardonable Sin

by

Dr. E. S. Stucker.

YESTERDAY morning at Hanson Place Baptist Church, Dr. E. S. Stucker preached on "My Visit to Calvary." The house was well filled, the Sunday school occupying the galleries in a body. The sermon was a forceful word picture of the crucifixion of our Lord.

In the afternoon Dr. Stucker gave a

"chalk talk" entitled "Do It Now," to the Sunday school. This was a vivid, picturesque presentation of the importance of an early decision for Christ. As a result, a large number of young men and young women and boys and girls made a public profession of their faith, and indicated their desire to unite themselves with the church.

At night another large congregation gathered, when Dr. Stucker preached on "The Unpardonable Sin," or "The Sin of Not Being a Christian." The evangelist declared in Scripture language that "this is the condemnation that light is come into the world and men prefer the darkness rather than the light because their deeds are evil." The rejection of Christ is equivalent to the acceptance of sin as a principle. "Sin is lawlessness," and this is unpardonable. It is equivalent to wishing "no God," which is the same as wishing no government or restraint of evil tendency. The murderer of President McKinley wished no government and in firing a bullet at the President was really trying to murder the United States government. Judas said in his heart "let us have no Christ," because Christ was the most uncomfortable fact in the life of Judas. Sins may be forgiven, but sin, never. The tree must be right at the root before it will be right in the character of its fruit.

To reject Christ is to reject goodness and truth and love, and to bring upon one the judgment pronounced upon sin. No man can call himself good who will intelligently refuse the good Jesus. If a man prefers no Christ it is because he "loves the darkness rather than the light," and this cannot be forgiven and is therefore now, as it will always be, "unpardonable sin." If the sinner will forsake his sins and will give up his thoughts of opposition to God and good, and will return to the Lord, He will have mercy upon him and He will abundantly pardon. To sin against the spirit of holiness is to sin against the Deity himself, and to make one's self the sworn enemy of God, or, in other words, a spiritual anarchist, and this "hath never forgiveness" neither in this world nor in the world to come. So long as a man prefers sin as a master rather than Christ he is unpardonable.

At the close of the service the ordinance of baptism was administered, and the pastor announced that the membership committee would meet again tonight at 7:30 to confer with others who desire to offer themselves as candidates for church membership. It is expected that baptism will be administered from time to time during the week.

The music was an especial feature of the day. The quartet sang as usual, and the chorus led in the song service at night. Mr. Warner sang several solos and the Sunday school at the morning service sang "The Holy City," with very fine effect.

On account of the Kings County Sunday School Convention the afternoon meetings will not be held during this week. The evening meetings will continue every night excepting Saturday. Tonight's subject will be "The Judgment Day."

ITS SECOND ANNIVERSARY.

Manhattan Gospel Hall, one of the four rescue missions conducted by the National Bible Institute of 156 Fifth avenue, Mannhaatn, will celebrate its second anniversary on Sunday evening, November 26. The Manhattan Gospel Hall has recently occupied new quarters at 119 Manhattan street, and preparations are being made to make this anniversary a service of special celebration of the success of this rapidly growing work. The Rev. Dr. Percy S. Grant of the Church of the Ascension, will speak in this hall Wednesday evening, at 8 o'clock.

The National Bible Institute's School for Christian Workers, which is holding its sessions every Thursday night in the chapel of the Marble Collegiate Church, Fifth avenue and Twenty-ninth street, Manhattan, has an enrollment far beyond that of any previous year. The lecture room is filled every night the school is in session, and new names are constantly being added to the roll. The latest addition to the faculty of the school has been A. P. Fitt, for years the associate of Dwight L. Moody, who has been using the life of the great evangelist as a basis for his lectures to the students of the school.

SUNDAY LAWS.

Sunday laws in the United States were put on the statute books through the efforts of churchmen. They are no mere rest-day laws, these restrictions that have come down in America from colonial days. They are designed just to protect the Sabbath from desecration. But where our fathers needed a law to protect a religious institution, we need a law to protect men. And in a complex age we are vainly trying to accomplish the latter through the medium of the old Sunday laws. The Sunday laws have failed to meet the test in a commercial age. And I am wondering how long the church is going to remain quiescent: Long ago it struck with vigor for legislation that would protect the Sabbath and got it. And then, because the time changed, the legislation failed. But after all "the Sabbath was made for man." Man is the more important. Will not the church strike with vigor today for legislation that will protect man?

A law requiring one day of rest in seven, regardless of which day it is, for all workmen—absolutely demanding that one rest-day with no loop-holes of "necessity and charity"—would result in two things. The industries necessarily continuous would add one-seventh to their working force, and let one-seventh of their force by rotation rest each day in the week. But it would cost more to employ a larger working force and the industries not necessarily continuous would close down on Sundays. Thus the Sabbath would be better protected than it is now; thus men would be protected from the necessity of working seven days a week in order to hold their jobs. A man who has one day of rest a week, whether of his own choice or by compulsion, is a better man than one who works every day, even if his rest-day is not Sunday.—John A. Fitch in The Survey.

METAPHORS.

[From the London Chronicle.]

Major Archer Shee's wonderful sentence, "Even the Stygian eloquence of the Chancellor of the Exchequer has not been able to wash the white elephant entirely," would certainly have to figure in a new budget of "Misfortunes in Metaphor," by Sir Henry Lucy. Irishmen naturally contributed to the selection he gave thirty years ago. There was Mr. O'Connor Power's "Mr. Speaker, Sir, since the Government have let the cat out of the bag there is nothing to be done but to take the bull by the horns." But two English members gave the collector a double event one night. Alderman Cotton remarked: "At one stage of the negotiations a great European struggle was so imminent that it only required a spark to let slip the dogs of war"; and Mr. Foster began a peroration with "I will, Mr. Speaker, sit down by saying ——"

Restoring the Lapsed;

by

Dr. S. E. Young.

IN the Bedford Presbyterian Church, Dean street and Nostrand avenue, yesterday morning, the pastor, the Rev. Dr. S. Edward Young, preached on the subject, "Restoring the Lapsed." For his text he took the words: Mark xvi: 7, "And Peter." He said:

What will become of the lapsed disciples? Once they stood before the church altars, uttering irrevocable vows. Where are they now? None sang more gladsomely than they those happy praises of Sunday school hours. When has heavenly melody graced their lips of late? Mere trifles alienated them. By slow degrees they fell away. Sum the sighings of mothers, sisters, wives, children, interested religious friends, over these prodigals—who can? Suppose everyone of them returned today—sanctuaries terrestrial and celestial would be all anthems of thanksgiving.

There is a more important question: How shall disciples be kept from lapsing? Better infinitely the preventive than the cure. Teach Simon Peter not to be so overweeningly sure of himself. Take from his tongue that loud boasting: "Though all men forsake thee; yet will not I." Tell him not to follow his Lord afar off. Show him his place, his only safe place, is close to the insulted Christ in Caiaphas' house; not back among the lackeys. Well, we will, the majority of us, have some humble apologies to make Simon Peter in the last day. Comparing his chance with ours, he looks excellent. He, plucked raw from Galilee, from the fishing nets; we, with nineteen centuries of Christianity to guide and cheer. How far have we denied our Lord in refusing Him the head of the table at our business conference; the first place in professional and social and private life? Must a disciple today literally disclaim Christ's lordship with oaths in order to be classed in Peter's category? Has everybody you have been thrown with recently received the impression that you enthroned Jesus in your heart? Was inquiry necessary to ascertain your discipleship? Far be it from any man to esteem himself by his position, by his leadership in the religious world, set beyond the pale of the possibility of falling. The hour Capernaum was turning against Jesus until He exclaimed: "Will ye also go away?" Simon Peter braved the tide, saying, "Lord, to whom shall we go? Thou hast the words of eternal life." Simon Peter alone had the insight and courage yonder at Caesarea Philippi to declare, "Thou art the Christ, the son of the living God." Yet Simon, the chief disciple, went all to pieces; and you, anybody may, who indulges overconfidence, who stays not clear up at the Master's side. Send the strongest his most enticing temptation in his weakest hour—will he stand? Therefore, persists the question: What can be done for the lapsed?

Just let them know that the Master wants them back. I do not know what two words you would condense the entire Bible into were you limited to a couple of words; but I think I would choose these two: "And Peter." They have in them the essential message that sings across Deuteronomy concerning far-scattered, disloyal Israel: "But if from thence thou shalt seek the Lord thou shalt find him, if thou shalt seek him with all thy heart." They are Isaiah's call to repentance and forgiveness in a nutshell. They express the pith of the parable of the Prodigal Son. See afresh the scene in that upper room at Jerusalem. Noon has collapsed into midnight without intervening space. The Nazarene they trusted failed. The pharisees have made good their prediction that Jesus would be crushed by them. Oh, the hopelessness now that He, their Lord, is dead. Dare they return to distant Galilee to live amidst the taunts of those who jeered enough already at their devotion to the Galilean prophet? Worst of all, their spokesman disciple, the dauntless one, has made a sorry mess of his discipleship. Have you heard what Peter did? Do you know he swore, and swore there in the High Priest's house, that he never even knew the Master? Then, the execrations of Peter, if those dispositions are human as ours. Here arrive Mary Magdelene, Mary, the mother of James the Less and Salome, announcing overwhelming news: "Jesus of Nazareth is risen! He goeth before you into Galilee; there shall ye see him, as he said to you." "His messengers at the tomb urged us to tell his disciples and Peter." Whereupon Peter, like a wild roe of the mountains, races to the empty tomb, beholds the evidences of the resurrection, returns to the fold of faith and obedience.

Slow we are to believe in forgiveness. The feud between families in Scotland or Kentucky epitomizes the loathness of mortals to let go the memory and the resentment of an injury. The world would have said: "Go tell His disciples except Peter." Here meet we a new spirit, an element so awful as to interpret the Psalmist's saying: "There is forgiveness with thee, that thou mayest be feared." One scarcely likes to wait to put on hat and coat to go to give the news to the Peters who used to be devoted and are wayward this hour.

Second—Let the lapsed know they can be more than ever useful yet. Yonder stands a preacher who sees 3,000 converts in a day. Who is he? Peter. Yonder in the high priest's palace, apparently in the very spot where Peter once denied, right in the presence of Annas the high priest and Caiaphas and John and Alexander and as many as are of the kindred of the high priest, thunders forth the truth as it is in Jesus, declares, "Neither is there salvation in any other; for there is none other name under heaven given among men whereby we must be saved." Who is he? Simon Peter. Watch him preaching the gospel to the Gentiles before Paul wrote his epistles, estimate his influence and take heart: for being down in the disgrace and iniquity of apostacy does not shut the door to glorious usefulness. If we return.

Let the lapsed know that the master restores by private, personal dealing with the erring. St. Luke is careful to say, and so is St. Paul in the fifteenth chapter of the first epistle to the Corinthians, that the risen Saviour appeared to Peter—just to him, apart. What delicate tenderness! Other ears, not even those of the twelve shall catch a syllable of that first interview with the penitent denier and blasphemer. Now, off to the appointment in Galilee! For the life of me, I can not find there evidence that Jesus rebuked Peter before the rest. Little more than the opening words were heard by the disciples assembled on the lake shore. After Peter and Jesus have walked some distance together Peter turns and seeing John following asks, "And what shall this man do?" God give us the imagination to look and listen as Jesus leads Peter along the water's edge and asks him, "Lovest thou me?" Ah, that high word for love He uses! Love governed by lofty rules; Peter's salvation is in personal attachment to Christ. Not in the work even, or the brethren. The lapsed one answers, "Thou knowest that I love thee." Ah, that low word for love! Not in the Greek, the fine one the Master employed; but the word expressing impulsive, flaming human affection. A sweet girl had that word from her lover. His ardor was too intense to brook delay or restraint. I fear she found such love dangerous, I fear it did not stand the test of time. Divine love loves and waits, divine love obeys law. Jesus speaks again, "Simon, lovest thou me?" Still the lofty word. Simon replies, "Thou knowest that I love thee." Still the lower word. Descends the Master now to Peter's word, "Lovest thou me?" Peter, pained that the Master must come down to his level, says, "Thou knowest that I love thee," and Jesus takes Peter back.

How long since you had with Jesus a personal interview like that? There is no other path of return. Future peace and power lie beyond that intimate dealing. Do you not feel inclined to drop for a while our great, wise, pretentious, superficial, unsatisfying way, and, having strayed as Peter strayed, strike Peter's returning footsteps?

Not Peter! Not that recreant one
Who followed only in the sun
And fled when first the shadows fell.
Go quickly! His disciples tell —And Peter.

Yes, Peter, Lord, in Peter's place
Today help me take heart of grace.
An outcast I, I dare not stand
Even on the borders of that band
With Peter.

'Tis Christ, the Master, calls. He sees
The bruised heart upon its knees;
And thrice at His thrice blessed feet
He bids thee make confession sweet
With Peter.

ALL DAYS ARE HOLY.

The Rev. John Howard Lathrop Stirs Trinity Church Conference.

"What Sunday Work Is Necessary?" was the subject before the conference at Holy Trinity Church on the Heights, last night, the speaker of the evening being the Rev. John Howland Lathrop, pastor of the Church of the Saviour (First Unitarian), who electrified his audience at the outset when he announced that he had none of the old Sabbatarian feeling, as he believed that there were seven holy days in a week instead of one. He believed that all workers should have one rest day in seven, but did not think that a common rest day was practicable, although it was ideal. It would be a good plan, he said, for the churches to hold the big service of the week on week-nights instead of Sunday, and he said that in his opinion the Reformed Jews were making a big mistake in adopting the Christian Sabbath as their own.

Canon William Sheafe Chase, whose work in New York State has proved him opposed to anything that suggests Sunday work, was in the audience, and when the opportunity offered he did not hesitate to voice his views dissenting from those of the speaker. He made an earnest plea for a "closed Sabbath," from the standpoint of Christian service to the community. Among the other ministers present were the Rev. John Howard Melish, rector of Holy Trinity Church, who was asked to tell the results of his efforts to end the existing strike against the city on the part of the drivers of the Street Cleaning Department. Mr. Melish declined to go into the matter at all.

One of the laymen present took a shot at the Rev. Mr. Lathrop, as well as the other ministers at the conference, by saying: "I am surprised that, among all the ministers who have spoken on the subject, no one has touched on the spiritual side of keeping the Sabbath." To this the Rev. Mr. Lathrop promptly replied: "I do not consider that the subject of the evening covered that feature of the Sunday question. Had that side of the subject been given me I should have been glad to dwell upon it." Another layman who took much interest in the discussion stated that the churches needed the right kind of spiritual food to attract the people into the churches and "not the kind of stuff we are getting now." He afterward qualified his statement by saying that he "was not throwing stones."

The Rev. Mr. Lathrop had prepared his matter carefully, and it fairly bristled with statistics. The origin of Sunday, according to the old Jewish traditions, was that it was a festival day on which work was stopped to give the people an opportunity of joining in the festivities. He then told of the "burdensome" Sunday of the old Puritans, a day of depression and restrictions. Of the Sunday of the present day, the speaker gave statistics as to the number who do work on Sunday and the small amount of the work that is really necessary. He said that there were but three states that had any statistics at all concerning Sunday labor—New York, Massachusetts and Minnesota—and that those of New York State were wholly inadequate and did not agree with the figures furnished by the labor unions.

Of the 1,138,965 factory workers in New York State, 30,467 work more than sixty-three hours per week, and this means, said the speaker, more than six days work of ten hours each, or probably Sunday work. As many work from 65 to 119 hours per week, this is equivalent to six and one-half days of ten hours each and seven days of seventeen hours each. These New York State figures do not include the people employed in hotels, restaurants and on railroads.

Some of the industries that the speaker named—there were eighteen of them—that are considered as necessary to operate on Sundays, and known as "continuous industries," were the railroads, street cars, telegraph, telephone, heat, light, power and the newspapers.

The speaker said that the United States are far behind the foreign countries as to Sunday legislation, and he read from the laws governing Sunday work of many of the European as well as of the South American nations. The first legislation in this country concerning Sunday labor was in 1791, all regulations enacted since that time have been "police regulations for Sunday rest."

Statistics from the United States Bureau of Labor state that 28 per cent. of all the employees of the Bethlehem Steel Works worked seven days per week in addition to those who worked on Sundays irregularly, as overtime. In Pittsburg, conditions were a little better, as but 20 per cent. of the Steel employees worked seven days. It was stated that the directors of the United States Steel Corporation have said the Sunday work does not pay, and that 250 representatives of the Iron and Steel Industries at a recent meeting in New York City indorsed the same statement.

Mr. Lathrop said that the old Sunday laws looked to the welfare of the day and not the man, but that "man's rights should define necessity." The best way for us to answer our question is to compel by law one day of rest in seven.

JOBS LEIDEN PROMISED FAILED TO MATERIALIZE

Janitors and Janitresses Accuse Him of Swindling Them Out of Small Sums.

HELD ON SPECIFIC CHARGE.

Gates Avenue Court Swarmed With Men and Women Who Didn't Get Work After Paying Money.

Abraham Seiden, 54 years old, of 145 Floyd street was held in $2,000 bail in the Gates avenue police court today on a charge of swindling a janitor out of $7. There were a dozen women from the East Side in Manhattan in the court room also, all of them janitresses, and each one anxious to lodge a complaint against Seiden. The police say that he has "worked" at least a hundred janitors and janitresses for amounts ranging from $5 to $15 during the last year, and they also accuse him of having a habit of handing out checks on banks where he has neglected to deposit the funds for which the checks call.

The specific case against Seiden, who is a well-dressed, well-appearing, prosperous looking man, was brought by David Rein of 164 Ludlow street, Manhattan. He alleged that Seiden offered to get him a splendid job as a janitor in a new building. Rein gave him $7 for getting the position for him, he swears, and that was the last he ever heard of Seiden or the money.

Very similar tales are told by Bella Gross, 204 Eldridge street, Manhattan; Ida Goldstein, 20 Rivington street, Manhattan; Josephine Bombruck, 485 Second avenue, Manhattan; Anna Fuchs, 240 East Twenty-eighth street, and many others. The evidence against the man was worked up by Detectives O'Hara, Rand, Owen and Spienle, as complaints have been coming in from janitresses and janitors for months. The officers say they have any amount of testimony which they are able to produce.

When Seiden was arraigned in the court today T. F. Alcott, one of the court attendants, thought his face looked familiar. He investigated the records and discovered that the man had been in court on November 7, 1910, and again on February 21, of this year, both times on a charge of obtaining money by checks on banks in which he had no funds. On both occasions, Alcott says, the man was paroled, and jumped his parole.

SPHINX CLUB AT DINNER

Robert C. Ogden Made Honorary Member of Advertising Men's Organization.

For the one hundred and seventeenth time in the annals of the Sphinx Club the members of that well-known advertisers' organization met last night to discuss the question of advertising. The discussion was preceded by a banquet in the Myrtle room of the Waldorf-Astoria, followed by a few speeches which combined the humorous with the serious in a most pleasing fashion. Over a hundred advertising men sat down to the feast.

H. R. Hotchkin, a former president of the club, presided in the absence of George B. VanCleve. Before the speechmaking began he introduced James A. O'Flaherty, who proposed the name of Robert C. Ogden for honorary membership. By a unanimous vote Mr. Ogden was declared to be elected.

J. D. Ellsworth, advertising manager of the American Bell Telephone Company, addressed the gathering on "Corporation Advertising," and was followed by Robert Adamson, secretary to Mayor Gaynor. His topic was "Municipal Advertising." He advocated a central bureau in the city government, such as the Record Department, to handle all city advertising, which is now so widely scattered throughout the various departments in an independent way.

Among those present were:

W. W. Hallock, H. J. Heinz, John L. Given, Louis Wiley, William Travers Jerome, Robert Adamson, J. D. Ellsworth, James O'Flaherty, C. A. Gould, Corbett McCarthy, Thomas Quigley, W. R. Hotchkin, Thomas Cleary, O. O. Kane, Ivan Lytton, H. S. Tibbs, Bernard Bidder, William A. Thomson, W. C. Freeman, John F. Duggan, Thomas J. Duggan, Malcolm S. Fraser, Harry G. Atkinson, F. "RATIONAL EDUCATION."

Bruce Calvert of Indiana, editor of The Open Road, will give a lecture on "Rational Education" at the Waldorf Astoria, Friday, November 17, at 8:15 p.m. Miss Anna C. Gulbrandsen will sing a series of Norwegian songs in the original, in costume.

STRIKEBREAKER PUNCHED.

Refused to Quit Work and Five Men Attack Him.

Charles Brown, 26 years old, of 1431 Prospect avenue, the Bronx, is laid up at his home today as the result of a trip to Brooklyn last evening to help out Street Commissioner Edwards in his fight against the striking Department Street Cleaning men. Brown, a little after dusk, appeared at Stable C, Sterling place and Nostrand avenue, to go to work. As he was about to enter a stranger engaged him in conversation, finally asking him to have a drink. He consented, and they were joined by four other men on the way to a saloon at St. Mark's and Rogers avenue. The men urged Brown to resign as a strikebreaker. Brown said he needed work and refused. Then the five men "walloped" him and made their escape.

Dr. Truex of the Swedish Hospital treated him for severe lacerations and contusions of the head and face and right hand and he went home.

JEWISH WOMEN ACTIVE

Trustees of Brooklyn Section of Council Hold Meeting—Reports Are Encouraging.

At the monthly meeting of the board of trustees of the Brooklyn Section of the Council of Jewish Women, held yesterday afternoon at the vestry rooms of Temple Israel, Lafayette and Bedford avenues, details were arranged for the season's work among the immigrants in Brownsville. The women of the council will receive this year the co-operation of the Women's Auxiliary of the Hebrew Educational Society in their recreation activities, immigration aid and probation work among the boys and girls. Both societies will work hand in hand, and as a result the activities will be extended and become more thorough.

Mrs. Otto Kempner, president of the council, and Miss Rose Brenner, the vice president, were elected delegates from the Brooklyn section to the triennial convention of the council, to be held in Philadelphia, December 12 to 19, and Mrs. Aaron Dahlman and Mrs. E. Weil, alternates. Mrs. Kempner will also read a paper at the convention on "The Girl in the Magistrates Court."

The various committee reports showed that the council has been very busy during the past month. Its probation officer at the Children's Court reports that during the past month eighteen new cases were received and that thirteen were discharged as improved. At the beginning of this month there were fifty-three probationers. These are visited at their homes or in their schools and everything is done to lead them away from temptations.

In the way of work among the newly arrived immigrant girls the council has done considerable during the past month. In her report Miss Sarah Brainos, the special investigator of the Brooklyn Section, stated that 115 visits were made, and that about 30 were given employment. Others were induced to attend evening schools or trade schools. In many cases medical aid was needed and provided. Concerts, excursions and other means of recreation were arranged during the past month for these immigrant girls.

Mrs. David N. Zeman, chairman of the committee on Kings County institutions; Mrs. Mark M. Saloman, chairman of the committee on incorrigible girls; Mrs. Julius Mendelson, chairman of the committee on hospital guild, and Miss Bertha Adler, chairman of the committee on care of the indigent blind, also read their reports.

Last night the first "neighborhood dance," under the auspices of the Brooklyn Section of the Council of Jewish Women, was held in the lower auditorium of the Hebrew Educational Society's Building, Pitkin avenue and Watkins street. Those who attended were chiefly young people employed in the neighborhood manufacturing establishments. Mrs. Michael Cohn, chairman of the committee on recreation, was in charge, and was assisted by several of the members of the council and Dr. Charles S. Bernheimer, superintendent of the H. E. S.

RALLY IN GRACE CHURCH.

The Christian Endeavorers of the Eighth Division of Brooklyn met last night at the Grace Presbyterian Church, Jefferson and Stuyvesant avenues. Representatives of the following churches, which comprise the division, were present: Bedford Presbyterian Church, Throop Avenue Presbyterian Church, Lewis Avenue Congregational Church, Park Avenue Branch, Central Presbyterian Church, German Presbyterian Church, Puritan Congregational Church and Grace Presbyterian Church.

Among those who addressed the meeting were the Rev. Dr. Tracy Griswold of the Central Presbyterian Church, the Rev. George Earnest Merriam of the Puritan Congregational Church and the Rev. A. W. Fiemer of Bloomfield, N. J.

The next meeting will be held on Saturday evening, November 18, at the Hanson Place Baptist Church, Hanson place and South Portland avenue, the subject being "Pre[illegible]cies," and the speaker will be Frederick E. Crane of t[illegible]rt.

REASONS WHY "PASTOR" RUSSELL'S WIFE LEFT HIM

Conditions of Her Home Life Are Vividly Shown in a Long Brief.

JUSTICE ORLADY'S OPINION.

Contains Rebuke for "Pastor," and Declares That His Conduct Warranted Wife's Withdrawal.

(Special to The Eagle.)

Pittsburg, November 15—A graphic portrayal of the events in "Pastor" Russell's home on Arch street, Allegheny, which immediately preceded Mrs. Russell's journey to Chicago to seek the protection of her relatives, is contained in a brief presented to the Superior Court of Pennsylvania. The brief was prepared and submitted by Congressman Stephen G. Porter, attorney for Mrs. Russell, after "Pastor" Russell had appealed from the verdict of the jury in the Court of Common Pleas, which granted Mrs. Russell a separation on the evidence referred to in the brief.

Judge Orlady, who wrote the opinion of the court, reviewed this evidence in his opinion, which rebukes "Pastor" Russell and declares that his conduct "fully warranted Mrs. Russell's withdrawal from his house."

"The apartments in which the Russells lived," the brief declares, "were on the fourth floor of a business house on Arch street, Allepheny, Pa. There was no neighbor within calling distance at night, and although for a number of years the building had been occupied by the employees of the Watch Tower at night; yet shortly after respondent had started these reports about his wife's sanity, all of the employees were removed from the building, leaving Mrs. Russell, in case her husband was absent, alone.

Mrs. Russell Lived in Very Desolate Surroundings.

"The conditions were those of utter desolation with respect to her. What must have been the feelings of this woman after these two years of indignities? She, no doubt, was crushed, humiliated and broken-hearted, and would naturally have apprehensions of the absence of her husband o take some sort of proceedings founded upon his alleged pretense of her mental unsoundness, and there is no doubt that her husband at this time was seriously considering the advisability of inquiring into his wife's mental condition by an expert examination, and notwithstanding the fact hat when asked the question on the witness stand he denied, his letter to Judge Breedon (Exhibit No. 15) contains this statement:

"'Indeed had it not been for my dislike of publicity on the lady's account as well as my own, I would have felt it only a reasonable duty to have asked the court to appoint a competent expert examination respecting the lady's mental condition.'

"While living alone with his wife in this large building, he prepares a cunningly worded letter to the effect that they have reconciled their differences, and then on Friday evening of that week he presents it to his wife for her signature, and all night long he follows her about from room to room, urging, coaxing, pleading and threatening until her head is in a whirl of doubts and fears, and all of the next day he keeps it up and thus forces her to sign the letter under protest. This is undenied by the respondent, and, although the defense was based on the fact that a reconciliation had occurred between the libellant and respondent, the remarkable fact exists that this letter, which was in the possession of the respondent, was never even offered in evidence.

Insulting Letters Sent to Wife's Relatives and Friends.

"The insulting letters to her relatives and friends, warning them not to harbor the libellant or communicate with her were repeated on November 8, 1897, and a copy given to the libellant (Exhibit No. 11). A few days after this the respondent telephoned a message to his wife that he was going out of the city; he did not say where or what for.

"The wife drew her own conclusions about his intentions. He then wittily circulated false reports of her mental derangement, and all this maneuvering to completely isolate her from all society, even that of her own family, the withdrawal at night of all employes of the Watch Tower from the building in which she lived, and the utter desolation of her home and the withdrawal of all support, to her mind pointed to one conclusion, namely, that he proposed to deal with her upon the pretext of insanity, and that his unrevealed errand that night might be for such purpose. The libellant left the building and took a train for Chicago to seek the protection and counsel of her brother who is a member of the bar in that city."

"There is not one syllable i nthe testimony to justify his repeated aspersions on her character and her mental condition." tion," Judge Orlady says in his opinion, "nor does he intimate in any way that there was any difference between them other than that she did not agree with him in his views of life and methods of conducting their business. He says himself that she is a woman of high intellectual qualities and perfect moral character. While he denied in a general way that he attempted to belittle his wife as she claimed, the general effect of his own testimony is a strong confirmation of her allegations."

TWO MORE P. O. BANKS

Will Be Opened at Stations E and V.

The Postal Savings Bank system will be extended to Station "E," located at 2634 Atlantic avenue, near Pennsylvania avenue, and Station "V," Ninth street and Fifth avenue, on December 1. The hours of business will be from 9 a.m. until 5 p.m.

It is expected that considerable business will be transacted by both of these stations, as the large number of residents within these districts patronize Station "P," located at 1731 Pitkin avenue, the station most contiguous to Station "E," and the General Postoffice, and Station "T," which are most contiguous to the territory covered by Station "V."

$1,500 17TH AVENUE BLAZE.

A $1,500 fire occurred last night shortly before 11 o'clock, at 8505 Seventeenth avenue, a frame house occupied by Adam E. Bosslet and family. The fire started in the cellar from an unknown cause and crept to the attic. The house is owned by John P. H. DeWitt of 40 Wall street. It was insured.

JUGGLING WITH FOOD PRICES.

Chicago, November 15—A surprise equal to that caused by the action of the butter and egg board when on Monday it forced up the prices of butter and eggs, came today when it became known that the board had just as suddenly cut the prices to the figures which prevailed on last Saturday. A Government suit to dissolve the board will be brought.

GOVERNOR RAPS TAFT FOR PARDONING EMBEZZLER

Blames Wickersham, Who, He Believes, Acted in Collusion With Prosecutors.

10-YEAR SENTENCE NOT BEGUN

Courts of Idaho Weakened in People's Estimation and Justice Brought Into Disrepute, Says Executive.

Boise, Idaho, November 15—Governor James H. Hawley today gave out a signed statement, addressed to the people of Idaho, in which he condemns the action of President Taft in granting a pardon yesterday to Clarence W. Robnett, bookkeeper in the Lewiston National Bank of Lewiston, Idaho. He was convicted of embezzling funds of the bank and was sentenced to ten years imprisonment. He never entered upon service of his sentence.

"I feel that the pardon of Robnett is a fitting sequel to the proceedings in the United States Court during the last four years while the special assistants to the United States Attorney General have been usurping the functions of the United States Attorney and his assistants and have been running the cases in which the United States has been interested with a high hand, regardless of justice or decency," the statement sets forth.

"I am not surprised at this pardon. In fact, no act ever done in connection with the courts of Idaho has so brought justice into disrepute and weakened the courts in the estimation of our people.

"For more than four years, in every important case in which the United States was interested, the regular prosecuting officers have been retired and these special assistants to the Attorney General have been given full control.

"Without the slightest interest in our State, caring nothing for our people, simply desirous of establishing a reputation in the Department of Justice, these special prosecutors have done more to injure Idaho and retard its development since the fall of 1907 than all other causes combined."

"The injustice of this action of President Taft, inspired without doubt by the special prosecutors, will long rankle in the minds of our citizens and will inspire them with a wholesome contempt for such disgraceful methods.

"It is probably unfair to severly blame President Taft directly for this unspeakable action, as he undoubtedly acted at the request of Attorney General Wickersham, who evidently had been in collusion with his associates in charge of this prosecution."

RECEPTION TO CANDIDATES.

These affairs of the Tenth District Club have been pronounced successes in the past, and this year there is the added impetus of a great victory at the polls to lend a particular zest to the occasion.

JUSTICE FOR GOOD TRUSTS IS URGED BY ROOSEVELT

In Outlook Editorial, He Advises Real Federal Control of Interstate Commerce.

TERMS PRESENT LAW USELESS

Outcome of Action Against Tobacco Trust a Miscarriage of Justice, He Declares.

Recent litigation and legislation to regulate the trusts is discussed, and a remedy to meet the present situation is suggested by Theodore Roosevelt in an editorial, entitled "The Trusts, the People and the Square Deal," published today in The Outlook. "The suit against the Steel Trust by the Government," Mr. Roosevelt begins, "has brought vividly before our people the need of reducing to order our chaotic government policy as regards business." He concludes with the following recommendation:

"The National Government exercises control over interstate commerce railways, and it can in similar fashion, through an appropriate governmental body, exercise control over all industrial organizations engaged in interstate commerce. This control should be exercised, not by the courts, but by an administrative bureau or board such as the Bureau of Corporations or the Interstate Commerce Commission; for the courts cannot with advantage permanently perform executive and administrative functions."

Roosevelt Not Misled by Steel Corporation's Emissaries.

Before taking up his general theme Mr. Roosevelt pauses to deny that the representatives of the Steel Corporation misled him while he was President. Referring to the suit against the Steel Trust he says:

"One of the grounds for the suit is the acquisition by the Steel Corporation of the Tennessee Coal and Iron Company, and it has been alleged, on the authority of the Government officials engaged in carrying on the suit, that as regards this transaction I was misled by the representatives of the Steel Corporation, and that the facts were not accurately or truthfully laid before me. This statement is not correct. I believed at the time that the facts in the case were as represented to me on behalf of the Steel Corporation, and my further knowledge has convinced me that this was true. I believed at the time that the representatives of the Steel Corporation told me the truth as to the change that would be worked in the percentage of the business which the proposed acquisition would give the Steel Corporation, and further inquiry has convinced me that they did so. I was not misled. The representatives of the Steel Corporation told me the truth as to what the effect of the action at that time would be, and any statement that I was misled or that the representatives of the Steel Corporation did not thus tell me the truth as to the facts of the case is itself not in accordance with the truth.

"It has been alleged that the purchase by the Steel Corporation of the property of the Tennessee Coal and Iron Company gave the Steel Corporation practically a monopoly of the Southern iron ores—that is, of the iron ores south of the Potomac and the Ohio. My information, which I have every reason to believe is accurate, and not successfully to be challenged, is that, of these Southern ores the Steel Corporation has, including the property gained from the Tennessee Coal and Iron Company, less than 20 per cent.—perhaps not over 16 per cent. This is a very much smaller percentage than the percentage it holds of the Lake Superior ores, which even after the surrender of the Hill lease, will be slightly over 50 per cent. According to my view, therefore, and unless—which I do not believe possible—these figures can be successfully challenged, the acquisition of the Tennessee Coal and Iron Company's ores in no way changed the situation as regards making the Steel Corporation a monopoly. The showing as to the percentage of reduction of all kinds of steel ingots and steel castings in the United States by the Steel Corporation and by all other manufacturers, respectively makes an even stronger case. It makes the case even stronger than I put it in my testimony before the Investigating Committee, for I was scrupulously careful to make statements that erred, if at all, against my own position."

Present Anti-Trust Law Inadequate.

He then continues:

"But the resulting situation has made it evident that the Anti-Trust law is not adequate to meet the situation that has grown up because of modern business conditions and the accompanying tremendous increase in the business use of vast quantities of corporate wealth. As I have said, this was already evident to my mind when I was President, and in communications to Congress I repeatedly stated the facts. But when I made these communications there were still plenty of people who did not believe that we would succeed in the suits that had been instituted against the Standard Oil, the Tobacco and other corporations, and it was impossible to get the public as a whole to realize what the situation was. Sincere zealots who believed that all combinations could be destroyed and the old-time conditions of unregulated competition restored, insincere politicians who knew better, but made believe that they thought whatever their constituents wished them to think, crafty reactionaries who wished to see on the statute-books laws which they believed unenforceable, and the almost solid 'Wall Street crowd,' or representatives of 'big business' who at that time opposed with equal violence both wise and necessary and unwise and improper regulation of business—all fought against the adoption of a sane, effective and far-reaching policy.

"It is a vitally necessary thing to have the persons in control of big trusts of the character of the Standard Oil Trust and Tobacco Trust taught that they are under the law, just as it was a necessary thing to have the Sugar Trust taught the same lesson in drastic fashion by Henry L. Stimson when he was United States District Attorney in the City of New York."

Yet More Drastic Treatment of Oil and Tobacco Trusts Urged.

Returning to the main subject Mr. Roosevelt continued:

"To attempt to meet the whole problem not by administrative governmental action, but by a succession of lawsuits is hopeless from the standpoint of working out a permanently satisfactory solution. Moreover, the results sought to be achieved are achieved only in extremely insufficient and fragmentary measure by breaking up all big corporations, whether they have behaved well or ill, into a number of little corporations which it is perfectly certain will be largely, and perhaps altogether, under the same control. Such action is harsh and mischievous if the corporation is guilty of nothing except its size; and where, as in the case of the Standard Oil, and especially the Tobacco, trusts, the corporation has been guilty of immoral and anti-social practices, there is need for far more drastic and thoroughgoing action than any that has been taken, under the recent decree of the Supreme Court. In the case of the Tobacco Trust, for instance, the settlement in the Circuit Court, in which the representatives of the Government seem inclined to concur, practically leaves all of the companies still substantially under the control of twenty-nine original defendants. Such a result is lamentable from the standpoint of justice. The decision of the Circuit Court, if allowed to stand, means that the Tobacco Trust has merely been obliged to change its clothes, that none of the real offenders have received any real punishment.

"Surely, miscarriage of justice is not too strong a term to apply to such a result when considered in connection with what the Supreme Court said of this trust.

Effort to Prohibit All Combinations of Capital Bound to Fail.

"The effort to prohibit all combinations, good or bad, is bound to fail, and ought to fail; when made, it merely means that some of the worst combinations are not checked and that honest business is checked. Our purpose should be, not to strangle business as an incident of strangling combinations, but to regulate big corporations in thoroughgoing and effective fashion, so as to help legitimate business as an incident to thoroughly and completely safeguarding the interests of the people as a whole.

"Few will dispute the fact that the present situation is not satisfactory, and cannot be put on a permanently satisfactory basis unless we put an end to the period of groping and declare for a fixed policy, a policy which shall clearly define and punish wrongdoing, which shall put a stop to the iniquities done in the name of business, but which shall be strict equity to business. We demand that big business give the people a square deal; in return we must insist that when anyone engaged in big business honestly endeavors to do right he shall himself be given a square deal; and the first, and most elementary, kind of square deal is to give him in advance full information as to just what he can and what he cannot legally and properly do.

"Not only should any huge corporation which has gained its position by unfair methods, and by interference with the rights of others, by demoralizing and corrupt practices, in short, by sheer baseness and wrongdoing, be broken up, but it should be made the business of some administrative governmental body, by constant supervision, to see that it does not come together again, save under such strict control as shall insure the community against all repetition of the bad conduct—and it should never be permitted thus to assemble its parts as long as these parts are under the control of the original offenders, for actual experience has shown that these men are, from the standpoint of the people at large, unfit to be trusted with the power implied in the management of a large corporation. But nothing of importance is gained by breaking up a huge interstate and international industrial organization which has not offended otherwise than by its size, into a number of small concerns without any attempt to regulate the way in which those concerns as a whole shall do business. Nothing is gained by depriving the American nation of good weapons wherewith to fight in the great field of international industrial competition.

Impossible and Unwise to Attempt a Return to 18th Century Business Methods.

