This split in authority, which may in part depend upon the stage of proceedings at which the court assessed the entanglement issue, suggests the propriety of this court's conclusion that, at least at the motion to dismiss stage, the First Amendment does not necessarily bar a claim of negligent supervision against a religious institution for the tortious conduct of a member of the clergy. The Drevlow decision of the Eighth Circuit Court of Appeals further supports this court's denial of the defendants' motion to dismiss the negligent supervision claim on First Amendment grounds at this stage of the proceedings when the extent of any entanglement that may be required by adjudication of that claim cannot yet be determined. Drevlow, 991 F.2d at 471.

Defendants' motion to dismiss the negligent retention and supervision portions of her claim in Count 10 will therefore be denied. [FN45]

> FN45. Again, the plaintiff has conceded that dismissal of the negligent hiring portion of this claim is appropriate on "entanglement" grounds.

2. Other state-law claims

The court has considered the defendants' challenges to the adequacy of the pleading of the other state-law claims presently at issue, Counts 3, 4, 11, 12, and 13, as well as the defendants' assertions of other "insuperable bars" to these claims, and finds that the relief of dismissal is not required. Assuming that all of the facts alleged in the plaintiff's complaint are true, and liberally construing those allegations, Conley, 355 U.S. at 45-46, 78 S.Ct. at 101-02; Doe, 107 F.3d at 1303-04; WMX Techs., Inc., 105 F.3d at 1198; First Commercial Trust, 77 F.3d at 1083, it is not clear that no relief could be granted under any set of facts that could be proved consistent with Doe's allegations. Handeen, 112 F.3d at 1347-48; accord Conley, 355 U.S. at 45-46, 78 S.Ct. at 101-02; WMX Techs., Inc., 105 F.3d at 1198. A record amplified and clarified by discovery may demonstrate that some of the claims are not viable, in which case the court will no doubt be called upon to revisit the merits of those claims, on either factual or legal grounds.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

The portion of defendants' motion seeking dismissal of various state law claims will therefore be denied. Similarly, the court concludes that the portions of the motion asking that the court abstain or certify questions to the Iowa Supreme Court are premature, as attempting to answer certified questions *1433 in the absence of a more complete record may be difficult, impossible, or merely unproductive.

E. Certification For Interlocutory Appeal

[36] The court finds that this matter should be certified for interlocutory appeal pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1292(b). That statute provides, in pertinent part, as follows:

> (b) When a district judge, in making in a civil action an order not otherwise appealable under this section, shall be of the opinion that such order involves a controlling question of law as to which there is substantial ground for difference of opinion and that an immediate appeal from the order may materially advance the ultimate termination of the litigation, he shall so state in writing in such order. The Court of Appeals which would have jurisdiction of an appeal of such action may thereupon, in its discretion, permit an appeal to be taken from such order, if application is made to it within ten days after the entry of the order: Provided, however, That application for an appeal hereunder shall not stay proceedings in the district court unless the district judge or the Court of Appeals or a judge thereof shall so order.

28 U.S.C. § 1292(b). As the Eighth Circuit Court of Appeals has observed, the statute provides for certification of controlling questions of law by the district court for interlocutory appeal in circumstances where an appeal is otherwise unavailable. City of Fort Madison, Iowa v. Emerald Lady, 990 F.2d 1086, 1088 n. 4 (8th Cir.1993). However, the appellate court must, upon certification, decide, in its discretion, whether to permit the appeal on the question certified. Id. [FN46]

> FN46. Because § 1292(b) provides for appeal of orders otherwise unappealable, and thus provides an avenue for resolving disputed and controlling questions of law, the resolution of which will materially further the litigation, the appellate court reviews de novo the questions of law certified by the district court. Simon v. G.D. Searle & Co., 816 F.2d 397, 400 (8th Cir.), cert. denied, 484 U.S. 917, 108 S.Ct. 268, 98 L.Ed.2d 225 (1987). The nature and scope of the appellate court's review is not rigidly determined by the certified questions, however. Id. (citing In re Oil Spill by the Amoco Cadiz, 659 F.2d 789, 793 n. 5 (7th Cir.1981)). The appellate court > remain[s] free to consider " ' "such questions as are basic to and underlie" ' " the questions certified by the district court. [In re Oil Spill by the Amoco Cadiz, 659 F.2d at 793 n. 5] (quoting Helene Curtis Indus., Inc. v. Church & Dwight Co., 560 F.2d 1325, 1335 (7th Cir.1977) (quoting 9 J. Moore, Moore's Federal Practice ¶ 110.25[1], at 270)); Merican, Inc. v. Caterpillar Tractor Co., 713 F.2d 958, 962 n. 7 (3d Cir.1983), cert. denied, 465 U.S. 1024, 104 S.Ct. 1278, 79 L.Ed.2d 682 (1984); United States v. Connolly, 716 F.2d 882, 885 (Fed.Cir.1983), cert. denied, 465 U.S. 1065, 104 S.Ct. 1414, 79 L.Ed.2d 740 (1984).
> Simon, 816 F.2d at 400.

In a recent decision, the Eighth Circuit Court of Appeals considered the standards applicable to an interlocutory appeal pursuant to § 1292(b). See White v. Nix, 43 F.3d 374 (8th Cir.1994). The court held that "[t]he requirements of § 1292(b) are jurisdictional," and the statute should be used with care to avoid piece-meal appeals. White, 43 F.3d at 376. Thus, the court stated that § 1292(b) " 'should and will be used only in exceptional cases where a decision on appeal may avoid protracted and expensive litigation, as in antitrust and similar protracted cases.' " Id. (quoting S.Rep. No. 2434, 85th Cong., 2d Sess. (1958), reprinted in 1958

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

U.S.C.C.A.N. 5255, 5260). Thus, the statute should be used "sparingly" and the burden, on the movant, is a heavy one to show that the case is an "exceptional" one in which immediate appeal is warranted. Id. Nonetheless, the court's grant of interlocutory appeal is reviewed for abuse of discretion. Id. (finding abuse of discretion in that case in failure to consider whether the appeal involved a controlling question of law). The court therefore reiterated that § 1292(b) establishes three criteria that must be met for certification by the court: "the district court must be 'of the opinion that' (1) the order 'involves a controlling question of law'; (2) 'there is substantial ground for difference of opinion'; and (3) certification will 'materially advance the ultimate termination of the litigation.' " Id. at 377.

[37] The court is of the opinion that this decision presents an "exceptional case" in which immediate interlocutory appeal should be permitted. Id. The court finds that this order involves a controlling question of law, specifically, the constitutionality of the civil *1434 remedies provision of the VAWA and the elements of a VAWA claim in this case. Id. If the VAWA is unconstitutional as an exercise of Commerce Clause power, then this court will lack jurisdiction over the federal claim, and consequently will lack supplemental jurisdiction over the various state-law claims. It is also clear to the court that "there is substantial ground for difference of opinion," id., since the only two courts to consider the constitutionality of this portion of the VAWA have split upon the appropriate outcome of a Commerce Clause analysis. Furthermore, there is an absence of precedent on the precise elements of a civil VAWA claim or the requirements of a predicate offense. Also, the court has identified the split in authority as to whether the First Amendment bars a negligent supervision claim against a religious institution based on the tortious conduct of a member of the clergy. Finally, certification will "materially advance the ultimate termination of the litigation," id., because, if this court is incorrect in its conclusion that the VAWA is constitutional, or in its identification of the elements of such a claim, the defendants are entitled to dismissal of the complaint for lack of a federal question. This matter will therefore be certified for interlocutory appeal pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1292(b) on the questions of the constitutionality of the civil remedies provision of the VAWA, the elements of such a claim in this case, and whether the First Amendment bars Doe's negligent supervision claim. However, this court will not enter any stay of the proceedings in this case while such an interlocutory appeal is pending. 28 U.S.C. § 1292(b).

III. CONCLUSION

Deprived of the use of a sword to loosen the complex knot of legal issues presented here, the court has instead painstakingly attempted to untangle the various strands in its analysis. Taking the defendants' nonconstitutional challenge to the plaintiff's VAWA claim first, the court has extracted from the federal statute and the state statute identified as defining a predicate offense the elements of Doe's VAWA claim. The court concludes that Doe has adequately pleaded, although just barely, each of the essential elements of such a claim. Thus, the defendants are not entitled to dismissal of the VAWA claim on Rule 12(b)(6) grounds for failure to state a claim, nor are they entitled to dismissal of that claim or the entire action pursuant to Rule 12(b)(1) on the ground that Doe has failed to allege an essential element of the federal claim upon which the court's subject matter jurisdiction depends.

Turning to the question at the focus of the attention of the parties and amici, the court next considered whether it lacked subject matter jurisdiction over the complaint, because the civil remedies provision of the VAWA is unconstitutional as beyond Congress's Commerce Clause power. Applying the standards for such an analysis stated by the United States Supreme Court in Lopez, as clarified by various circuit courts of appeals post-Lopez, the court concludes that the lack of jurisdictional elements is not fatal to the constitutionality of the statute, nor is the fact that the statute regulates non-commercial or non-economic activity. Giving congressional findings the deference they continue to be due post-Lopez, the court concludes instead that Congress had a rational basis for finding that gender-motivated violence has a substantial effect on interstate commerce. Furthermore, the means Congress adopted in the civil remedies provision of the VAWA to combat gender- motivated violence were reasonably adapted to that goal. The civil remedies provision of the VAWA mirrors other statutory mechanisms for private enforcement of civil rights. Furthermore, the civil remedies provision of the VAWA avoids the concern of the

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

Supreme Court in Lopez that the Commerce Clause would become a vehicle for establishment of a centralized government exercising plenary police powers, because the statute is plainly constructed to supplement rather than supplant state criminal laws pertaining to gender- motivated violence. The court concludes that the VAWA is a valid exercise of Congress's authority under the Commerce Clause to address conduct with a substantial effect on interstate commerce. [FN47]

FN47. The court therefore did not reach the defendants' challenge to the VAWA as an exercise of congressional authority under section five of the Fourteenth Amendment.

*1435 The court's analysis was not finished there, however, as the court was still required to consider the defendants' challenges to the plaintiff's state-law claims. The court rejects the defendants' arguments that the exercise of supplemental jurisdiction over the plaintiff's state-law claims is inappropriate, because the court finds that it need not dismiss the state claims on the grounds of novelty or complexity, or on the ground that those claims predominate over the federal claim. The novelty and complexity arguments may be better addressed on a more complete record, and, as to predomination, the court finds that the federal claim is the central claim of plaintiff's complaint, not merely an add-on to establish federal jurisdiction.

Of the defendants' other challenges to the plaintiff's state-law claims, the court has considered in detail only the defendants' challenge to the negligent supervision and retention claim. The court finds that the other state-law claims have been adequately pleaded. As to the negligent supervision and retention claim, [FN48] the court finds that the claim is, first, permitted under the existing formulation of the tort in Iowa, and not barred at this stage of the proceedings by the First Amendment. The court finds that it is not definitely apparent that consideration of a claim of negligent retention and supervision against a religious institution arising from allegedly tortious conduct of a member of the clergy will involve an unwarranted entanglement with religion. However, if a more complete record establishes that such entanglement in this case is inevitable, the defendants may still be entitled to summary judgment on or dismissal of the negligent retention and supervision claim.

FN48. The plaintiff conceded that the negligent hiring portion of this claim could not be sustained over a First Amendment bar.

The court finds that there is no need, at this point in the proceedings, either to abstain or to certify questions to the Iowa Supreme Court, because only a fuller record would make such a course productive. Finally, the court certifies this matter for interlocutory appeal pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1292(b), because the court is of the opinion that this order involves controlling questions of law as to which there is substantial ground for difference of opinion and that an immediate appeal from the order may materially advance the ultimate termination of the litigation.

The defendants' motion to dismiss, abstain, or certify questions is therefore denied except to the extent that the plaintiff has conceded certain claims cannot properly be asserted. This order is certified for interlocutory appeal, but this matter is not stayed while any such interlocutory appeal is pending. 28 U.S.C. § 1292(b). The stay on discovery imposed by a magistrate judge of this court on November 20, 1996, is hereby lifted. The parties shall file a proposed scheduling order and discovery plan in compliance with N.D. Ia. LR 16(a)(1) within thirty (30) days of the date of this order.

IT IS SO ORDERED.

APPENDIX

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

A. Amici Appearing Through
NOW Legal Defense And Education Fund

NOW Legal Defense And Education Fund (NOW LDEF)

Anti-Defamation League (ADL)

Ayuda, Inc.

Center For Women Policy Studies

Equal Rights Advocates (ERA)

Iowa Coalition Against Sexual Assault (Iowa CASA)

Jewish Women International

National Alliance of Sexual Assault Coalitions (NASAC)

National Coalition Against Domestic Violence

National Network To End Domestic Violence (NNEDV)

National Women's Law Center (NWLC)

Northwest Women's Law Center

Women's Law Project (WLP)

Women's Legal Defense Fund (WLDF)

B. Amici "Law Professors" [FN49]

Professor Kathryn Abrams
Northwestern University School of Law

Professor Bruce Ackerman
Sterling Professor of Law and Political Science
Yale Law School

Professor Anthony G. Amsterdam
Judge Edward Weinfeld Professor of Law
New York University School of Law

Professor Jack M. Balkin
Lafayette S. Foster Professor
Yale Law School

Professor Katharine T. Bartlett

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

Professor of Law
Duke University School of Law

Professor Mary Becker
Arnold I. Schure Professor of Law
University of Chicago School of Law

Professor Derrick A. Bell, Jr.
Visiting Professor of Law
New York University School of Law

Professor Cynthia Grant Bowman
Professor of Law
Northwestern University School of Law

Professor Sarah E. Burns
New York University School of Law

Professor Patricia A. Cain
Professor of Law
University of Iowa College of Law

Professor Enrique Carrasco
Professor of Law

Professor Erwin Chemerinsky
Legion Lex Professor of Law
University of Southern California Law School

Professor Drucilla Cornell
Professor of Law
State University of New Jersey, Rutgers School of Law--Newark

Professor Jan C. Costello
Professor of Law
Loyola Law School, Los Angeles

Professor Clare Dalton
Professor of Law
Northeastern University School of Law

Professor Harlon L. Dalton
Professor of Law
Yale Law School

Professor Marcella David
Associate Professor of Law
University of Iowa College of Law

Professor Norman Dorsen

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

Frederick I. & Grace A. Stokes Professor of Law
New York University School of Law

Professor Mary L. Dudziak
Professor of Law
University of Iowa College of Law

Professor Martha Albertson Fineman
Maurice T. Moore Professor of Law
Columbia University School of Law

Professor Catherine L. Fisk
Professor of Law
Loyola Law School, Los Angeles

Professor Katherine Franke
Associate Professor of Law
University of Arizona College of Law

Professor Linda S. Greene

Professor of Law
University of Wisconsin Law School

Professor Phoebe A. Hadden
Charles Klein Professor of Law and Government
Temple University School of Law

Professor Angela P. Harris
Professor of Law
University of California at Berkeley School of Law
Boalt Hall

Professor Randy A. Hertz
Professor of Clinical Law
New York University School of Law

Professor Joan W. Howarth
Professor of Law
Golden State University School of Law

Professor Lisa C. Ikemoto

Professor of Law
Loyola Law School, Los Angeles

Professor Jane E. Larson
Professor
University of Wisconsin Law School

Professor Sylvia A. Law
Elizabeth K. Dollard Professor of Law, Medicine & Psychiatry
New York University School of Law

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

Professor Jean C. Love
Martha Ellen Tye Distinguished Professor of Law
University of Iowa College of Law

Professor Holly Maguigan
Professor of Clinical Law
New York University School of Law

Professor Karl Manheim
Professor of Law

Loyola Law School, Los Angeles

Professor Burke Marshall
Professor of Law, Yale Law School

Professor Mari Matsuda
Professor of Law
Georgetown University Law Center

Professor Linda A. McGuire
Assistant Dean for Student Affairs and Instructor of Law
University of Iowa College of Law

Professor Frank I. Michelman
Robert Walmsley University Professor
Harvard Law School

Professor Martha L. Minow
Professor of Law
Harvard Law School

Professor Nancy Morawetz
Professor of Clinical Law
New York University School of Law

Professor Burt Neuborne
John Norton Pomeroy Professor of Law
New York University School of Law

Professor Reta Noblett-Feld
Clinical Law Professor
University of Iowa College of Law

Professor Victoria Nourse
Assistant Professor of Law
University of Wisconsin

Professor Sande Buhao Pond
Clinical Professor of Law
Loyola Law School, Los Angeles

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

Professor Margaret Raymond

Associate Professor of Law
University of Iowa College of Law

Professor Judith Resnik
Orrin B. Evans, Professor of Law
University of Southern California Law School
Visiting Professor of Law
New York University School of Law

Professor A.J. Richards
Edwin D. Webb Professor of Law
New York University School of Law

Professor Laura Sager
Professor of Clinical Law

New York University School of Law
Professor Elizabeth M. Schneider
Professor of Law
Brooklyn Law School

Professor Vicki Schultz
Professor of Law
Yale Law School

Professor Barbara Schwartz
Clinical Law Professor
University of Iowa College of Law

Professor Marjorie A. Silver
Professor of Law
Touro College of Law

Professor Jonathan Simon
Professor of Law
University of Miami School of Law

Professor Aviam Soifer
Dean and Professor of Law
Boston College Law School

Professor Carol Steiker

Assistant Professor of Law
Harvard Law School

Professor Susan Sturm
Professor of Law
University of Pennsylvania Law School

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

Professor Anthony Thompson
Assistant Professor of Clinical Law
New York University School of Law

Professor Gerald Torres
H.O. Head Professor of Real Property Law
University of Texas School of Law

Professor Lea VanderVelde
Professor of Law
University of Iowa College of Law

Professor Merle H. Weiner
Associate Professor of Law

University of Iowa College of Law

Professor Robin West
Professor of Law
Georgetown University Law Center

Professor Lucie White
Professor of Law
Harvard Law School

Professor Stephanie M. Wildman
Professor of Law
University of San Francisco School of Law

Professor Diane Leenheer Zimmerman
Professor of Law
New York University School of Law

FN49. Affiliations are listed for identification purposes only.

970 F.Supp. 1375

END OF DOCUMENT

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

BLUEBIRD (858) 477 0700 www.bluebirdoffice.com
OFFICE SUPPLIES

EXHIBIT 17

269 F.Supp.2d 328
(Cite as: 269 F.Supp.2d 328)

C

United States District Court,
S.D. New York.

Karl EHRENS, Plaintiff,
v.
THE LUTHERAN CHURCH-MISSOURI SYNOD, the Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod Atlantic District and Ronald F. Fink, Individually and as President of the Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod Atlantic District Defendants.

No. 02 CIV. 2771(CLB).

June 18, 2003.

Church member brought action against ecclesiastical authorities of church synod, alleging that authorities negligently supervised or retained pastor who allegedly committed a series of sexual assaults upon church member while he was a minor. Defendants moved for summary judgment. The District Court, Brieant, J., held that: (1) First Amendment prevented court from determining, after the fact, whether authorities negligently supervised or retained pastor, as such determination would involve government entanglement with religion; (2) member's allegation was insufficient to support finding that authorities had foreseeable duty of care to warn member of pastor's tendencies, as required for negligence claim under New York law; and (3) under New York law, letter concerning pastor's evaluation by a psychologist, and making reference to a previous incident of pastor touching a child on the leg many years earlier, was insufficient to support cause of action against authorities for negligent hiring or supervision.

Motion granted.

West Headnotes

[1] Constitutional Law ⚖84.5(10)
92k84.5(10) Most Cited Cases

[1] Religious Societies ⚖30
332k30 Most Cited Cases

First Amendment prevented court from determining, after the fact, whether the ecclesiastical authorities of church synod negligently supervised or retained pastor, as contended by church member in action against synod and others for alleged sexual assaults committed upon him by pastor, as such determination would involve government entanglement with religion. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 1.

[2] Religious Societies ⚖30
332k30 Most Cited Cases

Church member's allegation, that ecclesiastical authorities knew of pastor's pedophilic activities, "as confirmed by pastor's subsequent conviction" was insufficient to support finding that authorities had foreseeable duty of care to warn member of pastor's tendencies, as required for negligence claim under New York law in connection with pastor's alleged assault upon member while he was a minor, where conviction referred to arose out of the alleged incident with member.

[3] Negligence ⚖202
272k202 Most Cited Cases

Under New York law, to establish a prima facie case of negligence, the following must be shown: (1) a duty owed to the plaintiff; (2) a breach of that duty; (3) a reasonably close causal connection between the contact and the resulting injury; and (4) actual loss, harm or damage.

[4] Religious Societies ⚖30
332k30 Most Cited Cases

Under New York law, letter concerning pastor's evaluation by a psychologist, and making reference to a previous incident of pastor touching a child on the leg many years earlier, was insufficient to support cause of action against ecclesiastical authorities of church synod for negligent hiring or supervision, in action by church member for alleged sexual assaults committed upon him by pastor, where there was no indication that authorities had knowledge of the incident described in the letter.

[5] Master and Servant ⚖303
255k303 Most Cited Cases

To state a claim under New York law for negligent hiring, supervision, and retention, the plaintiff must show that the employer knew or should have known of the employee's propensity for the conduct which caused the injury.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

*329 David B. Stein, Rubin Weisman, Colasanti, Kajko & Stein, LLP, Lexington, MA, John Haris, Epstein, Becker and Green, New York City, for plaintiff.

Renee Simon Lesser, New York City, for defendant.

Memorandum and Order

BRIEANT, District Judge.

In this diversity case controlled by New York law, seeking damages for sexual abuse of a minor, Defendants move for summary judgment pursuant to Fed.R.Civ.P. 56 on various grounds. [FN1] The motion was heard and fully submitted on May 23, 2003.

> FN1. This action was originally filed in Bronx County Supreme Court on November 19, 2001. Pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1441, Defendants removed this action to this Court based on diversity of citizenship, 28 U.S.C. § 1332(a)(1).

The following facts are not in dispute except as noted. Plaintiff Karl Ehrens ("Ehrens") is a citizen of Wollaston, Massachusetts. Defendant The Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod is a national religious organization with its principal place of business in St. Louis, Missouri. Defendant The Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod *330 Atlantic District is a religious organization conducting business within the State of New York and having its principal office in Bronxville, New York. The Individual Defendant, Reverend Ronald F. Fink ("Rev.Fink"), was President of the Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod Atlantic District until 1989 and is a resident of the State of North Carolina. [FN2]

> FN2. Defendant Fink has never been served with the summons and complaint in this action. The time to serve him has passed. Plaintiff has waived his opportunity to depose Rev. Fink. He was required by a prior direction of this Court to depose him by March 14, 2003 and did not do so.

The complaint pleads two claims against Defendant The Lutheran Church Missouri Synod framed as claims for negligence imposing responsibility for the wrongful conduct of Reverend Frederick Chapman, not sued, and now deceased, (count I), and negligent infliction of emotional distress (count II). These same two claims are alleged separately against Defendant The Lutheran Church Missouri Synod--Atlantic District. Plaintiff characterizes his claims as for "negligent hiring, supervision or retention" of a clergyman. See Plaintiff's Opposition brief filed May 14, 2003 at 10.

Because Reverend Fink was not served with process the action is dismissed against him at the outset and the counts pleaded against him are not considered.

Factual Background

Our analysis must be based on the facts well pleaded as amplified by the affidavits and exhibits, without regard to the legal theories or labels attached by the pleader. The facts, denied by Defendants, but assumed to be true for purposes of the motion, are found in the Plaintiff's complaint and brief in opposition (Doc. 24).

Some knowledge of the history and organization of the Lutheran Church in America is necessary to resolve the motion. Defendants take their name from the Rev. Dr. Martin Luther (1483-1546) a Roman Catholic priest whose act in posting his 95 theses on the church door in Wittenberg, in what is now Germany, on October 31, 1517, causes that day to be considered as the "Birthday of the Protestant Reformation". The 95 theses are also known as the Lutheran Confessions. The Lutheran Church itself was founded June 25, 1530. Its origin and growth parallel that of the Presbyterian Church, said to have been founded in Scotland by John Knox (1514-1572) and the Reformation of the Anglican Church under the leadership of Archbishop Thomas Cranmer (1489-1556) in England, and other subsequent European Protestant denominations.

Lutherans today are the third largest grouping of Christians, worldwide. Defendant Lutheran

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

Church--Missouri Synod ("the Synod") was organized in 1847 and is but one of a number of similar bodies which constitute a unity, for purposes of self-government of their constituent member Lutheran churches in the United States and Canada. Defendant The Lutheran Church--Missouri Synod--Atlantic District, is an administrative facility within the Synod responsible for approximately 100 congregations in Metropolitan New York, Long Island and Eastern New York State. Massachusetts is within the New England District of the Synod.

Under the governance of the Synod, a congregation cannot become a member of the Synod until its Constitution and bylaws are approved by a District of the Synod. The Wollaston Church discussed infra was not a member of the Atlantic District although it did belong to the Missouri Synod.

*331 A congregation may "call" (retain or employ) only ordained and commissioned workers who are members of the Synod. This requirement applies to a Pastor, as well as certain other church offices not material to this action. The right to call a Pastor remains exclusively with the Congregation, but one so called must be endorsed by and a member of the Synod. Such a person eligible to serve as a Pastor is said to be "rostered", in that his name appears on a list or roster of eligible priests maintained by the Synod. A Pastor once called may be removed from office only for cause by a two-thirds vote of the members of the congregation assembled. Neither the Synod nor the District has the power to remove a Pastor once called.

Reverend Frederick Chapman, now deceased, was Pastor of a Lutheran church in Laurelton, New York. Chapman served in the Atlantic District as a Pastor until 1981. At that time he requested and was granted emeritus (retired) status and moved to New England. His roster membership was subsequently transferred to the New England District, and Rev. Fink had no further contact with him of any kind. Reverend Chapman resigned from the national clergy roster in 1997. Frederick Chapman was retired on pension as of 1978 or 1979. Although retired he continued to remain on the roster and to serve at the Wollaston Church, until 1997.

Plaintiff Karl Ehrens was a member of Wollaston Lutheran Church, in the New England District. Plaintiff alleges that beginning in the Spring of 1994 until July 1995, while he was under age, Chapman took advantage of his pastoral role within the church (as Pastor Emeritus at Wollaston) and began to develop an inappropriate sexual relationship with Ehrens. Ehrens alleges that while he was alone with Ehrens, Chapman committed a series of sexual assaults upon him. Chapman was convicted in 1997 in Massachusetts on criminal charges relating to that misconduct.

Defendant Synod provides evidence that it was not until 1997 that the Atlantic District learned of allegations of sexual misconduct lodged against Frederick Chapman in Massachusetts. "No allegations of sexual misconduct are on record in the Atlantic District office." Exhibit B. There is no evidence to the contrary. Since, organizationally, the District is part of the Synod, its knowledge would be imputed to the Synod.

Discussion

F.R.Civ.P. 56 provides that summary judgment shall be rendered if "the pleadings, depositions, answers to interrogatories, and admissions on file, together with the affidavits, if any, show that there is no genuine issue as to any material fact and that the moving party is entitled to a judgment as a matter of law." In evaluating the record to determine whether there is a genuine issue as to any material fact, "the evidence of the non-movant is to be believed and all justifiable inferences are to be drawn in his favor." Anderson v. Liberty Lobby, 477 U.S. 242, 255, 106 S.Ct. 2505, 2513, 91 L.Ed.2d 202 (1986).

Plaintiff's legal theory is that Defendants employed or supervised or retained Chapman as a Pastor in a position of trust with the knowledge that he had a history of sexually assaulting minors. Plaintiff alleges that in 1977, while serving as Pastor in New York, Chapman was forced to leave that post because of inappropriate behavior towards female members including minors. Reverend Ronald Fink was the President of the Atlantic District in 1977 and is claimed to have had personal knowledge concerning that misconduct. In August 1980, in connection with Chapman's transfer to the New England District, Rev. Fink failed to inform the New *332 England District of Chapman's prior misconduct, and Defendants allowed him to remain rostered, knowing that during his ministry in the New England District, Chapman would have unsupervised access to children, including Plaintiff. This failure is alleged to be the cause of Plaintiff's injuries which are the subject of the suit.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

This Court agrees that Plaintiff's allegation that Chapman was "working for the Atlantic District" at the time of the alleged assaults is not supported by the evidence, and indeed is contradicted by his claims previously filed by Mr. Ehrens in his two prior lawsuits in Massachusetts.

[1] Defendants point out, and this Court agrees that the Court is prevented by the First Amendment to the United States Constitution from determining, after the fact, that the ecclesiastical authorities of the Lutheran Church negligently supervised or retained a clergyman, as Plaintiff contends. It is constitutionally dubious for a court or jury to set a standard of reasonable care for religious bodies which maintain rosters of clergy eligibility for employment by congregations. New York courts have ruled that "any attempt to define the duty of care owed by a member of the clergy to a parishioner fosters excessive entanglement with religion." Langford v. Roman Catholic Diocese, 271 A.D.2d 494, 705 N.Y.S.2d 661, 662 (2d Dep't 2000). The same is true with regard to the duty of care in determining the continued eligibility of a priest to serve as a Pastor. As this Court has previously held in Schmidt v. Bishop, 779 F.Supp. 321 (S.D.N.Y.1991) in which Plaintiff's claims against the Church Defendants were dismissed as a matter of law:

> "Any inquiry into the policies and practices of the Church Defendants in hiring or supervising their clergy raises the same kind of First Amendment problems of entanglement .... which might involve the Court in making sensitive judgments about the propriety of the Church Defendants' supervision in light of their religious beliefs. Insofar as concerns retention or supervision, the pastor of a Presbyterian Church is not analogous to a common law employee. He may not demit his charge nor be removed by the session, without the consent of the presbytery, functioning essentially as an ecclesiastical court. The traditional denominations each have their own intricate principles of governance, as to which the state has no rights of visitation. Church governance is founded in scripture, modified by reformers over almost two millenia.
>
> As the Supreme Court stated long before the Lemon formulation was developed: It is not to be supposed that the judges of the civil courts can be as competent in the ecclesiastical law and religious faith of all these bodies as the ablest men in each are in reference to their own. It would therefore be an appeal from the more learned tribunal in the law which should decide the case, to one which is less so. Watson v. Jones, 80 U.S. 679, 13 Wall. 679, 729, 20 L.Ed. 666 (1871). See also St. Nicholas Cathedral of Russian Orthodox Church of North America v. Kedroff, 302 N.Y. 1, 13, 96 N.E.2d 56 (1950) rev'd on other grounds, 344 U.S. 94, 73 S.Ct. 143, 97 L.Ed. 120 (1952)".

The so-called "third prong" of the much maligned case of Lemon v. Kurtzman, 403 U.S. 602, 91 S.Ct. 2105, 29 L.Ed.2d 745 (1971) which forbade the state to "foster excessive government entanglement with religion" remains valid. We know from history that the First Amendment was passed in light of concern by Congress and the states that their new national government might at some future time follow the practices of European states in which the *333 ruler for the time being presumed to dictate the religious affiliations of his subjects and interfere with the free exercise of their own conscience. We may not forget that "the men and women who left Scrooby for Leyden and eventually came to Plymouth in order to worship God where they wished and in their own way must have thought they had terminated the interference of public authorities with free and unhandicapped exercise of religion." [FN3]

> FN3. Chief Judge Albert Conway writing for the New York Court of Appeals in Matter of Community Synagogue v. Bates, 1 N.Y.2d 445, 458, 154 N.Y.S.2d 15, 136 N.E.2d 488 (1956).

Any effort of this Court to instruct the trial jury as to the duty of care by which a denomination keeps its "roster" of those priests (and others) authorized to accept canonical employment by a parish church would of necessity require the court and jury to consider the fundamental perspective and approach to ordination and supervision of clergy and constituent churches inherent in the beliefs and practices of the particular denomination. The selection and deployment of clergy is about as central to the life and purpose of a group of affiliated churches as anything we can imagine. The mainstream denominations differ greatly in their rules and policies for "calling" and removing clergy. For a court to intervene to set standards of care for the performance of this work, which is founded in scripture and in history, implicating apostolic succession in some denominations, is as unconstitutional as it is impossible. When such intervention is directed to retention, the problem becomes worse and such claims become a pleading substitute for the doctrine of respondent superior, inapplicable in New York to crimes committed by clergy, and not alleged by Plaintiff in this case. Bassile v. Covenant House, 152 Misc.2d 88, 575 N.Y.S.2d 233 (1991); Joshua S. v. Casey, 206 A.D.2d 839, 615 N.Y.S.2d 200 (App. Div. 4th Dept.1994); Paul J.H. v. Lum, 291 A.D.2d 894, 736 N.Y.S.2d 561 (App. Div. 4th Dept.2002)

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

Any award of damages would have a chilling effect, leading indirectly to state control over the future conduct of affairs of a religious denomination, a result violative of the text and history of the establishment clause. Because it would be inappropriate and unconstitutional for this Court to determine after the fact that the ecclesiastical authorities negligently supervised or retained Reverend Chapman, this case must be dismissed.

[2] Defendants also contend alternatively that there is no proof of prior notice to them that Chapman would commit a sexual assault against a young man sixteen years after he left the Atlantic District and moved to Massachusetts, simply by reason of a prior history of misconduct of an unspecified sexual nature years earlier with women.

[3] Under New York law, to establish a prima facie case of negligence, the following must be shown: (i) a duty owed to the plaintiff; (ii) a breach of that duty; (iii) "a reasonably close causal connection between the contact and the resulting injury", and (iv) "actual loss, harm or damage." See Dooner v. Keefe, Bruyette & Woods, Inc., 157 F.Supp.2d 265 (S.D.N.Y.2001). Plaintiff's evidence fails to satisfy the essential elements necessary to prevail in an action for negligence.

Plaintiff argues that Defendants knew of "Chapman's pedophilic activities... [as] confirmed by Chapman's subsequent conviction." See Id. at ¶ 7. The conviction of Chapman occurred after the alleged assault in 1994. See Id. at ¶ 18. It is illogical that Chapman's post-1994 conviction could be used to create a foreseeable duty *334 of care on the part of the Atlantic District and the Synod dating back to 1980, when Chapman's membership in the Atlantic District ended. [FN4]

> FN4. The pre-sentence report used in connection with Chapman's Massachusetts conviction contains reference to an unidentified prior conviction of a sexual nature in New York. The report is not admissible evidence that such a conviction exists or that these Defendants knew of it at the time Chapman was called by the Wollaston Church.

Plaintiff has not pointed to admissible evidence that either the Synod or the Atlantic District had requisite notice of Chapman's alleged proclivities to commit sexual assault. See Def. Memo at p. 14.

[4][5] To state a claim under New York law for negligent hiring, supervision, and retention, the plaintiff must show that "the employer knew or should have known of the employee's propensity for the conduct which caused the injury." Wilson v. the Diocese of New York of the Episcopal Church, 1998 WL 82921, *3, 1998 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 2051 *10 (S.D.N.Y. Feb. 23, 1998); Kenneth R. v. Roman Catholic Diocese of Brooklyn, 229 A.D.2d 159, 654 N.Y.S.2d 791, 793 (2d Dep't), cert. denied, 522 U.S. 967, 118 S.Ct. 413, 139 L.Ed.2d 316 (1997). There must be evidence to establish that the employer knew or should have known of any alleged propensity on Chapman's part to commit sexual assault both prior to hiring him and throughout the period of his employment. See Kenneth R., 654 N.Y.S.2d at 795 ("There is no common-law duty to institute specific procedures for hiring employees unless the employer knows of facts that would lead a reasonably prudent person to investigate the prospective employee.").

Plaintiff directs this Court to a June 2, 1994 letter (Pl. Mem. in Opp. Ex. 8) concerning the evaluation of Chapman by a psychologist Dr. David B. Doolittle. The letter makes a reference to "a previous incident of [Chapman] touching a child...on the leg in about 1976." See Id. Absent from the letter is whether the Defendants had knowledge of the incident. Plaintiff also refers to two letters in 1977 and 1978, one from Reverend Fink and one from Frederick Chapman. These letters refer to a serious problem concerning Chapman. They do not indicate that the problem was related to child molestation. Reverend Fink addressed this letter in his affidavit:

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

> I have reviewed a September 12, 1977 letter I wrote to the President of the Iowa District West concerning Mr. Chapman. In that letter, I noted I was not enclosing a "Confidential Information Blank" (which is a form that has basic curriculum vitae and background information about clergy members) because of what I described as a "serious problem" that had "not yet been resolved". The "serious problem" I was referring to did not involve any inappropriate behavior on the part of Mr. Chapman towards any members of any congregation, and it certainly did not involve any immoral or illegal acts on the part of Mr. Chapman.

* * * * * *

Moreover, Fink's affidavit dated December 6, 2002 states:

> "Prior to the lawsuit commenced by the plaintiff in Massachusetts, I knew of no allegations, complaints, charges or claims concerning Mr. Chapman's conduct, let alone any claim or allegation that he engaged in any purported 'inappropriate behavior toward female members of the Church, including minors' as alleged in the complaint filed in this action."

Reverend Fink Aff. 56.1 Ex. K ¶ 6.

Defendants show that "on or about July 27, 1977, Mr. Chapman submitted a letter *335 informing Mr. Fink of his decision to resign from the pastorate of the Laurelton [New York] parish. The reason given for his resignation was due to a change in the ethnic [racial] makeup of the parishioners." See Doc. 11, Exhibit E, ¶ 3.

Because there is no evidence of notice which would support the existence of a duty to disclose, there is no negligence. Because, as noted earlier, these Defendants lack the power to remove a Pastor from a Congregation, there is no claim for negligent retention.

For the foregoing reasons, the motion is granted. The Clerk shall file a final judgment.

SO ORDERED.

269 F.Supp.2d 328

END OF DOCUMENT

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

BLUEBIRD (888) 477-0700 www.bluebirdonline.com
OFFICE SUPPLIES

EXHIBIT 18

110 S.Ct. 1595
108 L.Ed.2d 876, 58 USLW 4433, 52 Fair Empl.Prac.Cas. (BNA) 855, 53 Empl. Prac. Dec. P 39,826, Unempl.Ins.Rep. (CCH) P 21,933
(Cite as: 494 U.S. 872, 110 S.Ct. 1595)

Briefs and Other Related Documents

Supreme Court of the United States

EMPLOYMENT DIVISION, DEPARTMENT OF HUMAN RESOURCES OF OREGON, et al., Petitioners
v.
Alfred L. SMITH et al.

No. 88-1213.

Argued Nov. 6, 1989.
Decided April 17, 1990.
Rehearing Denied June 4, 1990.
See 496 U.S. 913, 110 S.Ct. 2605.

Claimants sought review of determination that their religious use of peyote, which resulted in their dismissal from employment, was "misconduct" disqualifying them from receipt of Oregon unemployment compensation benefits. In one case, the Oregon Court of Appeals, 75 Or.App. 764, 709 P.2d 246, reversed and remanded. The Oregon Supreme Court, 301 Or. 209, 721 P.2d 445, affirmed as modified. In the second case, the Oregon Court of Appeals, 75 Or.App. 735, 707 P.2d 1274, reversed. The Oregon Supreme Court, 301 Or. 221, 721 P.2d 451, affirmed as modified and remanded. Petition for writ of certiorari was granted. The Supreme Court, Justice Steven's, 485 U.S. 660, 108 S.Ct. 1444, 99 L.Ed.2d 753, vacated judgment and remanded for determination whether sacramental peyote use was proscribed by state's controlled substance law. On remand, the Oregon Supreme Court, 307 Or. 68, 763 P.2d 146, held that sacramental peyote use violated state drug laws, but concluded that prohibition was nonetheless invalid under free exercise clause. The Supreme Court, Scalia, J., held that: (1) free exercise clause did not prohibit application of Oregon drug laws to ceremonial ingestion of peyote, and (2) thus state could, consistent with free exercise clause, deny claimants unemployment compensation for work-related misconduct based on use of drug.

Reversed.

Justice O'Connor filed opinion concurring in judgment, in which opinion Justices Brennan, Marshall and Blackmun joined as to Parts I and II only.

Justice Blackmun filed dissenting opinion, in which Justices Brennan and Marshall join.

Opinion on remand, 310 Or. 376, 799 P.2d 148.

West Headnotes

[1] Constitutional Law ⇐84.1
92k84.1 Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 92k84(1))

Free exercise of religion includes right to believe and profess whatever religious doctrine one desires. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 1.

[2] Constitutional Law ⇐84.1
92k84.1 Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 92k84(1))

Government may not compel affirmation of religious belief, punish expression of religious doctrine it believes to be false, impose special disabilities on basis of religious views or religious status, or lend its power to one or other side in controversies over religious authority or dogma. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 1.

[3] Constitutional Law ⇐84.5(1)
92k84.5(1) Most Cited Cases

Although state would be prohibiting free exercise of religion in violation of free exercise clause if it sought to ban religious acts or abstentions only when they were engaged in for religious reasons, or only because of religious belief that they displayed, right of free exercise does not relieve individual of obligation to comply with valid or neutral law of general applicability on ground that law proscribes, or requires, conduct that is contrary to his religious practice, as long as law does not violate other constitutional protections. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 1.

[4] Constitutional Law ⇐84.5(1)
92k84.5(1) Most Cited Cases

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

[4] Constitutional Law ⇐84.5(12)
92k84.5(12) Most Cited Cases

Exemption from generally applicable, religion-neutral laws that have effect of burdening particular religious practice cannot be evaluated under balancing test of Sherbert, which was developed in unemployment compensation context and under which governmental actions that substantially burden religious practice must be justified by compelling governmental interest, nor is it possible to require "compelling governmental interest" only when conduct prohibited is essential to individual's religion, since such inquiry would require judges to determine "centrality" of religious beliefs in applying compelling interest test in free exercise field. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 1.

[5] Constitutional Law ⇐84.5(1)
92k84.5(1) Most Cited Cases

Although states may make nondiscriminatory religious practice exemption to drug law, such exemption is not constitutionally required. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 1.

[6] Constitutional Law ⇐84.5(19)
92k84.5(19) Most Cited Cases

[6] Social Security and Public Welfare ⇐388.5
356Ak388.5 Most Cited Cases

State of Oregon could, consistent with free exercise clause, deny claimants unemployment compensation benefits on ground of misconduct for dismissal from drug counseling positions resulting from their sacramental use of drug peyote at ceremony of Native American church, since ingestion of peyote was illegal under Oregon criminal laws and that prohibition was constitutional. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 1.

*1596 Syllabus [FN*]

FN* The syllabus constitutes no part of the opinion of the Court but has been prepared by the Reporter of Decisions for the convenience of the reader. See United States v. Detroit Lumber Co., 200 U.S. 321, 337, 26 S.Ct. 282, 237, 50 L.Ed. 499.

872 Respondents Smith and Black were fired by a private drug rehabilitation organization because they ingested peyote, a hallucinogenic drug, for sacramental purposes at a ceremony of their Native American Church. Their applications for unemployment compensation were denied by the State of Oregon under a state law disqualifying employees discharged for work-related "misconduct." Holding that the denials violated respondents' First Amendment free exercise rights, the State Court of Appeals reversed. The State Supreme Court affirmed, but this Court vacated the judgment and remanded for a determination whether sacramental peyote use is proscribed by the State's controlled substance law, which makes it a felony to knowingly or intentionally possess the drug. Pending that determination, the Court refused to decide whether such use is protected by the Constitution. On remand, the State Supreme Court held that sacramental peyote use violated, and was not excepted from, the state-law prohibition, but concluded that that prohibition was invalid under the Free Exercise Clause.

Held: The Free Exercise Clause permits the State to prohibit sacramental peyote use and thus to deny unemployment benefits to persons discharged for such use. Pp. 1598-1606.

(a) Although a State would be "prohibiting the free exercise [of religion]" in violation of the Clause if it sought to ban the performance of (or abstention from) physical acts solely because of their religious motivation, the Clause does not relieve an individual of the obligation to comply with a law that incidentally forbids (or requires) the performance of an act that his religious belief requires (or forbids) if the law is not specifically directed to religious practice and is otherwise constitutional as applied to those who engage in the specified act for nonreligious reasons. See, e.g., Reynolds v. United States, 98 U.S. 145, 166-167, 25 L.Ed. 244. The only decisions in which this Court has held that the First Amendment bars application of a neutral, generally applicable law to religiously motivated action are distinguished *1597 on the ground that they involved not the Free Exercise Clause alone, but that Clause in conjunction with other constitutionalprotections. 873 See, e.g., Cantwell v. Connecticut, 310 U.S. 296, 304-307, 60 S.Ct. 900, 903-905, 84 L.Ed.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

1213; Wisconsin v. Yoder, 406 U.S. 205, 92 S.Ct. 1526, 32 L.Ed.2d 15. Pp. 1598-1602.

(b) Respondents' claim for a religious exemption from the Oregon law cannot be evaluated under the balancing test set forth in the line of cases following Sherbert v. Verner, 374 U.S. 398, 402-403, 83 S.Ct. 1790, 1792-1794, 10 L.Ed.2d 965, whereby governmental actions that substantially burden a religious practice must be justified by a "compelling governmental interest." That test was developed in a context--unemployment compensation eligibility rules--that lent itself to individualized governmental assessment of the reasons for the relevant conduct. The test is inapplicable to an across-the-board criminal prohibition on a particular form of conduct. A holding to the contrary would create an extraordinary right to ignore generally applicable laws that are not supported by "compelling governmental interest" on the basis of religious belief. Nor could such a right be limited to situations in which the conduct prohibited is "central" to the individual's religion, since that would enmesh judges in an impermissible inquiry into the centrality of particular beliefs or practices to a faith. Cf. Hernandez v. Commissioner, 490 U.S. 680, 699, 109 S.Ct. 2136, 2148-2149, 104 L.Ed.2d 766. Thus, although it is constitutionally permissible to exempt sacramental peyote use from the operation of drug laws, it is not constitutionally required. Pp. 1602-1606.

307 Or. 68, 763 P.2d 146, reversed.

SCALIA, J., delivered the opinion of the Court, in which REHNQUIST, C.J., and WHITE, STEVENS, and KENNEDY, JJ., joined. O'CONNOR, J., filed an opinion concurring in the judgment, in Parts I and II of which BRENNAN, MARSHALL, and BLACKMUN, JJ., joined without concurring in the judgment, post, p. 1606. BLACKMUN, J., filed a dissenting opinion, in which BRENNAN and MARSHALL, JJ., joined, post, p. 1615.

Dave Frohnmayer, Attorney General of Oregon, argued the cause for petitioners. With him on the briefs were James E. Mountain, Jr., Deputy Attorney General, Virginia L. Linder, Solicitor General, and Michael D. Reynolds, Assistant Solicitor General.

Craig J. Dorsay argued the cause and filed briefs for respondents.*

* Briefs of amici curiae urging affirmance were filed for the American Civil Liberties Union et al. by Steven R. Shapiro and John A. Powell; for the American Jewish Congress by Amy Adelson, Lois C. Waldman, and Marc D. Stern; for the Association on American Indian Affairs et al. by Steven C. Moore and Jack Trope; and for the Council on Religious Freedom by Lee Boothby and Robert W. Nixon.

874 Justice SCALIA delivered the opinion of the Court.

This case requires us to decide whether the Free Exercise Clause of the First Amendment permits the State of Oregon to include religiously inspired peyote use within the reach of its general criminal prohibition on use of that drug, and thus permits the State to deny unemployment benefits to persons dismissed from their jobs because of such religiously inspired use.

I

Oregon law prohibits the knowing or intentional possession of a "controlled substance" unless the substance has been prescribed by a medical practitioner. Ore.Rev.Stat. § 475.992(4) (1987). The law defines "controlled substance" as a drug classified in Schedules I through V of the Federal Controlled Substances Act, 21 U.S.C. §§ 811-812, as modified by the State Board of Pharmacy. Ore.Rev.Stat. § 475.005(6) (1987). Persons who violate this provision by possessing a controlled substance listed on Schedule I are "guilty of a Class B felony." § 475.992(4)(a). As compiled by the State Board of Pharmacy under its statutory authority, see, § 475.035, Schedule I contains the drug peyote, a hallucinogen derived from the plant Lophophora williamsii Lemaire. Ore.Admin.Rule 855-80-021(3)(s) (1988).

Respondents Alfred Smith and Galen Black (hereinafter respondents) were fired from their jobs with a private drug rehabilitation organization because they ingested peyote for sacramental purposes at a ceremony of the Native American Church, of which 1598 both are members. When respondents applied to petitioner Employment Division (hereinafter petitioner) for unemployment compensation, they were determined to be ineligible for benefits because they had been discharged for work-related "misconduct." The Oregon Court of Appeals reversed that determination, holding that the denial of benefits violated respondents' free exercise rights under the First Amendment.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

*875 On appeal to the Oregon Supreme Court, petitioner argued that the denial of benefits was permissible because respondents' consumption of peyote was a crime under Oregon law. The Oregon Supreme Court reasoned, however, that the criminality of respondents' peyote use was irrelevant to resolution of their constitutional claim--since the purpose of the "misconduct" provision under which respondents had been disqualified was not to enforce the State's criminal laws but to preserve the financial integrity of the compensation fund, and since that purpose was inadequate to justify the burden that disqualification imposed on respondents' religious practice. Citing our decisions in Sherbert v. Verner, 374 U.S. 398, 83 S.Ct. 1790, 10 L.Ed.2d 965 (1963), and Thomas v. Review Bd., Indiana Employment Security Div., 450 U.S. 707, 101 S.Ct. 1425, 67 L.Ed.2d 624 (1981), the court concluded that respondents were entitled to payment of unemployment benefits. Smith v. Employment Div., Dept. of Human Resources, 301 Or. 209, 217-219, 721 P.2d 445, 449-450 (1986). We granted certiorari. 480 U.S. 916, 107 S.Ct. 1368, 94 L.Ed.2d 684 (1987).