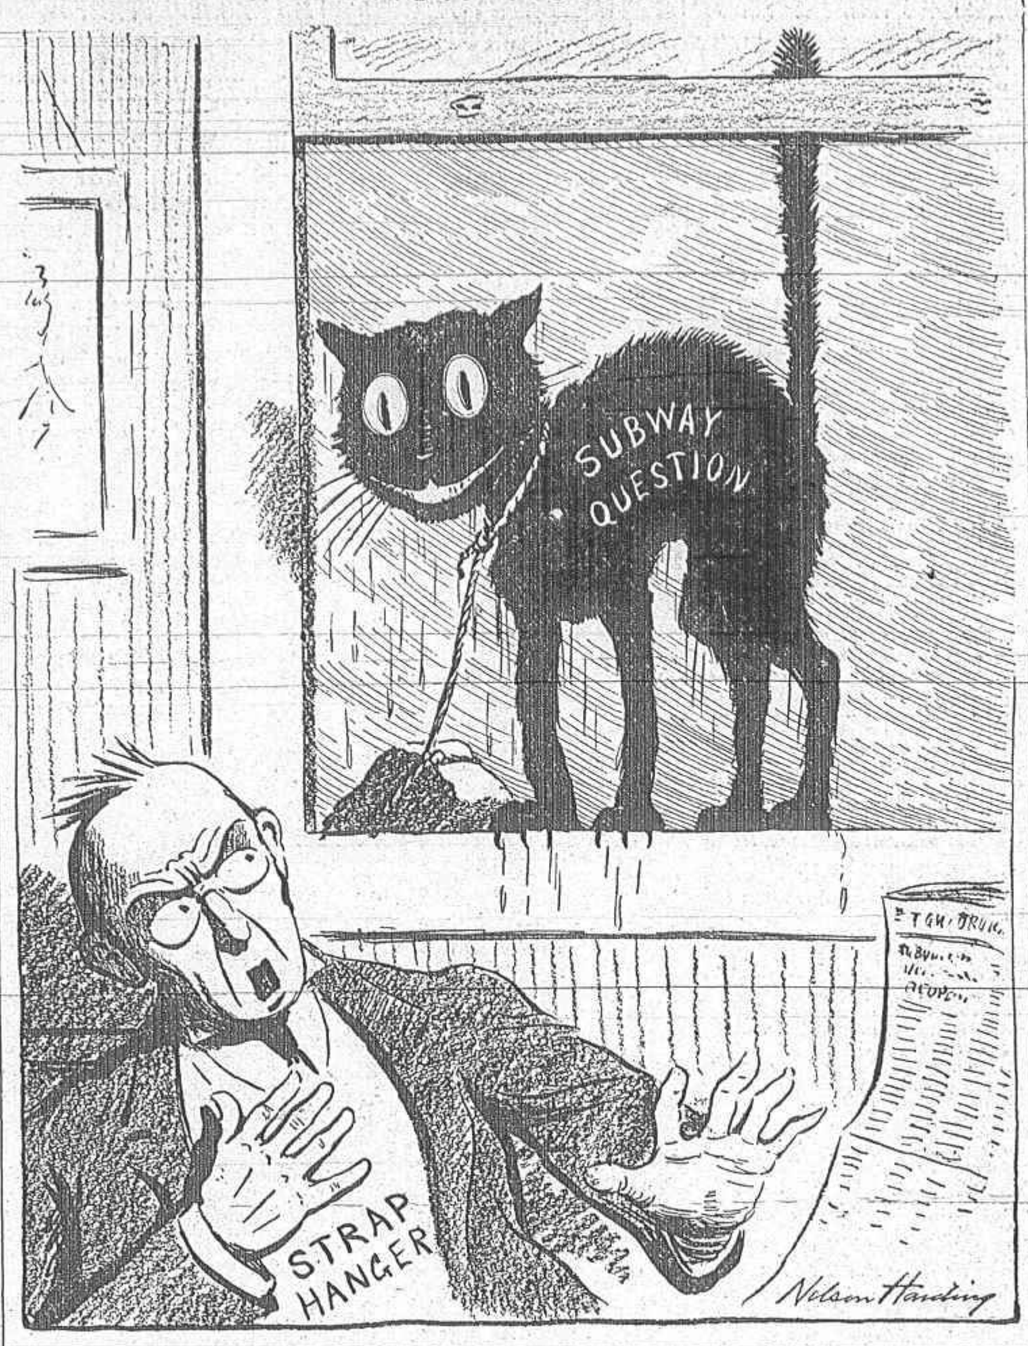

"To sum up, then. It is practically impossible, and, if possible, it would be mischievous and undesirable, to try to break up all combinations, merely because they are large and successful, and to put the business of the country back into the middle of the eighteenth century conditions of intense and unregulated competition between small and weak business concerns. Such an effort represents not progressiveness, but an unintelligent, though doubtless entirely well-meaning, toryism. Moreover, the effort to administer a law merely by lawsuits and court decisions is bound to end in signal failure, and meanwhile to be attended with delays and uncertainties, and to put a premium upon legal sharp practice.

Guilty Inadequately Punished and the Innocent Harmed.

"Such an effort does not adequately punish the guilty, and yet works great harm to the innocent. Moreover, it entirely fails to give the publicity which is one of the best byproducts of the system of control by administrative officials; publicity, which is not only good in itself, but furnishes the data for whatever further action may be necessary. We need to formulate immediately and definitely a policy which, in dealing with big corporations that behave themselves and which contain no menace save what is necessarily potential in any corporation which is of great size and very well managed, shall aim not at their destruction, but at their regulation and supervision, so that the Government shall control them in such fashion as amply to safeguard the interests of the whole public, including producers, consumers and wageworkers. This control should, if necessary, be pushed in extreme cases to the point of exercising control over monopoly prices, as rates on railways are now controlled; although this is not a power that should be used when it is possible to avoid it. The law should be clear, unambiguous, certain, so that honest men may not find that unwittingly they have violated it.

"In short, our aim should be, not to destroy, but effectively and in thoroughgoing fashion to regulate and control, in the public interest, the great instrumentalities of modern business, which it is destructive of the general welfare of the community to destroy, and which nevertheless it is vitally necessary to that general welfare to regulate and control. Competition will remain as a very important factor when once we have destroyed the unfair business methods, the criminal interference with the rights of others, which alone enabled certain swollen combinations to crush out their competitors, and, incidentally, the 'conservatives' will do well to remember that these unfair and iniquitous methods by great masters of corporate capital have done more to cause popular discontent with the propertied classes than all the orations of all the Socialist orators in the country put together."

RUSSELL'S WIFE SCORES "PASTOR'S" PAGEANTRY

Compares Him to Alexander Dowie, in a Letter to Philip Sidersky.

SAMPLES OF EXTRAVAGANCE.

Extracts From Letters of Russell's Former Followers That Contain Severe Criticism.

Special to The Eagle.)

Baltimore, Md., November 16—Philip Sidersky, an evangelist of this city, has received a letter from Mrs. Maria F. Russell of Avalon, Pa., to whom the courts awarded a separation from "Pastor" Russell. In this letter Mrs. Russell denounces "Pastor" Russell's methods. She refers to the pageantry and display which attends the "Pastor's" movements and compares him with the late Alexander Dowie.

Sidersky sent her a copy of the People's Pulpit, in which "Pastor" Russell attacks his wife, and asked her if she did not care to answer it. In her letter of reply Mrs. Russell says:

"I have not seen the issue of the People's Pulpit, to which you refer. In fact I seldom see any of Mr. Russell's publications, preferring so far as possible to 'forget those things which are behim, etc.' But if I am attacked in it, I certainly should see it and judge as to whether I should reply or not. My life in this community is an open book, and I have nothing to fear. I will try to get a copy of the paper and will let you know if I think it worth replying to.

Attack on Courts in First Number of "People's Pulpit."

"I might say that the very first number of the People's Pulpit, which was devoted to a lengthy letter addressed to the ministers and Bible students of Greater New York, contained an item headed—'A Protest Against Injustice.' The injustice referred to was in the 'injustice' of the three courts, all of which had decided against him.

The statements of said "protest" are entirely false. Yet who would think that one could so deliberately lie on the very same page with such professions of godliness? Thousands of people were enlisted in the distribution of this sheet for his defense. Thus they also were made partakers of his evil deeds. 'Be not partakers of other men's sins.'

"His life now is one continuous round of expensive touring at tremendous cost to many deceived followers. The Watch Tower of March 15, 1911, page 92, to which my attention has been called, tells of a transcontinental tour of himself and company for 7,000 miles, beginning June 9, the special train consisting of compartment, standard Pullman and tourist cars, the entire outfit stopping at the principal cities en route from New York to California and holding meetings for about a month.

"A similar tour was made before; I think about a year previous. As I look at this pageantry and consider what it all means, I am so thankful to my Lord who has delivered me from the snare, even though it was accomplished through fiery trial. Similar display attends all his movements, reminding one so much of Alex Dowie, whose business methods he largely imitates.

Russell and Friends Said to Have Lived Luxuriously at Convention.

"At a convention he held about a year ago, near Lake Chautauqua, he and his special favorites were settled in palatial quarters apart from the main company. There he held daily receptions to which 500 each day were admitted by ticket, all being treated to refreshments, free boat ride and car fare from the convention grounds to his quarters."

Sidersky has also received letters from a number of "Pastor" Russell's former followers, relative to the "Pastor's" suit against The Brooklyn Eagle. Daniel Rhodes of the Bureau of Pensions of Washington, D. C., writes him: "Russell, of course, is putting up a big bluff, and I hope he will get one cent damage. That, I think, will pay for the actual damage to his self-exalted 'character' and to his 'fake' propaganda."

J. E. Paulhemus of 2845 Myrtlewood street, Philadelphia, Pa., writes: "It surely shows [illegible] have fallen.

Wheat at $1 per pound is an expensive luxury.

"Personally I am glad to stand separate from a man who is continually making such a spectacle of himself as does C. T. R."

Katie Mills of 264 Hunter street E., Hamilton, Ontario, writes: "I do not see that C. T. Russell has a very good case against The Brooklyn Eagle, if I understand it aright. He certainly did advertise the wheat for sale at $1 a pound, but he said Mr. Bohnet would sell it. Any one understanding Mr. Russell and his methods will know the wheat was his, and Mr. Bohnet was only his agent. Another thing will be to prove that miracle wheat is not worth the price, but was being sold at an extortionate price. It was told the same wheat could be purchased at the Bureau of Agriculture at Washington, for, if I remember rightly, $2.50 a bushel."

THREE GUNS ON TWO TURRETS

Innovation on New Battleship, Which Will Have 14-Inch Rifles.

Washington, November 16—Three 14-inch guns will appear in each of two turrets on the giant battleships Oklahoma and Nevada, bids for the construction of which are to be received by the Navy Department next month. That this innovation is included in the design of the new vessels has just become known and is exciting considerable interest in naval circles. No ship now afloat has more than two guns in a turret and while Italy and Russia are building several vessels with this feature, they will use 12-inch rifles.

It is explained that the primary purpose of concentrating guns in fewer turrets is to reduce tonnage. On the Oklahoma and Nevada the weight of one great turret will be eliminated, as with the new arrangement only four turrets will be required for the main battery of ten 14-inch rifles.

The New York and Texas, now under construction and which when commissioned will be the only craft in the world with 14-inch main batteries are designed along the old lines with their big guns placed two in each of five turrets.

With the completion of the New York and Texas the United States will wrest from Great Britain the distinction of having the world's heaviest armed warships. At present England's 13.5-inch gun ships hold this place, the American commissioned dreadnoughts carrying only 12-inch rifles.

Peculiar interest attaches to the result of the three-gun turret experiment because of the bearing it may have upon the size of main batteries in the future. Heretofore it has been held that the 16-inch rifle used in coast defense batteries never would be practicable aboard a battleship because of the tremendous recoil. It is now believed, however, that a turret platform that would stand the strain from the recoil of three 14-inch guns certainly would hold up under the firing of two 16-inchers.

DEVOY CONGRATULATED.

The members of the Society of Old New Yorkers extended formal congratulations at a meeting held last night at its headquarters, Willoughby and Bridge streets, to County Clerk-elect Charles S. Devoy. The letter of congratulation adopted at the meeting was signed by James C. Wilson, acting president, and William Fredericks, secretary.

CRUST OF DRY BREAD HIS SOLE FOOD SUPPLY

Starving Russian Youth Stole a Bottle of Milk to Wash That Down.

FOUND IT IN FRONT OF STABLE

Vows He Meant No Harm, but Stableman Whose Drink Was Lost Presses Larceny Charge.

John J. Conklin, head stableman at 268 Pearl street, was adamant this morning when various appeals were made to him to "let up" on Matago Donelaika, a well dressed young Russian, who said he lived at 63 Tillary street, and who was arrested for stealing a bottle of milk from in front of the stable at 6 o'clock this morning. The milk belonged to Conklin, and he caught the young man in the act of picking it from the sidewalk and concealing it under his jacket. Donelaika had been in town three days and protested that he was starving. He had a crust of dry bread in one of his inside pockets, and a butt of a cigarette, but his pockets otherwise held nothing. His story was that he had succumbed to the pangs of hunger and thought that the milk would wash down the dry crust that he had in his pocket. He did not imagine that it was anybody's property, for it was in front of a stable and not a house.

Louis Wallach, a countryman of the prisoner, whose place of business is next to the Adams street station, saw the lad brought in and went to find out what the trouble was. When he learned the facts in the case he offered to buy Conklin ten bottles of milk for the one his starving fellow countryman had stolen and also tried to convince the police that he would give the lad permanent work at window cleaning. But the police could do nothing, for Conklin said he would not withdraw the charge.

The result was that the lad was taken before Magistrate McGuire in the Adams street court this morning and Conklin, who had been robbed of his morning milk, swore to a charge of petty larceny against the hungry alien. The facts were presented to the magistrate and the prisoner pleaded guilty, practically. He admitted that he had taken the milk, but declared that he did not think it belonged to anybody.

Magistrate McGuire was forced, under the circumstances, to hold the prisoner for the Grand Jury in $500 bail. Later he reduced the bail to $200 on the representation of Wallach that he would be able to get that amount of surety for the prisoner. The value of the milk, at retail, is nine cents, and the magistrate said that he thought $200 would be sufficient to warrant the lad's appearance before the Sessions justices.

In the meanwhile Wallach will try to work on the sympathies of Conklin to have the charge withdrawn.

Church Charity Kirmess In Academy Ball Room.

Last night was a very quiet one in the Brooklyn social world, its only important festivity being the opening evening of the Kirmess of the Church Charity Foundation in the ball room of the Academy of Music. This Kirmess has now become an annual event, this being its fourth year. It is an attractive and big fair, under the auspices of the Woman's Board of the Church Charity, always in pale yellow and gold, and has its chief interest in the fact that it is the one great social event of all the Protestant Episcopal Churches of Long Island, including such fashionable and big parishes as Grace, Holy Trinity, St. Ann's, St. Mary's, the Messiah and St. James, Christ Church of Bay Ridge, and the Cathedral of the Incarnation at Garden City.

Many women of social note are annually numbered in the Kirmess, and this year marks no exception to the rule. Mrs. Fred. C. Cocheu is this year's chairman. Associated with her and among this Kirmess' personalities are Mrs. Divine F. Burtis, Mrs. James Augustus Hewlett, Mrs. Joel S. de Selding, Mrs. Frederick C. Truslow, Mrs. John Anderson, Miss Margaret S. Hunter, Mrs. Christopher Joost, Mrs. Henry A. Fairbairn, Mrs. Edward Hatch, jr., Miss M. L. Chauncey, Mrs. Spencer S. Roche, Mrs. William E. Harmon, Miss Mary Hunter, Mrs. Beverly R. Betts, Mrs. Harry Salter, Mrs. Clinton Helden, Mrs. Paul Flynn Swett.

Mrs. Otto Heinigke, Miss Cornelia Henshaw, Miss Mary Martin, Mrs. A. D. Goddard, Mrs. George C. Taft, Miss Julia M. Brush, Mrs. C. S. Kennedy, Miss Van Nostrand, Mrs. Albert W. Billing, Mrs. Charles W. Cornell, Mrs. Harry Thompson, Mrs. David S. Wells, Mrs. Hugh McBride, Mrs. Edward Van Wyck Rossiter, Mrs. Harold Arrowsmith, Mrs. Edward Todd, jr., Mrs. Harry Randolph Elliott, Mrs. George W. Ball, Miss Jennie Donnellon, Mrs. R. B. Boaz, Mrs. William Martin.

A feature of last night was the large number of private dinner parties. Each of the big churches of the diocese had a sales booth, attended by representative women. The Kirmess continues this afternoon and tonight.

DR. WORK A CHAMPION OF "PASTOR" RUSSELL

WARM EXCHANGE OF LETTERS.

English Evangelist Insists Dr. Work Is Judging "Pastor" Without Considering Evidence Against Him.

During the past week there has been a warm exchange of letters between Dr. J. C. Work, an osteopathic physician of 73 Orange street, and J. H. Burridge, the English evangelist, now stopping at 419 Sixth street, relative to the moral character of "Pastor" Russell. Dr. Work asks Evangelist Burridge whether he knows anyone who is as clean in his moral conduct as "Pastor" Russell has stated himself to be. Evangelist Burridge has replied that it is more reasonable to believe the evidence which convinced the courts than "Pastor" Russell's own affirmations of innocence.

Dr. Work, who says he knows the "pastor" personally, writes Evangelist Burridge's friends:

"From the public press and from friends who have attended your advertised lectures, we learn that you are publicly slandering 'Pastor' Russell by garbled statements taken from the court records, and by insinuations and inuendo."

In his answer Evangelist Burridge says:

"I wish emphatically to repudiate imputations of 'public slander' of 'Pastor' Russell, and 'garbled' quotations from court records. This is the very thing I have carefully avoided. I have rather under than over stated the items of evidence I made use of. In spite of the efforts of 'Pastor' Russell to justify himself, there is the clearest possible evidence of conduct and transactions in his life such as should discredit him as a teacher in the eyes of all who love the truth. His doctrines are certainly included in the words of the Scriptures, 'damnable heresies,' while his whole system is one of subversion of the teaching of Scripture, so much so as to lead any lover of the Word and people of God to denounce him as a false prophet, a wolf in sheep's clothing."

Evangelist Burridge then denounces Russellism and continues:

"These things being so, all the Scriptures you quote are, in accordance with the custom of your system, misapplied, and the warnings and woes of the Word of God are the proper weapons in the hands of those who 'earnestly contend for the faith' against the false prophet and his teachings. Not one of the passages you quote applies to a servant of God in pointing out the 'evil man,' the 'seducer,' 'the false prophet.' The sarcasm of an Elijah, the woes of our Blessed Lord, the persistent warnings and anathemas of a Paul, and the scathing denunciations of a Jude are more appropriate passages in such a case as that before us.

"As to Pastor Russell's moral character, it is only reasonible and just for the public to believe the evidence which convinced the court rather than his own affirmation of innocence, especially when he admits enough to place him, to say the least, in a very bad light, and shows most indisputably that he was the irreconcilable party. To add to this sin, he endeavored to exercise a fraud upon his heartbroken wife. I say, in view of this, how can you expect the public to share your biased judgment, or to accept his imposing protestations?

"I do, indeed, feel bound to do all I can to discredit him as a teacher, and his teachings in the eyes of the public, nevertheless I have no bitterness of feeling against him as a man, and my greatest satisfaction would be found in seeing him convinced of his errors and brought to a acknowledgement of the truth."

Evangelist Burridge, whose Brooklyn lectures are to appear in pamphlet form, has received a number of letters similar to the following:

"99 West Windsor Street,
"Reading, Pa., November 2, 1911.

"The Rev. J. H. Burridge, Brooklyn N. Y.

"Dear Brother—I read with interest an extract in Monday's Brooklyn Eagle of your sermon, 'A Lord's Servant Should Be Clean.' I should highly prize the series of lectures that you are delivering on 'Pastor' Russell. Will you kindly let me know if they will appear in pamphlet form, and if so, where the same may be obtained. Praying that God's blessing may be upon the work that you are doing, I am, sincerely yours,

"JOHN C. BIERE."

EVANGELIST STUCKER'S WORK

Evangelistic Services at Hanson Place Continue to Be Successful.

The Rev. Dr. E. S. Stucker's sermon in Hanson Place Baptist Church last night was one of the most helpful of all the series. His discourse was an interpretation of the story of Jesus and the woman at Jacob's well. After noting some special characteristics of John's report of Jesus, the speaker found in the story of Jesus and the woman a typical conversion.

"There was aroused, first of all, a new interest in spiritual religion. Jesus appealed to the woman's sympathy and even to her curiosity in creating a heart thirst for the living water. Next, He aroused in her a new conscience concerning right and wrong. After this, He instructed her as to the true nature of God the Father and of spiritual worship. Finally, He revealed Himself to her as the new object of faith for which she waited. Thus He appealed to the heart, the conscience, the intellect, and to what Ian McLaren called 'the sixth sense.' We all have faith, and exercise it concerning various objects and persons every day. What we need today is to exercise it with reference to Jesus the Saviour. He is a Saviour. That is His business. Repent and put confidence in the good news."

Dr. Stucker will preach again tonight, a sermon especially adapted to young people, the subject being "A Young Man Whom Jesus Loved, but Could Not Save." The membership committee will meet at 7:30 o'clock to confer with those who desire to offer for membership.

Mr. Warner, assisted by the large chorus choir, will be in charge of the music.

METROPOLITAN OPERA HOUSE.

"The Girl of the Golden West" Draws a Great Audience.

Puccini's "La Fanciulla del West," founded on Belasco's play, "The Girl of the Golden West," had its first hearing this season at the Metropolitan Opera House last night. The opera also served to introduce to the regular Thursday night subscribers the return of Caruso, Emmy Destinn, Amato, Toscanini and other favorites, all of whom received an ovation equal to that accorded to them on Monday night, in "Aida." There was an immense audience, standing room was at a premium, the display of fine attire was lavish and the jewels, especially in the parterre row of boxes, were regal in magnificence. Whether or not the opera attains the vogue of "Tosca" and "Boheme," the fact remains that "La Fanciulla" pleased last night. The dramatic interest alone, which is at times intense, would serve to hold an audience, though the score is thoroughly commendable, in style somewhat following the order of "Tosca," with modulations here and there suggestive of the cloying sentimentalism of "Mme. Butterfly."

Caruso was in splendid voice, and was quite as lavish with his golden notes as in years past. He is also certainly more artistic and uses his gift more discreetly, and he made a better impression than at Monday's performance. His characterization of the role of Dick Johnson has also grown in finesse and his whole interpretation of the road agent stands as possibly his best achievement, artistically.

Emmy Destinn was a superb "Minnie." She proved quite a revelation last season in the intensity of her acting, and certainly at no other performance has she instilled more stirring effect into the part than the audience witnessed last night. Vocally the role does not call forth the tremendous resources at her command except to accentuate the wonderful upper register this great artist possesses and her marvelous breath control. In "Aida," "La Gioconda" and even in "Mme. Butterfly" she has more opportunity for the display of her various moods, which stamps her as one of the leading prima donnas of the world.

Amato was a convincing "Jack Rance," and vocally, of course, he filled every requirement. Dinh Gilly was especially commendable as Sonora, as was Marie Mattfield as the squaw, Wowkle. Other parts were well cast.

Toscanini conducted with his usual masterful results, and the scenic equipment and atmosphere proved a distinct triumph for him. The new management is also responsible for the issuance of a handsome programme, one that will be as much appreciated not only for the interesting data it contains, but also for the fact that it is well printed.

CELLAR BAKERIES IN SHOCKING STATE

Badly Ventilated, Floors Littered with Refuse, a Resort for Dogs and Chickens.

Shocking conditions, in some instances too revolting to be published, are set forth in regard to the cellar bakeries in New York City by Commissioner of Accounts Fosdick in an official report to Mayor Gaynor. Of the 4,000 and more bakeries in the Greater City there are about 100 which are above ground and in buildings erected or remodelled for that purpose. These are known as factory bakeries. In these the conditions were found to be good.

Seventy-five of the underground bakeries out of 145 which the investigators, accompanied by a representative of the Consumers' League, inspected were found to be improperly ventilated. In some all chance for ventilation was destroyed by the boarding up of windows. In others the windows opened into areaways unspeakably dirty.

In 50 per cent of the places the floors were dirty, and the walls are described as filthy with the flour, lard and mixing materials exposed to unclean surroundings.

Cellar Bakery Conditions.

In cellar bakeries in all sections of the East Side and West Side and Brooklyn the street clothes of the bakers hung about, shoes stood in mixing vats and pans not in use, and in some instances the bakers were found sleeping on the mixing tables.

In some instances bakers' families were found to be housed in the bakery and the mixing was done in rooms littered with bed clothing and refuse. Bakeries were found where cats were asleep in the flour, where a dog's kennel was kept and where rabbits and even chickens were raised.

The character of the employes, it is stated, seemed to take on the character of the place. In the shops above ground they wore white suits, had places to hang their street clothes, and there was an air of sanitation that was lost when the underground places were visited.

The Department of Health, the Commissioner says, under the law confines itself with the bread. And the State Bureau of Labor has charge of the factory conditions, yet there is no law that says a bakery shall not be underground.

These conditions, Mr. Fosdick says, can be remedied by giving to the Health Department the right to insist upon the proper regulations and safeguarding of food products. He recommends that the whole care of bakeries that supply bread to the city of 5,000,000 be placed under the care of this department instead of having the authority divided. He further proposes that the health authorities should have the right to close any bakery which after forty-eight hours' notice does not comply with the law.

Many of the conditions reported are now in violation of the law, which is supposed to be enforced by factory inspectors.

M. D.'S AFTER DRUGGISTS DEALING IN 'SIDE LINES'

War Declared on Souvenirs, Trading Stamps and General Merchandise.

PETITION TO THE PUBLIC.

East New York and Brownsville Physicians Want More Strict Attention to Prescriptions.

A concerted attack has been made by fifty-seven physicians of East New York and Brownsville on the pharmacists of their section who have adopted the practice of giving away souvenirs and selling confectionery, toys, crockery and other merchandise in their drug stores. The attack has taken the form of a petition or address to the public, in circular form, requesting that the druggists be held to more strict account in respect to their pharmaceutical functions.

The complaint of the doctors is that many of those whose business should be the careful compounding of prescriptions are little more than specialists in postage stamps, candy and souvenirs. The installation of numerous "side lines" in some of the newer drug stores in Brownsville and elsewhere, say the doctors, has made the handling of prescriptions, in many cases, mere incidents. It is maintained by the physicians that the preparation of medicine according to their orders should be the chief work of the druggists.

In waging this war against the druggists who are neglecting this "chief function" to embark in the general merchandise business, more than 50,000 petitions, signed with the names of fifty-seven physicians, are being carefully distributed in Brownsville. This course of action was decided upon at a recent meeting attended by most of the "medicos" in that section, at which the matter was discussed with a committee of the Brownsville Apothecary Society, representing about 100 pharmacists in the Twenty-sixth Ward. H. Feider, the president; Samuel J. Cohen, the secretary, and David N. Katz, chairman of the ways and means committee, told the physicians that the society, as a body, was even more anxious than the members of the medical fraternity to eliminate the evils of giving away trading stamps and souvenirs and selling general merchandise.

David N. Katz, speaking for the druggists, showed the evil to be so widespread and growing so rapidly that the gathering decided immediate and drastic action was necessary to check it. After much discussion, a petition was drawn up and signed by fifty-seven doctors. Fifty thousand copies of the petition have been printed and within the next few days will be given out among the residents of Brownsville. Here is the petition:

Text of the Doctors' Address to the Public.

"The physicians of this locality find that they owe a moral obligation to the public among whom they practice their vocation of alleviating pain and human suffering, and that obligation is, to teach the public to hold the pharmacists to stricter accountability in their pharmaceutical duties.

"In order to accomplish the saving of life, to prevent and alleviate pain, medicine must be administered. We physicians only prescribe drugs, and have our colleagues, the pharmacists, compound same. To our sorrow, the competition of recent years has driven a good many of those, to whom this important duty is intrusted, to general commercialism, such as all sorts of merchandise, the establishing of confectionery, toy and crockery shops, etc.—and the good Lord knows what not. It is this handling of a conglomeration of merchandise in drug stores that causes the pharmacist to pay very little attention to his laboratory and prescription work, upon which his whole mind should be entirely concentrated.

"The physicians worried and watched silently, until a new thing appeared upon the drug market, namely, the giving away of candies, lockingglasses, calendars, punching cards, crockery and trading stamps, and other nonsensical presents, that our modernized drug stores look more like souvenir shops than like pharmacies. We believe, therefore, that in the interest of the public and the physicians, a halt should be called to this pernicious state of affairs; that the public insist that pharmacists abstain from such modes of conduct unbecoming the members of the profession, whose prime and ultimate function is to concentrate all their attention upon the careful compounding of prescriptions and other pharmaceutical duties, and thus help us to perform our professional obligation to the public."

"It is a good cause," said Dr. John Linder, of 1509 Eastern Parkway, one of the best known physicians of the locality. "It doesn't seem possible that the pharmacist can do justice to the prescriptions of the physician, which must be compounded with the utmost care, if he must devote himself to traffic in general merchandise of all kinds. He neglects the most important function of all to pay attention to the thousand and one details attendant on the sale of as many different 'side lines,' and in that way the most conscientious work of the physician is sometimes nullified by the pharmacist. It is a sad commentary on the state of affairs that the pharmacist, who twenty years ago was regarded as a very important institution and the righthand man of the physician, is now looked upon as an ordinary merchant."

Knows All About Cigars, but Little About Drugs.

"Drastic action is necessary," said another physician, whose name appears on the circular, but who didn't care to be quoted. "I know of at least one so-called druggist who can discourse elegantly about the merits of certain brands of cigars he sells, but who is woefully ignorant in the use and handling of drugs."

A drugstore proprietor who gives souvenirs on Mondays was interviewed by an Eagle reporter.

"I can sell anything that people wish to buy," he replied to a question, "and I defy anybody to find anything wrong or inferior in the prescriptions that I put up. Did you know that quite a number of doctors sell medicine in the shape of tablets to their patients. They can't mix compounds because they haven't the facilities, but they do sell pills and tablets, and don't put the formulas on the boxes, either. The pharmacist can't renew the medicine because he doesn't know what it is, so the patient must visit the doctor again—understand?

"PASTOR" RUSSELL'S IDEAS ON MARITAL RELATIONS

Testimony in Wife's Separation Suit Shows That They Were Unusual.

EVEN THE JUDGE WAS PUZZLED

Some Extracts From the Court Records That Indicate How Russell Regarded Marriage.

One of the most interesting features of the Russell separation suit was the testimony relative to "Pastor" Russell's ideas as to the relations of husband and wife.

"Pastor" Russell's opinions on this relation were so unusual as to induce Judge Orlady of the Superior Court of Pennsylvania to say that he found it quite difficult to understand them, that "Pastor" Russell's standards in this respect must be radically different from those imposed by law.

The "Pastor's" opinions were expressed in conversations with his wife and in certain letters adressed to her, which figure in the testimony. On one occasion, according to her testimony, Mrs. Russell ventured to remark to her husband: "Even a dog has his rights."

The "Pastor's" reply, as cited by his wife, was: "You have no rights that I am bound to respect."

When Mrs. Russell was ill the "Pastor" explained to her what he thought caused the illness. The testimony of Mrs. Russell on that incident follows:

Q. Did he say anything to you that evening, or any other evening, while you were sick, as to what the cause of your illness was?

A. He said it was a judgment on me from God.

Q. For what?

A. I wasn't in harmony with him.

Russell Conveyed Disquieting Message Through Rose Ball.

"Pastor" Russell's testimony as to this incident is interesting. He is on the stand under cross-examination by Attorney Porter:

Q. Did you or did you not tell her that her sickness was the judgment of God upon her for her failure to obey you?

A. I did not.

Q. You didn't do that?

A. No.

Q. Nothing of that kind?

A. No, sir. I did say some things like that.

Q. What did you say?

A. Miss Ball, who was her special friend, and who I knew would tell her, I told her, in my opinion, this was a judgment from the Lord on her.

Q. And you intended Miss Ball to tell her that?

A. Yes, sir. I wished her to. I thought she ought to know it.

At this point in the examination the Court became interested and took up the examination.

Q. (By the court) Was that the time she had erysipelas?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you believe that was the judgment of the Almighty?

A. I think so.

Q. Where did you get that authority?

A. Well, whether my judgment is good or not—

Q. It is just your own judgment?

A. Yes, sir.

Mrs. Russell Had Serious Relapse After Hearing of Husband's Views.

Rose Ball is the girl who, according to Mrs. Russell's testimony, was frequently kissed and fondled by the "pastor." Mrs. Russell testified that when Rose Ball brought her this message from her husband it caused her to have a serious relapse, which kept her confined to her bed for some time longer.

The testimony of "Pastor" Russell on this incident concluded with the following question and answer:

Q. That is your idea of good treatment?

A. That was my idea. I was treating the lady the very best; there couldn't have been a kinder treatment given to anybody in the world, and I know I couldn't say this to herself, she wouldn't take it from me, and I thought that it might prove beneficial to her, and I prayed at the time that this sickness might result to her advantage, and I hoped it would.

In the course of her testimony Mrs. Russell also reported the following conversation as having taken place between her husband and herself:

Mrs. R.—"Husband, the trouble seems to spring out of the ground with you. I can't say a thing but what you find fault with it. What is the matter with you?"

P. R.—"I can show you a thousand women that would be glad to be in your place and that would know my wishes and do them."

Mrs. R.—"What is it you want?"

P. R.—"I can show you a thousand women that if I would say 'I want sweet potatoes,' sweet potatoes would be there. If I wanted pumpkin pie, pumpkin pie would be there."

"Pastor," Wife Testified, Claimed Fruits of Her Labors.

Mrs. Russell testified further that after she was compelled to leave her husband she returned to his house on one occasion and asked if he would let her have her books. When this request was refused, she said: "Will you let me have some of the comfort that I made while I was here?"

The "Pastor's" answer, as his wife quoted it on the stand, was: "No; everything that you made as my wife is mine."

A further illustration of the "Pastor's" peculiar views on the marital relation is found in a letter to his wife which figures in the separation suit as Exhibit No. 3. In this letter "Pastor" Russell says:

"For the past three years you have been gradually forcing upon me the evidence that we both erred in judgment when we married—that we are not adapted to each other, not capable of making each other happy, as we agreed to do, and supposed we could do. I conclude that I am adapted to no one, and that no one is adapted to me—except the Lord. I am glad that He and I understand each other and have confidence in each other."

Testimony similar to the above, of which there are dozens of pages, caused Judge Orlady of the Superior Court of Pennsylvania to say in confirming the separation which the jury awarded to Mrs. Russell: "In an analysis of the testimony it is quite difficult to understand the view of the respondent in regard to his duty as a husband to his wife. From his standpoint he doubtless felt that his rights as a husband were radically different from the standard imposed upon him by the law, and recognized by all the courts of this country. * * * His course of conduct toward his wife evidences such insistent egotism and extravagant self-praise that it would be manifest to the jury that his conduct toward her was one of continual arrogant domination that would necessarily render the life of any sensitive Christian woman a burden and make her condition intolerable."

JUMPED TO ESCAPE FIRE.

Mrs. Vaaug Breaks Heel in Jump From Porch Roof.

Babylon, L. I., November 18—Mrs. John S. Vaaug of Half Hollows, a sparsely settled settlement north of Deer Park, is a patient at the Babylon Hospital with a broken heel. The heel was broken in jumping from the second story of her home, when, awakening early yesterday morning, she found the building to be afire. The cause of the fire is unknown.

Mrs. Vaaug was awakened by the smell of smoke. Fearing that she could not get out of the building by the stairway, she climbed out upon the roof of the porch and jumped to the ground. In falling she broke the bone in her right heel. She dragged herself to a shed from which she watched the building rapidly burn to the ground. Houses are few in Half Hollows and it was not until 7 o'clock that Mrs. Vaaug was discovered by neighbors. She was attended by a Farmingdale physician and later brought to the Babylon Hospital.

Mrs. Vaaug's husband and her two daughters were all in New York City at the time of the fire.

The Coward Shoe

33 Out of Every 100 School Boys are Flat-footed!

This is the recent statement of a prominent Public School Official, and doubtless an even greater proportion of arch weakness would be discovered among school girls.

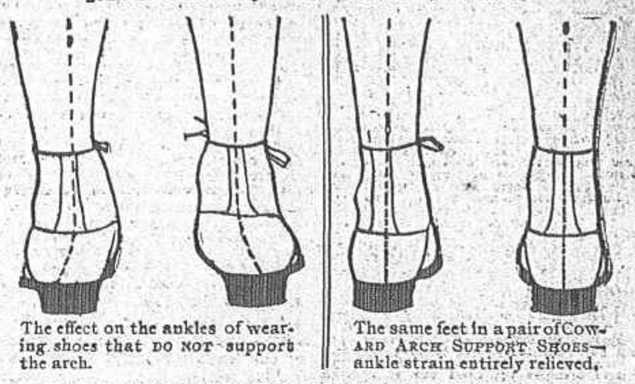

Among physiologists, it is generally admitted that "flat-foot" is a frequent cause of spinal trouble, as a broken arch throws the body in strained positions.

Orthopedists agree that proper mechanical support is the only effective remedy for falling arch and "flat-foot." Leading surgeons endorse the COWARD ARCH SUPPORT SHOE as the one which is anatomically correct and helpful.

This shoe, made on the Coward Orthopedic Last, allows the foot to meet the ground in a natural manner. The extension heel and arch support, steady the ankle, raise the sagging muscles, and encourage correct walk and carriage.

Wearing this Coward Shoe, holds the arch structure in its normal position and prevents and corrects "flat-foot."

The Coward is the original Arch Support Shoe. The public is cautioned against imitations. The genuine is sold only at the one Coward Shoe store.

The effect on the ankles of wearing shoes that DO NOT support the arch.

The same feet in a pair of COWARD ARCH SUPPORT SHOES—ankle strain entirely relieved.

Coward Arch Support Shoe and Coward Extension Heel, have been made by James S. Coward, in his Custom Department, for over 30 years.

COURT CLERKS'

ROOSEVELT-BARNES ALLIANCE RUMORED

Taft's Friends Greatly Disturbed, Fearing Loss of N. Y. Delegation in 1912.

BARNES IS SAYING NOTHING.

Colonel or Candidate He Selects, Perhaps La Follette, May Be Republican Standard Bearer Next Fall.

That Colonel Theodore Roosevelt has either formed an alliance with William Barnes, jr., the Republican State chairman of New York, and the organization which Barnes controls, or that he is seeking to form such an alliance in order to have a controlling say in the action of the New York delegates to the Republican National Convention next year, is the general belief among the politicians. It is a matter of grave concern to the friends of President Taft, who see in such an alliance the possible loss to Taft of the entire New York State delegation. They regard Roosevelt's editorial, attacking the policy of the Taft administration on the trust question an open declaration of war against the administration by Roosevelt, and should the Colonel manage to control the New York delegation, they fear he would throw it either to Senator La Follette of Wisconsin, or use it to obtain a nomination for himself.

Advices from Washington indicate that the belief at the Capital is that Barnes is not overfriendly to the Taft policies, and that he could not be relied upon to support Taft for renomination with any degree of enthusiasm. Washington has received information which leads some of the friends of Taft to say that Barnes cannot last much longer as State Chairman, but they fear that if Barnes goes out, Roosevelt may seize complete control in his own person. They realize that should Roosevelt stir up a revolt against Barnes, he could gather a formidable array, in which they include Postmaster Greiner, the Erie County leader, the Parsons-Koenig group in Manhattan, and possibly the Calder-Kracke strength in Kings County. They are not decided whether they want Barnes in or out, under the circumstances.

Barnes is saying nothing. He positively refuses to discuss personalities so far as the nomination for President is concerned, and gives out that he is working to secure a clear declaration of old-fashioned Republicanism in the party platform, and for nothing else at this time. His attitude is taken to indicate that he favors a reactionary policy with regard to national affairs, and this lends little encouragement to the Progressives, or to the friends of Taft who are supporting his policy of trust busting and reorganization of "Big Business" which Roosevelt terms "chaotic."

Should Roosevelt obtain the co-operation of Barnes, who represents to a certain degree the attitude of "Big Business" toward the Government, Roosevelt will have to modify many of the theories which he has fathered, and it is declared in Wall Street that Roosevelt is ready to announce a change of heart, even more complete than was indicated by his attack on Taft.

Local Republican Bosses All at Sea.

The local Republican leaders in Brooklyn and Manhattan are "up in the air" about the best policy to pursue. They are asking one another many questions, to none of which can a satisfactory answer be given at this time. Here are a few of the "political puzzles" which are causing the leaders sleepless nights:

"Has Roosevelt really tied up to Barnes and will this mean an anti-Taft attitude by the State organization?

"Will New York have to support Roosevelt for a third term nomination or some man whom Roosevelt favors, like La Follette?

"Can we afford to break with Taft, on the chance that he will be defeated in the National Convention?

"Can Barnes, who has fought Rooseveltism to a standstill, now take up with Roosevelt, or will he finally come out for Taft and thus lead to another fight for control of the State like that of last year?

"Where do we come in?"

Some weeks ago Timothy L. Woodruff invited Colonel Roosevelt to come over from Oyster Bay to witness the aviation meet at Nassau Boulevard. The Colonel was assured that he would not be made to occupy a conspicuous place, but that he would appear as a private guest. Roosevelt's reply was as follows, according to the story:

"You know, I wouldn't be there a minute before I would be flying in one of the machines, and I don't want to attract any attention to myself—just now."

The significance of that remark was not fully appreciated until the news became public on Thursday of Roosevelt's editorial.

CLASS AA IS ESTABLISHED

Long Fight of Big Minor Leagues Ends With Victory—Ebbets Plays in Charity Game.

San Antonio, Tex., November 18—Despite the strong opposition displayed yesterday to the proposition to have the American Association, Eastern League and Pacific Coast League declared Class AA in the minors, the scheme went through today on a reconsideration at the annual meeting of the National Association of Professional Baseball Leagues. Only three votes were cast against the plan today, although yesterday it was voted down by a comfortable majority. The Western League voted nay, but the Southern League withdrew its opposition.

If the Class AA leagues get what they want the majors will have to offer to them all bought and drafted players before attempting to plant such players in smaller circuits. The Class AA draft price is expected to be placed at $4,500, and in return for that high figure, the three big minors will undertake not to sell any of their men until after the first draft in September.

The charity game to be played by men famous in the baseball world was today's chief entertainment feature. Among the famous old-time ball players picked for this game were James H. (Orator) O'Rourke, the old New York catcher, and Dick Phelan, second baseman of the old St. Louis Maroons, and one of the few of the old infielders who never wore a glove. Among the club officials in the line-up were Charles Ebbets, Horace Fogel, and Charles W. Murphy.

AN UNUSUAL CASE.

An unusual suit was brought in the Supreme Court yesterday when Mrs. Anna Weinstein began action to annual the marriage of her son David to Mrs. Pauline Weinstein. Mrs. Weinstein complains that her son married Pauline on July 10, last, when he was only 17 years old. Benjamin Swartz of 132 Broadway is the attorney for the plaintiff.

SHIPWRECKED CREW HERE.

Captain Thomas F. Hart, of the schooner Stephen A. Loud, bound from Savannah to Boston—and which was wrecked October 26, was brought to this port yesterday by the steamship Celtic, of the White Star Line, from Liverpool. With him were Mate Robert Lindsay and the four men of the crew of the schooner, all of whom will be sent to their homes.

ATLANTICS ARE BEATEN.

The basketball team of the Atlantic Athletic Association of Rockaway, were beaten for the first time this season by the Ramblers. The game was played in the clubhouse of the Atlantics at Rockaway Beach and was close during the first half. That session ended with the score 14 to 15 in the Atlantics favor. During the last half the Ramblers turned the tables and the final score was 22 to 18 in the visitors favor.

He will spak on Monday before the Lutheran Ministerial Association of Manhattan.

HILTON DENIES REPORT

British and American Golf Champion Says Crowds Here Were Not Rowdy.

London, November 18—Since H. H. Hilton won the golf championship in America the English papers have accused American crowds at golf matches of lack of sportsmanship, being rowdy and boisterous, and trying to rattle foreign players. Mr. Hilton writes to the Westminster Gazette to correct these delusions. He says:

"The crowds were well conducted; perhaps they made a little too much noise to be quite in keeping with a golf match, but this was due to the enthusiasm and patriotism, for they never did anything with the slightest intention of interfering with my chances of success.

"When the championship was over no crowd could have given a player a more enthusiastic reception than the American crowd gave to me at Apawamis. The American, if more demonstrative, and perhaps on the whole a good deal more ignorant of the game and its traditions than the average Britisher, certainly knows how to take defeat as a sportsman quite as well as the golfers on this side.

"The reports I have heard of noisy, disgraceful behavior of American spectators are grossly unjust and unfair. As true American golfers are quite aware, the crowd at their own meetings does not behave itself with quite the same dignity and restraint that is to be found in our better class crowds on this side. But they are doing their utmost to educate the masses to the customs and traditions of the game as played on this side."

Mr. Hilton strongly advocates the adoption of the American system of using megaphones to keep the crowd off the course, and says the crowd at Apawamis was managed infinitely better than most of them over here.

SAYS TEAM WAS NOT BLAMED.

Dr. Fairley Declares That He Has Not Had to Apologize for It.

Editor The Brooklyn Daily Eagle:

My attention has been called to an article which appeared in your issue of Friday, the 10th inst. The articles states that I warned our football team that there must be no repetition of such conduct as had been manifested at our recent game with Adelphi and that I had apologized to Adelphi for the conduct of the team.

These statements are very far from the facts of the case. I have never had occasion to apologize to anyone for the conduct of our team. I did rebuke on the field and in our auditorium certain of our younger boys who at that game manifested a spirit of criticism of the officials, which I regarded as unsportsmanlike, but these boys were in no manner connected with our team.

WILLIAM FAIRLEY.

The following is what appeared in The Brooklyn Daily Eagle, and the reporter was assured by a member of the team is what actually took place. It may be, however, that the members of the team misinterpreted what the principal said. This is what appeared in The Eagle:

"Dr. Fairley made the recent football game between Commercial High School and Adelphi Academy an occasion of special mention at the general assembly. He was present at the game, so spoke from the card; and the way he trounced some of the players from the school left no doubt that he is out for the clean game. One fellow in particular was singled out for personal mention, and the entire team was reminded that hereafter the strictest kind of justice will be handed out to fellows who are rowdies while playing any game on the field. Dr. Fairley went so far as to say that he had written an apology to Dr. Levermore of Adelphi. His action and words are matters of favorable comment in the school corridors, and the fellows are taking the point of view that to win is the smallest part of good that may come from athletics.

About 150 persons attended, the majority of them deaf mutes. Another ball of the same sort will be held at the Imperial, Fulton street and Red Hook lane, early in February.

Except for the fact that the dancers conversed with their hands instead of in the usual way, the dance did not differ in character from any other.

Among those present were the Rev. John Chamberlain, general manager of the Church Mission to Deaf Mutes, at 619 West 145th street, Manhattan; William G. Gilbert, collector for the same mission, and John Wilkinson, a clerk in the New York Custom House.

BROWN DEFEATS VERMONT.

Providence, R. I., November 18—Brown defeated the University of Vermont football eleven here today on a muddy field, 6 to 0. In the final period Spracklin made thirty yards on two end runs and then made a successful forward pass to Ashbaugh, who carried the ball across Vermont's goal line. Ashbaugh also kicked the goal. The ball was in Vermont's territory practically throughout the game.

WILL DEBATE SOCIALISM.

MORE WORK FOR THE D. S. C.

CONFLICTING AUTHORITY IN FOOD INSPECTIONS

Commissioner Lederle Says the State Dept. Nominally Has Authority in All Cases.

CONDITIONS IN CITY BAD.

Detailed Report Given at Factory Inspection Hearing of Inspections Made by City Department.

Charles W. Barth, who was secretary and business agent of Bakers Union No. 1, of this city, was the first witness called today before the Factory Inspection Commission at the City Hall.

Abram I. Elkus, counsel for the Commission, interrogated Barth, who said he had worked in several bakeries in this city, and had found conditions in general "very bad." He said he found chickens and dogs and cats roaming at will in many of the shops.

David Cummings of 68 South Fourth street, Brooklyn, an investigator for the Commission, who inspected seventy-eight bakeries, said that in the cellar bakery at 175 Mott street he found a baker, ill, seated on the dough-mixing counter, drinking whiskey from a flask. Other men in the place were also sitting on dough-mixing benches, and a cat had found a cake tray a good bed.

Mary E. Dreier, of the Commission, asked many questions, and looked over a number of photographs showing the interior of bakeries. So far as the inspector could tell many of these shops had not been inspected in two years, one inspector's stamp bearing the date "December 28, 1909."

Commissioner Lederle was then called to the stand. He testified to the control the Department of Health exercises over bakeries. He said his department has the power to make special laws to govern any and all cases, but as the State and City have passed laws on the subject, the Board of Health has felt it would be unwise to step in. He said the Division of Food inspection in his department has, however, made many inspections of bakeries.

"The trouble has been then," Elkus asked, "that there is a certain duplication of authority in this matter?"

"Yes; primarily it is all under the State Department of Labor," Dr. Lederle said.

In November, 1910, twenty-nine inspectors made a canvass of all places where food is sold and in 1,395 places many minor nuisances were abated, and many violations were reported to the State Department of Labor.

Dr. Lederle said fifty shops of this character have been reported as public nuisances and ordered closed. He said his department does not examine bakers as Dr. Borsky did, for their physical condition, but he said the first step in this direction was recently taken when men handling milk were inspected, and some were found to be "typhoid carriers."

The Commissioner said he read the adverse report of the Commissioners of Accounts, made public in April last, and following that he directed his inspectors to report any cases of violations of the health laws.

Conditions in Brooklyn Unsatisfactory.

Dr. Lederle testified that he inspected thirty-six bakeries in Fulton street and in Myrtle avenue, Brooklyn, last Tuesday, where conditions generally were "not satisfactory." He said he found "bad eggs," but many good eggs. He made his principal criticism against the sanitary conditions. He made many notes of the conditions he found, and sent out notices to many of them. These notices compel certain changes.

"After your personal inspection, Dr. Lederle, what do you think of the general conditions in the bakeries?"

"In general they are very bad."

"What remedy would you suggest?"

"The most drastic, I would say."

Dr. Lederle said he had thirty food inspectors to look over 22,000 places where foodstuffs are sold.

When asked to express an opinion in regard to the best method of dealing with the situation, Dr. Lederle said:

"I would suggest that the State law be amended, to give the State Department of Labor power over bakeries except in New York City. Then give the Department of Health here the power, under certain amendments, and I will see to it that this situation is remedied. I will close objectionable places."

He said the work of his department in regard to pure food inspection has been greatly benefited by the attitude of the justices of the Court of Special Sessions and of the City Magistrates. The courts, he said, have taken a deep interest in the enforcement of the pure food laws.

The Commissioner said he hopes to get a suitable appropriation for his department for the purpose of adding many improvements. He said the appropriation for his department last year was $2,750,000, and that he had asked for $1,400,000 more this year. This now is up to the Board of Aldermen, he reminded the Commission.

Commissioner Lederle was asked what, if anything, he or his department has done, relating strictly to bakeries.

Many Bakeries Inspected.

"In the spring and early summer of 1910," he said, "inspectors of the division of food inspection examined 444 bakeries. In the case of unsanitary conditions reference was made to the division of sanitary inspections. Eighty-five notices calling for certain remedial measures were issued, seventy references were sent to the State Department of Labor, eighty-three notices were sent to other boroughs, for which the details of the alleged violations were not filed in my office, and we found 120 bakeries in good condition, after minor nuisances had been abated."

"In November, 1910, inspectors, drawn from all divisions of the department were brought into Manhattan, and examined all places where food is prepared for sale. Up to November 30, 1910, 1,395 bakeries were inspected. Seven hundred and twenty-nine references were made to the Department of Labor.

"From June 22 to October, 1911, the Department of Health inspected 1,168 bakeries in all boroughs, sixty-nine of these were referred to the State Labor Department, and notices to abate certain nuisances were sent to 148. Since November 1, fifty bakeries have been declared to be public nuisances or ordered vacated by the Department of Health. In 1,138 inspections of foodstuffs between October 16 and November 6, eighty-three actions were brought."

State Need Not Specify Number of Employes.

Assemblyman Smith asked Dr. Lederle if he thought it would be a violation of the so-called "home rule" idea in the event of the Legislature, taking the authority for inspecting bakeries from the State Department of Labor and giving it to the Department of Health, if the Legislature went a step further, and specified the exact number of inspectors to be employed in this work.

"It would be unnecessary," Commissioner Lederle said, "because the Board of Estimate could give us an appropriation and we could determine just what number of inspectors are needed. But I wouldn't suggest a violation of the 'home rule' idea in the matter, at all."

Dr. Lederle explained how his department has been caring for school children, in the way of medical examinations. He also went into the dental work done in the public schools.

"Would you advise medical examinations of bakers?" Elkus asked.

"No more than in other cases. I'd examine cooks, private and public, first," he replied.

Lillian Kasten of Milwaukee, Wis., employed as an investigator by the commission told of her visits to fourteen candy factories and to sixty-four places where human hair goods are made, detailing incidents she considered to be violations of the law. Elizabeth W. Wittingfeld of Corona, L. I., a Bachelor of Philosophy in the University of Syracuse, and employed as a special investigator by the commission, related her visits to many places where artificial flowers and feathers are made.

When the hearing adjourned announcement was made that the commission will next sit in Buffalo, one week from tomorrow. When the sessions in this city are resumed, about the second week in December, Seth Low, formerly Mayor of New York, will be called as the first witness, to tell about factory conditions as he knows them to exist.

THE RICE WAS HANDY.

It never rains but it pours, and a bridal couple who sailed for Bermuda, yesterday, on the Steamer Tagus know that this is also true of rice, as well as rain. Friends of the party discovered an open sack of rice on the pier, and filled their pockets with it. Then a bombardment of the blissful pair began, much to the amusement of other passengers. All eyes were turned towards the objects of the fusilade of rice, and the groom was so embarrassed that he ran away, and was not seen again by his friends till the ship [illegible] into the stream.

NEW AVENUE PLANNED; WOULD COST $16,000,000

To Run Only Eight Blocks Through the Heart of Manhattan.

SCHEME FAVORED BY McANENY

Henry Rutgers Marshall Is Author of Suggestion, and Explains Benefits Expected.

The very latest scheme for the improvement of New York City is the proposal to lay out a new thoroughfare—"New avenue"—leading from the corner of Fortieth street and Fifth avenue, to the neighborhood of Thirty-fourth street and Sixth avenue. The suggestion was made to President McAneny, in a letter by Henry Rutgers Marshall, formerly the architect member of the Municipal Art Commission, and has been gone over by Mr. McAneny with Chief Engineer Lewis of the Board of Estimate and the borough engineers. Mr. Lewis gives the assessed valuation of the property to be taken at $11,453,000, while he concedes that if the proposed widening of the south side of Fortieth street to its point of connection with Park avenue be included, $1,790,000 would be added. If 20 per cent. were added to the assessed valuation to cover the cost of acquiring the property the cost of the proposed improvement would be $13,744,000, or $15,892,000 if Fortieth street be included. President McAneny declares 20 per cent. a "fair margin as valuations now go," and adds:

"I have asked the recently-appointed Fifth Avenue Commission, of which Arnold W. Brunner is chairman, to give Mr. Marshall's plan their attention, and I have no doubt that the other interested local bodies will also take it up. Later on I shall expect to present it to the Board of Estimate for consideration there."

McAneny Declares Plan Deserves Careful Consideration.

Mr. McAneny declares that the plan deserves "very careful consideration." "It offers," he said yesterday, "a solution for a problem that is giving the city more and more concern, and does so apparently" with a minimum of incidental expense." The property to be taken lies between the Pennsylvania station and the Library corner at Fifth avenue and Fortieth street.

Mr. Marshall's letter is, in part, as follows:

"I have for a long time been convinced that it would have been a great gain to the development of the city, and to the accommodation of its citizens, if an avenue had been originally planned, leading from the corner of Fortieth street and Fifth avenue to the region of Thirty-fourth street and Sixth avenue. Since the completion of the Pennsylvania station at Thirty-third street and Seventh avenue, this need has become more apparent, and will become more and more evident as soon as the bridge across Forty-second street at the Grand Central Station makes Park avenue a natural mode of approach from the Upper East Side to the commercial center, near Thirty-fourth street. To cut an avenue on a straight line from Fifth avenue near Forty-second street to the Pennsylvania Railroad station would evidently be an immensely expensive operation inasmuch as it would pass through a large number of important buildings, notably the Herald and Macy buildings, and would cross Sixth avenue and Broadway in the middle of the blocks between the present intersections of these avenues with existing streets.

"It has lately occurred to me that the desired end might be accomplished by cutting an avenue some little distance to the north of the direct line above referred to. I therefore have made a careful study of the city plans and find that by swinging an avenue on a slight curve it could be made to start at the most desirable points and to cross Sixth avenue at its intersection with Thirty-seventh street, and furthermore that it would pass through a region which has thus far been very little developed, so that practically no important structures would have to be concerned. An avenue as suggested would compel the destruction of only two modern buildings, the Knox Building, at the corner of Fifth avenue and Fortieth street, and the small nine-story building only 40 feet wide near the corner of Thirty-seventh street and Sixth avenue. All the other buildings on the line suggested are very inferior structures, most of which are no higher than four stories, the highest one being the old Marlborough Hotel, which is only six stories high.

Borough President Steers, Public Works Commissioner Pounds, Superintendent of Highways Linde and many other of the borough officials have accepted invitations to be present as the guests of the employes of the Bureau of Highways at their second annual reception and entertainment, which will take place on

R. W. Burchell, Recording Secretary.

Wednesday evening, November 22, in Prospect Hall, Prospect avenue, near Fifth.

The organization of the various employes of the Bureau of Highways, which includes engineers, clerks, inspectors and other employes of that important bureau, is known as the Contingent Fund Association, and among its principal objects is a payment of a mortuary benefit to the families of deceased members. The association has done a great deal of good in a modest and unassuming way, and has disbursed to its beneficiaries since its organization about $3,000 in small amounts, at times when the recipients most needed such assistance, when sickness and death visited their homes.

Superintendent Linde is an active member of the association, and borough officials are in hearty sympathy with it.

President Unger of the association, with an efficient corps of committeemen, has been energetically at work arranging the preliminaries for the coming affair, engaging talent and providing in every way for the entertainment of the large number of guests who may be expected to throng Prospect Hall on the evening of November 22, and neither expense nor effort have been spared to ensure a delightful evening. The officers of the association are:

President, Daniel Unger; vice president, Peter J. Flood; secretaries, Thomas F. Kerwin and Richard W. Burchell; treasurer, Frederick W. Madden; sergeant-at-arms, Frank Brennan; executive committee, John Wolf, Thomas F. McDonald, Erwin D. Buckman.

PROTECTED VICE IN CHICAGO.

Witness Names High Police Officers and Politicians in His Dealings.

Chicago, November 18—Harry Brolaski, a former gambler, continued his testimony before the Civil Service Commission today, mentioning the names of police officers of high rank and also politicians in his story of alleged protected vice and graft. Among the persons with whom the witness declared he had direct dealings were Chief of Police McWeeny, Police Inspector Nicholas Hunt, Ben R. Hyman, an alleged gambler, and Thomas Costello, said to be a confidential representative of Inspector Hunts.

Brolaski produced an envelope marked "Harry," which he declared he had received at the home of Inspector Hun from the daughter of the police officer containing $100 as part payment for services he had performed.

The witness related that Alderman Michael Kenna at one time refused a proposal to go into a racetrack and pool room business.

The witness said a detective was assigned to Ben Hyman at one time to collect from resorts under police protection south of Thirty-ninth street.

Brolaski read a list of police officers who he said had grown rich in a few years. He mentioned the names of five policemen whose wealth he said ranged from $17,000 to $20,000.

CORPORATION OFFICES WERE IN BIBLE HOUSE

Pastor Russell Was Interested in Brick, Coal, Asphalt and Turpentine Companies.

HE HELD MUCH STOCK.

Told of Various Business Activities While on Stand in Another Libel Suit.

The extent and variety of "Pastor" Russell's business enterprise, and the fact that some of his $10 a month "Pilgrims" have accumulated thousands of dollars worth of stock in various corporations, were brought out when the "Pastor" was cross-examined in Washington, D. C., several years ago.

He had sued The Washington Post for a large amount for the manner in which it printed the "jellyfish" testimony which concerned his relation with Rose Ball. After Attorney Chapin Brown had finished his cross-examination the jury awarded the "Pastor" $1 damages.

After asking some questions relative to the United States Investment Company Attorney Brown turned his inquiry to some of the "Pastor's" other corporations.

Q. Were you one of the incorporators in 1902, of the United States Coal and Coke Company, incorporated in September, 1902, capital stock $100,000, $10,000 paid in, and the incorporators being William N. Wright, Henry Webber, E. O. Henninges, William E. Van Amburg and Charles T. Russell, each two hundred shares?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who are these other men I have mentioned—Wright, Webber, Hennings and Van Amburg?

A. Mr. Wright is presumably in heaven. He is dead, since.

Q. He cannot be anywhere else, according to your ideas, can he?

A. Yes; I think he could. He could be in hell—in the grave.

Q. Where are the others? Are they in as happy a state as he is?

A. Webber, I think, is in the same happy condition.

Q. How is Henninges?

A. Henninges is the representative of the society in Australia, now.

Q. Is he the one that married Rose Ball?

A. Yes.

Q. So Rose is in Australia?

A. Yes.

Q. Where is William E. Van Amberg?

A. In the office of the Watch Tower Bible and Tract Society.

Q. Is he a man of any means?

A. I really do not know what his means may be.

Q. How long has he been in the Watch Tower Society?

A. I think about six years.

Q. How much does he get a month?

(The question was objected to by counsel, and the objection sustained, but "Pastor" Russell makes no secret of the fact that his co-workers get $10 a month and expenses.)

Q. You took out a charter?

A. Yes, sir; a charter was taken out.

Q. Did it not have any assets in it?

A. No, sir; the whole matter was dissolved; these various parties were to put in money, but they did not do it subsequently.

Q. What became of that $10,000 required to be paid in before you can get a charter under the laws of Pennsylvania?

A. I do not remember now.

Q. Did you pay your share in?

A. I presume so; I don't remember.

Q. Were you interested in the Pittsburgh Asphaltum Company, Limited, chartered in 1893?

A. Yes, sir; I was.

Q. Were you on the board of directors of that company?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were you interested in the California Asphaltum Company, Limited?

A. I think, if I remember aright, that the Pittsburgh—yes, now I recall it to mind. The Pittsburgh Asphaltum Company, to some extent, changed its name. It is the same company, but it took the name of California Asphaltum Company. In my recollection: There were J. H. White, an attorney of Pittsburgh, Mr. Flinn, and also Mr. Dubbs, the patentee, and myself.

Q. Were you interested in the Selkes Brick Company, chartered in 1895, and were you one of the subscribers to the stock?

A. Yes, sir; in 1895.

Q. Where was its office.

A. It's office is in Allegheny.

Q. Where, what street?

A. On Arch street, in the Bible House.

Q. In the Bible Society?

A. Yes.

Q. Were you interested in the Brazilian Turpentine Company, Limited, chartered in 1894?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. With a capital stock of $100,000?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What was the extent of your interest in that?

A. I do not recall. I think it was a majority interest.

Q. Where was the office of that company, the Brazilian Turpentine Company, Limited?

A. I think it was first in Pittsburg, but I cannot recall at this minute; I think on Wood street, Pittsburg.

Q. Was it afterwards in Allegheny?

A. It was afterwards in Allegheny.

Q. On what street?

A. On Arch street, in the Bible House.

Q. You were dealing in oil lands, were you not?

A. No, sir. I was not dealing in oil lands.

Q. You could buy an eighth in different oil lands or oil leases?

A. Sometimes.

In view of the fact that "Pastor" Russell had previously testified that he was not engaged in business of any kind, and that he had given his time almost exclusively to religious work for the past fifteen years, the above testimony was listened to with a good deal of interest.

NO APPLE TREES IN EDEN!

The Caloosahatchee was very different from the Kissimmee; the current swifter, the banks bolder, the vegetation more tropical. In its way it was even more beautiful than the first river, but we liked it less, for here the habitations of men began to intrude upon our Eden. Orange and grape-fruit groves lined much of the banks. Very fine fruit grows here; some we bought; some hung over the bank temptingly within reach. We liked to be invited to go and pick for ourselves in the orchards. We would come out—with all we could carry—pulps, which we paid for, and all we could carry inside, which passed free. This was expected. Half a dozen oranges at an eating is nothing in Eden. Anyway, the natives of Edenlike apples much better, because they can't have them.—Hulbert Footner, in Outing.

Dr. Clarke's Anniversary Sermon---Russellism Defined

The Secret of Perpetual Youth;

by

The Rev. Dr. L. Mason Clarke.

YESTERDAY marked the ninetieth anniversary of the beginning of the First Presbyterian Church, Henry street, near Clark. Both services were largely attended, and in the morning, besides the fine sermon of the pastor, the Rev. Dr. L. Mason Clarke, there was special music which the organist and choirmaster, R. Huntington Woodman, and the choir carried out admirably. In the afternoon the Rev. Basil Douglas Hall, son of the late Rev. Dr. Charles Cuthbert Hall, preached a sermon on "The Ministry of Worship." Leaflets were distributed which bore the title, "A Few Words By Way of Retrospection and Prophecy," and which read as follows:

"It may be of interest to note on this occasion some facts indicative of the growth of this church. The earlier records are very incomplete and only during the last fifty years have approximately full reports of the work of the church been made and kept. It has been said that Dr. Cox, who was minister here from 1837 to 1854, used to carry the records in his hat—and the hat was lost. That seems likely when it appears that the total contributions of this church during the seventeen years of his pastorate are reported as amounting to $426.33!

"The record of admissions to the church is much more complete, though far from perfect. The total number of persons received into this communion is 5,225, according to the published reports, but again, seven years of Dr. Cox's pastorate are unaccounted for, and it is fair to suppose that at least 6,000 people have united with this church since the first.

"The church has had eight ministers during the ninety years—also I think, six sextons. Naturally it is the oldest Presbyterian church in Brooklyn. The present edifice was built sixty-five years ago.

"The contributions during the last fifty years amount to something over $1,705,188 reported, but four years of Dr. Robinson's pastorate are unaccounted for in this total, so that at least $50,000 should be added to the above sum. One million and three-quarters will be easily within the actual amount given during the last half century.

"As an indication of the steady development of the church up to its present ninetieth year, it may be recorded that during the first twenty years of this half century period the church gave $438,045. During the last thirty years the contributions have been $1,267,143. During the last twenty years the amount is $938,416. During the last ten years the total is $636,141. The accessions to membership in the last fifty years have numbered 3,225. Of these, 1,993 were received during the last thirty years; 1,269 during the last twenty years, and 933 during the last ten years.

"Figures often lie, but these are the figures. They would seem to indicate no particular decay and no fading out of interest. They do not justify any wail or lament over the sad condition of a downtown church.

"We believe this church is now anchored here, for generations to come. This particular place will be held fast and held vigorously, so far as human eye can see. The past quarter of a century has subjected this downtown church to a very severe test. Changes have swept over this part of Brooklyn tremendously, yet this church has grown quietly and regularly through them all. Changes have come to the intellectual forms of religious truths amazingly, but this church has gone from strength to strength, in reverence for the old and in hospitality to the new. We feel justified therefore in standing by that particular conception and idea of a Christian church which the past has tried to maintain and embody here.

"When, ten years hence, the centennial of this church shall be celebrated, whoever may be here to participate in those services, and whoever of us may not be here, the record thus far made will, we believe, be much exceeded, and our successors will continue in greater power the witness to spiritual faith and life. The same eternal Gospel of the blessed God will be proclaimed by new voices in new accents and it will win new victories over new conditions and new generations.

"There is indeed 'a smack of age' about this church, but it 'the relish of the saltness of time.' It is not infirmity or debility. Whatever may be the case in nature there is no winter drawing nigh in the life of this church. Nor is it shutting its doors against a setting sun. When all of us shall have gone, this old and noble church will be full of life and joy and power, because of the undying vigor of the undiminished Gospel which will still be proclaimed and accepted.

"Today we salute the Past with affectionate remembrance. Today we hail the Future with confidence and a cheer."

Dr. Clarke preached in the morning on "The Secret of Perpetual Youth." The text was from Deuteronomy xxxiv:7: "Moses was an hundred and twenty years old when he died; his eye was not dim nor his natural force abated." Dr. Clarke said:

A strange text, you think, for an occasion like this. A fragment of obituary for the celebration of ninety years of perpetual youth. As a matter of fact, however, this is not epitaph so much as it is anthem. The particular feature that so pleasantly entices our attention to this bit of Scripture is the subtle and inimitable recognition of the undying and undeniable part of this man Moses. One part of him was 120 years old, which is tolerably, or perhaps intolerably aged. The rest of him was not aged at all. On the contrary, it was so young that the biographer seems himself to be surprised that so many years and so much youth could go along together so happily in the same individual.

The beautiful and picturesque language of the Hebrew writer is that Moses died while yet "his eye was not dim nor his freshness fled." The word means the freshness of growing wood. A more curious and striking juxtaposition of opposite ideas. This venerable lawgiver was old and young at the same time; withered and fresh, contemporaneously; dying and growing both at once.

It is this felicitous combination of the temporal and eternal which gives such an undeniable charm to these words. Here was a man 120 years old who had the dew of the morning on him yet. Night had come, but daybreak had no gone away. Furthermore, this biographer hints very broadly that it was the least significant part of Moses which was aged or capable of becoming aged. The most significant part of him stayed fresh and kept on growing. Whatever was happening to the externals of this old man was not in any degree happening to his eternals. The Moses who was really Moses—the greatest genius of the Orient, the consummate hero of antiquity—was not old at 120 years. Whatever else died at six score, he did not die. He was as fresh as youth itself and continued on, growing and growing young.

And this significant contrast is carried still further by the biographer, as is shown by the gentle way in which the perishable part of Moses is quietly concealed in lonely obscurity—as if that did not possess any particular importance. "No man knoweth of his sepulcher"—which is a rather noteworthy admission of ignorance on the part of our writer. How it ever happened in an age when monuments were as common as they were then, that this national leader escaped from the eyes of some millions of devoted followers so completely as to leave no recollection among all those people as to where his venerable and venerated form was laid away, is, to my mind, a rather interesting way of emphasizing with beautiful delicacy and considerateness the certain fact that wherever that sepulcher was, it never contained Moses. He was not buried because he did not die, and the reason he did not die was because he was not dieable. And so with matchless dignity and reserve our writer leaves the perishable part of Moses alone in a solitude that is majestic.

On the edge of the land of promise,
The hillside for his pall,
To lie in state while angels wait,
With stars for tapers tall;
And the dark rock-pines, like tossing plumes,
Over his dust to wave;
And God's own hand in that lovely land
To lay him in the grave.

Now it is because our text suggests to us in this impressive manner these two entirely different levels upon which all great life lives, I have chosen it for our purpose this morning. I shall not invite you today to a consideration of the external history of this ninety-years-young church of the living God. Five years ago, upon a similar commemorative occasion we went into that narrative at length. It is unnecessary to repeat it now. What interests us at this time is precisely what is so engagingly set forth in our text about Moses—old age and perpetual youthfulness co-existing in the same person. And an institution is really a colossal man. It has both its externals and its eternals. Part of it is perishable and it is the least significant part. The part that really constitutes the institution is the imperishable part. What we are minded to accentuate today is that which stays fresh and continues growing in blissful disregard of 1821 and which is as young this morning as it was ninety years ago.

There is also another reason for not occupying our thought this morning with the outer shell of this history. The period of ninety years is not long when viewed as history. In the presence of the old churches and cathedrals, whose splendid strength has outworn five or ten centuries, ninety years seem only a very little time. And yet even ninety of the best years of the best age this old world has ever known need not be ashamed to stand forth boldly in the presence of five or ten centuries of less significant history and challenge attention. But whether ninety years are much or little, they are sufficient to illustrate and to demonstrate all that this anniversary needs to illustrate and demonstrate to us. The main question is not how old we are but whether we are still young. We are not especially concerned about the fact that this church happened to be organizedfour score and ten years ago, but we are intensely interested in asking if old age has overtaken the church itself and stamped upon its life any indubitable signs of debility and approaching dissolution. This is a good subject to consider from the vantage point of such an anniversary as this and I think it is the best use we can make of this occasion.

First, because the church as an institution, does not possess for many people the same significance it once possessed. It does not tower as high in the regard of a large number of thoughtful minds as once it did. It is common enough to hear the scornful criticism of this new age, intoxicated with its crude and raw new wine, calling upon all the gods there are to witness that the Church is not only antiquated but also decadent.

Then there is another company of people who speak with more affection but whose affection for the church expresses itself in lamentation. To them the church is without vision and without power. Its influence, once so vast and telling, is now a lingering memory, sweet and sad. The great days of the Christian pulpit are gone and no longer are there any giants in the land.

Then there is a third group in our modern society which is continually minimizing the Church under the specious plea of magnifying humanitarian service. To these the Church is at least a side issue. It has its place for those who are interested in what it is doing, but it is not in the middle of the stream in these new days. When there are so many wrongs to be righted and so many hungry people to be fed, what is the sense in spending so much time and money on maintaining an institution whose message dates back anywhere from two to ten thousand years?

Thus it is the Church gets pounded, criticised and scorned. One party complains that the creeds are outworn, the machinery is out of date and the message is meaningless. Another party is equally confident that the creeds are all right but the trouble lies in the Church's unbelief in its own creeds. The machinery is still good, but it is only half worked. The message is yet true but the messengers are faithless to it. And to a considerable portion of the Church itself is cheerfully contemplating a universal apostasy as the happy sign of the millennial age.

What shall we then say to these things? The best reply to be made is the answer presented by the living example of a church over which many years and decades have passed, and which still keeps the freshness of perpetual youth, which is both old and modern at one and the same time, which links the Past and Present together in graceful and grateful fellowship, and which with all this also has a prophetic spirit for a discernment and welcome of the Future.

Such a church, I humbly submit, it is our privilege to rejoice in today. No one can read the story of these ninety years of splendid growth without feeling the worth of this institution, and no one, looking upon this church in this anniversary year, will observe any signs of diminished vigor or of decaying life. There must be, then, a substantial reason for this condition of things. It is no answer to say that it is all due to circumstances. Circumstances indeed! Could any circumstances present a much more difficult situation? A church located here in this oldest part of Brooklyn, a downtown church, as the phrase is, here the passing years have brought such changes in every feature of society; a church around whose foundations the tides of new conditions have surged and seemed, and yet a church that never in all its ninety years was so firmly fixed and so richly growing. No, it is not due to circumstances. It is due to the quality of that faith which here has been represented—a faith which has been both reverent and progressive, both devout and liberal, both worshipful and prophetic. It is a faith which has not once been diverted from the mid-current of human interest nor gone away into the side channels of secondary movements. Standing on its firm foundation of evangelical religion, this church has never been either visionary or blind, neither a believer in a God who spoke only centuries ago, and who has been silent ever since, nor yet a devotee of the transient whims that have come and gone over the religious life of men like the fleeting clouds on the face of the summer sky. From the devout Sanford, its first minister, on through the pastorate of the saintly Carroll, through the brilliant and learned service of the amazing and corruscating Dr. Cox, through the shorter pastorates of the young Hogarth, of the musical Robinson, and of Seaver, whose name is the only one of all that is still unstarred, and through that exquisite ministry of twenty years in which Dr. Hall added grace to grace—through all of these, I say, it has been the quality of the faith which this church has shown that has made the church to grow with the growth of the world, representing in its spirit the breadth and the freedom, and also the historic spirituality of the Gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ.

Details are out of the question today, and they are needless as well. It is simply the sublime and august fact which I would summon before your sincere and honest judgment. Here has been solved the mystery of perpetual youth. Ninety years at least have gone and "the freshness has not fled."

Again, let us in the light of this anniversary think a moment of some of the perishable facts of this church—the things that have died and which, like the body of Moses, have been buried only God knows where. I do not know of any occasion which can more clearly disclose the difference between theology and religion than an anniversary like this. The theology which this church represents and believes in today is no more like that which it once represented and believed in than are these glowing windows like those which the same old sun shone through upon the congregation of ninety years ago. How many things have died out of men's thoughts of God—died because they were not calculated to live! The old New England theology which then obtained all but universally, has today only a single representative among all the theological seminaries east of the Mississippi, and even that representative is so changed from the orfginal type as to be hardly recognizable.

It is a part of the true business of every church to bury its dead theology, but it is also a church's business to perform that service reverently, not scornfully or with arrogant rudeness and contempt. Many a church has died because it did not know how to treat the past with decency and respect.

Then, too, think a moment of how the idea of worship has steadily grown and developed here, and it must grow still more and more, securing even richer and worthier expressions. During 30 years there has been a vast change in the appreciation of the power of worship, and it has come because of the increasing faith in God as a lover of beauty and harmony and grace. Nor has it been found that the enrichment of praise in this non-ritualistic church has lowered spiritual feeling—rather it has been demonstrated to a degree that is not describable by any other word than "magnificent," that richness of form can bring spiritual culture to the worshipping soul. I feel, furthermore, that I should be untrue both to your feeling and to my own, if on this occasion I did not give voice to the great throbbing heart of this church in recognition of that quality of faith which has made possible and also of that skilled devoutness which has made actual the praise which from year to year has filled this house of God. Borrowing an expression from a sister communion this has been called, and I think appropriately called, a high church Presbyterian. Let it ever remain so. Let it be a broad church, as broad as humanity, as broad as the gospel which covers humanity. Let it be a high church too, high in its ideals of worship, high in its aspirations for the best, high in its standards of religious expressions, daring to consecrate culture and ability and genius and talent to the highest service music can render to the world or brains can impart to piety.