Before this Court in 1987, petitioner continued to maintain that the illegality of respondents' peyote consumption was relevant to their constitutional claim. We agreed, concluding that "if a State has prohibited through its criminal laws certain kinds of religiously motivated conduct without violating the First Amendment, it certainly follows that it may impose the lesser burden of denying unemployment compensation benefits to persons who engage in that conduct." Employment Div., Dept. of Human Resources of Oregon v. Smith, 485 U.S. 660, 670, 108 S.Ct. 1444, 1450, 99 L.Ed.2d 753 (1988) (Smith I). We noted, however, that the Oregon Supreme Court had not decided whether respondents' sacramental use of peyote was in fact proscribed by Oregon's controlled substance law, and that this issue was a matter of dispute between the parties. Being "uncertain about the legality of the religious use of peyote in Oregon," we determined that it would not be "appropriate for us to decide whether the practice is protected by the Federal Constitution." Id., at 673, 108 S.Ct., at 1452. Accordingly, we *876 vacated the judgment of the Oregon Supreme Court and remanded for further proceedings. Id., at 674, 108 S.Ct., at 1452.

On remand, the Oregon Supreme Court held that respondents' religiously inspired use of peyote fell within the prohibition of the Oregon statute, which "makes no exception for the sacramental use" of the drug. 307 Or. 68, 72-73, 763 P.2d 146, 148 (1988). It then considered whether that prohibition was valid under the Free Exercise Clause, and concluded that it was not. The court therefore reaffirmed its previous ruling that the State could not deny unemployment benefits to respondents for having engaged in that practice.

We again granted certiorari. 489 U.S. 1077, 109 S.Ct. 1526, 103 L.Ed.2d 832 (1989).

II

Respondents' claim for relief rests on our decisions in Sherbert v. Verner, supra, Thomas v. Review Bd. of Indiana Employment Security Div., supra, and Hobbie v. Unemployment Appeals Comm'n of Florida, 480 U.S. 136, 107 S.Ct. 1046, 94 L.Ed.2d 190 (1987), in which we held that a State could not condition the availability of unemployment insurance on an individual's willingness to forgo conduct required by his religion. As we observed in Smith I, however, the conduct at issue in those cases was not prohibited by law. We held that distinction to be critical, for "if Oregon does prohibit the religious 1599 use of peyote, and if that prohibition is consistent with the Federal Constitution, there is no federal right to engage in that conduct in Oregon," and "the State is free to withhold unemployment compensation from respondents for engaging in work-related misconduct, despite its religious motivation." 485 U.S., at 672, 108 S.Ct., at 1451. Now that the Oregon Supreme Court has confirmed that Oregon does prohibit the religious use of peyote, we proceed to consider whether that prohibition is permissible under the Free Exercise Clause.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

A

[1][2] The Free Exercise Clause of the First Amendment, which has been made applicable to the States by incorporation into *877 the Fourteenth Amendment, see Cantwell v. Connecticut, 310 U.S. 296, 303, 60 S.Ct. 900, 903, 84 L.Ed. 1213 (1940), provides that "Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof.... " U.S. Const., Amdt. 1 (emphasis added.) The free exercise of religion means, first and foremost, the right to believe and profess whatever religious doctrine one desires. Thus, the First Amendment obviously excludes all "governmental regulation of religious beliefs as such." Sherbert v. Verner, supra, 374 U.S., at 402, 83 S.Ct., at 1793. The government may not compel affirmation of religious belief, see Torcaso v. Watkins, 367 U.S. 488, 81 S.Ct. 1680, 6 L.Ed.2d 982 (1961), punish the expression of religious doctrines it believes to be false, United States v. Ballard, 322 U.S. 78, 86-88, 64 S.Ct. 882, 886-87, 88 L.Ed. 1148 (1944), impose special disabilities on the basis of religious views or religious status, see McDaniel v. Paty, 435 U.S. 618, 98 S.Ct. 1322, 55 L.Ed.2d 593 (1978); Fowler v. Rhode Island, 345 U.S. 67, 69, 73 S.Ct. 526, 527, 97 L.Ed. 828 (1953); cf. Larson v. Valente, 456 U.S. 228, 245, 102 S.Ct. 1673, 1683-84, 72 L.Ed.2d 33 (1982), or lend its power to one or the other side in controversies over religious authority or dogma, see Presbyterian Church in U.S. v. Mary Elizabeth Blue Hull Memorial Presbyterian Church, 393 U.S. 440, 445 452, 89 S.Ct. 601, 604-608, 21 L.Ed.2d 658 (1969); Kedroff v. St. Nicholas Cathedral, 344 U.S. 94, 95-119, 73 S.Ct. 143, 143-56, 97 L.Ed. 120 (1952); Serbian Eastern Orthodox Diocese v. Milivojevich, 426 U.S. 696, 708-725, 96 S.Ct. 2372, 2380-2388, 49 L.Ed.2d 151 (1976).

[3] But the "exercise of religion" often involves not only belief and profession but the performance of (or abstention from) physical acts: assembling with others for a worship service, participating in sacramental use of bread and wine, proselytizing, abstaining from certain foods or certain modes of transportation. It would be true, we think (though no case of ours has involved the point), that a State would be "prohibiting the free exercise [of religion]" if it sought to ban such acts or abstentions only when they are engaged in for religious reasons, or only because of the religious belief that they display. It would doubtless be unconstitutional, for example, to ban the casting of "statues that are to be used *878 for worship purposes," or to prohibit bowing down before a golden calf.

Respondents in the present case, however, seek to carry the meaning of "prohibiting the free exercise [of religion]" one large step further. They contend that their religious motivation for using peyote places them beyond the reach of a criminal law that is not specifically directed at their religious practice, and that is concededly constitutional as applied to those who use the drug for other reasons. They assert, in other words, that "prohibiting the free exercise [of religion]" includes requiring any individual to observe a generally applicable law that requires (or forbids) the performance of an act that his religious belief forbids (or requires). As a textual matter, we do not think the words must be given that meaning. It is no more necessary to regard the collection of a general tax, for example, as "prohibiting the free exercise [of religion]" by those citizens who believe support of organized government to be sinful, than it is to regard the same tax as "abridging the freedom ... of the press" of 1600 those publishing companies that must pay the tax as a condition of staying in business. It is a permissible reading of the text, in the one case as in the other, to say that if prohibiting the exercise of religion (or burdening the activity of printing) is not the object of the tax but merely the incidental effect of a generally applicable and otherwise valid provision, the First Amendment has not been offended. Compare Citizen Publishing Co. v. United States, 394 U.S. 131, 139, 89 S.Ct. 927, 931-32, 22 L.Ed.2d 148 (1969) (upholding application of antitrust laws to press), with Grosjean v. American Press Co., 297 U.S. 233, 250-251, 56 S.Ct. 444, 449, 80 L.Ed. 660 (1936) (striking down license tax applied only to newspapers with weekly circulation above a specified level); see generally Minneapolis Star & Tribune Co. v. Minnesota Comm'r of Revenue, 460 U.S. 575, 581, 103 S.Ct. 1365, 1369-70, 75 L.Ed.2d 295 (1983).

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

Our decisions reveal that the latter reading is the correct one. We have never held that an individual's religious beliefs 879 excuse him from compliance with an otherwise valid law prohibiting conduct that the State is free to regulate. On the contrary, the record of more than a century of our free exercise jurisprudence contradicts that proposition. As described succinctly by Justice Frankfurter in Minersville School Dist. Bd. of Ed. v. Gobitis, 310 U.S. 586, 594-595, 60 S.Ct. 1010, 1012-1013, 84 L.Ed. 1375 (1940): "Conscientious scruples have not, in the course of the long struggle for religious toleration, relieved the individual from obedience to a general law not aimed at the promotion or restriction of religious beliefs. The mere possession of religious convictions which contradict the relevant concerns of a political society does not relieve the citizen from the discharge of political responsibilities (footnote omitted)." We first had occasion to assert that principle in Reynolds v. United States, 98 U.S. 145, 25 L.Ed. 244 (1879), where we rejected the claim that criminal laws against polygamy could not be constitutionally applied to those whose religion commanded the practice. "Laws," we said, "are made for the government of actions, and while they cannot interfere with mere religious belief and opinions, they may with practices.... Can a man excuse his practices to the contrary because of his religious belief? To permit this would be to make the professed doctrines of religious belief superior to the law of the land, and in effect to permit every citizen to become a law unto himself." Id., at 166-167.

Subsequent decisions have consistently held that the right of free exercise does not relieve an individual of the obligation to comply with a "valid and neutral law of general applicability on the ground that the law proscribes (or prescribes) conduct that his religion prescribes (or proscribes)." United States v. Lee, 455 U.S. 252, 263, n. 3, 102 S.Ct. 1051, 1058, n. 3, 71 L.Ed.2d 127 (1982) (STEVENS, J., concurring in judgment); see Minersville School Dist. Bd. of Ed. v. Gobitis, supra, 310 U.S., at 595, 60 S.Ct., at 1013 (collecting cases). In Prince v. Massachusetts, 321 U.S. 158, 64 S.Ct. 438, 88 L.Ed. 645 (1944), we held that a mother could be prosecuted under the child labor laws 880 for using her children to dispense literature in the streets, her religious motivation notwithstanding. We found no constitutional infirmity in "excluding [these children] from doing there what no other children may do." Id., at 171, 64 S.Ct., at 444. In Braunfeld v. Brown, 366 U.S. 599, 81 S.Ct. 1144, 6 L.Ed.2d 563 (1961) (plurality opinion), we upheld Sunday-closing laws against the claim that they burdened the religious practices of persons whose religions compelled them to refrain from work on other days. In Gillette v. United States, 401 U.S. 437, 461, 91 S.Ct. 828, 842, 28 L.Ed.2d 168 (1971), we sustained the military Selective Service System against the claim that it violated free exercise by conscripting persons who opposed a particular war on religious grounds.

*1601 Our most recent decision involving a neutral, generally applicable regulatory law that compelled activity forbidden by an individual's religion was United States v. Lee, 455 U.S., at 258-261, 102 S.Ct., at 1055-1057. There, an Amish employer, on behalf of himself and his employees, sought exemption from collection and payment of Social Security taxes on the ground that the Amish faith prohibited participation in governmental support programs. We rejected the claim that an exemption was constitutionally required. There would be no way, we observed, to distinguish the Amish believer's objection to Social Security taxes from the religious objections that others might have to the collection or use of other taxes. "If, for example, a religious adherent believes war is a sin, and if a certain percentage of the federal budget can be identified as devoted to war-related activities, such individuals would have a similarly valid claim to be exempt from paying that percentage of the income tax. The tax system could not function if denominations were allowed to challenge the tax system because tax payments were spent in a manner that violates their religious belief." Id., at 260, 102 S.Ct., at 1056-57. Cf. Hernandez v. Commissioner, 490 U.S. 680, 109 S.Ct. 2136, 104 L.Ed.2d 766 (1989) (rejecting free exercise challenge to payment of income taxes alleged to make religious activities more difficult).

881 The only decisions in which we have held that the First Amendment bars application of a neutral, generally applicable law to religiously motivated action have involved not the Free Exercise Clause alone, but the Free Exercise Clause in conjunction with other constitutional protections, such as freedom of speech and of the press, see Cantwell v. Connecticut, 310 U.S., at 304-307, 60 S.Ct., at 903-905 (invalidating a licensing system for religious and charitable solicitations under which the administrator had discretion to deny a license to any cause he deemed nonreligious); Murdock v. Pennsylvania, 319 U.S. 105, 63 S.Ct. 870, 87 L.Ed. 1292 (1943) (invalidating a flat tax on solicitation as applied to the dissemination of religious ideas); Follett v. McCormick, 321 U.S. 573, 64 S.Ct. 717, 88 L.Ed. 938 (1944) (same), or the right of parents, acknowledged in Pierce v. Society of Sisters, 268 U.S. 510, 45 S.Ct. 571, 69 L.Ed. 1070 (1925), to direct the education of their children, see Wisconsin v. Yoder, 406 U.S. 205, 92 S.Ct. 1526, 32 L.Ed.2d 15 (1972). (invalidating compulsory school-attendance laws as applied to Amish parents who refused on religious grounds to send their children to school). [FN1] 882 Some of our cases prohibiting compelled expression, decided exclusively upon free speech grounds, have also involved freedom of religion, cf. Wooley v. Maynard, 430 U.S. 705, 97 S.Ct. 1428, 51 L.Ed.2d 752 (1977) (invalidating compelled display of a license plate slogan that offended individual religious beliefs); West Virginia Bd. of Education v. Barnette, 319 U.S. 624, 63 S.Ct. 1178, 87 L.Ed. 1628 (1943) (invalidating*1602 compulsory flag salute statute challenged by religious objectors). And it is easy to envision a case in which a challenge on freedom of association grounds would likewise be reinforced by Free Exercise Clause concerns. Cf. Roberts v. United States Jaycees, 468 U.S. 609, 622, 104 S.Ct. 3244, 3251-52, 82 L.Ed.2d 462 (1984) ("An individual's freedom to speak, to worship, and to petition the government for the redress of grievances could not be vigorously protected from interference by the State [if] a correlative freedom to engage in group effort toward those ends were not also guaranteed").

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

> FN1. Both lines of cases have specifically adverted to the non-free- exercise principle involved. Cantwell, for example, observed that "[t]he fundamental law declares the interest of the United States that the free exercise of religion be not prohibited and that freedom to communicate information and opinion be not abridged." 310 U.S., at 307, 60 S.Ct., at 905. Murdock said:
>
> "We do not mean to say that religious groups and the press are free from all financial burdens of government.... We have here something quite different, for example, from a tax on the income of one who engages in religious activities or a tax on property used or employed in connection with those activities. It is one thing to impose a tax on the income or property of a preacher. It is quite another thing to exact a tax from him for the privilege of delivering a sermon.... Those who can deprive religious groups of their colporteurs can take from them a part of the vital power of the press which has survived from the Reformation." 319 U.S., at 112, 63 S.Ct., at 874.
>
> Yoder said that "the Court's holding in Pierce stands as a charter of the rights of parents to direct the religious upbringing of their children. And, when the interests of parenthood are combined with a free exercise claim of the nature revealed by this record, more than merely a 'reasonable relation to some purpose within the competency of the State' is required to sustain the validity of the State's requirement under the First Amendment." 406 U.S., at 233, 92 S.Ct., at 1542.

The present case does not present such a hybrid situation, but a free exercise claim unconnected with any communicative activity or parental right. Respondents urge us to hold, quite simply, that when otherwise prohibitable conduct is accompanied by religious convictions, not only the convictions but the conduct itself must be free from governmental regulation. We have never held that, and decline to do so now. There being no contention that Oregon's drug law represents an attempt to regulate religious beliefs, the communication of religious beliefs, or the raising of one's children in those beliefs, the rule to which we have adhered ever since Reynolds plainly controls. "Our cases do not at their farthest reach support the proposition that a stance of conscientious opposition relieves an objector from any colliding duty fixed by a democratic government." Gillette v. United States, supra, 401 U.S., at 461, 91 S.Ct., at 842.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

B

[4] Respondents argue that even though exemption from generally applicable criminal laws need not automatically be extended to religiously motivated actors, at least the claim for a 883 religious exemption must be evaluated under the balancing test set forth in Sherbert v. Verner, 374 U.S. 398, 83 S.Ct. 1790, 10 L.Ed.2d 965 (1963). Under the Sherbert test, governmental actions that substantially burden a religious practice must be justified by a compelling governmental interest. See id., at 402-403, 83 S.Ct., at 1792- 1794; see also Hernandez v. Commissioner, 490 U.S., at 699, 109 S.Ct., at 2148. Applying that test we have, on three occasions, invalidated state unemployment compensation rules that conditioned the availability of benefits upon an applicant's willingness to work under conditions forbidden by his religion. See Sherbert v. Verner, supra; Thomas v. Review Bd. of Indiana Employment Security Div., 450 U.S. 707, 101 S.Ct. 1425, 67 L.Ed.2d 624 (1981); Hobbie v. Unemployment Appeals Comm'n of Florida, 480 U.S. 136, 107 S.Ct. 1046, 94 L.Ed.2d 190 (1987). We have never invalidated any governmental action on the basis of the Sherbert test except the denial of unemployment compensation. Although we have sometimes purported to apply the Sherbert test in contexts other than that, we have always found the test satisfied, see United States v. Lee, 455 U.S. 252, 102 S.Ct. 1051, 71 L.Ed.2d 127 (1982); Gillette v. United States, 401 U.S. 437, 91 S.Ct. 828, 28 L.Ed.2d 168 (1971). In recent years we have abstained from applying the Sherbert test (outside the unemployment compensation field) at all. In Bowen v. Roy, 476 U.S. 693, 106 S.Ct. 2147, 90 L.Ed.2d 735 (1986), we declined to apply Sherbert analysis to a federal statutory scheme that required benefit applicants and recipients to provide their Social Security numbers. The plaintiffs in that case asserted that it would violate their religious beliefs to obtain and provide a Social Security number for their daughter. We held the statute's application to the plaintiffs valid regardless of whether it was necessary to effectuate a compelling interest. See 476 U.S., at 699-701, 106 S.Ct., at 2151-53. In Lyng v. Northwest Indian Cemetery Protective Assn., 485 U.S. 439, 108 S.Ct. 1319, 99 L.Ed.2d 534 (1988), we declined to apply Sherbert analysis to the Government's logging and road construction activities on lands used for religious purposes by several Native American Tribes, even though it was undisputed that the activities *1603 "could have devastating effects on traditional Indian religious practices," 485 U.S., at 451, 108 S.Ct., at 1326. 884 In Goldman v. Weinberger, 475 U.S. 503, 106 S.Ct. 1310, 89 L.Ed.2d 478 (1986), we rejected application of the Sherbert test to military dress regulations that forbade the wearing of yarmulkes. In O'Lone v. Estate of Shabazz, 482 U.S. 342, 107 S.Ct. 2400, 96 L.Ed.2d 282 (1987), we sustained, without mentioning the Sherbert test, a prison's refusal to excuse inmates from work requirements to attend worship services.

Even if we were inclined to breathe into Sherbert some life beyond the unemployment compensation field, we would not apply it to require exemptions from a generally applicable criminal law. The Sherbert test, it must be recalled, was developed in a context that lent itself to individualized governmental assessment of the reasons for the relevant conduct. As a plurality of the Court noted in Roy, a distinctive feature of unemployment compensation programs is that their eligibility criteria invite consideration of the particular circumstances behind an applicant's unemployment: "The statutory conditions [in Sherbert and Thomas] provided that a person was not eligible for unemployment compensation benefits if, 'without good cause,' he had quit work or refused available work. The 'good cause' standard created a mechanism for individualized exemptions." Bowen v. Roy, supra, 476 U.S., at 708, 106 S.Ct., at 2156 (opinion of Burger, C.J., joined by Powell and REHNQUIST, JJ.). See also Sherbert, supra, 374 U.S., at 401, n. 4, 83 S.Ct., at 1792, n. 4 (reading state unemployment compensation law as allowing benefits for unemployment caused by at least some "personal reasons"). As the plurality pointed out in Roy, our decisions in the unemployment cases stand for the proposition that where the State has in place a system of individual exemptions, it may not refuse to extend that system to cases of "religious hardship" without compelling reason. Bowen v. Roy, supra, 476 U.S., at 708, 106 S.Ct., at 2156-57.

Whether or not the decisions are that limited, they at least have nothing to do with an across-the-board criminal prohibition on a particular form of conduct. Although, as noted earlier, we have sometimes used the Sherbert test to analyze free exercise challenges to such laws, see 885United States v. Lee, supra,* 455 U.S., at 257-260, 102 S.Ct., at 1055-1057; Gillette v. United States, supra, 401 U.S., at 462, 91 S.Ct., at 842-43, we have never applied the test to invalidate one. We conclude today that the sounder approach, and the approach in accord with the vast majority of our precedents, is to hold the test inapplicable to such challenges. The government's ability to enforce generally applicable prohibitions of socially harmful conduct, like its ability to carry out other aspects of public policy, "cannot depend on measuring the effects of a governmental action on a religious objector's spiritual development." Lyng, supra, 485 U.S., at 451, 108 S.Ct., at 1326. To make an individual's obligation to obey such a law contingent upon the law's coincidence with his religious beliefs, except where the State's interest is "compelling"--permitting him, by virtue of his beliefs, "to become a law unto himself," Reynolds v. United States, 98 U.S., at 167--contradicts both constitutional tradition and common sense. [FN2]

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

FN2. Justice O'CONNOR seeks to distinguish Lyng v. Northwest Indian Cemetery Protective Assn., 485 U.S. 439, 108 S.Ct. 1319, 99 L.Ed.2d 534 (1988), and Bowen v. Roy, 476 U.S. 693, 106 S.Ct. 2147, 90 L.Ed.2d 735 (1986), on the ground that those cases involved the government's conduct of "its own internal affairs," which is different because, as Justice Douglas said in Sherbert, " 'the Free Exercise Clause is written in terms of what the government cannot do to the individual, not in terms of what the individual can exact from the government.' " Post, at 1611- 1612 (O'CONNOR, J., concurring in judgment), quoting Sherbert v. Verner, 374 U.S. 398, 412, 83 S.Ct. 1790, 1798, 10 L.Ed.2d 965 (1963) (Douglas, J., concurring). But since Justice Douglas voted with the majority in Sherbert, that quote obviously envisioned that what "the government cannot do to the individual" includes not just the prohibition of an individual's freedom of action through criminal laws but also the running of its programs (in Sherbert, state unemployment compensation) in such fashion as to harm the individual's religious interests. Moreover, it is hard to see any reason in principle or practicality why the government should have to tailor its health and safety laws to conform to the diversity of religious belief, but should not have to tailor its management of public lands, Lyng, supra, or its administration of welfare programs, Roy, supra.

*1604 The "compelling government interest" requirement seems benign, because it is familiar from other fields. But using it as the standard that must be met before the government may accord different treatment on the basis of race, see, *e.g., *886 Palmore v. Sidoti, 466 U.S. 429, 432, 104 S.Ct. 1879, 1881-82, 80 L.Ed.2d 421 (1984), or before the government may regulate the content of speech, see, e.g., Sable Communications of California v. FCC, 492 U.S. 115, 126, 109 S.Ct. 2829, 2836, 106 L.Ed.2d 93 (1989), is not remotely comparable to using it for the purpose asserted here. What it produces in those other fields--equality of treatment and an unrestricted flow of contending speech--are constitutional norms; what it would produce here--a private right to ignore generally applicable laws--is a constitutional anomaly. [FN3]

FN3. Justice O'CONNOR suggests that "[t]here is nothing talismanic about neutral laws of general applicability," and that all laws burdening religious practices should be subject to compelling-interest scrutiny because "the First Amendment unequivocally makes freedom of religion, like freedom from race discrimination and freedom of speech, a 'constitutional nor[m],' not an 'anomaly.' " Post, at 1612 (opinion concurring in judgment). But this comparison with other fields supports, rather than undermines, the conclusion we draw today. Just as we subject to the most exacting scrutiny laws that make classifications based on race, see Palmore v. Sidoti, 466 U.S. 429, 104 S.Ct. 1879, 80 L.Ed.2d 421 (1984), or on the content of speech, see Sable Communications of California v. FCC, 492 U.S. 115, 109

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

> S.Ct. 2829, 106 L.Ed.2d 93 (1989), so too we strictly scrutinize governmental classifications based on religion, see McDaniel v. Paty, 435 U.S. 618, 98 S.Ct. 1322, 55 L.Ed.2d 593 (1978); see also Torcaso v. Watkins, 367 U.S. 488, 81 S.Ct. 1680, 6 L.Ed.2d 982 (1961). But we have held that race-neutral laws that have the effect of disproportionately disadvantaging a particular racial group do not thereby become subject to compelling-interest analysis under the Equal Protection Clause, see Washington v. Davis, 426 U.S. 229, 96 S.Ct. 2040, 48 L.Ed.2d 597 (1976) (police employment examination); and we have held that generally applicable laws unconcerned with regulating speech that have the effect of interfering with speech do not thereby become subject to compelling-interest analysis under the First Amendment, see Citizen Publishing Co. v. United States, 394 U.S. 131, 139, 89 S.Ct. 927, 22 L.Ed.2d 148 (1969) (antitrust laws). Our conclusion that generally applicable, religion-neutral laws that have the effect of burdening a particular religious practice need not be justified by a compelling governmental interest is the only approach compatible with these precedents.

Nor is it possible to limit the impact of respondents' proposal by requiring a "compelling state interest" only when the conduct prohibited is "central" to the individual's religion. Cf. Lyng v. Northwest Indian Cemetery Protective Assn., 485 U.S., at 474-476, 108 S.Ct., at 1338-1339 (BRENNAN, J., dissenting). It is no 887 more appropriate for judges to determine the "centrality" of religious beliefs before applying a "compelling interest" test in the free exercise field, than it would be for them to determine the "importance" of ideas before applying the "compelling interest" test in the free speech field. What principle of law or logic can be brought to bear to contradict a believer's assertion that a particular act is "central" to his personal faith? Judging the centrality of different religious practices is akin to the unacceptable "business of evaluating the relative merits of differing religious claims." United States v. Lee, 455 U.S., at 263 n. 2, 102 S.Ct., at 1058 n. 2 (STEVENS, J., concurring). As we reaffirmed only last Term, "[i]t is not within the judicial ken to question the centrality of particular beliefs or practices to a faith, or the validity of particular litigants' interpretations of those creeds." Hernandez v. Commissioner, 490 U.S., at 699, 109 S.Ct., at 2148. Repeatedly and in many different contexts, we have warned that courts must not presume to determine the place of a particular belief in a religion or the plausibility of a religious claim. See, e.g., Thomas v. Review Bd. of Indiana Employment Security Div., 450 U.S., at 716, 101 S.Ct., at 1431; 1605Presbyterian Church in U.S. v. Mary Elizabeth Blue Hull Memorial Presbyterian Church, 393 U.S., at 450, 89 S.Ct., at 606-07; Jones v. Wolf, 443 U.S. 595, 602-606, 99 S.Ct. 3020, 3024-3027, 61 L.Ed.2d 775 (1979); United States v. Ballard, 322 U.S. 78, 85-87, 64 S.Ct. 882, 885-87, 88 L.Ed. 1148 (1944). [FN4]

> FN4. While arguing that we should apply the compelling interest test in this case, Justice O'CONNOR nonetheless agrees that "our determination of the constitutionality of Oregon's general criminal prohibition cannot, and should not, turn on the centrality of the particular religious practice at issue," post, at 1615 (opinion concurring in judgment). This means, presumably, that compelling interest scrutiny must be applied to generally applicable laws that regulate or prohibit any religiously motivated activity, no matter how unimportant to the claimant's religion. Earlier in her opinion, however, Justice O'CONNOR appears to contradict this, saying that the proper approach is "to determine whether the burden on the specific plaintiffs before us is constitutionally significant and whether the particular criminal interest asserted by the State before us is compelling." Post, at 1611. "Constitutionally significant burden" would seem to be "centrality" under another name. In any case, dispensing with a "centrality" inquiry is utterly unworkable. It would require, for example, the same degree of "compelling state interest" to impede the practice of > throwing rice at church weddings as to impede the practice of getting married in church. There is no way out of the difficulty that, if general laws are to be subjected to a "religious practice" exception, both the importance of the law at issue and the centrality of the practice at issue must reasonably be considered.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

> Nor is this difficulty avoided by Justice BLACKMUN's assertion that "although ... courts should refrain from delving into questions whether, as a matter of religious doctrine, a particular practice is 'central' to the religion, ... I do not think this means that the courts must turn a blind eye to the severe impact of a State's restrictions on the adherents of a minority religion." Post, at 1621 (dissenting opinion). As Justice BLACKMUN's opinion proceeds to make clear, inquiry into "severe impact" is no different from inquiry into centrality. He has merely substituted for the question "How important is X to the religious adherent?" the question "How great will be the harm to the religious adherent if X is taken away?" There is no material difference.

888 If the "compelling interest" test is to be applied at all, then, it must be applied across the board, to all actions thought to be religiously commanded. Moreover, if "compelling interest" really means what it says (and watering it down here would subvert its rigor in the other fields where it is applied), many laws will not meet the test. Any society adopting such a system would be courting anarchy, but that danger increases in direct proportion to the society's diversity of religious beliefs, and its determination to coerce or suppress none of them. Precisely because "we are a cosmopolitan nation made up of people of almost every conceivable religious preference," Braunfeld v. Brown, 366 U.S., at 606, 81 S.Ct., at 1147, and precisely because we value and protect that religious divergence, we cannot afford the luxury of deeming presumptively invalid, as applied to the religious objector, every regulation of conduct that does not protect an interest of the highest order. The rule respondents favor would open the prospect of constitutionally required religious exemptions from civic obligations of almost every conceivable kind--ranging from 889 compulsory military service, see, e.g., Gillette v. United States, 401 U.S. 437, 91 S.Ct. 828, 28 L.Ed.2d 168 (1971), to the payment of taxes, see, e.g., United States v. Lee, supra; to health and safety regulation such as manslaughter and child neglect laws, see, e.g., Funkhouser v. State, 763 P.2d 695 (Okla.Crim.App.1988), compulsory vaccination laws, see, e.g., Cude v. State, 237 Ark. 927, 377 S.W.2d 816 (1964), drug laws, see, e.g., Olsen v. Drug Enforcement Administration, 279 U.S.App.D.C. 1, 878 F.2d 1458 (1989), and traffic laws, see Cox v. New Hampshire, 312 U.S. 569, 61 S.Ct. 762, 85 L.Ed. 1049 (1941); to social welfare legislation such as minimum wage laws, see Tony and Susan Alamo Foundation v. Secretary of Labor, 471 U.S. 290, 105 S.Ct. 1953, 85 L.Ed.2d 278 (1985), child labor laws, see Prince v. Massachusetts, 321 U.S. 158, 64 S.Ct. 438, 88 L.Ed. 645 (1944), animal cruelty laws, see, e.g., Church of the Lukumi Babalu Aye Inc. v. City of Hialeah, 723 F.Supp. 1467 (SD Fla.1989), cf. State v. Massey, 229 N.C. 734, 51 S.E.2d 179, appeal dism'd, 336 U.S. 942, 69 S.Ct. 813, 93 L.Ed. 1099 (1949), environmental protection laws, *1606 see United States v. Little, 638 F.Supp. 337 (Mont.1986), and laws providing for equality of opportunity for the races, see, e.g., Bob Jones University v. United States, 461 U.S. 574, 603-604, 103 S.Ct. 2017, 2034-2035, 76 L.Ed.2d 157 (1983). The First Amendment's protection of religious liberty does not require this. [FN5]

> FN5. Justice O'CONNOR contends that the "parade of horribles" in the text only "demonstrates ... that courts have been quite capable of ... strik [ing] sensible balances between religious liberty and competing state interests." Post, at 1612-1613 (opinion concurring in judgment). But the cases we cite have struck "sensible balances" only because they have all applied the general laws, despite the claims for religious exemption. In any event, Justice O'CONNOR mistakes the purpose of our parade: it is not to suggest that courts would necessarily permit harmful exemptions from these laws (though they might), but to suggest > that courts would constantly be in the business of determining whether the "severe impact" of various laws on religious practice (to use Justice BLACKMUN's terminology post, at 1621) or the "constitutiona[l] significan[ce]" of the "burden on the specific plaintiffs" (to use Justice O'CONNOR's terminology post, at 1611) suffices to permit us to confer an exemption. It is a parade of horribles because it is horrible to contemplate that federal judges will regularly balance against the importance of general laws the significance of religious practice.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

[5] 890 Values that are protected against government interference through enshrinement in the Bill of Rights are not thereby banished from the political process. Just as a society that believes in the negative protection accorded to the press by the First Amendment is likely to enact laws that affirmatively foster the dissemination of the printed word, so also a society that believes in the negative protection accorded to religious belief can be expected to be solicitous of that value in its legislation as well. It is therefore not surprising that a number of States have made an exception to their drug laws for sacramental peyote use. See, e.g., Ariz.Rev.Stat.Ann. §§ 13-3402(B)(1)-(3) (1989); Colo.Rev.Stat. § 12-22-317(3) (1985); N.M.Stat.Ann. § 30-31-6(D) (Supp.1989). But to say that a nondiscriminatory religious-practice exemption is permitted, or even that it is desirable, is not to say that it is constitutionally required, and that the appropriate occasions for its creation can be discerned by the courts. It may fairly be said that leaving accommodation to the political process will place at a relative disadvantage those religious practices that are not widely engaged in; but that unavoidable consequence of democratic government must be preferred to a system in which each conscience is a law unto itself or in which judges weigh the social importance of all laws against the centrality of all religious beliefs.

* * *

[6] Because respondents' ingestion of peyote was prohibited under Oregon law, and because that prohibition is constitutional, Oregon may, consistent with the Free Exercise Clause, deny respondents unemployment compensation when their dismissal results from use of the drug. The decision of the Oregon Supreme Court is accordingly reversed.

It is so ordered.

891 Justice O'CONNOR, with whom Justice BRENNAN, Justice MARSHALL, and Justice BLACKMUN join as to Parts I and II, concurring in the judgment. [FN*]

> FN* Although Justice BRENNAN, Justice MARSHALL, and Justice BLACKMUN join Parts I and II of this opinion, they do not concur in the judgment.

Although I agree with the result the Court reaches in this case, I cannot join its opinion. In my view, today's holding dramatically departs from well-settled First Amendment jurisprudence, appears unnecessary to resolve the question presented, and is incompatible with our Nation's fundamental commitment to individual religious liberty.

I

At the outset, I note that I agree with the Court's implicit determination that the constitutional *1607 question upon which we granted review--whether the Free Exercise Clause protects a person's religiously motivated use of peyote from the reach of a State's general criminal law prohibition--is properly presented in this case. As the Court recounts, respondents Alfred Smith and Galen Black (hereinafter respondents) were denied unemployment compensation benefits because their sacramental use of peyote constituted work- related "misconduct," not because they violated Oregon's general criminal prohibition against possession of peyote. We held, however, in Employment Div., Dept. of Human Resources of Oregon v. Smith, 485 U.S. 660, 108 S.Ct. 1444, 99 L.Ed.2d 753 (1988) (Smith I), that whether a State may, consistent with federal law, deny unemployment compensation benefits to persons for their religious use of peyote depends on whether the State, as a matter of state law, has criminalized the underlying conduct. See id., at 670-672, 108 S.Ct., at 1450-51. The Oregon Supreme Court, on remand from this Court, concluded that "the Oregon statute against possession of controlled substances, which include peyote, makes no exception for the sacramental use of peyote." 307 Or. 68, 72-73, 763 P.2d 146, 148 (1988) (footnote omitted).

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

892 Respondents contend that, because the Oregon Supreme Court declined to decide whether the Oregon Constitution prohibits criminal prosecution for the religious use of peyote, see id., at 73, n. 3, 763 P.2d, at 148, n. 3, any ruling on the federal constitutional question would be premature. Respondents are of course correct that the Oregon Supreme Court may eventually decide that the Oregon Constitution requires the State to provide an exemption from its general criminal prohibition for the religious use of peyote. Such a decision would then reopen the question whether a State may nevertheless deny unemployment compensation benefits to claimants who are discharged for engaging in such conduct. As the case comes to us today, however, the Oregon Supreme Court has plainly ruled that Oregon's prohibition against possession of controlled substances does not contain an exemption for the religious use of peyote. In light of our decision in Smith I, which makes this finding a "necessary predicate to a correct evaluation of respondents' federal claim," 485 U.S., at 672, 108 S.Ct., at 1451, the question presented and addressed is properly before the Court.

II

The Court today extracts from our long history of free exercise precedents the single categorical rule that "if prohibiting the exercise of religion ... is ... merely the incidental effect of a generally applicable and otherwise valid provision, the First Amendment has not been offended." Ante, at 1600 (citations omitted). Indeed, the Court holds that where the law is a generally applicable criminal prohibition, our usual free exercise jurisprudence does not even apply. Ante, at 1603. To reach this sweeping result, however, the Court must not only give a strained reading of the First Amendment but must also disregard our consistent application of free exercise doctrine to cases involving generally applicable regulations that burden religious conduct.

893 A

The Free Exercise Clause of the First Amendment commands that "Congress shall make no law ... prohibiting the free exercise [of religion]." In Cantwell v. Connecticut, 310 U.S. 296, 60 S.Ct. 900, 84 L.Ed. 1213 (1940), we held that this prohibition applies to the States by incorporation into the Fourteenth Amendment and that it categorically forbids government regulation of religious beliefs. Id., at 303, 60 S.Ct., at 903. As the Court recognizes, however, the "free exercise " of religion often, if not invariably, requires the performance of (or abstention from) certain acts. Ante, at 1599; cf. 3 A New English Dictionary on Historical Principles 401-402 (J. Murray ed. 1897) (defining "exercise" to include "[t]he practice and performance of rites and ceremonies, worship, *1608 etc.; the right or permission to celebrate the observances (of a religion)" and religious observances such as acts of public and private worship, preaching, and prophesying). "[B]elief and action cannot be neatly confined in logic-tight compartments." Wisconsin v. Yoder, 406 U.S. 205, 220, 92 S.Ct. 1526, 32 L.Ed.2d 15 (1972). Because the First Amendment does not distinguish between religious belief and religious conduct, conduct motivated by sincere religious belief, like the belief itself, must be at least presumptively protected by the Free Exercise Clause.

The Court today, however, interprets the Clause to permit the government to prohibit, without justification, conduct mandated by an individual's religious beliefs, so long as that prohibition is generally applicable. Ante, at 1599. But a law that prohibits certain conduct--conduct that happens to be an act of worship for someone--manifestly does prohibit that person's free exercise of his religion. A person who is barred from engaging in religiously motivated conduct is barred from freely exercising his religion. Moreover, that person is barred from freely exercising his religion regardless of whether the law prohibits the conduct only when engaged in for religious reasons, only by members of that religion, or by all persons. It is difficult to deny that a law that prohibits 894 religiously motivated conduct, even if the law is generally applicable, does not at least implicate First Amendment concerns.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

The Court responds that generally applicable laws are "one large step" removed from laws aimed at specific religious practices. Ibid. The First Amendment, however, does not distinguish between laws that are generally applicable and laws that target particular religious practices. Indeed, few States would be so naive as to enact a law directly prohibiting or burdening a religious practice as such. Our free exercise cases have all concerned generally applicable laws that had the effect of significantly burdening a religious practice. If the First Amendment is to have any vitality, it ought not be construed to cover only the extreme and hypothetical situation in which a State directly targets a religious practice. As we have noted in a slightly different context, " '[s]uch a test has no basis in precedent and relegates a serious First Amendment value to the barest level of minimum scrutiny that the Equal Protection Clause already provides.' " Hobbie v. Unemployment Appeals Comm'n of Florida, 480 U.S. 136, 141-142, 107 S.Ct. 1046, 1049, 94 L.Ed.2d 190 (1987) (quoting Bowen v. Roy, 476 U.S. 693, 727, 106 S.Ct. 2147, 2166-67, 90 L.Ed.2d 735 (1986) (O'CONNOR, J., concurring in part and dissenting in part)).

To say that a person's right to free exercise has been burdened, of course, does not mean that he has an absolute right to engage in the conduct. Under our established First Amendment jurisprudence, we have recognized that the freedom to act, unlike the freedom to believe, cannot be absolute. See, e.g., Cantwell, supra, 310 U.S., at 304, 60 S.Ct., at 903-04; Reynolds v. United States, 98 U.S. 145, 161-167, 25 L.Ed. 244 (1879). Instead, we have respected both the First Amendment's express textual mandate and the governmental interest in regulation of conduct by requiring the government to justify any substantial burden on religiously motivated conduct by a compelling state interest and by means narrowly tailored to achieve that interest. See 895Hernandez v. Commissioner,* 490 U.S. 680, 699, 109 S.Ct. 2136, 2148, 104 L.Ed.2d 766 1989); Hobbie, supra, 480 U.S., at 141, 107 S.Ct., at 1049; United States v. Lee, 455 U.S. 252, 257-258 (1982); Thomas v. Review Bd. of Indiana Employment Security Div., 450 U.S. 707, 718, 101 S.Ct. 1425, 1432, 67 L.Ed.2d 624 (1981); McDaniel v. Paty, 435 U.S. 618, 626-629, 98 S.Ct. 1322, 1327-1329, 55 L.Ed.2d 593 (1978) (plurality opinion); Yoder, supra, 406 U.S., at 215, 92 S.Ct., at 1533; Gillette v. United States, 401 U.S. 437, 462, 91 S.Ct. 828, 842, 28 L.Ed.2d 168 (1971); Sherbert v. Verner, 374 U.S. 398, 403, 83 S.Ct. 1790, 1793-94, 10 L.Ed.2d 965 (1963); see also *1609 Bowen v. Roy, supra, 476 U.S., at 732, 106 S.Ct., at 2169 (opinion concurring in part and dissenting in part); West Virginia State Bd. of Ed. v. Barnette, 319 U.S. 624, 639, 63 S.Ct. 1178, 1186, 87 L.Ed. 1628 (1943). The compelling interest test effectuates the First Amendment's command that religious liberty is an independent liberty, that it occupies a preferred position, and that the Court will not permit encroachments upon this liberty, whether direct or indirect, unless required by clear and compelling governmental interests "of the highest order," Yoder, supra, 406 U.S., at 215, 92 S.Ct., at 1533. "Only an especially important governmental interest pursued by narrowly tailored means can justify exacting a sacrifice of First Amendment freedoms as the price for an equal share of the rights, benefits, and privileges enjoyed by other citizens." Roy, supra, 476 U.S., at 728, 106 S.Ct., at 2167 (opinion concurring in part and dissenting in part).

The Court attempts to support its narrow reading of the Clause by claiming that "[w]e have never held that an individual's religious beliefs excuse him from compliance with an otherwise valid law prohibiting conduct that the State is free to regulate." Ante, at 1600. But as the Court later notes, as it must, in cases such as Cantwell and Yoder we have in fact interpreted the Free Exercise Clause to forbid application of a generally applicable prohibition to religiously motivated conduct. See Cantwell, 310 U.S., at 304-307, 60 S.Ct., at 903-905; Yoder, 406 U.S., at 214-234, 92 S.Ct., at 1532-1542. Indeed, in Yoder we expressly rejected the interpretation the Court now adopts:

> "[O]ur decisions have rejected the idea that religiously grounded conduct is always outside the protection of the Free Exercise Clause. It is true that activities of individuals, even when religiously based, are often subject 896 to regulation by the States in the exercise of their undoubted power to promote the health, safety, and general welfare, or the Federal Government in the exercise of its delegated powers. But to > agree that religiously grounded conduct must often be subject to the broad police power of the State is not to deny that there are areas of conduct protected by the Free Exercise Clause of the First Amendment and thus beyond the power of the State to control, even under regulations of general applicability....

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

> "... A regulation neutral on its face may, in its application, nonetheless offend the constitutional requirement for government neutrality if it unduly burdens the free exercise of religion." Id., at 219-220, 92 S.Ct., at 1535- 36 (emphasis added; citations omitted).

The Court endeavors to escape from our decisions in Cantwell and Yoder by labeling them "hybrid" decisions, ante, at 1607, but there is no denying that both cases expressly relied on the Free Exercise Clause, see Cantwell, 310 U.S., at 303-307, 60 S.Ct., at 903-905; Yoder, supra, 406 U.S., at 219-229, 92 S.Ct., at 1535-1540, and that we have consistently regarded those cases as part of the mainstream of our free exercise jurisprudence. Moreover, in each of the other cases cited by the Court to support its categorical rule, ante, at 1600-1601, we rejected the particular constitutional claims before us only after carefully weighing the competing interests. See Prince v. Massachusetts, 321 U.S. 158, 168-170, 64 S.Ct. 438, 443-444, 88 L.Ed. 645 (1944) (state interest in regulating children's activities justifies denial of religious exemption from child labor laws); Braunfeld v. Brown, 366 U.S. 599, 608-609, 81 S.Ct. 1144, 1148-1149, 6 L.Ed.2d 563 (1961) (plurality opinion) (state interest in uniform day of rest justifies denial of religious exemption from Sunday closing law); Gillette, supra, 401 U.S., at 462, 91 S.Ct., at 842-43 (state interest in military affairs justifies denial of religious exemption from conscription laws); Lee, supra, 455 U.S., at 258-259, 102 S.Ct., at 1055-1056 (state interest in comprehensive Social Security system justifies denial of religious exemption from mandatory participation requirement). That we rejected the free exercise 897 claims in those cases hardly *1610 calls into question the applicability of First Amendment doctrine in the first place. Indeed, it is surely unusual to judge the vitality of a constitutional doctrine by looking to the win-loss record of the plaintiffs who happen to come before us.

B

Respondents, of course, do not contend that their conduct is automatically immune from all governmental regulation simply because it is motivated by their sincere religious beliefs. The Court's rejection of that argument, ante, at 1602, might therefore be regarded as merely harmless dictum. Rather, respondents invoke our traditional compelling interest test to argue that the Free Exercise Clause requires the State to grant them a limited exemption from its general criminal prohibition against the possession of peyote. The Court today, however, denies them even the opportunity to make that argument, concluding that "the sounder approach, and the approach in accord with the vast majority of our precedents, is to hold the [compelling interest] test inapplicable to" challenges to general criminal prohibitions. Ante, at 1603.

In my view, however, the essence of a free exercise claim is relief from a burden imposed by government on religious practices or beliefs, whether the burden is imposed directly through laws that prohibit or compel specific religious practices, or indirectly through laws that, in effect, make abandonment of one's own religion or conformity to the religious beliefs of others the price of an equal place in the civil community. As we explained in Thomas:

> "Where the state conditions receipt of an important benefit upon conduct proscribed by a religious faith, or where it denies such a benefit because of conduct mandated by religious belief, thereby putting substantial pressure on an adherent to modify his behavior and to violate his beliefs, a burden upon religion exists." 450 U.S., at 717-718, 101 S.Ct., at 1432.

898 See also Frazee v. Illinois Dept. of Employment Security, 489 U.S. 829, 832, 109 S.Ct. 1514, 1516-1517, 103 L.Ed.2d 914 (1989); Hobbie, 480 U.S., at 141, 107 S.Ct., at 1049. A State that makes criminal an individual's religiously motivated conduct burdens that individual's free exercise of religion in the severest manner possible, for it "results in the choice to the individual of either abandoning his religious principle or facing criminal prosecution." Braunfeld, supra, 366 U.S., at 605, 81 S.Ct., at 1147. I would have thought it beyond argument that such laws implicate free exercise concerns.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

Indeed, we have never distinguished between cases in which a State conditions receipt of a benefit on conduct prohibited by religious beliefs and cases in which a State affirmatively prohibits such conduct. The Sherbert compelling interest test applies in both kinds of cases. See, e.g., Lee, 455 U.S., at 257-260, 102 S.Ct., at 1055-1057 (applying Sherbert to uphold Social Security tax liability); Gillette, 401 U.S., at 462, 91 S.Ct., at 842-43 (applying Sherbert to uphold military conscription requirement); Yoder, 406 U.S., at 215-234, 92 S.Ct., at 1533-1538 (applying Sherbert to strike down criminal convictions for violation of compulsory school attendance law). As I noted in Bowen v. Roy :

> "The fact that the underlying dispute involves an award of benefits rather than an exaction of penalties does not grant the Government license to apply a different version of the Constitution....
> "... The fact that appellees seek exemption from a precondition that the Government attaches to an award of benefits does not, therefore, generate a meaningful distinction between this case and one where appellees seek an exemption from the Government's imposition of penalties upon them." 476 U.S., at 731-732, 106 S.Ct., at 2168-2169 (opinion concurring in part and dissenting in part). *1611 See also Hobbie, supra, 480 U.S., at 141-142, 107 S.Ct., at 1049-1050; Sherbert, 374 U.S., at 404, 83 S.Ct., at 1794. I would reaffirm that principle today: A neutral criminal law prohibiting conduct that a State may legitimately regulate is, if anything, more burdensome than a neutral civil 899 statute placing legitimate conditions on the award of a state benefit.

Legislatures, of course, have always been "left free to reach actions which were in violation of social duties or subversive of good order." Reynolds, 98 U.S., at 164; see also Yoder, supra, at 219-220, 92 S.Ct., at 1535- 1536; Braunfeld, 366 U.S., at 603-604, 81 S.Ct., at 1145-1146. Yet because of the close relationship between conduct and religious belief, "[i]n every case the power to regulate must be so exercised as not, in attaining a permissible end, unduly to infringe the protected freedom." Cantwell, 310 U.S., at 304, 60 S.Ct., at 903. Once it has been shown that a government regulation or criminal prohibition burdens the free exercise of religion, we have consistently asked the government to demonstrate that unbending application of its regulation to the religious objector "is essential to accomplish an overriding governmental interest," Lee, supra, 455 U.S., at 257-258, 102 S.Ct., at 1055, or represents "the least restrictive means of achieving some compelling state interest," Thomas, supra, 450 U.S., at 718, 101 S.Ct., at 1432. See, e.g., Braunfeld, supra, 366 U.S. at 607, 81 S.Ct., at 1148; Sherbert, supra, 374 U.S., at 406, 83 S.Ct., at 1795; Yoder, supra, 406 U.S., at 214-215, 92 S.Ct., at 1532-1533; Roy, 476 U.S., at 728-732, 106 S.Ct., at 2167-2169 (opinion concurring in part and dissenting in part). To me, the sounder approach--the approach more consistent with our role as judges to decide each case on its individual merits--is to apply this test in each case to determine whether the burden on the specific plaintiffs before us is constitutionally significant and whether the particular criminal interest asserted by the State before us is compelling. Even if, as an empirical matter, a government's criminal laws might usually serve a compelling interest in health, safety, or public order, the First Amendment at least requires a case-by-case determination of the question, sensitive to the facts of each particular claim. Cf. McDaniel, 435 U.S., at 628, n. 8, 98 S.Ct., at 1328, n. 8 (plurality opinion) (noting application of Sherbert to general criminal prohibitions and the "delicate balancing required by our decisions in" Sherbert and Yoder). Given the range of conduct that a State might legitimately make 900 criminal, we cannot assume, merely because a law carries criminal sanctions and is generally applicable, that the First Amendment never requires the State to grant a limited exemption for religiously motivated conduct.