Then, once more, this history we are celebrating today illustrates that constant readjustment of religion to life, which a growing world must witness if it is to keep its religion at all, and which a church must continually be prepared to make if it is to enjoy perpetual youth in the midst of all its advancing years.

It is when the prophetic note dies out that the church dies out too. Some churches dwell in the past entirely. Others dwell more exclusively in the future, busied mostly with the world to come or with the second advent notion of a sudden and momentarily impending conquest of all unrighteousness. Then still other churches are so concerned with the present that they have lost their historic perspective and their prophetic vision. Illustrations are abundant. Examples of each kind are not difficult to find. But it is the fine and Christian thing to preserve the sense of all these three relationships. Then this readjustment of religion to the life of the growing world will be wisely effected and successfully demonstrated.

This is not simply a church, it is a Christian church. The one central fact which organized it and which has kept it fresh and unfading is the fact of Christ—a fact interpreted in ever new forms of faith—a fact never dimmed and never uncertain, but a fact which is capable of meeting every new situation in the present and which alone is able to face the future with prophetic confidence.

The freshness of perpetual youth is possible to an old church only when this central fact of God in Christ is articulated with the advancing knowledge of men and with the permanent needs of men. We are evangelical, but not in the sense in which that word is often used. It is with us no term to describe our exclusiveness, but our inclusiveness. We are trying to grow up into the freedom and broadness and reverence of Christ's evangel. That evangel must be related to all the truth as fast as the truth is learned. It must and it will welcome every human interest to its capacious heart. It will rejoice in every intellectual gain and prize as pure gold every value of human genius. Most of all, it must be Christian in its spirit and in its attitudes. It must speak in the accents of Christ and live in the largeness of that divine Love which makes Christ the Christ of God and the Church the Church the Church of God.

I shall detain you but a moment longer. At such a moment as this we cannot help being impressed by the way in which the providence of God has continued to preserve the stream of life in this old and young church. Beautifully independent of time has this timeless river flowed on. Equally independent of time will the river continue to flow. No one man and no group of men will ever become indispensable to this church.

The perishable will perish. The imperishable will forever be fresh and growing. I have read that when a little more than fifty years ago, that most eminent representative of the Wesleyan Church of England, Jabez Bunting, died, a distinguished clergyman was invited to preach a memorial discourse. In a glowing peroration he declared: "When Jabez Bunting died, the sun of Methodism set." Whereupon a layman rose in his place to the audience and exclaimed: "Glory be to God, that's a lie!" The observation may have been more pointed than polite, but it was the utterance of a profound truth. Jesus Christ never dies, and the Church that is loyal to His spirit and His truth will outlast the ages.

It is heartening to us today to think of this church going on and on, on and on, blessing the generations to come. It is inspiring to feel that we of the present have not been so disloyal to the fathers gone as to come to this hour discouraged and enfeebled. It is more inspiring to feel that we have at least tried to be faithful to our faith, and that we have helped to strengthen the church which the future shall yet more richly adorn.

Enough to have had some part in such a goodly fellowship and service. Enough to mingle in the sweet and sacred joys of such a Christian communion. Enough to contemplate the future coming on, with unbroken confidence and gladness, then from some mount of celestial vision in that timeless sky to look down upon the continued triumphs of the eternal Gospel of our eternal Christ.

Then the Lord who has been our dwelling place in all generations will gather all His generations in His dwelling place on high, and fathers' fathers and children's children will be fellows all, in that immortal consummation! Amen and Amen!

Work for Peace and Missions.

The Commission on Peace and Arbitration of the Federal Council of Churches, representing 18,000,000 Christians of America, has sent out to 125,000 ministers a formal letter urging them to preach on the arbitration treaties now before the United States Senate and to present the matter to their official boards to the end that the largest possible public sentiment may be aroused in favor of President Taft's peace plans. Members of the commission include Bishop Greer, the Rev. Drs. Charles E. Jefferson, Henry M. Sanders, James M. Farrar and J. B. Remensnyder, who is its president; John Henry Jowett, Frederick Lynch and James Wood, the new president of the American Bible Society; Bishop Hughes, Bishop Quayle and Bishop Lambuth of the Methodist Church; Judge Kanning of New Jersey, president of the American Board; the president of Vanderbilt University, Henry Wade Rogers of Yale, and others.

According to the Church News Association, the Rev. Dr. Robert S. MacArthur, president of the World Baptist Alliance, expects to sail for Russia in about a fortnight, hoping to interview the Czar and ask for larger religious freedom, not for Baptists alone, but for all bodies, including the Jews. Dr. MacArthur will take part in the dedication of a new Baptist church in St. Petersburg, assist in Baptist services in Moscow, and then proceed on a world tour of inspection of Baptist mission work. He will be absent a year, and perhaps longer.

The gifts of Methodists for regular work of their own foreign mission board last year were $1,072,997, as compared with $1,156,794 the previous year. Special gifts increased from $320,000 to $438,000, and so made the total for the year slightly in excess of 1910. The total in 1910 was $1,476,000 and this year $1,511,000. Philadelphia leads all Methodist conferences, with $36,000, and Pittsburg comes next with $34,000. Baltimore Methodists gave $30,000; Central Pennsylvania, $33,000; New York, $26,000; and Brooklyn, which district includes much of Connecticut, $28,000. Chicago Methodists gave $27,000, and Northern New Jersey, called the Newark Conference, $26,800.

The moderator of the Congregational National Council, the Rev. Dr. Nehemiah Boynton, is undertaking to secure the adoption of peace resolutions by every Congregational organization in America. Annual meetings of the benevolent societies in Milwaukee and Chicago adopted the resolutions. So have annual conventions of the Episcopal dioceses. Addresses by Secretary of State Knox and others are being printed and sent broadcast to ministers and to Christian leaders of all names. The address of Cardinal Gibbons during his recent jubilee is being sent to Catholic priests. Letters are being written to almost everybody thought to have influence with United States Senators. President Taft has drawn into his plan, almost without effort of his own, such work for peace by Christian bodies, all names and everywhere, as the oldest of church workers cannot recall.

WHAT RUSSELLISM IS.

How Money Is Pouring Into the "Pastor's" Coffers.

That the world as it is now constituted will come to an end in October, 1914, is the central tenet of Russellism. Believing that the end of the material world is near and that only through "sacrifice" of their material substance they can become of the "elect" under the New Dispensation, hundreds of Russell's followers are turning their property over to him in preparation for the end.

Many of them give it outright, and in that case he sometimes assures them an annuity as long as they live. Others deed it to him in their wills. As October, 1914, the time Russell fixes as marking the end of "Gentile times" approaches, the number of donations is increasing, and there is every prospect that Russell will soon be many times a millionaire.

In all his books and early writings, Russell fixed the inauguration of Messiah's Kingdom definitely for October, 1914. He has taken the prophecies of Daniel, foretelling a time of trouble, and every time there is a strike or a revolution "Pastor" Russell points out to his followers that this goes to show our near approach to the Millennial Dawn.

In The Watch Tower of January 1, of this year, of which thirty thousand copies were printed and scattered everywhere, he declares that "strife, lock-outs, panics, etc—will be prominent factors in the precipitation of the anarchy which all so justly dread."

"While the world is outwardly at peace there is great unrest in the hearts of humanity * * * Only the Lord knows to what extent and how long the winds of strife will be held, as pictorially set forth in the Revelation."

In "The Studies in the Scriptures" Russell explains a carefully worked-out chronological system which Russellites declare to be infallible, and according to which the present world must end in October, 1914. Having established this idea, Russell proceeds to glorify "sacrifice" as the best way of becoming a member of the "elect" who will enjoy ground floor privileges in the New Dispensation. His followers are urged to give up their money to spread the "Glad Tidings," for 'The heavenly things are to be attained only by those who sacrifice earthly things.'—(Watch Tower, October 15, 1911, page 392).

"Pastor" Russell has found this prognostication of the end of all things particularly effective with persons in whose family there has recently been a death. In small towns throughout New York, Pennsylvania, and other States, Russell's agents make it a practice to attend funeral services, where they warn people that "the age of wrath is at hand," and distribute the Russell literature. Relatives are urged to make a contribution for spreading the "Glad Tidings" as a memorial to the dead, and frequently do so.

In his last annual report Russell admitted receipts for the year of $148,777.10, but this is not nearly everything that he received. Russell runs his business so that no single man except himself knows much about it.

Much of the money that comes in Russell invests in real estate, mining stocks, and various speculative enterprises, making the investments in the names of such dummy corporations as the United States Investment Company. According to a review of testimony contained in a brief presented to the Pennsylvania courts in connection with his wife's alimony proceedings his income has increased at an enormous rate. The brief says:

"His net income prior to 1898 must have been about $300,000, or an average of about $20,000 a year over and above donations, which he says were numerous during that period.

"Since early in 1898 he has been transacting the great bulk of his business under cover of the society, and in its name, and according to his own testimony, said business has expanded to an extent that is little less than marvelous, and shows clearly the enormous earning power of this extraordinary business preacher. At page 206, he says that the increase of the business of the society since his wife had cognizance of it, has probably been tenfold. Then, to wit, the office force was five or six, while in 1906 it was thirty-four."

The same proportionate increase has continued since the "pastor" has resided in Brooklyn. Because no one has endeavored to interfere with his practices he has extended his operations until they cover every State in the Union as well as most countries in Europe. His employes are now numbered by the hundred, and the output of his advertising plant on Hicks street exceeds that of the largest business institutions in Brooklyn. A total of 144,311 cards and letters went out from the correspondence department last year; 600,157 "Scripture Studies," foretelling the end of the world, were put into circulation. By circulating Russell's predictions about the forthcoming catastrophe, "the Lord's people, poor or rich, have opportunity for service. They are realizing this more and more. As their consecration and zeal deepen they send us money for the printing and assist in the circulation."—("Pastor" Russell, writing in the Watch Tower on the annual report for 1910.)

"FRED" SHANNON SET TYPE.

Of the many favorable expressions concerning "The Soul's Atlas" probably not one is more highly appreciated by the author, the Rev. Frederick F. Shannon, than the following, which appeared in a recent number of the Nashville Christian Advocate, the general organ of the Methodist Episcopal Church South. The writer, Professor William R. Webb, is one of the two famous Webb brothers of Webb School, Bellbuckle, Tenn., recognized as one of the leading boys schools of the country, and where Mr. Shannon received his preparatory training. Professor John M. Webb, the younger of the two brothers, who have for forty years trained boys for American and English universities and colleges, is regarded as one of the foremost Greek scholars of the country and an authority on Browning. Professor Webb's article is as follows:

Some years ago Fred Shannon, a typesetter in the publishing house at Nashville, told Dr. Tillett that he wished to preach the gospel. Dr. Tillett advised him to go to school. He came to Webb School at Bellbuckle. He was a model student. He not only did his best for himself, but he was also an earnest worker in the Y. M. C. A. of the school. His influence among his fellow students was felt long after he went elsewhere. For many years he has been the pastor of Grace Church, Brooklyn, N. Y. He ranks among the great preachers of his day. His book of sermons, "The Atlas of the Soul," is just out. I wish, through the Advocate, to call the attention of young men, both preachers and laymen, to its great value. He presents to young men ideals of infinite possibilities in simple and elegant English. His style is a model. His illustrations, drawn from nature and literature, illustrate most admirably. His poetic imagery and his apt quotations from the great poets charm the attention. His wonderful familiarity with Scripture and classic literature shows how a student can use his resources for the advancement of the cause of God. To discriminate among so many great sermons is, perhaps, daring; but "The Great Life," "Caesar's Saints" and "The Easter Pilgrims" are worth many times the cost of the book, which contains fourteen sermons. I have sent some of these sermons to my youngest son, who was away from home, as they came out in The Brooklyn Eagle.

DR. STUCKER'S SERMONS.

The evangelistic meetings which have been in progress in the Hanson Place Baptist Church, corner of South Portland avenue, for the past two weeks, under the direction of Dr. Edwin S. Stucker of Ottawa, Kan., came to a close last night. The meetings yesterday were largely attended, and the interest was marked. At the evening service the pastor, Dr. Llewellyn L. Henson, baptized seven candidates as a partial result of the meetings, and received three others by letter. Several other candidates for baptism are waiting, and a number of persons in addition are to be received by letter from other churches.

At the morning service Dr. Stucker's subject was "Does God Care?" He found his answer in the Twenty-third Psalm. "The Lord is my shepherd, I shall not want." The speaker described the customs of the shepherds in Palestine and found in the relations of shepherds and sheep many illustrations of the personal care of the Shepherd-God toward His people. Like a shepherd, also, God cares for one who is lost, and makes effort directly and through His people to save that one.

Dr. Stucker gave an address at the afternoon session of the Sunday school, and preached again at night, when a second sermon was based on "The Shepherd Psalm," which furnished illustration for New Testament teaching concerning the Christian's death and entrance into the eternal sheepfold. At the close of this service, at the request of Dr. Henson, the congregation voted enthusiastically to thank Dr. Stucker and Mr. Warner for coming to Brooklyn, and to send a message of commendation of their work to the church in Washington. The congregation then sang with fervor, "God Be With You Till We Meet Again," and Dr. Stucker led in a closing prayer.

In the afternoon Dr. Stucker and Mr. Warner visited the South Reformed Church, Fifty-fifth street and Fourth avenue, where they conducted evangelistic services during the Chapman-Alexander campaign last February. Dr. W. J. MacDonald and Dr. T. J. Parker had called their congregations together for a special evangelistic service at 4 p.m., when the auditorium was filled.

Dr. Stucker and Mr. Warner left this morning for Washington, D. C., where they begin tonight a series of meetings with the Bethany Baptist Church, of which the Rev. Hugh T. Stevenson is pastor.

My Stewardship:

by

The Rev. Caleb S. S. Dutton.

YESTERDAY was the fifth anniversary of the coming of the Rev. Caleb S. S. Dutton to the pastorate of the Second Unitarian Church, Clinton and Congress streets, to succeed the late poet-preacher, the Rev. John White Chadwick. The occasion was celebrated by a special service in the morning, at which Mr. Dutton preached a sermon on "My Stewardship." He said:

I came among you five years ago last October. Late in that month you invited me to be your minister and I was settled here on November 18, 1906. I feel that I have had the pleasure of serving here for five years with a congregation noted for its loyalty and devotion. They have been five years rich in memory. Some of our most devoted members have passed away, and we miss them. I have often quoted George Eliot's lines; let me do so again today: "Our finest hope is our finest memory."

It took a great deal of courage to come here to follow the wonderful ministry of Mr. Chadwick, but I have found it a great deal easier to follow so great a man and to work in the light of a great memory which had been one of radiant hope as the years have gone on, because of what you have been, and you cannot ever know how much I appreciate the devotion and loyal backing that I have received from this congregation.

I want to speak to you this morning about my stewardship. In looking over some old sermons of Mr. Chadwick's, I discovered one called "My Stewardship." He had done this very thing five years after he had settled here. I took the hint and said to myself: "This is exactly what I will do when my fifth anniversary comes." So I want to speak to you on my stewardship and if you want a text, we will take Luke xvi:2: "Give an account of thy stewardship." Certainly I did not come here as a five-talent man, perhaps not as a three-talent man, probably as a one-talent man; but I did come with five very specific points in my own mind. I came with five very definite principles that I wanted to stand for in this pulpit.

First, I came to preach a free religion. I came here to preach a positive free religion. I realized at that time that most of the negative work had been done and that it would be useless to take this congregation any way over the old ground of Biblical criticism and the old fight against materialism, and to explain to this congregation that it was quite possible in these days of evolution for a spiritual religion to live. I realized that the fathers had done the negative work. Splendid work in its way, and that the time had come for a positive enunciation of free religion.

I came here, then, first to speak of the confirmations concerning the spiritual life. It did not make very much difference then, and even less now, what the critical world had to say about the spiritual life, because I look for the spiritual life as expressed in men's lives, and if I see that being expressed I am not going to worry very much about the routes. That is the first thing that came into my mind: to preach about the positive, free religion, forgetting all negative things, and to preach affirmations of religion as I understood them—the life of the soul in man and the relation of man to an ever-living God.

And then, I came, secondly (I hate to say this, but I did, anyway), I came with the idea that scholarship was a very important thing. I came with the idea of scholarship. You know I have always been very jealous for my profession. I realized that at one time the ministry was a learned profession, and that today it is far away from being so. And yet, for the life of me, I cannot tell why it is not. And so I determined to keep constantly before you the idea of scholarship. I wanted to preach a free religion that was not afraid of the world of thought. I said: "I shall preach a positive religion that is not afraid to sail the seas of thought, and find out what there is there." And so I have constantly brought into this pulpit philanthropic problems, for I wanted a free religion, not afraid to look at a physical religion that was propounding scientific evidence of the latest quality.

Then again, I have, so far as I was able, met theological problems of the day and have tried to make modern literature minister to you. I realized, of course, that one man, however big or small, could only touch these things more or less superficially. And then, again, to preach to you a social gospel I came here feeling that it was my business, in so far as I was able, to live in the democracy of God on earth. And so I have brought into this pulpit from time to time the economic problems of the day. And I know I have sometimes offended people who doubted whether it was right to bring economic problems into the pulpit on Sunday morning. Occasionally I have brought in political problems, the problems of a commercial age. But this thing I have striven to do: To attack those problems absolutely from the height of the eternal. And my understanding of religion today is this: That it has everything to do with the social problems of our time, and that a religion that dare not speak out boldly, fearlessly and candidly on these problems is not worth living; and that the man who dare not bring these things up and consecrate them by bringing them into the pulpit is not earning his salt. I have understood that it was the business of a free, spiritual religion to put a halo about the great problems of our commercial age.

Then again, I came to preach an intimate personal religion, for I have realized that all the problems of this life are fundamental, individual problems, and so I preached probably more than anything else to individuals. I have never seen any good in criticising the sins of the people on the other side of the street so long as I had people in front of me. I am to speak at Cooper Union tonight. I believe in meeting the people and that includes meeting my church people in the pews. And so I have been preaching first, last and all the time to individuals a drastic, searching, fundamental gospel that will appeal to the souls of men—the sovereignty of Love, and not the love of God, because my conception of God is ethical. I look upon life as a tragic drama, with real losses and real failures, and real chances of success and real possibilities of creating new things. We are all, as Paul said, "Co-workers with God," and God needs the best men to help Him. It is up to me to make good in this universe, but while I have that chance I can lose it. I cannot honestly preach universalism. I cannot preach that this great humanity is always going to come into the great abode of bliss because I realize a great many of us are not worth while. I have preached to you a socialized, personal, intimate gospel. I have emphasized this intimate note for three reasons, to overcome three diseases that affect, not only our church, but the whole church: Triviality, Uncertainty and Complacency. We must, to overcome these diseases, have a new, great note in our gospel; our religion must be ethical and not lyrical. We have followed too much Emerson and the sweet teachi[ng] of the lyrical singers and not the mi[ghty] notes of Dante and Milton. We [must] overcome our sweet tone and we [must] have an ethical and tragic language. [In] to overcome our uncertainty we [must] have the prayer element in our relig[ion]. And to overcome our complacency, [the] Unitarian well-to-doness, we must e[m]phasize the possibility of failure, [the] chances of losing out.

Then, fifth, I came to minister to you [and] to be with you in your joys and sorrow[s] to be, indeed, your minister. And then I came not only to minister to you, but to the community, and I have thrown myself whole-heartedly into the vast movements in our community as far as I was able. I came to minister to all men intellectually, socially and spiritually.

This, then, was my fivefold aim to preach a positive religion, to preach intellectual freedom, to move you to social concern, to make you see spiritual reality and to make you serve the community. Now you in the pews are the best judges of the degree of accomplishment to which I have attained. I realize my shortcomings. I realize that perhaps I have been impatient in wanting you to go faster than was possible. Our church has not had a phenomenal growth; our numbers are not great. I have sometimes asked, Have we intensified in the past five years? Have we a keener sense of spiritual religion? Do we, indeed, live here each Sunday morning? Do we really believe, right down in our hearts that the Borough of Brooklyn needs us? Are we indeed crusaders against sin and vice, stupidity and ignorance, race and class hatred, economic wrong, unsocial life and a faithless democracy? If we do feel that we have a deeper and nobler and richer life, and that we can do something through this instrument of our church, for this borough; that we believe in Almighty God and that He needs us and that we are going to work with Him against all forms of vice and are going to lose much of ourselves in the service, then I say it is certainly worth while. Our effectiveness must be for today, and the future will take care of itself.

Now, of course, there have been some changes in these past five years. I have come, as perhaps you have, also, to emphasize volition more and principles less. I have preached service more and individual and denominational respectability less; religion more and Unitarianism less. For after all, Unitarianism is only part of a very much larger movement. I have cared very little about talking of the Unitarian denomination. I care very much about preaching Christianity, the religion of the living God. I can say, too, that my optimism is very much greater than at first, but my sense of failure is more real. My religion is very much more severe than it was then, and I must insist more and more on moral efficiency. My optimism is greater because I realize the possibilities of pessimism and failure. My appreciation of the greatness of God is greater because I realize that He has given over to the sons of men a possibility of winning out or losing out. The real, fundamental principle of a free religion is that God helps man and that God needs man's help. Religion is necessary because it does not despise the world, and while it does not agree with the world, it aims to sanctify the world because it moves from a higher plane.

We hear it said that the day of religion is past and that men will be satisfied to live without a thought of a superhuman power. I think it is not difficult to see that religion is permanently more necessary to man as his need of it grows more certain, as he advances in culture. Let us ask, What is the definition of the right religion? What is the object of religion? What does man think about when he thinks religiously? Speaking in general terms, we will say the object of religion is the power beyond the world. The world as we know it never explains the source from which it comes, or the end to which it is moving, or the energy that sustains its existence. Regarded merely as a cause, purpose or energy, the power beyond is not the object of religion, but a philosophic speculation. Our attitude is this: We believe that this great power stands in some effective relation to our life. There is religion when we fear, or love, or reverence it. To that power beyond, that all-cause, we give the name of God. Without religion there is so little meaning in our life-relation to this great world. In our point of view, our life does matter. The fulfilment of our duty does matter. God knows us. I say not God himself can make His best without the best of men to help Him. Our personal life does matter. We are individuals, personalities, and we are here to bring about great issues. Every man and woman must feel the burden of the whole race on his or her shoulders. I think this religion heightens our interest in life. We are soldiers in the great cause that is to fight sins and social wrong.

This religion accords with the idea of free manhood. We are called to serve and have a chance to refuse. It is an ethical religion akin to the spiritual. It finds answer in all those who love Homer and Shakspeare and are proud of the records of their kin in every branch of action and thought. Science is to be explored, fair structures built, waste places to be brought into the service of man, the good seed to be sown in human lives that are still unborn.

As I stand here after serving you five years I cannot but think that it is my task, my stewardship, to bring about week by week some notes of this ethical religion, some inspiration to live this ethic religion, to speak to you from the height, not so much to comfort as to encourage you, not to tell you that life is a great and pleasing thing, but that it is a great adventure; not to tell you all is right in the world, but that much is wrong, and that we are the men and the women who are going to work with every opportunity to put it right. This, I understand, is my stewardship: to convict you, and in convicting you convict myself, and convict the world; and then go out and consecrate it, and make it, indeed, a part of God's system. That is what I consider work for men and women, and not "singing ourselves away to everlasting bliss."

CONDITION OF CHURCHES.

A Statement to Be Issued to Prevent Alarming Reports.

Several religious bodies will join, it is said, in a statement soon to be issued to the public concerning conditions and outlook of the churches, Protestant for the most part, but to some extent Catholic, in New York City. The statement will aim to prevent alarming reports that will be spread abroad, so these religious leaders fear, to the effect that churches, even Christianity itself, is failing in New York.

So nearly as can be learned, the argument of the statement will be that there is just ahead of New York the most stupendous economic and material change that any city of the world ever experienced. Within fifteen to twenty years Manhattan, even to larger extent than now, will be the downtown business section, and only the business section, of the largest center of population in the world. Churches that have not endowments or that cannot get endowments immediately, must move away, or radically alter their buildings and change the character of their work. Jews are supplanting Christians, but in time even Jews will be driven off the island by business inroads.

Within the next decade or two, when church after church finds itself in difficulty, reports will go abroad that New York no longer takes to religion, and that Christianity is failing. To forestall these reports, and to explain precisely what is happening, is the aim of the forthcoming statement. It is known that officials in religious bodies most largely represented on Manhattan Island are even now calculating what churches are to remain and what are to go. Some are also studying how to change buildings and work of those that are to remain. Millions of dollars are involved.

CRACK O' DOOM FIXED FOR OCT. 1, 1914, BY RUSSELL

As the End Approaches, the "Pastor's" Hicks Street Plant Prospers.

CAUSE FOR MUCH REJOICING.

Date of Adam's Birth Discovered. More Facts Come to Light About Pittsburg Case.

It appears from "Pastor" Russell's "Studies in the Scriptures," the books in which "Russellism" is expounded, that he discovered what scientists and theologians have vainly sought for centuries, the exact date of Adam's creation. "Pastor" Russell fixes this interesting event at 5128 B.C. With this as a beginning and by his own interpretation of Bible chronology the "Pastor" concludes: "We consider it as an established truth that the final end of the kingdom of this world * * * will be accomplished at the end of A.D. 1914." (Vol. II, p. 98.)

On every hand "Pastor" Russell finds signs that "the gathering of the armies is plainly visible."

Hark! The rumbling in the nations,
Iron crumbling with the clay.
Hark! What soundeth? 'Tis creation
Groaning for a better day.
(Vol. 2, p. 102.)

For some years past "Pastor" Russell has pointed, in his New Year's Greeting to his followers, published in the January 1 Watch Tower, to the disturbed condition of the world as portending the beginning of the end. This year he cited the Brazilian mutiny, the Portuguese revolution and the street car strikes in Columbus, O. On January 1 next the impending catastrophe will be even more clearly evident, since "war and rumors of war" have marked each one of the twelve months.

As the end approaches the zeal of the Russellites increases and the Hicks street plant gathers in the sacrificial offerings in larger amounts. Only the "elect" are to be saved from death and destruction when the crack of doom comes October 1, 1914, and the way to be of the "goats" and not of the "scapegoats" is to sacrifice. Help others to see the light via Russell, is the doctrine preached in every issue of the Russell publications.

"Now is the sacrificing time," the last Watch Tower, dated November 15, declares (p. 426). "Our readers have fully in mind that the call of this age is for sacrificers only" (p. 426)—no others need apply. While "the scapegoat remained tied at the door of the Tabernacle * * * those consecrated to sacrifice * * * have hope that we may be of the Lord's goat class."

"The dear friends everywhere," the "pastor" says in his last report, "are of one mind and one heart on the subject. They have accomplished this year exploits in the publication of the Truth (relative to the happey events of October 1, 1914) which put all other years in the shade in many particulars. * * * * Even if we were in the same 'outer darkness' as the rest of the world on subjects chronological, have we not more than all others to rejoice us in respect to The Divine Plan of the Ages?"

That "Pastor" Russell had much to rejoice him already in 1903 is evident from statement in the brief submitted to the Court of Common Pleas of Pittsburg, which awarded substantial alimony to Mrs. Russell depite the "Pastor's" plea that he was penniless and couldn't pay. This brief says:

"It is impossible to read the testimony of the respondent ("Pastor" Russell) without being forced to the conclusion that his purpose throughout was to deceive rather than to enlighten the court. There is no room to doubt that he was capable of giving information about property of which he pretended ignorance or want of recollection. However, taking him at his word, the value of the property put under cover of the society (The Watch Tower Bible and Tract Society, through which he still does his business) is $275,800. To this must be added the $10,000 bank stock, the $30,000 invested in the Wiegel farm, and the holdings of the Investment Company, estimated by him at the ridiculously low valuation of $20,000, making an aggregate of $385,800. For the purpose of fixing the alimony in this case, every dollar's worth of that property is to be treated as belonging to the respondent, because he put it all under cover in violation of thirteenth Elizabeth. Managed as it all is under the absolute control of the skilful respondent, there can be no question that he makes it realize a net income of not less than 30 per cent., being upward of $33,000."

Since the "Pastor" began his operations in Brooklyn his business has doubled and trebled.

LESSONS IN MOVING PICTURES

Crowd Assembled at P. S. No. 147. To Be Repeated at No. 6 Tonight.

The great crowd of mothers and fathers and their children which assembled last night at Public School No. 147, Bushwick avenue and Seigel street, Eastern District, attested to the popularity of the "moving picture show" provided by the co-operation of the Board of Education and the Citizens Committee, of which E. W. Ordway is the chairman. The same films will be produced tonight at Public School No. 6, Baltic street, near Smith street, and to-morrow night at Public School No. 65, Osborn street, near Sutter avenue, Brownsville.

The first story told is that of the "Summer Babies," and shows how the nurses are doing their work to preserve the lives of the infants. The scene is laid in a typical tenement house, probably on the East Side, where the family is at dinner, and the baby is being fed with whatever the adults are eating and drinking, including the beer. The nurse enters and produces a bottle of pasteurized milk and redresses the baby. It is very realistic and convincing.

But the historical film is more exciting. It is the story of a girl spy's heroism during the Civil War, in which she makes a wild ride going to the Aid of Stonewall Jackson. Then there are pictures of Dr. Charcot's trip towards the South Pole, and a study of animals in the Zoo. The exhibition prove that educational pictures are at least as interesting as those that are merely sensational.

INTERESTING SCHOOL NOTES.

The Mothers' Club of Public School No. 20, Queens, was given permission to occupy the kindergarten rooms Friday or Saturday next, for holding a food sale to raise funds for the work of the club.

The Mothers' Club of Public School No. 5, Queens, was also given permission to occupy the girls' playground in the school on the afternoon of December 7, for the sale of household articles, the proceeds to be expended for pictures for the school.

* * *

The Sinking Fund Commission was requested to renew the lease of the vacant plot on the corner of Church avenue and East Forty-eighth street, on which a temporary building has been erected, which is occupied by Public School No. 133, until July, 1913. The building on the plot has eight class rooms, and there is no building in the vicinity which can be leased for the purpose. Before the new lease (which is made at $540 a year) runs out, it is probable that a new school building will be erected in the neighborhood.

* * *

The action of the local school board of District 37, in fining Mrs. Clara H. Stoutenburgh, a teacher in Public School No. 231, thirty days' pay, was confirmed.

The charges of neglect of duty preferred against Anna P. Lofquist, a teacher in Public School No. 99, were withdrawn, and her suspension on July 1, 1910, was revoked.

* * *

The committee on finance was instructed to appropriate $14,500 from corporate stock for the purchase of an addition to the site of Public School No. 28, Herkimer street, near Ralph avenue. It is the purpose of the board to erect a new building on the present and additional site in the near future.

RICKER—SEXTON.

Miss Ella Franklin Sexton was another of last night's brides. She was married in the New York Avenue Methodist Episcopal Church at 8:30 o'clock, a large reception following at the Chateau du Pare, to Franklin George Ricken of Manhattan. Miss Sexton is the daughter of Mrs. Mary Frazier Sexton of 422 Jefferson avenue. She was given away by her brother, Dr. Edwin K. Sexton of Brooklyn, and the Rev. F. Watson Hannan performed the ceremony.

Miss Sexton wore an opalescent white gown of satin crepe charmeuse as her wedding robe. It was adorned with Duchesse and point lace and pearl trimming, the long train being especially effectively trimmed with Duchesse lace. She had a tulle veil with orange blossoms, worn in cap effect with plaited edging, ver ymuch like Lady Decies' wedding veil, and her bride's bouquet was of white roses and lilies of the valley.

Her maid of honor, Miss Florence May Sexton, was in blue princess satin, veiled with blue silk chiffon. This gown was trimmed with cream applique lace and rose trimming. Its wearer had a bandeau of lace with marabout and chiffon and carried pink bridal roses.

There was to have been a ring bearer, but he was finally taken out of the wedding party. Miss Sexton had three bridesmaids. The two first, Miss Jennie M. Brennan and Miss Clarice Miller, both Brooklyn girls, were gowned alike in frocks of blue princess chiffon veiled with French rose figured chiffon studded with gold dots. They had bandeaus to correspond and bunches of pink bridal roses.

The third bridesmaid, Miss Flora Chamberlain of Trenton, N. J., was in pink princess satin veiled with pink silk chiffon and trimmed with clusters of pink satin roses and opalescent fringe trimming. She carried pink bridal roses, too, and had a pink bandeau with pink roses at the side.

The two little flower girls that made up the rest of Miss Sexton's attendants, were in white silk organdies with white lace insertions. They had traveling bouquets of daisy chrysanthemums, pure white flowers with yellow centers.

Salisbury Gilmore of Manhattan was best man, and W. A. Schuler and John Reilly of Manhattan, William Starbuck of Jersey City and Starr Gould Holly of Brooklyn were ushers. The Chateau was decorated with pink bridal roses, and the church with white chrysanthemums and banked palms. Mrs. Sexton, the mother of the bride, was in black crepe Marathon, trimmed in tones of gray shaded to violet with a corsage bouquet of lavender orchids.

Miss Sexton gave to her bridesmaids lavalieres with daisy design and pearls, and to her maid of honor a lavaliere with a cluster of pearls in daisy design. She presented a gold bracelet to one of her little flower girls, and to the other she gave a necklace with a heart. Mr. Ricker gave his bride a lavaliere with a pearl drop and diamonds and rubies. His ushers received pearl stickpins from him.

ERROR IN APPORTIONMENT.

Part of First Congressional District Not Described.

There is a discrepancy in the description of the territory comprised in the First Congressional District of New York as given in the apportionment statute passed at Albany last winter, a discrepancy that may require correction by an amendment to the existing law.

In the present law the district is defined as consisting of the counties of Suffolk and Nassau and the Twenty-second and Twenty-third Election Districts of the Second Assembly District of Queens and the Twenty-first and Twenty-fifth to Thirty-fifth Election Districts included in the Fourth Assembly District.

In the description of the boundaries of the district by highways the Twenty-first Election District is left out entirely. In fact it is entirely detached from the contiguous territory forming the rest of the Congressional district, which runs no farther west than Bergen avenue in the village of Jamaica, whereas the Twenty-first Election District lies entirely west of Flushing avenue, several blocks from Bergen street.

It was said by the Bureau of Elections at Long Island City that an old map of election districts was evidently used.

Mr. Sandhusen of the Brooklyn Bureau, to whom The Eagle was referred, said that Congressman John J. Fitzgerald could tell how the district was made up. Upon inquiry at the Congressman's office it was learned that he is now in Panama.

JEKYLL AND MR. HYDE CASE ENDS IN MURDER VERDICT

Spencer Will Be Sent to Electric Chair for Killing Miss Blackstone.

NIGHT THIEF; WORKED AT DAY.

Accused Pleaded Insanity and Indulged in Violent Outbreaks During His Trial.

Springfield, Mass., November 25—Bertram G. Spencer, Springfield's "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde," was found guilty, at 3:10 a.m. today of the murder of Miss Martha B. Blackstone, a school teacher. Spencer, whose violent outbreaks have been unprecedented in Massachusetts judicial history, received the verdict without emotion.

The jury was out for five hours. Spencer will be sentenced, in accordance with the law, to death in the electric chair.

Twice during the night the jury had asked for instructions. At 1 o'clock they sent word to Judge Crosby, seeking light on a doubtful legal point. Apparently the question was a difficult one, for the judge sent for typewritten testimony and perused the papers a long time before returning his answer. An hour later the jury returned to the courtroom and asked regarding the penalty for breaking and entering a dwelling house in the night time, and also in regard to the degree of murder. The judge replied that they must bring in one of three verdicts—first degree murder, second degree murder, or acquittal on the ground of insanity.

The courtroom was crowded when the jury filed in for the last time and crowds were outside, unable to gain admittance.

It was learned that when the jury filed in previously for instructions, they had been divided, 9 to 3, the nine being for the first degree verdict. Acquittal on the ground of insanity was rejected by a majority of the jurors, and agreement was finally reached on first degree murder.

None of Spencer's family was with him at the time. His young wife almost collapsed when word of the verdict was brought to her, but she quickly recovered and went into the courtroom again, where she greeted her husband calmly.

No motions or statements were made by counsel and no date was set for sentence.

The murder of Miss Blackstone came as a climax to a series of daring robberies, to all of which Spencer later confessed.

Miss Blackstone was visiting at the home of Miss Harriet Dow, a friend, on March 31, 1910. With Miss Dow and two other women, she was sitting in the drawingroom, when a masked man suddenly appeared. Miss Blackstone sought to defend herself from attack and was shot down, while Miss Dow was slightly injured.

Spencer, a happily married young man of apparently exemplary character, was some months later charged with the crime, a gold locket which he had dropped betraying him. Insanity was his defense.

Mr. Russell has been a careful student of the life of Phillips and will bring new material to his hearers. The Rev. Dr. Newell Dwight Hillis will preside. The singing will be led by a chorus of colored boys and men, the choir of St. Augustine's Church, Brooklyn. They will sing "The Battle Hymn of the Republic," "Tramp, Tramp, Tramp, the Boys Are Marching," and others.

OLD MAN BADLY HURT.

George W. Hewlett Run Down by an Auto Ambulance.

George W. Hewlett, who is 72 years old, is in a critical condition at his home, 115 Decatur street, as the result of being run down by an automobile ambulance at Nostrand avenue and Herkimer street last Tuesday evening. Mr. Hewlett is a produce merchant at 180 South street, Manhattan. Tuesday evening he was returning from a business trip to Riverhead, L. I., and had just left the train at Nostrand avenue, proceeding to Fulton street to take a car there, when he was struck.

The injured man was conscious when removed to the nearby office of Dr. Pomeroy, and later was taken in an automobile ambulance to his home. There his family physician, Dr. Rink, of 124 McDonough street, made an examination, finding that both Mr. Hewlett's kneecaps were injured, there were abrasions on the right leg, forearm and wrist. The back of his head on the left side was sorely bruised, as well as his left hand, inflammation developed in left ear and eye. He was bruised from head to foot. TABLET SCORES RUSSELL AND SUGGESTS CELIBACY

Well-Known Catholic Newspaper Says We Are Now Getting His True History.

'MRS. RUSSELL'S INNING NOW.'

Curious Contrast Between "Pastor's" and His Wife's Evidence on Rose Ball's Age.

The issue of November 25 of The Tablet, a well-known Catholic newspaper published in Brooklyn, has some tart comments on "Pastor" Russell in connection with The Eagle's publication of his "true history on the installment plan." The Tablet's comments, which are printed on the first page in a column devoted to a discussion of current events entitled "The Catholic Pulse," reads as follows:

"If you attempt to sell miracle wheat you may get away with it. If you try to convert the whole Roman Catholic Church to your own brand of creedless creed you may have some success, but if you dare to sue a newspaper like The Brooklyn Eagle then you had better rue the day of your birth. Poor Pastor Russell has attempted to batter down the almighty press, and now we are finally getting his true history on the installment plan. Evidently his life was like his doctrine—filled to the brim with the marvelous and the revolutionary. Mrs. Pastor Russell is having her inning now. Here's a case of the clergyman's wife being an obstacle. Celibacy is a great protection. When one is in trouble, a good old book and a good old pipe will tell no tales."

An interesting contrast of statement and opinion is to be found in "Pastor" Russell's and Mrs. Russell's versions of the Rose Ball incident, and of a dispute between husband and wife over the editorial policy of The Watch Tower. After three different court decisions had all voiced Mrs. Russell's side of the separation suit, "Pastor" Russell continued to fight his wife through the medium of his publications.

On various occasions since Mrs. Maria F. Russell obtained a separation from "Pastor" Russell, her husband, he has made veiled allusions to her in the columns of his publications. One of these allusions is headed: "A Protest Against Injustice," and is addressed by Russell to his "Fellow Editors, religious and otherwise." It was published in The People's Pulpit of February, 1909, at about which time the "pastor" changed his headquarters from Pittsburg to Brooklyn.

In this article "Pastor" Russell refers to the Rose Ball incident and explains it as follows: "A brilliant, but ambitious lady of Women's Rights persuasion * * * may accuse her husband of kissing their minor ward when a child, 14 years previously, and be compelled to admit that she told the child to kiss him as her father."

This is similar to the explanation of the Rose Ball kissing episodes which "Pastor" Russell made in court. Mrs. Russell denies that she was ever compelled to admit that she told Rose Ball to kiss "Pastor" Russell as a father, and there is nothing in the stenographer's minutes of the testimony to that effect. The verbatim record of her testimony on Rose Ball's age on cross-examination is as follows:

Q. What age was this girl at the time of her marriage?

A. She was about 19 or 20 when she came to us, and this was twelve years afterward. It would make her about 32; past 30; I suppose about 32.

Rose Ball was married to E. C. Henninges, a Russellite, in 1903, and left for Australia at just about the time that Mrs. Russell's suit for separation was filed. According to Mrs. Russell's testimony she was well into the twenties when "Pastor" Russell was kissing her "as a father."

In a recent issue of the People's Pulpit, Volume III, No. 2, copies of which were scattered all over Brooklyn, "Pastor" Russell refers to a controversy with his wife which resulted in her ceasing to be "Associate Editor" of the Watch Tower, and becoming instead a "Contributor." The "Pastor's" explanation of this episode as contained in Volume III, No. 2 of the People's Pulpit, is as follows:

"Because she could not have her own way and write what she chose for the columns of my journal, the Watch Tower, she endeavored to coerce me, and took one step after another, apparently determined that, if she could not coerce, she would crush and destroy my life and influence."

Mrs. Russell's story of the dispute in the editorial sanctum of the Watch Tower, as told on the stand in the separation suit, is as follows:

"I had been writing for the paper, and my husband had taken the liberty of writing into my own articles sentiments that did not represent my own thought, and which, to my understanding, were not true, and I did not want them to go out as my writing, and as I was reading the proof of such an article down in the office one day, it was about noon, and I came across this article. Thinks I, 'I didn't write that,' and I looked at the copy, and it was his writing. He was sitting at another desk, and I said, 'Husband, you have written something into this article that I can't accept,' and I tried to show him the sentiment was wrong. He says: 'That is the way I want it.' I said, 'Well, this is my article * * * if you want to change anything in it ask me if I can approve it, and I will approve it if I can, but if I cannot, throw the whole article out, or take it in as it is.' Then he took me by the arm and shoved me out of the office, and said: 'Get out of here, you blasphemer.' He said to me I was blaspheming his name.

"I went upstairs to our home. When he came up in the evening I said, 'What in the world do you mean acting this way? Don't you see I have a responsibility hereafter for my own writing?'

"And he said: 'No, you haven't. When you have written an article it is mine; I am the editor.'

"I said: 'But I am the associate editor, and will write over my own signature,' and he said: 'The articles will be as I want them.'

"I said: 'Well, I will not any longer be associate editor.'

"He said: "Associate editor has no responsibility."

"I said: 'I recognize my own individual responsibility to God and man, and I will no longer be associate editor; I will just be a contributor.'"

"TROVATORE" TRIUMPHS AT BROOKLYN ACADEMY

Through an Exceptionally Good Cast in the Old Verdi Opera.

BY METROPOLITAN FORCES.

Gadski, Martin, Amato and the New Contralto, Orridge, Who Has a Big Voice.

It would be of no especial significance to recount the number of times that Verdi's "Il Trovatore" has been sung in Brooklyn from the days of the old Academy of Music to those of the new. It has been one of the most popular works ever put on the operatic stage for this community, but in these days of new productions and of the popularity of German and French operas it has, by common consent, come to be understood that to give "Il Trovatore" well it should have an extraordinary cast. Such a cast was afforded at the Brooklyn Academy last night by the Metropolitan Opera Company, with Gadski, Martin, Amato and Orridge, the contralto who was heard for the first time in this borough. Much had been expected from such a cast, and expectation was rounded into appreciation of a splendid production, one that has been seldom equaled, at least in Brooklyn. And applause was poured out without stint by a big audience.

Mme. Gadski Was Superb.

Mme. Gadski's Leonora as given last night equals in Italian opera her Elizabeth in "Tannhaeuser." Much is demanded in the role to make it more than a singing part; it is apt to be colorless in the acting. But Mme. Gadski gave to it variety, intensity and warmth out of her full human nature, both in her singing and acting. She is yet young, and never has she sung better nor evinced more skill and depth of feeling. In the trio with Amato and Martin at the close of the first she was called before the curtain repeatedly. Throughout the opera, indeed, she deported herself like a grand dame such as Verdi had in imagination.

Triumph of Mme. Orridge.

Mme. Orridge, as Azucena, gave deep satisfaction, and she, too, was called before the curtain with Martin after the scene in the gypsy camp. Later, in the soldiers' camp scene, she was called out alone four times. Her voice has a noble volume, well fitted to the role, and it is dramatic in its intensity, while it was fused with her acting so that her performance presented an artistic whole. She was equally capable in dealing with the tender passages with Manrico as with the more fiery ones in depicting her sad history or in the fatal denouement in the last act. A slight shortness of breath at times could be accounted for by the vigor and passion with which her large voice was used.

Martin a New Martin.

Mr. Martin, as Manrico, is another Martin from that which he was last season. First, he looks more like an Italian than he then did. But chiefly he has warmed to his work in an almost astonishing way. He not only looked like a troubadour-warrior, but he also sang like one—in opera. His voice has gained in dignity and breadth and he sings as though born to command. There is little trace of the coolness in his tones that he had formerly and his impassioned acting sets him well in the front rank of the Metropolitan Opera House tenors. His performance was well graded in art from beginning to end and his voice was as clear as a bell.

Amato Was at His Best.

Amato, in such a cast as this, was among his peers and, as usual, he did not spare his big, mellow baritone voice as the Count di Luna. Almost any baritone can draw applause in this role, but Amato's singing in it made it seem almost new again.

Others in the Fine Cast.

Emma Borniggia, who was cast for the role of Inez, acquitted herself remarkably well, which is saying much for a singer who appears and sings at the side of such a soprano as Mme. Gadski. Giulio Rossi was the Ferrando. His mellow tones, while not supplemented by very intense dramatic action, were pleasant, and his bel canto method was much more pleasant to the ear than many a Ferrando with strident and forced tones. Missiano as a zingaro and Audisio as Ruiz were well in accord and sympathy with the others in the cast.

The chorus was splendid in attack and volume, lights and shades being plastically observed. The scenery was of the best in the Metropolitan Opera House style.

The conductor was Giuseppi Sturano, and he showed a proficiency in handling the instrumentalists that was grateful. He even contributed elasticity to the production. Altogether, the opera was given with a completeness and as an artistic whole that calls for more than mere commendation. It was a rare performance of a rare old opera. The audience was very enthusiastic.

NEWS OF SHIPS AND PORTS.

The New York and Porto Rico line's steamship Carolina sailed yesterday afternoon from the Central Pier, Atlantic Dock, for San Juan, P. R. She takes out 216 passengers, about 100 of them being tourists and business men, the balance of them amusement people who are going to the Second Annual Insular Fair at San Juan. Frank P. Spellman takes out an aggregation of shows that include Bonavita's animals, Ferreri's Circus, and many other attractions.

Spellman is said to have a government guarantee for the transportation both ways, amounting to $90,000, and his animals and baggage occupy not only the 'tween deck, but part of the main deck of the Carolina. As the aggregation is scheduled to return on the San Juan of the New York and Porto Rico line, the trip to Venezuela appears to have been abandoned. The cost of taking the affair to Porto Rico is not a small one. The fair opens on December 7, and closes on December 12.

CROSTWIST TOOK A TUMBLE.

John Crostwist, the captain of the steamship Vienna, lying at the foot of Pioneer street, accidentally dropped into the water last night while he was about to board the vessel by means of a ladder. He was fished out by some of the members of his crew, but suffered so from submersion in the cold water that it was decided that the services of an ambulance surgeon should be secured. Dr. Dwortsky came from the Long Island College Hospital and took him there for treatment.

BOY'S FOOT IS CRUSHED.

Ten-year-old Arthur Weiss is confined to his home, 3 Van Dam street, today with his left foot badly crushed. His injuries were sustained last night in the soap factory at Cherry street and Gardiner avenue, when he went to deliver his father's supper. His foot was caught in an elevator. He was treated by Ambulance Surgeon Sullivan of St. Catherine's Hospital and taken to his home.

KILLED BY CEMENT MIXER.

John Horgan Was Terribly Cut and Crushed by the Blades.

Horribly cut and crushed in a cement mixer, John Horgan, 37 years old, of 224 East Eighty-ninth street, Manhattan, remained conscious from the time of the accident until he died, nearly two hours later, in the J. Hood Wright Hospital, last evening.

Horgan was putting sand and cement into the mixer in the basement of a building in course of construction at Ninety-first street and Central Park West. He was standing on a platform shoveling in the sand and cement, when he slipped and his left leg went down the funnel of the machine. Immediately it was caught by four eighteen-inch blades which revolved and gradually dragged Horgan further into the machine. His screams brought some workmen to the spot. Momentarily they stood horor-stricken they stood horor-stricken and then one of them turned off the machinery. This was not until Horgan's left leg and the lower part of his body had been drawn into the machine and the blades embedded in his stomach. He was released with great difficulty by an ambulance surgeon aided by firemen.

WATCHING FOR A MURDERER.

Outgoing Steamships Searched for Slayer of Girl in Waltham, Mass.

Every steamship pier on both sides of the Hudson and East rivers is being closely watched by detectives for a murderer who is wanted in Waltham, Mass. It is believed that he will attempt to return to Italy, his native land. He is said to be named Domenico Beninato, 20 years of age, and the crime charged against him is the deliberate murder of Miss Giovannina Natell, who refused to marry him against the wishes of her parents. The crime was committed on Tuesday last, the man creeping on the child of 16 and shooting her dead while she sat at table at supper.

All steamships leaving for Europe from the Manhattan side of the North River were searched yesterday by private and municipal detectives, but the murderer was not apprehended. The request for his arrest is made by James H. McKenna, Chief of Police of Waltham.

POETS SIDE WITH RUSSELL ON THE WORLD'S FINISH

Quotes Whittier and Holmes in the Support of His Theories.

ENCOURAGES CONTRIBUTORS.

A Rhapsody in His Financial Report Calculated to Increase Funds.

That the poets of all times are with him in predicting the catastrophe which will engulf the world on October 1, 1914, is "Pastor" Russell's earnest belief. He quotes such poets as Whittier and Oliver Wendell Holmes to show that they, too, predicted "the hour of wrath," which, according to the "pastor's" teaching, is now fast approaching.

"Pastor" Russell is fond of the poets, anyhow, and sandwiched in between many chapters of his books are to be found a great variety of rhymes and roundelays, which all go to prove that what the "pastor" says is true, and that he is the greatest religious teacher the world has ever seen. Poems and such titles as "The Coming Storm" or "The Wrath of God" are preferred. It is clear to the "pastor" that Whittier in his poem, "Sunshine Over All," quoted by the "pastor" on page 36 of the little volume with the cheerful title, "The Day of Vengeance," is referring to the Russellites when he says:

Despite the sneers like these, O faithful few,
Who dare to hold God's Word and witness true,
Whose clear-eyed faith transcends our evil time,
And o'er the present wilderness of crime
Sees the calm future.

Oliver Wendell Holmes Is Quoted to Support Theory.

On June 1, 1893, Dr. Oliver Wendell Holmes read an original poem before the Young Men's Christian Union of Boston, one of the verses reading as follows:

If mid the gathering storms of doubt
Our hearts grow faint and cold,
The strength we cannot live without
Thy love will not withhold.

"Pastor" Russell is sure that these verses "indicate that he realized somewhat the darkness overhanging Babylon."

Chapter 3 of the fourth volume, which tells all about "The Necessity and Justice of the Day of Vengeance," concludes with the following eloquent peroration upon the joyous ruction of October 1, 1914: "But not alone in Babylon's fall will the heathen nations suffer; for the swelling waves of social and political commotion will quickly spread, and involve and engulf them all; and thus the whole earth will be swept with the besom of destruction, and the haughtiness of man will be brought low; for it is written, 'Vengeance is mine; I will repay, saith the Lord.' And the judgment of the Lord upon both Christendom and heathendom will be on the strictest line of equity."

Then follows the little poem which is entitled "The Coming Storm," for which the author does not get credit. The first and last verses follow:

Oh! sad is my heart for the storm that is coming;
Like eagles the scud sweepeth in from the sea;
The gull seeketh shelter, the pine trees are sighing,
And all giveth note of the tempest to be.

O man, and O maiden, drop trifling and pleasure!
O hark! while I tell of the sorrows to be.
* * * * * * *
As well might I plead in the path of yon glacier,
Or cry out a warning to wave of the sea!

But the "pastor" isn't half as discouraged as this hopeless poet. Listen to the first paragraph of this report on contributions between December 1, 1909, and December 1, 1910, which far exceeded those of any previous year:

A Rhapsody on the Joys of the Approaching "End of the World."

"The nearer we get to the grand consummation of our hopes (the joy fest of October 1, 1914), the more swiftly do the years go by, and the more interesting and meaningful do they become to us. If we realize our hopes, four more years will see the 'elect' little flock of God all gathered; and the world's time of trouble begun, in which the brethren of the 'great company' will share and wash their robes in the blood of the Lamb. Is it any wonder that we all feel a fervency of zeal? Surely not."

A few paragraphs further on, the "pastor" gets down to the substantials:

"We take this opportunity to remark that the circulation of the Manna appears to be second only to the studies in beneficial effects. One coporteur (the "pastor's" title for his book agents), followed his canvass for Studies with the Heavenly Manna: He sold these where he had failed to sell Studies. Some months after he again canvassed with Studies. He was agreeably surprised that nearly all who had purchased the Manna were ready for Studies. They asked eagerly: 'Are those books from the pen which wrote the Manna comments? If so we want them!' Surely no more desirable Christmas gifts could be found than Studies, Manna, the Watch Tower and the Diaglott.

"Our tract work goes on amazingly. By it, all of the Lord's people, poor or rich, have opportunity for service. They are realizing this more and more. As their consecration and zeal deepen, they send us money for the printing and assist in the circulation.

"We trust that nearly every reader of this report can say to himself, as he reads the summary below, 'God blessed me with the opportunity to share in this branch of the harvest work, and I used it as a blessed privilege. I have had an active share in this labor of love. I invested a portion of my talent thus, instead of hiding it in the earth—in pleasure or business or cares of this life.'

"Let any who have had a hand in this blessed service be on the lookout how they may double the use of their talent next year. * * * We doubt not the Lord will supply the financial means."

REVIEW BY BRIG.-GEN. AUSTEN

Eighth Regiment Honors Retiring Chief of the Coast Artillery.

The Eighth Regiment, C. A. C., commanded by Colonel Elmore F. Austen, assembled last night at its armory, Ninety-fourth street and Park avenue, Manhattan, for drill, inspection and review in honor of Brigadier General David E. Austen, chief of the oCast Artillery of the State. General Austen is one of those who is to be retired on December 31 by reason of the recent amendment to the Military law, which fixes the maximum age for members of the guard at 64 years. The review last night is the first of a series of reviews that have been arranged by the regiments of General Austen's command, which constitutes the Eighth and Ninth Regiments of Manhattan, and the Thirteenth, of Brooklyn.

Colonel Austen, commanding the Ninth, has tendered the Chief of Coast Artillery a review for December 14, and Colonel Charles O. Davis, commanding the Thirteenth, for December 30. Another officer who has sought to pay tribute to the retiring Chief of Coast Artillery is Colonel John H. Foote of the Fourteenth, who has invited General Austen to review that command on Saturay evening, December 2.

General Austen was accompanied last evening by the following of his assistants: Lieutenant Colonel W. Irving Taylor, Majors Thomas R. Fleming, Winfred H. Roberts, John B. O'Rourke, Emil J. Winterroth, and Quartermaster William Turpin, Inspector-general; also by Lieutenant Hageman, his aide.

DIES SUDDENLY IN FACTORY.

Aged Pieceworker Had Come to Ask for Higher Wages.

While calling on the clothing manufacturere who furnished him with work, John Raber of 65 Rochester avenue dropped dead in the factory located at 1610 St. Mark's avenue, yesterday afternoon. He was 72 years old and had been a sweatshop worker for a number of years.

The clothing factory is owned by Hyman Markowitz, and the aged wageworker had come to ask him for a raise in pay. When he was younger Raber used to come to the factory and work, but recently he found that it cost too much to ride, and he was too to to walk, so he brought the work home with him, and in a small, dark tenement, where he lived with his wife, he worked at his sewing through the long hours.

Only once a week he made the trip to the shop to deliver goods and get his weekly wages. Today he asked for a raise, and while discussing the matter with the owner of the shop he sank to the floor. Dr. Buchler was called from St. Mary's Hospital, but it was too late. The ambulance surgeon said it was probably a case of heart failure.

DINNER TO FOUR CANDIDATES.

Eighteenth A. D. Republicans Plan a Big Celebration for December 9.

"They're all members of the club" will be the proud boast of the Eighteenth A. D. Republicans when they dine four of the successful candidates on the Republican ticket this year at their clubhouse, 2431 Church avenue, on Saturday, December 9. The men in whose honor the dinner is being arranged are District Attorney-elect James C. Cropsey, Supreme Court Justice-elect Russell Benedict, Alderman George A. Morrison and Assemblyman Almeth W. Hoff. Naval Officer F. J. H. Kracke, active head of the club, and his aides have been busily planning the details of the dinner as a love-feast to their successful candidates ever since they were swept into office.

Invitations have been extended widely and it is probable that most of the prominent Republicans of Brooklyn will be present. Congressman William M. Calder will be there, it is certain. Public Works Commissioner Lewis H. Pounds, president of the club, and former Assemblyman Warren I. Lee, who is spoken of strongly as first assistant to Mr. Cropsey, are active in the arrangements for the dinner.

CLOSE OF ORPHANS' FAIR.

Nearly $4,000 Raised by the Bazar Held at Masonic Temple.

The fair that has been in progress at Masonic Temple, Clermont and Lafayette avenues, for the benfit of the Orphan Asylum Society of Brooklyn, came to an end last night. The treasurer gave out at an early hour a statement that nearly $4,000 had been raised. Before the evening was well started nearly all the booths were cleared of their merchandise. There were very few fancy articles left at that table, and the cake table had to "close shop" sometime during the afternoon. The entertainment given by the children atracted a crowd, and there is talk among the officers of the asylum of having it repeated at any early date.

JOACHIM STILL ON THE ROCKS.

Captain and Fifty of Crew Stand By the Ship.

Santiago, Cuba, November 25—The Norwegian steamer Fritzca, carrying the second officer and eighteen members of the crew of the stranded Atlas line steamer Prinz Joachim, arrived at Felton, on the northeast coast of Cuba, today. The men are expected to reach this port tonight.

The Prinz Joachim remains hard on the rocks off Atwood Cay, where she struck at 3:45 o'clock on the morning of November 22, after being blown 35 miles out of her course by an unusually strong easterly current.

BOY KILLED AT PLAY.

Denis M. Hurley, jr., 8 years old, was killed last night by a fall from a wagon while paying in the street, in front of his home, 422 Fifth street. The attending physician found no evidence of injury and gave it as his opinion that the child died of shock. The parents of the boy exonerated from all blame the driver of the wagon, William Jackson of 269 Twentieth s

TRIPLE WEDDING HELD IN PRIZE BOXING RING

All Brownsville Rejoices at the Wisch-Warsaw-Sturman-Melzer Nuptials.

18 BRIDESMAIDS NEEDED.

Three Happy Couples Go to Lakewood After Men Guests Kiss Blushing Brides.

The big hall on the second floor of the New Palm Garden, in Sackman street near Liberty avenue, Brownsville—a hall where prize fights are held each week—was the scene last night of a triple wedding that attracted to the scene fully 1,500 men and women and children of the Jewish section of Brooklyn.

The ring where the boxes are accustformed to pummel one another, together with the hundreds of chairs in place for the spectators had been removed. The floor had been glazed in quite the proper manner for dancing, and under bowers of flowers Cupid introduced three blushing brides and as many unblushing bridegrooms to several rabbis, who proceeded to tie the nuptial knots about at the spot where the fight ring is located on Wednesday nights.

Whole of Brownsville Is Interested in Big Ceremony.

It was a neighborhood affair and all Brownsville rejoiced. The bridal couples had known one another for years, lived within a stone's throw of one another and two of the brides are sisters, while the third is sister to one of the bridegrooms.

Louis M. Wisch, 27 years old, of 451 Chester street, married Jennie Sturman, 18 years old, of the same address.

Jacob Warsaw, 24 years old, of 293 Wyona street, married Annie Sturman 20 years old, of 451 Chester street.

Julius Melzer, 23 years old, of 298 Wyona street, married Rosie Warsaw, 19 years old, of the same address.

Wisch and Warsaw had been "steadies" of the two sisters for some time, and Melzer met Rosie Warsaw through his friendship with the other two bridegrooms.

Eighteen Bridesmaids and Three Rabbis Officiate at Ceremonies.

Each wedding couple last night had its own array of brideamaids—eighteen in all. Rabbis Gottschalk, Solomon and Finkelstein officiated at all three of the ceremonies, in accordance with the Customary Hebrew wedding rites.

Following the weddings the brides were obliged to pass through the siege of being kissed by all the men, married and bachelors, who expressed a wish for this privilege. After this interesting procedure there was dancing, following by a wedding supper early this morning.

The three newly married couples will leave today for Lakewood, where their honeymoon of a week will be spent, and upon their return to Brooklyn they will establish homes in the same vicinity.

THE APPRECIATION OF ART.

Almost Every City in This Country Has Some Form of Institution.

The wave of art appreciation which now is spreading over the country owes its existence chiefly to the efficient and intelligent direction in art matters on the part of the newer generation of directors of the nation's art museums, says a writer in the Minneapolis Journal. To them is due largely the growing interest in painting, sculpture and allied arts, which has become characteristic of almost every city of more than 50,000 inhabitants.

Art museums or galleries are springing up everywhere. There is scarcely a city which does not possess its art treasures open to the public. Most marked has been the result on the school children, who, in most cities, are admitted free at all times when accompanied by teachers. In Indianapolis, the John Herron Art Institute reports that 30,000 school children visited the art gallery last year. In Boston fully 100,000 children were admitted; in Buffalo the Albright Art gallery admitted 25,000 school children, and in Minneapolis 20,000 children flocked to the art gallery in the public library during the year, according to statistics prepared by Director Theodore J. Keane.

Ten years ago art museums were largely confined to the great cities of the country, and their influence was necessarily restricted. Director William M. R. French, dean of American art museum directors, while on a visit to Minneapolis last winter, predicted phenomenal growth of art museums in the next few years, and cited the action of Minneapolis in raising a large fund for the erection and maintenance of a museum as probably characteristic of other cities which have shown signs of catching the art infection. Duluth launches a campaign this fall to bring to that city a permanent art gallery. Cleveland, Louisville, Columbus, Nashville, Memphis, Atlanta, Salt Lake City, Los Angeles and Kansas City are in the throes of the art movement, as to be expressed both in the erection of museums and in general civic beautification. Denver is making preparations for an art museum campaign which is full of many new features and is being watched by other cities. The present museum in conection with the historical collections in City Park will be housed in the new structure. Seattle has a fine museum, under direction of George L. Bery. Robert J. Fletcher, director of the San Francisco Institute of Art, is making that institution one of the best known in the West.

Possibly the most interesting art record is shown by the city of Detroit, where the museum under the direction of Armond H. Griffith has accomplished unheard of results. Mr. Griffith's success is unique. He was born in Indiana, of Welch parentage, though both his father's and mother's families were among the early settlers of Pennsylvania and Maryland. The love of travel and adventure led him at an early age to Dusseldorf and Munich, but finding the pursuit of art a long and discouraging road, he soon turned his attention to the commercial side, and spent some years in art stores as a salesman, but in idle hours continued to paint. Through the friendship of John W. Bookwalter of Ohio, he was given charge of the paintings and oriental collections brought together by that gentleman. He then turned his attention to museum work.

Going to Detroit in 1889, Mr. Griffith was first employed in the art store of the late George R. Angell as a salesman. At that time the Detroit museum was a very small affair and languishing for want of support and interest. An article published by Mr. Griffith in a Detroit paper attracted the attention of the trustees, who asked him to attend a meeting of their board. The members were favorably impressed by what he said, and while they thought him entirely too young a man, they offered him the position of acting director on trial, and he began his work in January, 1891. There was but little in the museum at the time aside from the James E. Scripp collection of old masters, still less money, and the public had lost interest. Determined to make the institution a success he begged and borrowed paintings and put new life into the institution. He opened it free Sundays, began a series of popular Sunday afternoon talks on art, history and travel, illustrating his talks by photographs and materials in the museum, which are still continued and hundreds being turned away each Sunday. He enlisted the interest of the teachers and pupils of the public and private schools, securing their attendance in classes and gave illustrated talks on topics they were studying. Through this means he gained the confidence of the public, and through an annual appropriation of $20,000 made by the city council, the museum was made free at all times. Six years ago Detroit issued $50,000 in bonds for an addition to the museum.

The art museum movement in St. Joseph, Mo., dates back to last winter, when enthusiasts formed a society which has for its purpose the erection of a large museum, though at present the art society has adequate quarters in a former public school building fitted as a museum and art school. Car Rudolph Gist, a portrait and miniature painter and a man of large ideas and possessed of the faculty of gaining the support of both the wealthy and the humble for the success of the movement, was elected director of the School of Fine Arts. He has made a brilliant sucess of the undertaking and the school is in a flourishing condition. Mr. Gist studied with Deitz and Franz Stuck at the Royal Art Academy in Munich in 1901, later going to Paris, Rome and Venice where he studied the color of the Renaissance masters. He is one of the most forceful of the younger art directors in the country.

The art movement in Minneapolis, in reality dates back to 1883, though it did not burst into flame until the memorable January 10 of this year, when public spirited citizens subscribed $335,000 at a banquet toward a building fund, after Clinton Morrison had offered a site valued at $250,000. Since that time the building fund has been increased to a round half million. Theodore J. Keane, director of the Minneapolis Society of Fine Arts, in a large measure, has been instrumental in bringing about the result, having in his capacity as director carefully prepared the ground in the year he spent in the city before the launching of the museum movement. He arranged for continuous exhibitions of paintings and art objects of a high order at the public library, which have been attended by 53,271 people in the eighteen months of his directorship. The society has increased from 150 to 600 and before another year passes a great temple of art will be well under way. The art school, under direction of Robert Koehler, who succeeded Douglas Volk, first director, has made great progress.

The rejuvenation of the old Pennsylvania Academy of Art, Philadelphia, under the management of Edwin Atlee Barber, director and John E. Trask, manager and secretary, has been an object lesson. Phenomenal has been the success of the Carnegie Institute, where Director J. W. Beatty has obtained remarkable results. Its exhibitions are the standard for other American galleries and in the matter of prizes it leads the whole country, artists from all over the world entering their works in the annual exhibitions.

With the death of Halsey C. Ives, St. Louis has lost an efficient director, but the City Art Museum soon will fill his place with a strong man. At Kansas City, Howard E. Huselton is doing pioneer work and prospects are good for a permanent art museum of the first rank. Even cities of second and third rank are combining embryo art museums with their public libraries and raising funds for permanently endowing them. Lectures on art are regular features in many cities and their influence is felt in every activity.

SUN AS LIGHTHOUSE KEEPER.

"The adoption by the Government of acetone gas, acetylene dissolved in acetone, for use of lighthouses, beacons, lightships and light-buoys, will soon revolutionize the whole system of coast lighting in this country, and the lighthouse keeper and buoy tender will be forced to find new vocations," declares S. William Thavis, in Popular Mechanics. He explains further:

"Acetylene, in its various forms, is the only commodity yet produced that will give a light next in power to that of the sun. By its use, inventions have been perfected to produce lights for a continuous period of from one to five years or more, according to the amount of fuel installed.

"The most wonderful light in the world, and now in use by the United States Government, is the one invented by Delan, the Swedish scientist. It is produced by acetone gas, and has a 'human working' sun-instrument containing a glass tube of several rods of varying reflective powers which automatically opens and closes the valve in accordance with the light absorbed. In other words, the light burns continuously until affected by the heat of the sun, when it goes out, only to be revived at dawn. It also contains a flashing apparatus in the lantern."

THE TOLL OF INDUSTRY.

In his article on Workingman's Compensation in Harper's, Robert W. Bruere presents some statistics which give a startling view of the number of casualties in our great industries.

"The facts involved are gravely impressive. As in the case of our national birth and death rates, we have unhappily no accurate official information about industrial casualties. But our foremost authority on this subject, Frederick L. Hoffman, a statistical expert, computes the number of fatal accidents among occupied males in the year 1908 as between thirty and thirty-five thousand. These figures are exceedingly conservative. They take account of only a few more than twenty-six million persons in a population estimated at only eighty-seven millions. They omit from consideration our six million wage-earning women, and they do not include the millions of casual laborers, who, while not registered as employed, are not infrequently exposed to industrial hazards.

Revelwing Mr. Hoffman's estimates in the light of later information, W. J. Ghent, a most scholarly student of our industrial conditions, declares that the 'annual death roll of American industry cannot be much below fifty thousand.' Both authorities are agreed in placing the annual total of non-fatal accidents in the United States at 'not much less than two millions'—a frightful commentary upon our civilization!"

CHARLES W. MORSE TOO ILL TO BE TAKEN TO HOSPITAL

Condition of the New York Banker Is Extremely Critical.

HIS WIFE IS ILL IN NEW YORK.

Expected to Be in Atlanta Today, but She Was Forced to Abandon Trip.

(Special to The Eagle.)

Atlanta, Ga., November 25—The condition of Charles W. Morse, the New York banker, who is now serving a term in the Federal prison for his part in the wrecking of the National Bank of North America in New York, is reported worse tonight. He was to have been removed to the military hospital at Fort McPherson following an order from President Taft to the warden, owing to his illness, but he cannot be removed until after a consultation of physicians on his case.

The announcement from Washington yesterday of the order transferring Morse from the prison to the hospital disclosed the fact that the convicted banker has been at the point of death since last Sunday, but that he was slightly improved today.

Mrs. Morse Ill in New York, Unable to Go to Husband.

It is learned here that the wife of the convicted man is confined to her rooms in New York City. She had planned that she would be in Atlanta by today, but was forced to abandon the trip owing to illness.

Mrs. Morse has been working for a pardon ever since her husband went to prison. It is thought that she was about to bring cheering news to her husband on the trip she had planned, but when she does arrive it may be to late to save his life.

Morse is reported to be semi-conscious a great part of the time. Of late he has evinced little interest in things about him and dozes for sixteen to seventeen hours at a time. The physicians said he was very weak today and could not stand the strain of being taken to Fort McPherson, seven miles away, owing to the unusual cold which prevails throughout the section. Preparations have been made at the military post to take care of Morse, and he will be made very comfortable in the hospital. According to the rules, prison regulations will not be in force during his stay as a patient, and friends and members of his family will be permitted to visit him, provided the attending physicians think his condition will allow it.

It is believed that the change from prison to hospital is preliminary to a pardon from President Taft, owing to the state of Morse's health, but the future action of the President will depend largely, it is said, upon the report made by the army doctors.

FREEPORT "VAMPS" PARADE.

Annual Event Was Big Feature in Village Last Night.

Freeport, L. I., November 25—Firemen in this village held their annual parade and review this evening. About 190 "vamps," comprising the corps of five companies, took part in the parade, which began at 8 o'clock. Many of the residents along the line of march decorated their homes for the occasion. Torches and illumination by the residents added to the attraction. The parade started from headquarters of the chief, William F. Cornell, at Pine and Church streets, and went north to Lena avenue, west to Ocean avenue, south to Smith street, west to Long Beach avenue, north to Merrick road, east to Main street, north to the junction of Main and Pine streets and the Boulevard. There the review took place.

John D. Gunning, president of the village board, and the other trustees of the village, were present to review the paraders, as were prominent invited guests.

During the afternoon the various fire houses were open for inspection. Several new pieces of apparatus have been added to the department recently, and this equipment was made the central point of interest.

More than 100 persons have signified their intention to be present at the first annual banquet of the department to be held at the "Anchorage," Wednesday evening, December 6. Among the prominent person who will attend and respond to toasts are former Chief Edward Croker and Deputy Police Commissioner Dillon of New York. Some of the active workers for the success of the dinner are Chief Cornell and former Chief Archer B. Wallace, J. Hurler Ellison, Stephen W. Hunt, Alexander G. Ackermann, Robert Patrick and Assistant Chiefs Smith and Loonam.

PERKINS SEES MR. TAFT.

Washington, November 25—George W. Perkins of New York, former partner in J. P. Morgan & Company, had a brief talk with President Taft today. Mr. Perkins said he did not discuss trust legislation or a Federal incorporation law. He expects to appear in the near future before the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee to give his views on the trust question.

Colonel Thomas B. Davis, brother of the late United States Senator Henry Gassaway Davis, died at Keyser, W. Va., yesterday, aged 83 years. He had been a Congressman, had aided his brother in the development of the West Virginia Central Railroad Company, and was worth several million dollars, which is said to be inherited by his nephew, Thomas B. Davis, jr., a mining, railroad and oil magnate, with offices at 1 Broadway, Manhattan. Deceased was unmarried and began his career as a railroad brakeman, at Piedmont, W. Va., in the early fifties, on the B. and O. Railroad. He lived with a sister, Mrs. Buxton of Keyser.

TWO 'L' STATIONS ROBBED; WOMAN CAPTURES NEGRO

Recent Thefts Come to Light at Arraignment for Disorderly Conduct.

B. R. T. HAS A NEW PLAN.

Will Furnish Its Agents With Whistles to Summon Police Aid When Needed.

Two elevated railroad stations in Brooklyn have been robbed within a week, according to information given in the Gates avenue court today. The fact was made known today when a colored man was arraigned on a charge of disorderly conduct made by Catherine Murtagh of 292 Eighth street, agent at the Sumner avenue station of the Fulton street elevated line. She declared the prisoner, Winter S. Burton, who described himself as steward for the Fraternity Club of Columbia College, had tried to force his way into the station booth at 4 o'clock this morning.

It was the agent's quick wit which landed Burton in the hands of the police and finally sent him to the workhouse for ten days. The negro, who gives his address as 633 West 115th street, Manhattan, demanded entrance to the booth when he found the door locked, and made threats to the agent when she delayed opening the door. Miss Murtagh stepped into the washroom, pretending she was going for the key, and screamed so loudly as to bring a milkman and four other citizens to her aid. Officer Buckley of the Gates avenue station quickly put the negro under arrest.

In court, Burton declared he was a respectable man and had long been employed by the Fraternity Club. He had come to Brooklyn, he said, to visit his brother-in-law who lives on Troy avenue. He had left the Troy avenue house, he said, to go to another relative's home. Miss Murtagh said the negro had waited in the station for two trains to pass and then had made an attempt to force his way into the booth. She had entered the washroom to seek better protection and screamed for help out of the window.

Burton said he had gone to the booth when he had been unable to find anybody at the wicket. He became confused when Magistrate Dodd questioned him about waiting for trains to pass, and asked if it was his custom to make social calls at 4 o'clock in the morning. Lawyer Ashby for the B. R. T., then informed Magistrate Dodd two stations had been robbed during the past week by a negro.

The stations said to have been robbed are those at Vanderbilt and Fulton streets and Court and Fulton streets. The former was visited by a negro thief on Thursday night last, and the latter a few nights before. It was said today that the B. R. T. officials have decided to furnish all elevated station agents with whistles in order to summon police aid when trouble occurs.

READY TO FIGHT FOR FERRY.

Grand Street Merchants Will Go Before Commission.

Strong arguments for ferry service to Grand street, Brooklyn, will be advanced by the members of the Grand Street Board of Trade before the Sinking Fund Commission when that body convenes on Wednesday. With the news that there is a three-cornered contest over the opening of a ferry to Grand street, Manhattan, the Grand street merchants have become alarmed lest that line be opened from the foot of Broadway.

The opening of a ferry from the foot of Broadway, say the Grand street merchants, practically would take all traffic from Grand street, below the Grand street extension, with the result that business interests would suffer seriously. The ferry from the foot of Broadway would almost parallel the line which is operated from the foot of Grand street to Houston street. This would so divide the traffic, it is argued, as to force the Nassau Ferry Company to discontinue its service.

The people along Grand street, Manhattan, are demanding that a ferry be run from the foot of their street, but are indifferent as to where it terminates in Brooklyn. The Grand street civic body declares that because a ferry is legally regarded as a highway, the only logical inauguration of service would be from the foot of their street. Grand street, Manhattan, they claim, is a continuation of their street, and therefore the ferry should join the two streets. They will also bring to the notice of the officials that the larger part of the manufacturing and trucking interests are on the north side of Broadway, and in Greenpoint, and should be given consideration in the opening of the service.

CAR STRIKES HEAVY TRUCK.

Passengers Are Frightened, but None Is Hurt.

The passengers of a crowded Bushwick avenue car, on their way to Manhattan via the Williamsburg Bridge, were thrown into a panic during the rush hour this morning, when the car struck a heavy truck belonging to A. Aaron of 335 Johnson avenue. The truck was going south along Hooper street and as the car came along South Fourth street at a lively clip, it struck the forward part of the vehicle. William Folger of 847 Hart street, the driver, was unseated, but escaped injury. The wagon was slightly damaged.

GIRL FALLS BEFORE CARS.

Caroline Greenberg Narrowly Escapes Death in Crowded Street.

Suffering from an attack of heart trouble that may prove fatal, Caroline Greenberg, 19 years old, who lives at 587 Grand street, is a patient in the Williamsburg Hospital. The young woman was crossing Broadway at Havemeyer street, and when she reached a spot in between the tracks she became embarrassed in the confusing maze of cars which seemed to be coming from all sides. She was stricken with the attack and fell insensible, narrowly escaping being run over. She was carried to the stoop of a nearby dwelling and Ambulance Surgeon Greenwald was summoned. He found she had sustained an ugly gash on her forehead when she had fallen, and after dressing the injury sent her to the hospital.