Moreover, we have not "rejected" or "declined to apply" the compelling interest test in our recent cases. Ante, at 1602-1603. Recent cases have instead affirmed that test as a fundamental part of our First Amendment doctrine. See, e.g., Hernandez, 490 U.S., at 699, 109 S.Ct., at 2148-2149; Hobbie, supra, 480 U.S., at 141-142, 107 S.Ct., at 1049-1050 (rejecting Chief Justice Burger's suggestion in Roy, supra, 476 U.S., at 707-708, 106 S.Ct., at 2156-2157, that free exercise claims be assessed under a less rigorous "reasonable means" standard). The cases cited by the Court signal no retreat from our consistent adherence to the compelling interest test. In both Bowen v. Roy, supra, and Lyng v. Northwest Indian Cemetery Protective Assn., 485 U.S. 439, 108 S.Ct. 1319, 99 L.Ed.2d 534 (1988), for example, we expressly distinguished Sherbert on the ground that the First Amendment does not "require the Government itself to behave in ways that the individual believes will further his or her spiritual development.... The Free Exercise Clause simply cannot be understood to require the Government to conduct its own internal affairs in ways that comport with the religious beliefs of particular citizens." Roy, supra, 476 U.S., at 699, 106 S.Ct., at 2152; see Lyng, supra, 485 U.S., at 449, 108 S.Ct., at 1325. This distinction makes sense because "the Free Exercise Clause is written in *1612 terms of what the government cannot do to the individual, not in terms of what the individual can exact from the government." Sherbert, supra, 374 U.S., at 412, 83 S.Ct., at 1798 (Douglas, J., concurring). Because the case sub judice, like the other cases in which we have applied Sherbert, plainly falls into the former category, I would apply those established precedents to the facts of this case.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

Similarly, the other cases cited by the Court for the proposition that we have rejected application of the Sherbert test outside the unemployment compensation field, ante, at 1603, are distinguishable because they arose in the narrow, specialized contexts in which we have not traditionally required 901 the government to justify a burden on religious conduct by articulating a compelling interest. See Goldman v. Weinberger, 475 U.S. 503, 507, 106 S.Ct. 1310, 1313, 89 L.Ed.2d 478 (1986) ("Our review of military regulations challenged on First Amendment grounds is far more deferential than constitutional review of similar laws or regulations designed for civilian society"); O'Lone v. Estate of Shabazz, 482 U.S. 342, 349, 107 S.Ct. 2400, 2404, 96 L.Ed.2d 282 (1987) ("[P]rison regulations alleged to infringe constitutional rights are judged under a 'reasonableness' test less restrictive than that ordinarily applied to alleged infringements of fundamental constitutional rights") (citation omitted). That we did not apply the compelling interest test in these cases says nothing about whether the test should continue to apply in paradigm free exercise cases such as the one presented here.

The Court today gives no convincing reason to depart from settled First Amendment jurisprudence. There is nothing talismanic about neutral laws of general applicability or general criminal prohibitions, for laws neutral toward religion can coerce a person to violate his religious conscience or intrude upon his religious duties just as effectively as laws aimed at religion. Although the Court suggests that the compelling interest test, as applied to generally applicable laws, would result in a "constitutional anomaly," ante, at 1604, the First Amendment unequivocally makes freedom of religion, like freedom from race discrimination and freedom of speech, a "constitutional nor [m]," not an "anomaly." Ibid. Nor would application of our established free exercise doctrine to this case necessarily be incompatible with our equal protection cases. Cf. Rogers v. Lodge, 458 U.S. 613, 618, 102 S.Ct. 3272, 3276, 73 L.Ed.2d 1012 (1982) (race-neutral law that " 'bears more heavily on one race than another' " may violate equal protection) (citation omitted); Castaneda v. Partida, 430 U.S. 482, 492-495, 97 S.Ct. 1272, 1278-1281, 51 L.Ed.2d 498 (1977) (grand jury selection). We have in any event recognized that the Free Exercise Clause protects values distinct from those protected by the Equal Protection Clause. See Hobbie, 480 U.S., at 141-142, 107 S.Ct., at 1049. As the language of the 902 Clause itself makes clear, an individual's free exercise of religion is a preferred constitutional activity. See, e.g., McConnell, Accommodation of Religion, 1985 S.Ct.Rev. 1, 9 ("[T]he text of the First Amendment itself 'singles out' religion for special protections"); P. Kauper, Religion and the Constitution 17 (1964). A law that makes criminal such an activity therefore triggers constitutional concern--and heightened judicial scrutiny--even if it does not target the particular religious conduct at issue. Our free speech cases similarly recognize that neutral regulations that affect free speech values are subject to a balancing, rather than categorical, approach. See, e.g., United States v. O'Brien, 391 U.S. 367, 377, 88 S.Ct. 1673, 1679, 20 L.Ed.2d 672 (1968); Renton v. Playtime Theatres, Inc., 475 U.S. 41, 46-47, 106 S.Ct. 925, 928-929, 89 L.Ed.2d 29 (1986); cf. Anderson v. Celebrezze, 460 U.S. 780, 792-794, 103 S.Ct. 1564, 1571-1573, 75 L.Ed.2d 547 (1983) (generally applicable laws may impinge on free association concerns). The Court's parade of horribles, ante, at 1605-1606, not only fails as a reason for discarding the compelling interest 1613 test, it instead demonstrates just the opposite: that courts have been quite capable of applying our free exercise jurisprudence to strike sensible balances between religious liberty and competing state interests.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

Finally, the Court today suggests that the disfavoring of minority religions is an "unavoidable consequence" under our system of government and that accommodation of such religions must be left to the political process. Ante, at 1606. In my view, however, the First Amendment was enacted precisely to protect the rights of those whose religious practices are not shared by the majority and may be viewed with hostility. The history of our free exercise doctrine amply demonstrates the harsh impact majoritarian rule has had on unpopular or emerging religious groups such as the Jehovah's Witnesses and the Amish. Indeed, the words of Justice Jackson in West Virginia State Bd. of Ed. v. Barnette (overruling Minersville School Dist. v. Gobitis, 310 U.S. 586, 60 S.Ct. 1010, 84 L.Ed. 1375 (1940)) are apt:

> *903 "The very purpose of a Bill of Rights was to withdraw certain subjects from the vicissitudes of political controversy, to place them beyond the reach of majorities and officials and to establish them as legal principles to be applied by the courts. One's right to life, liberty, and property, to free speech, a free press, freedom of worship and assembly, and other fundamental rights may not be submitted to vote; they depend on the outcome of no elections." 319 U.S., at 638, 63 S.Ct., at 1185.

See also United States v. Ballard, 322 U.S. 78, 87, 64 S.Ct. 882, 886-87, 88 L.Ed. 1148 (1944) ("The Fathers of the Constitution were not unaware of the varied and extreme views of religious sects, of the violence of disagreement among them, and of the lack of any one religious creed on which all men would agree. They fashioned a charter of government which envisaged the widest possible toleration of conflicting views"). The compelling interest test reflects the First Amendment's mandate of preserving religious liberty to the fullest extent possible in a pluralistic society. For the Court to deem this command a "luxury," ante, at 1605, is to denigrate "[t]he very purpose of a Bill of Rights."

III

The Court's holding today not only misreads settled First Amendment precedent; it appears to be unnecessary to this case. I would reach the same result applying our established free exercise jurisprudence.

A

There is no dispute that Oregon's criminal prohibition of peyote places a severe burden on the ability of respondents to freely exercise their religion. Peyote is a sacrament of the Native American Church and is regarded as vital to respondents' ability to practice their religion. See O. Stewart, Peyote Religion: A History 327-336 (1987) (describing modern status of peyotism); E. Anderson, Peyote: The Divine Cactus 41-65 (1980) (describing peyote ceremonies); Teachings from *904 the American Earth: Indian Religion and Philosophy 96-104 (D. Tedlock & B. Tedlock eds. 1975) (same); see also People v. Woody, 61 Cal.2d 716, 721-722, 40 Cal.Rptr. 69, 73-74, 394 P.2d 813, 817-818 (1964). As we noted in Smith I, the Oregon Supreme Court concluded that "the Native American Church is a recognized religion, that peyote is a sacrament of that church, and that respondent's beliefs were sincerely held." 485 U.S., at 667, 108 S.Ct., at 1449. Under Oregon law, as construed by that State's highest court, members of the Native American Church must choose between carrying out the ritual embodying their religious beliefs and avoidance of criminal prosecution. That choice is, in my view, more than sufficient to trigger First Amendment scrutiny.

There is also no dispute that Oregon has a significant interest in enforcing laws that 1614 control the possession and use of controlled substances by its citizens. See, e.g., Sherbert, 374 U.S., at 403, 83 S.Ct., at 1793-94 (religiously motivated conduct may be regulated where such conduct "pose[s] some substantial threat to public safety, peace or order"); Yoder, 406 U.S., at 220, 92 S.Ct., at 1535 ("[A]ctivities of individuals, even when religiously based, are often subject to regulation by the States in the exercise of their undoubted power to promote the health, safety, and general welfare"). As we recently noted, drug abuse is "one of the greatest problems affecting the health and welfare of our population" and thus "one of the most serious problems confronting our society today." Treasury Employees v. Von Raab, 489 U.S. 656, 668, 674, 109 S.Ct. 1384, 1395, 103 L.Ed.2d 685 (1989). Indeed, under federal law (incorporated by Oregon law in relevant part, see Ore.Rev.Stat. § 475.005(6) (1987)), peyote is specifically regulated as a Schedule I controlled substance, which means that Congress has found that it has a high potential for abuse, that there is no currently accepted medical use, and that there is a lack of accepted safety for use of the drug under medical supervision. See 21 U.S.C. § 812(b)(1). See generally R. Julien, A Primer of Drug Action 149 (3d ed. 1981). In light of our recent decisions holding that the governmental 905 interests in the collection of income tax, Hernandez, 490 U.S., at 699-700, 109 S.Ct., at 2148-2149, a comprehensive Social Security system, see Lee, 455 U.S., at 258-259, 102 S.Ct., at 1055-1056, and military conscription, see Gillette, 401 U.S., at 460, 91 S.Ct., at 841, are compelling, respondents do not seriously dispute that Oregon has a compelling interest in prohibiting the possession of peyote by its citizens.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

B

Thus, the critical question in this case is whether exempting respondents from the State's general criminal prohibition "will unduly interfere with fulfillment of the governmental interest." Lee, supra, 455 U.S. at 259, 102 S.Ct., at 1056; see also Roy, 476 U.S., at 727, 106 S.Ct., at 2166 ("[T]he Government must accommodate a legitimate free exercise claim unless pursuing an especially important interest by narrowly tailored means"); Yoder, supra, 406 U.S., at 221, 92 S.Ct., at 1536; Braunfeld, 366 U.S., at 605-607, 81 S.Ct., at 1146-1148. Although the question is close, I would conclude that uniform application of Oregon's criminal prohibition is "essential to accomplish," Lee, supra, at 455 U.S., at 257, 102 S.Ct., at 1055, its overriding interest in preventing the physical harm caused by the use of a Schedule I controlled substance. Oregon's criminal prohibition represents that State's judgment that the possession and use of controlled substances, even by only one person, is inherently harmful and dangerous. Because the health effects caused by the use of controlled substances exist regardless of the motivation of the user, the use of such substances, even for religious purposes, violates the very purpose of the laws that prohibit them. Cf. State v. Massey, 229 N.C. 734, 51 S.E.2d 179 (denying religious exemption to municipal ordinance prohibiting handling of poisonous reptiles), appeal dism'd sub nom. Bunn v. North Carolina, 336 U.S. 942, 69 S.Ct. 813, 93 L.Ed. 1099 (1949). Moreover, in view of the societal interest in preventing trafficking in controlled substances, uniform application of the criminal prohibition at issue is essential to the effectiveness of Oregon's stated interest in preventing any possession of peyote. Cf. Jacobson v. 906 Massachusetts, 197 U.S. 11, 25 S.Ct. 358, 49 L.Ed. 643 (1905) (denying exemption from small pox vaccination requirement).

For these reasons, I believe that granting a selective exemption in this case would seriously impair Oregon's compelling interest in prohibiting possession of peyote by its citizens. Under such circumstances, the Free Exercise Clause does not require the State to accommodate respondents' religiously motivated conduct. See, e.g., Thomas, 450 U.S., at 719, 101 S.Ct., at 1432-33. Unlike in Yoder, where we noted that "[t]he record strongly indicates that accommodating the *1615 religious objections of the Amish by forgoing one, or at most two, additional years of compulsory education will not impair the physical or mental health of the child, or result in an inability to be self-supporting or to discharge the duties and responsibilities of citizenship, or in any other way materially detract from the welfare of society," 406 U.S., at 234, 92 S.Ct., at 1542; see also id., at 238-240, 92 S.Ct., at 1544-1545 (WHITE, J., concurring), a religious exemption in this case would be incompatible with the State's interest in controlling use and possession of illegal drugs.

Respondents contend that any incompatibility is belied by the fact that the Federal Government and several States provide exemptions for the religious use of peyote, see 21 CFR § 1307.31 (1989); 307 Or., at 73, n. 2, 763 P.2d, at 148, n. 2 (citing 11 state statutes that expressly exempt sacramental peyote use from criminal proscription). But other governments may surely choose to grant an exemption without Oregon, with its specific asserted interest in uniform application of its drug laws, being required to do so by the First Amendment. Respondents also note that the sacramental use of peyote is central to the tenets of the Native American Church, but I agree with the Court, ante, at 1604, that because " '[i]t is not within the judicial ken to question the centrality of particular beliefs or practices to a faith,' " quoting Hernandez, supra, at 699, 109 S.Ct., at 2148, our determination of the constitutionality of Oregon's general criminal prohibition cannot, and should not, turn on the centrality of the particular 907 religious practice at issue. This does not mean, of course, that courts may not make factual findings as to whether a claimant holds a sincerely held religious belief that conflicts with, and thus is burdened by, the challenged law. The distinction between questions of centrality and questions of sincerity and burden is admittedly fine, but it is one that is an established part of our free exercise doctrine, see Ballard, 322 U.S., at 85-88, 64 S.Ct., at 885-87, and one that courts are capable of making. See Tony and Susan Alamo Foundation v. Secretary of Labor, 471 U.S. 290, 303-305, 105 S.Ct.1953, 1962-1963, 85 L.Ed.2d 278 (1985).

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

I would therefore adhere to our established free exercise jurisprudence and hold that the State in this case has a compelling interest in regulating peyote use by its citizens and that accommodating respondents' religiously motivated conduct "will unduly interfere with fulfillment of the governmental interest." Lee, supra, 455 U.S., at 259, 102 S.Ct., at 1056. Accordingly, I concur in the judgment of the Court.

Justice BLACKMUN, with whom Justice BRENNAN and Justice MARSHALL join, dissenting.

This Court over the years, painstakingly has developed a consistent and exacting standard to test the constitutionality of a state statute that burdens the free exercise of religion. Such a statute may stand only if the law in general, and the State's refusal to allow a religious exemption in particular, are justified by a compelling interest that cannot be served by less restrictive means. [FN1]

FN1. See Hernandez v. Commissioner, 490 U.S. 680, 699, 109 S.Ct. 2136, 2149, 104 L.Ed.2d 766 (1989) ("The free exercise inquiry asks whether government has placed a substantial burden on the observation of a central religious belief or practice and, if so, whether a compelling governmental interest justifies the burden"); Hobbie v. Unemployment Appeals Comm'n of Fla., 480 U.S. 136, 141, 107 S.Ct. 1046, 1049, 94 L.Ed.2d 190 (1987) (state laws burdening religions "must be subjected to strict scrutiny and could be justified only by proof by the State of a compelling interest"); Bowen v. Roy, 476 U.S. 693, 732, 106 S.Ct. 2147, 2169, 90 L.Ed.2d 735 (1986) (O'CONNOR, J., concurring in part and dissenting in part) ("Our precedents have long required the Government to show that a compelling state interest is served by its refusal to grant a religious exemption"); United States v. Lee, 455 U.S. 252, 257-258, 102 S.Ct. 1051, 1055, 71 L.Ed.2d 127 (1982) ("The state may justify a limitation on religious liberty by showing that it is essential to accomplish an overriding governmental interest"); Thomas v. Review Bd. of Indiana Employment Security Div., 450 U.S. 707, 718, 101 S.Ct. 1425, 1432, 67 L.Ed.2d 624 (1981) ("The state may justify an inroad on religious liberty by showing that it is the least restrictive means of achieving some compelling state interest"); Wisconsin v. Yoder, 406 U.S. 205, 215, 92 S.Ct. 1526, 1533, 32 L.Ed.2d 15 (1972) ("[O]nly those interests of the highest order and those not otherwise served can overbalance legitimate claims to the free exercise of religion"); Sherbert v. Verner, 374 U.S. 398, 406, 83 S.Ct. 1790, 1795, 10 L.Ed.2d 965 (1963) (question is "whether some compelling state interest ... justifies the substantial infringement of appellant's First Amendment right").

*1616 *908 Until today, I thought this was a settled and inviolate principle of this Court's First Amendment jurisprudence. The majority, however, perfunctorily dismisses it as a "constitutional anomaly." Ante, at 1604. As carefully detailed in Justice O'CONNOR's concurring opinion, ante, p. 1606, the majority is able to arrive at this view only by mischaracterizing this Court's precedents. The Court discards leading free exercise cases such as Cantwell v. Connecticut, 310 U.S. 296, 60 S.Ct. 900, 84 L.Ed. 1213 (1940), and Wisconsin v. Yoder, 406 U.S. 205, 92 S.Ct. 1526, 32 L.Ed.2d 15 (1972), as "hybrid." Ante, at 1602. The Court views traditional free exercise analysis as somehow inapplicable to criminal prohibitions (as opposed to conditions on the receipt of benefits), and to state laws of general applicability (as opposed, presumably, to laws that expressly single out religious practices). Ante, at 1603-1604. The Court cites cases in which, due to various exceptional circumstances, we found strict scrutiny inapposite, to hint that the Court has repudiated that standard altogether. Ante, at 1602-1603. In short, it effectuates a wholesale overturning of settled law concerning the Religion Clauses of our Constitution. One hopes that the Court is aware of the consequences, and that its result is not a product of overreaction to the serious problems the country's drug crisis has generated.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

This distorted view of our precedents leads the majority to conclude that strict scrutiny of a state law burdening the free exercise of religion is a "luxury" that a well-ordered society 909 cannot afford, ante, at 1605, and that the repression of minority religions is an "unavoidable consequence of democratic government." Ante, at 1606. I do not believe the Founders thought their dearly bought freedom from religious persecution a "luxury," but an essential element of liberty--and they could not have thought religious intolerance "unavoidable," for they drafted the Religion Clauses precisely in order to avoid that intolerance.

For these reasons, I agree with Justice O'CONNOR's analysis of the applicable free exercise doctrine, and I join parts I and II of her opinion. [FN2] As she points out, "the critical question in this case is whether exempting respondents from the State's general criminal prohibition 'will unduly interfere with fulfillment of the governmental interest.' " Ante, at 1614, quoting United States v. Lee, 455 U.S. 252, 259, 102 S.Ct. 1051, 1056, 71 L.Ed.2d 127 (1982). I do disagree, however, with her specific answer to that question.

> FN2. I reluctantly agree that, in light of this Court's decision in Employment Division, Dept. of Human Resources of Ore. v. Smith, 485 U.S. 660, 108 S.Ct. 1444, 99 L.Ed.2d 753 (1988), the question on which certiorari was granted is properly presented in this case. I have grave doubts, however, as to the wisdom or propriety of deciding the constitutionality of a criminal prohibition which the State has not sought to enforce, which the State did not rely on in defending its denial of unemployment benefits before the state courts, and which the Oregon courts could, on remand, either invalidate on state constitutional grounds, or conclude that it remains irrelevant to Oregon's interest in administering its unemployment benefits program.
>
> It is surprising, to say the least, that this Court which so often prides itself about principles of judicial restraint and reduction of federal control over matters of state law would stretch its jurisdiction to the limit in order to reach, in this abstract setting, the constitutionality of Oregon's criminal prohibition of peyote use.

I

In weighing the clear interest of respondents Smith and Black (hereinafter respondents) in the free exercise of their religion *1617 against Oregon's asserted interest in enforcing its drug laws, it is important to articulate in precise terms the state interest involved. It is not the State's broad interest 910 in fighting the critical "war on drugs" that must be weighed against respondents' claim, but the State's narrow interest in refusing to make an exception for the religious, ceremonial use of peyote. See Bowen v. Roy, 476 U.S. 693, 728, 106 S.Ct. 2147, 2167, 90 L.Ed.2d 735 (1986) (O'CONNOR, J., concurring in part and dissenting in part) ("This Court has consistently asked the Government to demonstrate that unbending application of its regulation to the religious objector 'is essential to accomplish an overriding governmental interest,' " quoting Lee, 455 U.S., at 257-258, 102 S.Ct., at 1055); Thomas v. Review Bd. of Indiana Employment Security Div., 450 U.S. 707, 719, 101 S.Ct. 1425, 1432, 67 L.Ed.2d 624 (1981) ("focus of the inquiry" concerning State's asserted interest must be "properly narrowed"); Yoder, 406 U.S., at 221, 92 S.Ct., at 1536 ("Where fundamental claims of religious freedom are at stake," the Court will not accept a State's "sweeping claim" that its interest in compulsory education is compelling; despite the validity of this interest "in the generality of cases, we must searchingly examine the interests that the State seeks to promote ... and the impediment to those objectives that would flow from recognizing the claimed Amish exemption"). Failure to reduce the competing interests to the same plane of generality tends to distort the weighing process in the State's favor. See Clark, Guidelines for the Free Exercise Clause, 83 Harv.L.Rev. 327, 330-331 (1969) ("The purpose of almost any law can be traced back to one or another of the fundamental concerns of government: public health and safety, public peace and order, defense, revenue. To measure an individual interest directly against one of these rarified values inevitably makes the individual interest appear the less significant"); Pound, A Survey of Social Interests, 57 Harv.L.Rev. 1, 2 (1943) ("When it comes to weighing or valuing claims or demands with respect to other claims or demands, we must be careful to compare them on the same plane ... [or else] we may decide the question in advance in our very way of putting it").

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

The State's interest in enforcing its prohibition, in order to be sufficiently compelling to outweigh a free exercise claim, *911 cannot be merely abstract or symbolic. The State cannot plausibly assert that unbending application of a criminal prohibition is essential to fulfill any compelling interest, if it does not, in fact, attempt to enforce that prohibition. In this case, the State actually has not evinced any concrete interest in enforcing its drug laws against religious users of peyote. Oregon has never sought to prosecute respondents, and does not claim that it has made significant enforcement efforts against other religious users of peyote. [FN3] The State's asserted interest thus amounts only to the symbolic preservation of an unenforced prohibition. But a government interest in "symbolism, even symbolism for so worthy a cause as the abolition of unlawful drugs," Treasury Employees v. Von Raab, 489 U.S. 656, 687, 109 S.Ct. 1384, 1402, 103 L.Ed.2d 685 (1989) (SCALIA, J., dissenting), cannot suffice to abrogate the constitutional rights of individuals.

> FN3. The only reported case in which the State of Oregon has sought to prosecute a person for religious peyote use is State v. Soto, 21 Ore.App. 794, 537 P.2d 142 (1975), cert. denied, 424 U.S. 955, 96 S.Ct. 1431, 47 L.Ed.2d 361 (1976).

Similarly, this Court's prior decisions have not allowed a government to rely on mere speculation about potential harms, but have demanded evidentiary support for a refusal to allow a religious exception. See Thomas, 450 U.S., at 719, 101 S.Ct., at 1432 (rejecting State's reasons for refusing religious exemption, for lack of "evidence in the record"); Yoder, 406 U.S., at 224-229, 92 S.Ct., at 1537-38 (rejecting State's argument concerning the dangers of a religious exemption as speculative, and unsupported by the record); Sherbert v. Verner, 374 U.S. 398, 407, 83 S.Ct. 1790, 1795, 10 L.Ed.2d 965 (1963) 1618 ("[T]here is no proof whatever to warrant such fears ... as those which the [State] now advance[s]"). In this case, the State's justification for refusing to recognize an exception to its criminal laws for religious peyote use is entirely speculative.

The State proclaims an interest in protecting the health and safety of its citizens from the dangers of unlawful drugs. It offers, however, no evidence that the religious use of peyote *912 has ever harmed anyone. [FN4] The factual findings of other courts cast doubt on the State's assumption that religious use of peyote is harmful. See State v. Whittingham, 19 Ariz.App. 27, 30, 504 P.2d 950, 953 (1973) ("[T]he State failed to prove that the quantities of peyote used in the sacraments of the Native American Church are sufficiently harmful to the health and welfare of the participants so as to permit a legitimate intrusion under the State's police power"); People v. Woody, 61 Cal.2d 716, 722-723, 40 Cal.Rptr. 69, 74, 394 P.2d 813, 818 (1964) ("[A]s the Attorney General ... admits, ... the opinion of scientists and other experts is 'that peyote ... works no permanent deleterious injury to the Indian' ").

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

> FN4. This dearth of evidence is not surprising, since the State never asserted this health and safety interest before the Oregon courts; thus, there was no opportunity for factfinding concerning the alleged dangers of peyote use. What has now become the State's principal argument for its view that the criminal prohibition is enforceable against religious use of peyote rests on no evidentiary foundation at all.

The fact that peyote is classified as a Schedule I controlled substance does not, by itself, show that any and all uses of peyote, in any circumstance, are inherently harmful and dangerous. The Federal Government, which created the classifications of unlawful drugs from which Oregon's drug laws are derived, apparently does not find peyote so dangerous as to preclude an exemption for religious use. [FN5] Moreover, 913 other Schedule I drugs have lawful uses. See Olsen v. Drug Enforcement Admin., 279 U.S.App.D.C. 1, 6, n. 4, 878 F.2d 1458, 1463, n. 4 (medical and research uses of marijuana).

> FN5. See 21 CFR § 1307.31 (1989) ("The listing of peyote as a controlled substance in Schedule I does not apply to the nondrug use of peyote in bona fide religious ceremonies of the Native American Church, and members of the Native American Church so using peyote are exempt from registration. Any person who manufactures peyote for or distributes peyote to the Native American Church, however, is required to obtain registration annually and to comply with all other requirements of law"); see Olsen v. Drug Enforcement Admin., 279 U.S.App.D.C. 1, 6-7, 878 F.2d 1458, 1463-1464 (1989) (explaining DEA's rationale for the exception).
>
> Moreover, 23 States, including many that have significant Native American populations, have statutory or judicially crafted exemptions in their drug laws for religious use of peyote. See 307 Ore. 68, 73, n. 2, 763 P.2d 146, 148, n. 2 (1988) (case below). Although this does not prove that Oregon must have such an exception too, it is significant that these States, and the Federal Government, all find their (presumably compelling) interests in controlling the use of dangerous drugs compatible with an exemption for religious use of peyote. Cf. Boos v. Barry, 485 U.S. 312, 329, 108 S.Ct. 1157, 1168, 99 L.Ed.2d 333 (1988) (finding that an ordinance restricting picketing near a foreign embassy was not the least restrictive means of serving the asserted government interest; existence of an analogous, but more narrowly drawn, federal statute showed that "a less restrictive alternative is readily available").

The carefully circumscribed ritual context in which respondents used peyote is far removed from the irresponsible and unrestricted recreational use of unlawful drugs. [FN6] The Native American Church's internal restrictions on, and supervision of, its members' use of peyote substantially obviate the State's health and safety concerns. See Olsen, id., at 10, 878 F.2d, at 1467 (" 'The Administrator [of the Drug Enforcement Administration *1619 (DEA)] finds that ... the Native American Church's use of peyote is isolated to specific ceremonial occasions,' " and so " 'an accommodation can be made for a religious organization which uses peyote in circumscribed ceremonies' " (quoting DEA Final Order)); id., at 7, 878 F.2d, at 1464 ("[F]or members of the Native American Church, use of peyote outside the ritual is sacrilegious"); Woody, 61 Cal.2d, at 721, 394 P.2d, at 817 ("[T]o use peyote for nonreligious purposes is sacrilegious"); R. Julien, A Primer of Drug Action 148 (3d ed. 1981) ("[P]eyote is seldom abused by members of the Native American 914 Church"); Slotkin, The Peyote Way, in Teachings from the American Earth 96, 104 (D. Tedlock & B. Tedlock eds. 1975) ("[T]he Native American Church ... refuses to permit the presence of curiosity seekers at its rites, and vigorously opposes the sale or use of Peyote for non-sacramental purposes"); Bergman, Navajo Peyote Use: Its Apparent Safety, 128 Am.J. Psychiatry 695 (1971) (Bergman). [FN7] peyote seems closely analogous to the sacramental use of wine by the Roman Catholic Church. During Prohibition, the Federal Government exempted such use of wine from its general ban on possession and use of alcohol. See National Prohibition Act, Title II, § 3, 41 Stat. 308.

> FN6. In this respect, respondents' use of

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

However compelling the Government's then general interest in prohibiting the use of alcohol may have been, it could not plausibly have asserted an interest sufficiently compelling to outweigh Catholics' right to take communion.

FN7. The use of peyote is, to some degree, self-limiting. The peyote plant is extremely bitter, and eating it is an unpleasant experience, which would tend to discourage casual or recreational use. See State v. Whittingham, 19 Ariz.App. 27, 30, 504 P.2d 950, 953 (1973) (" '[P]eyote can cause vomiting by reason of its bitter taste' "); E. Anderson, Peyote: The Divine Cactus 161 (1980) ("[T]he eating of peyote usually is a difficult ordeal in that nausea and other unpleasant physical manifestations occur regularly. Repeated use is likely, therefore, only if one is a serious researcher or is devoutly involved in taking peyote as part of a religious ceremony"); Slotkin, The Peyote Way, in Teachings from the American Earth 96, 98 (D. Tedlock & B. Tedlock eds. 1975) ("[M]any find it bitter, inducing indigestion or nausea").

Moreover, just as in Yoder, the values and interests of those seeking a religious exemption in this case are congruent, to a great degree, with those the State seeks to promote through its drug laws. See Yoder, 406 U.S., at 224, 228-229, 92 S.Ct., at 1540 (since the Amish accept formal schooling up to 8th grade, and then provide "ideal" vocational education, State's interest in enforcing its law against the Amish is "less substantial than ... for children generally"); id., at 238, 92 S.Ct., at 1544 (WHITE, J., concurring). Not only does the church's doctrine forbid nonreligious use of peyote; it also generally advocates self-reliance, familial responsibility, and abstinence from alcohol. See Brief for Association on American Indian Affairs et al. as Amici Curiae 33-34 (the church's "ethical code" has four parts: brotherly love, care of family, self-reliance, and avoidance of alcohol (quoting from the church membership card)); Olsen, 279 U.S.App.D.C., at 7, 878 F.2d, at 1464 (the Native American Church, "for all purposes other than the special, stylized ceremony, reinforced the state's prohibition"); 915 Woody, 61 Cal.2d, at 721-722, n. 3, 394 P.2d, at 818, n. 3 ("[M]ost anthropological authorities hold Peyotism to be a positive, rather than negative, force in the lives of its adherents ... the church forbids the use of alcohol ..."). There is considerable evidence that the spiritual and social support provided by the church has been effective in combating the tragic effects of alcoholism on the Native American population. Two noted experts on peyotism, Dr. Omer C. Stewart and Dr. Robert Bergman, testified by affidavit to this effect on behalf of respondent Smith before the Employment Appeal Board. Smith Tr., Exh. 7; see also E. Anderson, Peyote: The Divine Cactus 165-166 (1980) (research by Dr. Bergman suggests " that the religious use of peyote seemed to be directed in an ego-strengthening direction with an emphasis on interpersonal relationships where each individual is assured of his own significance as well as the support of the group"; many people have " 'come through difficult crises with the help of this religion.... It provides real help in seeing themselves not as people whose place and way in the world is gone, but as people whose way can be strong enough to change and meet new challenges' " (quoting Bergman 698)); Pascarosa & Futterman, Ethnopsychedelic Therapy for Alcoholics: Observations in the Peyote Ritual of the Native American Church, 8 J. of Psychedelic Drugs, No. 3, p. 215 (1976) (religious peyote use has been helpful in overcoming alcoholism); Albaugh & Anderson, Peyote in the Treatment of Alcoholism among American Indians, 131 Am.J. Psychiatry 1247, 1249 (1974) ("[T]he *1620 philosophy, teachings, and format of the [Native American Church] can be of great benefit to the Indian alcoholic"); see generally O. Stewart, Peyote Religion 75 et seq. (1987) (noting frequent observations, across many tribes and periods in history, of correlation between peyotist religion and abstinence from alcohol). Far from promoting the lawless and irresponsible use of drugs, Native American Church members' spiritual

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

*916 code exemplifies values that Oregon's drug laws are presumably intended to foster.

The State also seeks to support its refusal to make an exception for religious use of peyote by invoking its interest in abolishing drug trafficking. There is, however, practically no illegal traffic in peyote. See Olsen, 279 U.S.App.D.C., at 6, 7, 878 F.2d, at 1463, 1467 (quoting DEA Final Order to the effect that total amount of peyote seized and analyzed by federal authorities between 1980 and 1987 was 19.4 pounds; in contrast, total amount of marijuana seized during that period was over 15 million pounds). Also, the availability of peyote for religious use, even if Oregon were to allow an exemption from its criminal laws, would still be strictly controlled by federal regulations, see 21 U.S.C. §§ 821-823 (registration requirements for distribution of controlled substances); 21 CFR § 1307.31 (1989) (distribution of peyote to Native American Church subject to registration requirements), and by the State of Texas, the only State in which peyote grows in significant quantities. See Texas Health & Safety Code Ann. § 481.111 (1990 pamphlet); Texas Admin.Code, Tit. 37, pt. 1, ch. 13, Controlled Substances Regulations, §§ 13.35-13.41 (1989); Woody, 61 Cal.2d, at 720, 394 P.2d, at 816 (peyote is "found in the Rio Grande Valley of Texas and northern Mexico"). Peyote simply is not a popular drug; its distribution for use in religious rituals has nothing to do with the vast and violent traffic in illegal narcotics that plagues this country.

Finally, the State argues that granting an exception for religious peyote use would erode its interest in the uniform, fair, and certain enforcement of its drug laws. The State fears that, if it grants an exemption for religious peyote use, a flood of other claims to religious exemptions will follow. It would then be placed in a dilemma, it says, between allowing a patchwork of exemptions that would hinder its law enforcement efforts, and risking a violation of the Establishment Clause by arbitrarily limiting its religious exemptions. This *917 argument, however, could be made in almost any free exercise case. See Lupu, Where Rights Begin: The Problem of Burdens on the Free Exercise of Religion, 102 Harv.L.Rev. 933, 947 (1989) ("Behind every free exercise claim is a spectral march; grant this one, a voice whispers to each judge, and you will be confronted with an endless chain of exemption demands from religious deviants of every stripe"). This Court, however, consistently has rejected similar arguments in past free exercise cases, and it should do so here as well. See Frazee v. Illinois Dept. of Employment Security, 489 U.S. 829, 835, 109 S.Ct. 1514, 1518, 103 L.Ed.2d 914 (1989) (rejecting State's speculation concerning cumulative effect of many similar claims); Thomas, 450 U.S., at 719, 101 S.Ct., at 1432 (same); Sherbert, 374 U.S., at 407, 83 S.Ct., at 1795.

The State's apprehension of a flood of other religious claims is purely speculative. Almost half the States, and the Federal Government, have maintained an exemption for religious peyote use for many years, and apparently have not found themselves overwhelmed by claims to other religious exemptions. [FN8] Allowing an exemption for religious 1621 peyote use *918 would not necessarily oblige the State to grant a similar exemption to other religious groups. The unusual circumstances that make the religious use of peyote compatible with the State's interests in health and safety and in preventing drug trafficking would not apply to other religious claims. Some religions, for example, might not restrict drug use to a limited ceremonial context, as does the Native American Church. See, e.g., Olsen, 279 U.S.App.D.C., at 7, 878 F.2d, at 1464 ("[T]he Ethiopian Zion Coptic Church ... teaches that marijuana is properly smoked 'continually all day' "). Some religious claims, see n. 8, supra, involve drugs such as marijuana and heroin, in which there is significant illegal traffic, with its attendant greed and violence, so that it would be difficult to grant a religious exemption without seriously compromising law enforcement efforts. [FN9] That the State might grant an exemption for religious peyote use, but deny other religious claims arising in different circumstances, would not violate the Establishment Clause. Though the State must treat all religions equally, and not favor one over another, this obligation is fulfilled by the uniform application of the "compelling interest" test to all free exercise claims, not by reaching uniform results as to all claims. A showing that religious peyote use does not unduly interfere with the State's interests is "one that probably few other religious groups or sects could make," Yoder, 406 U.S., at 236, 92 S.Ct., at 1543; this does not mean that an exemption limited to peyote use is tantamount to an establishment of religion. See Hobbie v. Unemployment Appeals Comm'n of Fla., 480 U.S. 136, 144-145, 107 S.Ct. 1046, 1051, 94 L.Ed.2d 190 (1987) ("[T]he government may (and 919 sometimes must) accommodate religious practices and ... may do so without violating the Establishment Clause"); Yoder, 406 U.S., at 220-221, 92 S.Ct., at 1536 ("Court must not ignore the danger that an exception from a general [law] ... may run afoul of the Establishment Clause, but that danger cannot be allowed to prevent any exception no matter how vital it may be to the protection of values promoted by the right of free exercise"); id., at 234, n. 22, 92 S.Ct., at 1542, n. 22.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

FN8. Over the years, various sects have raised free exercise claims regarding drug use. In no reported case, except those involving claims of religious peyote use, has the claimant prevailed. See, e.g., Olsen v. Iowa, 808 F.2d 652 (CA8 1986) (marijuana use by Ethiopian Zion Coptic Church); United States v. Rush, 738 F.2d 497 (CA1 1984) (same), cert. denied, 470 U.S. 1004, 105 S.Ct. 1355, 84 L.Ed.2d 378 (1985); United States v. Middleton, 690 F.2d 820 (CA11 1982) (same), cert. denied, 460 U.S. 1051, 103 S.Ct. 1497, 75 L.Ed.2d 929 (1983) (same); United States v. Hudson, 431 F.2d 468 (CA5 1970) (marijuana and heroin use by Moslems), cert. denied, 400 U.S. 1011, 91 S.Ct. 575, 577, 27 L.Ed.2d 624 (1971); Leary v. United States, 383 F.2d 851 (CA5 1967) (marijuana use by Hindu), rev'd on other grounds, 395 U.S. 6, 89 S.Ct. 1532, 23 L.Ed.2d 57 (1969); Commonwealth v. Nissenbaum, 404 Mass. 575, 536 N.E.2d 592 (1989) (marijuana use by Ethiopian Zion Coptic Church); State v. Blake, 5 Haw.App. 411, 695 P.2d 336 (1985) (marijuana use in practice of Hindu Tantrism); Whyte v. United States, 471 A.2d 1018 (D.C.App.1984) (marijuana use by Rastafarian); State v. Rocheleau, 142 Vt. 61, 451 A.2d 1144 (1982) (marijuana use by Tantric Buddhist); State v. Brashear, 92 N.M. 622, 593 P.2d 63 (1979) (marijuana use by nondenominational Christian); State v. Randall, 540 S.W.2d 156 (Mo.App.1976) (marijuana, LSD, and hashish use by Aquarian Brotherhood Church). See generally Annotation, Free Exercise of Religion as Defense to Prosecution for Narcotic or Psychedelic Drug Offense, 35 A.L.R.3d 939 (1971 and Supp.1989).

FN9. Thus, this case is distinguishable from United States v. Lee, 455 U.S. 252, 102 S.Ct. 1051, 71 L.Ed.2d 127 (1982), in which the Court concluded that there was "no principled way" to distinguish other exemption claims, and the "tax system could not function if denominations were allowed to challenge the tax system because tax payments were spent in a manner that violates their religious belief." Id., at 260, 102 S.Ct., at 1056.

II

Finally, although I agree with Justice O'CONNOR that courts should refrain from delving into questions whether, as a matter of religious doctrine, a particular practice is "central" to the religion, ante, at 1614, I do not think this means that the courts must turn a blind eye to the severe impact of a State's restrictions on the adherents of a minority religion. Cf. Yoder, 406 U.S., at 219, 92 S.Ct., at 1535 (since "education is inseparable from and a part of the basic tenets of their religion ... [, just as] baptism,*1622 the confessional, or a sabbath may be for others," enforcement of State's compulsory education law would "gravely endanger if not destroy the free exercise of respondents' religious beliefs").

Respondents believe, and their sincerity has never been at issue, that the peyote plant embodies their deity, and eating it is an act of worship and communion. Without peyote, they could not enact the essential ritual of their religion. See Brief for Association on American Indian Affairs et al. as Amici Curiae 5-6 ("To the members, peyote is consecrated with powers to heal body, mind and spirit. It is a teacher; it teaches the way to spiritual

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

110 S.Ct. 1595
108 L.Ed.2d 876, 58 USLW 4433, 52 Fair Empl.Prac.Cas. (BNA) 855, 53 Empl. Prac. Dec. P 39,826, Unempl.Ins.Rep. (CCH) P 21,933
(Cite as: 494 U.S. 872, 110 S.Ct. 1595)

life through living in harmony and balance with the forces of the Creation. The rituals are an integral part of the life process. They embody a form of worship in which the sacrament Peyote is the means for communicating with the Great Spirit"). See also O. Stewart, Peyote Religion 327-330 (1987) (description of peyote ritual); 920 T. Hillerman, People of Darkness 153 (1980) (description of Navajo peyote ritual).

If Oregon can constitutionally prosecute them for this act of worship, they, like the Amish, may be "forced to migrate to some other and more tolerant region." Yoder, 406 U.S., at 218, 92 S.Ct., at 1534-1535. This potentially devastating impact must be viewed in light of the federal policy--reached in reaction to many years of religious persecution and intolerance--of protecting the religious freedom of Native Americans. See American Indian Religious Freedom Act, 92 Stat. 469, 42 U.S.C. § 1996 (1982 ed.) ("[I]t shall be the policy of the United States to protect and preserve for American Indians their inherent right of freedom to believe, express, and exercise the traditional religions ..., including but not limited to access to sites, use and possession of sacred objects, and the freedom to worship through ceremonials and traditional rites"). [FN10] Congress recognized that certain substances, such as peyote, "have religious significance because they are sacred, they have power, they heal, they are necessary to the exercise of 921 the rites of the religion, they are necessary to the cultural integrity of the tribe, and, therefore, religious survival." H.R.Rep. No. 95-1308, p. 2 (1978), U.S.Code Cong. & Admin.News 1978, pp. 1262, 1263.

> FN10. See Federal Agencies Task Force, Report to Congress on American Indian Religious Freedom Act of 1978, pp. 1-8 (Aug. 1979) (history of religious persecution); Barsh, The Illusion of Religious Freedom for Indigenous Americans, 65 Ore.L.Rev. 363, 369-374 (1986).
> Indeed, Oregon's attitude toward respondents' religious peyote use harkens back to the repressive federal policies pursued a century ago: "In the government's view, traditional practices were not only morally degrading, but unhealthy. 'Indians are fond of gatherings of every description,' a 1913 public health study complained, advocating the restriction of dances and 'sings' to stem contagious diseases. In 1921, Commissioner of Indian Affairs Charles Burke reminded his staff to punish any Indian engaged in 'any dance which involves ... the reckless giving away of property ... frequent or prolonged periods of celebration ... in fact, any disorderly or plainly excessive performance that promotes superstitious cruelty, licentiousness, idleness, danger to health, and shiftless indifference to family welfare.' Two years later, he forbid Indians under the age of 50 from participating in any dances of any kind, and directed federal employees 'to educate public opinion' against them." Id., at 370-371 (footnotes omitted).

The American Indian Religious Freedom Act, in itself, may not create rights enforceable against government action restricting religious freedom, but this Court must scrupulously apply its free exercise analysis to the religious claims of Native Americans, however unorthodox they may be. Otherwise, both the First Amendment and the stated policy of Congress will offer to Native Americans merely an unfulfilled and hollow promise.

III

For these reasons, I conclude that Oregon's interest in enforcing its drug laws against religious use of peyote is not sufficiently compelling to outweigh respondents' right to the free exercise of their religion. Since the State could not constitutionally enforce its criminal prohibition against respondents, *1623 the interests underlying the State's drug laws cannot justify its denial of unemployment benefits. Absent such justification, the State's regulatory interest in denying benefits for religiously motivated "misconduct," see ante, at 1598, is indistinguishable from the state interests this Court has rejected in Frazee, Hobbie, Thomas, and Sherbert. The State of Oregon cannot, consistently with the Free Exercise Clause, deny respondents unemployment benefits.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

I dissent.

110 S.Ct. 1595, 494 U.S. 872, 108 L.Ed.2d 876, 58 USLW 4433, 52 Fair Empl.Prac.Cas. (BNA) 855, 53 Empl. Prac. Dec. P 39,826, Unempl.Ins.Rep. (CCH) P 21,933

Briefs and Other Related Documents (Back to top)

• 1989 WL 1126854 (Appellate Brief) Reply Brief for Petitioners (Aug. 21, 1989)

• 1989 WL 1126850 (Appellate Brief) Brief for Respondents (Jul. 14, 1989)

• 1989 WL 1126851 (Appellate Brief) Brief Amicus Curiae of the American Civil Liberties Union and the Aclu of Oregon in Support of Respondents (Jul. 14, 1989)

• 1989 WL 1126852 (Appellate Brief) Brief of Council on Religious Freedom as Amicus Curiae in Support of Respondents (Jul. 14, 1989)

• 1989 WL 1126853 (Appellate Brief) Brief Amici Curiae Association on American Indian Affairs, Native American Church of North America, Native American Church of Colorado, Kiowa Chapter of the Native American Church of Oklahoma, Native American Church of Oklahoma, Native American Churc h of the Omaha Tribe, Native American Church of South Dakota, and the Native American Church of Winnebago, Nebraska in Support of Respondents (Jul. 14, 1989)

• 1989 WL 1126849 (Appellate Brief) Brief Amicus Curiae of the American Jewish Congress in Support of Respondents (Jun. 21, 1989)

• 1989 WL 1126846 (Appellate Brief) Brief for Petitioners (May. 22, 1989)

• 1988 WL 1025590 (Appellate Brief) Supplemental Brief for Respondents (Oct. Term 1988)

END OF DOCUMENT

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

BLUEBIRD (888) 477-0700 www.bluebirdinc.com
OFFICE SUPPLIES

EXHIBIT 19

781 P.2d 383
(Cite as: 99 Or.App. 104, 781 P.2d 383)

Court of Appeals of Oregon.

Christine E. ERICKSON, Appellant,
v.
Bryan W. CHRISTENSON; Luther Memorial Church, Portland, Oregon; American Lutheran Church, North Pacific District, Respondents, and American Lutheran Church, Defendant.

A8710-06662; CA A49695.

Argued and Submitted April 14, 1989.
Decided Oct. 25, 1989.

Church parishioner sued pastor, her church, and the district office of the church's denomination, seeking recovery for intentional infliction of emotional harm allegedly caused by pastor's mentally manipulating her and seducing her through counseling relationship. The Circuit Court, Multnomah County, Lee Johnson, J., dismissed complaint for failure to state claims, and parishioner appealed. The Court of Appeals, Rossman, J., held that: (1) claim of intentional infliction of emotional harm was not invalid as being essentially restatement of abolished claim of seduction; (2) claim was not barred on First Amendment grounds, as being essentially claim of clerical malpractice which would require for proof impermissible government examination of validity of religious beliefs and interference with access to clerical counseling; (3) complaint stated claim against church for liability for torts of pastor under respondeat superior doctrine; (4) complaint stated cause of action against church for negligent supervision of pastor; and (5) complaint stated cause of action against district office of denomination for negligence in requiring parishioner to seek removal of pastor through confrontational process involving rest of church, causing her emotional harm.

Reversed and remanded.

West Headnotes

[1] Damages ⇐50.10
115k50.10 Most Cited Cases

Claim by church parishioner against her pastor for intentional infliction of emotional harm through pastor's alleged abuse of confidential relationship by mentally manipulating her to have close contact and sexual relations with him was not invalid by reason of being equivalent to abolished tort of seduction; parishioner had alleged that pastor's actions made her unable to trust other adults, to trust authority and deal with religion and her faith in God, and if claims were true resulting harm to parishioner stemmed from pastor's misconduct of his position of trust and not from seduction.

[2] Constitutional Law ⇐84.5(10)
92k84.5(10) Most Cited Cases

[2] Religious Societies ⇐30
332k30 Most Cited Cases

Claim by parishioner that pastor had inflicted intentional emotional harm upon her was not invalid under free exercise and establishment clauses of First Amendment because it was essentially claim of clerical malpractice which would require for proof development of community standards as to proper pastoral conduct which in return would involve permissible government inquiry into validity of religious beliefs and interference with clerical counseling; parishioner had claimed breach of confidential relationship rather than any elements of clerical malpractice. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 1.

[3] Religious Societies ⇐30
332k30 Most Cited Cases

Church would be liable to parishioner, on theory of respondeat superior, if parishioner established claim that pastor had abused confidential relationship between himself and parishioner by mentally manipulating her to become dependent upon him and coercing and manipulating her to have close contacts and sexual relations with him.

[4] Religious Societies ⇐30
332k30 Most Cited Cases

Parishioner accusing church of negligent supervision of pastor who allegedly abused confidential relationship with her and manipulated her into having close contact and sexual relations with him stated cause of action; parishioner alleged that church knew or should have known pastor was not adequately trained as counselor and that he had used and misused his position in past to take advantage of parishioners and people he counseled.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

[5] Religious Societies ⚖31(4)
332k31(4) Most Cited Cases

Dismissal of complaint in response to motion to dismiss for failure to state ultimate facts sufficient to state claims was not warranted in case where parishioner of church accused district office of church's denomination of negligent supervision of pastor who mentally manipulated her into having sexual contact with him; nothing in complaint supported contentions on which dismissal was granted, that district office was merely administrative department of denomination and lacked capacity to be sued, and that claim was barred by two-year statute of limitations. ORS 12.110(1).