CYCLIST INJURES WOMAN.

Painful injuries confine Mrs. Sadie Sklar, 18 years old, in her home at 277 Lorimer street today, while the police are looking for the motor cyclist who ran down the woman while she was crossing Broadway at Lorimer street last night. After hitting the woman the cyclist turned on full speed and escaped. Ambulance Surgeon Greenwald, who came from the Williamsburg Hospital, removed Mrs. Sklar to her home. Her injuries were a fracture of the right arm and a dislocation of her left knee.

MAN THROWN OFF MOVING CAR.

Charles Casper, 23 years old, who lives at Broadway and Berry street, was thrown from the rear platform of a Grand street-Broadway shuttle car as it swung around from Grand street into Kent avenue, last night. He was attended by Ambulance Surgeon Eckert of the Williamsburg Hospital, who found him suffering from concussion of the brain and removed him to his home.

ESTAB. OVER HALF A CENTURY

GROOM HAS A NARROW ESCAPE

Arrested on Eve of Wedding, He Is Bailed Out Just in Time.

The large and enthusiastic wedding party which gathered early for the wedding at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon between William B. Mitchell, colored, 41 Dean street, and Rosetta Wilkins, aged 17, also colored, at the home of the girl's parents, 2082 Atlantic avenue, was greatly excited over the prospect of an indefinite postponement of the ceremony, owing to the fact that the bridegroom was in jail, charged with assault by an alleged former sweetheart, Gertrude Nicholas, of 99 Woodruff avenue.

Mitchell is the superintendent of a large apartment house at 588 Park place, and on Friday night the Nicholas girl appeared at the house and, it is said, made a disturbance. Mitchell, it is alleged, ejected her, and was locked up on Saturday. J. H. Miller, the man's employer, gave bail of $300, however, and Mitchell was released just in time to get married. In the Flatbush Court this morning Magistrate Voorhees dismissed the charge.

WANTS LARGER ALLOWANCE.

Mrs. Esther Johnson Will Sue to Set Aside Separation Agreement.

Claiming that her husband makes at least $15,000 a year, maintaining a yacht, and that she is living in comparative poverty, Mrs. Esther Jennie Johnson of 51 Chauncey street asked Justice Kapper for an allowance of $1,000 as counsel fee in a suit she intends to bring against her husband, Wilbur C. Johnson, to set aside a separation agreement entered into by the couple in April, 1902. The separation agreement, she says, only provides an allowance of $25 a week for her, which amount is inadequate for her needs.

According to E. Crosby Kindleberger, Mrs. Johnson's attorney, the Johnsons were married on December 20, 1893, but have been living apart since 1902, under the agreement which is to be attacked. They have one daughter, Esther, who is living with the mother. John F. Carson is named as the trustee of the agreement which provides for separate establishments for the husband and wife.

Mrs. Johnson says that her husband is a member of the Cotton Exchange and has a fine home at Ridgewood, N. J. He also, she says, is a member of the New York, the Sachem and the Manhasset Yacht clubs and other clubs; that he has an automobile and spends much of his time in travel. These allegations of affluence the husband denies. Justice Kapper reserved decision.

MANHATTAN BRIDGE CAR LINE.

Service Company Applies for Certificate of Convenience.

The Public Service Commission is giving a public hearing this afternoon on the application of the Manhattan Bridge Service Company for a certificate of public convenience and necessity. The issuance of this certificate is required by the public service law, regardless of whatever action the Board of Estimate may take.

Harlan W. Whipple is given as the president of the company and Horace B. Weaver as the secretary. Arthur C. Hume is the attorney. The capital is $25,000, and the company has the privilege of increasing it to $100,000.

Unlike the other companies that have filed applications to institute a shuttle service over the Manhattan Bridge, this company proposes to use the opposite sides of the bridge as terminals. The competing companies in their applications propose to operate over a portion of the downtown streets of Brooklyn.

CIRCLED STATUE IN AUTO.

Man Who Said He Was From Brooklyn Went Around and Round.

Theater crowds who were returning to their homes about 11 o'clock Saturday night watched with curiosity the actions of a man in a large touring car who was driving the machine repeatedly around the Columbus Statue at Columbus Circle, Manhattan. The man was not driving rapidly, but his constant laps about the base of the statue caused a crowd to gather to observe what he was doing.

Traffic Policeman Allingham found in the car a man who was holding firmly to the steering wheel and gazing into the sky. He could not get any reply to questions asked the man and Allingham turned off the power and stopped the machine. The man was taken out of the car and was sent to the West Forty-seventh street station house and locked up on a charge of operating an automobile while intoxicated.

The man said his name was Daniel von Bremen, a real estate agent, 34 years old, living at 801 Greene avenue, Brooklyn. He said he owned the car he was operating.

BATTLE WITH BURGLARS.

Binghamton, November 27—In a battle between Sheriff Tompkins, Under Sheriff Seaman and Police Captain Patterson and a gang of bank burglars at Port Crane, near this city, early this morning, Charles Adams was shot twice through the body; an Italian, a member of the gang, surrendered, and the third member of the gang escaped. The men had blown up the Julian Bank at Greene, without obtaining any booty.

GIRL FOUND DEAD IN BATH.

Isabella Kemps, 18 years old, of 271 Irving avenue, was found dead from asphyxiation by her mother, Mrs. Elizabeth Kemps, in the bathroom of her home yesterday morning. The girl had been suffering from a heavy cold and it is believed that from this cause she could not detect the odor of the gas. Dr. Mueller was summoned from the German Hospital and pronounced the young woman dead upon his arrival.

WILLETT EXAMINATION IS TO BEGIN ON DEC. 5

He, Cassidy and Walter Waive Reading of Depositions When Arraigned.

NO DELAY WILL BE TOLERATED

Court Warns Defendants to Be Ready to Proceed When Case Is Called.

William Willett, Joseph Cassidy, the Queens County Democratic boss, and Louis Walter, jr., were arraigned before Justice Townsend Scudder, in the Long Island City, today. They demanded an examination and this will be granted them, beginning on Tuesday, December 5, the second day of the Queens County term. The prisoners were held in $5,000 bail each.

"Let it be understood," said Justice Scudder, in speaking to the defendants, "that when you come here on Tuesday you come prepared to go right ahead with the case. There must be no more delays."

A bond was given for Willett by John F. Cronin of Far Rockaway. Caniel Callahan of Long Island City went bail for Cassidy, and Joseph Meyerrose of Ridgewood, a former sheriff of Queens, became security for the appearance of Walter, jr.

The court explained the procedure to the three defendants. Justice Scudder first asked the defendants if they waived the reading of the depositions against them, and when they said they did, he continued: "Then you have not been informed of the charge against you by the depositions. You have waived the reading of these, but officially they have been read. You have asked for an examination, but owing to your waiver of the reading of the depositions you are entitled to call here only such of the old witnesses as you care to cross-examine. The old witnesses will not be called by the state. You may call any new witnesses you may desire, and the court requests you to leave a list of the witnesses you desire to have called in order that they may be subpenaed."

Attorney Dana Wallace represented Cassidy and Walter in court, and Willett represented himself. The procedure seemed new to them and Wallace seemed at a loss as to what to do. He finally accepted the court's suggestion that a list of names be submitted by the defense on Wednesday.

After the court adjourned District Attorney De Witt said it was his understanding the entire case of the county would have to be again presented.

BEATTIE BURIAL QUIET.

Body Placed Beside That of Murdered Wife.

(Special to The Eagle.)

Richmond, November 27—The body of Henry Clay Beattie, jr., the wife murderer, is now lying in a Richmond cemetery close beside that of the woman he slew.

Beattie's funeral was held yesterday, and at the same hour which marked his electrocution last Friday the body was consigned to its grave. Only the members of the Beattie family circle, six friends of Beattie's boyhood days who acted as his pallbearers, the Rev. J. J. Fix, the family doctor, who conducted the services and the Rev. Benjamin Dennis, to whom Beattie made his confession, were present at the cemetery.

The burial was preceded by services, exceedingly brief and simple, at the Beattie home. Besides the clergymen only eleven persons were present. They were the murderer's aged father, now broken in spirit; his sister Hazel, his two aunts, Douglas Beattie his brother, and the six pallbearers who had been selected by Beattie himself.

The funeral had been held at an early hour to avoid morbid crowds and only a handful of reporters saw the sad little procession pass through the cemetery gates. Four carriages left the Beattie home shortly after 7 o'clock, one of them filled with flowers. A number of floral pieces sent by women were returned to the florists.

HIS RESIGNATION READ.

The Rev. G. Clement Edson Will Have Pastoral Relations Dissolved.

"Love and charity to all" were the keynotes of the morning service yesterday, at the Noble Street Presbyterian Church, where the Rev. Dr. E. M. Ryder, an associate of the Rev. Dr. W. E. Bentley, in the Church of the Ascension, on Kent street, occupied the pulpit of the Rev. G. Clement Edson, whose letter of resignation recently printed in The Eagle was read to the congregation. This communication will be read again next Sunday, and on December 8 a meeting of the congregation will be held, at which time two representatives will be chosen to attend the meeting of the Brooklyn Presbytery to consider Mr. Edson's request that the pastoral relation be dissolved. For the present, at least, Dr. Ryder will preach in Mr. Edson's stead.

NEGRO TURNED WHITE.

Color of Face Had Turned When He Died.

Chillicothe, Mo., November 27—The case of a negro who turned white is to be reported to the National Medical Society with the hope that something may be learned of the peculiar skin disease which has baffled physicians.

The negro who is dead here was Dudley Payne, coalblack and typically African in feature. The splotches at first appeared on his hands and later spread to the upper part of his body. The change came gradually. At the time of his death Payne's face and the upper part of his body were as white as those of any Caucasian.

SALOONKEEPER HELD FOR TRIAL.

Dennis Sullivan, proprietor of a saloon at Henry and Luquer streets, arrested on a warrant on November 24, charged with closing the panels that permit a view of the bar from the street, was held for trial in the Court of Special Sessions in $1,000 bail by Magistrate Reynolds this morning, in the Butler street court. Patrolman Arthur Devoe of the Hamilton avenue precinct, who made the arrest, testified that he tried the front door on October 31, and found it unlocked, and that the panels were closed. Inside he found one of Sullivan's barkeepers. The lawyer for the defense tried to prove that there was not enough evidence on which to hold his client, but Magistrate Reynolds refused to take that point of view.

SAVES HER LIFE BY QUICK WIT.

Girl's Clothing Catches Fire and She Jumps Into Wash Boiler.

Jumping into a huge wash boiler full of water reserved for washing day, Estelle Goldstein, aged 22, of 753 Liberty avenue, probably saved her own life this morning, when her clothes caught fire. She was standing on a chair, next the stove, in an endeavor to reach a high shelf, when her skirt caught fire.

The flames were extinguished when the girl jumped into the water, but not before severe burns had been inflicted about the lower limbs. Dr. Campbell of the Bradford Street Hospital was called in, but the girl was able to remain at home.

CANADA STORY FALSE—CLARK.

Speaker Says He Never Dreamed of Annexation Scheme.

Washington, November 27—Speaker Champ Clark returned to Washington today and began conferences with other leaders over the work of Congress, which opens next Monday. Mr. Clark said tariff revision would be the great issue of the next campaign. He declared the assault on him regarding Canadian annexation was a misrepresentation for "political effect, general and personal," and said he had never even hinted at such "a wicked and Quixotic scheme" as forcible annexation, "never dreamed of such a thing and would oppose it to the utmost."

LASSOES HIMSELF IN AUTO.

Manhattan Doctor Nearly Choked by Entangling Rope.

Dr. Charles Levine, 40 years old, who lives at 63 East 117th street, Manhattan, was nearly choked to death last night when he was caught in a rope stretched across the Williamsburg Bridge plaza to maintain traffic regulations. The physician came down the south roadway in his auto and failed to notice the rope which compels the motorists to turn to the side. He continued across the plaza. The rope smashed the wind shield and caught the doctor at the throat. He lost control of the machine and was jammed against the back of the seat, gasping for breath. Several policemen who noticed his plight ran to his aid and stopped the motor. Although he was in pretty bad shape he declined the attendance of a surgeon.

GIRL TERRIBLY BURNED.

Oil on Clothing Blazes When Match Is Lighted.

St. James, L. I., November 27—Minnie Schulte, 13 years old, a niece of Ramon Sartonus, was seriously burned while attempting to start a fire in the kitchen range Saturday evening. She had just drawn some kerosene oil from the tank for a customer and some of the oil must have spilled on her dress for as she touched the match to the paper in the stove grate it blazed up and she was at once a mass of flames.

She ran screaming out of the store and before her aunt could reach her, her clothing was nearly burned from her body.

Dr. Peterson was instantly called and applied restoratives, but decided yesterday that she must be removed to a hospital and she was taken to St. Luke's. By the kindness of Mrs. Temple Emmett she will occupy a private bed.

WAS PUT IN IRONS; SUES.

Mr. Bennett Asks $15,000 for Alleged Indignity on Steamer.

Supreme Court Justice Kapper today reserved decision on a motion for the appointment of a commission to take testimony in Trieste, Austria, in a suit brought by Anthony C. Bennett, a school teacher of Chicago and a graduate of the National University of Greece, against the Austro-Americana Steamship Company. The suit is for $15,000, for damages for alleged false imprisonment, and the defendant company wishes to have the testimony of Captain Rubato Stuparish, formerly the commander of the steamship Alice, of that line.

According to ex-Assemblyman Geo. A. Green, who appears for Bennett, his client was put in irons by the captain for protesting against certain conditions aboard ship in August, 1908. Bennett was a passenger on the Alice, and was trying to get up a petition among the other passengers, it is said, when he was arrested. He was detained, he says, aboard ship until all the other passengers were landed in New York.

The defendant company says that the captain's testimony is a necessary part of its defense and wants some one appointed in Trieste to take it.

ANOTHER JANS SUIT OUSTED.

May Be Final Chapter in American "Jarndyce vs. Jarndyce" Case.

Another chapter in the famous Anneke Jans suit against the corporation owning Trinity Church, in Manhattan, was written on Saturday, when Justice Blanchard dismissed the action of John H. Hopson, a citizen of Illinois, who brought the suit against the Trinity Corporation for a hundredth part of the land west of Broadway and extending from Cortlandt to Bleecker street, which made up the sixty-three acres of the original farm. The case was dismissed as soon as the attorney for the plaintiff outlined what he expected to prove. The plaintiff was required to pay the costs.

For 250 years the heirs of Anneke Jans, who owned the land now held by Trinity parish, have been suing to recover the value of the property, and the case has been likened to that of Jarndyce vs. Jarndyce, made famous by Dickens in "Bleak House."

The case of the Jans heirs against the Trinity Corporation was thought to have been settled in 1760. The New York Mercury of October 27 of that year gave an account of a long trial of a suit brought by a family by the name of Brower. The case lasted twenty years. Since that decision all claims of the heirs have not been considered as worth anything by lawyers, and the suits that have cropped up at intervals have generally been instigated by unscrupulous lawyers.

Roeloff Jans, the first husband of Anneke, obtained a grant of land from the Dutch Governor Van Twiller. On his death his widow married Dominie Everardus Bogardus, and the land was confirmed to her by Peter Stuyvesant in 1651. The farm was sold by her children to the English Governor, Francis Lovelace, who held it as crown property. Queen Anne in 1705 gave the land to Trinity Parish, which had been incorporated under a royal charter in 1697.

Other suits against Trinity for this valuable property were brought in 1843 and in 1901.

William was very comfortable in his friend's home for a while, then he disappeared, and so did Stevens' $45 overcoat. Today William was charged with grand larceny in the Gates avenue court and held by Magistrate Dodd for the Grand Jury.

SOLD HOUSE FOR $50 TO DEFRAUD HIS WIFE

"Pastor" Russell Engineered the Sale of $35,000 Property on $177 Judgment.

WATCH TOWER THE BUYER.

Pittsburg Court Scored the "Pastor" for Attempt to Rob Wife of Her Dower.

The interesting story of how "Pastor" Russell sold a $35,000 piece of property for $50 to make it impossible for his wife to obtain her dower rights is told in the court records of Mrs. Russell's successful suit for alimony.

Judge Macfarlane of the Court of Common Pleas, in granting to Mrs. Russell an attachment against some of the property transferred by Russell to the Watch Tower Bible and Tract Society, for the purpose, as charged, of defrauding his wife, refers to this transaction, where he says:

"It has been adjudicated against him that his property was disposed of by him in fraud of his wifes' rights, and his iteration and reiteration of denial of this charge is at the least in bad taste, especially in view of the circumstances surrounding the sale by the sheriff of the Arch street property upon a trifling judgment against him."

The circumstances referred to by the Judge were as follows:

"Pastor" Russell had for many years held title to the Bible House on Arch street, Allegheny, which, according to "Pastor" Russell's testimony in a Washington libel suit, served as a headquarters for the Selica Brick Company, the Brazilian Turpentine Company and other corporations which Russell dominated, in addition to being the center of operations for the Watch Tower Bible and Tract Society. Through transferring the stock he held in various corporations to the United States Investment Company, alleged to be a dummy corporation which he controls, and then to the Watch Tower Bible and Tract Society, "Pastor" Russell believed that he had successfully concealed his property from his wife.

But he couldn't transfer the Bible House, worth about $35,000, without her signature, since the Pennsylvania law grants the wife a dower interest in real estate owned by the husband. So the problem that confronted him was to deprive her of this dower interest without the use of her signature, which he knew he could not get, since Mrs. Russell was then already aware that he was trying to do away with all his property to avoid paying her alimony.

"Pastor" Russell's solution of the problem is described in the brief submitted to the Court of Common Pleas by Congressman Stephen G. Porter of Pennsylvania, attorney for Mrs. Russell in the alimony proceedings. In this brief he says:

Allowed Judgment to Be Taken by Default.

"He ('Pastor' Russell) allowed, and probably procured, suit to be brought against him in a trifling sum for necessaries furnished to his wife after his refusal to provide her maintenance and support, or to allow her to take needed clothing from his house. To this suit he made no defense, allowed judgment to be taken against him by default, and, as evidence that the suit was instigated by him, he waived inquisition and condemnation in order to hasten the sale of real estate worth many thousands of dollars ($35,000), on a judgment of less than $200. The purchaser for a nominal price ($50) was the very corporation (the Watch Tower Bible and Tract Society) he had organized and was then using for the purpose of defrauding his wife.

"Following this he caused title to all of his property, real and personal, to be landed in the maw of this convenient corporation, to the impoverishment of his wife. He did not owe it a dollar. He controlled it and used it as a depository of his property, to the exclusion of his wife. That he still dominates all this property as completely as he did when he held title in his own name, is shown by the fact that when the Quarter Sessions Court made an order requiring him to pay his wife $40 per month, the payment thereof was assumed by the donee of these several properties. There can be no reasonable doubt that, if his wife should die, every donation would be returned to him if he so desired. We refer hereafter to his own testimony, showing how completely he dominates this donee corporation.

"Was his intention fraudulent so far as respects the interests of his wife? To begin with, we have the uncontradicted testimony (pages 129 and 130) that some time prior to 1897 (it was in 1895) he proposed to his wife an amicable separation, she to receive certain property on a hill street. She declined his offer, whereupon he declared in substance that if she persisted, in her refusal she would never get a dollar. This was not an idle threat, made in the heat of excitement, but the cold-blooded declaration of a deliberately formed design to impoverish her, as is plainly shown by his subsequent conduct. He thereafter pursued a continuous course of indignities toward her, often in the presence of others, grossly humiliating, as he well knew, to a woman of her delicate sensibilities and sense of right, until longer stay in his home became intolerable to her, as the jury has found, and, being turned out of doors, she was forced to withdraw in November, 1897. Then followed a succession of acts, including transfers, until he eventually denuded himself of title to every dollar's worth of property."

The "Pastor" is now paying his wife two and one-half times as much alimony as he paid her before he tried by what the Court has characterized as fraud to get out of paying her anything.

That Judge Macfarlane indorsed the statements made in the brief quoted appears from his decision, in the course of which he says:

"The purpose of this whole transaction was to deprive the wife of her dower interest and was a fraud on her. * * * The circumstances of the Sheriff's sale with the testimony with relation to it indicate the intention already noted, and the subsequent donations are plainly made with the same reckless disregard of the rights of the wife, and with intent to defeat her of any interest or claim she might have for her support."

Dr. Hillis' Sermon--Dr. Barlow in Dr. Cadman's Pulpit

Torchbearers of Civilization;

by

The Rev. Dr. Newell Dwight Hillis.

IN Plymouth Church, last night, the pastor, the Rev. Dr. Newell Dwight Hillis, preached on "Homer's Odyssey: An Old Handbook for Greek Boys, on Right Living," the first of six Sunday evening sermons on "The Torchbearers of Civilization." The text was from Romans 11:10: "Glory, honor and peace to every man that worketh good. To the Jew first and also to the Gentile; for God is no respecter of persons." Dr. Hillis said:

It is often said that Columbus found the last undiscovered continent. Seeking one new field to conquer, therefore, Peary and Shackleford turned their steps toward the North and South Poles. But suddenly the spade of the excavator has uncovered a lost civilization and found old cities, old palaces, buried tombs and temples. Twenty years ago the college freshman was taught that written language did not go back beyond a thousand years before Christ, and that Homer's Iliad and Odyssey were handed down upon the memory of the minstrels of each generation. But at seventy years of age the German merchant, retiring from business, determined to devote his wealth to testing out the story of Homer's Iliad, and in a few years he uncovered the palaces of Priam, the towers out of which Andromache looked upon the chariots and the warriors. The time has come when the scholar can sit down and talk with the old Greek poet as with a familiar friend. It is as if one could spend an afternoon with Hector and Paris and Helen, walking around the walls of the Troy city, or, going into an arbor, for the afternoon's tea and the cooling drink. Having no photography, Homer made a word picture of the houses in which they lived, the garments they wore, the weapons they carried, the altars where they bowed with their prayers and sacrifices. Wonderful the discoveries in Mycenae, Troy and Ephesus! Slowly the soil accumulated through the centuries, slowly the sand blew in and buried the column and the capital. Now once more all is laid bare, and we see the tesselated pavements on which kings and queens that we thought were mythical once walked in the bright sunlight. We see the walls bright with colors, we see the frescoes of Ceres and Proserpine walking throught the fields; we look with wonder upon the newly discovered case of surgical instruments; we marvel at the playthings of that little child, found buried in his tomb, for the "Little Boy Blue" had carried his little bronze horn, on which he blew the bugle note, into the tiny grave, in the hope that he might use it once more in the fields of paradise. The Spaniards have a tradition of a lost Atlantis, that once was about as far from their coast as Long Island is from Connecticut. Often looking westward, they saw the light burning in farm house and village. Then came a tidal wave, an earthquake that shook down their cities. One night in looking out they saw no lights, for hamlet and tower and temple alike had gone down beneath the waves. But the Spanish fishermen sailing over that spot, returned to say that sometimes in the night he heard the bells tolling for their dead. And not otherwise the plains of Crete and Ilium, today, are opening the graves, and giving up the buried palace, the long lost statue, the hidden tomb with its frescoes and manuscripts, and the rich gifts that were given to the dead, that they might start well in the new life that lay beyond the grave.

The Romance of the Old Book.

It is a far cry back to Ulysses with his wanderings and Penelope with her fidelity and the Sirens with their song. Sometimes looking across the harbor one beholds Staten Island and its towns through a golden mist, while the setting sun is reflected from their domes and the burnished windows. And we look back upon that old palace and these men and women, upon Telemachus the son and upon Circe, the temptress, upon Laertes, the broken-hearted father, and the old nurse who prayed daily for her master's return, and the dog Argus, who, when everybody else in the palace failed to recognize the master, knew him and crawled to lick Ulysses' feet, and midst his transport of happiness fell dead before the king. Homer makes the life so real in his picture that we feel as well acquainted with it as with the home of some friend in the next street. Taking us by the arm, Homer leads us into the sitting room, where Menelaus and Helen are waiting to welcome us. The ceiling is high and vaulted, the windows look out upon the sea. The beautiful woman is seated at her working table, beside a window shaded with a honeysuckle vine. Helen's dress is fastened by twelve golden buckles. The poet notices that the chair on which she is seated has carved legs. Close to the chair is a work table, holding a skein of white wool, and one of purple. There was a rug of bright colorr beneath her feet. Suddenly the queen called a servant and ordered refreshments for her husband and the guest. Telemachus, who had come to make inquiries concerning his lost father. Instead of bringing in a whisky-and-soda, or a decoction of tea, steeped in tannin, Helen served her guests with white bread, clusters of purple grapes, figs and dates, apples and pears. Looking through this old book is like looking through a window down upon the men and the women and the streets and the city of that olden time.

An Outlook Upon an Old City.

We see Ulysses going up and down the earth seeking treasure for the woman Penelope, whom he loved, and for his aged father, Laertes, and for the little child that was to take his place, Telemachus. We see Penelope patiently waiting for Ulysses to make his fortune, caring for the servants, looking after her men in the fields, spinning the wool and weaving the garments of scarlet and purple. We see young lovers pledging eternal fidelity, each to the other. We see the men toiling in the city, plowing in the fields, fighting, carousing, even killing, and we see the penalties that follow transgression and the rewards that attend righteousness. W. see young girls like Nausicaa playing ball upon the grass, while her servants are bleaching the linen in the sun. They were men and women of like mind, heart and passion with ourselves. They wooed, they loved, they married, they tossed their little children in play; the fathers and mothers saw their boys go away to make their fortune, and waited longingly for their return. Suddenly we realize that they are of one blood with us, and that they are removed only a handbreadth away. That the world is our Father's house, that He hath fitted up like a palace for His children. That God is training us through the same school of life through which He trained them, and we are startled to discover that when a little time hath passed the soil of our country will be worn out, our city will be deserted, men will come to dig, for our tombs and our arts, our wagons, our ships, our industries, our architecture will seem novel and strange to the men that shall come after. And let us believe that when we have played man's part and made restitution for our wrongs, and when we go down the corridor, toward death, with our burden of sorrow and penitence and prayer, to be forgiven and lifted into the fields of God, that we shall find our brothers and our sisters who once carried their burdens, and conquered their temptations, and loved, and lived, and laughed and wept in the streets of Mycenae and of Troy. For we must not forget that Paul said that God gave not simply glory and honor, but gave peace to every man that worketh good, to the Jew first and also to the Gentile.

A Letter From a Prodigal Son, Found in a Greek Tomb.

It has been said that England is our mother, but that Greece is our grandmother. When mother is very busy with the other children, that grandmother rears the boy, and puts her stamp upon him forever. It is a singular fact that the American people are more Greek than English. Those men in Athens who listened to Paul would be strangers to the modern London, but would have felt quite at home in New York. These Greeks that always wanted to see and hear some new thing would have liked our papers, sold on the streets at 1 o'clock sharply, but dated in advance 6 p.m. We have our love for magazines and written books from the Greeks, who were the first people to write out their recollections, their travels and biographies, and even their personal recollections. We have our love of baseball, football and out-of-door sports from the Greek, with his gymnastics. We have our love of politics from Athens, where the political pot was always simmering and every man knew what was best for the State, though, unfortunately, when all that wisdom was put together, it was only half the wisdom that was necessary for the above-mentioned problems. We borrowed representative government from Athens, as we did our painting and sculpture and architecture. Our education also is essentially Greek in its method. To understand how much we are like the Greeks, let me read as a human document of the first importance a papyrus found in a tomb where a mother was buried. Her boy was a runaway prodigal, who had spent his money in loose living, had been seized for debt, and now in remorse burns with shame. "Antonius Longus to Nilus his mother: Many greetings. Continually I pray for thy health. Daily I make supplication for thee to Serapis. I was ashamed to come to thee, because I walk about in rags. Yes, I am now naked, Mother, I beseech thee, be reconciled to me. I know I have brought all these things upon myself. Every way I have been chastened. I realize now how I have sinned. I have heard that Postumus has met thee and told thee all things about me. But thou knowest I had rather lose my hand than owe that man money. Mother" (here the roll is broken and cannot be read). Professor Diessman calls this the letter of a prodigal son.

There is another roll in the Bodleian library in Oxford that tells us that the little boys of that old world were like our little boys. One father had a little son, who was saucy and who wrote his father an impudent letter; but when the boy died, the father was broken hearted, so they buried the boy's letter with his father, and now the spade has uncovered both. You may have known parents who put the boy to bed upstairs, and tell him, "we will be down here in the parlor," and a little later slip out the back door and go riding; and this father sent his boy to bed, and then in the dark went out to the town to some entertainment, and when the boy found it out, he got out of bed and wrote a letter to his father, and told him that he thought he was the "best liar that had ever come to Troy. "Thaon to his father, greeting: Thou didst not take me with thee to town. Now I will not speak to thee, nor wish thee health, nor greet thee again. Mother said to Archalaus, 'That boy drives me mad,' and then hast gone to town and left me behind! But now thou hast left for me a gift of locust beans. The family deceived me when thou didst go. Now take me to town (to see the circus) I beseech thee. If thou dost not, I will not eat, I will not drink—so there!" This farmer has a hard colt to break. The young animal begins by getting astride the tongue and kicking out the dashboard, but with patience much can be made out of his spirit. What a flood of light the letter of this prodigal son throws upon that old world! It would almost seem as if he had read the fifteenth chapter of Luke, and was the boy in rags whom Jesus described, and whom his father forgave, and with tears and rejoicings brought him again into favor and the chief place in his father's house.

The Warning Against Avarice.

Standing at the gate of the city, the old Greek teacher saw the boys go thronging in and out. Many of them were charmed with the glitter of gold and the sparkle of silver, as birds are charmed with the glitter of snakes eyes. Suddenly the old man waves his hand, and when the crowd is still he tells them a story. One day in his travels Ulysses came to the palace of King Midas. This king was fonder of gold than of all things else. He valued his crown because it was metal, and loved the dandelion because it looked like coin. He liked tinkling music, because it reminded him of the jingle of falling silver. One night, in his dream, a god stood beside his pillow and offered to grant his greatest wish. Is it Fame? King Midas answered No. Is it health? No. Is it the most beautiful woman in the world in marriage? No. "What I want is the golden touch, that everything I handle may be gold." And when he had promised to be satisfied with that, the god answered that when the sun rose the gift should be Midas'. The next morning King Midas sat at his table, and when the first beam fell upon his face, he stretched out his hand and touched the dewy roses, and they became stiff, and the red turned to yellow; he touched his plate and it became a golden service; he touched the chair and it was a royal throne; he touched the carpet, and it became stiff as brocade. His little daughter came running in to meet and greet him, and as he touched her lips she turned cold and stood a metal statue. In his excitement he reached for a glass of water, and the water turned to thick metal in his mouth. He ran for help, but the balustrade and the door steps were transformed beneath his hand, and great terror rose in his heart. Suddenly he knew his awful blunder. Midas then fell upon his knees and smote upon his breast and shut himself in alone from his servants, and wept and plead, and repented the long day and the long night through. But in the midst of the night once more the god stood beside him. He heard the wicked man's prayers, forgave his selfishness and sin. At daybreak he gave Midas the power to return and touch his little daughter, until she became a child with warm lips, and loving arms, until the goblets were filled with cool water, and the roses were red once more in the garden. Oh! all ye young hearts, have ye no need to read this story of avarice? Are none of you making haste to be rich? Have you not placed money and equipage above honor and truth? Have you not coined your health into gold and transmuted your very friendships into saving. The rust of avarice is consuming your intellect, the canker of greed is eating out your heart. This money-loving is a root of every kind of evil. Avarice is the curse of your generation. Gold still has hypnotic power, as in the days of King Midas. Reopen not only the Book of Paul, and the Book of Ecclesiastes, but this book of Homer. Perhaps the avaricious youth will, in the night, suddenly behold a figure standing beside the miser, stretching out the hand of penalty, and whispering: "Thou fool! This night thy soul shall be required of thee."

Circe's Palace.

When Homer has warned young men and women against avarice he warns them against mere sensual delights, with the pleasures of the gourmand and the banquet hall. All about him were men who lived to the eye and to the ear, through rich foods and delicious wines and the pleasures of the body, and he told them a story of his hero, Ulysses, who went through the school of life gathering wisdom and knowledge out of the school of experience of temptation and sin. One day Ulysses came to the harbor of an unknown island. Through an open glade amid the trees could be seen the part of a marble palace. Whether the people therein were enemies or friends no one knew. A group of the younger men set forth to explore the estate. Suddenly they found themselves in a path to the marble steps leading up to the palace. As they approached a beautiful woman, Circe, with three lovely attendants, came down the steps and stretched out her hands to meet and greet them. Soon the servants spread the feast, and then the sailors revealed their real selves. They stuffed themselves with food, they poured the wines down their throats in torrents and exhibited such gluttony and drunkenness as had never been known before. The very servants looked on with increasing disgust. Finally Circe rose at the head of the table and waved her wand, saying that every man ought to be known for just what he is. It is not the body without, but the soul within that is the real man, and suddenly the banqueting hall was filled with huge pigs that dropped down on all fours and began to grunt and squeal and push one another aside and the servants with clubs drove them out of the room and down the steps, and carried them off to a pigsty, where they were fed with sour milk that befitted their swinish taste. But one man Eurylochus, withstood the temptation and would not eat the drugged food or drink the spiced wine. When Ulysses had heard the story he was in despair, for without his sailors he would never reach his home beyond the sea.

But in his prayer he was shown a little flower growing in the forest, despised and overlooked, and its sweet perfume broke the charm of Circe and destroyed her enchantment. It made a way for Ulysses' escape, and with that divine strength Ulysses walked through Circe's palace like one who comes out of fire with no smell of smoke upon his garments. So he redeemed these swinish men back to their true estate, and brought the prisoners out of their dungeons, and gave light to the blind and life to the dead. This whole story is a story of God's power to deliver out of temptation. That little flower that redeemed these men out of sin is the Greek emblem of that Saviour who walked the hills of Galilee and broke the power of sin and destroyed its necromancy. For just as in Ulysses' day, sin is still transformed into an angel of light. Under its necromancy war becomes a tonic to courage. Men's eyes are so blinded that they do not see it is a bald, bloody murder. Liquor becomes a stimulant to good fellowship, and men are deceived, forgetting the bleared eyes, the mildewed lips and the rottenness of the bones. Profligacy and poverty are transformed into remedial agencies that drive the weak to the wall so that the strong survive, and finally every crime is so bedizzened that it ceases to stir abhorrence. So Ulysses strips off all the cloak of lies and the wolf that has gone about in sheep's clothing is exposed with his fangs, and being warned, men are saved to character and sobriety. Proverbs bids the youth to not look upon the wine when it is red—the end is death. Paul adds: "He who sows to the flesh shall of the flesh reap corruption." But Homer says: "Avoid the strange woman, stretching out a cup of flame, for the beginning is swinishness and the end is the pig-sty and death."

The Sirens' Song; Morality and Religion.

Then Homer talks to young men about the difference between morality and religion, and shows them the chasm that separates negative obedience and positive character. You remember how Moses is always urging Thou shalt not kill, Thou shalt not steal, Thou shalt not lie, Thou shalt not covet; while Christ emphasizes the positives. Thou shalt hope, thou shalt love, thou shalt trust. Moses thought it was enough to kill the weeds in the field, and destroy the thistle and the burdock, but Jesus knew that black clods that have no weeds offer no food to hungry children. Where Moses stopped with weed killing, Jesus went on to sow the land with berad and corn against man's hunger, and to plant the roses and lilies of faith and hope. Morality is the absence of weeds, religion is the presence of wheat and flowers, waving incense to the god of summer. So Homer told the boys a story about the emptiness of morality and the necessity of religion. One day his hero came to a narrow strait, where the sirens stood on either side, singing their songs of enchantment. Always the sailors who heard went ashore, only to have concealed enemies to leap upon them and strike them dead, and drag them off as food for harpies. Now wise Ulysses knew the danger. So he filled the sailors ears with wax that they could not hear the music, and left the sailors free to row the boat through the dangerous strait. Then Ulysses asked his sailors to bind him hand and foot to the mast, leaving his ears free of wax. Because the sailors could not hear, they passed through in safety, while Ulysses who could hear and begged and prayed to go ashore was bound hand and foot to the mast, so he was saved.

Now what Homer is saying is that Ulysses was a moral man on the outside, but that inwardly he wanted to go to the sirens. Many a man whose heart is filled with burning desires is lashed by the public opinion and the fear of punishment, to modern society. Outwardly he commits no crime, but inwardly he is like Ulysses, his heart was with the sirens, but his hands and feet were tied to the mast. But what is religion—Homer tells us. One day Orpheus, the divine singer, who had come from God, passed through that strait, beside the sirens. But Orpheus lifted his harp, and poured forth a music so piercingly sweet, the music of heaven, that in contrast the sirens' song became discord, and the sirens' slaves broke away and flung themselves into the water, until the very trees of the field tore themselves up by the roots and followed Orpheus. It is as if Homer, in his blindness, had the foresight from God of the coming of One whose music should be a world music, whose epic should be the eternal melody. Jesus makes the positives of life so beautiful that Moses' negatives become starved and contemptible. Moses swept the darkness out with a broom, Jesus lifted a curtain and let the sunshine come in. Moses cut up the weeds of immorality, Jesus planted the flowers of paradise, and ripened the clusters on the tree of life for man's hunger.

Strength by Struggling and Sacrificing.

But Homer thinks that life is a long battle on the far-off frontier. At home in Ulysses' palace are the one hundred suitors, trying to break down Queen Penelope's faithfulness. These suitors refuse the hard task, avoid burden-bearing, yield to luxury, and give their days to rioting and their nights to drunkenness. Poor Ulysses thinks that events have gone hard with him, that life has been cruel, that he has been robbed of his home and kept far from Penelope and his little son. But all the time God was overruling events. By wrestling he was becoming strong. One day, in disguise, Ulysses returned to his palace. These suitors had come into Penelope's home to try and break down her fidelity. Disguised as a beggar, Ulysses suggests that the suitor that can bend the bow of the long-lost king shall win Penelope's hand, but self-indulgence has weakened their arms and destroyed their manhood. Doing easy duty at home, not one of them can string the bow. Then Ulysses threw off his rags and disguise, and stood forth like a veritable son of God, and hurled defiance to his enemies, and found that wrestling had turned to strength, that the woman who had stood the test was supremely faithful, that his son had grown up to be worthy of his long-lost father, that most of his old servants were true. He had borrowed strength from his enemies, wisdom from experience, and neither life nor death had separated him from those he loved. He came home like a brave soldier from foreign wars. The memories of his battles was like the shields of vanquished enemies hung on the walls of memory. It is the epic of man's soul, it is a story of a lost Eden and a paradise recovered through the mercy, pity, and the redeeming love of the Father God.

Church and Peace;

by

The Rev. J. B. Remensnyder.

THE Rev. Dr. Junius B. Remensnyder, pastor of St. James' Lutheran Church, Manhattan, and president of the Peace Arbitration Committee of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, preached yesterday morning on "The Church and International Peace." Dr. Remensnyder said in the course of his sermon:

The Church is primarily a religious institution. Her mission is, therefore, not political, but moral. Nor can she enter directly into the work of social reform. For this reason she is often unjustly arraigned as a passive spectator of evils, by those who would change her from a spiritual to a social agency.