[6] Religious Societies ⚖31(4)
332k31(4) Most Cited Cases

Parishioner suing district office of her church's denomination stated claim for negligent supervision of church's pastor who allegedly manipulated her into having sexual relations with him; parishioner alleged that after she initiated church complaint against pastor district office undertook role of her advocate and then forced her to proceed through confrontational process involving congregation in order to have pastor removed from his position, causing her extreme emotional distress.
384 *104 David R. Nepom, Portland, argued the cause and filed the briefs for appellant.

I. Franklin Hunsaker, Portland, argued the cause and filed the brief for respondent American Lutheran Church, North Pacific Dist. With him on the brief were Chrys A. Martin, Lisa E. Lear and Bullivant, Houser, Bailey, Pendergrass & Hoffman, Portland.

David J. Edstrom, Portland, argued the cause and filed the brief for respondent Bryan W. Christenson.

Ralph C. Spooner, Salem, argued the cause and filed the brief for respondent Luther Memorial Church. With him on the brief was Spooner & Much, Salem.

Before RICHARDSON, P.J., JOSEPH, C.J., and ROSSMAN, J.

*106 ROSSMAN, Judge.

Plaintiff brought this action against her pastor (Christenson), the church that employed him (Luther Memorial) and the American Lutheran Church, North Pacific District (ALC-NPD), [FN1] alleging four claims for injuries sustained after Christenson allegedly manipulated her and seduced her through a counseling relationship. The trial court granted defendants' motions under ORCP 21 A to dismiss for failure to state ultimate facts sufficient to state claims, 385 and plaintiff appeals. We reverse and remand.

FN1. Pursuant to the stipulation of plaintiff and American Lutheran Church (ALC), the trial court entered an order dismissing claims against ALC without prejudice. The court incorporated that order into its judgment dismissing plaintiff's claims against all defendants.

In reviewing a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim, we are limited to the facts stated in the complaint. Richards v. Dahl, 289 Or. 747, 752, 618 P.2d 418 (1980). We accept as true the allegations and all reasonable inferences that may be drawn from them. See Overbay v. Ledridge, 97 Or.App. 292, 294, 776 P.2d 29, on reconsideration 98 Or.App. 148, 778 P.2d 981 (1989). A pleading that contains an allegation of material fact as to each element of the claim for relief, even if vague, is sufficient to survive a motion to dismiss. Mazurek v. Rajnus, 253 Or. 555, 557-58, 456 P.2d 83 (1969). We discuss plaintiff's claims against each defendant in turn.

Plaintiff's claims against Christenson are for "breach of fiduciary duty" (which we treat as a claim for breach of a confidential relationship) and intentional infliction of severe emotional distress. [FN2] Her allegations may be summarized: (1) In 1970, when plaintiff was age 13, Christenson established a confidential relationship with her, acting as her pastor, counselor, confessor, advisor, friend, teacher and surrogate father. (2) Christenson abused that relationship by "mentally manipulating" her to become dependent upon him and by "coercing and manipulating" her to have close contact and sexual relations with him for his own purposes; he continued to exercise dominion and control over plaintiff until the fall or winter of 1986, and attempted to manipulate the relationship until *107 May, 1987. (3) Defendants' failure to advise plaintiff of the improper relationship prevented her from obtaining professional help. (4) As a result of Christenson's misuse of his position, plaintiff suffered sexual abuse, extreme emotional distress, physical illness, loss of sleep and memory, clinical depression and loss in her "ability to trust other adults, to trust authority, and * * * in her ability to deal with religion and her faith in God."

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

> FN2. Although plaintiff has characterized her claim as one for "outrageous conduct," it is actually for intentional infliction of severe emotional distress. Patton v. J.C. Penney Co., 301 Or. 117, 119 n. 1, 719 P.2d 854 (1986).

[1] Christenson argues that those allegations actually state a claim for seduction, a cause of action that was abolished in 1973. Or.Laws 1973, ch. 640. We disagree. In Spiess v. Johnson, 89 Or.App. 289, 748 P.2d 1020, aff'd by equally divided court 307 Or. 242, 765 P.2d 811 (1988), we considered the sufficiency of a complaint alleging that a psychiatrist from whom a couple had sought psychiatric counseling for the wife had become sexually intimate with her during the course of treatment. The defendant argued that the husband's claim for intentional infliction of severe emotional distress was actually for the abolished torts of criminal conversation and alienation of affections. We rejected that argument, noting that the different claims were distinguishable by the nature of the loss that they alleged. 89 Or.App. at 294, 748 P.2d 1020.

The tort of seduction provided recovery for damage to character and reputation, as well as for mental anguish and pecuniary losses. See Breon v. Hinkle, 14 Or. 494, 500, 13 P. 289 (1887). By contrast, plaintiff's claim alleges that Christenson misused his position as pastor and counselor to abuse her sexually, causing her not only emotional distress but also "loss of ability to trust other adults, to trust authority, and * * * in her ability to deal with religion and her faith in God." Accepting the allegations as true, the harm to plaintiff stemmed from Christenson's misuse of his position of trust, not from the seduction as such. Plaintiff has stated a claim.

In her second claim against Christenson, plaintiff has claimed losses due to intentionally inflicted severe emotional distress, as opposed to losses related to character or reputation. The mere fact that sexual intimacy was the means of inflicting that distress does not convert her claim into one for seduction. See Spiess v. Johnson, supra, 89 Or.App. at 294, 748 P.2d 1020. Moreover, the character of Christenson's relationship with plaintiff is relevant both to the degree of culpability required 108 to impose liability and to whether his conduct *386 was so offensive as to be outrageous. Hall v. The May Dept. Stores, 292 Or. 131, 137, 637 P.2d 126 (1981); Torgeson v. Connor, 86 Or.App. 179, 181, 738 P.2d 994 (1987). Because plaintiff has alleged a confidential relationship, proof of her other allegations would permit the jury to infer that Christenson's actions exceeded the limits of social toleration, that they were done with the knowledge that they would cause her grave distress and that they in fact caused her severe emotional distress. That is sufficient to state a claim for intentional infliction of emotional distress. See Torgeson v. Connor, supra.

[2] Christenson argues that plaintiff's claims are barred by the First Amendment. According to him, her claim for "breach of a fiduciary duty" actually is a claim for clerical malpractice, a cause of action that requires developing a community standard of care. Because imposing such a standard would involve examining the validity of religious beliefs and could interfere with access to clerical counseling, he argues, it violates both the Free Exercise and Establishment Clauses of the First Amendment. Similarly, he contends, because plaintiff's seduction could not be considered "outrageous" were it not for the fact that he is a pastor, plaintiff's claim of intentional infliction of emotional distress penalizes him for exercising his religion.

Christenson's arguments misconstrue the nature of plaintiff's claims. First, regardless of how plaintiff designated her claims, a claim for breach of a confidential relationship is different from a claim for clerical malpractice. Plaintiff's complaint alleged the existence and breach of a confidential relationship; it did not allege the elements of malpractice. Moreover, plaintiff's claim for outrageous conduct is not premised on the mere fact that Christenson is a pastor, but on the fact that, because he was plaintiff's pastor and counselor, a special relationship of trust and confidence developed.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

[3] Plaintiff's claims against Luther Memorial are that it is vicariously liable for the torts allegedly committed by Christenson and that it was negligent in supervising him. "Under the doctrine of respondeat superior, an employer is liable for an employee's torts when the employee acts within the scope of employment." Chesterman v. Barmon, 305 Or. 439, 442, 753 P.2d 404 (1988). An employe's act is within the scope of the 109 employment if it occurs substantially within the time and space limits authorized by the employment, the employe is at least partially motivated by a purpose to serve the employer and the act is of a kind which the employe was hired to perform. Chesterman v. Barmon, supra, 305 Or. at 442, 753 P.2d 404. Plaintiff has alleged that, in the exercise of his duties as a pastor, Christenson established a confidential relationship with her and caused her harm by abusing that relationship. Confining our analysis to the four corners of the complaint, we conclude that it alleges that she sustained harm from acts performed within Christenson's scope of employment. [FN3]

> FN3. Luther Memorial argues that it cannot be held liable under a theory of respondeat superior, because Christenson's seduction of plaintiff is neither the kind of act that he was hired to perform nor motivated by a desire to serve the employer. As previously noted, however, the gravamen of plaintiff's complaint is not simply that Christenson seduced her but that he abused his position as her pastor to do so. Because the alleged wrongful act was improper performance of pastoral counseling duties, whether it occurred within the scope of employment is a factual issue.

[4] With respect to her claim for negligence in supervision, Luther Memorial argues that plaintiff has failed to allege facts showing that its "conduct unreasonably created a foreseeable risk to a protected interest of the kind of harm that befell the plaintiff," as required by Fazzolari v. Portland School Dist. No. 1J, 303 Or. 1, 17, 734 P.2d 1326 (1987). However, in her amended complaint, plaintiff has alleged that Luther Memorial knew or should have known that Christenson was not adequately trained as a counselor and that it knew or should have known that he had misused his position in the past to take advantage of parishioners and counseled persons. These allegations, if proven, would make it *387 reasonable for a trier of fact to infer that the risk of harm to plaintiff was reasonably foreseeable to Luther Memorial. Similarly, her allegations, if proven, that Luther Memorial employed and directed Christenson to counsel parishioners, failed to investigate claims of his sexual misconduct, failed to remove him or to warn parishioners of his misuse of his position and failed to supervise him adequately following his nervous breakdown or to direct him to seek expert advice to deal with his abusive behavior would make it reasonable for the jury to infer that it created the risk of harm to plaintiff. The complaint states a claim for negligent supervision. It follows that plaintiff's 110 claims against Luther Memorial should not have been dismissed. [FN4]

> FN4. Relying on Norwest v. Presbyterian Intercommunity Hosp., 293 Or. 543, 652 P.2d 318 (1982), Luther Memorial asserts that plaintiff has alleged only emotional injury, an insufficient basis for a claim for ordinary negligence. In alleging sexual abuse, physical illness, lost sleep and losses in memory and concentration, however, plaintiff has alleged more than emotional injury.

[5] Plaintiff repeated her claim of negligent supervision against ALC-NPD, alleging the same facts and adding that ALC-NPD supervised Luther Memorial and that the agents and employes of ALC-NPD supervised Christenson. ALC-NPD responds that, because it is merely an administrative department of ALC, it lacks the capacity to be sued, that plaintiff's claim is barred by the two-year Statute of Limitations in ORS 12.110(1) and that, because it was not Christenson's employer, but simply an unincorporated division of ALC with only a tenuous connection to Luther Memorial and Christenson, it could neither have created nor foreseen the risk of harm to plaintiff.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

ALC-NPD's contentions are premature. Nothing on the face of the complaint permits a determination that ALC-NPD is not a proper party or that, as a matter of law, plaintiff's alleged injuries occurred more than two years before the commencement of her action. See ORCP 21 A(9). Plaintiff has alleged sufficient facts to withstand a motion to dismiss.

[6] Plaintiff's last claim is that ALC-NPD was negligent in its performance of pastoral duties. In essence, she alleges that, after she initiated a church complaint against Christenson, ALC-NPD undertook the role of her advocate and counselor; that, in that role, it required her to "proceed through a confrontational process * * * in order to have Bryan Christenson removed from his pastor position"; and that, despite Christenson's voluntary admission to a sexual dependency unit, it continued to require her to "confront and oppose the church congregation," causing her extreme emotional distress. Those allegations, taken as true, would permit a trier of fact to make the inference that ALC-NPD's conduct unreasonably created a foreseeable risk of harm to plaintiff. Under *111 Fazzolari v. Portland School Dist. No. 1J, supra, plaintiff's allegations are sufficient to state a claim for negligence. [FN5]

FN5. Characterizing plaintiff's claim as one for "clerical malpractice," ALC-NPD argues that recognizing such a cause of action would require the court to develop a standard of care for pastoral counseling, an undertaking which inevitably would violate the First Amendment and Article I, sections 2, 3, and 5 of the Oregon Constitution. However, plaintiff's complaint alleges simple negligence. Although the First Amendment or Oregon Constitution may provide ALC-NPD with an affirmative defense at some later stage of the proceeding, which we need not and do not decide here, it does not provide a basis for dismissal at this stage.

Reversed and remanded.

781 P.2d 383, 99 Or.App. 104

END OF DOCUMENT

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

BLUEBIRD (888) 477-3750
OFFICE SUPPLIES www.bluebirdoffice.com

EXHIBIT 20

677 A.2d 258
65 USLW 2010
(Cite as: 291 N.J.Super. 262, 677 A.2d 258)

Superior Court of New Jersey,
Appellate Division.

F.G., Plaintiff-Appellant,
v.
Rev. Alex MacDONELL, in his capacity as former Rector, and Rev. Fletcher Harper, in his capacity as Rector of All Saints' Episcopal Church, Bergenfield, New Jersey and St. Luke's Episcopal Church, Haworth, New Jersey, Defendants-Respondents.

Argued April 15, 1996.
Decided June 14, 1996.

Church member who became involved in sexual relationship with church rector to whom she had gone to seek counseling brought action asserting claims of negligence as provider of pastoral care and counseling, negligent infliction of emotional distress, and breach of fiduciary duty, and also asserted claim against second rector who had informed congregation of relationship. Defendants moved to dismiss, and the Superior Court, Law Division, Bergen County, granted motion. Church member appealed, and the Superior Court, Appellate Division, D'Annunzio, J., held that: (1) one test to determine whether civil action against cleric is cognizable is whether adjudication requires evaluation of dogma or ritual, or other matters of purely ecclesiastical concern, which will implicate First Amendment, and (2) allegations were sufficient to state claims of professional or clergy malpractice.

Reversed and remanded.

West Headnotes

[1] Pretrial Procedure ⇐622
307Ak622 Most Cited Cases

Trial courts should approach with great caution applications for dismissal based on failure of complaint to state claim on which relief may be granted; test for determining adequacy of pleading is whether cause of action is "suggested" by facts. R. 4:6-2(e).

[2] Appeal and Error ⇐863
30k863 Most Cited Cases

In reviewing complaint which has been dismissed for failure to state claim, inquiry is limited to examining legal sufficiency of facts alleged on face of complaint; however, reviewing court searches complaint in depth and with liberality to ascertain whether fundament of cause of action may be gleaned even from obscure statement of claim, opportunity being given to amend if necessary. R. 4:6-2(e).

[3] Pretrial Procedure ⇐683
307Ak683 Most Cited Cases

For purposes of analysis used in determining whether complaint is subject to dismissal for failure to state claim, plaintiffs are entitled to every reasonable inference of fact. R. 4:6-2(e).

[4] Pretrial Procedure ⇐679
307Ak679 Most Cited Cases

Examination of complaint's allegations of fact required in determining whether complaint is subject to dismissal for failure to state claim should be one that is at once painstaking and undertaken with generous and hospitable approach. R. 4:6-2(e).

[5] Negligence ⇐321
272k321 Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 272k102)

"Malpractice," which is nothing more than negligent performance of professional service and is a deviation from standards of performance applicable to professional service in question, is a negligence cause of action.

[6] Negligence ⇐1662
272k1662 Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 272k134(1))

Major distinction between usual negligence case and case of professional negligence is that in the latter, standard of care ordinarily must be established by expert testimony.

[7] Religious Societies ⇐14

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

332k14 Most Cited Cases

One test to determine whether cause of action against cleric is cognizable in civil courts is whether adjudication of claim requires evaluation of dogma or ritual, or other matters of purely ecclesiastical concern, which will implicate First Amendment. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 1.

[8] Religious Societies ⇐30
332k30 Most Cited Cases

Allegations by church member that rector at church had exploited vulnerabilities of church member, who had sought counseling from rector, to induce member to engage in sexual acts with him were sufficient to state claim of professional or clergy malpractice against rector; no excessive entanglement with religion was likely to occur, as it was unlikely that defendant would assert that sex with counselee by pastoral counselor is sanctioned by or somehow involves tenets of Episcopalian church, or would otherwise create entanglement with religious beliefs or rituals creating First Amendment concerns. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 1.

[9] Pleading ⇐53(1)
302k53(1) Most Cited Cases

[9] Torts ⇐1
379k1 Most Cited Cases

No rule requires that cause of action fall outside scope of other recognized torts before it may be maintained; to the contrary, rules permit pleading of alternative causes of action regardless of their consistency. R. 4:5-6.

[10] Religious Societies ⇐31(4)
332k31(4) Most Cited Cases

Allegation by church member who had engaged in sexual acts with rector she had seen for counseling that second minister at church had acted improperly by informing congregation of sexual relationship was sufficient to state claim for professional or clergy malpractice against second minister.
*259 *265 Herbert D. Friedman, Boston, MA, and Alan L. Zegas, West Orange, for appellant.

Gregory D. Winter, Livingston, for respondents (Felzenberg, Winter & Winkler, attorneys).

Before Judges HAVEY, D'ANNUNZIO and BRAITHWAITE.

The opinion of the court was delivered by

D'ANNUNZIO, J.A.D.

This action for damages is based on a sexual relationship between plaintiff, an adult female, and defendant Rev. Alex MacDonell. The action against defendant Rev. Fletcher Harper is based on his disclosure to the congregation of the relationship between plaintiff and MacDonell.

Defendants moved for judgment on the pleadings, pursuant to R. 4:6-2(e). The court granted the motion on all counts against MacDonell and on Count IX against Harper. The three counts against MacDonell allege causes of action for negligence as a provider of "pastoral care and pastoral counseling," negligent infliction of emotional distress "in committing pastoral care and pastoral counseling malpractice," and breach of fiduciary duty. Count IX charged that Harper breached his fiduciary duty to plaintiff by "exploiting [her] trust and confidence by invading her privacy, making negligent misrepresentations to her ... defaming her, and by depicting her in a false light." The remaining counts against Harper allege invasion of privacy, negligent misrepresentation, defamation and depicting plaintiff in a false light.

The trial court determined that the counts against MacDonell and Count IX against Harper asserted causes of action described as clergy malpractice and that such a cause of action is not recognized, citing Schmidt v. Bishop, 779 F.Supp. 321 (S.D.N.Y.1991) . In Schmidt the court ruled that clergy malpractice was not actionable under New York law. The court held that recognition 266 of such a cause of action would unduly entangle the courts with religion, in violation of the First Amendment.

We granted plaintiff's motion for leave to appeal, and we now reverse and remand for further proceedings.

[1][2][3][4] The standard under which motions to dismiss are considered is well-established in New Jersey. Trial courts should "approach with great caution applications for dismissal under R. 4:6-2(e) for failure of a complaint to state a claim on which relief may be granted." Printing Mart-Morristown v. Sharp Elec. Corp., 116 N.J. 739, 771-72, 563 A. 2d 31 (1989). The test for determining the adequacy of a pleading is whether a cause of action is "suggested" by the facts. See Velantzas v. Colgate- Palmolive Co., 109 N.J. 189, 192, 536 A. 2d 237 (1988). In reviewing a complaint dismissed pursuant to R. 4:6-2(e), the inquiry is limited to examining the legal sufficiency of the facts alleged on the face of the complaint. See 260Rieder v. State Department of Transp.,* 221 N.J.Super. 547, 552, 535 *A.*2d 512 (App.Div.1987). However, a reviewing court "searches the complaint in depth and with liberality to ascertain whether the fundament of a cause of action may be gleaned even from an obscure statement of claim, opportunity being given to amend if necessary." Di Cristofaro v. Laurel Grove Memorial Park, 43 N.J.Super. 244, 252, 128 *A.*2d 281 (App.Div.1957). For purposes of analysis plaintiffs are entitled to every reasonable inference of fact. See Independent Dairy Workers Union v. Milk Drivers Local 680, 23 N.J. 85, 89, 127 *A.*2d 869 (1956). "The examination of a complaint's allegations of fact required by the aforestated principles should be one that is at once painstaking and undertaken with a generous and hospitable approach." Printing Mart-Morristown, supra, 116 N.J. at 746, 563 *A.*2d 31.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

Applying these principles, we glean from the complaint the following allegations. Plaintiff was a parishioner at All Saints' Episcopal Church, and MacDonell was the rector there and at Saint Luke's Episcopal Church. Plaintiff sought counseling from MacDonell. The nature and scope of the counseling is not defined *267 in the complaint. MacDonell assumed the role of counselor and thereby became aware of plaintiff's emotional vulnerabilities. MacDonell exploited those vulnerabilities to induce plaintiff to engage in sexual acts with him. The complaint describes the counseling relationship between plaintiff and MacDonell as "a special relationship in which MacDonell owed a special duty of care not to engage in unethical and harmful behavior towards [plaintiff]." Plaintiff alleges that MacDonell violated that duty of care causing physical, emotional and psychological injury.

Count III alleges that MacDonell had a fiduciary duty to act in plaintiff's best interests and "to refrain from conduct which carried with it the foreseeable and unreasonable risk of mental or emotional harm to her," and that MacDonell breached his fiduciary duty "by wrongfully and unlawfully exploiting [plaintiff's] trust and confidence by engaging in inappropriate sexual behavior with plaintiff."

The complaint also alleges that plaintiff filed a complaint with the "Standing Commission on Clergy Ethics of the Diocese of Newark," and that the committee determined that MacDonell "violated his pastoral relationship with plaintiff ... by engaging in inappropriate sexual behavior toward her." The committee "sanctioned" MacDonell in March 1994.

In Count IX, the count against Harper dismissed by the court, plaintiff alleges that Harper breached a fiduciary duty owed to plaintiff by the manner in which he informed the congregation of plaintiff's relationship with MacDonell.

The trial court's dismissal of the counts against MacDonell was consistent with a line of decisions resistant to the concept of "clergy malpractice." As previously indicated, the trial court cited Schmidt v. Bishop, supra, 779 F.Supp. 321. Schmidt was a member of a New York Presbyterian church. In 1960, when she was twelve, her parents brought her to Reverend Bishop, the church's pastor, for " 'emotional, spiritual and familial counseling.' " Id. at 324. Schmidt alleged that she became emotionally dependent on Bishop and that he initiated sexual contact with her *268 shortly after the counseling relationship began. According to Schmidt, defendant "invoked God as supporting the conduct ... and informed her that 'the relationship was special and acceptable in the eyes of the Lord.' " Ibid. The relationship between Schmidt and Bishop continued until 1989 when Schmidt terminated it as a result of psychotherapy she had begun in 1988.

The Schmidt court characterized Bishop's conduct as a crime of sexual abuse in the second degree under New York's penal code. Ibid. The court observed that the allegations of the complaint "support clearly an action for a battery or some similar intentional tort, for which the statute of limitations is one year." Ibid. The court, however, granted summary judgment to defendant on the complaint which alleged negligence, malpractice and breach of fiduciary duty. The court viewed those counts as sounding in clergy malpractice and rejected them.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

*261 The court saw the First Amendment of the United States Constitution as the major obstacle to a cause of action for clergy malpractice. Id. at 327. The court agreed with Nally v. Grace Community Church of the Valley, 47 *Cal.*3d 278, 253 Cal.Rptr. 97, 763 *P.*2d 948 (1988), cert. denied, 490 U.S. 1007, 109 S.Ct. 1644, 104 *L.Ed.*2d 159 (1989), that defining and imposing a duty of care on pastoral counselors would unduly entangle the courts in religious philosophy or ecclesiastical teachings. Ibid. The court in Schmidt stated:

> Any effort by this Court to instruct the trial jury as to the duty of care which a clergyman should exercise, would of necessity require the Court or jury to define and express the standard of care to be followed by other reasonable Presbyterian clergy of the community. This in turn would require the Court and the jury to consider the fundamental perspective and approach to counseling inherent in the beliefs and practices of that denomination. This is as unconstitutional as it is impossible. It fosters excessive entanglement with religion.
>
> [779 F.Supp. at 328.]

Nally v. Grace Community Church of the Valley, supra, relied on by the Schmidt court, is inapposite. There, the Supreme Court of California upheld a "nonsuit" granted by the trial court, i.e., a trial court determination that the evidence was insufficient to 269 permit a jury to find in plaintiffs' favor. Nally, supra, 253 Cal.Rptr. at 104-05, 763 P.2d at 955. Plaintiffs sought damages resulting from the suicide of their son. Plaintiffs sued the church, a Protestant Christian congregation, and four church pastors who had participated in counseling decedent. Plaintiffs alleged that defendants had failed in their duty to recognize that decedent was suicidal and to refer him to psychiatric care.

In affirming the nonsuit, thereby reversing the intermediate appellate court, the California Supreme Court held that defendants, as nontherapist counselors, had no duty to refer a counselee to psychiatric care. The court refused to extend the duty to prevent suicide, previously imposed on psychiatrists and hospitals caring for a suicidal patient, to non-licensed nontherapist counselors who provide counseling on "secular or spiritual matters." Id. 253 Cal.Rptr. at 110, 763 *P.*2d at 961. The court observed that "it would certainly be impractical, and quite possibly unconstitutional, to impose a duty of care on pastoral counselors. Such a duty would necessarily be intertwined with the religious philosophy of the particular denomination or ecclesiastical teachings of the religious entity." Id. 253 Cal.Rptr. at 109, 763 *P.*2d at 960.

We distinguish Nally from the present case on three grounds. First, constitutional considerations played a minimal role in the court's analysis. Second, the alleged breach of duty was closely connected with the content of the counseling and advice provided by the counselors. Lastly, Nally did not involve exploitation of the counselee for the counselors' sexual gratification.

Destefano v. Grabrian, 763 *P.*2d 275 (Colo.1988), was an action against a Catholic priest and diocese arising out of a marriage counseling relationship between the counselor-priest and a married couple, Robert and Edna Destefano. The priest and Edna became sexually involved, and the Destefanos' marriage dissolved. Robert commenced an action for damages, originally naming Edna as a co-defendant, and Edna cross-claimed against the priest and the diocese.

270 In evaluating Edna's claim, the court defined the "threshold issue" as whether the First Amendment immunized the priest's conduct. The court held that it did not because "[w]hen the alleged wrongdoing ... clearly falls outside the beliefs and doctrine of [the priest's] religion, he cannot avail himself of the protection afforded by the first amendment." Id. at 284.

Nevertheless, the court held that the claim for clergy malpractice was properly dismissed because "clergy malpractice is not supported by precedent and raises serious first amendment issues." Id. at 285. The court's ruling in this regard appears to have been based on Colorado licensing statutes which the court construed as evidencing "an intent to exclude religious counselors from the liability provision of the statute creating *262 liability for mental health professionals." Id. at 286.

The court, however, did recognize Edna's causes of action for breach of a fiduciary duty, intentional or reckless infliction of emotional distress through outrageous conduct, and, as against the diocese, negligent supervision of the priest. See also Moses v. Diocese of Colorado, 863 *P.*2d 310, 321 (Colo.1993) (reaffirming the viability of a cause of action for breach of fiduciary duty and the invalidity of a cause of action for clergy malpractice), cert. denied, --- U.S. 2153, 114 S.Ct. 2153, 128 *L.Ed.*2d 880 (1994).

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

Dausch v. Rykse, 52 *F.*3d 1425 (7th Cir.1994) was a diversity action applying Illinois law. Plaintiff alleged that she sought counseling from defendant Ryske, the pastor of her Presbyterian church. She alleged in her complaint that Ryske engaged "in sexual contact during the course of psychotherapy with the plaintiff, an emotionally dependent patient." Id. at 1427. Plaintiff appealed from the dismissal of her complaint for failure to state a claim upon which relief could be granted.

The court of appeals agreed with the trial court that a claim for clergy malpractice would not be viable under Illinois law, citing Baumgartner v. First Church of Christ, Scientist, 141 *Ill.App.*3d 898, 96 Ill.Dec. 114, 490 *N.E.*2d 1319, cert. denied, 479 U.S. 915, 107 S.Ct. 317, 93 *L.Ed.2d 290 (1986). 271Dausch, supra, 52 *F.*3d at 1432. The court in Baumgartner determined that an action for clergy malpractice was not justiciable because adjudication of such a complaint " 'would require the court to extensively investigate and evaluate religious tenets and doctrines.' " Dausch, supra, 52 *F.*3d at 1432 (quoting Baumgartner, supra, 96 Ill.Dec. 114, 490 *N.E.*2d at 1324.) [FN1] The court of appeals noted the risk of entangling civil courts in the examination of religious tenets if clergy malpractice were a recognized cause of action. Ibid.

> FN1. In footnote 4 of the Dausch opinion, 52 *F.*3d at 1432, the court of appeals lists state court decisions rejecting clergy malpractice.

The court of appeals, however, recognized that these First Amendment concerns have not been extended "to situations in which the conduct in question does not bear such a direct relationship to the doctrinal or organizational aspects of religious practice." Ibid. The court characterized "pastoral counseling" as "clearly and directly centered on matters of religion, and claims of negligence are not cognizable in the civil courts." Id. at 1433. However, if a church offers "purely secular counseling ... to the members of its congregation," those persons who provided such services on the church's behalf would be subject to civil adjudication of their performance. Ibid.

> Therefore, if a complaint alleges that the psychological services that were provided were "secular" in nature, or that the provider held himself out to be providing the services of a psychological counselor, the negligence claim cannot be characterized as one for clergy malpractice. Tort claims for behavior by a cleric that does not require the examination of religious doctrine are cognizable.
>
> [Ibid.]

The court of appeals held that some of the allegations in Mrs. Dausch's complaint could be read as stating a claim based on secular psychological counseling and not pastoral counseling. Consequently, it reversed the dismissal of plaintiff's claim based on professional negligence. Id. at 1435.

[5][6][7][8] The viability of a claim for clergy malpractice is an issue of first impression in New Jersey. Malpractice is a negligence 272 cause of action. It is nothing more than the negligent performance of a professional service. It is a deviation from the standards of performance applicable to the professional service in question. See Sanzari v. Rosenfeld, 34 N.J. 128, 134-35, 167 *A.*2d 625 (1961). A major distinction between the "usual negligence case" and a case of professional negligence is that in the latter, the standard of care ordinarily must be established by expert testimony. Id. at 134-35, 167 *A.*2d 625.

Regarding the risk of undue entanglement in ecclesiastical affairs arising out of a case of *263 clergy malpractice, we share the concerns of those courts that have addressed the issue. We are, however, persuaded that those concerns are overstated in circumstances, such as the present case, involving a cleric's sexual misconduct. Cf. Welter v. Seton Hall Univ., 128 N.J. 279, 291, 608

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

*A.*2d 206 (1992) (holding that defendants failed to demonstrate that an employment dispute turned "on issues of doctrine or polity" and, therefore, the trial court properly exercised jurisdiction and the "sincerity" of defendant's religious beliefs was not legally relevant to their jurisdictional claim). But cf. DeBose v. Bear Valley Church of Christ, 890 *P.*2d 214, 222 (Colo.Ct.App.1994) (reversing a judgment in favor of plaintiffs and holding that the trial court erred in not instructing the jury that the cleric could not be held liable if his massage of the minor plaintiff "was engaged in solely in a sincere effort to facilitate the minor's communication with God").

We are also persuaded that the distinction suggested in Dausch v. Rykse, supra, between pastoral counseling and secular psychological counseling, is unworkable because it is difficult to apply. A cleric's counseling activities may be infused with doctrinal and spiritual content, though the cleric is providing secular services regarding marital discord, depression, anxiety and parent-child conflicts.

We conclude that one test to determine whether a cause of action against a cleric is cognizable in civil courts is whether adjudication of the claim requires an evaluation of dogma or ritual, 273 or other matters of purely ecclesiastical concern. In the present case, it is unlikely that defendants will assert that sex with a counselee by a pastoral counselor is sanctioned by or somehow involves tenets of the Episcopalian church, or would otherwise create an entanglement with religious beliefs or rituals of First Amendment concern. See Strock v. Pressnell, 38 *Ohio St.*3d 207, 527 *N.E.*2d 1235 (1988) (holding that the First Amendment was not available as a defense in action against minister who had sexual relations with plaintiff's wife while counseling the couple regarding their marital difficulties).

Moreover, there is a bright line between counseling culminating in a sexual relationship with a counselee and other types of harms allegedly resulting from a failed counseling relationship. Cf. Nally v. Grace Community Church of the Valley, supra, 253 Cal.Rptr. 97, 763 *P.*2d at 948 (holding that claim for son's suicide was not actionable). Thus, we do not share the concern expressed in Schmidt v. Bishop, supra, 779 F.Supp. 321, that to recognize a cause of action for the sexual exploitation of a child would place civil courts "on the slippery slope," because we "must consider not only this case, but the next case to follow, and the ones after that, before we embrace the newly invented tort of clergy malpractice." Id. at 328.

Courts in other jurisdictions have recognized additional barriers to claims of clergy malpractice. The Ohio Supreme Court summarized some of them in Strock v. Pressnell, supra 527 *N.E.*2d at 1239:

> The reluctance of courts to embrace the tort of clergy malpractice may be attributed to the many, and often complex, questions that arise under it. For example, what exactly are the "professional services" rendered by a cleric? And does the standard of the professional vary with the ecclesiastical office? In other words, is a rabbi, priest, pastor, or lay elder held to the same standard of care regardless of training or wide variances in the authority and obligation of religious offices? Also, where a "professional service," such as the marriage counseling involved in this case, is not unique to the cleric, should the cleric be held to the same duty of care as secular counselors?
>
> [Ibid.]

274 We do not minimize these concerns. They appear, however, to present problems of proof and definition which should not be addressed on a motion to dismiss under R. 4:6-2(e), but rather, should await resolution on a more fully informed record.

Ultimately, the court in Strock rejected plaintiff's clergy malpractice claims because "[m]alpractice ... is not a theory of ordinary negligence or of intentional tort. It is a separate and distinct cause of action." *264 Strock, supra, 527 *N.E.*2d at 1239. To be recognized, clergy malpractice "must fall outside the scope of other recognized torts." Ibid. The court held that the alleged acts of the defendant "fell within the realm of intentional tort law," and, therefore, were not actionable as malpractice. Ibid. The court then reasoned that the intentional tort alleged in the complaint was an amatory action, such as alienation of affection and seduction, which the Ohio Legislature had abolished. Id. at 1240. The court concluded, therefore, that plaintiff's cause of action for intentional infliction of emotional distress could not be maintained. Id. at 1243. The court, for the same reason, ruled that a cause of action for breach of a fiduciary duty was not viable. Id. at 1243-44.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

[9] In New Jersey we have no rule that requires a cause of action to "fall outside the scope of other recognized torts" before it may be maintained. To the contrary, our rules permit the pleading of alternative causes of action "regardless of their consistency." R. 4:5-6. See Burd v. Sussex Mutual Ins. Co., 56 N.J. 383, 267 *A.*2d 7 (1970). In any event, as previously indicated, an action for malpractice is, at its core, a negligence action.

Sanders v. Casa View Baptist Church, 898 F.Supp. 1169 (N.D.Tex.1995), is another example of judicial reluctance to entertain a claim for clergy malpractice. In that case, the court denied a minister's motion for summary judgment. Ruling that plaintiffs could not maintain a claim based on clergy malpractice, the court construed the claim as one for "professional malpractice by a marriage counselor, not clergy malpractice." Id. at 1175. The action was deemed to be maintainable under that rubric.

275 Finally, in DeBose v. Bear Valley Church of Christ, supra, 890 *P.*2d 214, the court rejected a claim based on clergy malpractice because such a course of action would require the promulgation of standards against which a cleric's performance would be measured. The court stated that "[t]o attempt to require members of the clergy to comply with such a standard, however, could very well restrict their right freely to exercise and practice their religion." Id. at 225.

New Jersey courts have recognized causes of action for professional negligence against chiropractors, Rosenberg by Rosenberg v. Cahill, 99 N.J. 318, 492 *A.*2d 371 (1985), accountants, Rosenblum v. Adler, 93 N.J. 324, 461 *A.*2d 138 (1983), and real estate brokers, Paris of Wayne v. Richard A. Hajjar Agency, 174 N.J.Super. 310, 416 *A.*2d 436 (App.Div.), certif. denied, 85 N.J. 454, 427 *A.*2d 555 (1980); Sullivan v. Jefferson, Jefferson & Vaida, 167 N.J.Super. 282, 400 *A.*2d 836 (App.Div.1979). We perceive no impenetrable barrier, on the limited record before us, to establishing a standard of care applicable to cleric-counselors in the context of an allegation that the counselor used his position to sexually exploit the counselee. Cf. Simmons v. United States, 805 F. 2d 1363, 1365 (9th Cir.1986) (affirming judgment based on sexual exploitation of plaintiff by a social worker-counselor, discussing the "transference phenomenon" and noting that "[w]hen the therapist mishandles transference and becomes sexually involved with a patient, medical authorities are nearly unanimous in considering such conduct to be malpractice"); Corgan v. Muehling, 143 *Ill.*2d 296, 158 Ill.Dec. 489, 574 *N.E.*2d 602 (1991) (holding that complaint stated cause of action for negligence arising from psychologist's engaging in relations with plaintiff during course of treatment); N.J.A.C. 13:42-10.9 (prohibiting a psychologist licensed in New Jersey from engaging in sexual relations "with a current psychotherapy client, a former client, ... a current student, a direct supervisee or supervisor, or a research participant.").

Whether plaintiff can establish an applicable standard of care, show that MacDonell breached this standard, and prove the 276 damages proximately flowing from that breach, are all issues of proof which cannot be determined on a motion for judgment on the pleadings. Cf. Simmons v. United States, supra, 805 *F.*2d at 1366 (suggesting a distinction between a therapist-patient relationship and sexual involvement of a minister with a parishioner because the minister "does not offer a course of counselling predicated upon handling the transference phenomenon.") (citing A. Stone, M.D., Law, Psychiatry, and Morality 199 (1984)).

*265 Finally, we note again that this is a case of first impression in New Jersey. We also note that issues regarding inappropriate sexual behavior by clerics are matters of current public concern. We are persuaded that those issues should not be addressed except on a well-informed record. See Jackson v. Muhlenberg Hospital, 53 N.J. 138, 142, 249 *A.*2d 65 (1969).

[10] Although defendant Harper was not sexually involved with plaintiff, the trial court treated Count IX, alleging breach of a fiduciary, as a malpractice count and dismissed it on that basis. For the reasons expressed above, we conclude that the court erred in dismissing this "malpractice" count. We do not, however, foreclose the trial court, as the record develops below, from treating the fiduciary duty counts as stating causes of action separate and distinct from negligence-malpractice. See Moses v.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

Diocese of Colorado, supra, 863 *P.*2d 310; Destefano v. Grabrian, supra, 763 *P.*2d 275.

The order dismissing all counts against MacDonell and Count IX against Harper is reversed and the case is remanded for further proceedings.

677 A.2d 258, 291 N.J.Super. 262, 65 USLW 2010

END OF DOCUMENT

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

EXHIBIT 21

99 S.Ct. 35
439 U.S. 1369, 58 L.Ed.2d 63, 58 L.Ed.2d 77
(Cite as: 439 U.S. 1355, 99 S.Ct. 35)

Supreme Court of the United States

The GENERAL COUNCIL ON FINANCE AND ADMINISTRATION OF the UNITED METHODIST CHURCH, Petitioner,
v.
SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA, COUNTY OF SAN DIEGO (Frank T. Barr, et al., Real Parties in Interest).

No. A-200.

Aug. 24, 1978.
Sept. 1, 1978.

Illinois religious organization applied for a stay of a suit against it in a California state court pending Supreme Court consideration of its petition for writ of certiorari to review the assertion of personal jurisdiction over it. After issuing a temporary stay, Mr. Justice Rehnquist, as Circuit Justice, held that the application would be denied, because it was unlikely that the issue would command the votes necessary for certiorari, in that there was no indication that the California court failed to apply due process standards applicable to the exertion of long-arm jurisdiction.

Application denied; temporary stay terminated.

West Headnotes

[1] Federal Courts ⇐446
170Bk446 Most Cited Cases

Any intrusion into state court proceedings at interlocutory stage must be carefully considered and will be granted only upon showing of compelling necessity. (Per Mr. Justice Rehnquist, as Circuit Justice.)

[2] Federal Courts ⇐446
170Bk446 Most Cited Cases

Party seeking stay of state court judgment or proceeding in Supreme Court must first demonstrate that there is reasonable probability that four justices will consider issues sufficiently meritorious to vote to grant certiorari or note probable jurisdiction. (Per Mr. Justice Rehnquist, as Circuit Justice.)

[3] Constitutional Law ⇐84.5(7.1)
92k84.5(7.1) Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 92k84.5(7), 92k84)

[3] Constitutional Law ⇐274(3.1)
92k274(3.1) Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 92k274(3))

First and Fourteenth Amendments do not prevent civil court from independently examining and making ultimate decision regarding structure and actual operation of hierarchical church and its constituent units in purely secular dispute between church and third party. (Per Mr. Justice Rehnquist, as Circuit Justice.) U.S.C.A.Const. Amends. 1, 14.

[4] Constitutional Law ⇐84.5(7.1)
92k84.5(7.1) Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 92k84.5(7), 92k84)

[4] Constitutional Law ⇐274(3.1)
92k274(3.1) Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 92k274(3))

First and Fourteenth Amendments do not forbid resort to traditional minimum contacts analysis in determining the existence of personal jurisdiction over defendant that is affiliated with organized religion. (Per Mr. Justice Rehnquist, as Circuit Judge.) U.S.C.A.Const. Amends. 1, 14.

[5] Federal Courts ⇐446
170Bk446 Most Cited Cases

Suit against Illinois religious organization in California state court would not be stayed pending Supreme Court consideration of organization's petition for writ of certiorari to review propriety of extension of personal jurisdiction over organization, because it was unlikely that issue would command votes necessary for certiorari, in that there was no indication that California court failed to apply due process standards applicable to exertion of long-arm jurisdiction. (Per Mr. Justice Rehnquist, as Circuit Justice.) U.S.C.A.Const. Amends. 1, 14.

*36 ORDER GRANTING TEMPORARY STAY

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

*1355 Mr. Justice REHNQUIST, Circuit Justice.

Applicant requests that proceedings in the Superior Court of the State of California for the County of San Diego in which it is a defendant be stayed as to it pending consideration by this Court of its petition for a writ of certiorari to review the judgment of that court filed March 20, 1978. I have decided to grant a temporary stay of the proceedings against applicant pending receipt and my consideration of a response to the application.

Applicant has, in my opinion, inexcusably delayed the filing of its application for a stay. The Supreme Court of the State of California denied applicant's petition for hearing on its request for a writ of mandate on July 27, 1978. On August 3, 1978, the Superior Court granted applicant 30 days from July 27, 1978, until August 28, in which to plead, but denied any additional stay of the proceedings. Applicant did not seek any further stay of the proceedings from either the California Court of Appeal or the California Supreme Court. Nevertheless, it did not file its application for a stay in this Court until August 22, nearly three weeks after the Superior Court's order and only six days before it was required to plead.

*1356 It is only because a delay of a few days will have virtually no effect on the progress of the state-court proceedings that I have decided to grant this temporary stay. It should be noted, however, that in deciding whether to grant or deny any further relief of this nature beyond that provided in this order, I shall take into consideration the above-described delay on the applicant's part.

ORDER DENYING STAY

*1369 Mr. Justice REHNQUIST, Circuit Justice.

The General Council on Finance and Administration of the United Methodist Church requests that proceedings in the Superior Court of the State of California for the County of San Diego, in which it is a defendant, be stayed as to it pending this Court's consideration of its petition for a writ of certiorari. Applicant, an Illinois not-for-profit corporation, is one of six defendants in a class action seeking, inter alia, damages for breach of contract, fraud, and violations of state securities laws arising out of the financial collapse of the Pacific Homes Corp., a California nonprofit corporation that operated 14 retirement homes and convalescent hospitals on the west coast. Barr v. United Methodist Church, No. 404611 (Cal.Super.Ct., San Diego County, Mar. 20, 1978). Respondent real parties 37 in interest (hereafter respondents), some 1,950 present and former residents of the homes, allege that Pacific Homes was the alter ego, agency, or instrumentality of the United Methodist Church (Methodist Church), applicant, and certain other defendants affiliated with the Methodist Church. The judgment at issue is the Superior *1370 Court's denial of applicant's motion to quash service of process for lack of in personam jurisdiction. That court, in a minute order decision, concluded that applicant was "doing business" in the State of California and, therefore, was subject to the jurisdiction of the California courts. Applicant's petition for a writ of mandate to review the judgment of the Superior Court was denied by the Court of Appeal for the Fourth Appellate District in a one-sentence order, and the California Supreme Court summarily denied applicant's petition for a hearing on the issue. Thereafter, applicant was ordered by the Superior Court to respond to respondents' complaint on or before August 28, 1978. I granted a temporary stay of the proceedings below to permit consideration of a response to the application. Ante, p. 36.

Applicant challenges the Superior Court's order on three grounds. First, citing this Court's decision in Serbian Eastern Orthodox Diocese v. Milivojevich, 426 U.S. 696, 96 S.Ct. 2372, 49 L.Ed.2d 151 (1976), applicant maintains that the Superior Court violated the First and Fourteenth Amendments in basing its assertion of jurisdiction on respondents' characterization of applicant's role in the structure of the Methodist Church and rejecting contrary testimony of church officials and experts and statements set forth in the Book of Discipline, which contains the constitution and bylaws of the Methodist Church. Applicant's next contention is that use of the "minimum- contacts" standard of International Shoe Co. v. Washington, 326 U.S. 310, 66 S.Ct. 154, 90 L.Ed. 95 (1945), in determining jurisdiction over a nonresident religious organization violates the First and Fourteenth Amendments. Finally, applicant argues that even under the traditional minimum-contacts mode of analysis, its connection with the State of California is too attenuated, under the standards implicit in the Due Process Clause of the Fourteenth Amendment, to justify imposing upon it the burden of a defense in California.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

Because the Superior Court's order denied a pretrial motion, 1371 an initial question is whether the judgment below is "final" within the meaning of 28 U.S.C. § 1257 (1976 ed.), which permits this Court to review only "[f]inal judgments or decrees rendered by the highest court of a State in which a decision could be had . . . ." Applicant argues that it can preserve its jurisdictional argument only by suffering a default judgment, since under California law in order to defend on the merits it must appear generally and, accordingly, waive its objection to in personam jurisdiction. See McCorkle v. Los Angeles, 70 Cal.2d 252, 74 Cal.Rptr. 389, 449 P.2d 453 (1969). It therefore finds itself between Scylla and Charybdis, and, citing Shaffer v. Heitner, 433 U.S. 186, 97 S.Ct. 2569, 53 L.Ed.2d 683 (1977), asserts that under such circumstances the Superior Court's judgment is final. In Shaffer, this Court taking a "pragmatic approach" to the question of finality, held that a Delaware court's pretrial decision to assert jurisdiction over the defendants was final within the meaning of § 1257 because under Delaware law the defendants' only choices were to incur default judgments or to file general appearances and defend on the merits, thereby submitting themselves to the court's jurisdiction. 433 U.S., at 195-196, n. 12, 97 S.Ct. at 2575-2576. Respondents contest applicant's interpretation of California procedural law. They claim that a defendant can defend on the merits and still preserve his jurisdictional objections so long as he seeks immediate appellate review of an adverse decision on a motion to quash. See Cal.Civ.Proc.Code Ann. § 418.10 (West 1973). As noted above, applicant did avail itself of this procedure.

If the views of the respective parties are each to be credited, California law may not be clear on this issue, and it certainly is not 38 within my province to resolve their differences with respect to it. [FN] If California procedural law is as applicant 1372 describes it, I am convinced that this Court would find the Superior Court's judgment to be "final" within the meaning of § 1257. See Shaffer v. Heitner, supra; Cox Broadcasting Corp. v. Cohn, 420 U.S. 469, 95 S.Ct. 1029, 43 L.Ed.2d 328 (1975). I need not resolve this issue, however, since I have concluded that even if the Superior Court's order were a final judgment under § 1257, a stay is nonetheless not warranted in this case.

> FN* I recognize that in determining whether to grant a stay, Members of this Court may hold differing views on the weight to be accorded any doubt as to the finality of a state-court judgment. See New York Times Co. v. Jascalevich, 439 U.S. 1331, 99 S.Ct. 11, 58 L.Ed.2d 38 (MARSHALL, J., in chambers); New York Times Co. v. Jascalevich, 439 U.S. 1317, 99 S.Ct. 6, 58 L.Ed.2d 25 (WHITE, J., in chambers); Bateman v. Arizona, 429 U.S. 1302, 1306, 97 S.Ct. 1, 3, 50 L.Ed.2d 32 (1976) (REHNQUIST, J., in chambers). It is not necessary to explore that issue in this case.

[1][2] Any intrusion into state-court proceedings at an interlocutory stage must be carefully considered and will be granted only upon a showing of compelling necessity. Bateman v. Arizona, 429 U.S. 1302, 1305, 97 S.Ct. 1, 3, 50 L.Ed.2d 32 (1976) (REHNQUIST, J., in chambers). Those proceedings are presumptively valid. See Whalen v. Roe, 423 U.S. 1313, 1316, 96 S.Ct. 164, 165, 46 L.Ed.2d 18 (1975) (MARSHALL, J., in chambers). A party seeking a stay of a state-court judgment or proceeding must first demonstrate that there is a reasonable probability that four Justices will consider the issues sufficiently meritorious to vote to grant certiorari or note probable jurisdiction. Bateman v. Arizona, supra, 429 U.S. at 1305, 97 S.Ct. at 3. Applicant has failed to clear this first hurdle.

[3][4] In my view, applicant plainly is wrong when it asserts that the First and Fourteenth Amendments prevent a civil court from independently examining, and making the ultimate decision regarding, the structure and actual operation of a hierarchical church and its constituent units in an action such as this. There are constitutional limitations on the extent to which a civil court may inquire into and determine matters of ecclesiastical cognizance and polity in adjudicating intrachurch disputes. See Serbian Eastern Orthodox Diocese v. Milivojevich. But this Court never has suggested that those constraints similarly apply outside the context of such intraorganization disputes. Thus, Serbian Eastern Orthodox Diocese and the other cases cited by applicant are not in point. *1373 Those cases are premised on a perceived danger that in resolving intrachurch disputes the State will become entangled in essentially religious controversies or intervene on behalf of groups espousing particular doctrinal beliefs. 426 U.S., at 709-710, 96 S.Ct., at 2380-2381. Such considerations are not applicable to purely secular disputes between third parties and a particular defendant, albeit a religious affiliated organization, in which fraud, breach of contract, and statutory violations are alleged. As the Court stated in another context: "Nothing we have said is intended even remotely to imply that, under the cloak of religion, persons may, with impunity, commit frauds upon the public." Cantwell v. Connecticut, 310 U.S. 296, 306, 60 S.Ct. 900, 904, 84 L.Ed. 1213 (1940). Nor is it entirely clear that the Superior Court's determination of the jurisdictional question was based upon its interpretation of Methodist polity; it is equally likely that the court's decision was founded on the related but separate issue of applicant's contacts with the State of California.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

Likewise untenable, in my view, is applicant's claim that the First and Fourteenth Amendments somehow forbid resort to traditional minimum-contacts analysis in determining the existence of in personam jurisdiction over a defendant that is affiliated with an organized religion. Not surprisingly, applicant has failed to cite any authority in support of this novel proposition.

[5] The only remaining issue presented by applicant is whether the quality and 39 nature of its contacts with the State of California are such that "maintenance of the suit [in the forum state] does not offend 'traditional notions of fair play and substantial justice.' " International Shoe Co. v. Washington, 326 U.S., at 316, 66 S.Ct., at 158, quoting, Milliken v. Meyer, 311 U.S. 457, 463, 61 S.Ct. 339, 342, 85 L.Ed. 278 (1940). Such questions generally tend to depend on the particular facts of each case, Kulko v. California Superior Court, 436 U.S. 84, 98 S.Ct. 1690, 56 L.Ed.2d 132 (1978), and I believe that only a marked departure by a lower court in the application of established law would persuade four Justices to grant certiorari. While *1374 the Superior Court's decision does not purport to resolve all of the factual disputes between the parties, there is no indication that it failed to apply the due process standards enunciated in International Shoe, and cases which have followed it, to the circumstances presented, and, therefore, I believe it unlikely that this issue would command the votes necessary for certiorari.

Accordingly, the application for a stay pending review on certiorari is denied. The temporary stay I previously entered is hereby terminated.

99 S.Ct. 35, 439 U.S. 1355, 439 U.S. 1369, 58 L.Ed.2d 63, 58 L.Ed.2d 77

END OF DOCUMENT

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

EXHIBIT 22

50 S.Ct. 5
74 L.Ed. 131
(Cite as: 280 U.S. 1, 50 S.Ct. 5)

Supreme Court of the United States

GONZALEZ
v.
ROMAN CATHOLIC ARCHBISHOP OF MANILA.

No. 6.

Argued April 8, 9, 1929.
Decided Oct. 14, 1929.

On Certiorari to the Supreme Court of the Philippine Islands.

Suit by Raul Rogerio Gonzalez against the Roman Catholic Archbishop of Manila. Decree for petitioner in the Court of First Instance of Manila was reversed by the Supreme Court of the Philippine Islands, and petitioner brings certiorari. Judgment of Supreme Court affirmed.

West Headnotes

[1] Federal Courts ⇐491
170Bk491 Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 106k387(3))

Supreme Court has jurisdiction of suit between residents of Philippine Islands involving amount in excess of $25,000. Act Feb. 13, 1925, c. 229, § 7; 28 U.S.C.A. § 349.

[2] Religious Societies ⇐24
332k24 Most Cited Cases

Philippine courts had jurisdiction of suit against Roman Catholic archbishop involving trust, notwithstanding petitioner's right rested on heirship to collative chaplaincy, as to which ecclesiastical courts asserted exclusive jurisdiction.

[3] Religious Societies ⇐12(5)
332k12(5) Most Cited Cases

Determination of church authorities as to qualifications of applicant for chaplaincy are conclusive in secular courts.

[4] Religious Societies ⇐27(1)
332k27(1) Most Cited Cases

Right to chaplaincy under deed of foundation held to depend on canonical law at date of applicant's presentation, and not that in force at date of foundation.

[5] Charities ⇐48(1)
75k48(1) Most Cited Cases

Relative of founder of trust creating chaplaincy, denied appointment as chaplain for want of qualifications, held not entitled to claim surplus income of trust fund, in view of provisions of deed of foundation.

[6] Judgment ⇐256(5)
228k256(5) Most Cited Cases

One suing individually cannot claim relief as representative of class.
*5 *3 Messrs. Howard Thayer Kingsbury and Frederic R. Coudert, both of New York City, for petitioner.

6 Messrs. William D. Guthrie and George J. Gillespie, both of New York City, for respondent.

10 Mr. Justice BRANDEIS delivered the opinion of the Court.

This case is here on certiorari to the Supreme Court of the Philippine Islands. 278 U. S. 588, 49 S. Ct. 17, 73 L. Ed. 522. The subject-matter is a collative chaplaincy in the Roman Catholic Archdiocese of Manila, which has been vacant since December 1910. [FN1] The main questions for decision are whether the petitioner is legally entitled to be appointed the chaplain, and whether he shall recover the surplus income accrued during the vacancy.

FN1 A chaplaincy in the Roman Catholic Church is an institution founded by an individual for the purpose of celebrating or causing to be celebrated annually a certain number of masses conforming to the will of the founder. Chaplaincies are commonly divided into two classes-lay and ecclesiastical. A laical or mercenary chaplaincy is one instituted without the intervention of ecclesiastical authority, does not require a title in order to be ordained, and is not subject to ecclesiastical authority. The ecclesiastical or collative chaplaincy, although also founded by an individual, is one erected into a benefice by the proper spiritual authority, requires a title of ordination, and is thus subject to ecclesiastical control. When the foundation of an ecclesiastical or collative chaplaincy calls for relatives of the founder to enjoy the chaplaincy, it is called colativa familiar. When individuals of a certain family are not called to the possession, but the patron is authorized to nominate, then the chaplaincy is called colativa simple or gentilicia. But whether the chaplaincy is colativa familiar or colativa simple, intervention of the proper spiritual authority to appoint and ordain is essential. Alcubilla, Diccionario de la Administration Espanola, (5th Ed.) vol. II, p. 259; The Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. III, p. 580.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

6 [1] Raul Rogerio Gonzalez, by his guardian ad litem, brought the suit against the archbishop in the court of *11 first instance of Manila, on August 5, 1924. He prayed for judgment declaring the petitioner the lawful heir to the chaplaincy and its income; establishing the right of the petitioner and his successors to be appointed to and receive the income of the chaplaincy during their infancy whenever it may be vacant and, pending such appointment, to receive the income for their maintenance and support; declaring the trust character of the property and ordering it to be so recorded; directing the archbishop to appoint the petitioner chaplain and to account to him for the income of the property from 1910 on; and directing the defendant to pay the petitioner 1,000 pesos a month pending the final determination of the case. The trial court directed the archbishop to appoint the petitioner chaplain; and ordered payment to him of 173,725 pesos ($86,862.50), that sum being the aggregate net income of the chaplaincy during the vacancy, less the expense of having the prescribed masses celebrated in each year. It reserved to the petitioner any legal right he may have to proceed in the proper court for cancellation of the certificate of registration of the property in the name of the archbishop. The Supreme Court of the Philippine Islands reversed the judgment on February 4, 1928, and absolved the archbishop from the complaint, 'without prejudice to the right of proper persons in interest to proceed for independent relief,' in respect to the income accrued during the vacancy, or in respect to the reformation of the certificate of registration so as to show the fiduciary character of the title. As the amount in controversy exceeds $25,000, this court has jurisdiction on certiorari. Act Feb. 13, 1925, c. 229, s 7, 43 Stat. 936, 940 (28 USCA s 349).

The chaplaincy was founded in 1820, under the will of Don a Petronila de Guzman. By it, she requested 'the father chaplain to celebrate sixty masses annually' in behalf of the souls of her parents, brothers, sisters, and *12 herself. The deed of foundation, which was executed by the testamentary executor of Don a Petronila, provided that 'said property is segregated from temporal properties and transferred to the spiritual properties of this archbishopric, without its being possible to alienate or convert the property as such into any other estate for any cause, even though it be of a more pious character, * * * so that by virtue of this deed of foundation canonical collation may be conferred on the said appointed chaplain.' By appropriate proceedings an ecclesiastical decree approved 'the foundation of the chaplaincy with all the circumstances and conditions provided for in said clause (of the wall) and in the deed of said clause (of the will) and in the deed of of seventeen hundred pesos against said building, converting said sum into spiritual property of a perpetual character subject to the ecclesiastical forum and jurisdiction.'

The will provided that the foundation should effect the immediate appointment as chaplain of D. Esteban de Guzman, the great-grandson of the testatrix, and 'in his default the nearest relative, and in default of the latter a collegian (colegial) of San Juan de Letran, who should be an orphan mestizo, native of this said town.' It named the president of that college as the patron of the chaplaincy. Esteban was appointed chaplain in 1820. From time to time thereafter four other descendants of the testatrix were successively appointed. The latest of these renounced the chaplaincy in December, 1910, married soon thereafter, and in 1912 became the father of the petitioner, Raul Rogerio Gonzalez, who is a legitimate son of the fifth chaplain, and claims to be the nearest relative in descent from the first chaplain and the foundress.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

Raul was presented to the archbishop for appointment in 1922. The archbishop refused to appoint him, on the ground that he did not then have 'the qualifications required for chaplain of the said chaplaincy.' He added: *13 'The grounds of my conclusion are the very canons of the new Code of Canon Law. Among others, I can mention canon 1442, which says: 'Simple chaplaincies or benefices are conferred upon clergymen of the secular clergy,' in connection with canon 108, paragraph 1, 'Clergymen are those already initiated in the first tonsure,' and canon 976, paragraph 1, 'No one can be promoted to first tonsure before he has begun the course in theology.' In view of the canon as above mentioned, and other reasons which may be adduced, I believe that the boy, Raul Gonzalez, is not legally (ecclesiastically speaking) capacitated to the enjoyment of a chaplaincy.'

Ever since the Council of Trent (1545-1563), it has been the law of the church that no one can be appointed to a collative chaplaincy before his fourteenth year. When Raul was presented for appointment, he was in his tenth year. He was less than 12 when this suit was begun. He was 14 when the trial court entered its judgment. It is also urged on behalf of the archbishop that at no time since that Council could one be lawfully appointed who lacked elementary knowledge of Christian doctrine.

The new Codex Juris Canonici, which was adopted in Rome in 1917 and was promulgated by the church, to become effective in 1918, provides that no one shall be appointed to a collative chaplaincy who is not a cleric. Canon 1442. It requires students for the priesthood to attend a seminary; and prescribes their studies. Canons 1354, 1364. It provides that in order to be a cleric one must have had 'prima tonsura' (Canon 108, par. 1); that in order to have 'prima tonsura' one must have begun the study of theology (Canon 976, par. 1); and that in order to study 7 theology one must be a 'bachiller'-that is, must have obtained the first degree in the sciences and liberal arts (Canon 1365). It also provides that no one may validly receive ordination, unless in the opinion of the ordinary he *14 has the necessary qualifications. Canon 968, par. 1, 1464. Petitioner concedes that the chaplaincy here involved is a collative one, and that Raul lacked, at the time of his presentment and of the commencement of the suit, the age qualification required by the canon law in force when the chaplaincy was founded. [FN2] It is also conceded that he lacked, then and at the time of the entry of the judgment, other qualifications of a candidate for a collative chaplaincy essential, if the new Codex was applicable.

> FN2 In order to overcome this obstacle, petitioner filed an amended complaint in the trial court, without objection, when he was in his fourteenth year. The Supreme Court assumed 'for the purposes of this decision that the immaturity of the plaintiff in point of age is not a fatal obstacle to the maintenance of the action.'

Raul's contention, in effect, is that the nearest male relative in descent from the foundress and the first chaplain, willing to be appointed chaplain, is entitled to enjoy the revenues of the foundation, subject only to the duty of saying himself the sixty masses in each year, if he is qualified so to do, or of causing them to be said by a qualified priest and paying the customary charge therefor out of the income. He claims that the provisions of the new Codex are not applicable, and that his rights are to be determined by the canon law in force at the time the chaplaincy was founded, and that the judgment of the trial court should be reinstated, because he possessed at the time of the entry of the judgment all the qualifications required by the canon law in force in 1820. Raul argues that contemporaneous construction and long usage have removed any doubt as to what these qualifications were; that when the foundation was established, and for a long time thereafter, the ecclesiastical character of the incumbent was a minor consideration; that this is shown by the administration of this chaplaincy; and that his own ecclesiastical qualifications, at the time of the entry of the *15 judgment in the trial court, were not inferior to those of the prior incumbents. He asserts that, although chaplaincies were disamortized in Spain prior to 1867 (Alcubilla, Diccionario, Vol. II, p. 118), they had in the Philippines remained undisturbed by any legislation of Spain, and that the rights of the church were preserved by article 8, of the Treaty of Paris. 30 Stat. 1754, 1758; Ponce v. Roman Catholic Church, 210 U. S. 296, 315-322, 28 S. Ct. 737, 52 L. Ed. 1068. He contends that to deprive him of his alleged right to the chaplaincy because of a change made in 1918 in the canon law would violate the Constitution of the United States, the Treaty with Spain of 1898, and the Organic Act of the Philippine Islands (32 Stat. 691).

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

The trial court rested its judgment for Raul largely on the ground that he possessed, at the time of its entry, the qualifications required by the canon law in force when the chaplaincy was founded, and that, hence, he was entitled both to be appointed chaplain and to recover the income accrued during the vacancy, even though he did not possess the qualifications prescribed by the new Codex then otherwise in force. The Supreme Court held that to give effect to the provisions of the new Codex would not impair the obligation of the contract made in 1820, as it was an implied term of the deed of foundation that the qualifications of a chaplain should be such as the church authorities might prescribe from time to time, and that, since Raul confessedly did not possess the qualifications prescribed by the new Codex which had been promulgated before he was presented, he could not be appointed.

[2] First. The archbishop interposes here, as he did below, an objection to the jurisdiction of the Philippine courts. He insists that, since the chaplaincy is confessedly a collative one, its property became spiritual property of a perpetual character subject to the jurisdiction of the ecclesiastical *16 forum, and that thereby every controversy concerning either the right to appointment or the right to the income was removed from the jurisdiction of secular courts. The objection is not sound. The courts have jurisdiction of the parties. For the archbishop is a juristic person amenable to the Philippine courts for the enforcement of any legal right; and the petitioner asserts such a right. There is jurisdiction of the subject-matter; for the petitioner's claim is, in substance, that he is entitled to the relief sought as the beneficiary of a trust.

[3] The fact that the property of the chaplaincy was transferred to the spiritual properties of the archbishopric affects not the jurisdiction of the court, but the terms of the trust. Watson v. Jones, 13 Wall. 679, 714, 729, 20 L. Ed. 666. The archbishop's claim in this respect is that by an implied term of the gift, the property, which was to be held by the church, should be administered in such manner and by such persons as may be prescribed by the church from time to time. Among the church's laws, which are thus claimed to be applicable, are those creating tribunals for the determination of ecclesiastical controversies. Because the appointment is a canonical act, it is the function of the church authorities to determine what the essential qualifications of a chaplain are and whether the candidate possesses them. In the absence of fraud, collusion, or arbitrariness, the decisions of the proper church tribunals on matters purely ecclesiastical, although 8 affecting civil rights, are accepted in litigation before the secular courts as conclusive, because the parties in interest made them so by contract or otherwise. [FN3] Under like circumstances, effect is given in the courts to the determinations *17 of the judicatory bodies established by clubs and civil associations. [FN4]

FN3 Watson v. Jones, 13 Wall. 679, 727, 733, 20 L. Ed. 666; Shepard v. Barkley, 247 U. S. 1, 38 S. Ct. 422, 62 L. Ed. 939; Barkley v. Hayes (D. C.) 208 F. 319, 327, affirmed sub. nom. Duvall v. Synod of Kansas (C. C. A.) 222 F. 669; Brundage v. Deardorf (C. C. A.) 92 F. 214, 228; Connitt v. Reformed Protestant Dutch Church, 54 N. Y. 551, 562.

FN4 Commonwealth v. Union League, 135 Pa. 301, 327, 19 A. 1030, 8 L. R. A. 195, 20 Am. St. Rep. 870; Engel v. Walsh, 258 Ill. 98, 103, 101 N. E. 222, 45 L. R. A. (N. S.) 353; Richards v. Morison, 229 Mass. 458, 461, 118 N. E. 868; People ex rel. Johnson v. New York Produce Exchange, 149 N. Y. 401, 409, 410, 413, 414, 44 N. E. 84; Van Poucke v. Netherland St. Vincent De Paul Society, 63 Mich. 378, 29 N. W. 863.

[4] Second. The archbishop contended that Raul lacked even the minimum of training and knowledge of Christian doctrine made indispensable by the canon law in force in 1820; that his confessed lack of the essential age at the time of the presentment and also at the time of the institution of the suit were insurmountable obstacles to the granting of the prayer for appointment to the chaplaincy; and, moreover, that the failure to take an appeal to the Pope from the decision of the archbishop, as provided by the canon law, precluded resort to legal proceedings. We have no occasion to consider the soundness of these contentions. For we are of opinion that the canon law in force at the time of the presentation governs, and the lack of the qualification prescribed by it is admitted. Neither the foundress, nor the church authorities, can have intended that the perpetual chaplaincy created in 1820 should, in respect to the qualifications of an incumbent, be forever administered according to the canons of the church which happened to be in force at that date. The parties to the foundation clearly contemplated that the archbishop would, before ordination, exercise his judgment as to the fitness of the applicant; and they must have contemplated that, in the course of the centuries, the standard of fitness would be modified.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

When the new Codex was promulgated in 1918, Raul was only six years old and had not yet been presented. If he had been presented, he obviously could not have been appointed. No right was then being enjoyed by him *18 of which the promulgation of the new Codex deprived him. When he was presented later, he was ineligible under the then existing canon law. In concluding that Raul lacked the qualifications essential for a chaplain the archbishop appears to have followed the controlling canon law. There is not even a suggestion that he exercised his authority arbitrarily.

[5] Third. Raul urges that, even though he is not entitled to be appointed chaplain, he is entitled to recover the surplus net income earned during the vacancy. Indeed, it is the property rights involved that appear to be his main consideration. The value of the property in 1820 was about 1,700 pesos. The annual net income was then 180 pesos, a sum sufficient only to defray the annual expense of 60 masses. The annual net income has grown to about 12,000 pesos, and the annual expense of the 60 masses does not now exceed 300 pesos. In each year during the vacancy the masses have been duly celebrated. The surplus income accruing during the vacancy has been used by the archbishop currently for pious purposes, namely, education. By canon 1481 of the new Codex, the surplus income of a chaplaincy, after deducting expenses of the acting chaplain, must one-half be added to the endowment or capital and one- half to the repair of the church, unless there is a custom of using the whole for some common good to the diocese. The use made of the surplus of this chaplaincy was in accordance with what was claimed to be the long established custom of the archdiocese. Both the custom and the specific application made of this surplus have been approved by the Holy See. The Supreme Court held that, since Raul had sought the income only as an incident of the chaplaincy, he could not recover anything.

Raul's claim, which is made even in respect to income accrued prior to his birth, is rested upon some alleged right by inheritance, although his father is still living. *19 The intention of the foundress, so far as expressed, was that the income should be applied to the celebration of masses and to the living of the chaplain, who should preferably be the nearest male relative in the line of descent from herself or the first chaplain. The claim that Raul individually is entitled as nearest relative to the surplus by inheritance is unsupported by anything in the deed of gift or the applicable law. Since Raul is not entitled to be appointed chaplain, he is not entitled to a living from the income of the chaplaincy.

[6] Raul urges also an alleged right as representative of the heirs of the testatrix as a class. This suggestion was, we think, properly met by the ruling of the Supreme Court that the suit was not brought as a class suit. Whether the surplus income earned during the vacancy has been properly disposed of by the archbishop and what disposition shall be made of it in the future we have no occasion to inquire. The entry of the judgment without prejudice 'to the right of proper persons in interest to proceed for independent relief' leaves any existing right of that nature unaffected.

Affirmed.

END OF DOCUMENT

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

EXHIBIT 23

913 S.W.2d 92
106 Ed. Law Rep. 415
(Cite as: 913 S.W.2d 92)

Missouri Court of Appeals, Eastern District.

H.R.B. and B.B., Plaintiffs/Appellants,
v.
J.L.G., and Archbishop Justin Rigali of the Archdiocese of the City of St. Louis, Missouri, and Church of the Immaculate Conception School and Parish, by and through Father John Gavin, Defendants/Respondents.

No. 68010.

Dec. 19, 1995.

Former student of church-run school brought action for breach of fiduciary duties and personal injuries against priest, church official, and church arising from alleged child sexual abuse occurring approximately 30 years earlier. The Circuit Court, City of St. Louis, James R. Dowd, J., dismissed action. Former student appealed. The Court of Appeals, Gary M. Gaertner, J., held that: (1) as matter of first impression, former student could not bring action for breach of fiduciary duty against priest, church official, and church, since such action would require court to inquire into religious aspects of duty owed by priest and divisions of church to parishioners; (2) petition did not indicate on its face and without exception that claim was time barred, and priest's motion to dismiss thus should not have been granted; and (3) church was not liable under doctrine of respondeat superior for priest's alleged acts.

Affirmed in part; reversed and remanded in part.

West Headnotes

[1] Assault and Battery ⇐21
37k21 Most Cited Cases

[1] Limitation of Actions ⇐31
241k31 Most Cited Cases

Action for sexual abuse may be brought as battery action, in which case plaintiff has two years to file action, or action may be brought pursuant to statute that requires that tort actions not specifically enumerated by statute, but recognized at law, be brought within five years. V.A.M.S. §§ 516.120(4), 516.140.

[2] Limitation of Actions ⇐72(1)
241k72(1) Most Cited Cases

If alleged sexual abuse occurred when plaintiff was minor, statute tolls applicable statute of limitations until plaintiff turn 21. V.A.M.S. § 516.170.

[3] Limitation of Actions ⇐6(9)
241k6(9) Most Cited Cases

Statute providing for independent civil actions for damages suffered as result of childhood sexual abuse does not revive actions that have expired prior to its effective date, and, if plaintiff's suit was already barred by existing statute of limitations on that date, defendant has obtained vested right to be free from suit. V.A.M.S. § 537.046.

[4] Limitation of Actions ⇐179(2)
241k179(2) Most Cited Cases

Petition in personal injury action by former student of church-run school against priest alleging child sexual abuse did not indicate on its face and without exception that claim was time barred, and priest's motion to dismiss thus should not have been granted; former student's allegation that he developed "psychological coping mechanisms" could encompass involuntary repression of memory consistent with former student being unaware of harm or legal harm done to him at time of alleged abuse. V.A.M.S. §§ 516.120(4), 537.046.

[5] Limitation of Actions ⇐95(1)
241k95(1) Most Cited Cases

In determining when statute of limitations begins running, damage is ascertainable when fact of damage can be discovered or made known, not when plaintiff actually discovers injury or wrongful conduct; when damage is ascertainable is objective determination.

[6] Limitation of Actions ⇐180(7)
241k180(7) Most Cited Cases

If statute of limitations raised as affirmative

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

defense, trial court may not dismiss unless it is clearly established, on petition's face and without exception, that action is barred.

[7] Appeal and Error ⇐919
30k919 Most Cited Cases

In reviewing dismissal of petition, reviewing courts must allow pleading its broadest intendment, treating all facts alleged as true and construing petition's allegations favorably to plaintiff.

[8] Appeal and Error ⇐916(1)
30k916(1) Most Cited Cases

Court of Appeals was required to allow pleading its broadest intendment and to construe petition's allegations favorably to plaintiff.

[9] Appeal and Error ⇐916(1)
30k916(1) Most Cited Cases

Court of Appeals must take all allegations in petition as true, suspending any skepticism as to merits of plaintiff's allegations.

[10] Appeal and Error ⇐856(2)
30k856(2) Most Cited Cases

Court of Appeals will affirm dismissal of petition if it can be sustained on any ground presented to and considered by trial court, regardless of whether court relied on that ground.

[11] Religious Societies ⇐30
332k30 Most Cited Cases

Church was not liable under doctrine of respondeat superior for priest's alleged acts of sexual abuse against student of church-run school; alleged acts were not part of priest's duties as priest or teacher, and were not intended to further any religious or educational interests of church.

[12] Master and Servant ⇐302(1)
255k302(1) Most Cited Cases

Under doctrine of respondeat superior, employer is liable to third parties for tort committed by employee, if tort was committed while employee was engaged in activities within course and scope of his or her employment.

[13] Master and Servant ⇐302(1)
255k302(1) Most Cited Cases

Act is committed within "scope and course of employment," for purposes of determining employer's liability for tort committed by employee, if it is done by virtue of the employment and in furtherance of the business or interest of employer, regardless of time or motive of conduct.

[14] Master and Servant ⇐302(1)
255k302(1) Most Cited Cases

If act is fairly and naturally incident to employer's business, although mistakenly or ill advisedly done, and did not arise wholly from some external, independent or personal motive, it is done while engaged in employer's business, for purposes of determining whether employer is liable for tort committed by its employee.

[15] Religious Societies ⇐31(1)
332k31(1) Most Cited Cases

Clergy and religious organizations are not absolutely immune from civil liability.

[16] Constitutional Law ⇐84.5(7.1)
92k84.5(7.1) Most Cited Cases

[16] Religious Societies ⇐30
332k30 Most Cited Cases

Tort actions against religious groups or persons are not offensive to First Amendment if based on purely secular activities, and related to their religious function; if alleged wrongdoing was clearly outside tenets of the religion, notwithstanding its religious pretext, then it is actionable. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 1.

[17] Constitutional Law ⇐84.5(7.1)
92k84.5(7.1) Most Cited Cases

[17] Constitutional Law ⇐84.5(10)
92k84.5(10) Most Cited Cases

[17] Religious Societies ⇐30
332k30 Most Cited Cases

Former student of church-run school could not bring action for breach of fiduciary duty, arising from alleged sexual abuse by priest, against priest, church official, and church, since such action would inevitably require court to inquire into religious aspects of duty owed by priest and divisions of church to parishioners. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 1.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

[18] Constitutional Law ⚖84.1
92k84.1 Most Cited Cases

[18] Religious Societies ⚖14
332k14 Most Cited Cases

First Amendment does not allow secular courts to judge sectarian matters. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 1.

[19] Husband and Wife ⚖209(3)
205k209(3) Most Cited Cases

[19] Husband and Wife ⚖209(4)
205k209(4) Most Cited Cases

When married person is injured, two independent, separate and distinct causes of action arise, one accruing to injured person for injuries, and the other accruing to injured person's spouse for damages suffered as result of his or her loss of injured person's services, society and companionship.

[20] Husband and Wife ⚖209(3)
205k209(3) Most Cited Cases

[20] Husband and Wife ⚖209(4)
205k209(4) Most Cited Cases

Loss of consortium action is derivative only; spouse cannot recover for loss of consortium if other spouse has no valid claim for personal injuries.

[21] Husband and Wife ⚖209(3)
205k209(3) Most Cited Cases
Services

[21] Husband and Wife ⚖209(4)
205k209(4) Most Cited Cases

Claims for loss of consortium based on spousal injury sustained prior to marriage are precluded, unless neither spouse is aware of tortious conduct or injury at time of marriage.

*94 Rebecca M. Randles, Kansas City, for appellants.

Barry A. Short, John Michael Hessel, Lewis, Rice & Fingersh, St. Louis, Gerard Thomas Noce, Evans & Dixon, St. Louis, for respondent.

GARY M. GAERTNER, Judge.

Appellants, H.R.B. ("plaintiff") and B.B. ("wife"), appeal from the judgment of the Circuit Court of the City of St. Louis dismissing their petition against respondents, J.L.G. ("defendant"), Archbishop Justin Rigali of the Archdiocese of St. Louis, Missouri ("the archbishop"), and Church of the Immaculate Conception School and Parish ("the church"). We affirm in part and reverse and remand in part.

On September 30, 1994, plaintiff and wife filed a ten-count petition alleging the following: In 1963, plaintiff was a thirteen-year-old student at a school run by the church, which was under the direct supervision and control of the archbishop. Through 1963 and 1964, plaintiff suffered various instances of sexual abuse by defendant J.L.G., a Roman Catholic priest employed by the church. As a direct result of defendant's conduct, plaintiff suffered, inter alia, severe emotional distress, lost earnings and earning capacity, sexual addiction and dysfunction, depression, anxiety, panic attacks, "and other psychological and emotional sequelae."

The petition further alleged:

> 15. Plaintiff and defendant ... had a confidential and/or fiduciary relationship. The power imbalance between defendant ... and plaintiff increased the plaintiff's vulnerability to defendant ... and had the effect of silencing plaintiff.
> 16. The nature of the relationship and the sexual exploitation perpetrated upon plaintiff caused him to develop certain psychological coping mechanisms. Plaintiff was unable to ascertain his injuries and their connection to the sexual abuse perpetrated upon him until approximately October 1992.
> 17. In approximately October 1992, plaintiff ... was hospitalized as being suicidal. At this time, he discovered that his psychological illnesses and emotional difficulties were the result of sexual abuse suffered at the hands of [defendant]. Prior to this time, he had never been diagnosed nor had any indication that the events involving sexual > abuse had caused injury and ascertainable damage.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

> 18. Therefore, plaintiff brings this action in a timely fashion pursuant to R.S.Mo. [§§ 537.046] and 516.100, in that he did not discover and could not reasonably ascertain the damages he suffered as a result of the sexual abuse until October of 1992.

The first three counts of plaintiff's and wife's petition were brought by plaintiff against defendant: breach of fiduciary duty (Count I), intentional infliction of emotional distress (Count II), and childhood sexual abuse (Count III). The next five counts were brought by plaintiff against the archbishop [FN1] and the church: respondeat superior (Count IV), negligence (Count V), negligent infliction of emotional distress (Count VI), intentional infliction of emotional distress (Count VII), and breach of fiduciary duty (Count VIII). The final two counts were loss of consortium claims against all the respondents, brought by plaintiff (Count IX) and wife (Count X).

> FN1. The petition named the archdiocese and the archbishop as separate parties, but the two are treated as one and the same in the trial court's judgment and by the parties on appeal.

On October 12, 1994, the archbishop and the church moved to dismiss the claims against them in Counts IV through X of the petition. On November 3, 1994, defendant moved to dismiss the claims against him in Counts I, II, III, IX, and X. The motions were taken under submission on January 13, 1995.

On February 22, 1995, the trial court granted both motions to dismiss. The court 95 determined plaintiff's damages were sustained and capable of ascertainment at the time of the alleged sexual abuse, and his cause of action therefore accrued at that time. The court noted that "[p]laintiff attempts to avoid the five year statute of limitations [RSMo § 516.120(4)] [FN2] by arguing that his psychological coping mechanisms repressed any memory of the abuse until 1992." However, the court found, in reliance on Doe v. Roman Catholic Diocese, 862 S.W.2d 338 (Mo.banc 1993) and Vandenheuvel v. Sowell, 886 S.W.2d 100 (Mo.App.W.D.1994), that "repressed memory does not serve to extend the statute of limitations for Plaintiffs' claims to the time plaintiff's memory revived." The court further found RSMo § 537.046 did not extend the time for filing the petition, as the original statutes of limitations--RSMo §§ 516.120 and 516.100--had already expired and the respondents had therefore acquired a vested right to be free from suit.

> FN2. All statutory references are to RSMo 1994 unless otherwise indicated.

The trial court dismissed all the counts against defendant: Counts I, II, and III were dismissed "based on the statute of limitations[;]" Count IX (plaintiff's claim of loss of consortium) was dismissed for failure to state a claim; and Count X (wife's claim of loss of consortium) was dismissed because wife was not married to plaintiff at the time his cause of action accrued. The court also dismissed Counts IV through X against the archbishop and the church. This appeal followed.

[1][2][3] Several statutes of limitations are involved in this case. An action for sexual abuse may be brought as a battery action, in which case the plaintiff has two years to file the action, RSMo § 516.140; or the action may be brought pursuant to RSMo § 516.120(4), which requires that tort actions not specifically enumerated by statute (but recognized at law) be brought within five years. See Doe v. Roman Catholic Diocese, 862 S.W.2d at 339. If the alleged abuse occurred when the plaintiff was a minor, RSMo § 516.170 tolls the applicable statute of limitations until the plaintiff turns twenty-one. See J.D. v. M.F., 758 S.W.2d 177, 178 (Mo.App.E.D.1988). With respect to RSMo §§ 516.120(4) and 516.140, RSMo § 516.100 provides that > the cause of action shall not be deemed to accrue when the wrong is done or the technical breach of contract or duty occurs, but when the damage resulting therefrom is sustained and capable of ascertainment,....

(emphasis added.) Also, RSMo § 537.046.2 provides for independent civil actions for damages suffered as a result of childhood sexual abuse, if the action is brought within five years of the plaintiff's eighteenth birthday, or "within three years of the date the plaintiff discovers or reasonably should have discovered that the injury or illness was caused by child sexual abuse," whichever is later. However, RSMo § 537.046 does not revive actions that have expired prior to its effective date of August 28, 1990, and, if a plaintiff's suit was already barred by an existing statute of limitations on that date, the defendant has obtained a vested right to be free from suit. Doe v. Roman Catholic Diocese, 862 S.W.2d at 342.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

[4] In this case, the petition alleges defendant's acts occurred in 1963 and 1964, when plaintiff was still a minor. If plaintiff's cause of action did accrue at the time these acts occurred, time would start running upon plaintiff's twenty-first birthday in 1971 and would have expired in 1976. In their petition, plaintiff and wife allege their cause of action did not accrue at the time defendant allegedly sexually abused plaintiff, and claim the damage to plaintiff caused by defendant's alleged conduct was not capable of ascertainment until October of 1992, due to "certain psychological coping mechanisms" of plaintiff. According to plaintiff and wife, as their cause of action did not accrue until 1992, none of their claims were time-barred.

[5][6][7] In determining when a statute of limitations begins running, "[d]amage is ascertainable when the fact of damage 'can be discovered or made known,' not when a plaintiff actually discovers injury or wrongful conduct.... When damage is ascertainable is an objective determination." *96*Sheehan v. Sheehan,* 901 S.W.2d 57, 58-59 (Mo.banc 1995) (citations omitted). If the statute of limitations is raised as an affirmative defense, the trial court may not dismiss unless it is clearly established, on the petition's face and without exception, that the action is barred. Id. at 59. In reviewing the dismissal of a petition, reviewing courts must allow the pleading its broadest intendment, treating all facts alleged as true and construing the petition's allegations favorably to the plaintiff. Id.

Sheehan was handed down by the Missouri Supreme Court subsequent to the dismissal of plaintiff's and wife's claims. In that case, the trial court dismissed as barred by the statute of limitations a personal injury action by a daughter against her father for childhood sexual abuse. Daughter's petition alleged father committed numerous batteries and assaults when she was a minor, and was therefore subject to the two-year limit set out in RSMo § 516.140. Daughter's petition further alleged she "involuntarily repressed conscious memory" of the alleged abuse by father "throughout her childhood and young adulthood until August 1990 or thereafter." In granting father's motion to dismiss the petition, the trial court found that daughter's cause of action accrued when she was a minor and that she failed to bring her action within the two-year period allowed to her after her twenty-first birthday.

The Missouri Supreme Court reversed, ruling daughter's petition did not "clearly indicate on its face and without exception" that suit was barred before the effective dates of RSMo §§ 537.046.2 and 516.371. [FN3] Id. The Court stated:

> FN3. RSMo § 516.371 provides an action for familial sexual abuse, and went into effect August 28, 1989.

> [Daughter] alleges that [father]'s conduct caused "consequential injuries and damages." The petition does not state the date [daughter] "sustained and suffered" these injuries and damages; it is ambiguous as to when she objectively could have discovered or made known the fact of damage. The only date alleged is that she "involuntarily repressed conscious memory" of the abuse "until August 1990 or thereafter." Construing the allegations of the petition broadly and favorably to [daughter], her damage may not have been ascertainable "until August 1990 or thereafter."

Id. The Court distinguished Vandenheuvel v. Sowell, 886 S.W.2d 100, 104 (Mo.App.W.D.1994) --in which the Western District held that involuntary repression of memories of sexual abuse did not toll the applicable statute of limitations--on the ground Vandenheuvel was decided by summary judgment, "where matters outside the pleadings indicated when damages became ascertainable." Sheehan, 901 S.W.2d at 59. "In this case--decided on a bare motion to dismiss--there is no such record evidence." Id.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

Here, plaintiff's and wife's petition claimed plaintiff was abused in 1963 and 1964, but was unable to ascertain the injuries he allegedly sustained due to "psychological coping mechanisms." The respondents argue this petition, unlike the petition in Sheehan, does not allege repression of memory, and its terms ("increased the plaintiff's vulnerability," "had the effect of silencing plaintiff," "coping") imply plaintiff was aware of the harm or legal wrong done to him at the time of the alleged abuse.

[8][9] However, we are required to allow the pleading its broadest intendment and to construe the petition's allegations favorably to the plaintiff. See id. The petition's term "psychological coping mechanisms" may encompass, and the trial court clearly regarded it as including, involuntary repression of memory. In other words, the petition is ambiguous enough as to when plaintiff could have objectively discovered or made known the fact of injury from defendant's alleged conduct, to withstand a motion to dismiss on limitations grounds. We must take all the allegations in the petition as true, suspending any skepticism as to the merits of plaintiff's allegations. Plaintiff's damages may not have been ascertainable until October, 1992. If such was the case, the September 30, 1994, petition was timely filed with respect to RSMo §§ 516.120(4) and 537.046.

*97 Pursuant to Sheehan, we find the petition does not clearly indicate on its face and without exception that Counts I through VIII, and Count X (wife's loss of consortium claim), are barred by the statute of limitations.

[10][11] However, we will affirm the dismissal of a petition if it can be sustained on any ground presented to and considered by the trial court, regardless of whether the court relied on that ground. Property Exchange & Sales, Inc. v. King, 822 S.W.2d 572, 573 (Mo.App.E.D.1992). The archbishop and the church argue Count IV, plaintiff's claim of respondeat superior, failed to state a cause of action and was properly dismissed. According to the archbishop and the church, the petition on its face shows defendant was not acting within the course and scope of his employment when he allegedly engaged in sexual contact with plaintiff.

[12][13][14] Under the doctrine of respondeat superior, an employer is liable to third parties for torts committed by an employee, if the tort was committed while employee was engaged in activities within the course and scope of his or her employment. P.S. v. Psychiatric Coverage, Ltd., 887 S.W.2d 622, 624 (Mo.App.E.D.1994). An act is committed within "the scope and course of employment" if it is done by virtue of the employment and in furtherance of the business or interest of the employer, regardless of the time or motive of the conduct. Id. "If the act is fairly and naturally incident to the employer's business, although mistakenly or ill advisedly done, and did not arise wholly from some external, independent or personal motive, it is done while engaged in the employer's business." Id.

In Psychiatric Coverage, we held the employer was not vicariously liable under respondeat superior for the sexual misconduct of an employee therapist, as this misconduct did not occur as part of any therapy program nor was it intended to further the employer's business, but rather "resulted from purely private and personal desires." Id. at 625. Further, other jurisdictions have refused to find religious organizations vicariously liable on respondeat superior grounds for the sexual misconduct of individual clerics. See Tichenor v. Roman Catholic Church of New Orleans, 32 F.3d 953, 959-960 (5th Cir.1994); Destefano v. Grabrian, 763 P.2d 275, 287 (Colo.1988) (sexual misconduct of defendant priest "is contrary to the principles of Catholicism and is not incidental to the tasks assigned a priest by the diocese"); Byrd v. Faber, 57 Ohio St.3d 56, 565 N.E.2d 584, 588 (1991) (relied on by Psychiatric Coverage, 887 S.W.2d at 625 n. 4).

The above reasoning applies here. The acts of defendant alleged in plaintiff's and wife's petition clearly were not part of defendant's duties as a priest or as a teacher, nor were they intended to further any religious or educational interests of the Catholic Church. Accordingly, we affirm the dismissal of Count IV.

The respondents also offer alternative justifications for affirming the trial court's dismissal of plaintiff's claims of breach of fiduciary duty against defendant (Count I) and the archbishop and the church (Count VIII). Count I of plaintiff's and wife's petition alleged defendant "gained the trust and confidence of plaintiff" by holding himself out as a "teacher, counselor and qualified parish priest" and alleged his actions "constitute a breach of his fiduciary duties and of his trusted, confidential relationship with the plaintiff." Count VIII alleged plaintiff "reposed trust and confidence" in the archbishop and the church "as safe, competent spiritual advisors and counselors" who "owed plaintiff a duty of trust and loyalty and the duty to work solely for the benefit of their parishioners and supplicants including plaintiff." Count VIII further alleged the archbishop and the church "breached their fiduciary duties towards their parishioners, including plaintiff, and abused their position of trust and confidence in failing to protect plaintiff and others similarly situated from defendant ... after [they] knew or should have known of his dangerous propensities...."

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

The respondents contend Missouri does not recognize the claims set out in Counts I and VIII of plaintiff's petition, citing Doe v. Roman Catholic Diocese as authority. In that case (wherein the plaintiff's claims of 98 breach of fiduciary duty and clergy malpractice were found barred by the statutes of limitations) the Missouri Supreme Court noted:

> Although battery is clearly actionable, Missouri courts have not addressed the propriety of the causes of action for clergy malpractice or the tort of breach of fiduciary duty, at least in the context of childhood sexual assaults.

862 S.W.2d at 339 n. 2. The respondents also contend Counts I and VIII are not justiciable controversies, on the ground the First Amendment prohibits secular courts from defining and analyzing the scope of fiduciary duties owed by clergy and churches to their parishioners.

[15][16] Clergy and religious organizations are not absolutely immune from civil liability. See Hester v. Barnett, 723 S.W.2d 544, 552 (Mo.App.W.D.1987). Tort actions against religious groups or persons are not offensive to the First Amendment if based on purely secular activities, unrelated to their religious functions; if the alleged wrongdoing was clearly outside the tenets of the religion, notwithstanding its religious pretext, then it is actionable. See id. at 558-564.

[17] Missouri courts have not addressed whether clergy and religious organizations can be held civilly liable in actions for breach of fiduciary duty with respect to sexual misconduct of clergy. Our review of the law in other jurisdictions compels us to conclude such actions should not be recognized, as they will inevitably entangle civil courts in religious matters.

Causes of action for breach of fiduciary duty with respect to sexual misconduct of clergy were recognized in Jones by Jones v. Trane, 153 Misc.2d 822, 591 N.Y.S.2d 927, 931 (Sup.1992), Moses v. Diocese of Colorado, 863 P.2d 310, 322 (Colo.1993), Destefano v. Grabrian, 763 P.2d 275, 284 (Colo.1988), and Erickson v. Christenson, 99 Or.App. 104, 781 P.2d 383, 386 (1989). These cases reasoned that if the tortious behavior of the cleric was not religiously motivated, could be evaluated by means of "neutral principles" applicable to clergy and lay persons alike, and did not require inquiry into the tenets and beliefs of the particular cleric's faith, the First Amendment was not a defense to such actions. See Moses, 863 P.2d at 321. In other words, > inasmuch as it is conduct, and not creed, that underlies plaintiffs' actions, and that the potential for civil consequences exists equally as to religious and non-religious persons, and as to clergy and lay persons of all religions alike, the Free Exercise aspect of the First Amendment does not come into play to preclude plaintiffs' [breach of fiduciary duty action]....

Jones, 591 N.Y.S.2d at 931 (citation omitted).

Conversely, similar causes of action for breach of fiduciary duty were rejected in Schmidt v. Bishop, 779 F.Supp. 321, 325-326 (S.D.N.Y.1991), Dausch v. Rykse, 52 F.3d 1425, 1438 (7th Cir.1994), and Schieffer v. Catholic Archdiocese of Omaha, 244 Neb. 715, 508 N.W.2d 907, 912 (1993). In those cases, the courts held that analyzing and defining the scope of fiduciary duty owed persons by their clergy (assuming pastoral relationships were "fiduciary") would require courts to define and express the standard of care followed by reasonable clergy of the particular faith involved, which in turn > would require the Court and the jury to consider the fundamental perspective and approach to counseling inherent in the beliefs and practices of that denomination. This is as unconstitutional as it is impossible. It fosters excessive entanglement with religion.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

Schmidt, 779 F.Supp. at 328. Further, while it may be argued that "it requires no excessive entanglement with religion to decide that reasonably prudent clergy of any sect do not molest children[,]" allowing actions for breach of fiduciary duty in such situations places courts "on the slippery slope and is an unnecessary venture, since existing laws ... provide adequate protection for society's interests." Id.

We align ourselves with the jurisdictions that have refused to recognize breach-of-fiduciary-duty actions against clergy for sexual misconduct. It is true the alleged behavior of defendant was not religiously motivated; in fact, it contravened the tenets and principles of the Catholic Church. However, other causes of action are available for these acts 99 (i.e., intentional infliction of emotional distress, childhood sexual abuse), which do not require the trial court to determine whether defendant breached "his trusted, confidential relationship with the plaintiff" or whether the archbishop and the church breached "their fiduciary duties towards their parishioners, including plaintiff, and abused their position of trust and confidence[,]" as alleged in plaintiff's petition.

[18] Religion was not merely incidental to plaintiff's relationship with defendant, the archbishop, and the church; it was the foundation for it. Counts I and VIII will inevitably require inquiry into the religious aspects of this relationship, that is, the duty owed by Catholic priests, parishes, and dioceses to their parishioners. The First Amendment does not allow secular courts to judge sectarian matters. Counts I and VIII are not actionable and their dismissal is affirmed. [FN4]

FN4. Plaintiff did not bring a clergy malpractice claim in the immediate case; however, we note courts in other jurisdictions have uniformly refused to recognize clergy malpractice as a cause of action for sexual misconduct of a cleric. See Dausch v. Rykse, 52 F.3d 1425, 1432 (7th Cir.1994); Schmidt v. Bishop, 779 F.Supp. 321, 327-328 (S.D.N.Y.1991); Schieffer v. Catholic Archdiocese of Omaha, 244 Neb. 715, 508 N.W.2d 907, 911 (1993); Jones by Jones v. Trane, 153 Misc.2d 822, 591 N.Y.S.2d 927, 930 (Sup.1992); Byrd v. Faber, 57 Ohio St.3d 56, 565 N.E.2d 584, 587 (1991); Destefano v. Grabrian, 763 P.2d 275, 285 (Colo.1988).
We further note that, while the archbishop and the church challenged Counts V, VI, and VII--plaintiff's claims of negligence in the hiring and supervision of defendant, of negligent infliction of emotional distress, and of intentional interference with emotional distress, respectively--on limitations grounds only and offered no alternative grounds for their dismissal at trial or on appeal, the allegations in these counts raise First Amendment concerns which may need to be addressed upon remand. See Isely v. Capuchin Province, 880 F.Supp. 1138, 1150-1158 (E.D.Mich.1995); Pritzlaff v. Archdiocese of Milwaukee, 194 Wis.2d 303, 533 N.W.2d 780, 789-792 (1995).

[19][20] Finally, Count IX, plaintiff's action for loss of consortium, was properly dismissed by the trial court for failure to state a claim. When a married person is injured, two independent, separate and distinct causes of action arise: one accrues to the injured person for the injuries, and the other accrues to the injured person's spouse for damages suffered as a result of his or her loss of the injured person's services, society and companionship. Smith v. Paslode Corp., 799 F.Supp. 960, 964 (E.D.Mo.1992). The latter action is derivative only; a spouse cannot recover for loss of consortium if the other spouse has no valid claim for personal injuries. Teschner v. Physicians Radiology, 761 S.W.2d 665, 667 (Mo.App.E.D.1988).

[21] Here, the petition does not allege any direct personal injury sustained by wife; she had no valid claim of her own. Plaintiff seeks to derive his loss of consortium claim from his own injuries, not those of wife, thereby duplicating the damages he seeks in his primary claim. Plaintiff failed to state a cause of action on this claim. We affirm the trial court's dismissal of Count IX. [FN5]

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

> FN5. With respect to Count X, wife's claim of loss of consortium, we note if it is determined on remand that plaintiff's cause of action accrued prior to their marriage, wife will not be able to recover on this claim. Claims for loss of consortium based on spousal injuries sustained prior to marriage are precluded, unless neither spouse is aware of the tortious conduct or injury at the time of their marriage. Smith v. Paslode Corp., 799 F.Supp. at 964.

The dismissal of Counts I, IV, VIII, and IX is affirmed; the dismissal of Counts II, III, V, VI, VII, and X is reversed and cause remanded for further proceedings.

SMITH, P.J. and RHODES RUSSELL, J. concur.

913 S.W.2d 92, 106 Ed. Law Rep. 415

END OF DOCUMENT

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

BLUEBIRD (888) 477-0700 www.bluebirdonline.com
OFFICE SUPPLIES

EXHIBIT 24

880 F.Supp. 1138
99 Ed. Law Rep. 797
(Cite as: 880 F.Supp. 1138)

▷

United States District Court,
E.D. Michigan,
Southern Division.

Paul ISELY, Plaintiff,
v.
CAPUCHIN PROVINCE, et al., Defendants.

No. 93-CV-74820-DT.

March 16, 1995.

Student brought action against priests who allegedly sexually abused him, in both Wisconsin and Michigan as well as priests' supervisors, seminary, and others (nonabusers), seeking compensatory and punitive damages. Student's claims against nonabusers were based on breach of contract, statutory negligence, negligent hiring, negligent supervision, failure to warn, and failure to adopt sexual abuse policy. Nonabusers and one purported abuser priest moved for judgment as a matter of law. The District Court, Rosen, J., held that: (1) any breach of contract action student may have had against nonabusers was barred by Michigan's six-year statute of limitations; (2) under Michigan law, Michigan nonabusers were not liable for negligent hiring, negligent supervision, negligent failure to warn or negligent failure to prevent sexual abuse; (3) under Michigan law, prenovitiate program did not have duty to have sexual abuse policy; (4) Wisconsin's reporting statute which requires school administrators to report injuries or other abuse inflicted on children did not provide private cause of action; (5) student's action against Wisconsin nonabusers for negligent hiring was barred by First Amendment; (6) under Wisconsin law as predicted by district court, there was no cause of action for negligent supervision at time student was allegedly sexually abused by priests; (7) under Wisconsin law, student stated cause of action against certain Wisconsin nonabusers for negligent failure to warn or failure to prevent sexual abuse of student; and (8) student was not entitled to punitive damages.