Similarly, her methods are criticised. These are conservative and educational rather than noisy and militant. Yet experience has shown that the Church, in this quiet role of a witness and teacher of the truth, has achieved larger and more far-reaching results. History proves that the Christian Church overthrew the three greatest plagues of the ancient world: Slavery, the degradation of women and infanticide, not so much by an open fight against them—interwoven as they were with the established order—as by quietly and steadily infusing a new spirit into all the relations of life, thereby creating an atmosphere in which these immoral institutions could not survive.

Now, there is no evil which is more directly antagonistic to the spirit of Christianity than war. And that for these four reasons: Christianity is founded upon righteousness. It views life as moral. Hence the relations of men are to be determined by justice. Nowhere, either in the scriptures of the Old or New Testament, is there an appeal to force. The strong are not to crush the weak. The wicked are not to prevail by numbers and might. Disputes are not to be settled by the arbitrament of force. "What doth the Lord require of thee but to do justly?" is the Scriptural injunction. "Judge not that ye be not judged," said the great Teacher. Hence, for a Christian nation, when a difference arises, to seize its fellow nation by the throat, constituting itself judge and executioner, and appealing to force instead of justice, is a violent breach of the Christian spirit.

Again, Christianity enjoins forbearance and patience. We are not to be quick to resent imagined wrongs, but to seek to turn our enemy by gentle means. Vengeance is to be left to God, who alone can decide equitably. Christianity teaches that it is stronger to control passion that hotly to strike; sublimer to conquer and uplift a foe by kindness than to crush him by hate and force.

Further, the spirit of Christian teaching is that of pity. When the Son of Man beheld the sins and sorrows of humanity, He was moved to compassion and wept over them. What must we think would be His feelings could we see Him standing at a battlefield, strewn with corpses and mangled limbs, and wounded men burdening the air with groans and cries of agony? Christianity was sent into the world to control and to mitigate the miseries of humanity. All these find their most fiendish expression in war.

Once more, Christianity is the religion of brotherhood. Christ has made all his disciples to be "brethren." As such, not alone are we to respect each other's rights, but to be bound together by love and good-will. We are to avoid all occasion of offence, and to seek to advance our brother's welfare, prosperity and happiness.

These maxims of Christianity show that war, the resort to passion and force, is absolutely incompatible with its spirit. And the [illegible] ds and ages has borne witness against it and enjoined her members to "live in peace." But, diametrically opposed as is war, with all its injustices, outrages and horrors, to the mind and temper of Jesus, it is that one giant evil which the Church has not yet been able to overcome. War is the only great survival of Paganism. It is a conspicuous anachronism in Christian civilization. While all deplore its barbarism, yet the ambition of rulers, the jealousy of national prejudices, and, too often, the apologies of ministers, have enabled it to survive. And it is the shame of Christendom that its defenders and advocates are daring now to frame their warlike preparations on a scale of magnitude and destructiveness surpassing all former times.

But coexistent with this military increase comes a great awakening on the part of Christians. Never was the sentiment of the Church keyed to such a pitch against this monstrous wrong. Everywhere protests are spoken, public meetings are being held, societies formed, and peace agencies at work. The Christian consciousness is awakened. A flame of holy indignation bursts forth over all the earth.

It is the summons of Providence to the Church. The "set time" to wipe this blot from the modern world has come. No one can measure the might of the Christian sentiment when it speaks with a universal voice. Kings and governments will heed it or go down before it.

And with this opportunity comes a supreme duty. When the hour of God comes we must seize it. The Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, recognizing the signs of the times, and the special opportunity presented by the arbitration treaties negotiated by the United States between Great Britain and France, has appointed a Clerical Commission on Peace and Arbitration to quicken and guide the peace movement throughout the churches. This commission is to act with similar clerical commissions representing the churches of England and Germany, thus creating an agency for a world-wide Christian movement for the cessation of war.

And especially does the American commission now appeal to the great Christian constituency it represents, to exert its influence to secure the enactment of these treaties by the Senate. President Taft, declaring his wish that the United States should blaze the way to universal arbitration among the nations, appeals to the churches for support. When he says that the Christian Church is laboring valiantly to fulfill its destiny of "Peace on Earth," and looks to us, let us uphold him with all our power. And when the spirit of Christianity is thus aroused and speaks with concentrated might it will be found that all the specious arguments and technicalities for the necessity of war will vanish like flax before flame.

The hour seems to have come, in the order of Providence, for the victory of international peace; the creation of a new epoch in Christian history is in our hands.

May God in His mercy grant that for the honor of Christianity, for the sake of the gentle spirit of pity and for the welfare of the human soul, the churches may so rise to this great opportunity that the cruel blood-fanged demon of war may be exorcised from the stage and this earth will roll backward on its axis sooner than he shall return.

HOW GOD MADE A MAN.

Extracts From Sermon by the Rev. J. F. Dobbs of Syracuse.

From a sermon on "How God Made a Man," by the Rev. John Francis Dobbs of the First Reformed Church, Syracuse, N. Y., the following strong extracts are taken:

"If the very best of our modern men would allow the Church to teach them whence they really came, they would find themselves under ceaseless obligation to the Bible and the gospel. The development of manly qualities has gone on through the ages and is definitely recorded in the Bible. The Old Testament makes clear to all who read its pages that the best men of the present have been produced by the hand of God with painstaking skill."

Mr. Dobbs then gave the various attributes of man—strength, intenseness, patriotism, courage, wisdom, prudence, fidelity, patience, emotion, conscience, righteousness and spirituality—defining each, and then said:

"This is how God made a man. He took one attribute at a time, discovered in widely separated men, and weaving them together into one ideal conception of a perfect man, so inspired men that at last One arose who combined all these qualities in one person. What Christ was, the Father intends that you and I should strive to be. The one purpose of these ideals is that man today should have a perfect copy.

"The best men of the present are not safe in their own manhood, nor in that of their sons, should the manly qualities of God's heroes in the Old and the New Testament be lost to them through neglect. The religion of the Bible is distinctly a manly religion, and the religion of the Church must be kept so too, while these racial heroes of the Bible are preached to men. Christ as the culmination of the manly virtues of the Old Testament characters, presents the most compelling appeal to manhood that the world shall ever have. The modern man needs the Bible and the gospel to save his manhood, that has cost the race so much, from being atrophied. No man is really modern who is not anxious to live for the future with deep spiritual appreciation of all the great men of the past. Only by learning the lessons of the past and the present can we be expected to live now 'on the principles that shall govern the future.' God would use the Bible to show both the Church and the men of the hour how only a man can successfully meet the inevitable experiences of the morrow."

Items of Religious Interest.

The Rev. J. Austin Huntley, pastor of the First Baptist Church, Lee avenue and Keap street, quite severely arraigns "Pastor" Russell on his strictures of the Baptist position with regard to baptism and salvation in a sermon on these pages. Mr. Huntley convincingly shows that "Pastor" Russell is quite content, in belittling the work of Brooklyn preachers of the gospel, to interpret the Scriptures absolutely to suit his own purposes.

According to dispatches sent out from Denver from the recent sessions of the Foreign Missions Committee of the Methodist Episcopal Church, "the Church faces the unspeakable humiliation of 3 per cent. cut in money for missionaries in all the foreign world. Conference collections decreased $60,000 last year. Special gifts increased over $100,000, a slight net increase. Committee makes immediate and urgent appeal for $200,000 extra for debt and emergencies. Bishop McDowell at last session dramatically said: 'The question goes into my soul in the night, and the missionaries are asking, "Has the Church reached its full measure of devotion?"'"

Charles J. Hicks, asscolate general secretary of the International Committee of the Young Men's Christian Association, whose work was so effective, especially among students and Bible study workers and for missions, has resigned to take a position with the International Harvester Company, which has 35,000 employes, where he is to carry on the work of influencing men for the religious life. The International Committee has asked John R. Mott to become the associate general secretary for both the home and foreign work, and he is considering the matter.

Dr. Robert Stuart MacArthur, president of the Baptist World Alliance, who was to have sailed last week for Russia, has changed his plans and will now sail early next month. He will meet in London the Rev. F. B. Meyer, former president of the alliance, and together they will have a conference with the Czar, already arranged, for the purpose of promoting a better feeling toward Baptists in Russia and to forward the building of the Baptist University in that country.

The South Classis of Long Island of the Reformed Church will hold a mass meeting of all the churches in the Bethany Reformed Church on December 13. The President of Synod, Dr. Plockman, will be present, and the Rev. Thomas Mackenzie of Jamaica will deliver his lecture on the Dutch churches.

The Hebrew in History

by

The Rev. W. M. Woodfin.

A SERMON which has attracted considerable attention because of its broad spirit, the publication of which has been requested, was preached by the Rev. William M. Woodfin, pastor of the Presbyterian Church, Swarthmore, Pa. His subject was "The Hebrew in the Drama of History." It is here given nearly in full. Mr. Woodfin said:

All the world is a stage, upon which the nations and races of earth are the players. The great events of history are the different scenes, the great crises, the conclusions of acts in the thrilling drama. Our literature, philosophy and theology are the gems of truth caught and penned from the lips of the actors; our music is the record of the symphonies of the universal oratorio, while the treasures of our art are only sketches of the scenery appearing at different periods of time.

All the nations of the earth have played some part, great or small. Some rushed forth in the morning of creation and left little or no trace of their existence upon the stage of human history; others, like the Egyptians, the Medes, the Persians, the Babylonians, came out and played brilliant parts, holding aloft the ensign of military glory and imperial civic splendor; but they, too, acted out their parts and retired forever behind the scene, and left no trace of their existence save the cuniform tablets buried by the dust of ages. Greece came before the footlights of time and made the drama glow with her philosophy and glisten with her gems of classic lore, but Greece is only a memory enshrined in fragments of literature and remnants of broken art. Rome contributed her law, and for a time charmed us with the magic of her eloquence, and for a few centuries thrilled us with the might of her imperial power; but when it is asked who played the leading role of the centuries and about whom the point of chief interest centers and who deserves the palm of greatest credit for his enduring services to the human race, all eyes must turn toward the despised Jew. We are not unmindful that some may question his place in the drama, and that some may not be ready to ascribe just praise to him, yet all that is necessary to appreciate his importance in history and our debt to him is to omit him, stage the play without him and you will at once see that the play loses its charm and becomes a "Hamlet" with the Hamlet left out.

The wonder of wonders is the Hebrew in History. The miracle of miracles is his unparalleled existence among the nations of the earth. His refusal to be absorbed by the streams of Egyptian, Babylonian, Persian life is equaled by his refusal to be absorbed by the Russian, German, English and American life. He is with us, a part of us, and yet not a part of us.

Macaulay has written some great lines about the Roman Church and their pontiffs, but they lose their force in the light of Hebrew history. He says: "No other institution is left standing which carries the mind back to the times when the smoke of sacrifice rose from the Pantheon, and when the camels, leopards and tigers bounded in the Iberian amphitheater. The proudest royal houses are but as yesterday as compared with the line of supreme pontiffs, that line we trace back in unbroken lines from the pope who crowned Napoleon in the nineteenth century to the pope who crowned Pepin in the eighth, and far beyond Pepin the august dynasty extends, until it is lost in the twilight of fable. The Catholic Church was great and respected before the Saxon had set foot on Britain, before Frank had passed the Rhine, when Grecian eloquence still flourished at Antioch, when idols were still worshipped in the temple of Mecca and she may still exist in undiminished vigor, when some traveler from New Zealand, in the midst of a vast solitude, shall take his stand on a broken arch of London Bridge to sketch the ruins of St. Paul." This is one of the most eloquent flights in English literature, but is it history?

The Jewish people, the Jewish Church, the Jewish institutions are still standing, though their national life is extinct, their temple in ruins and the fires of their sacrifices extinguished. What is the line of Roman pontiffs, says Vance, compared to the splendid dynasty of the succession of Aaron and Levi? The twilight of fable in which the line of pontiffs began was but the noonday brightness of the Jewish priesthood. The religious ceremonies of the past few weeks carry the mind back to the day of atonement, the feasts which have been observed from a day before the wolf nursed the founders of Rome. Their unbroken history reaches back to a time when their prophet in rapt mood stood over ancient Babylon and pronounced the curse of Jehovah upon it and said it would become a howling wilderness and the abode of bats and jackals and the race has lived to see that prophecy fulfilled. The Jews have a right to be proud of their history. Just was the rebuke given an upstart who taunted a Jew because of his race, when the Jew replied: "Yes, I am a Jew, and I am proud of it, for while your fathers were naked savages living on roots and nuts in the forests of Germany, mine were princes in the house of King David."

Not only has the Jew played well his part in the history of the past, but he is playing well his part in the history of the present. Prejudice too often blinds us to the merits of the Jewish race and prevents us from giving due recognition to him.

The Jew is patriotic and a political asset to any nation. When he adopts a country he becomes a defender of its flag. He contributes as cheerfully as his Gentile brother to the support of the government. He votes as quickly for civic improvement as his Gentile brother. He contributes toward Gentile charity, yet asks no Gentile contribution for Jewish charity. Though he cannot become an active member of the Y. M. C. A., yet he often heads the subscription for this noble work. It is seldom you find one in prison charged with a grave offense. It is not often you find one a public charge. They have political ambitions as we have. When a Joseph is elevated to rule the nation, the nation does not suffer from carelessness on his part. Less than a half century after the political disabilities had been removed in England, we find Disraeli at the head of the English government. He got the place and held it by virtue of merit. History affords none more heroic nor patriotic, than Gambetta flying out of Paris to summon France to arms, nor of Judah P. Benjamin in his noble effort to finance the Southern Confederacy. The nations which are kind to the Jews are the most prosperous. I will bless them that bless thee and curse them that curse thee, is being fulfilled in Russia today.

The Jew is playing his part in the elevation of the intelligence of the world. The Jew appears to have been ordained the teacher of mankind. He has wandered in every land, written in every tongue and nearly all literature bears the stamp of Jewish personality. It was the poetry of Genesis rather than the poetry of Homer or Virgil which inspired "Paradise Lost." The dramas of Shakspeare would be stripped of their life if from them there was taken the influence of the Jewish Scriptures. Our art is indebted to Jewish ideals and characters. Many a Madonna have you seen painted by the masters of Europe, but did you ever see one with Jewish features? Many a Christ Child have you seen painted by the masters, but can you point out one with Hebrew face? We have likenesses of Peter, John and Paul, but have we given the Jews credit for them by painting one with a Jewish face? Yet all of these were Jews and bore Jewish and not Italian faces.

Germany, we are told, leads the scholarship of the world and yet we are told that the Jew holds his place among the scholars of Germany. They control a large percentage of the journals of Europe. A large number of the authors of Austria are Jews. Mendelssohn will retain an enviable place among the world's musicians, while Spinoza will always be looked upon as a great philosopher. The Jew has taken a very high rank in medicine and his services have often been retained at the court of kings, queens and popes in preference to physicians of their own blood. It sounds like a story from the land of dreams that this people, after all of their persecutions, should arise Phoenix like, from the dust of degradation and take and keep a place among the vanguard of progressive forces everywhere. No sooner were the signals given than the gates of the Ghetto were thrown open and the Jews invaded the chairs of our universities, the stages of our theaters, the editorial rooms of our great newspapers and the platforms of our political assemblies. The Jews who were penned up in obscurity are not content to rule the stock exchange, run the pawnshops, but compete with us in the arts and sciences and political government, from whence they were the furthest removed. Did you ever see a Jew who could not read, write and figure?

That the Jew has played a leading role in the world's finance must be conceded. The Jews of the dark ages were money lenders by compulsion rather than choice, for the professions were closed to them, and they dared not make a permanent investment in real estate lest they be expelled and their property confiscated. The Jews have suffered inconceivably from the prejudice of the day in which the "Merchant of Venice" was written. No one will deny that some Jews have been dishonest, but that was because they were human and not because they were Jews. Shylock was not a typical Jew, for had he been he would never have valued one pound of human flesh above three thousand ducats. He has made his money by quick sales and small profits. The men who manipulate the heartless trusts today are not Jews, but men high, in many cases, in the Christian Church. You have no more right to hold the Christian Church responsible for these men than the race for the parasites in it. The Jew is eager for wealth as the Gentile is for the freedom and the independence which it gives him. The Jew is obeying the divine fiat, possess the land. They have a very strong hold upon the wealth of the world. They are living to demonstrate that the Gentile has not monopoly on virtue and the Hebrew on vice.

But the leading role of the Jew has been in ethics and religion. "Religion," says Carlyle, "is the one fact which creatively determines all the rest." We curse the Jew and yet praise the God he has revealed to us. We loathe his presence among us and yet rejoice in the saving grace he has shown to us. Have you ever tried to estimate the value of the Jew in religion? Stage your play without him. He has taught us the unity of God. Our modern system of ethics, our high estimate of woman, our ideas of virtue and our doctrine of the Fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man we owe to him. Try to imagine a world into which no Moses has come with the moral law sounding across the centuries the eternal distinction of right and wrong, a world in which David has never tuned the hearts of men to praise their Redeemer, a world in which Isaiah has never given a sweeping vision, a world without the apostles, a world without a Bible, a world without a Christ.

The Jews as a nation sinned and as a nation they suffered. The Jews as individuals have sinned and as individuals they have been punished. If a dying Christ with bleeding hands and a broken heart could pray, "Father, forgive them, for they know not what they do," then a Christian world, robed in a mantle of love, should show a similar spirit, since our Christianity is a Jewish religion in evolution and the fruit of which that religion was the flower.

All races exist for a purpose in the mind of the Creator and when it is fulfilled they retire forever behind the curtain of oblivion. The great nations arose, illumed the heavens with their splendor, but their lights went out and they faded to dreamstuff. The Hebrew saw them all, existed with them all, and is now in the twentieth century exhibiting no decadence, no infirmity of age, no slowing down of his energies, no dulling of his alert and aggressive mind. When destructive criticism has reduced the Bible to myths and fables, the Hebrew race will stand as God's living and indestructible witness to the revelation that God has made to the world.

The Christian Church is not without censure in her treatment of this people. We have driven the Jews away from Christ by ostracism and persecution. You, too, would hate the name of Christ Jesus if in that name you had been robbed of your wealth, the honor of your home despoiled and your loved ones slain before your eyes. When Christianity begins to practice toward the Jew the principles of the Sermon on the Mount the name of Jesus will become the most precious upon the lips of the children of Zion. Already in America, among many Jews, He is given the chief seat in the synagogue of their teachers, and they claim Him as their own.

Will the Jew become Christian? I cherish the hope that the natural branch which was broken off in unbelief will be grafted into the olive tree again. I cherish the hope that the Zionistic movement, backed by the wealth of nations, will regain and restore the ancient altars of Israel. There is prophecy unfulfilled that the Jew shall again dwell in the plains and inhabit the vineclad hills of Judea. Then shall the Messianic hope be realized when Israel shall come into her own. Then may we hop for the reign of universal peace on earth, when the sword shall be beaten into the plowshare and the Golden Rule become international law. Then shall come the grand finale—when Christ shall reign and God's will be done on earth as it is in heaven.

Dr. Hannan on the Sovereignty of the Spiritual

by
The Rev. Dr. F. Watson Hannan.

YESTERDAY morning the Rev. Dr. F. Watson Hannan, pastor of the New York Avenue M. E. Church, preached a strong and thoughtful sermon on "The Sovereignty of the Spiritual." The text was from Philippians iii:12-17. Dr. Hannan said:

Interest lags when we have attained our object. We are so constituted that if our attainments are not progressive, we lose all interest in our efforts. We hate dead levels. The goal of tomorrow must be higher than that of today. Life to be at its best must be always on the stretch for something better. We live under the stimulus of the unattained. We have here a splendid example of it. Paul had just been speaking of the fellowship and compensations of suffering and that while he was in the suffering, he had not yet attained to its full compensation. He wanted to be made conformable to Christ's death, that he might be in the likeness of His resurrection. In a word, he wanted to be made like his Lord, but that he had not yet attained. He was striving for it.

One might ask why one so richly endowed with the spiritual wanted or needed anything better. Did he not have visions and revelations? Was he not caught up into Paradise? Did he not hear unutterable things? Did he not have ecstasies which made it impossible for him to know whether he was in the body or out of it? Did he not say that he was already crucified with Christ and that now Christ lived in him? What need was there that he should strive for something better? It is to be feared that many lives today are not on the stretch so as to be in danger of breaking. Men think if they were only as good as Paul or John, there would be no need of anything better. Saint Augustine says: "The one perfection of man is to have found out that he is not perfect and the whole life of a good Christian is a holy longing to make progress." There is no greater danger to the soul than self-content. When we hear people who are not really Christian boast that they are good enough, we think if they could get one glimpse of what God wants them to be it would wither their conceit. We must ever remember that nothing is our best which is not better than our last best. The indifference that many seem to have for the largest interest of the Kingdom of God, shows that there is yet much to be attained among men. We need to keep a noble and worthy ideal always before us as the goal of our endeavor. The horizon widens as we rise and every new attainment shows us much more to be attained. God's highest for us is always attainable by our best efforts for each today, but the ideal lifts for each tomorrow. Paul wanted to stimulate these Christians, who seemed content with their attainments, to better things and does it in a very adroit and telling fashion by showing what he himself was not, but what he meant by the grace of God to become.

1. The attitude. "I have not attained." In this he refers back to the one great act of conversion, which to him was not the end, but only the beginning of his Christian life. He says, "I am not yet made perfect." That was his confession of what he was not. With all that matchless grace of humility, with that marvelous conversion and those later visions and revelations, the tireless activity, the suffering without measure, the reigning Christ in his heart, the constraining love over his life, the crucifixion of the old nature, the new man of the heart—with all this, yet he said, "I have not attained—I am not made perfect—I am only going toward it and am striving after it." That ought to give pause to the self-conceit of smaller lives. But the confession that he had not yet attained and was not yet made perfect was not a confession of failure any more than it would be for a boy to confess that he was not yet a man. The claim of the perfectionist always jars on the ear of the modest Christian, for it savors of a vast presumption. No man will ever call himself perfect who has once had a clear vision of Christ. The disparity between our best and His shames us into silence. All that the best can say is "I have not yet attained, neither am I yet made perfect, but I am going on toward perfection." Such a claim is not failure. It is the furthest removed from that self-complacency which prevents all growth. The people who claim that they can do everything are usually found doing nothing. It is easy to assume that one's ideal is high enough and then judge life by that standard and be content. But it is quite another thing to take the standard of life set by Jesus Christ and conform one's life to that.

When Paul said, "I have not yet attained," he was not discouraged nor did he regard the goal as unattainable. An ideal that is easily reached is an ideal not worth striving after. What is the use, it is asked, of having a best that is not easily reached? Because the real benefit is more in the striving than in the attaining. In mountain climbing, the climb does the tourist more good than the view. Mastering a subject is worth far more than the paltry prize. Paul ever gives the spiritual the supreme place and the striving for it the chief work in character building. Paul says that he was laid hold of by Jesus Christ for a character and a work which he had not yet attained. His was a great and masterful life, but it was not perfect and none knew it better than he. The secret of his tireless struggle was that he knew how far short even his best came of the example of his Lord.

When a man gets to a place where he does not want to know or do anything more, we despair of him altogether. He is getting spiritually blind and numb and doesn't know it. It is possible to become so calloused with religious conceit as not to know that religion itself has entirely departed. The springs of spirituality can dry up. The aspirations of life die out without ever disturbing the complacency of morally dead men. The discontent of Paul was not that he was dissatisfied with religion, but he was unsatisfied because he wanted more of it. He felt his shortcoming, I fear, much more keenly than we do today.

In all reform hope is a fundamental element. We can do nothing for men until we can inspire the hope that their betterment is not impossible. The reason that Christianity has so large a place for hope is because there is no finality of attainment in which to rest with nothing more to have. Heaven itself will be a progressive series of revelation and activities which the expanding capacities of the redeemed soul can never exhaust. The mallet, the pen, the brush, fall from the hand the moment the idea is realized. There is nothing more to strive for. After Peter lifts his readers as far as he can in spiritual culture he still says: "Grow in grace." There is a double sense in which we are to be made perfect: First, by getting rid of all our faults and sins; and, second, by a positive growth into the likeness of Christ. Many fondly think that character will crystallize into a perfection which will be fixed the moment they reach heaven. It will not be so. Character will grow forever, following the order of an ascending spiral, ever becoming more and more like Christ, but never reaching His perfection. When we think of Paul in prison for Christ's sake, enduring hardships among strangers, knowing that there were people in Philippi who were trying to turn away the hearts of his friends from him, preaching another gospel, making merchandise of his dearest church, and in it all to be so free from discouragement, jealousy, malice and every trace of bitterness, to be so calm, so far above our low plane of living, so forgiving and pure in spirit that we must look up to see him, I say when we think of all this and yet hear him say, "I have not attained and am not yet made perfect," it shames all our small pretensions into silence and makes us covet a spirit as broad and brotherly as his. All he had attained were but the first fruits of a vaster harvest yet to be.

2. The aspiration—I have not yet apprehended that for which Christ apprehended me. The very fact that with all his labors and trials and victories, with his wonderful faith and inspiring hope far beyond what would have satisfied most men, yet he says I have not attained, I am not yet perfect, shows how high his ideal was. He says I have been seized by Christ for something which I have not yet reached, but after which I am striving. There was a time when he was mad against the gospel, and with a consuming zeal he would uproot it from the earth. Jesus looking on him saw in him the man he wanted to spread the gospel. If that zeal could only be rightly directed he would be one of the most useful of witnesses.

Paul thought that he was serving God while he was persecuting Christ. Now Christ lays hold on him and stops him and turns him around. He will have him direct those splendid energies to build up what he had been tearing down. He is the man to send far hence unto the Gentiles. He cannot be daunted and when he knows what Christ wants him to do he will spend his life in Christ's service. So on the way to Damascus, Jesus seized him for that high purpose. The perfection for which Christ seized him was twofold, doing and being. The curse of today is the contentment of average living. If one man does as much as another is doing, he seems to have no other standard of conduct. There is but one standard of conduct for any man, that is what Christ expects of him. Life modeled upon any other standard is failure. Christ seized Paul for a world-wide witnessing and up to the measure of his time and ability he fulfilled that mission. There was no idle time in his life after Jesus laid hold of him. The call to service to him was imperative and at any hazard he would meet it. There is no place for idleness in the kingdom of God. But we have been seized by Christ as well as he. We are called to work and to witnessing as truly as Paul was. If we take our places alongside of Paul in the matter of service, with all the advantages that we have, which did not exist even in thought in Paul's day, do we measure up to our call as he did to his? Just what are we doing for God that any decent moral people, who do not claim to be Christians, are not doing? Are we doing more than others? Are we doing now for God more than we did before we were Christians, except the mere matter of profession, and that the silent profession of church membership? Men are not persecuted, exiled, imprisoned or stoned today for being Christians, but are they the better or worse for having an easier life? To be honest and truthful and law-abiding and industrious is not all that is expected of Christians. Christ laid hold of us because there was something more to be done for those souls for whom He died. Our service lies beyond the circle of our own personal interests and has to do with the bringing in of the kingdom of God. How far are we making the Church an expression of that kingdom which is concerned with every interest of every member of it? Are we doing all that Christ meant for us to do when he laid hold on us?

In the Bible there is but one person who speaks of having finished His work: "I have finished the work which thou gavest me to do." How did He do this? The secret of it was expressed in His early boyhood when He said: "Wist ye not that I must be about my Father's business?" And later when He said: "My meat and my drink is to do the will of him that sent me and finish his work." "I must work the works of him that sent me while it is day." It was the untiring persistence in season and out of season to do the whole will of God that helped Him to accomplish the work. God seized Christ for the redemption of the world and He accomplished it. Jesus seized Paul for a journey, a fight and a witness and at the end of his life he said: "I have fought the fight, finished the course, kept the faith." How do our lives compare with His? How much of the work which Christ called us to do has been cheerfully and faithfully done? Did He mean for us anything beyond merely being saved? Some people think that the whole matter is closed when they are saved, but salvation, great as it is, is not an end, but a means. We are saved to serve. We were seized to carry on the work which Christ began and has now committed to our care. What is that work? Son, go work in my vineyard today, trade herewith till I come, greater works than these shall ye do, go into all the world and preach, ye shall be witnesses of me, feed the hungry, cloth the naked, visit the sick and in prison, make disciples of all nations, etc. How many of these varied duties are we trying to perform? Have we fully sensed the meaning of being saved to serve?

But that call to service is only a part of Christ's purpose in apprehending us. We are called to service and we are called to character. Paul was not called to the service of evangelism alone, he was called to be made like his Master. Paul is talking here about a goal, a prize and a calling. When Christ laid hold on him He set the goal and prize before him and the calling above him and said there is life's objective and ideal, now attain and obtain. The things you obtain will be yours, the things you attain will be you. We are called to be holy, kind, charitable, righteous, forgiving and to love one another as He loved us and by this shall know that we are His disciples. We are to be the salt of the earth and the light of the world. We are under the power of this high calling. The calling is to obedience, purity and Divine fellowship, to the supremacy of the spiritual and to the sovereignty of the will of God in all things. Nothing could dim Paul's lofty conception of the dignity and work of the Christian life. He cared little for the world's applause or criticism. The bane of many a modern Christian is that he is too much concerned about both. The only thing that lifts most people from the dead level of mediocrity is the power of a high standard. No man can long live for a noble ideal and remain on a low level of conduct. The mark of genius is the refusal to let anything pass from his hands until it is as perfect as he can make it. Thalberg declared that he would never play one of his pieces in public until he had practiced it in private at least fifteen hundred times. Handel wore the keys of his harpsicord hollow like the bowls of a spoon in the patient persistence of effort toward the mastery. Untiring patience is the price of excellence. A story is told of a Chinese student who became discouraged because his lessons did not come easily and he threw away his books and gave up study, but one day he came across an old woman rubbing a crowbar on a stone. He asked her what she was doing. She replied, I am making a needle. He learned his lesson and patiently took up his work again. Thorwaldson, the great sculptor, noticed the waning of his power when he stood before his statue satisfied. His hand had caught up to his brain; that meant that his brain had stopped. When our efforts catch up to our ideas, we begin to die. When our souls stop growing, it is easy to be content with valley life, but Christ seized us, not for a life in the valley, but a life on the highest spiritual summits.

Paul gives a list of the fruits of the spirit in the fifth chapter of Galatians. We are apprehended by Christ to bear this fruit. Paul expected that the Christians of his day would do no less. He says: "I pray that your love may abound yet more and more in knowledge and discernment, that ye may approve the things that are excellent, that ye may be sincere and void of offense unto the day of Christ, being filled with the fruits of righteousness, which are through Jesus Christ unto the glory and praise of God." And again, "I pray God that your whole spirit and soul and body be preserved blameless unto the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ." This was his rule for the Christian. How near we have come to this rule is easily seen by comparing our lives with that standard. Less than perfection we ought not to aim at, for that alone assures eternal progress in the spiritual life. That is the goal. The mark was an attainment which was the personal fulfilling of the high calling. That is the coronation of the perfect character and a blameless life. The prize was a compensation, being presented and acknowledged victorious by the grace of God. It was divine approval on a good life. Goodness rather than joy, therefore, was the goal; yet out of the goodness would come joy unspeakable and full of glory. Well being is the foundation of well doing; and joy is the laughter of goodness. It is the emancipation of the soul to its highest happiness by way of its greatest usefulness. Life is a race, not for the finding of a treasure but for the making of a character. The striving for this prize is laudable and unselfish, for it is God's approval on our best efforts. This is not being good for a reward, but being good for its own sake. Heaven comes as the incident when the object of the life is to be like Christ. A life full-orbed which will be God-ruled is the consummation of all worthy living. That is what Christ seized us for, to be like Him in service and character. To covet the right-hand and left-hand places in the kingdom as James and John did may be very earthly and selfish, but to covet a service as tireless as Christ's and a character sinless like his, is life's most worthy choice. The foundation of character is not innocence but virtue. The innocence of childhood, which knows no sin, differs widely from the virtue of manhood, which is built up out of a series of choices for the right when the wrong is always present. We climb to holiness by the choice of good, by obedience to God, when sin and disobedience are equally open to us.

III. The Activity. I put myself on the stretch—this is the strong expression for Paul's intense activity. It is the agony but the glory of the strain being brought to concert pitch. What a woeful agony the violinist makes his string express when he is bringing it to pitch, but out of its last high wail there comes a burst of rapture; music has begun. Paul says, I am on the stretch, I press toward the mark. Paul had one business in life; that was to realize Christ's purpose for him. No man was more busy, more cosmopolitan, more varied in his travel and duty than he, but in it all there was one supreme purpose. At Corinth it was to know nothing save Jesus and Him crucified; at Rome it was to preach the gospel, of which he was not ashamed, and the one thing for which he was seized by Christ was to fulfill the purpose of God. The power of Paul's life lay in its concentration. His energies were not wasted and scattered by being diverted to too many different things. There was a sovereignty of purpose in his life, that was to give Christ the pre-eminence in all things. Paul had little to say of art, politics or merchandise, yet he visited Athens, Rome and Corinth. Everything in his life was poured into the one great channel of being all that God wanted him to be, that was his mark, his prize, his high calling. With that high purpose he became one of the most practical of men and in his letters he deals with all the common interests of home and church and state. His life accomplished much because all of his energies converged to one purpose. The weakness of most people is like that of Martha—anxious and disturbed about many things; Paul, like Mary, chose the good part, the one thing needful, and to that one thing he adjusted all the other interests of his life. If life's destiny and duty be what Jesus revealed them to be, then all our different vocations should have the one purpose, to lay hold of that for which Jesus laid hold of us. Steadiness of aim, loftiness of motive and energy of action must mark every rightly lived life.

Paul's oneness of aim was not narrowness. Christ never seized any man to make him narrow, but to help him live a life of concentrated energy, and that cannot be accomplished without definiteness of purpose. Most people who hit nothing in the world do so because they aim at nothing. Random shooting is not only ludicrous; it is expensive and dangerous as well. The well-aimed life does no damage with stray shots. The concentrated life holds to its own purpose and so keeps out of other people's way. The world's competition today is so keen that unless we specialize, we fail. No lawyer can master the whole realm of jurisprudence, and no physician can master the sum total of medical science. The Christian also must have one purpose and to that purpose bend all his energy. I have as yet apprehended but one thing, namely, a supreme purpose to apprehend that for which Christ apprehended me. That would be Paul's statement of his case. Rivers lose their power and usefulness when they are broadened into swamps. The speed and carrying power of a river is increased when its current is narrowed. Life must have one great current and all other interests become tributary to it. Emerson says: "Concentration is the secret of success in politics, in war, in trade and in the management of human affairs. The one evil of life is dissipation; its one prudence is concentration." The men who succeed in business give themselves wholly to it. The racer who wins gives himself wholly to it. The Christian who realizes God's purpose in life gives himself wholly to it. To some people nothing is ever clear or definite. God is in a haze; religion is a dreamy sentiment; the Bible is a book of mystery, and life is a tangle. Of course, such lives can never powerfully impress the world. And so the world throws them out on its scrap heap and goes on without them. Our great opportunity is to do God's will. Our great danger is to fall of His purpose. Paul uses vigorous words—strive, labor, agonize, wrestle, fight, run—but all suggest concentration of effort and singleness of purpose. The highest quality must have the highest place; the most enduring, the most important place. He kept his eye on the highest and he lived for the most enduring. His ambition was Christ-likeness. A loftier aim is impossible; a lower aim is unworthy.

A noted botanist says: "Most of the faults of flowers are only exaggerations of some right tendency." That is equally true of human faults. God never mocks the soul with an impossible ideal, neither should the soul ever mock God with an ignoble one. One has said of God that he "commits his energy to unswerving lines and keeps the track with eternal patience." That's what Paul wanted to do with his own life. To him the spiritual was sovereign and like the pearl merchant who sold all he had for one pearl of great price, so Paul sacrificed all else to his one sovereign purpose. Spiritual excellence was far greater than secular achievement. So he was willing to forget some things that he might make it impossible to forget others. He would forget his past sorrows, failures and sins, but he would remember God's unfailing fidelity to keep all His promises. It would be well today if we leaned less on the past; gave greater diligence to the present, and kept our faces bright for the future. The grace of God has covered our past sins and what he has once forgiven ought to be buried forever. We are to forget everything that would hinder our progress or dissipate our energies for our present tasks or our future plans. The only way that past faults and sin can be atoned for is by the onward press up to the will of God. Their scars will be left but their sting will be gone. By diligence in the present and courage for the future, we may wring victories out of the very defeats of other years. By keeping the mind full of what God has for us today and tomorrow, will help us to forget the failures and regrets of yesterday. The goal lifts as we press toward it. That is God's way of lifting us toward Himself.

IV. The Application—Paul gives us a brief word of application. He says as many as are like-minded, who have not yet attained nor become perfect, but are striving to attain it, let us hold fast that which we have already attained and standing on the good, reach up through the better to lay hold of the best. And if there be those who are confused or uncertain about the will of God, even to them God will make clear His purpose. He counseled his brethren to walk and work as together with him that they will be an example to all who want to know and do the will of God. This is the programme for the Church and for the individual Christian, if the best service is to be done for the kingdom.

What Baptists Believe;
by
The Rev. J. A. Huntley.

YESTERDAY morning the Rev. J. Austin Huntley, pastor of the First Baptist Church, Lee avenue and Keap street, took "Pastor" Russell sharply to task for his strictures of Baptists in a recent sermon. Mr. Huntley's subject was, "What Baptists Really Believe." Mr. Huntley said:

A few weeks ago there appeared in some of our daily papers a sermon by one who has become notorious in our city by his constant and scurrilous attacks upon ministers and teachings of all denominations, a sermon entitled, "Saner Views About Baptism." In this address the writer sought to define for the purpose of criticism the Baptist position. It is partly because of his erroneous statements revealing gross ignorance of the real views of the Baptist denomination, and partly that those who may not be clear upon some of the fundamentals of our faith may know what we believe, that I have chosen to speak this morning upon the subject, "What Do Baptists Really Believe?" My chief purpose is not to be controversial but instructive. I shall not confine myself to a discussion of baptism only. There are many who think that our mode of baptism is the only thing that differentiates us from other denominations, and that it is the one thing upon which we place supreme emphasis. But the truth is that in comparison with other denominations it is the thing upon which we place least emphasis. For while many denominations teach that there can be no salvation without baptism, we recognize it as only a symbol of what has already taken place in the life of the candidate, his death to sin and resurrection to a new life, and are insistent only that we shall follow the example and command of our Lord in its administration, thus preserving the very great spiritual lesson of the death and resurrection of Christ, and our faith in them as the only means to salvation.