Motions granted in part and denied part; action dismissed in part.

See also 877 F.Supp. 1055.

West Headnotes

[1] Federal Civil Procedure ⇐2121.1
170Ak2121.1 Most Cited Cases

Although issue of whether court should enter judgment as matter of law is matter usually raised by party by way of motion, district court also has power to grant such judgments sua sponte, even when no motion is made. Fed.Rules Civ.Proc.Rule 50(a), 28 U.S.C.A.

[2] Federal Civil Procedure ⇐2111
170Ak2111 Most Cited Cases

Federal district court sitting in diversity is to apply standard for judgment as matter of law used by courts of state whose substantive law governs action. Fed.Rules Civ.Proc.Rule 50(a), 28 U.S.C.A.

[3] Contracts ⇐187(1)
95k187(1) Most Cited Cases

Student at seminary could not recover breach of contract damages for alleged sexual abuse of student by priests on theory that he was third-party beneficiary of contract between his parents, seminary and seminary's governing province, where there was no evidence of any contract between parents and seminary or parents and governing province.

[4] Contracts ⇐187(1)
95k187(1) Most Cited Cases

Proof of existence of contract and its terms is prerequisite for action by third-party beneficiary to enforce contractual duty.

[5] Limitation of Actions ⇐95(9)
241k95(9) Most Cited Cases

Any breach of contract action student may have had against seminary or seminary's governing province resulting from alleged sexual abuse of student by priests was barred by Michigan's six-year statute of limitations; although student repressed memory of purported sexual abuse for more than ten years, any breach of contract action accrued when purported sexual abuse occurred, not when student recalled purported abuse. M.C.L.A. § 600.5807(8).

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

[6] Limitation of Actions ⇐95(9)
241k95(9) Most Cited Cases

Under Michigan law, breach of contract claim accrues on date of breach, not date that breach is discovered, for purposes of Michigan's six-year statute of limitations. M.C.L.A. § 600.5807(8).

[7] Limitation of Actions ⇐95(9)
241k95(9) Most Cited Cases

Six-year Wisconsin statute of limitations for breach of contract begins to run on date breach occurs, not date when breach is discovered. W.S.A. 893.43.

[8] Colleges and Universities ⇐5
81k5 Most Cited Cases

[8] Master and Servant ⇐303
255k303 Most Cited Cases

Under Michigan law, supervisors of priests, prenovitiate program, and program's governing province were not liable for negligent hiring, negligent supervision, negligent failure to warn or negligent failure to prevent sexual abuse in action by seminary student who was allegedly sexually abused by priests, where student never reported sexual abuse to anyone and there was no evidence that anyone else ever reported sexual abuse by priests.

[9] Colleges and Universities ⇐5
81k5 Most Cited Cases

At time priests allegedly sexually abused student who attended prenovitiate program, prenovitiate program did not have duty to have sexual abuse policy under Michigan law and, thus, student could not recover in negligence for prenovitiate program's failure to have sexual abuse policy; student had repressed his memory of purported instances of sexual abuse for more than ten years, and although duty to establish sexual abuse policy may have existed at time of trial, there was no evidence of any duty to establish sexual abuse policy at time sexual abuse allegedly occurred.

[10] Action ⇐3
13k3 Most Cited Cases

Wisconsin's reporting statute which requires school administrators to report injuries or other abuse inflicted on children did not provide private cause of action and, thus, student who was allegedly abused by priests while he attended seminary could not bring negligence action under reporting statute against priests' supervisors, seminary, or province governing seminary for failure to report purported sexual abuse of student; at time of alleged sexual abuse, reporting statute was purely criminal in nature. W.S.A. 48.981.

[11] Infants ⇐13
211k13 Most Cited Cases

Even if Wisconsin's reporting statute, which requires school administrators to report injuries or other abuse inflicted on children, provided private cause of action, seminary's administers, seminary, and province governing seminary did not negligently fail to report priests' alleged sexual abuse of student at seminary in violation of statute, where there was no evidence that any alleged abuse victim personally reported his own sexual abuse to anyone at seminary. W.S.A. 48.981.

[12] Constitutional Law ⇐84.5(10)
92k84.5(10) Most Cited Cases

Inquiry into seminary's decisions regarding who should be permitted to become or remain a priest would have involved excessive entanglement with religion which is prohibited by First Amendment and, thus, First Amendment prohibited student's action against priests' supervisors, seminary, and seminary's governing province for negligent hiring of priests who allegedly sexually abused student; questions of hiring and retention of clergy necessarily require interpretation of church canons and internal church policies and practices. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 1.

[13] Constitutional Law ⇐84.5(7.1)
92k84.5(7.1) Most Cited Cases

When court is required to interpret canon law or internal church policies and practices, First Amendment is violated because such judicial inquiry would constitute excessive government entanglement with religion. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 1.

[14] Colleges and Universities ⇐5

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

81k5 Most Cited Cases

[14] Constitutional Law ⇐84.5(10)
92k84.5(10) Most Cited Cases

Matters pertaining to supervision of priests at seminary could be decided without determining questions of church law and policy and, thus, negligent supervision claims brought by student who was allegedly sexually abused by priests were not barred by First Amendment. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 1.

[15] Federal Courts ⇐390
170Bk390 Most Cited Cases

When state law supplies rule of decision, it is incumbent upon federal court to determine how highest court of state would decide case if it were presented to it.

[16] Torts ⇐2
379k2 Most Cited Cases

Tort action is to be determined by application of law which existed at time of occurrence of events upon which action is predicated.

[17] Colleges and Universities ⇐5
81k5 Most Cited Cases

Under Wisconsin law as predicted by district court, there was no cause of action for negligent supervision at time student was allegedly sexually abused by priests and, thus, student could not maintain negligent supervision action against priests' supervisors, seminary, or province governing seminary; negligent supervision claim had still not been recognized as independent cause of action in Wisconsin nearly 20 years after sexual abuse allegedly occurred and negligent supervision tort had not been universally accepted in other jurisdictions at time sexual abuse allegedly occurred.

[18] Schools ⇐89.2
345k89.2 Most Cited Cases

Under Wisconsin law, no duty can be imposed on a school to protect a student from intentional torts of teacher simply because of their status as student and teacher; rather, there must be evidence that school's supervisory officials had knowledge of activities of teacher who was subject of complaints.

[19] Colleges and Universities ⇐5
81k5 Most Cited Cases

Under Wisconsin law, priest's supervisors, seminary and seminary's governing province were not liable to student who was allegedly sexually abused by priest for negligent failure to warn or failure to prevent sexual abuse; plaintiff student did not report alleged sexual abuse to anyone at seminary, and another student's report that priest had "hurt" him, yelled at him, called him stupid, made him feel bad and made him feel ashamed was insufficient to constitute notice of sexual abuse by priest.

[20] Colleges and Universities ⇐5
81k5 Most Cited Cases

Under Wisconsin law, allegations that student reported to seminary's athletic director that priest had sexually abused him and that another student had reported that priest has massaged his neck and ran his hand down student's chest to his belt stated cause of action against athletic director, seminary, and seminary's governing province for negligent failure to warn or failure to prevent sexual abuse of student by priest.

[21] Damages ⇐208(8)
115k208(8) Most Cited Cases

Under Wisconsin law, whether there is sufficient evidence to submit question of punitive damages to jury is question of law to be decided by court.

[22] Damages ⇐91(1)
115k91(1) Most Cited Cases

Under Wisconsin law, remedy of punitive damages is only available when defendant acts in wanton, willful, or reckless disregard of plaintiff's rights or interests.

[23] Damages ⇐184
115k184 Most Cited Cases

Under Wisconsin law, outrageous conduct which would support award of punitive damages must be proven by clear and convincing evidence.

[24] Damages ⇐91(1)

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

115k91(1) Most Cited Cases

Under Wisconsin law, fact that conduct on which suit is based is unlawful and would subject defendant to criminal prosecution is not itself sufficient to impose punitive damages.

[25] Damages ⇦184
115k184 Most Cited Cases

[25] Religious Societies ⇦30
332k30 Most Cited Cases

Student who was allegedly sexually abused by priests while he attended seminary was not entitled to punitive damages against priests' supervisors, seminary, or seminary's governing province in student's breach of contract and negligence action; although there was some evidence that defendants had notice of priests' sexual abuse, evidence was at best contradictory and was not clear and convincing.

[26] Religious Societies ⇦30
332k30 Most Cited Cases

Student's claims against priests who allegedly sexually abused him for professional negligence, which were essentially claims for clergy malpractice, did not state cause of action under Wisconsin law.

[27] Religious Societies ⇦30
332k30 Most Cited Cases

Student's claims against priests who allegedly sexually abused student for "intentional conduct" precluded student's negligence claims against priests; it was legally impossible to claim that alleged perpetration of deliberate sexual abuse injured student negligently.
*1141 Heidi L. Salter and Don Ferris, Ann Arbor, MI, for plaintiff.

James N. Martin and Michael R. Janes, Mt. Clemens, MI, for defendants Capuchin, St. Lawrence, Thiel, Hoelscher, Kowalsky, Werner Wolf and Smith

Frank W. Brochert, Detroit, MI, for Jim Wolf.

Gerald Boyle, Milwaukee, WI, for defendant Leifeld.

OPINION AND ORDER REGARDING DEFENDANTS' MOTIONS FOR DIRECTED VERDICT/JUDGMENT AS A MATTER OF LAW

ROSEN, District Judge.

I. INTRODUCTION

This matter is presently before the Court on the Motion of Defendants Capuchin Province, St. Lawrence Seminary, Lloyd Thiel, Kevin Hoelscher, Myron Kowalsky, Werner Wolf and Ron Smith (the "non-abuser Defendants") for Judgment as a Matter of Law pursuant to Fed.R.Civ.Pro. 50 and, on the separate "Motion for Directed Verdict" [FN1] filed *1142 by individual Defendant Jim Wolf. Both of these motions were submitted to the Court after Plaintiff concluded his proofs. The Court deferred ruling on the motions until the Defendants concluded their case, as well.

FN1. Rule 50 was revised in 1991, and that revision abandoned the terminology "directed verdict". The standards applicable to "judgments as a matter of law", however, remain the same as the standards under the former "directed verdict". See Advisory Committee Notes on the 1991 Amendment to Fed.R.Civ.Pro. 50. Although Defendants have used the terms directed verdict and judgment as a matter of law interchangeably, the Court will use the term "judgment as a matter of law" in this Opinion and Order.

Having reviewed and considered the briefs filed by the moving Defendants and the opposition briefs filed by Plaintiff, [FN2] and having heard the oral arguments of counsel at the hearing held on March 15, 1995, the Court is now prepared to rule on these motions. This Opinion and Order sets forth that ruling.

FN2. In addition to their Brief specifically filed in support of their Rule 50 Motion, the non-abuser Defendants have filed two "Supplemental Briefs" in further support of their Motion, and also have incorporated by reference the various Memoranda of Law they submitted during the course of trial regarding punitive damages, negligence per se, and First Amendment issues. Plaintiff also responded to these various other briefs. The Court has reviewed and considered all of these briefs in considering the Rule 50 motions presently before it.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

II. SUMMARY OF PLAINTIFF'S CLAIMS AGAINST THE VARIOUS DEFENDANTS

In his Complaint, Plaintiff has asserted 17 counts. With respect to the two individuals Plaintiff accuses of actually abusing him, Defendants Gale Leifeld and Jim Wolf, Plaintiff has alleged that these two Defendants sexually molested him while he was a student at St. Lawrence Seminary in Fond-du-Lac, Wisconsin and while he was a resident at the Pre-Novitiate house, in Detroit, Michigan. He has asserted three separate causes of action against each of these two individuals: "intentional misconduct" (Counts I and IX); "common law negligence" (Counts II and X); and "professional negligence" (Counts III and XI).

As to the non-abuser Defendants, Plaintiff has alleged the following claims:

(A) "Breach of Contract"
. Against St. Lawrence Seminary [Count V];
. Against the Capuchin Detroit Pre-Novitiate Program [Count XIII]; and
. Against the Capuchin Province [Count XVII].
(B) "Statutory Negligence" (for failure to report the alleged abuse of Jim Buser and Gale Leifeld in violation of the Wisconsin Reporting Statute):
. Against Kevin Hoelscher [Count VI];
. Against Lloyd Thiel [Count VII];
. Against Myron Kowalski [Count VIII];
. Against St. Lawrence Seminary [Count IV];
. Against the Capuchin Province [Count XVI].
(C) "Common Law Negligence"
(1) predicated upon the alleged actions of Jim Buser and Gale Leifeld in Wisconsin:
. Against Kevin Hoelscher [Count VI];
. Against Lloyd Thiel [Count VII];
. Against Myron Kowalski [Count VIII];
. Against St. Lawrence Seminary [Count IV];
. Against the Capuchin Province [Count XVI]; and
(2) predicated upon the alleged actions of Jim Wolf in Detroit:
. Against the Capuchin Pre-Novitiate Program [Count XII];
. Against Werner Wolf [Count XIV];
. Against Ron Smith [Count XV];
. Against Lloyd Thiel [Count VII]; and
. Against the Capuchin Province [Count XVI].

Plaintiff has asserted several theories of "common law negligence" under which he seeks to impose liability on the nonabuser Defendants, to-wit:
. negligent hiring of Jim Buser, Gale Leifeld and Jim Wolf;
. negligent supervision of Buser, Leifeld and Jim Wolf;
. failure to warn Plaintiff or his parents that Buser, Leifeld and Jim Wolf were sex abusers and failure to prevent their sex abuse of him; and
. failure to adopt a sexual abuse policy.

*1143 Integral to his Complaint against all of the Defendants is Plaintiff's contention that he repressed the memories of most of Buser's, Leifeld's and Jim Wolf's abuse of him until late in 1992, thus tolling the statutes of limitations on his claims arising out of these incidents. [FN3]

FN3. The Court earlier ruled that the issue of whether such incidents were truly repressed and, if so, when Plaintiff had sufficient recollection of the incidents for purposes of commencing the running of the statutes of limitations were issues for the jury.

III. DEFENDANTS' ARGUMENTS FOR JUDGMENT AS A MATTER OF LAW.

Arguments of the Non Abuser Defendants

The non-abusing Defendants argue that a judgment as a matter of law under Rule 50 should be entered in their favor on Plaintiff's breach of contract claims because Plaintiff has not presented evidence of a contract or its material terms with respect to either his education at St. Lawrence Seminary or his stay at the Detroit Pre-Novitiate House. With respect to Plaintiff's claims of statutory negligence for failure to report alleged sexual abuse by Fathers Buser and Leifeld, the non-abusing Defendants contend that Plaintiff has not demonstrated that the Wisconsin

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

Reporting Statute was violated by any of them, and even if he has presented factual evidence to establish a breach of the statute's terms, a violation of the statute cannot, as a matter of law, support a private cause of action.

As for Plaintiff's claims of common law negligence, the nonabusing Defendants assert several arguments. First, they argue, with respect to Plaintiff's Wisconsin claims of negligent hiring and negligent supervision, that Wisconsin does not recognize such claims as independent causes of action. They further argue that, even if claims of negligent hiring/negligent supervision were cognizable under Wisconsin law, this Court is without jurisdiction to adjudicate such claims in this case because to do so would amount to excessive entanglement with religion and would violate the First Amendment of the U.S. Constitution and the Wisconsin Constitution, as well.

With respect to Plaintiff's claim that the non-abusing Defendants are liable for failure to warn him of, and failure to prevent, his sexual abuse by Fathers Buser, Leifeld and Jim Wolf, Defendants contend that Plaintiff has not presented evidence establishing that he reported his abuse by these priests, and he has not shown that any supervisory non-abusing Defendant was put on notice of Father Buser's, Leifeld's or Jim Wolf's sexual activities prior to Plaintiff's alleged abuse by them so as to impose liability upon the non- abusers, the seminary or the Order.

As to Plaintiff's claim of failure to have a sexual abuse policy in place, Defendants contend that this claim must be dismissed as well because Plaintiff has not shown that the Defendants had any statutory or common law duty to have a sexual abuse policy.

Defendants further argue with regard to all of Plaintiff's theories of common law negligence, that even if Plaintiff has shown that they were negligent, dismissal of the negligence claims is nonetheless required because Plaintiff has not established that the negligence of the non-abusers proximately caused his alleged damages.

Finally, the non-abusing Defendants contend that the evidence presented does not support Plaintiff's claims for punitive damages. Therefore, they seek dismissal of all of Plaintiff's allegations of punitive damages as to the non- abuser Defendants.

Defendant Jim Wolf's Arguments [FN4]

> FN4. The other individual Defendant accused of abuse, Gale Leifeld, has filed no dispositive motions, nor has he joined in any of the other Defendants' motions.

Defendant Jim Wolf has separately moved for entry of judgment as a matter of law in his favor. His argument is that Plaintiff has not presented sufficient evidence to warrant submitted the case against him to the jury because he has not presented sufficient evidence to establish that the alleged sexual abuse by Jim Wolf occurred or that Plaintiff could not have discovered the alleged abuse less than three years before he filed this *1144 lawsuit. With respect to this latter issue, Defendant Jim Wolf argues that the testimony of Plaintiff's psychological experts is insufficient to allow a reasonable juror to conclude that the repressed memory theory is scientifically valid, and therefore, a directed verdict on this basis alone is required.

IV. DISCUSSION

A. STANDARDS APPLICABLE TO A RULE 50 MOTION FOR ENTRY OF A JUDGMENT AS A MATTER OF LAW

Motions for entry of judgment as a matter of law (formerly known as "directed verdict" motions) are governed by Fed.R.Civ.Pro. 50(a), which provides:

> (a) Judgment as a Matter of Law.
> (1) If during a trial by jury a party has been fully heard on an issue and there is no legally sufficient evidentiary basis for a reasonable jury to find for that party on that issue, the court may determine the issue against that party and may grant a motion for judgment as matter of law against that party with respect to a claim or defense that cannot under the controlling law be maintained or defeated without a favorable finding on that issue.
> (2) Motions for judgment as a matter of law may be made at any time before submission of the case to the jury. Such a motion shall specify the judgment sought and the law and the facts on which the moving party is entitle to the judgment.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

Fed.R.Civ.Pro. 50(a).

[1] Although the issue of whether the court should enter a judgment as a matter of law is a matter usually raised by a party by way of motion, it is well-settled that the district court also has the power to grant such judgments sua sponte, even when no motion is made. Safeway Stores v. Fannan, 308 F.2d 94, 99 (9th Cir.1962); Peterson v. Peterson, 400 F.2d 336, 343 (8th Cir.1968).

State Law Standards Apply

[2] It is well-established in this Circuit that a federal district court sitting in diversity is to apply the standard for judgment as a matter of law used by the courts of the state whose substantive law governs the action. American & Foreign Ins. Co. v. General Electric Co., 45 F.3d 135 (6th Cir.1995); Potti v. Duramed Pharmaceuticals, Inc., 938 F.2d 641, 645 (6th Cir.1991). [FN5] In this case, Michigan law applies to the claims predicated upon events that allegedly occurred at the Detroit Pre-Novitiate House, and Wisconsin law applies to the claims arising out of events that occurred in Wisconsin.

> FN5. This is the rule of the Seventh Circuit, as well. See McGeshick v. Choucair, 9 F.3d 1229, 1235 (7th Cir.1993).

According to Michigan law, "[a] trial court may direct a verdict on an issue if the evidence, viewed in a light most favorable to the non-moving party, fails to give rise to a material issue of fact upon which reasonable minds could differ." American & Foreign Ins. Co. v. General Electric Co., supra, quoting Coffey v. State Farm Mutual Auto Insurance Co., 183 Mich.App. 723, 455 N.W.2d 740, 742 (1990).

The Wisconsin standard is similar. As summarized by the Wisconsin Supreme Court in State of Wisconsin v. Leach, 124 Wis.2d 648, 370 N.W.2d 240 (1985):

> The test is whether there is any credible evidence which under a reasonable view would support a verdict contrary to that which is sought....
> A case should be taken from the jury and a verdict directed against a party:
> "... only when the evidence gives rise to no dispute as to the material issues or only when the evidence is so clear and convincing as reasonably to permit unbiased and impartial minds to come to but one conclusion." ...
> Th[e] court must take the view of the evidence which is most favorable to the party against whom the verdict [is] sought to be directed. If there is any evidence to sustain a defense or a cause of action, the case must be submitted to the jury. The weight and sufficiency of the evidence is 1145 for the jury, as is the weight to be given to the witness' positive or negative testimony. Furthermore, it is basic that the credibility of the evidence and the inferences to be drawn therefrom are matters for the jury. If there is any evidence other than mere conjecture or incredible evidence to support a contrary verdict, the case must go to the jury.
> Nevertheless, the party having the burden of proof must come forward with evidentiary facts that establish the ultimate facts; and the degree of proof must be such as to remove these ultimate facts from the field of mere speculation and conjecture. A jury cannot be allowed to merely theorize the ultimate facts from what might be a mere possibility.

Id., 370 N.W.2d at 249 (citations omitted).

The Court will decide the motions before it by application of the foregoing principles. The Court will address the non-abuser Defendants' arguments for directed verdict first, and then will address Defendant Jim Wolf's motion and issues concerning the claims against the accused abuser defendants.

B. PLAINTIFF HAS NOT PRESENTED EVIDENCE OF A CONTRACT

[3] In his Complaint, Plaintiff alleges that he is a third-party beneficiary of contracts entered into by his parents with St. Lawrence Seminary and the Capuchin Province (Counts V, XIII and XVII) which he claims were breached by these Defendants by virtue of the alleged acts of sexual abuse performed by Fathers Buser and Leifeld at St. Lawrence Seminary in Wisconsin and by Jim Wolf at the Pre-Novitiate Program in Detroit. Plaintiff, however, did not put on any evidence of any contract or its agreed-upon terms. The only

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

"evidence" presented at trial was Plaintiff's testimony that his parents paid tuition to St. Lawrence, and paid for his room and board at the Pre- Novitiate Program.

[4] It is black-letter law that proof of the existence of a "contract" and its terms is a pre-requisite for an action by a third-party beneficiary to enforce a contractual duty. See Restatement (Second) of Contracts, § 304 ("A promise in a contract creates a duty in the promisor to any intended beneficiary to perform the promise, and the intended beneficiary may enforce the duty.")

[5][6] More importantly, however, even if Plaintiff has presented evidence of a contract, its terms, and the breach thereof, the breach of contract claims are time-barred. The Court has ruled that Michigan statutes of limitations will govern all claims in this action, both those arising out of Michigan activities, as well as those arising out of Wisconsin activities. [FN6] The law in Michigan regarding the statute of limitations for breach of contract is that "[a] breach of contract claim accrues on the date of the breach, not the date that the breach is discovered." Michigan Millers Mutual Ins. Co., et al. v. West Detroit Building Co., 196 Mich.App. 367, 494 N.W.2d 1, 4 n. 1 (1992).

> FN6. See the Court's February 10, 1995 "Opinion and Order Regarding Choice of Law", pp. 7-9.

[7] Michigan's statute of limitations for breach of contract, M.C.L. § 600.5807(8), is six years. Plaintiff left St. Lawrence Seminary in 1978, therefore, at the latest, any action for breach of any contract with St. Lawrence Seminary would have to have been filed by 1984. Plaintiff spent one year in the Detroit Pre-Novitiate Program, from 1978-1979. Therefore, the latest any claim for breach of any contract pertaining to the Pre-Novitiate Program could have been filed was 1985. This action was not filed until October 1993. Clearly, Plaintiff's contract claims are time-barred. [FN7]

> FN7. Although the Court has determined that Michigan statutes of limitations will govern both those arising out of Michigan activities as well as those arising out of Wisconsin activities, the Court notes that even if Wisconsin law were to apply, the result would be the same. Wisconsin law is the same as Michigan's in this regard. The six-year Wisconsin statute of limitations begins to run on the date the breach occurs, not on the date when the breach is discovered. CLL Associates Limited Partnership v. Arrowhead Pacific Corp., 174 Wis.2d 604, 497 N.W.2d 115 (1993). In the CLL case, the Wisconsin court specifically held that the delayed discovery rule does not apply to breach of contract claims.

*1146 Therefore, Counts V, XIII, and XVII will be DISMISSED in their entirety.

C. JUDGMENT AS A MATTER OF LAW WILL BE ENTERED ON PLAINTIFF'S "COMMON LAW NEGLIGENCE CLAIMS" AGAINST THE NON-ABUSER DEFENDANTS PREDICATED UPON THE ALLEGED ACTIONS OF JIM WOLF AT THE PRE-NOVITIATE PROGRAM IN DETROIT.

Plaintiff has alleged that the non-abusing Defendants are liable for injuries he incurred as a result of sexual abuse perpetrated upon him by Father Jim Wolf at the post-high school Pre-Novitiate Program in Detroit, under theories of negligent hiring/negligent supervision; failure to warn of, and failure to prevent Jim Wolf's sexual abuse; and failure to have a sexual abuse policy in place.

He has asserted these "common law negligence" claims against the following Defendants:

. Against the Capuchin Pre-Novitiate Program [Count XII];
. Against Werner Wolf [Count XIV];
. Against Ron Smith [Count XV];
. Against Lloyd Thiel [part of Count VII]; and
. Against the Capuchin Province [part of Count XVI]

As indicated above, the Court has determined that Michigan substantive law applies to the claims predicated upon events which occurred in Michigan. The law in Michigan regarding negligent hiring/negligent retention of employees, failure to warn of an employee's propensities and failure to prevent injuries caused by the intentional conduct of an employee is that

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

> "[T]here is no liability on the part of an employer for torts intentional or recklessly committed beyond the scope of his master's business.... [However,] the law does impose upon employers the duty of using reasonable care in the hiring of employees.... [I]n order to find negligence in such a case, [the finder of fact must be presented with evidence demonstrating that] the employer knew or should have known of [the employee's] propensities [to act in the complained of manner.]"

Hersh v. Kentfield Builders, Inc., 385 Mich. 410, 189 N.W.2d 286 (1971). See also, Damrow v. Holbrook-Patterson, Inc., 951 F.2d 348, 1991 WL 278794, 1991 U.S.App. LEXIS 30690 (6th Cir.1991) (unpublished opinion; text available on LEXIS).

[8] In this case, Plaintiff admits that he has no evidence that notice of Jim Wolf's abuse was ever given to Werner Wolf, Ron Smith or anyone else. He further admits that the only basis for his claims against Lloyd Thiel is the fact that Father Thiel was the provincial (i.e., the head of the Order) at the time that he was in the Pre-Novitiate Program. He admits he never reported Jim Wolf's abuse to anyone, and he admits he has no evidence that anyone else ever reported Jim Wolf's sexual activities to Werner Wolf, Ron Smith, Lloyd Thiel, or any other Capuchin in an administrative or supervisory position connected with the Detroit Pre-Novitiate Program prior to or during 1978-1979.

[9] As for the "failure to have a sex abuse policy in place", Plaintiff has presented no evidence, nor cited any law, that there existed at the time in question, any duty (either statutory or under common law) to have such a policy in place, and the Court has found no cases which might support an allegation of such a duty.

This, perhaps, reflects one of the problems, or challenges, presented to plaintiffs in repressed memory cases. At the time of the sexual abuse incidents in question, the problem of child sexual abuse was not as much in the public conscience as it is today and, consequently, the decisional precedent from courts from that time which might create a duty to have a sex abuse policy simply does not exist, nor had the policy branches of government addressed this problem. Thus, courts sitting today in cases of repressed memory are without statutory or decisional guidance as to the source or nature of any duty that might be alleged relating to past incidents of sexual abuse. However, it is clear to this Court that it would be unfair to apply contemporary standards of duty and care to create a cause of action that did not *1147 exist at the time of the incidents. Such bootstrapping of past incidents into contemporary mores would place an undue burden on defendants attempting to defend such cases. Unfortunately, in cases of repressed memory, it may be, as here, that the law at the time simply did not provide a cause of action with an attendant remedy.

Since no evidence was presented at trial to establish that the Defendants were under any duty to have a sex abuse policy in place in 1978-1979, or that Werner Wolf, Ron Smith, Lloyd Thiel, or any other Capuchin in an administrative or supervisory position connected with the Detroit Pre-Novitiate Program were ever put on notice of Jim Wolf's sexual activities, Plaintiff's common law negligence claims against the non-abuser Defendants predicated upon Jim Wolf's alleged actions at the Detroit Pre-Novitiate Program must be dismissed.

Accordingly, Counts XII, XIV, and XV will be DISMISSED in their entirety and, with respect to Counts VII and XVI, those specific claims against Defendant Thiel and the Capuchin Order predicated upon Jim Wolf's actions at the Pre-Novitiate Program in Detroit, will also be dismissed. (The claims against Thiel and the Order predicated upon the Wisconsin actions are discussed, infra.)

D. THE WISCONSIN TORT CLAIMS AGAINST THE NON-ABUSER DEFENDANTS

1. "STATUTORY NEGLIGENCE"

[10] Plaintiff has alleged "statutory" negligence against the following Defendants for failure to report the sex abuse of Jim Buser and Gale Leifeld in violation of the Wisconsin Reporting Statute, Wisc.Stat. § 48.981:

. Kevin Hoelscher [Count VI];
. Lloyd Thiel [Count VII];

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

. Myron Kowalsky [Count VIII];
. St. Lawrence Seminary [Count IV]; and
. Capuchin Province [Count XVI]

During 1974-78, Kevin Hoelscher was St. Lawrence's athletic director and Myron Kowalski was a music teacher and in charge of the sophomore class. Lloyd Thiel was not at St. Lawrence at the time. He was the provincial head of the Capuchin's St. Joseph province.

At the time in question, the Wisconsin Reporting Statute was purely criminal in nature. It provided as follows:

Reports on Abused or Injured Children.

(1) A physician or surgeon ... or a nurse, social worker or school administrator having reasonable cause to believe that a child brought to him or coming before him has had physical injury or other abuse inflicted upon him by another, other than by accidental means, shall orally report the same, and the facts and circumstances forming the opinion. The report shall be made immediately by telephone or otherwise, and followed by a report in writing to a child welfare agency specified in 48.56(1) or the sheriff of the county....

* * * * * *

(3) Anyone knowingly and willfully violating this section by failing to file a report as required may be fined not more than $100 or imprisoned not more than 6 months or both.

Wisc.Stat. 48.981. [FN8]

FN8. This statute was amended in 1979, after the incidents alleged by Plaintiff, to expand both the scope of the reporting duties and the categories of officials who had a duty to report. Included in these expanded responsibilities were school teachers and counselors. As amended in 1979, § 48.981 provides in pertinent part, as follows:

A physician, coroner, medical examiner, nurse, dentist, chiropractor, optometrist, acupuncturist, other medical or mental health professional, social worker, marriage and family therapist, professional counselor, public assistance worker, school teacher, administrator or counselor, mediator under § 767.11, child care worker in a day care center or child caring institution, day care provider, alcohol or other drug abuse counselor, member of the treatment staff employed by or working under contract with a county department ..., physical therapist, occupational therapist, speech-language pathologist, audiologist, emergency medical technician or police or law enforcement officer having reasonable cause to suspect that a child seen in the course of professional duties has been abused or neglected or having reason to believe that a child seen in the course of professional duties has been threatened with abuse or neglect and that abuse or neglect of the child will occur shall, except as provided under subsection (2m), report as provided in subsection (3)....

Although no Wisconsin state or federal court has been called upon to decide specifically *1148 whether a civil negligence action can be maintained for violation of the Wisconsin Reporting Statute, [FN9] several courts have been called upon to decide this issue in the context of child abuse reporting statutes with virtually identical language to that of the Wisconsin statute. All of these courts have concluded that no private right of action can lie for failure to report. See, Borne v. Northwest Allen County School Corp., 532 N.E.2d 1196 (Ind.App.1989), app. denied, 558 N.E.2d 828 (Ind.1990); Doe "A" v. Special School District of St. Louis County, 637 F.Supp. 1138 (E.D.Mo.1986), aff'd, 901 F.2d 642 (8th Cir.1990); Thelma D. v. Board of Education, 669 F.Supp. 947 (E.D.Mo.1987); Fischer v. Metcalf, 543 So.2d 785 (Fla.App.1989).

FN9. Defendants have stated in Paragraph 5 of their February 20, 1995 "Motion to Dismiss Plaintiff's Allegations of Negligence Based on the Wisconsin Reporting Statute", that

"the Wisconsin Court of Appeals stated that with respect to the Wisconsin Reporting Statute, there was no legislative intent to create a private right of action and > therefore no action could be maintained for failure to report. Fortier v. Flambeau Plastics Co., 164 Wis.2d 639, 476 N.W.2d 593 (1991)."

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

> Contrary to Defendants' representation, the case cited by Defendants, Fortier v. Flambeau Plastics, has absolutely nothing to do with the Wisconsin Reporting Statute. That case is a toxic dumping case.

These cases make clear that in deciding whether a violation of the reporting statute can support a private negligence cause of action, the court should consider the provisions of the statute as a whole to determine whether the legislature intended to authorize a civil action. Having reviewed the entire text of Section 48.981 as it existed in 1974-78, this Court finds nothing to indicate that the Wisconsin legislature intended to authorize a private cause of action for failure to report. The Court agrees with the reasoning of the Indiana Court of Appeals which explained in Borne, supra:

> When the provisions of the act are considered as a whole, there is no apparent intent to authorize a civil action for failure of an individual to make the oral report.... Furthermore, such an action is not authorized at common law and its maintenance would raise substantial questions of causation since the failure would not in the direct sense, be a proximate cause of the injury to the child. It would, we believe, misdirect judicial time and attention from the very real problems of children in need of services in favor of pursuing collateral individuals, who are presumably capable of responding in money damages, on the ground that they knowingly failed to make an oral report. We conclude that was not within the legislative purpose of the act.

532 N.E.2d at 1203. [FN10]

> FN10. The Court notes that the Milwaukee County Circuit Court also determined that no private cause of action exists for violation of Section 48.981. In Brown v. Archdiocese of Milwaukee, Milwaukee County Circuit Court No. 93-CV-003237 (Sept. 26, 1994 decision), the court stated:
> ... Sec. 48.981 in this Court's opinion does not impose a duty on organizations to report abuse, nor does it create a civil cause of action. It is strictly a regulatory reporting statute that involves individuals. So the 48.981 claims will be dismissed....
> [Ex. B to Defendants' Motion to Dismiss Plaintiff's Allegations of Negligence Based on the Wisconsin Reporting Statute, p. 6.]

[11] Moreover, even assuming arguendo that a private cause of action can be maintained for violation of 48.981, Plaintiff has not presented sufficient evidence to establish that the statute was violated. The statute, by its terms requires reporting only when (1) an abuse victim is "brought before" a school administrator or "comes before" the administrator, and (2) the administrator had a "reasonable cause" to suspect that the boys were abused.

With respect to the "brought before"/"comes before" requirement, in Landeros v. Flood, 17 Cal.3d 399, 131 Cal.Rptr. 69, 551 P.2d 389 (1976), the California Supreme Court was called upon to construe a similar requirement in the California reporting statute. The California court determined that a doctor could be held liable for violation of the statute only if the child actually appeared before him and his injuries were apparent. 1149 Although this Court does not necessarily read into the statute the requirement that a child be brought physically before a school administrator before the reporting duty is triggered, the Court believes that the "brought before" language does reflect a legislative intent that the nature of the abuse report brought to the attention of the administrator be more than simply rumor, conjecture or speculation. This intent is also clearly reflected in the "reasonable cause" requirement of the statute, which is the same kind of requirement imposed in the Missouri reporting statute. In construing this provision of the Missouri statute, the court in Doe "A", supra, explained,

> The statute does not require school teachers and administrators to report every suspicion of abuse.
> Rather, the statute specifically requires reporting on when there is a reasonable cause to suspect abuse. This requirement calls for the exercise of a teacher's or administrator's professional judgment.

637 F.Supp. at 1148. See also, Rosacrans v.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

Kingon, 154 Mich.App. 381, 397 N.W.2d 317 (1986), app. denied, 428 Mich. 862 (1987) (violation of Michigan reporting statute not established in absence of evidence showing that the defendants had reasonable cause to suspect abuse.)

In this case, there was trial testimony that at St. Lawrence Seminary, the athletic director is deemed to be an "administrator". [FN11] As indicated above, Kevin Hoelscher was the athletic director at St. Lawrence during the period of time in question. However, Plaintiff has presented no evidence to establish that any alleged abuse victim personally reported his own sexual abuse to Hoelscher. [FN12] Hoelscher testified only that he had "heard rumors" about Leifeld. [FN13]

FN11. The Court questions whether an "athletic director" would, in 1975-76 have been deemed by the Wisconsin legislature to be a "school administrator" subject to the provisions of the Reporting Statute prior to the 1979 revision of the act which added "teachers" to the list of persons required to report abuse. It seems to the Court that the legislature would have deemed only those supervisory school employees who had hiring, firing, evaluative and disciplinary authority to be "school administrators". While Defendants have cited a number of cases and a statute which they contend establish such a definition of school administrators, none of the cases nor the statutory provision cited by Defendants stand for this proposition.
Defendants rely upon Crear v. Labor & Indus. Review Com., 114 Wis.2d 537, 339 N.W.2d 350 (1983); Madison Teachers, Inc. v. Madison Metro School District, 159 Wis.2d 429, 464 N.W.2d 679, 1990 WL 250225 (1990); State v. Crisdhome Farms, Inc., 115 Wis.2d 696, 339 N.W.2d 366, 1983 WL 162058 (1983); and Wis.Stat. § 40.02(55), as support for their contention that only school personnel with the authority for hiring, firing and discipline are deemed to be "school administrators" in Wisconsin. The Crear case does not involve teachers or school administrators, at all. That case involved the issue of who was a "supervisor" of a department of social services social worker. The Madison Teachers case dealt with collectively-bargained definitions of teachers' union employees and whether a teacher could be deemed a "supervisor" of a classroom aide under the Municipal Employment Relations Act. State v. Crisdhome Farms did not involve any employer/employee relationship. That case involved a civil forfeiture action imposed as a penalty upon the defendant for dumping waste in a river. As for the cited statute, § 40.02(55) addresses the question of which school employees are entitled to participate in the Wisconsin teachers retirement plan.
Not having been presented with any legal authority that school administrators are only those with hiring/firing authority, the Court is left with the uncontroverted trial testimony of Father Brian Braun that at St. Lawrence the athletic director was considered an administrator.

FN12. The only evidence of face-to-face personal reports to administrators is Paul Isely's testimony about telling Hoelscher of Leifeld's massaging his shoulders and running his hand down his chest to his belt line and David Grieber's testimony about telling Father Zickert about Jim Buser having "hurt him" and having called him stupid. However, because the Court has determined that the statute cannot support a private civil cause of action, the Court need not reach the issue of whether these reports might constitute a sufficient basis under the statute for giving a school administrator reasonable cause to believe that sexual abuse occurred.

FN13. Even if the statute were deemed to support a private cause of action, and even if the statute were found to have been violated, dismissal of the statutory negligence claims against St. Lawrence and the Capuchin Province would still be required because there can be no vicarious liability for an individual's violation of a statute which mandates actions only on the part of the individual. Thelma D. v. Board of Education, supra (liability for a teacher's failure to report abuse cannot be imputed to the School Board.)

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

1150 For these reasons, Plaintiff's "statutory negligence" claims against Kevin Hoelscher Lloyd Thiel and Myron Kowalski in Counts VI, VII and VIII, and the claims against St. Lawrence Seminary in Count IV and the Capuchin Province in Count XVI will be dismissed. [FN14]

FN14. To the extent that Plaintiff has also argued that violation of the statute establishes a claim of "negligence per se", that claim is also dismissed. As the Court explained on the record at the March 15, 1995 hearing on these motions, negligence per se relates to the standard of care that would be applicable to a cause of action based on a statutory violation if such a cause of action existed; it does not create a new duty giving rise to a separate cause of action. Thus, because there is no private cause of action for failure to make a § 48.981 report, the issue of negligence per se does not arise in this case.

2. COMMON LAW NEGLIGENCE

Plaintiff also claims that the non-abuser Defendants are liable to him for being abused by Leifeld and Buser under several theories of "common law negligence". Specifically, Plaintiff alleges theories of:

(a) negligent hiring/retention of Buser and Leifeld;
(b) negligent supervision of Buser and Leifeld;
(c) failure to warn Plaintiff or his parents that Leifeld and Buser were sex abusers, and failure to prevent their sex abuse of him; and
(d) failure to adopt a sexual abuse policy.

The Court will address each of these theories ad seriatim.

(a) Negligent Hiring

[12] Plaintiff claims that the Capuchin Order negligently "hired", and negligently retained, Fathers Buser and Leifeld as priests. [FN15] Questions of hiring and retention of clergy necessarily will require interpretation of church canons, and internal church policies and practices.

FN15. As indicated, supra, Plaintiff has also asserted this negligent hiring/negligent retention claim against St. Lawrence Seminary and individual Defendants Lloyd Thiel and Myron Kowalsky.

[13] It is well-settled that when a court is required to interpret Canon Law or internal church policies and practices, the First Amendment is violated because such judicial inquiry would constitute excessive government entanglement with religion. See Serbian E. Orthodox Diocese v. Milivojevich, 426 U.S. 696, 96 S.Ct. 2372, 49 L.Ed.2d 151 (1976) . See also: Gonzalez v. Roman Catholic Archbishop, 280 U.S. 1, 50 S.Ct. 5, 74 L.Ed. 131 (1929) (civil courts may not inquire into clergy hiring decisions of church); Kedroff v. St. Nicholas Cathedral of Russian Orthodox Church, 344 U.S. 94, 73 S.Ct. 143, 97 L.Ed. 120 (1952) ("Freedom to select the clergy ... must now be set to have federal constitutional protection as part of the free exercise of religion against state interference." Id. at 116, 73 S.Ct. at 154); Rayburn v. General Conference of Seventh Day Adventists, 772 F.2d 1164 (4th Cir.1985), cert. denied, 478 U.S. 1020, 106 S.Ct. 3333, 92 L.Ed.2d 739 (1986); Van Osdol v. Vogt, 892 P.2d 402 (Colo.App.1994). [FN16] This is true whether the "hiring" at issue is church hiring per se or the hiring of school personnel for a church-run school. NLRB v. Catholic Bishop of Chicago, 440 U.S. 490, 99 S.Ct. 1313, 59 L.Ed.2d 533 (1979) ("Because religious authority necessarily pervades a church-operated school, personnel decisions affecting the school may involve ecclesiastical issues as much as decisions affecting church employees." Id. at 502, 99 S.Ct. at 1319). See also, Black v. St. Bernadette Congregation, 121 Wis.2d 560, 360 N.W.2d 550 (Wis.App.1984) (discharge of a lay principal of a Catholic school not reviewable by court).

FN16. Excessive entanglement with religious tenets also violates the Wisconsin

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

Constitution. See Olston v. Hallock, 55 Wis.2d 687, 201 N.W.2d 35 (1972); Black v. St. Bernadette Congregation, 121 Wis.2d 560, 360 N.W.2d 550 (Wis.App.1984).

The foregoing cases make clear that any inquiry into the decision of who should be permitted to become or remain a priest necessarily would involve prohibited excessive entanglement with religion. Therefore, Plaintiff's claims of negligence predicated 1151 upon a "negligent hiring" theory will be dismissed. [FN17]

FN17. The cited authorities also make it clear that Plaintiff may not rely upon Canon Law or any purported violation thereof to establish any of his claims of negligence in this action. Furthermore, even if the entanglement issue did not preclude judicial inquiry, there was absolutely not a shred of evidence in the record that either the Capuchin or St. Lawrence Defendants had any notice of the abuse proclivities of Fathers Buser of Leifeld prior to their "hiring" of them as priests or teachers at St. Lawrence. The "negligent retention" claim is simply another rubric for Plaintiff's "negligent supervision" claims, discussed, infra.

(b) Negligent Supervision

It is true that some courts have held that whenever a court is called upon to impose a standard of care on clerics--whether in hiring or in supervising other clerics--First Amendment excessive entanglement issues arise which preclude civil court adjudication. See e.g., Dausch v. Rykse, 52 F.3d 1425 (7th Cir.1994); Schmidt v. Bishop, 779 F.Supp. 321 (S.D.N.Y.1991); Moses v. Diocese of Colorado, 863 P.2d 310 (Colo.1993), cert. denied, 511 U.S. 1137, 114 S.Ct. 2153, 128 L.Ed.2d 880 (1994).

However, the Supreme Court has made clear that if only "neutral" principles of law can be applied without determining underlying questions of church law and policies, then a court may intervene. Serbian E. Orthodox Diocese, supra; Wisconsin v. Yoder, 406 U.S. 205, 215, 92 S.Ct. 1526, 1533, 32 L.Ed.2d 15 (1972) ("A way of life, however virtuous and admirable, may not be interposed as a barrier to a reasonable state regulation ... if it is based on purely secular considerations." Id.) See also, Jones v. Trane, 153 Misc.2d 822, 591 N.Y.S.2d 927 (1992); Destefano v. Grabrian, 763 P.2d 275 (Colo.1988); Moses v. Diocese of Colorado, supra (application of a secular standard to secular conduct that is tortious is not prohibited by the Constitution).

[14] In this case, the Court believes that, unlike in the case of hiring decisions, matters pertaining to the supervision of Fathers Buser and Leifeld can be decided without determining questions of church law and policies. Therefore, the Court finds that no First Amendment issues are implicated which would mandate dismissal of the negligent supervision claims.

However, as all parties acknowledge in this case, the Wisconsin Supreme Court has never explicitly recognized a cause of action for negligent supervision, [FN18] and the most recent decisions of the Wisconsin Court of Appeals have also refused to find such a cause of action. See Jane Doe v. Archdiocese of Milwaukee, 188 Wis.2d 79, 524 N.W.2d 647 (1994) (unpublished opinion; text available on LEXIS); Pritzlaff v. Archdiocese of Milwaukee, 188 Wis.2d 79, 524 N.W.2d 647 (1994) (unpublished opinion; text available on LEXIS); Sherrill v. Smart, 181 Wis.2d 366, 514 N.W.2d 422 (Wis.App.1993) (unpublished opinion; text available on LEXIS).

FN18. The only case in which the Wisconsin court has recognized a cause of action even related to "negligent supervision" involved a hospital being found to have negligently granted a orthopedic surgical privileges to a doctor and held liable for failing to do a pre-hire check on a surgeon's claimed past hospital affiliations and certifications in violation of statutory requirements imposed upon hospitals. Johnson v. Misericordia Community Hospital, 99 Wis.2d 708, 301 N.W.2d 156 (1981). At best, the case could be construed as a "negligent hiring" case. No mention, however, is made in

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

Johnson of a "common law" cause of action for negligent hire or the elements set forth in the Restatement. Cases subsequent to Johnson have characterized that decision as involving "special circumstances", and essentially a theory of liability for medical malpractice. See cases discussed infra in the text of this Opinion.

In Pritzlaff the court explained:

> The author of this opinion concludes ... that the amended complaint states no ground for relief because the Wisconsin Supreme Court has not explicitly recognized the tort of negligent supervision.... the supreme court has sustained causes of action analogous to the tort of negligent supervision of employees in the past, and it might choose to explicitly sustain such a cause of action in the future. This writer is reluctant, however, to recognize a new cause of action in this case. This court is not primarily a law- developing or law-declaring 1152 body.... For this court to extend a religious body's liability to negligent supervision--in effect, to declare a new cause of action in Wisconsin--is to step out of its primary error- correcting function and assume a role more properly left to the supreme court.

In Gallun v. Soccer U.S.A., 184 Wis.2d 401, 516 N.W.2d 789 (1994) (unpublished opinion; text available on LEXIS), the plaintiff, a women's soccer player, sued a soccer club under a theory of negligent hiring, training, supervision and retention of a soccer club maintenance employee who clandestinely videotaped the plaintiff changing clothes in the club's locker room through a "peep hole" in the locker room ceiling.

The trial court noted that the tort of negligent supervision has not been recognized by the Wisconsin Supreme Court but assumed, for the sake of the defendant's summary judgment argument that the tort existed under Wisconsin law. The court nonetheless dismissed the cause of action on the defendants' summary judgment motion because the court found that the record did not provide any basis for a reasonable inference that there was a foreseeability of probable harm in failing to supervise the employee more closely, and the appellate court affirmed.

In Sherrill v. Smart, supra, a case relied upon by Plaintiff here, the plaintiff sued the owners of a tavern for injuries sustained when he was shot in the back by the tavern's bouncer during a confrontation between the bouncer, the plaintiff and several others. The plaintiff alleged two theories of recovery from the taverns owners: respondeat superior liability, and a direct claim of negligent hiring and supervision.

On the defendants' motion for summary judgment, the trial court held that the bouncer was not acting within the scope of his employment when he shot the plaintiff and, therefore, dismissed the plaintiff's respondeat superior claim. The trial court also determined that the dismissal of the respondeat superior claim also required dismissal of the plaintiff's direct claim of negligent hiring/negligent supervision. The court found that once the defendants were released from liability for their employee's acts, the remaining direct claims failed for lack of causation because there was nothing to link the actions of the defendants to the harm suffered by the plaintiff. Therefore, it granted defendants' motion for summary judgment.

The court of appeals reversed finding that an issue of material fact existed as to whether the bouncer had been acting within the scope of his employment when he shot the plaintiff. The appellate court also determined that the plaintiff's direct negligence claim was not dependent upon a finding of vicarious liability.

However, contrary to Plaintiff Isely's assertions, the Sherrill court did not adopt the tort of negligent supervision. Quite the contrary, the court specifically pointed out that "Wisconsin has neither adopted nor rejected the negligent hiring and negligent supervision torts." Id. The court continued, "Here, neither party briefed the issues relating to the validity of, or the elements of, these torts in this jurisdiction. Lacking this assistance, we decline to address them." Id. [FN19]

> FN19. Plaintiff also relies upon A.E. Investment Corp. v. Link Builders, Inc., 62 Wis.2d 479, 214 N.W.2d 764 (1974), and Schuster v. Altenberg, 144 Wis.2d 223, 424 N.W.2d 159 (1988), for the proposition that Wisconsin has recognized a cause of action for negligent supervision of an employee. Neither of these cases support Plaintiff's contention as neither of these cases involve an employer's negligent hiring or negligent supervision of an employee.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

The A.E. Investment case involved an action brought by a building tenant against a contractor for negligent construction of the building in which the plaintiff had leased space. The only mention of "negligent supervision" in the case is in the court's summation of the plaintiff's complaint allegations:

It was alleged that the architect was negligent in its failure to adequately supervise construction, in that it failed to determine the nature and condition of the subsoil prior to and during construction. * * * It was alleged that as the direct and proximate result of the negligence, the floor space leased to the plaintiff began to settle, damage was caused to the walls, the floor became uneven, and eventually the premises became untenable.