The simple doctrines of our faith, all of which are set forth in the New Testament, are the basic principles of all civil and religious advancement. The ideas of soul liberty, of every man free and equal before his God, of direct access of the individual to God without the aid of human priest, church rites or ceremonies, of the entire separation of Church and state, of absolute obedience to the Lord Jesus Christ as the revealer of the will of God, these have been the principles to which our fathers have witnessed on the rack and at the stake as we have "given many of our noblest souls as martyrs to the cause of civil and religious liberty." Baptist principles are not new. They are as old as man and as eternal as God. They are universal in their sweep. The spirit of these principles has actuated all great religious reforms. It was this spirit that inspired William Tyndale to defy priests and prelates and at the cost of his life to give the Bible "to the peasant and plowboy in the language they could understand"; it was this spirit that caused Luther to prepare his theses and hurl defiance at civil and ecclesiastical oppressors; it was this spirit that sent the Pilgrim Fathers to Holland and later to this country. As Dr. John Clifford has said in his famous address before the World's Baptist Alliance at Philadelphia, "that as without the Bible we should have had no Puritans or Separatists or Pilgrim Fathers, so without the Baptist doctrine that magistrates leave the Christian religion free to every man's conscience because Christ only is King and Lawgiver of the Church and of conscience, Britain would still have been a prison for all Baptists—as it is occasionally now for some of them; Rhode Island would not have been founded, and this vast democratic republic would have been waiting to see the light." We, therefore, make known to all inquirers that we are no narrow, prejudiced sect, whose chief claim for existence is insistence upon a certain form of doctrines, but that we are "built upon the apostles and prophets; Jesus Christ himself being the chief cornerstone," and are, and always have been, pioneers in the great truths which have made for the progress and betterment of the race. We have no quarrel with others. We are willing to test our beliefs by the light of God's Word, by history, and by individual experience.

First, then, I state that Baptists believe in the kingship of Jesus in the individual life and in His teaching as set forth in the New Testament by the inspired writers as the only rule of faith and practice for the Church. Christ Jesus is the King in our life because of Who He is. "Therefore, let all the house of Israel know assuredly that God hath made this same Jesus whom ye have crucified both the Lord and Christ." The New Testament leaves no doubt in our mind about this. No one can read its pages and not be profoundly impressed with the kingship and lordship of Jesus. The glowing fervent religious life of the early disciples and apostles was due to their supreme faith in and loyalty to their Lord.

When at Caesarea Philippi Jesus asks, "Whom do ye say that I am?" Peter instantly answers, "Thou are Christ, the Son of the living God." If the events of Gethsemane and Calvary somewhat rudely shook their faith, their utterances after the resurrection are in no sense dubious. They had felt this power of Christ in their own lives. They had seen it in the lives of others as hundreds and thousands had been led to confess Him and had been transformed by His power. Conscious of these things one declares Him to be "King of kings and Lord of lords." Another declares Him to be the Creator of all things, and residuary of the fullness of the Godhead and the "Effulgence of the Father's glory and the express image of his substance." Jesus says to His disciples, "Ye call me Lord and Master, and so I am." And because Baptists have accepted his teachings as authoritative they insist in repudiating the domination of any other teachers whose principles are not true to the teaching of Jesus.

We do not despise or ignore the holy example and the lofty utterances of the saints; we are conscious of the powerful appeal to the human imagination of the great papal, Episcopal and ministerial offices; we recognize as worthy of the deepest consideration the "traditions of the elders" illustrative of working of the spirit of God; we are aware of the vast influence of the creeds and councils, with their dogmatic utterances, which men pronounce so glibly and yet hold so lightly; but with due appreciation of the value of all these mighty forces and their claim to our recognition we still acknowledge as only [illegible]ritative in the realm of [illegible] the teachings of Jesus and [illegible]ent against all encroachments of councils or scholars or philosophers, however instructive their teachings may be. And because we believe in the kingship of Jesus and the New Testament as our only rule of faith and practice we find it impossible to substitute anything, however convenient or easy it may be, for the simple example and command of our Lord. Upon this ground we refuse to practice infant baptism. There is not in the New Testament a single command for or example of infant baptism. It is purely a human appointment. Learned commentators, Church historians and many other scholars, although they are not Baptists, agree upon this.

We might continue to cite many such authorities. It was because into the church at an early date crept the deadly error of baptismal reformation and the consequent fear on the part of parents because of this teaching that all unbaptized persons were doomed to perdition, that this practice arose and its perpetuation is a relic of the error of a superstitious age. Against this teaching Baptists have always stood.

The idea that baptism was necessary for salvation led also to the substitution of sprinkling or pouring for baptism. Here is a man converted on a dying bed, or in prison; immersion is impossible. But, according to this teaching, if he be not baptized he will be damned. Therefore he is sprinkled to save his soul. Against this unscriptural and erroneous position the Baptists have ever stood. We, therefore, in distinct opposition to the statements of this "Pastor" Russell have never believed, but have strenuously denied, that baptism is an essential to salvation. In the report of this sermon Russell is made to say: "The great mass of Baptists declare that immersion is a necessary incidental to admission to the Church of the Living God, whose names are written in heaven!" There is no Baptist of any intelligence who will say any such thing. We believe that baptism, immersion, is a necessary prerequisite to membership in a visible Baptist Church, which is an entirely different thing.

Again this man says: "If we ask them (Baptists) what are the advantages claimed for membership in the Church, they reply—Salvation! What is the antithesis or opposite of salvation? We ask They answer, Lost!" This statement shows one of two things; either this man is absolutely ignorant of the position of the Baptists, or he has wilfully misrepresented their views in order that he might, having fabricated a view, set about to destroy it. Baptists have ever held that only intelligent believers in Jesus Christ are proper subjects for baptism. "It is a curious turn in history," says Professor A. T. Robertson, "that the one body of Christians that holds a thoroughly consistent attitude on the subject of regeneration before baptism should be so often charged with holding that baptism is essential to salvation." There is no longer any contention about the proper mode of baptism. The lexicons, Bible dictionaries, critical commentaries and all scholars with unaminity take for granted as a matter of course that baptism is, in the New Testament, immersion and immersion alone. And yet having granted this, they turn upon us and say that we make too much of the ordinance and some go so far as to affirm that we give to it saving efficacy. What do we answer? Baptism is not a condition or means of salvation. We affirm "No conversion, no baptism." Baptism is a symbol of the death and resurrection of Jesus Christ, the fundamental facts in the Christian religion. In its act we symbolically make confession of our faith in His death and resurrection and our consequent death to sin and resurrection to a new life. Because it is a symbol of the great truths above stated the form in which it is done is the most significant. It cannot mean anything if this form is destroyed.

Luther said: "Baptism is a sign both of death and resurrection. Being moved by this reason I would have those that are baptized to be altogether dipped into the water, as the word means and the mystery signifies." Bishop Lightfoot asserted the same idea when he said: "Baptism is the grave of the old man and the birth of the new; and an image of the believers' participation both in the death and in the resurrection of Christ." All that we contend for them is baptism and not something else. Because Jesus Christ is our supreme authority and the Lord of our lives we believe we ought to obey Him. Because the New Testament is our only rule of faith and practice we believe, according to all its teachings and all the examples set forth therein, that faith must precede baptism; that only believers in Jesus Christ are subjects for that ordinance; and that the Church consists of a regenerated membership. We do not believe that baptism or church membership are essential to salvation but that salvation is essential to baptism and church membership. And as baptismal burial in water sets forth so strikingly the great fundamental truths of the Christian religion, eternal life through the death and resurrection of Jesus Christ, Baptists are rendering a unique service to the world and to the church in their strict adherence to its form.

But let us not suppose that in this alone we are distinctive or emphatic. It is impossible for me, even, to outline all the essential and universal truths for which we stand. I mention only one other under which many phases may be grouped.

Secondly, Baptists believe in and stand for soul liberty—freedom to worship God according to the dictates of one's own conscience, which involves separation of Church and State and undivided approach to God without the necessity of any human mediator. "Nothing may come between the soul and God. Not the priest, whatever his claims; he will cloud the vision of Christ, and put a fetter on the soul's freedom; not the theologian; he may check individual search for truth; not even the Church, for it may warp the spirit in convention, and tie it up with red tape; not the State, it will imprison energy and check growth. The soul must be free." These utterances by a Baptist of international reputation set forth what have always been distinctive tenets of Baptists. They have ever stood for the absolute separation of Church and State. From the very earliest times down to the present hour Baptists have paid for this liberty by their life's blood. It is not necessary for me to go back to the time of the Novatians and the Donatists or the Waldensians. Nor is it necessary for me to seek in priest-ridden Europe in the early centuries illustrations of the suffering even unto the death of Baptists for this soul liberty. I come nearer home. We recall the persecutions, imprisonment and public floggings of such men as John Clarke, Obadiah Holmes and James Crandall because of their advocacy of the doctrine of religious liberty and their persistent refusal to have their children sprinkled.

Roger Williams, banished from Salem, Mass., comes to Rhode Island, founds that state and makes his heroic avowal of civil and religious liberty. The first petition for a religious liberty was presented to the first Continental Congress which met in 1774, from the Warren Baptist Association of Rhode Island, and as a result of which we have in the Constitution of the United States the words: "No religious test shall ever be required as a qualification to any office or public trust under the United States." Chief Justice Story, speaking of Rhode Island Baptists said: "In the code of laws established by them in Rhode Island we read for the first time since Constantine ascended the throne of the Caesars, the declaration that conscience should be free and men should not be punished for worshipping God in the way they were persuaded He required." But for the assertion and maintenance of these doctrines they have languished in prisons, burned at the stake, hanged on the gibbet and suffered most ignominiously. And down to the present hour they suffer. The age of heroism is not dead. Listen to the testimony of the Russian delegates to the World's Baptist Alliance. For freedom, liberty of conscience, the faith of Christ they have paid with blood and tears. Here is Simon Stepanoff hunted from place to place, banished for five years in Siberia, yet winning more than a thousand Cossacks to Christ by his preaching. Here is Andreas Erstratenko, imprisoned for two years, beaten and scourged because he believed in the simple teachings of the New Testament. Here is Varsilia Ivanoff twice in exile, chained to robbers in the criminal gang, thirty-one times in prison, a toiler in the treadmill, all because he dared preach in the name of Jesus the simple principles of his faith.

Because they have believed in soul liberty, separation of Church and State and the right of the individual to worship God without a human intermediary, they have been pioneers in all moral and religious and civil reformations and have paid the price with their blood. These principles "explain the consistent witness of our people against the aggression of the State, from the days of Leonard Busher and Roger Williams and even earlier; whether shaping the Constitution of this great Republic or withstanding the inroads of the State-supported priest in English public schools," for which, by the way, Dr. Clifford's household goods have been sold fourteen times, "or enduring hardships under a Holy Synod in Russia, Baptists have been dominated by these essential principles."

Firm in these convictions, Baptists have gone forth in obedience to the command of Christ to preach the "gospel to every creature, baptizing them into the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Spirit; teaching them to observe all things whatsoever Christ has commanded," and conscious of the fulfillment of His promise and of His presence. We believe that "if we follow Christ, we must follow Him to the uttermost parts of the earth." We are going out in obedience to our Lord seeking to do our work in the Spirit of the Master. To Him we seek to be true, and as the young musician sat, skillfully performing on his instrument, indifferent to the applause of the great throng, but with eye fixed upon a corner of the gallery seeking the smile of his old master, so we go out seeking only to be in harmony with the great master and to do His will that we may at last receive His "Well Done!"

Disciplining the Mind;
by
The Rev. Dr. John Barlow.

IN THE Central Congregational Church, Hancock street, near Bedford avenue, yesterday morning, the Rev. John Barlow, D.D., of London, England, preached in the absence of the pastor, the Rev. Dr. S. Parkes Cadman. His subject was "Disciplining the Mind," and for his text he took the words: Philippians iv:8: "Finally, brethren, whatsoever things are true, whatsoever things are honest, whatsoever things are just, whatsoever things are pure, think on these things." He said:

On what things are we to think? On things that are honest and just and pure. And why are we to think on these things? Well, briefly, for this reason: We become like unto that about which we habitually think. Let a man fill his mind with things that are kindly and good, and you will find kindness and goodness irradiating from that man's life, as light and heat irradiate from the sun. On the other hand, let a man fill his mind with thoughts that are base and fleshly and, "as a man thinketh in his heart, so is he." To practice the discipline of the mind is one of the essential things for each one of us to do, and just as all our faculties improve with training so will this one.

Now, the difficulty of your task arises from the secrecy surrounding our thought processes. No one can ever know what we are merely thinking about, we say. There is a secrecy surrounding one's thought. It is altogether different with speech and with conduct. What we say is heard and what we do is seen, and consequently we are compelled to discipline our speech and conduct. But there are no restraints of that kind upon our thinking, except those we impose ourselves. Yet, if the psychological principle be true, and it is, that we become like unto that about which we habitually think, then there is nothing that you should practice with greater earnestness than the discipline of the mind and the training of the heart. The Jews, 3,000 years ago, grasped the significance of that fact when they made, as the central code of their law, these words: "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart and with all thy mind." And the Lord Jesus Christ spoke exactly the same truth when He pointed to that law and said: "That is the first and greatest commandment."

Some modern writers are saying that thoughts are things, that they are forces, the most powerful and vital in the universe; that they have formed substance and power. One writer declares that we shall ultimately find, as we are beginning to see, that practically all disease has its origin in perverted mental thought. Anger, hatred, jealousy, each one has its peculiar poisoning effect. If that be so you can hate a person, but really you suffer more than the person hated. I heard a London doctor lecture on the microbes of disease. He said that this was the age of the microbe. He further said that certain forms of bacteria will settle upon a certain organ and will secret a poison which will become the basis of disease. Now, if I may use the illustration, in precisely the same way do evil thoughts affect the life in which they are allowed to dwell. You cannot harbor an evil thought without it becoming a parasite.

Every doctor, and every trained nurse, recognizes the power of thought upon the patient's recovery or otherwise. It is the recognition of this fact that lies at the base of Christian Science. It is one of the grains of wheat in that great bundle of chaff. No one who understands it ridicules that central point. It is part of the teaching of the New Testament and of modern psychology, and a teaching which I venture to say the Christian Church has too long neglected.

We are beginning to see that thought has a great influence upon our moral health or character. What is permitted to dwell in your mind eventually enters your character as an act. And it is in that way that the discipline of the mind means so much to us. Really we are not defeated when we have sinned. The point of our defeat is where we allow the sinful thought to enter our minds and stay there. Our sin is only the outward and visible sign of the defeat that has taken place in our souls maybe hours or days or weeks ago. "Keep thy heart with all diligence, for out of it are the issues of life." We shall never be able to regulate these lives of ours until we are able to regulate our thoughts. If you would overcome your besetting sin you must overcome your besetting thought, and that is the thought that is most constantly cropping up in your mind. Is it not Luther who says: "You cannot prevent a bird from flying over your head, but you can prevent it from alighting and building its nest in your hair." Yes, we can do that. We cannot prevent the sinful thought coming, but we can refuse it house room. It is the type of thought you permit to dwell in your mind that transforms your soul. "Whatsoever things are true, whatsoever things are honest, whatsoever things are just, whatsoever things are pure, think on these things."

There is just another reason for the discipline of our minds beyond that of its influence upon our general health, and its influence upon our moral health, and it is this: We must discipline our minds because of the influence of our thought upon other people. After all our arguments against prayer, based upon the reign of law and the uniformity of nature and the far knowledge of God, are we coming to discover, in this twentieth century, that prayer is just as natural, and far more mighty than wireless telegraphy? That what the one is in the natural sphere the other is in the spiritual sphere, if they can be separated. Sir M. Lodge declared the other day that the one thing that has been established by psychological research is the reality of telepathic communication. If we can communicate with the distant, or the dead—but there is no word that needs blotting out of the Anglo-Saxon language more than the word "dead." There are no dead. "He is not the God of the dead. He is the God of the living, and all live unto him." Those who are with you in this service this morning, and those who have passed out of your sight, all "live unto him."

One family, we live in Him,
One church, above, beneath.

There are no dead. What Lodge states is put in another form by the poet:

Do you remember the weary ones at rest?
The sad had joy that day,
And wondered how the plowman at his toil
Had prayed, "Lord, bless them now,"
Away on foreign fields they wondered
How their simple word had power at home.
The Christians, two and three,
Had met to pray that hour.

That is it. That is your prayer-circle. That is what it is doing. Why, here are scientist, poet, thinker, testifying to what? The power of thought, the power of mind, when it is lifted up into fellowship with the living God, to influence the feeling and work of persons on the other side of the globe. Is not it time that we realized the importance of the discipline of the mind? Every mind creates its own atmosphere. A man meets you on the street with outstretched hand of welcome, and yet you feel you are not welcome. But he does not say so. Every act and look of his is done to create the opposite impression, and yet you feel he is not sincere. What is it? Every mind makes its own atmosphere, and we are just as conscious of it as of heat and cold. Not only by what we say and do, but by the very desire of our hearts we may be helping and healing. What we are is far more important than what we say, and what we are is determined by what we think. And thus we are brought back to the saying of Jesus: "Blessed are the pure in heart."

The last time Lord Rosebery went to see Mr. Gladstone, in his illness, the last words of the great statesman were these: "Rosebery, mind your soul, mind your soul." My brethren, "Keep your heart with all diligence, for out of it are the issues of life." May God help you so to do. Amen.

OPENING NEW QUARTERS.

Rabbi Rudolph Speaks on Thanksgiving and Thanksliving.

(Special to The Eagle.)

Pittsburg, November 27—Yesterday the handsome new quarters of the Young Men's Hebrew Association was opened in the Dispatch building. Rabbi Rudolph Coffee, Ph.D., made an address on "Thanksgiving and Thanksliving." His text was from I Samuel xv:22: "To obey is better than to sacrifice." Among other things he said:

The history of Thanksgiving Day in America traces back to the colonial era in New England, where the Pilgrims returned thanks to God for the many favors He had granted them during the year just ended. The inspiration for this holiday was drawn directly from the Old Testament. In ancient Israel the farmers were accustomed to journey to Jerusalem at the end of the harvest season and render thanks to God for His bounty.

Our present observance of the day is chiefly marked by union services throughout the country. In many large cities, Jews and Christians will worship at one service, and a rabbi will preach from a Christian pulpit, or a Christian clergyman will occupy a Jewish altar. The spirit of the day pleads for religious toleration, and is thus the finest approach we yet have to the Messianic Era, when "the Lord will be One and His name One." To give thanks with friends who hold a different religious viewpoint is a far nobler act than the century-long religious strife, all in the name of God.

PURDY WRITES THE MAYOR; DEFENDS ASSESSMENTS

Tax Dept. Head Says Brooklyn Property Has Not Been Over Valued.

SENDS LETTERS AS PROOF.

Realty Men Have Written President Purdy Declaring Brooklyn Taxpayers' Complaints Unwarranted.

Lawson Purdy, President of the Tax Department, in a letter to Mayor Gaynor, denies that property in Brooklyn has been over assessed. According to President Purdy's statement the property owners in Brooklyn were treated with greater consideration than those of Manhattan. Mr. Purdy gives figures to show that the per capita assessment in Manhattan, since consolidation, has increased 122 per cent. against 102 per cent. in Brooklyn.

Mr. Purdy's letter to the Mayor follows:

"The Board of Tax Commissioners has carefully considered certain statements you have recently been reported to have made and fears that you may have been misled in regard to assessments in the Borough of Brooklyn by the great number of complaints you have received. These complaints have been carefully investigated and in many cases found exaggerated or entirely unfounded. The Board collectively prepared this letter and desire me to hand it to you in person.

"Last winter the Brooklyn League undertook to aid persons whose property was over assessed in making proper applications for reduction. The league advertised extensively and received over 5,500 applications. As a result of investigation the league forwarded to the department 300 applications, but only vouched for the correctness of 250. These applications were mainly with reference to low-priced dwellings. In fact, the league advertised that they would not receive applications where the amount of the assessment exceeded $10,000. The league, through its officers, expressed itself as well satisfied with the assessments and with the action of the Board upon the few applications made with the approval of the league. A copy of the report of the league was sent you about April 5, 1911, by Dr. George W. Brush.

"Of the aggregate increase in the real estate assessment of Brooklyn about $160,000,000 was imposed substantially as follows:

New buildings	$36,000,000
Water front, including Coney Island	62,000,000
Power and manufacturing plants, etc.	62,000,000
Total	$160,000,000

"The board reduced these assessments materially and there is now substantially no complaint as to the assessment of any of the above property.

Large Reduction Made in 1911 Assessment.

"The board also made large reductions of the 1911 assessment of residential property and of vacant land, and is prepared to make large further reductions wherever it shall appear warranted by facts. It seems, however, that the complaints affect only a small percentage of the total increase.

"We are convinced that the Borough of Manhattan has for years been over-assessed as compared with the Borough of Brooklyn, and that today the comparative assessment of the two boroughs is fairer than at any time in at least ten years.

"As bearing upon the relative assessment of the Borough of Brooklyn and other boroughs it is notable that the per capita valuations were as follows:

Brooklyn, 1897	$488
Brooklyn, 1911	987
Per capita increase 102 per cent.
Manhattan, 1897	$946
Manhattan, 1911	2,108
Per capita increase 122 per cent.
Bronx, 1911	$1,252
Queens, 1911	1,436
Richmond, 1911	892

"It will be observed that the per capita assessment in Brooklyn increased 102 per cent., and the per capita assessment of Manhattan increased 122 per cent. from 1897 to 1911.

Intimates Some Brooklyn Property May Be Overassessed.

"The evidence in the department in the form of sales, mortgages, etc., leads the commissioners to believe that if there is a relative overvaluation of the Borough of Brooklyn it is by no means general, but confined to comparatively small areas and amounts to a comparatively small sum in the aggregate.

"We inclose letters just received from several residents of Brooklyn who have an intimate knowledge of real estate. The letters speak for themselves. Will you be so kind as to return them.

"Respectfully,

"LAWSON PURDY, President."

Inclosures: Letters from John F. James & Sons, Robert A. Wright, Golden Realty Company, George E. Lovett & Co., Charles E. Rickerson.

Although many Democrats voted against the Democratic ticket at the last election because of the increase in assessed valuations, the Tax Department has received letters from many prominent people in Brooklyn, justifying these increases. John F. James & Son, in writing to Tax Commissioner Judson Wall, say:

"We feel that if the owners of property in this borough were thoroughly familiar with the manner in which you are required by law to assess their property, and would put aside the idea that your department is endeavoring to overvalue their holdings simply because they own them, and in addition be honest in the value of their property, we believe there would be but little complaint on the treatment received by them at your hands."

George E. Lovett & Co., in commenting on the assessments of the Tax Department, say: "We feel confident that your assessors have conscientiously used their best efforts to attain that end."

POPE BESTOWS BIRETTA ON THE NEW CARDINALS

Princes of the Church Get First Tangible Proof of Their Supreme Dignity.

HOMAGE PAID TO PONTIFF.

Mgr. Falconio Refers to Anti-Religious Movement Aiming at the Destruction of the Church of Christ.

Rome, November 29—This afternoon all the new Cardinals, including the American prelates, Mgrs. Falconio, Farley and O'Connell, went to the Vatican and on their arrival they formed into procession preceded and accompanied by the Swiss and Noble guards and personages of the Papal court, passed through the magnificent halls to the State apartment. The way was lined with guests who had come to pay them homage.

The newly-created Cardinals were then introduced into the presence of the Pontiff. Pius X permitted each of the Cardinals to kiss his hand and his foot, afterward bestowing upon each the red beretta as a first tangible proof of their supreme dignity.

The ceremony of today will be followed on Thursday by the great public Consistory, during which the red hat will be conferred upon the Cardinals.

Cardinal Falconio, being the dean of the newly-created Cardinals, delivered an address, warmly thanking the Pope, presenting his respectful homage and placing the services of the new Cardinals at the complete disposition of the Pontiff.

Mgr. Falconio added that he understood the responsibilities weighing on the august person of the Pontiff, "especially in these very sad times when society is threatened by an anti-religious movement aiming at the destruction of the Church of Christ. Thanks to the energetic and constant action taken by Your Holiness since the day of your providential election to the pontificate a barrier has been opposed against this devastating current."

Cardinal Falconio went on to say that the new Cardinals would pray to the Almighty to preserve and support the Church in its struggle against the spirit of evil and to insure its final triumph. He concluded by again offering the services of the Cardinals who were humble but inspired by unbounded obedience and profound veneration in upholding "the inviolable and sacred rights of the Church."

The Pontiff thanked Cardinal Falconio, spoke cordially with Cardinal Farley and congratulated Cardinal O'Connell.

Cardinal Farley has sent a cable to Mgr. Lavelle, rector of St. Patrick's Cathedral, in New York, advising the latter that he will not be able to return home until after Christmas, and conveying his blessing to his people.

He also cabled to Mgr. Mooney that he would await further advices from him before sailing. It is presumed here that this means that Mgr. Mooney is planning an elaborate reception for the Cardinal upon his return to New York.

SHOOTS WIFE FOR NICKEL.

Laborer Alleged to Have Killed Spouse for Price of a Beer.

Mamie Kelly, 25 years of age, died at St. Catherine's Hospital early today as the result of bullet wounds in the abdomen and left hip, inflicted yesterday morning, the police say, by her husband, James Kelly, who is a laborer living at 35 Scholes street. It is alleged that Kelly came home yesterday morning and demanded the price of a pint of beer, and that upon his wife's refusal he drew a 32-caliber revolver and fired several times. Kelly will be arraigned for the second time on Friday in the Manhattan avenue court, when the charge of felonious assault will be changed to one of homicide.

TRANSFERS TO BE RESTORED.

Transfers between the surface lines of this city at 151 points in Manhattan, which were abolished with the break up of the old Metropolitan system some time ago, were today, at a meeting of the Public Service Commission, ordered restored. In a resolution passed by the Commission, counsel was directed to prepare the order for the restoration of the transfers from and after January 1 next.

ARTHUR McQUADE DEAD.

MICHIGAN EDITOR WRITES ABOUT "MIRACLE WHEAT"

Grosse Point Times Not Favorably Impressed by "Pastor" Russell's Venture.

"EVIDENTLY A BUNCO GAME."

Paper Reviews Career of "Pastor." Makes Light of His Damage Claim Against Eagle.

That "Pastor" Russell's dealing in "Miracle Wheat" has excited attention in all parts of the country is evident from the number of newspaper clippings relating to the subject which The Eagle has received. "Pastor" Russell gave the edition of the Peoples Pulpit, which explained how it happened that "Miracle Wheat" was being sold at the Brooklyn Tabernacle, a wide circulation all over the United States.

One of the copies reached the editor of the Grosse Pointe Times, published at Grosse Pointe, Mich. After reading "Pastor" Russell's defense this editor proceeded to write the following editorial which appeared in the Grosse Pointe Times on November 24 under the caption: "New 'Bohemian Oats' Scheme."

"Pastor Russell, of Brooklyn Tabernacle, has sued The Brooklyn Eagle for $100,000 damages for libel. Our information in the case comes from marked copies in the People's Pulpit, organ of the Tabernacle, and professedly a religious newspaper, so we are not biased in The Eagle's favor.

"From this ex parte showing we deduce: First, that whom God joined together in 'Pastor' Russell's case civil courts have put asunder; for he is a divorced man. Second, that the alimony awarded his wife was paid by some of his followers—female admirers. The Eagle is charged with claiming, wealthy men, the pastor himself asserts. Third, that to avoid further alimony awarded the pastor gave away his property to his church.

"We also gather that the Brooklyn Tabernacle has been made the depot for a questionable dealing in so-called 'Miracle Wheat,' which a friend of the pastor is selling to farmers at $1 a pound under a pretense that it is three times as prolific as other seed. Needless to say that this is evidently a bunco game—the name given the wheat and its sale under the auspices of a church is enough to warrant criticism. The Master whom 'Pastor' Russell claims to serve drove the money changers from the temple; this latter-day disciple accepts their gains.

"But, to believe all this People's Pulpit says, the entire clergy of Brooklyn and New York is in conspiracy to destroy him. The whole tenor of the publication is convincing that The Eagle is in no immediate danger of a judgment."

"Pastor" Russell has recently changed his plans for winning Brooklynites over to Russellism. Instead of speaking at regular intervals in the Academy of Music, as has been his custom, he will confine his local exhortations to the audiences that may gather in the Brooklyn Tabernacle in Hicks street.

According to his present arrangements he will make no appearances at all at the Academy of Music during the winter. Just what he will do is apparently undecided, for the last issue of the Watch Tower, which ordinarily heralds his prospective movements for months in advance, is now silent on the "Pastor's" plans.

U. S. OFFERS 2,500 TROOPS FOR SERVICE TO CHINA

Ready to Meet Obligation in Keeping the Railway Open From Peking to Sea.

NO IDEA OF INTERVENTION.

Force in Constant Readiness at Manila—Would Afford Protection to Foreigners.

Washington, November 29—The United States today formally offered to China the services of 2,500 American troops, now stationed in the Philippines, to aid in keeping open the railway from Peking to the sea, and for the protection of foreigners in China, if the Chinese council of ministers desires to accept their services.

American Minister Calhoun was instructed by the State Department to explain to his colleagues in the diplomatic corps at Peking, that the United States government, in recognition of its obligation under rights secured by the treaty following the Boxer troubles, is holding in constant readiness at Manila an expeditionary force of from 500 to 2,500 men.

This is in no way to be considered a force of intervention, but merely the United States' part in carrying out, with other powers, the provisions of the 1901 protocol for maintaining railway communication from Peking to the sea.

A company of marines which will leave Shanghai today aboard the cruiser Saratoga, for Peking, were requested by Minister Caolhoun. This force will be used to guard the Methodist Mission located near the legation quarter, where 140 American missionaries are to assemble if the turn of events requires such a move.

All foreigners are reported to have withdrawn from Siakuan, the port of Nanking.

Berlin, November 29—The German Government has ordered 200 troops from the force stationed at Kiao-chau to proceed to Tien-tsin for eventual use in Peking. The War Office is dispatching 200 men as a reinforcement to the garrison at Kiao-chau from Hamburg, on November 30. The same steamer also takes drafts of men to replace those belonging to the field battery stationed in the protectorate of Kiao-chau, whose time has expired, but the old detail will be retained if it is considered necessary.

Driven Out With Heavy Losses and Forced to Retire.

Nanking, China, November 29—A concerted attack on the gates of the city by the revolutionists failed, and the revolutionists were driven out with heavy losses, and forced to retire.

Lieutenant General Feng-Kwo-Chang, commander of the imperial troops, retains full possession of the city.

General Li Yuen-Heng, at Wu-Chang, has requested reinforcements, and the revolutionists are preparing to send a number of ships and men to that city.

The revolutionary flags which have been flying in Shanghai and other towns in the vicinity are disappearing.

Further activities are expected at Nanking tonight.

GIVE UP THEIR HOMES, FOLLOWING RUSSELLISM

Former Disciple of "Pastor" Writes from England About His Propaganda.

OTHER LETTERS RECEIVED.

Brooklyn Clergymen Comment in Various Ways Upon Work and Writings of Russell.

The Eagle has received the following letters of comment upon "Pastor" Russell and his activities—one of them from a former Russellite in England, who tells of the "pastor's" propaganda there :

"25 Fairland Road,
"Stratford, London, England.

"Editor The Brooklyn Daily Eagle:

"I learn with considerable interest of the articles your paper is publishing relative to the notorious 'Pastor' Russell, late of Allegheny, Pa., and now of Brooklyn. I have not had the pleasure of reading your strictures, but should very much like to do so, as would very many more in this country. Will you kindly send me on all that you have published on this matter and keep me posted with the accounts of the coming action for slander than I have been told Mr. Russell has lodged against you?

"Mr. Russell has a pretty good following in this country, but numbers have left him owing to his extraordinary and insane teaching that he and his followers are 'dying in behalf of the world.' That, of course, means that he is 'dying' for the editor of The Eagle, too!

"He has also deluded thousands of followers into believing that Christ returned to this earth in 1874, though in a spirit body and therefore invisible to the natural eye. Very many have gone so far as to sell up their homes over here, expecting to die before 1914 (at the latest), and many others have so arranged their affairs as to last till that date only.

"I myself was connected with his movement for twelve years, but my eyes, thank God, are now opened.

"When one leaves their society because of enlightenment, Mr. Russell at once advises his followers to shun such an one and counsels his followers never to read anything emanating from any other source but his own pen!

"I could write you for a week telling of the bitterness and sorrow that this man Russell has left in many a Christian home here in England. With best wishes for your success in your fight against hypocrisy and humbug,

"A. C. BULL."

Minnesota Pastor Likens Russell to Dowie.

The Rev. John G. Briggs, pastor of the First Baptist Church of Owatonno, Minn., writes, under date of December 11, 1911:

"Editor The Brooklyn Daily Eagle:

"The article in The Brooklyn Daily Eagle concerning C. T. Russell of last Monday and a few weeks before are bound to do good. Whether he is self-deceived or not, his works, to say nothing of his preaching, only bring confusion rather than light and moral and spiritual strength wherever I have seen them. In ten cases of which I know in our city the past year his works have brought first confusion and later disgust. For seven years I lived next to Dr. Dowie's colony. Save us from more such leaders. Mr. Russell is evidently pursuing similar tactics. Surely, P. T. Barnum's maxim still holds. JOHN G. BRIGGS."

The Rev. Frederick F. Shannon, pastor of the Grace M. E. Church, at Seventh avenue and St. John's place, writes:

"The Eagle has rendered a public service in uncovering some of the methods of 'Pastor' Russell. Like the heathen Chinee of Bret Harte's poem, there are probably other dark and devious ways yet to be revealed. But the 'uncovering' is worth while from several viewpoints.

"In the first place, it will help to protect people who are really incapable of protecting themselves from almost any type of demagogery. For the past two or three years I have known persons in various country districts to be enthusiastic over the 'Pastor.' I had reason to think that they were helping to swell his mail order business with their small contributions. Both the State and public opinion ought to protect such people from any kind of a fakir, but above all from a religious faker.

"Furthermore the uncovering is worth while, because it will put a check to the cartloads of 'millennial dawn' literature which have been dumped into the basements of Brooklyn homes since 'Pastor' Russell came to the city. The Street Cleaning Department has enough to attend to without having its burden increased by even the weight of the paper upon which the 'Brooklyn Tabernacle' effusions are printed. I am assuming, of course, that the cleaning department and the Atlantic Ocean are the speedy recipients of most of the papers which are thrown at us week by week.

"A third benefit of the exposure is derived from cessation of posting the 'Pastor's' patriarchal (?) face upon the theatrical billboards of the city. Some of the disgraceful playhouse scenes allowed to be posted thereupon can hardly be included among the things that make for a more decent and elevating civic life. Just why one who professes to be an enlightener of Brooklyn's benighted Christians should persist in having his facial contour so glaringly portrayed alongside theatrical 'stars and starettes' is, to ordinary people, one of the mysteries which the 'Pastor's' exegetical genius alone can unfold. Of course, it is possible that his advance agent may be profoundly versed in the science of 'affinities,' and is playing a joke upon his unsuspecting employer. However this may be, I hope The Eagle will continue its beneficent missionary campaign of exposure."

The Rev. T. J. Whitaker, pastor of the Bushwick Avenue Baptist Church, writes:

"The People's Pulpit article is evidently the ebullition of a fertile imagination; much more fruitful in corralling fancies than facts. The bald absurdity of the statements therein robs them of saneness and sense. An effort to build up any preacher by circulating such trash is foolishness gone to seed. The pastors of Brooklyn are too busy preaching the Gospel of Jesus Christ to men to mind the antics of any present-day Hyemacus."

The Rev. Ulysses Grant Warren, pastor of the United Congregational Church, writes:

"It seems strange that a traveling preacher whose desire is to help bring in the kingdom of God should begin his campaigning in a new field by an attack upon the resident pastors. The Brooklyn clergy need no word of commendation from me. Their large abilities, broad sympathies and services of sacrifice are well known, not only in this city, but the country over. Pastor Russell's article is not 'the fruits of the Spirit,' at least not the spirit of the New Testament. The Beatitudes bless those who do well, but mercifully refrain from damning those lives that are a mistake. If this traveling preacher should read these beautiful verses whose first word is 'Blessed,' and be guided by their spirit, perhaps he could see more good in his fellow men than his article seems to indicate. Again, if half of the statements are true which have been published by The Eagle, he sadly needs a closer communion with the Great Preacher of men, before he becomes a teacher of other men. At any rate, I do not think Brooklyn has gained any permanent good by his coming, nor would she lose anything if he should silently fold his tent and join some Egyptian caravan."

The Rev. W. M. Brundage, minister of Unity Unitarian Church, writes:

"In regard to that eccentric individual called 'Pastor Russell,' who advertises on the bill boards of the city in such grotesque and grewsome fashion (witness that remarkable cartoon, 'Lazarus, come forth'), I have no conviction to express. The fact is, I have never considered him quite normal, judging from his advertisements of himself."

MADE CHILDREN HAPPY.

Ladews Give Usual Christmas Party at Elsinore, Glen Cove.

(Special to The Eagle.)

Glen Cove, L. I., December 26—It was a happy Christmas Day for Glen Cove children yesterday—at least 400 of them—when Miss Elise Ladew and her brother, Harvey S. Ladew, gave their annual Christmas party at Elsinore to the children of the Ladew employes.

As on past occasions, the celebration was held in the large coachhouse on the estate, which had been elaborately trimmed with Christmas greens and bright bells, and there was a huge, gayly decorated Christmas tree on hand. The party was supposed to begin at 2 o'clock, but by the time all the youngsters reached the place, in addition to 300 grownups, who represented the parents, it was half an hour or so later.

It was the young hostess' and host's desire to give the children the time of their lives, and the glowing success of the affair was a sufficient reward for their efforts. Their Christmas spirit, displayed in the thought of giving up their Christmas afternoon to the children, was responsible for many happy hearts throughout the village last evening.

Miss Ladew presided with her customary charm, and, with her brother, attended to the wants and comfort of the young folks present.

The afternoon's fun began with a marionette show, given by the L. A. Starett troupe of four. Hardly had the amusement and pleasure from this subsided when a ventriloquist and magician provided more fun for the children. Ice cream and cake followed the performance, which was only an introduction to the real glee and jollity of the afternoon. Santa Claus appeared to the delighted youngsters, making his entrance down a chimney fitted up especially for the occasion. This role was, as usual, impersonated by Timothy T. Hennessey, who has been coachman in the Ladew family for years, and it is needless to say that Mr Hennessey played the part to perfection A distribution of gifts was then in order and each child present received a toy and a box of candy. Santa Claus was assisted in distributing the presents by Miss Ladew and Mr. Ladew, their grandmother, Mrs. Charles Wall, Mr. and Mrs. E. Berry Wall, Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Townsend Montant and Mrs. James I. Taylor.

Last evening Miss Ladew and her brother, with the other members of the family, went to New York, where they were the guests of their uncle, J. Harvey Ladew, of 813 Madison avenue, at a family Christmas dinner.

LECTURES ON CHINA.

M. H. Leon, a Chinese, addressed a large gathering in the Church of Our Father Sunday night upon the subject of "The Prospects of China." According to Mr. Leon, the result of the present warfare, whether it be the establishment of a limited monarchy or of a republic, will be beneficial to the religious world. China has made more progress in the last ten years than Japan has made in forty, he said. Chinamen, he added, were noted for their rugged honesty, their simple and genuine politeness and their industry.