214 N.W.2d at 765. Contrary to Plaintiff's assertions, no allegation was ever made that the contractor negligently supervised his employees and no claim was made that the contractor's negligent supervision of his employees caused the damages suffered by A.E. Investment. Moreover, the precise issue in that case is whether a tenant, who had no privity of contract with the contractor, could sue for damages for negligent construction.

Schuster v. Altenberg is similarly inapplicable. That case involved a psychiatrist's duty to warn his patient and her family about the side effects of medication he had prescribed for Mrs. Schuester and of Mrs. Schuester's dangerous condition and its implications.

*1153 While the Wisconsin state courts have clearly never expressly recognized the existence of a separate cause of action for negligent supervision, the Seventh Circuit, nonetheless, concluded in Midwest Knitting Mills, Inc. v. United States, 950 F.2d 1295 (7th Cir.1991), that the Wisconsin Supreme Court would recognize negligent supervision as a separate cognizable tort.

Midwest was a Federal Tort Claims Act action brought by a manufacturer against the Small Business Association. Midwest was a Milwaukee manufacturer of knitted goods. It was a subcontractor for several SBA contracts under a program which permitted capital-poor minority companies to receive advance payments needed to compete. Midwest had successfully completed several contracts prior to 1983.

In 1983, the SBA assigned the task of processing Midwest's applications for advance payments to one of its employees, Frederick Matthews. In 1984 and 1985, Midwest was awarded five contracts, the largest in excess of $1,250,000. Allegedly because of "dereliction, negligence, and deliberate sabotage" by Matthews, Midwest never received any advance payments. At the end 1985, Midwest was forced to surrender its contracts and go out of business.

According to Midwest, Matthews had a chemical dependency that resulted in "physical, intellectual and emotional infirmities." Midwest further alleged that Matthews' supervisors at the SBA retained him during this period even though they were aware of his poor performance.

Midwest sued the SBA for the amount of the contracts it had to cancel plus the value of future business lost as a result of its cessation of business under two theories: (1) the SBA's negligent supervision and retention of Matthews and (2) tortious interference by the SBA with its own contract with Midwest. The parties agreed that Wisconsin substantive law would govern the action.

The district court held that Wisconsin courts would not recognize the tort of negligent supervision of an employee in this situation, nor would they recognize a claim for interference with one's own contract. Therefore, it granted the Government's motion to dismiss.

The Seventh Circuit affirmed, but for different reasons. The appellate court believed that the Wisconsin Supreme Court would recognize the tort of negligent supervision, but concluded that Wisconsin would decline to allow recovery in the case of Midwest because Midwest was alleging only a commercial loss and was seeking purely economic damages. 950 F.2d at 1300.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

With respect to its determination that Wisconsin would recognize the tort of negligent supervision, the Seventh Circuit stated as follows:

> The tort of negligent supervision places liability upon a master for injuries inflicted on third persons by its servants when the master was guilty of selecting a servant incompetent or otherwise unfit to perform the services for which he was employed. 57 C.J.S. Master and Servant, S 559 (1948). As the parties correctly note, the Wisconsin Supreme Court has never explicitly recognized the existence of this tort by holding an employer liable for negligent retention or supervision of an employee. However, we have no reason to believe that Wisconsin would reject this cause of action if the matter were before its supreme court as a matter of first impression. The tort of negligent supervision of employees enjoys a secure position in the mainstream of American common law. The Restatements of both Torts and Agency recognize it, as does at least one of Wisconsin's neighbors. See Ponticas v. K.M.S. Inv., 331 N.W.2d 907, 910 (Minn.1983) . [FN20] Professors Prosser and Keeton *1154 write that a master "may, of course, be liable on the basis of any negligence of his own in selecting or dealing with the servant ... upon familiar principles of negligence and agency law."
>
> FN20. The Ponticas case actually dealt with the tort of negligent hiring, not negligent supervision. The court in that case merely noted in dicta that it saw "no substantial difference in imposing a duty on an employer to use reasonable care in the initial hiring from his duty to use that care in the retention of an employee." 331 N.W.2d at 911.

Wisconsin cases have sustained causes of action analogous to the tort of negligent supervision of employees. In Kamp v. Coxe Brothers & Co., 122 Wis. 206, 99 N.W. 366 (1904), the Wisconsin Supreme Court examined whether a wrongful death action could exist against an employer when an incompetent employee failed to warn a fellow employee of danger and that employee was killed.... While the facts, and to some extent, the policy concerns underlying the Kamp decision are analogous to this case, it is not controlling. The Wisconsin Supreme Court's holding is limited to interpreting an exception to the common law fellow-servant rule [which was abrogated and replaced by the workers' compensation acts]....
Later, Wisconsin cases have recognized claims arising from the failure to supervise adequately the work of an independent contractor [in the construction context].... Also, in the context of medical malpractice, the Wisconsin Supreme Court has held that a hospital has a duty to employ competent physicians. Johnson v. Misericordia Community Hospital, 99 Wis.2d 708, 301 N.W.2d 156, 170-171 (1981)....

950 F.2d at 1298-1299.

This Court is not convinced that Wisconsin would adopt negligent supervision as a distinct cause of action. First, to the extent that the Midwest court relies upon the fact that the Restatements and Prosser and Keeton recognize the tort, the Court notes that the Restatements are replete with causes of action that not all state courts recognize. Second, as noted in footnote 20, contrary to the Seventh Circuit's assertion, Minnesota does not recognize a separate tort of negligent supervision, and, in fact, only a few jurisdictions do recognize it. [FN21]

> FN21. As observed in Am.Jur.2d. there is considerable disagreement among the states as to whether the negligence of an employer in selecting, retaining or supervising employees is an independent basis for the employer's liability to third-parties. See, 53 Am.Jur.2d, Master and Servant, § 422, p. 435, and cases cited therein. Contrary to the Midwest court's intimation, there are not that many jurisdictions which recognize this tort.

Further, in all three Wisconsin cases cited by the Midwest court, the Wisconsin Supreme Court made it very clear that it was limiting its holding to the particular facts and circumstances of those cases and not stating a general principle of law. [FN22]

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

880 F.Supp. 1138
99 Ed. Law Rep. 797
(Cite as: 880 F.Supp. 1138)

FN22. Moreover, the fellow-servant rule holding of the Kamp case has been abrogated and replaced by the workers' compensation act.

[15][16] Finally, and perhaps most importantly, it is fundamental that when state law supplies the rule of decision, it is incumbent upon a federal court to determine how the highest court of the state would decide the case if it were presented to it. Konradi v. United States, 919 F.2d 1207, 1213 (7th Cir.1990). The precise issue, as this Court sees it in this "delayed discovery" tort action, is not whether now--20 years after the occurrences upon which Plaintiff's claims are predicated--the Wisconsin Supreme Court would adopt the tort of negligent supervision, but rather whether, had the claim been presented to the Wisconsin Court in 1974-78, would the court have recognized it then? This is consistent with the generally accepted principle that a tort action is to be determined by application of the law which existed at the time of the occurrence of the events upon which the action is predicated. See e.g., Duncan v. Steeper, 17 Wis.2d 226, 116 N.W.2d 154 (1962) (court required to allow the defense of charitable immunity and the case accordingly dismissed because when the tort was committed, the charitable immunity defense was still recognized in Wisconsin).

This reflects this Court's concern, expressed supra, that it would be unfair to juxtapose contemporary mores and contemporary causes of action upon parties for *1155 events which occurred in a different era with a different level of social awareness of problems. It is certainly not that this Court believes that Wisconsin courts would have tolerated or accepted without providing redress the type of conduct alleged by the Plaintiff to have been perpetrated upon him by the alleged abuser priests in question. (Indeed, both criminal and civil actions were clearly available to victims directly against those individuals.) Rather, the concern here is that the law did not then recognize a duty upon the employer to be responsible automatically for such ultra vires conduct of its employees. (This is different and distinct from any "duty to warn [about] and prevent" such conduct when an employer has advance notice, as the Court discusses, infra.)

[17] It is clear to the Court that in 1974-78, no cognizable cause of action for negligent supervision existed in Wisconsin, nor had there been as of that time any remotely similar causes of action decided by the Wisconsin appellate courts or the Wisconsin Supreme Court. Given the facts that (1) the tort of negligent supervision has even today yet to be recognized as an independent cause of action in Wisconsin and (2) the tort is not now, and certainly was not in 1974-78, universally accepted in other jurisdictions, this Court finds that if this case were presented to the Wisconsin Supreme Court 20 years ago, the separate and independent tort of negligent supervision would not be recognized.

For these reasons, the Court will dismiss Plaintiff's claims of negligent supervision.

(c) Failure to warn of and failure to prevent abuse

While the tort of negligent supervision would present a novel theory of recovery for the Wisconsin Supreme Court, the Court does not find this to be the case with respect to Plaintiff's theory of "failure to warn/failure to prevent" the sexual abuse allegedly perpetrated upon him by Fathers Leifeld and Buser. This theory is generally recognized as a straightforward, black-letter common law negligence claim involving nothing more the duty imposed upon a reasonable person in similar circumstances. As stated by Prosser and Keeton:

> The duty to take precautions against the negligence of others ... arises ... only where a reasonable person would recognize the existence of an unreasonable risk of harm to others through the intervention of such negligence....
> There is normally much less reason to anticipate acts on the part of others which are malicious and intentionally damaging than those which are merely negligent; and this is all the more true where, as is usually the case, such acts are criminal. Under all ordinary and normal circumstances, in the absence of any reason to expect the contrary, the actor may reasonably proceed upon the assumption that others will obey the criminal law....
> There are, however, other situations, in which either a special responsibility resting upon the defendant for the protection of the plaintiff, or an especial temptation and opportunity for criminal misconduct brought about by the defendant, will > call upon him to take precautions against it. The responsibility for protection ... may be founded upon some relation existing between the parties, such as ... school and pupil....

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

Prosser and Keeton on Torts (5th ed.), § 33, pp. 199-203 (emphasis added.) See also, 57A Am.Jur.2d § 383, "A duty to warn may ... arise where a person stands in some special relationship to either a person whose conduct needs to be controlled or in a relationship to the foreseeable victim of that conduct." Id. at pp. 378-379.

[18] While the foregoing general principles demonstrate that a duty to warn/duty to protect may arise out of a school-pupil relationship, the treatises and case law makes clear that no duty can be imposed on a school to protect a student from intentional torts of a teacher simply because of their status as student and teacher. Rather, there must be evidence that the school's supervisory officials had knowledge of the activities of the teacher who was the subject of the complaints. See, Kimpton v. School District of New Lisbon, 138 Wis.2d 226, 405 N.W.2d 740 (Wisc.App.1987). *Cf., Hersh v. Kentfield, supra (1156 holding that in order to find negligence on the part of an employer for failure to prevent the intentional or reckless acts of an employee, there must be sufficient evidence demonstrating that the employer knew or should have known of the employee's propensities to act in the complained of manner.)

In Kimpton, a high school student and his parents sued a school district alleging that the school district negligently allowed a sexual relationship to develop between the student and a teacher. Although the case involved both federal § 1983 and state common law negligence claims which were ultimately decided by application of the doctrine of governmental immunity, the court's explanation for finding insufficient evidence of a breach of duty to protect the student is instructive:

> To rise to the level of "gross negligence" ... the evidence must show that the district's supervisory officials knew or should have known that the employee was engaging in [illegal] conduct, and they failed to take remedial action. The deposition testimony of employees, supervisors and school board members reveals that none of them were in any way aware of Segerstrom's relationship with James until Segerstrom was arrested. Those facts are not disputed. James himself admitted that he took pains to conceal the relationship and told no one of it until December, 1983. There simply is no evidence that the district had any knowledge of the relationship.
> Nor is there any evidence indicating that the district should have known of Segerstrom's activities, or even the likelihood that they might occur. While school officials were aware that in the mid-1960's an unnamed male teacher was fired because of his sexual attraction to a male supervisor, this knowledge would not form any reasonable basis for the district to take preventative measures on the chance that Segerstrom might initiate a homosexual relationship with a student fifteen years later....
> The affidavits do suggest that school officials were aware of complaints about Segerstrom's disciplinary measures and that he previously had a drinking problem. But this knowledge alone would not reasonably indicate to the school board that Segerstrom was likely to engage in a homosexual relationship with a student. It is undisputed that the school officials knew nothing of Segerstrom's activities, nor is there any basis for believing they should have known of them....
> On these undisputed facts, the trial court properly granted summary judgment to the district.

405 N.W.2d at 746.

The failure to warn/failure to prevent issue has also come up in federal teacher/child sex abuse cases in Missouri. In Thelma D. v. Board of Education, supra, the plaintiffs attempted to hold a school district liable for failure to warn of an abusing teacher's sexual propensities and failure to prevent further abuse by him. With respect to the "knowledge" requirement, the plaintiffs sought to impute the knowledge of a teacher (not a supervisor) to the school district. The court expressly rejected the plaintiffs' argument, finding that non-abusing, non-supervisory school personnel had no common law duty to act upon their knowledge of a fellow teacher's sexual abuse of students. The court stated that, although a supervisory police officer might be liable for standing by and doing nothing while another police officer beat a third person in his presence because of the general responsibility of police officers to enforce the laws and keep the peace, there is no basis for holding school personnel similarly liable.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

The court explained:

> Plaintiffs ... contend that Soward, as a teacher, had a common law duty to act upon her alleged knowledge of Tansil's sexual abuse of plaintiffs and to report or prevent him from so abusing them....
>
> * * * * * *
>
> Teachers do have the responsibility for the care and welfare of their youthful charges.... But this obligation is not congruent with that of a police officer. Police officers, unlike teachers, are entrusted with the duty to enforce the laws. As stated in Byrd [v. Brishke], 466 F.2d 6 (7th Cir.1972)], "one who is given the badge of authority of a police officer may not ignore the duty imposed by his office...."
> 1157 The Court finds Soward owed neither a statutory nor a common law duty to plaintiffs. Accordingly, her motion to dismiss is granted.

669 F.Supp. at 950-951.

It is undisputed that Paul Isely and St. Lawrence Seminary stood in a pupil- school relationship. The foregoing authorities make clear, then, that the issue in this case is whether evidence has been presented to demonstrate that any St. Lawrence Seminary or Capuchin Order administrators had notice of Leifeld's and/or Buser's sexual activities prior to their alleged abuse of Paul Isely.

Plaintiff Paul Isely, Defendant Kevin Hoelscher, and three of Plaintiff's witnesses--Peter Isely, David Grieber and Michael Albiero--testified regarding the reporting of the conduct of Jim Buser and Gale Leifeld.

(1) Failure to warn/failure to prevent Plaintiff's abuse by Jim Buser

[19] With respect to the conduct of Jim Buser, Plaintiff testified that he was sexually abused by Buser during his freshman year (i.e., in 1974- 75). However, he admitted that he never reported Buser's alleged abuse of him to anyone at St. Lawrence during his stay at the seminary.

The only trial evidence of reports concerning Buser prior to his alleged abuse of Plaintiff was the testimony of Plaintiff's witness David Grieber. [FN23] Grieber testified that in 1971 he was sodomized by Jim Buser during a tutorial session which Buser conducted, and that after the incident, he stopped going to his tutoring sessions. He testified that a few days later, John Zickert, who at the time was the dean of freshman class, called him into his office to inquire why he was missing his tutorial sessions.

> FN23. Michael Albiero testified that he was abused by Jim Buser in late December of 1976 and that a week later he reported Buser's abuse of him to Father Leifeld, who at the time was the Rector of St. Lawrence. However, Albiero's alleged abuse and his report of the abuse to the Rector occurred more than a year and a half after Paul Isely's alleged abuse by Buser. Therefore, Isely may not rely on Albiero's report to Leifeld as the basis for "notice" to the Seminary or the Order for purposes of his failure to warn/failure to prevent abuse claims.

Grieber testified that he did not tell Father Zickert that he had been sodomized or molested or sexually abused by Buser. He only told Zickert that Father Buser had "hurt" him and that Buser yelled at him, called him stupid, made him feel bad, and made him feel ashamed. [Grieber Dep. Tr. pp. 15-16; 33-34.] Grieber admitted that he never reported the incident to anyone else at St. Lawrence and he left the school at the end of the academic year.

Although Grieber testified that even though he never expressly told Zickert that Buser had sexually molested him, he thought Father Zickert understood that he was talking about being sexually abused. However, this is nothing more than conjecture on Grieber's part, and as indicated above, more than conjecture is required to warrant submitting an issue to the jury.

The court finds that Grieber's testimony of Father Buser having "hurt" him, having yelled at him, and having called him stupid is no different than the "notice" that the school district defendants in Kimpton supra, had of the conduct of the homosexual teacher in that case. In Kimpton, the only notice that school district had regarding the teacher in that case was that there had been complaints of his disciplinary tactics. Just as the Kimpton court determined with regard to the "notice" of complaints of disciplinary tactics, this Court finds that Grieber's report to told Father Zickert that Buser had hurt him, called him stupid and made him feel bad is insufficient evidence of notice of sexual abuse to warrant submitting to the jury Plaintiff's failure to warn/failure to prevent sexual abuse claims with respect to Plaintiff's alleged abuse by Jim Buser.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

(2) Failure to warn/failure to prevent Plaintiff's abuse by Gale Leifeld

[20] With respect to the issue of St. Lawrence's knowledge of Gale Leifeld's conduct, Plaintiff testified that he reported Leifeld's conduct to Kevin Hoelscher, the athletic director, during his sophomore year (i.e., 1975- 76). Isely testified that he told Hoelscher 1158 about an incident with Leifeld in the movie projection booth when Leifeld massaged his neck, then ran his hand down his chest, down to his belt, at which point Isely "froze," and Leifeld stopped. According to Isely, Hoelscher told him that "he was going to get Father Gale some help". [Isely 2/13/95 Tr. p. 33.]

Kevin Hoelscher testified that he had no precise recollection of Paul Isely talking to him about his own abuse by Leifeld. [Hoelscher Dep. Tr, p. 56]. However, he did state that he had heard rumors about Leifeld massaging the necks of boys who worked with him in the projection booth. Hoelscher testified that he told Father Joe O'Conner, who was the Rector of St. Lawrence until December of 1976, what he had heard. However, precisely when Hoelscher reported this the Rector is unclear.

Isely also testified about another incident of abuse by Leifeld which occurred in the Rector's office. This incident also involved his brother, Peter. Plaintiff testified that this incident also occurred during his sophomore year (i.e., 1975-76). According to the testimony of Peter Isely, the incident occurred in April of 1976. However, it is unclear from Plaintiff's testimony whether this incident occurred before or after the projection booth massaging incident. And, as indicated above, the timing of Hoelscher's report of rumors to the Rector, Father O'Conner, is also unclear.

Plaintiff also testified that he reported Leifeld to Hoelscher a second time, during his junior year (i.e., 1976-77). Isley stated that he went to Hoelscher to report that he had heard from another student that Tom Schmidt, who was also a student at St. Lawrence, was abused by Leifeld. Hoelscher first testified that he also reported the Schmidt incident to Father O'Conner, the Rector, but then he later testified that he believed that it was the only incident that he went to Father O'Conner about. [See Hoelscher Dep. Tr. pp. 41-54.]

Although the testimony is unclear and may be contradictory, the Court cannot say that Plaintiff has presented no evidence of prior notice to St. Lawrence administrators. There is evidence of at least one report, and perhaps two reports, made by Hoelscher to Father O'Conner sometime during 1976. Whether the report (or reports) was/were made before or after the incident involving Paul and Peter Isely and Leifeld in the Rector's office is an issue of fact that the jury will have to decide.

For these reasons, Defendants motion for summary judgment as a matter of law with respect to the claims against Hoelscher, St. Lawrence Seminary, and the Capuchin Province for failure to warn/failure to prevent Plaintiff's abuse by Gale Leifeld will be denied. [FN24] However, with respect to Defendants Myron Kowalsky and Lloyd Thiel, inasmuch as Plaintiff has admitted that he has no evidence that either of these Defendants had any notice of the alleged abusive conduct of Leifeld or Buser, the motion will be granted. Therefore, Counts VII and VIII (i.e., the claims against Fathers Thiel and Kowalsky) will be dismissed in their entirety. Thus, with respect to the non-abuser Defendants, this leaves only Plaintiff's "failure to warn/failure to prevent" in Counts IV, VI, and XVI to go to the jury. [FN25]

> FN24. With respect to the Capuchin Province, there was trial testimony from Defendants' own witnesses that the Rector of St. Lawrence was appointed by, and is responsible to, the Provincial Council. As such, the Rector is, effectively, the Provincial Council's acting agent in charge of the school. Father Reinhart, who at one time was the Provincial head, testified that he would have expected that the Rector, upon receiving a report of suspected abuse, would report the abuse to him. He also testified that the Provincial Council can remove a priest from his post if he is found guilty of abuse. The Court finds that these facts are sufficient evidence from which the jury may infer liability on the part of the Province for failure to prevent abuse.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

FN25. With respect to any "duty to warn/duty to prevent" claims arising out of Father Jim Wolf's actions at the Pre-Novitiate Program in Detroit, it is undisputed that there was never any advance notice given to anyone concerning those alleged acts, and consequently such claims must also be dismissed.
Further, for the reasons stated by the Court on the record on March 15, 1995, Plaintiff's may not submit for the jury's consideration any claim for damages arising out of the projection booth "touching" incident. This claim is time-barred as Plaintiff has admitted all along that he always remembered this incident.

*1159 E. PUNITIVE DAMAGES

The non-abusing Defendants also ask that the Court dismiss all allegations of punitive damages as to them.

[21] Whether there is sufficient evidence to submit the question of punitive damages to the jury is a question of law to be decided by the court. Loveridge v. Chartier, 161 Wis.2d 150, 468 N.W.2d 146, 158 (1991).

[22] In Wisconsin, the remedy of punitive damages is only available when the defendant acts in wanton, willful, or reckless disregard of the plaintiff's rights or interests. Brown v. Maxey, 124 Wis.2d 426, 369 N.W.2d 677 (1985). Conduct that justifies punitive damages is generally of two distinct types:

> the first type is that in which the defendant desires to cause the harm sustained by the plaintiff, or believes that the harm is substantially certain to follow his conduct. With the second type of conduct the defendant knows, or should have reason to know, not only that his conduct creates an unreasonable risk or harm, but also that there is a strong probability, although not a substantial certainty, that the harm will result, but, nevertheless, he proceeds with his conduct in reckless or conscious disregard of the consequences. Neither form of conduct, therefore, involves mere inadvertence or what, in the traditional tort sense, would be called ordinary negligence.

Loveridge, supra, 468 N.W.2d at 158.

[23][24] Wisconsin courts often use the short-hand term "outrageous" for the type of conduct which justifies the imposition of punitive damages. Maxey, supra; Loveridge, supra. This "outrageous" conduct must be proven by clear and convincing evidence. Maxey, supra. However, the fact that the conduct on which the suit is based is unlawful and would subject the defendant to criminal prosecution is not itself sufficient to impose punitive damages. Fahrenberg v. Tengel, 96 Wis.2d 211, 291 N.W.2d 516 (1980).

[25] Given the "clear and convincing" evidentiary standard which governs the punitive damages, the Court finds that the evidence presented is not sufficient to warrant submitting the punitive damages claims to the jury. As indicated above, although there is some evidence of "notice" having been provided to St. Lawrence administration prior to Plaintiff's alleged abuse by Defendant Leifeld, that evidence is far from clear and convincing. The best that can be said is that the evidence presented is contradictory. Without clear and convincing evidence of prior notice there can be no inference that St. Lawrence acted in reckless disregard of Plaintiff's rights in failing to prevent his abuse.

Therefore, the Court will grant the non-abuser Defendants motion for judgment as a matter of law on the issue of punitive damages. Accordingly, Plaintiff's claims for punitive damages against the non-abuser Defendants will not be submitted to the jury. [FN26]

FN26. This ruling does not affect Plaintiff's claim for punitive damages against Defendant Leifeld. (With respect to Plaintiff's intentional tort claims against > Defendant Jim Wolf, those claims are governed by Michigan law, and Michigan does not allow punitive damages.)

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

F. DEFENDANT JIM WOLF'S MOTION FOR "DIRECTED VERDICT"

Defendant Jim Wolf has separately moved for entry of a directed verdict in his favor. As discussed above in this Opinion and Order, this defendant's argument is that Plaintiff has not presented sufficient evidence to warrant submitted the case against him to the jury because he has not presented sufficient evidence to establish that the alleged sexual abuse by Jim Wolf occurred or that Plaintiff could not have discovered the alleged abuse less than three years before he filed this lawsuit. With respect to this latter issue, Defendant Jim Wolf argues that the testimony of Plaintiff's psychological experts is insufficient to allow a reasonable juror to conclude that the repressed memory theory is scientifically valid, and therefore, a directed verdict on this basis alone is required.

Both of the issues raised by Defendant Jim Wolf have been already ruled upon by the Court in its Opinion and Order denying the Defendants' Motions for Summary Judgment and in its Opinion and Order Regarding Defendants' Motions in Limine to Preclude or Limit the Testimony of Plaintiff's Psychological*1160 Experts and the Court incorporates those rulings by reference in this Opinion and Order.

For the reasons set forth in the Court prior rulings on the issues of statute of limitations and psychological expert testimony, Defendant Jim Wolf's "Motion for Directed Verdict" will be denied.

However, as noted supra, even if an issue is not raised in a Rule 50 motion, the Court may, nonetheless, sua sponte enter a Judgment as a Matter of Law. The Court finds that in this case, such a sua sponte decision is warranted with respect to some of the claims alleged by Plaintiff against the two accused abuser Defendants, Jim Wolf and Gale Leifeld.

As discussed above in this Opinion and Order, Plaintiff has asserted three separate causes of action against each of these two individuals: "intentional misconduct" (Counts I and IX); "common law negligence" (Counts II and X); and "professional negligence" (Counts III and XI). The Court finds that Plaintiff's common law negligence and "professional negligence" claims against the two accused abusers must be dismissed.

[26] First with respect to Plaintiff's claims of "professional negligence", these claims are essentially claims of "clergy malpractice". There is, however, no statutory or case law to establish that Wisconsin recognizes a claim for "clergy malpractice". Michigan does not. Dlaikan v. Roodbeen, 206 Mich.App. 591, 522 N.W.2d 719 (1994), Neither does Illinois. See, Dausch v. Rykse, 52 F.3d 1425 (7th Cir.1994) (applying Illinois law). See also, Schmidt v. Bishop, 779 F.Supp. 321 (S.D.N.Y.1991).

[27] With respect to Plaintiff's "common law negligence" claims against Leifeld and Jim Wolf, although the Plaintiff was certainly permitted to plead, in the alternative, claims of negligence and intentional conduct in his Complaint, pursuit at trial of such intentional tort/negligence "double" claims is impermissible. As the court explained in Schmidt v. Bishop, supra, > Once intentional offensive contact has been established, the actor is liable for assault not negligence.... It is thus, legally impossible to claim that the alleged perpetration of deliberate abuse injured the plaintiff negligently.

Id. at 325.

For the foregoing reasons, the Court will dismiss Plaintiff's claims of common law and professional negligence against Defendants Jim Wolf and Gale Leifeld. Only the "intentional conduct" claims against these accused abusers will be submitted to the jury. [FN27]

> FN27. With respect to Plaintiff's "agency" theory of direct liability of St. Lawrence and the Capuchin Province for the actions of Leifeld, Buser and Wolf, Plaintiff predicates this theory upon Section 219(2)(d) of the Restatement (Second) of Agency which permits the imposition of liability upon an employer for the torts of his employee acting outside the scope of his employment when it is established that the employee "was aided in accomplishing the tort by the existence of the agency relationship". However, as Plaintiff admits at p. 27 of his Answer to Defendants' Motion for Judgment as a Matter of Law, the doctrine of Section 219(2)(d) has never been applied to priest/parishioner relationships, and this Court declines to do so in this case.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

CONCLUSION

For the reasons stated in this Opinion and Order and for the further reasons stated by the Court on the record on March 15, 1995,

IT IS HEREBY ORDERED that the non-abuser Defendants' Motion for Judgment as a Matter of Law is GRANTED, in part, as follows:

(1) Defendants' Motion is granted as to all of Plaintiff's breach of contract claims, all of his claims against Defendants Werner Wolf, Ron Smith, Lloyd Thiel, Myron Kowalsky, and the Detroit Pre-Novitiate Program. Accordingly, Counts V, VII, VIII, XII, XIII, XIV, XV, and XVII are hereby DISMISSED in their entirety.

(2) Defendants' Motion is also granted as to Plaintiff's claims of statutory negligence, negligent hiring, negligent retention, negligent supervision, and failure to have a sex abuse policy in place as alleged against Defendants Kevin Hoelscher, St. Lawrence Seminary, and the Capuchin Province in Counts IV, VI, and XVI.

*1161 (3) Defendants' Motion is also GRANTED as to plaintiff's claims of failure to warn and failure to prevent his abuse by Jim Buser, but as to his allegations of failure to warn and failure to prevent his abuse by Gale Leifeld, Defendants' Motion is DENIED. Accordingly, the Leifeld failure to warn/failure to prevent allegations in Counts IV, VI and XVI will be submitted to the jury.

(4) Defendants' Motion is also granted as to Plaintiff's claims of punitive damages. Accordingly, no punitive damages claims with respect to the conduct of the non-abuser Defendants will be submitted to the jury. The only punitive damages claims that may be submitted to the jury are claims arising out of the actions of individual Defendant Gale Leifeld.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that Defendant Jim Wolf's separately filed "Motion for Directed Verdict" is hereby, DENIED.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that Plaintiff's claims of common law negligence and professional negligence alleged against the two accused abuser Defendants, Jim Wolf and Gale Leifeld, in Counts II, III, X, and XI are DISMISSED in their entirety with prejudice.

880 F.Supp. 1138, 99 Ed. Law Rep. 797

END OF DOCUMENT

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

EXHIBIT 25

278 F.Supp. 488
(Cite as: 278 F.Supp. 488)

H

United States District Court, W.D. Washington, Northern Division.

JEHOVAH'S WITNESSES IN the STATE OF WASHINGTON et al., Plaintiffs,
v.
KING COUNTY HOSPITAL UNIT NO. 1 (HARBORVIEW) et al., Defendants.

Civ. No. 6595.

June 8, 1967, Addendum to Memorandum Decision of June 8, 1967, and Opinion onthe Merits Nov. 20, 1967.

Religious group and its governing agency and individual members, minors and adults, brought action on their own behalf and as class action asking that three-judge District Court be convened for purposes of declaring legal rights of plaintiffs and to permanently enjoined all defendants from administering blood transfusions to plaintiffs in the future as defendants had allegedly done in the past in violation of constitutional rights of plaintiffs. The three- judge District Court dismissed aspects of case relating to giving blood transfusions to adults, held that it had jurisdiction of infant cases and held that Washington statutes empowering superior court judges to declare children to be dependent for purpose of authorizing blood transfusions of children against expressed objections of parents were not invalid under Constitution of United States.

Action dismissed as to all defendants.

West Headnotes

[1] Federal Courts ⇐991
170Bk991 Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 106k101)

Three-judge district court is statutory creature with limited sphere of operation. 28 U.S.C.A. §§ 2281, 2284.

[2] Federal Courts ⇐991
170Bk991 Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 106k101)

Three-judge district court is extraordinary court and technical requirements relating to its jurisdiction are to be strictly construed. 28 U.S.C.A. §§ 2281, 2284.

[3] Federal Courts ⇐991
170Bk991 Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 106k101)

Generally, disputed substantial federal question must be presented for three- judge district court to consider matter. 28 U.S.C.A. §§ 2281, 2284.

[4] Federal Courts ⇐991
170Bk991 Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 106k101)

Statutory requirements for three-judge district court jurisdiction are requirements of substance, not of form. 28 U.S.C.A. §§ 2281, 2284.

[5] Federal Courts ⇐992
170Bk992 Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 106k101)

Policy behind convening of three-judge district court is that single judge ought not to be empowered to invalidate a state statute under federal claim. 28 U.S.C.A. §§ 2281, 2284.

[6] Federal Courts ⇐991
170Bk991 Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 106k101)

That a single district judge would have jurisdiction to hear questions arising under Civil Rights Act is not determinative of jurisdiction of three-judge district court. 28 U.S.C.A. § 2281; 42 U.S.C.A. § 1983.

[7] Federal Courts ⇐993.1
170Bk993.1 Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 170Bk993, 106k101)

Claim that constitutional rights have been violated by state action not based upon or taken pursuant to specific statute is not sufficient to vest three- judge district court with authority to consider claim. 28 U.S.C.A. §§ 2281, 2284.

[8] Federal Courts ⇐992
170Bk992 Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 106k101)

Issues properly posed for determination by

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

three-judge district court arise from enforcement or execution of state statute which is claimed to violate constitutional rights. 28 U.S.C.A. §§ 2281, 2284.

[9] Federal Courts ⇐993.1
170Bk993.1 Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 170Bk993, 106k1011)

Where questions involving adult members of religious sect were not predicated on any constitutionally-challenged state statute, three-judge district court did not have jurisdiction of proceeding. 28 U.S.C.A. §§ 2281, 2284.

[10] Federal Courts ⇐15
170Bk15 Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 106k263)

That three-judge district court was considering constitutional questions arising from actions taken pursuant to enforcement or execution of challenged state statute did not give it pendent jurisdiction to hear closely-related matters, where alleged constitutional deprivations did not occur from acts taken pursuant to challenged state's statute. 28 U.S.C.A. §§ 2281, 2284.

[11] Federal Courts ⇐993.1
170Bk993.1 Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 170Bk993)

Where pleadings of members of religious sect seeking declaration of legal rights and injunction restraining defendants from administering blood transfusions to plaintiffs challenged constitutionality of state statutes whereby state could order transfusion to save life of infant, and statute was a statewide statute, plaintiffs were entitled to have a three-judge district court to hear their complaint. 28 U.S.C.A. §§ 2281, 2284; RCWA 13.04.095.

[12] Declaratory Judgment ⇐121
118Ak121 Most Cited Cases

Even if three-judge district court did have pendent jurisdiction to consider merits of constitutional issues raised by compulsory transfusion of adults, where it appeared that there were only two isolated instances of such compulsory transfusions, court in exercise of its equity powers would not accord declaratory relief for the future predicated thereon. 28 U.S.C.A. §§ 2281, 2284.

[13] Federal Courts ⇐993.1
170Bk993.1 Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 170Bk993, 106k101)

Where state court judge entered order finding child dependent under state statute and authorized transfusion if doctors thought it necessary in course of operation on infant, doctors were acting under color of state law when they performed the operation and, even though no transfusion was given jurisdictional requirement of claimed deprivation of constitutional rights was met and three-judge district court had jurisdiction of doctors in action for declaration of legal rights of plaintiffs and for injunction restraining physicians from administering blood transfusions to plaintiffs in the future. 28 U.S.C.A. § 2281; 42 U.S.C.A. § 1983.

[14] Federal Civil Procedure ⇐181
170Ak181 Most Cited Cases

Inasmuch as two physicians were named as representatives of class of medical doctors, they must remain as defendants in action brought in three-judge district court to declare legal rights of plaintiffs and to permanently enjoin all defendants, individually and as a class, from administering blood transfusions to plaintiffs in the future as they had allegedly done in the past in violation of constitutional rights of plaintiffs. 28 U.S.C.A. § 2281; 42 U.S.C.A. § 1983.

[15] Federal Civil Procedure ⇐1943
170Ak1943 Most Cited Cases

Where plaintiffs made no mention in pre-trial order containing admitted and disputed facts of adult transfusion involving two plaintiffs and of two defendants concerned only with that incident and made no mention of blood transfusion of two other plaintiffs and another defendant concerned only with that instance, action to declare legal rights of plaintiffs and to permanently enjoin all defendants from administering blood transfusions to plaintiffs in the future in violation of constitutional rights of plaintiffs should be dismissed as to such defendants.

[16] Action ⇐70
13k70 Most Cited Cases

Action would be regarded as abandoned as to persons who were named in complaint or supplemental complaint as defendants but as to whom no grievance was stated in pretrial order.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

[17] Federal Civil Procedure ⚖1938.1
170Ak1938.1 Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 170Ak1938)

Where pretrial order provided that it should not be amended except by order of court pursuant to agreement of parties or to prevent manifest injustice, and plaintiffs had not sought court authority to amend pretrial order by reinstating certain class of physicians which had been eliminated as defendants, such class could not be regarded as class of defendants subject to jurisdiction of court in the cause, although they had been designated in the complaint.

[18] Constitutional Law ⚖84.5(7.1)
92k84.5(7.1) Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 92k84.5(7), 92k84)

State may intervene in name of health and welfare in the indoctrination and participation of children in religion.

[19] Constitutional Law ⚖84.5(7.1)
92k84.5(7.1) Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 92k84.5(7), 92k84)

Right to practice religion freely does not include liberty to expose child to ill health or death.

[20] Courts ⚖96(3)
106k96(3) Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 106k96, 106k365(1))

[20] Federal Courts ⚖371
170Bk371 Most Cited Cases

Special three-judge district court was not bound by any judicial decisions other than those of the United States Supreme Court.

[21] Infants ⚖132
211k132 Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 211k12)

Washington statutes empowering superior court judges to declare children dependent for purpose of authorizing blood transfusions of children against expressed objections of parents who opposed transfusions as contrary to their religion were not invalid under Constitution of United States. RCWA 13.04.010(12), 13.04.095; U.S.C.A.Const. Amends. 1, 14.

[22] Federal Courts ⚖43
170Bk43 Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 106k260.4)

When state action is challenged in federal court on federal constitutional grounds and there are questions of state law which might dispose of case or materially change nature of constitutional problems, federal court may decline to proceed though it has jurisdiction under Constitution and statutes and that abstention policy is usually referred to as the "Pullman Doctrine".

[23] Federal Courts ⚖43
170Bk43 Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 106k269.4)

Federal court's abstention from exercising federal jurisdiction in case where state action is challenged on federal constitutional grounds and there are questions of state law which may dispose of case is proper in order to avoid unnecessary friction in federal-state relations, interference with important state functions, tentative decisions on questions of state law, and premature constitutional adjudication.

[24] Federal Courts ⚖43
170Bk43 Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 106k260.4)

"Equitable abstention doctrine" is designed to restrict exercise of federal jurisdiction, at least in first instance, by having federal courts defer to state courts in consideration and interpretation of state statutes.

[25] Federal Civil Procedure ⚖2582
170Ak2582 Most Cited Cases

Award of equitable relief is a discretionary matter.

[26] Federal Courts ⚖43
170Bk43 Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 106k260.4)

Federal court should properly consider whether circumstances warrant initial construction of state statute by highest court of state and, if so, abstain from exercise of federal jurisdiction.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

[27] Federal Courts ⇐43
170Bk43 Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 106k260.4)

Where constitutionality of state statute is involved, any uncertainty as to its meaning should first be resolved by state, in view of policy of comity between state and federal governments, that state courts ideally should be better informed about state policies and purposes so that construction of statute may be achieved more accurately and meaningfully, and that resolution of uncertain statutory authority by state courts may obviate federal adjudication of constitutional questions arising from the enactment.

[28] Federal Courts ⇐43
170Bk43 Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 106k260.4)

Since practical effect of federal court's decision to abstain in case over which it has been given jurisdiction by law is to deny plaintiff his right to federal forum, decision to abstain not only requires reasonably uncertain issues of state statutory interpretation, but also availability of adequate state procedures for resolving the uncertainty.

[29] Federal Courts ⇐43
170Bk43 Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 106k260.4)

Abstention doctrine becomes applicable in those situations where it is uncertain that state enactment authorized restrictions imposed on persons bringing federal action or on their activities.

[30] Appeal and Error ⇐843(1)
30k843(1) Most Cited Cases

When matter of public interest is involved, Supreme Court of State of Washington has jurisdiction to decide broad issues even though particular case raising them is moot.

[31] Federal Courts ⇐54
170Bk54 Most Cited Cases

Even if prior decision were not controlling, thereby precluding injunction restraining physicians from administering blood transfusions to infant plaintiffs under Washington statutes, in view of fact that application of statutes to plaintiffs in blood transfusion cases appeared to be uncertain and that adequate state procedures existed to resolve uncertainty, federal court, under doctrine of abstention, would deny relief.

*491 Kenneth A. MacDonald, Frederic C. Tausend, Seattle, Wash., W. Glen How, Q.C., Toronto, Canada, Daniel Brink, Seattle, Wash., for plaintiffs.

John J. O'Connell, State Atty. Gen., James B. Wilson, Asst. Atty. Gen., Seattle, Wash., Robert E. Schillberg, Snohomish County Pros. Atty., Donald E. Priest, Deputy Snohomish County Pros. Atty., Everett, Wash., Charles O. Carroll, King County Pros. Atty., John M. Watson, James E. Kennedy, Deputy Pros. Attys. for King County, Seattle, Wash., Anderson & Hunter, Everett, Wash., Little & Jones, Charles T. Sharp, Clarkston, Wash., Williams, Lanza, Kastner & Gibbs, Holman, Marion, Perkins, Coie & Stone, Seattle, Wash., for defendants.

MEMORANDUM DECISION

Before HAMLEY, Circuit Judge, and LINDBERG and BEEKS, District Judges.

PER CURIAM.

The Jehovah's Witnesses, a minority religious group; the Watch Tower Bible and Tract Society of Pennsylvania, legal governing agency for the Jehovah's Witnesses; and individually-named Jehovah's Witnesses, including minors as well as adults; have brought the above-entitled action on their own behalf and as a class action on behalf of all Jehovah's Witnesses in the State of Washington. The prayer of the complaint asks that a special three-judge district court be convened pursuant to 28 U.S.C. §§ 2281 and 2284 for the purposes of declaring the legal rights of the plaintiffs and permanently enjoining all defendants, individually and as a class, from administering blood transfusions to plaintiffs in the future, as defendants allegedly have done in the past, in violation of certain constitutional rights of the plaintiffs.

The parties defendant are individually-named Superior Court judges, Juvenile Court employees, hospitals and hospital personnel, and physicians; also physicians named as representatives of a class which includes all medical doctors in the State of Washington who are employed in and paid by public institutions operating directly with funds raised entirely or in part from the taxpayers of the State of Washington, or operating under funds granted to said hospitals by the United States government; physicians named as representatives of a class that includes all medical doctors licensed to practice medicine or surgery in the State of Washington; hospitals named as representatives of a class which includes all hospitals in the State of Washington operated by the state, a county, or by any public hospital district; and hospitals named as representatives of a class which includes all licensed hospitals in the State of Washington excepting the type of 'public' hospitals immediately referred to.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

The state statute challenged as unconstitutional and giving rise to the request for the special three-judge court is the Juvenile Court Act of the State of Washington, R.C.W. 13.04, and more particularly sections 13.04.010(12) and 13.04.095 of said act. Plaintiffs contend that these particular sections of the act on their face and as applied to the plaintiffs are unconstitutional and invalid. The gist of the plaintiffs' complaint is that the defendant Superior Court judges pursuant to their authority under the Juvenile Court Act and upon petitions by the defendant doctors or hospital personnel have taken the children of plaintiffs and removed them from the protection of their parents by having such children declared wards of the court simply because plaintiffs in the exercise of their judgment disagree with the opinions of the defendant physicians and decline to accept blood transfusions for their children.

All defendants have filed and argued motions to dismiss. At the hearing on said motions the court sua sponte raised the question of its jurisdiction to hear the case at bar, referred to the decision of *492 the Supreme Court in Phillips v. United States, 312 U.S. 246, 61 S.Ct. 480, 85 L.Ed. 800 (1941), and requested briefs on the jurisdictional issue. After consideration of the briefs the court has concluded to reserve until a hearing on the merits its ruling on the jurisdictional issue as well as other issues raised by the motions to dismiss the Superior Court judges, the physicians, hospitals, and hospital personnel as to the eight cases set forth in the pretrial order No. 1 [FN1] and the two cases in the supplemental complaint [FN2] wherein court orders were obtained pursuant to R.C.W. 13.04.010(12), declaring the children of Jehovah's Witnesses wards of the court and permitting blood transfusions to be given to such children.

FN1. Retained in the action until a hearing on the merits are the following parties:
Plaintiffs: Norman C. and Carolyn Maydole and Russell Scott Maydole; and Defendants: Franklin Kells, M.D.; Donald B. Fager, M.D.; Judge Lawrence Leahy.
Plaintiffs: Laurin and Geraldine Seelye and Bradley Scott Seelye; and Defendants: Robert F. Miller, M.D.; Judge William G. Long.
Plaintiffs: Clifford and Joyce Burnitt and Thomas Allen Burnitt; and Defendants: University of Washington Hospital; Loren Winterschied; Judge William G. Long.
Plaintiffs: Arian W. and Beatrice Elam and Jeffrey Ward Elam; and Defendants: Stevens Memorial Hospital, Edmonds, Washington; Donald E. Brown, M.D.; Allen Sola, M.D.; Judge Phillip Sheridan.
Plaintiffs: James and Helen Lawrence and Heidi Jo Lawrence; and Defendants: University of Washington Hospital; Lloyd Nyhus, M.D.; Carl B. Erickson; Judge Theodore S. Turner.
Plaintiffs: Jack and Hazel Pen and Michael Pen; and Defendants: Robert A. Aldrich; Warren Guntheroth; John Allen; Judge William G. Long.
Plaintiffs: Olite and Azell Smith and Jeanetter Smith; and Defendants: King County Hospital Unit No. 1 (Harborview); Robert F. Miller, M.D.; Judge Robert F. Utter.
Plaintiffs: Richard and Bernice Brockman and Sharilyn Brockman; and Defendants: J. D. Klein, M.D.; Judge Thomas G. Jordan.

FN2. Also retained are the following parties:
Plaintiffs: Neil and Patsy Nichol and Geri Lynn Nichol; and Defendants: Lester Sauvage, M.D.; Jack

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

Docter, M.D.; Children's Orthopedic Hospital and Medical Center; Judge Robert F. Utter.
Plaintiffs: Gene and Donna Hardy and Loren Hardy; and Defendants: Quay Cutshall, M.D.; Children's Orthopedic Hospital and Medical Center; Judge Walter T. McGovern.

Before the court for further decision at this time are the motions to dismiss the suit as to the remaining defendants, contentions and issues. The initial issue with respect to these motions is the jurisdiction of a three-judge district court to hear and decide issues related to but in no way directly bearing upon the action challenging on constitutional grounds the application of a state statute.

In pretrial order No. 1 and in the affidavit of Kenneth MacDonald filed for consideration with motion to dismiss for lack of jurisdiction (document 87) plaintiffs delineate four cases [FN3] wherein the constitutional rights of adult Jehovah's Witnesses are alleged to have been violated, but the contested action was not taken pursuant to the constitutionally-challenged state statute. In the supplemental complaint plaintiffs depict another situation [FN4] involving an adult Jehovah's Witness for whom a guardian was appointed to consent to a blood transfusion which the patient had refused on religious grounds. This alleged violation of constitutional rights likewise did not occur from an act based on the challenged state statute. These additional acts plaintiffs claim are actionable constitutional violations under the Civil Rights Act, 42 U.S.C. § 1983. The question is whether the three- judge district court may properly *493 hear questions based on violation of the Civil Rights Act.

FN3. The cases involve plaintiffs, Eugene and Jean Alicki; plaintiffs, Joseph G. and Shirley L. Chabot; plaintiffs, Richard D. and Doris Jean Russell; plaintiff, Evonne Sayers.

FN4. The case involves plaintiff, Martha Ridge.

[1][2][3][4] The three-judge district court is a statutory creature with a limited sphere of operation. It is an extraordinary court and technical requirements relating to its jurisdiction are to be strictly construed. Bailey v. Patterson, 369 U.S. 31, 82 S.Ct. 549, 7 L.Ed.2d 512 (1962); Gate Film Club v. Pesce, 236 F.Supp. 828 (S.D.N.Y.1964). Section 2281 of title 28 of the United States Code sets out the jurisdictional limitations binding on a three-judge court: 1) an interlocutory or permanent injunction must be sought; 2) the injunction sought must be one to restrain the action of a state officer or administrative agency; 3) the action sought to be enjoined must consist of the enforcement or execution of a state statute; 4) the injunction must be sought on the ground that the state statute is unconstitutional. Moreover, generally a disputed substantial federal question must be presented. See Bartlett & Co., Grain v. State Corp. Comm. of Kansas, 223 F.Supp. 975 (Kan.1963). The statutory requirements for three-judge court jurisdiction are requirements of substance, not of form. See Wilentz v. Sovereign Camp, 306 U.S. 573, 59 S.Ct. 709, 83 L.Ed. 994 (1939). [FN5] Thus, it is specifically stated that the questionable action must be taken in the enforcement or execution of a state statute; the acts of the state which are attacked must be based on the constitutionally-challenged statute.

FN5. The Supreme Court in Wilentz was applying the predecessor to section 2281; the court was asked to decide whether the suit brought met the statutory pre-requisites-- that is, was it a suit for an injunction 'restraining the enforcement, operation, or execution of any statute of a State by restraining the action of any officer of such State in the enforcement or execution of such statute, or in the enforcement or execution of an order made by an administrative board or commission'? (306 U.S. at 579, 59 S.Ct. at 713.) In deciding that the case before it was not the kind of case encompassed by the statute, the court noted that the statute sharply and specifically defined the class of cases for the extraordinary three-judge procedure and jurisdiction could not be extended to include cases not satisfying the stated limitations.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

[5] The policy behind the convening of a three-judge court is that a single judge ought not to be empowered to invalidate a state statute under a federal claim. It is significant that in Swift & Co. v. Wickham, 382 U.S. 111, 86 S.Ct. 258, 15 L.Ed.2d 194 (1965), although in another context, the Supreme Court has recently emphasized the restrictive interpretation to be given to section 2281 cases, overruling the court's more liberal holding in Kesler v. Dept. of Public Safety, 369 U.S. 153, 82 S.Ct. 807, 7 L.Ed.2d 641 (1962) as to the cases encompassed by the three-judge procedure. In Wickham the court notes that 'Section 2281 was designed to provide a more responsible forum for the litigation of suits which, if successful, would render void state statutes embodying important state policies.' (382 U.S. 111, 119, 86 S.Ct. 258, 263). Such policy and the limitations of section 2281 must be considered in appraising the additional issues plaintiffs request the three- judge court to determine.

[6][7][8][9][10] The issue of whether or not conduct of judges, physicians, hospitals, and hospital personnel is actionable under the Civil Rights Act is not germane in determining the jurisdiction of a three-judge court. The fact that a single district court judge would have jurisdiction to hear questions arising under the Civil Rights Act is not determinative of the jurisdiction of a three-judge district court. The claim that constitutional rights have been violated by state action not based upon or taken pursuant to a specific statute is not, under the wording or a reasonable interpretation of the federal statute, sufficient to vest a three-judge court with the authority to consider the claim. As stated previously, the issues properly posed for determination by a three-judge court arise from the enforcement or execution of a state statute, which is claimed to violate constitutional rights. The questions involving the 494 adult Jehovah's Witnesses were not and are not predicated on R.C.W. 13.04, or on any other constitutionally-challenged state statute. Nor is it answer enough to say that because a three-judge court is considering constitutional questions arising from actions taken pursuant to the enforcement or execution of a challenged state statute, such court has 'pendant' jurisdiction to hear closely-related matters. This court does not intend to depart from the traditional, limited construction of three-judge court jurisdiction. The court as a specially convened three-judge court finds no authority to extend its jurisdiction to questions involving the constitutional rights of Jehovah's Witnesses when the alleged constitutional deprivations did not occur from acts taken pursuant to a challenged state statute.

The court therefore dismisses those aspects of the case not based on acts taken in the enforcement or execution of R.C.W. 13.04.010(12) or 13.04.095.

Orders of dismissal in accordance herewith to be submitted by counsel for the various defendants.

ADDENDUM TO MEMORANDUM DECISION OF JUNE 8, 1967

PER CURIAM.

On June 8, 1967 this court entered its memorandum decision directing dismissal of those aspects of the case which involved only actual or threatened blood transfusion of adults, and reserving until trial of the cause the court's ruling on (1) the jurisdictional issue raised by Phillips v. United States, 312 U.S. 246, 61 S.Ct. 480, 85 L.Ed. 800 (1941), and (2) motions raised by various defendants for dismissal of the action as to some or all of them. Subsequently plaintiffs filed a motion to reconsider the court's memorandum decision insofar as it dismissed from the case the adult blood transfusion instances involving plaitniffs, Evonne Sayers and Martha Ridge.

First, as to the jurisdictional issue. Troubled by the effect of the holding of the supreme court in Phillips, [FN1] and cognizant of the technical construction given to three-judge court statutes [FN2] this 495 court sua sponte raised the question as to whether the instant case was properly a special three-judge case. Briefs were requested and submitted on the issue. With regard to the latter question, the court finds the present case distinguishable from the Phillips case and concludes that this is properly a three-judge court case.

> FN1. In Phillips, the Grand River Dam Authority, a state agency, was empowered to construct the Grand River Dam and to borrow money and accept grants from the United States for such purposes. Construction of the project was begun, using money borrowed and grants accepted from the United States. During the construction, state roads were flooded and attempts by the Governor to recover from the state agency on claims resulting from the flooding of the roads were unsuccessful. The Governor later declared martial law in an area surrounding a part of the damsite and ordered the State Adjutant General to occupy it. Acting in conjunction with other state officials the Governor then obtained in a state court an ex parte order restraining further work on the dam by the Grand River Dam Authority. At this point the United States commenced an action in the federal district court to enjoin the Governor and other state officials from interfering with the Grand River Dam construction project. A three- judge district court was convened and an injunction in favor of the United States was issued by the special court. On appeal, the supreme court, Mr. Justice Frankfurter speaking, held that this was not the proper case for convening a three-judge court because the jurisdictional prerequisites had not been met.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

FN2. See Memorandum Decision of June 8, 1967, pages 491-494. In Ex parte Young, 209 U.S. 123, 28 S.Ct. 441, 52 L.Ed. 714 (1908) the supreme court upheld the power of a federal trial judge to enjoin the Minnesota attorney general from enforcing a railroad rate statute found to violate due process. The effect of the decision was to bring acts of state officers within the scope of federal judicial review and to subject the states to the restrictions of the federal constitution in situations where they might otherwise ignore it. See Wright, Handbook of the Law of Federal Courts (1963), page 160. The doctrine led to the nullification of state legislative attempts to cope with the increasing needs of a burgeoning industrial society when a single federal judge would issue an injunction invalidating a particular state regulatory statute. Limitations on federal jurisdiction in such circumstances were essential to preserve the proper allocation of power between the United States and the several states, which is at the heart of a federal system. Exhaustion of state remedies before challenging the state action in a federal forum was one limitation. The creation of the three-judge court procedure to handle constitutional attacks on state statutes was another. It was the belief in Congress that there would be less public resentment where the enforcement or operation of the state statute attacked on federal constitutional grounds was stayed by a court of three judges, at least one of whom was a circuit court judge, and the decision of such court was directly appealable to the supreme court.

There are two patent distinctions between the Phillips case and the one now before us. In Phillips the supreme court stated that it was 'significant' that plaintiff did not, in its pleadings, specifically attack the constitutionality of the Oklahoma state constitutional provisions and statutes granting the Governor power to call out the National Guard. (See 312 U.S. at 252, 61 S.Ct. 480). In our case the pleadings expressly challenge the constitutionality of the state statutes. In Phillips the supreme court characterized that suit as 'involving a single, unique exercise' of the powers of the Governor's office. (See 312 U.S. at 253, 61 S.Ct. 480.) In our case plaintiffs complain of ten or more such acts, extending over a considerable period of time and involving three or more counties.

There is no question but that plaintiffs are purporting to attack statutes of the State of Washington, namely two provisions of the state's Juvenile Court Law, on federal constitutional grounds. The provisions in question, namely RCW 13.04.010(12) and RCW 13.04.095, are of statewide application.

These statutes are also mandatory in form. RCW 13.04.010(12) provides, among other things, that for the purpose of the act the words "dependent child' shall mean any child under the age of eighteen years: * * * (12) who is grossly and wilfully neglected as to medical care necessary for his well-being.' This does not appear to leave any room for an exception in the case of a child who is in fact found to be so neglected, but for religious reasons. RCW 13.04.095 provides that when any child shall be found to be delinquent or dependent, within the meaning of this chapter, the court 'shall' make such order for the care, custody, or commitment of the child 'as the child's welfare in the interest of the state require.'

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

It is true that this statute does not expressly require a court to order a medically-neglected child made a ward of the court so that a blood transfusion may be administered. But where the finding of gross and wilful medical neglect is premised upon a finding that a transfusion is necessary to save life there is probably no order other than to require such a transfusion which would discharge the state judge's mandatory duty, under RCW 13.04.095, to 'make such order for the care, custody, or commitment of the child as the child's welfare in the interest of the state require.'

In more recent litigation courts have held that a three-judge court is required not only where a state statute is challenged as federally unconstitutional on its face, but also 'as applied.' Thus, in Idlewild Bon Voyage Liquor Corp. v. Rohan, 289 F.2d 426 (2 Cir. 1961) it was held at page 428 that the district judge should have convened a three-judge court where the complaint challenged the federal constitutionality of a state statute 'because of the way that statute was being applied.' And when the same case came before the supreme court sub nom. Idlewild Bon Voyage Liquor Corp. v. Epstein, 370 U.S. 713, 715, 82 S.Ct. 1294, 1296, 8 L.Ed.2d 794 (1962) that court stated: 'We agree with the Court of Appeals *496 that a three-judge court should have been convened in this case.' [FN3]

FN3. See also, Kesler v. Dept. of Public Safety, 369 U.S. 153, 157, 82 S.Ct. 807, 7 L.Ed.2d 641, overruled on other grounds in Swift & Co. v. Wickham, 382 U.S. 111, 86 S.Ct. 258, 15 L.Ed.2d 194 (1965); Query v. United States, 316 U.S. 486, 489, 62 S.Ct. 1122, 86 L.Ed. 1616 (1942); Ex parte Bransford, 310 U.S. 354, 361, 60 S.Ct. 947, 84 L.Ed. 1249 (1940); 'The Three-Judge District Court in Constitutional Litigation,' David P. Currie, 32 Univ. of Chicago Law Review, 1, 43. But see Maison v. Confederated Tribes, etc. (9 Cir. 1963) 314 F.2d 169, 170, footnote 1.

[11] In essence, plaintiffs' complaint here is the same: state judges are applying a statewide statute in a federally unconstitutional manner. In view of this, and without regard to the merits of their position, [FN4] we think plaintiffs should not be denied a three-judge court under the Phillips doctrine.

FN4. With respect to the merits of the case, see the court's opinion filed herewith.

Second, as to the plaintiffs' motion to reconsider the court's memorandum decision insofar as it directs the dismissal from the case of those defendants charged in relation to the blood transfusions authorized to be administered to adult plaintiffs, Evonne Sayers and Martha Ridge. With respect to these plaintiffs [FN5] but not in the other adult cases, court orders were obtained authorizing compulsory blood transfusions, contrary to the religious beliefs of the adults. In its decision of June 8, 1967 this court considered and rejected the proposition that it had 'pendent' jurisdiction under the three-judge court procedure to determine the questions raised in the adult cases. [FN6] *497 Because this court regards the three-judge court statute as a limitation on federal jurisdiction, and to be strictly construed, the court must, for the reasons propounded in its earlier decision as well as that stated in footnote 6 herein, deny the plaintiffs' motion to reconsider.

FN5. Both Evonne Sayers and Martha Ridge were suffering from vaginal bleeding. Each had refused blood transfusions and had in fact signed a written document releasing the hospital and doctor from any liability for any injury to her arising from a failure to give her a blood transfusion. Each woman is the mother of five children. In the Ridge instance the court appointed a guardian on the petition of the hospital without giving any notice to her of the proceeding involving her. In fact, Mrs. Ridge first heard of the matter on a radio news broadcast the day after the order had been entered. The court appointed a guardian over Mrs. Sayers on the petition of the patient's mother despite the patient's refusal and the refusal of her husband to consent to the blood transfusions. In each case the consent was given by the guardian. In the Ridge instance no transfusion was actually given. In the Sayers instance, a blood transfusion was given.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

In the Ridge case, the court noted:

'The interest of the state in preserving the life of the mother for the benefit of the minor children of the ward outweighs the constitutional prohibition against interfering with the free exercise of her religious beliefs.' (Pretrial order No. 2, page 29b). In the Sayers case the court noted:

'The Constitutional right to the free practice of religion is not absolute but must be balanced against other rights, such as the right of children of tender years to have a good and loving parent. * * * The medical control of one's body is not absolute but relative when there are minor children dependent upon the survival of the adult.' (Pretrial order No. 2, pages 32 and 33).

FN6. In support of their motion for reconsideration of the two adult cases, plaintiffs cite Louisville and Nashville Railroad v. Garrett, 231 U.S. 298, 34 S.Ct. 48, 58 L.Ed. 229 (1913); Sterling v. Constantin, 287 U.S. 378, 53 S.Ct. 190, 77 L.Ed. 275 (1932); and Florida Lime and Avocado Growers, Inc. v. Jacobsen, 362 U.S. 73, 80 S.Ct. 568, 4 L.Ed.2d 568 (1960). While these cases upon casual examination appear to support plaintiffs' contention of pendent jurisdiction of this court to consider the adult cases of Sayers and Ridge, a careful consideration of the cases (including the district court opinion in Constantin v. Smith, D.C., 57 F.2d 227) indicates that the supreme court in using language such as:

'The jurisdiction of the District Court so constituted (three-judge district court) * * * extends to every question involved, whether of state or federal law, and enables the court to rest its judgment on the decision of such of the questions as in its opinion effectively dispose of the case.' (Sterling v. Constantin, supra, 287 U.S. pages 393-394, 53 S.Ct. page 193).

was not referring to issues or claims that did not arise directly or indirectly because of action taken by virtue of the state statute under attack. In other words, as indicated by the court in the Florida Lime case, 362 U.S. pages 80 and 84, 80 S.Ct. 568, a three-judge district court has jurisdiction over all claims-- state or federal-- raised against the statute, but no jurisdiction over related matters not in some way challenging the statute.

'While the Sayers and Ridge cases involve Jehovah's Witnesses against whom court orders were entered authorizing blood transfusions over their objections on religious grounds, neither the court orders nor any other action of the defendants were related to or involved the Juvenile Court Law here under attack. Because this court so construes its authority under section 2281, it must for the reasons stated in its June 8, 1967 Memorandum Decision, pages 3 to 6, deny the plaintiffs' motion to reconsider the court's dismissal of plaintiffs, Evonne Sayers and Martha Ridge.

Furthermore, the court having decided on the merits that plaintiffs are entitled to no relief under their principal action attacking the state statute, there would be no occasion to exercise pendent jurisdiction with respect to plaintiffs' adult cases.

[12] Assuming, however, that this court does have pendent jurisdiction to consider the merits of the constitutional issues raised by the compulsory transfusion of adults, the court, in the discretionary exercise of its equity powers, ought not to accord declaratory relief for the future predicated on two isolated instances. Only one county (King County), and only one superior court judge (Judge Robert F. Utter) were involved in the incidents involving plaintiffs, Evonne Sayers and Martha Ridge, both of which occurred in 1966. Even assuming that the two described instances involved violations of the constitution, and that an equitable remedy is otherwise available from this three-judge court, plaintiffs have not made a sufficient showing as to the probability that incidents of this kind will reoccur. [FN7]

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

FN7. In this connection, see the court's Opinion filed herewith, dated November 20, 1967.

[13] Third, as to the motions raised by various defendants for dismissal of the action as to some or all of them. [FN8] Defendants, Donald E. Brown and Alan Sola, have moved for dismissal of the action as to them on the ground that subject matter jurisdiction is lacking as to them. The only transfusion incident in which these two defendants are involved pertains to Jeffrey Ward Elam, minor son of plaintiffs Adrian and Patricia Elam.

FN8. The unopposed motions of defendants, Bert DeGroot, M.D., Robert Olson, M.D., and John P. Mucklestone, that the action be dismissed as to them were granted before the trial commenced. During the trial the court granted the motion to dismiss defendant, Everett General Hospital, Alfred Muller and James P. Hunter on the ground that the court had no jurisdiction over said parties.

This boy was injured in an automobile accident and defendant doctors Brown and Sola at first declined to begin necessary surgical procedures. They did so because the parents refused on religious grounds to permit a blood transfusion if, in the course of the operation, the doctors decided that this was necessary. However, Judge Phillip Sheridan, a defendant herein, entered an order finding the child a dependent child and authorized a transfusion if Doctors Brown and Sola thought it necessary. The record does not indicate who petitioned the court for such an order. An operation was then performed and the child recovered without the necessity of a transfusion.

Doctors Brown and Sola argue that, under these circumstances they were not acting under color of state law-- an essential element under 42 U.S.C. § 1983-- and that in any event there was no deprivation of a constitutional right because no transfusion was actually given.

While the parents had consented to an operation it was performed only when the doctors had an order from a state *498 court authorizing a transfusion if the doctors thought it necessary. In our view the doctors were, in these circumstances, acting under color of state law when they performed the operation. While no transfusion was given, the court order was entered and the doctors proceeded with the operation under authority of that order, contrary to the religious objections of the parents.

[14] This was enough to meet the jurisdictional requirement of a claimed deprivation of a constitutional right, whether or not a transfusion was actually given. It should also be noted that Doctors Brown and Sola must remain as defendants for the independent reason that they, among others, are named as representatives of a class of medical doctors. (Pretrial Order No. 2, page 35)

The motion of defendants Brown and Sola for dismissal of the action as to them, because of lack of jurisdiction, is denied.

[15][16] Pursuant to the June 8, 1967 memorandum decision, plaintiffs have made no mention in pretrial order No. 2 (which order contains the admitted and disputed facts as to each instance relied upon by plaintiffs) of the instance of adult transfusion involving plaintiffs Eugene and Jean Alicki and of defendants St. Frances Xavier Cabrini Hospital and Carter Swanson, M.D., who were concerned only with the Alicki incident and, in the case of the hospital, another dismissed incident involving an adult. Similarly, plaintiffs have made no mention in pretrial order No. 2 of the instance of adult transfusion invoving plaintiffs Joseph G. and Shirley L. Chabot and defendant John Caputo, M.D., who were concerned only with the Chabot instance. It follows that the action should be dismissed as to the defendants St. Frances Xavier Cabrini Hospital, Carter Swanson, M.D., and John Caputo, M.D., and it is so ordered.

The action may also be regarded as abandoned, and is therefore ordered dismissed as to a number of persons named in the complaint or supplemental complaint as defendants, but as to whom no grievance is stated in pretrial order No. 2. Falling in this category are F. W. Fells, Business Manager of Firlands Sanatorium; Swedish Hospital; Doctor's Hospital; Group Health Hospital; Everett Clinic, Inc.; Walla Walla General Hospital; Edwin Brockenbrough, M.D.; Jerry De Groot, M.D.; Richard Haugen, M.D.; Fred J. Jarvis, M.D.; Alfred Magar, M.D.; H. F. Newman, M.D.; Thomas W.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

Skalley, M.D.; Franklin Smith, M.D.; Edward Powers, M.D.; Quay Cutshall, M.D.; and George Postill.

The other motions denominated motions for dismissal on the ground of lack of jurisdiction are, in actuality, motions to dismiss for failure to state a claim upon which relief can be granted. We deal with the questions raised by these motions as a part of our consideration of the case on its merits.

OPINION ON THE MERITS

LINDBERG, District Judge:

The principal plaintiffs herein are individual Jehovah's Witnesses whose minor children, contrary to the expressed beliefs and directions of their parents, were given blood transfusions under court orders obtained pursuant to provisions of the Juvenile Court Law of the State of Washington, namely RCW 13.04.010(12) and 13.04.095. [FN1] Under this *499 statutory authority, superior court judges of the State of Washington, on such showing as they deemed sufficient, declared the minor children of Jehovah's Witnesses, included herein as plaintiffs, to be dependent children for the purpose of authorizing blood transfusions of the children against the expressed objections of the parents.

FN1. RCW 13.04.010(12) of the Juvenile Court Law of the State of Washington provides:
'Juvenile court law-- Dependent and delinquent children defined-- Wards of state. This chapter shall be known as the 'Juvenile Court Law' and shall apply to all minor children under the age of eighteen years who are delinquent or dependent; and to any person or persons who are responsible for or contribute to, the delinquency or dependency of such children.
'For the purpose of this chapter the words 'dependent child' shall mean any child under the age of eighteen years:
'(12) who is grossly and wilfully neglected as to medical care necessary for his well-being.'
RCW 13.04.095 provides:
'Commitment of child-- Order of court-- Powers of Department of institutions-- Order rescinded when reformation complete. When any child shall be found to be delinquent or dependent, within the meaning of this chapter, the court shall make such order for the care, custody, or commitment of the child as the child's welfare in the interest of the state require. Subject to further order, the court may commit the child:
'(1) To the care of such child's parents, subject to supervision of the probation officers; or
'(2) To the custody of a probation officer, subject to such conditions as the judge may impose; or
'(3) To a reputable citizen or association able and willing to receive and care for such child; or
'(4) To an appropriate private agency authorized to care for such children; or
'(5) To the department of public assistance; or
'(6) To the department of institutions * * *
'In no case shall a child be committed beyond the age of twenty-one years. A child committed to the department of institutions shall be subject to the supervision and control thereof and the department shall have the power to parole such child under such conditions as may be prescribed.
'The department of institutions shall have the power to discharge such child from custody, and the court shall have the power to rescind the commitment of such child, whenever his or her reformation shall be deemed complete.'

The proceeding was brought by plaintiffs, individually as adults, [FN2] as parents and minors, and as a class action on behalf of the eighty-nine hundred Jehovah's Witnesses in the State of Washington to challenge the constitutionality of the described application of the Juvenile Court Law to plaintiffs. Also joined as parties plaintiff are The Jehovah's Witnesses, an unincorporated religious association, and the Watch Tower Bible and Tract Society of Pennsylvania, a nonprofit corporation chartered by the State of Pennsylvania and the legal governing agency of the Jehovah's Witnesses.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

FN2. In certain instances, the superior court judges also entered orders authorizing blood transfusions of adult Jehovah's Witnesses over the strenuous objections of the adults. This court dismissed those aspects of the case involving the adult Jehovah's Witnesses. See June 8, 1967 Memorandum Decision, pages 491-494 and Addendum, pages 494-498.

[17] The defendants are the Attorney General and other officials of the State of Washington, individual physicians, superior court judges and officials of the superior court, and trustees, administrators and members of the staffs of hospitals in the State of Washington. Some of the defendant physicians were sued not only as individuals but also as representatives of a class which includes 'all medical doctors in the State of Washington who are employed in and paid by public institutions operating directly with funds raised entirely or in part from the taxpayers of the State of Washington.' [FN3] Some of the defendant hospitals * 500 were also sued not only individually but also as representatives of a class which includes all hospitals in the State of Washington operated by the state, a county, or by any public hospital district. [FN4]

FN3. In pretrial order No. 2 the description of this class of physicians also included the clause 'or operating under funds granted to said hospitals by the United States Government.' In their proposed findings of fact plaintiffs deleted this clause.
A second class of physicians was also designated in the complaint, namely, 'all medical doctors in the State of Washington.' (Complaint, page 14) However, in pretrial order No. 2, which superseded the pleadings, this class of physicians was eliminated. (Pretrial order No. 2, page 35) In their 'Additional Proposed Findings of Fact,' plaintiffs seek to reinstate this class of defendant physicians. (Additional Findings of Fact, page 1) Pretrial order No. 2 (page 45a), provides that the pretrial order shall not be amended 'except by order of the Court pursuant to agreement of the parties or to prevent manifest injustice.' Plaintiffs have not sought nor obtained court authority to amend pretrial order No. 2 by reinstating this class of physicians, and therefore the same may not be regarded as a class of defendants subject to the jurisdiction of this court in this cause.

FN4. In the complaint the calss of defendant hospitals was described more broadly as 'all licensed hospitals in the State of Washington.' (Complaint, page 14) However, the class of defendant hospitals was narrowed in pretrial order No. 2, as noted above. (Pretrial order No. 2, page 35) In their 'Additional Proposed Findings of Fact,' plaintiffs seek to add a second class of defendant hospitals, conforming to the broad class of defendant hospitals described in the complaint. (Additional Findings of Fact, page 2) However, for the reasons stated in note 3 above, this second class of hospitals may not be regarded as a class of defendants subject to the jurisdiction of this court in this cause.

The action is brought as a civil rights action pursuant to 42 U.S.C. § 1983, claiming that the actions of the state judges under RCW 13.04.010(12) and 13.04.095 violated plaintiffs' federally-guaranteed constitutional rights and asserting that in all probability similar violations of the Constitution will occur unless precluded by intervention of a federal court. Accordingly, plaintiffs seek declaratory and injunctive relief which will stop this practice for the future. Plaintiffs do not seek monetary damages for past deprivations.

Plaintiffs sought and obtained the convening of a special three-judge district court pursuant to 28 U.S.C. §§ 2281 and 2284. This request was made and granted because plaintiffs seek to enjoin the enforcement of a state statute [FN5] of general application on the ground of invalidity under the federal Constitution.

FN5. See footnote 1.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

The gist of the plaintiffs' complaint is that the defendant physicians, hospitals, hospital personnel, superior court judges and juvenile court employees have used the Juvenile Court Law to obtain court orders removing the children of Jehovah's Witnesses from the custody of their parents who refuse on medical and religious or personal grounds to consent to blood transfusions for their children once the children have been placed in the care of a physician. The court order makes the child a ward of the court and authorizes blood transfusions to be given to him when the attending physician determines the transfusion is necessary. This court order is obtained despite the fact that plaintiffs allegedly have given or have sought to give in each instance to the hospitals or doctors affected a written release discharging the hospitals or doctors from any and all liability for any untoward results arising from plaintiffs' refusal to accept blood transfusion for their children. Implicit in the issuance of these court orders is the finding by the court that the Jehovah's Witnesses, despite their attempt both to provide proper medical care for their children and to comply with the tenets of their faith, have been wilfully and grossly neglectful as to the medical care necessary for the well- being of their children.

Plaintiffs assert that the application of the Juvenile Court Law under these circumstances violates fundamental rights and liberties secured to them under the Constitution of the United States. Plaintiffs principally contend:

1. That the actions of the defendants deprive plaintiffs of their rights under the First Amendment to freedom of association, to the free exercise of their religion and to freedom from the fashioning of any laws respecting the establishment of religion, which rights are made applicable to the states by the Fourteenth Amendment.

2. That plaintiffs have been denied life, liberty and property without due 501 process of law under the Fifth Amendment, made applicable to the states by the Fourteenth Amendment.

3. That plaintiffs have been denied their right of family privacy protected by virtue of the Ninth and Fourteenth Amendments.

4. That plaintiffs have been denied equal protection of the laws of the State of Washington in that the state has protected the religious liberty and parental rights of all other citizens and all other religious denominations except the plaintiffs.

5. That the actions of superior court judges of the State of Washington in compelling blood transfusions over the protests of plaintiffs has caused animosity toward plaintiffs and has interfered with their right of association by making it more difficult for plaintiff, Watch Tower Bible and Tract Society, and individual plaintiffs to attract and hold members for their social and religious purposes. Further, because of the acts taken pursuant to the challenged statute, a member of the Jehovah's Witnesses living in or visiting the State of Washington knows that his conscience and religion will not be respected and his family privacy is not as safe as that of the members of all other religious groups.

6. That plaintiffs are a respectable people who have a deep sense of responsibility and who seriously endeavor to care for their families in harmony with Christian principles as set forth in God's Word, the Holy Bible, and that they have a right to decide what medical treatment they will accept for their children.

7. That the defendant physicians and hospital officials are committing an unlawful assault forbidden by law in forcing medical treatment upon the children of Jehovah's Witnesses contrary to express parental authority. Since Jehovah's Witnesses are exercising parental discretion in order to care for their children's welfare as best then can, there is no lawful basis under the parens patriae power of the state for the state's alleged unlawful and unconstitutional interference with the exercise of parental authority and discretion when a Jehovah's Witness in good faith disagrees with a doctor about medical treatment for his child involving blood transfusion.

8. That plaintiffs will be irreparably injured unless the defendants are permanently enjoined from continuing to apply the Juvenile Court Law to plaintiffs in the manner constitutionally challenged in this action.

With regard to declaratory relief as to the minors involved, plaintiffs seek a decree declaring that RCW 13.04.010(12) and RCW 13.04.095, provisions of the Juvenile Court Law of the State of

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

Washington, are invalid under the Constitution of the United States, as applied by defendants in making children of Jehovah's Witnesses wards of the state court for the purpose of authorizing compulsory blood transfusions. [FN6]

FN6. Plaintiffs also sought a declaratory judgment and injunctive relief with respect to blood transfusions administered to adults. This aspect of the case was dismissed. See footnote 2, supra.

Concerning injunctive relief, plaintiffs seek to: (1) enjoin defendant state judges, 'their representatives, agents and successors' from declaring children of plaintiffs or members of plaintiffs' class to be dependent children and wards of the court, pursuant to RCW 13.04.010(12) and RCW 13.04.095, 'solely on a finding that the parents have refused transfusion of blood on religious or medical grounds,' and from entering orders authorizing blood transfusions of such children; (2) enjoin named defendant doctors, hospitals, hospital personnel, 'their representatives, agents, employees, attorneys and successors' from bringing any civil proceeding for the purpose of enforcing or applying RCW 13.04.010(12) and RCW 13.04.095 to Jehovah's Witnesses so as to compel blood transfusions of the children of Jehovah's Witnesses contrary to the stated religious and medical objections of the parents; (3) enjoin the same defendant doctors, 502 hospitals, etc. from in any way seeking to impose or force blood transfusions on the children of Jehovah's Witnesses against the will of their parents with or without court orders; and (4) enjoin all physicians in the State of Washington as a class, and all hospitals in the State of Washington as a class, in keeping with the requested injunctive provisions described above.

Before the court for a decision on the merits, then, are the ten cases involving the children of Jehovah's Witnesses and enumerated in pretrial order No. 2 wherein oral or written orders [FN7] were obtained from superior court judges of the State of Washington pursuant to the challenged state statute.

FN7. Oral orders issued in the cases involving the Maydole child and the Hardy child; written orders were entered in the eight remaining cases involving the Elam child, the Lawrence child, the Smith child, the Seelye child, the Burnitt child, the Pen child, the Brockman child, and the Nichol child. Blood transfusions were actually administered to five of the ten children made wards of the Juvenile Court for such purpose, that is, to Bradley Scott Seelye, Thomas Allen Burnitt, Michael Pen, Sharilyn Brockman, Geri Lynn Nichol. Although the other five children had been removed from the custody of their parents and declared wards of the Juvenile Court to permit them to receive compulsory blood transfusions, blood transfusions were not in fact given to Russell Scott Maydole, Jeffrey Ward Elam, Heidi Jo Lawrence, Jeanetter Smith and Loren Hardy. Five of the cases involved birth defects; erthro-blastosis fetalis was diagnosed for the Maydole, Seelye and Brockman children; congenital defects requiring surgery correction were diagnosed for the Lawrence and Nichol children. The five remaining cases involved a petic ulcer with gastric intestinal hemorrhaging (Burnitt); osteomyelitis and generalized staphylococcal infection (Pen); damaged pancreas with possible internal bleeding (Elam); severe burns (Hardy); injuries (Smith). In none of the cases is it recorded that the judges heard contrary medical testimony relating to the risks involved in blood transfusions. Little, if any, notice was given to the parents of the children regarding the hearing to determine if the children were 'grossly and wilfully neglected as to the medical care necessary to their well-being.' No notice was given in the Seelye case; it is not apparent from the record whether the parents of the Pen and Brockman Children were given any notice or were present at the hearing; the Smiths were given one hour notice of the hearing. Blood transfusions were actually administered to the Nichol child before the hearing was completed and the court order making her a ward of the court was signed.

In each of the ten enumerated cases, Jehovah's Witnesses have based their refusal to consent to blood transfusions on their religious beliefs and medical objections regarding the use of blood. Plaintiffs believe and accept as authoritative and binding upon them the admonition of Almighty God Jehovah found in the Holy Bible commanding Christians to 'abstain from blood.' [FN8] Their belief places a positive religious duty on the father in particular to provide for his children and to apply their religious views, including abstinence from blood, in the family circle. In this connection, it is the responsibility of the father to see that no member of his family receives a blood transfusion, and no court or other official body can relieve him of that responsibility. If a plaintiff receives a blood transfusion, this could, in the view of the plaintiffs, mean permanent spiritual harm to both the child and parent or adult.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

> FN8. The foundation for the belief of the Jehovah's Witnesses respecting blood transfusions is found in the following quotation from Acts of the Apostles, chapter 15, vs. 20:
> 'Hence my decision is not to trouble those from the nations who are turning to God, but to write to them to abstain from things polluted by idols and from fornication and from what is strangled and from blood.'
> and the quotation from Leviticus, 17th chapter, vs. 10:
> 'As for any man of the house of Israel or some alien resident who is residing as an alien in your midst, who eats any sort of blood, I shall certainly set my face against the soul that is eating the blood, and I shall indeed cut him off from among his people.'

503 According to the Jehovah's Witnesses, blood transfusions involve certain risks, are of limited value, and there are alternative means of treatment which makes the use of such therapy unnecessary and inadvisable. [FN9] With respect to this view, plaintiffs contend that in the cases at issue doctors have never testified as to the hazards, dangers or uncertainties of blood transfusions, and the alternative means of treatment have not been placed before any of the superior court judges.

> FN9. Plaintiffs rely on evidence they contend establishes that their views are scientifically supportable, since in the area of blood transfusion knowledge is rapidly expanding, opinions are changing, hazards exist, alternative means of treatment are possible and doctors disagree. The plaintiffs offered evidence tending to show that, as to many types of situations where blood transfusions are often given, there exists medical opinion that transfusions are of little value and, in addition, may substantially harm the patient. They have also offered evidence tending to show that there is opinion that blood transfusions are never indicated, since there are always treatments available which are better than transfusions.
> Dr. Exner testified specifically that transfusions are contraindicated as treatment for continued gastrointestinal bleeding (Transcript, page 208), and erythroblastosis fetalis (transcript, page 210), and that better treatments always exist for excessive hemorrhaging during major surgery (Transcript, page 212). He also testified that transfusions are never mandatory (Transcript, page 254).
> Dr. Riggle, an osteopathic surgeon and Jehovah's Witness from Texas, testified that he had found no cases in which blood transfusions were mandatory (Transcript, page 267) and, in particular, that in his experience alternate therapy was satisfactory for erythroblastosis fetalis.
> Dr. Lodi, a surgeon and Jehovah's Witness since 1950, testified that he has not used transfusions since 1950, and no one has died from non- transfusions (Transcript, page 149). However, he had not treated any cases of severe blood loss due to trauma, except one in which the victim was transfused under a court order over his objection.
> Dr. Wilson, senior pathologist, King County Coroner's Office, knew of no cases in his experience in which death or disability resulted from failure to give a blood transfusion. (Transcript, page 83). However, he also testified that there are instances where transfusions are lifesaving (Transcript, page 113) and that transfusions were accepted medical practice in King County (Transcript, page 139).

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

Nevertheless, it is the prevailing medical view that blood transfusions are not only safe but necessary in those kinds of situations presented to the court in the specific instances involving the minor plaintiffs in this case. [FN10]

> FN10. The defendants have admitted that there is often substantial difference of opinion regarding the value of blood transfusions in specific instances. However, they offered proof tending to show that, for some conditions, informed medical opinion agrees that death or disability is very probable if no transfusion is given, and that the probability of recovery in such cases can be appreciably increased only if a transfusion is given. Dr. Guntheroth specifically mentioned that in profound anemia accompanied by generalized severe infection transfusion is essential to save life, and blood substitutes are of no value (Transcript, page 359). He was also of the opinion that blood transfusions are necessary to save life after severe loss of blood due to accident, and also when a baby is suffering from acute erythroblastosis fetalis (Transcript, pages 391-92), and that most, if not all, medical authorities agree to this (Transcript, page 392).
> Dr. Eloise Rosalee Giblett, who testified by deposition, noted that the medical opinion held by the great majority of practitioners in this medical community, in this country, and in the world is that there are people who would die if they were not otherwise transfused. (Deposition, page 6).
> It was the considered opinion of the attending physicians in each of the cases retained in the action that a blood transfusion was or would be vital to save the life of the patient.

As previously noted, plaintiffs argue that RCW 13.04.010(12) and RCW 13.04.095 are invalid under the Constitution of the United States as applied by defendants in compelling the minor children of Jehovah's Witnesses to submit to blood transfusions over the religious 504 objections of the parents. According to plaintiffs, the reason these statutes are invalid as so applied is because they facilitate state impairment of plaintiffs' religious freedom, contrary to the First and Fourteenth Amendments, and plaintiffs' parental rights as guaranteed by the Due Process Clause of the Fourteenth Amendment.

Substantially the same argument was advanced by Jehovah's Witnesses in Prince v. Commonwealth of Massachusetts, 321 U.S. 158, 64 S.Ct. 438, 88 L.Ed. 645, involving an appeal from convictions for violating Massachusetts' child labor laws. Contrary to those state laws, the aunt and custodian of a nine-year-old girl permitted and encouraged the girl to sell Bible tracts on the public streets. The aunt contended that the child was exercising her right, under the First and Fourteenth Amendments, to preach the gospel. She buttressed this argument with a claim of parental right as secured by the Due Process Clause of the Fourteenth Amendment.

The Supreme Court affirmed the judgment, holding that the family is not beyond regulation in the public interest, as against a claim of religious liberty. Among rather things, the Court said:

'* * * neither rights of religion nor rights of parenthood are beyond limitation. Acting to guard the general interest in youth's well being, the state as parens patriae may restrict the parent's control by requiring school attendance, regulating or prohibiting the child's labor, and in many other ways. Its authority is not nullified merely because the parent grounds his claim to control the child's course of conduct on religion or conscience. Thus, he cannot claim freedom from compulsory vaccination for the child more than for himself on religious grounds. The right to practice religion freely does not include liberty to expose the community or the child to communicable disease or the latter to ill health or death. People v. Pierson, 176 N.Y. 201, 68 N.E. 243, 63 L.R.A. 187. The catalogue need not be lengthened. It is sufficient to show what indeed appellant hardly disputes, that the state has a wide range of power for limiting parental freedom and authority in things affecting the child's welfare; and that this includes, to some extent, matters of conscience and religious conviction.' 321 U.S. at 166-167, 64 S.Ct. at 442.

'* * * Parents may be free to become martyrs themselves. But it does not follow they are free, in identical circumstances, to make martyrs of their children before they have reached the age of full and legal discretion when they can make that choice for themselves.' 321 U.S. at 170, 64 s.Ct. at 444.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

It appears to us that the holding of Prince is applicable here and that our special three-judge court in bound by that decision. Thus, whatever merit there be in plaintiffs' argument that a more thorough consideration of philosophic principles calls for a contrary conclusion, we are not in a position to decide contrary to Prince. It need only be added that our case, as was also true in Prince, does not involve any of the rights of parents to train and indoctrinate their children in religious matters.

[18][19] It is true that in Prince, the court made it clear that it did not intend that opinion to lay the foundation for every state intervention in the indoctrination and participation of children in religion which may be done in the name of their health and welfare. (321 U.S. at 171, 64 S.Ct. 438). But we think it does lay the foundation, binding upon us, for the particular state intervention in the name of health and welfare which is here under review. As stated in Prince, 321 U.S. at 166, 64 S.Ct. at 442, 'The right to practice religion freely does not include liberty expose * * * the child * * * to ill health or death.'

[20] In this special three-judge court case we are not bound by any judicial 505 decisions other than those of the United States Supreme Court. But it is appropriate to note that in People ex rel. Wallace v. Labrenz, 411 Ill. 618, 104 N.E.2d 769, 774, 30 A.L.R.2d 1132, testing the validity of a court order declaring the minor child of Jehovah's Witnesses a dependent child for the purpose of compelling a blood transfusion, the Supreme Court of Illinois construed the Prince case as we do here. Thus, on the basis of the Prince decision, the Illinois court held that the Juvenile Court Law of that state is not unconstitutional as so applied. In an exhaustive opinion the Supreme Court of New Jersey similarly interpreted Prince in a blood transfusion case involving the minor child of Jehovah's Witnesses. See State v. Perricone, 37 N.J. 463, 181 A.2d 751, 756, 757. See also, Hoener v. Bertinato, 67 N.J. Super. 517, 171 A.2d 140, 143.

[21] We therefore hold, on the compelling authority of Prince that RCW 13.04.010(12) and RCW 13.04.095 are not invalid under the Constitution of the United States, as applied in this case.

[22][23] Assuming, nevertheless, as plaintiffs contend, that the Prince case is not dispositive of the main action because (1) the supreme court specifically limited the Prince holding to the facts of the case, and (2) the supreme court to date has not passed on the merits of the constitutional questions involved in the blood transfusion cases, this court would have before it an open question on the merits of the case. If this be the case sound judicial administration would warrant the application of the equitable abstention doctrine [FN11] with respect to the federal questions raised by plaintiffs' constitutional attack on the state statute.

FN11. When state action is challenged in a federal court on federal constitutional grounds and there are questions of state law which may dispose of the case or materially change the nature of the constitutional problems, the federal court may decline to proceed though it has jurisdiction under the Constitution and the statutes. This abstention policy is usually referred to as the Pullman doctrine from the case of Railroad Comm'n of Texas v. Pullman Co., 312 U.S. 496, 61 S.Ct. 643, 85 L.Ed. 971 (1941). The company in that case sought to enjoin the enforcement of an order of the Texas Railroad Commission on the grounds that the order denied the company rights under the Fourteenth Amendment and that the Commission lacked authority under Texas law to make the order in question. A unanimous supreme court ordered the trial court to abstain from deciding the case so that the state court could decide the state issues. In this way the federal court avoided deciding federal constitutional questions prematurely or unnecessarily; for if the state court held the order unauthorized as a matter of state law, there would be no need for the federal court to pass on the federal questions. Abstention is proper in order to avoid 'unnecessary friction in federal-state relations, interference with important state functions, tentative decisions on questions of state law, and premature constitutional adjudication.' Harman v. Forssenius, 380

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

U.S. 528, 534, 85 S.Ct. 1177, 1182, 14 L.Ed.2d 50 (1965).

[24][25][26] Equitable abstention is designed to restrict the exercise of federal jurisdiction, at least in the first instance, by having the federal courts defer to the state courts in the consideration and interpretation of state statutes. Because the award of equitable relief is traditionally regarded as a discretionary matter, the court should properly consider whether the circumstances warrant the initial construction of the statute in question by the highest court of the state and, if so, abstain from the exercise of federal jurisdiction.

[27] Where the constitutionality of a state statute, as in the instant case, is involved, there are sound reasons why any uncertainty as to its meaning should first be resolved by the state. The policy of comity between state and federal governments suggests one reason why the interpretation of a state statute should first be rendered by state authorities. Also, state courts ideally should be better informed about state policies and purposes so that construction of the statute may be achieved more accurately and 506 meaningfully. In this connection, the supreme court in Prince, unlike this court, had the benefit of the construction placed on the statute therein involved by the Massachusetts high court. The supreme court noted that the decision of the Massachusetts court on what constituted a 'sale' or 'offer of sale' differed from the trend in other states, but that the supreme court was bound by the state determination, 321 U.S. 158, 163, 64 S.Ct. 438, and annotations 5 and 6. More importantly, the resolution of uncertain statutory authority by the state courts may obviate federal adjudication of constitutional questions arising from the enactment. [FN12]

FN12. See Harrison v. NAACP, 360 U.S. 167, 79 S.Ct. 1025, 3 L.Ed.2d 1152 (1959), where there was a finding that the state law was uncertain and abstention was ordered. In NAACP v. Bennett, 360 U.S. 471, 79 S.Ct. 1192, 3 L.Ed.2d 1375 (1959) the supreme court reversed the district court for filing to consider whether the state law was uncertain. Again, the major consideration behind the doctrine of abstention is that the federal courts should not adjudicate the constitutionality of state enactments fairly open to interpretation until the state courts have been afforded a reasonable opportunity to pass upon them. See e.g., Government & Civic Employees, etc. v. Windsor, 353 U.S. 364, 77 S.Ct. 838, 1 L.Ed.2d 894 (1957); Albertson v. Millard, 345 U.S. 242, 73 S.Ct. 600, 97 L.Ed. 983 (1953); Shipman v. DuPre, 339 U.S. 321, 70 S.Ct. 640, 94 L.Ed. 877 (1950); American Federation of Labor v. Watson, 327 U.S. 582, 66 S.Ct. 761, 90 L.Ed. 873 (1946); Spector Motor Service, Inc. v. McLaughlin, 323 U.S. 101, 65 S.Ct. 152, 89 L.Ed. 101 (1944); City of Chicago v. Fieldcrest Dairies, Inc., 316 U.S. 168, 62 S.Ct. 986, 86 L.Ed. 1355 (1942); Railroad Comm'n of Texas v. Pullman Co., 312 U.S. 496, 61 S.Ct. 643, 85 L.Ed. 971 (1941).

[28] The abstention doctrine, however, is not automatically applied. As already noted, whether the court should exercise its equity powers is a discretionary matter, and the decision to defer action initially depends upon a finding hat the special circumstances prerequisite to equitable abstention exist. Since the practical effect of the court's decision to abstain in a case over which it has been given jurisdiction by law is to deny the plaintiff his right to a federal forum, the decision to abstain not only requires a reasonably uncertain issue of state statutory interpretation, but also the availability of adequate state procedures for resolving the uncertainty.

[29] A first prerequisite, then, is that the challenged application of the state enactment be fairly open to interpretation. Where it appears that the statute necessarily had to be interpreted in the manner under attack, no useful purpose would be served by federal abstention to permit the state court to pass upon such application. [FN13] The abstention doctrine becomes applicable in those situations where it is uncertain that the state enactment authorized the restrictions imposed on the persons bringing the action or on their activities. [FN14] This condition would appear to be satisfied in the instant case.

FN13. See, e.g., Dombrowski v. Pfister,

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

380 U.S. 479, 85 S.Ct. 1116, 14 L.Ed.2d 22 (1965); Baggett v. Bullitt, 377 U.S. 360, 84 S.Ct. 1316, 12 L.Ed.2d 377 (1964); Idlewild Bon Voyage Liquor Corp. v. Epstein, 370 U.S. 713, 82 S.Ct. 1294, 8 L.Ed.2d 794 (1962).

FN14. See Baggett v. Bullitt, supra note 9 at pages 376-377, 84 S.Ct. 1316, and note 13. Moreover, even where the state court has considered the precise issue constitutionally attacked in the federal court, abstention has been exercised on the ground that the federal constitutional objections had not been presented to the state court and might have caused that court to interpret the statute differently had those objections been presented. City of Chicago v. Achison, T. & S.F.R.R., 357 U.S. 77, 78 S.Ct. 1063, 2 L.Ed.2d 1174 (1958).

The statutory application herein challenged permits a child to be made a ward of the court upon a finding that the child is 'grossly and wilfully neglected as to medical care necessary for his well-being.' However, it seems pertinent to ask whether 'gross and wilful neglect' is 507 a permissible finding under the statute when a parent, upon religious grounds or because of his views as to medical treatment, refuses to consent to blood transfusions for his minor child where the attending physician has determined blood transfusions are medically necessary. As applied here when a Jehovah's Witness desires to provide medical care for his child, but cannot consent to a particular form of medical treatment, such as blood transfusions, determined to be necessary by the attending physician, does the Juvenile Court Law require that child to be characterized as one 'grossly and wilfully neglected as to medical care necessary for his well-being?' The statute appears to have two parts: one portion requiring medical care necessary for the well-being of the child, and the other, under a plausible interpretation, providing that the neglect in failing to provide or agree to the medical treatment recommended as necessary be gross and wilful. Although a blood transfusion might be necessary for the well-being of the child, refusal to consent to a blood transfusion, coupled with willingness to consent to substitutes, if any, may not constitute 'gross and wilful' neglect. Use of the language 'grossly and wilfully' in the statute would thus appear to make the application of the statute to plaintiffs in the blood transfusion cases uncertain.

The second prerequisite to the application of the abstention doctrine is that adequate state procedures exist to resolve the uncertainty of the law. This prerequisite would appear to be satisfied by the Washington Uniform Declaratory Judgments Act, RCW 7.24.020. That statute provides in pertinent part:

'A person * * * whose rights, status or other legal relations are affected by a statute * * * may have determined any question of construction or validity arising under the * * * statute * * * and obtain a declaration of rights, status or other legal relations thereunder.'

[30] Although the cases involving the challenged application of the Juvenile Court Law are moot by the time of appeal, jurisdiction may still be exercised under the state declaratory judgments act. When a matter of public interest is involved the Washington supreme court has retained jurisdiction to decide the broad issues even though the particular case raising them is moot. [FN15] The 508 instant case would seem to be a proper one for an application of the Washington Declaratory Judgments Act similar to the one made in the National Electrical Contractors case. [FN16] In the instant case basic rights are thrown into conflict: the parens patriae power of the state versus the constitutional and civil rights of Jehovah's witnesses. In this connection, the public importance in the correct construction of the Juvenile Court Law cannot be doubted, and the superior courts of the state should have the benefit of the construction of this statute by the state supreme court for future guidance in similar situations.

FN15. See National Electrical Contractors Assoc. Puget Sound Chapter v. Seattle School District No. 1, 66 Wash.2d 14, 400 P.2d 778 (1965). In its opinion, the Washington Supreme Court quoted and specifically relied upon the following language from the opinion of the Illinois Supreme Court in a blood transfusion case, People ex rel. Wallace v. Labrenz, 411 Ill. 618, 104 N.E.2d 769, 772 (1952) as support for the proposition that the court should decide a moot issue where sufficient public interest in the question warrants:

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

'Before we reach the merits, we meet the State's contention that the case is now moot and should be dismissed because the blood transfusion has been administered, the guardian discharged, and the proceeding dismissed. Because the function of courts is to decide controverted issues in adversary proceedings, moot cases which do not present live issues are not ordinarily entertained. 'The general rule is that when a reviewing court has notice of facts which show that only moot questions or mere abstract propositions are involved or where the substantial questions involved in the trial court no longer exist, it will dismiss the appeal or writ of error.' People v. Redlich, 402 Ill. 270, 279, 83 N.E.2d 736, 741.

'But when the issue presented is of substantial public interest, a well-recognized exception exists to the general rule that a case which has become moot will be dismissed upon appeal. (See cases collected in 132 A.L.R. 1185.) Among the criteria considered in determining the existence of the requisite degree of public interest are the public or private nature of the question presented, the desirability of an authoritative determination for the future guidance of public officers, and the likelihood of future recurrence of the question.'

(At 66 Wash.2d 14, 19-20, 400 P.2d 778, 781-782).

FN16. Ibid.

[31] The action before us is, in reality, a declaratory judgment action wherein the application of a state statute is being challenged on constitutional grounds; the challenged application presents a question of statutory interpretation not heretofore passed upon by the Supreme Court of the State of Washington. State procedures exist for resolving the issues of construction raised by the application. The essential prerequisites for invoking the doctrine of equitable abstention we believe are present. The policy behind the development of the doctrine-- in general to preserve the framework of federalism, and in particular to give the state an opportunity to mold its policy to conform to or accord with constitutional standards-- favors utilizing the doctrine in this case. Indeed, resolution of the matter by the state might avoid the constitutional issues presented by the application of the statute.

In sum, if we, as a specially-constituted three-judge court, were to conclude the Prince decision not controlling we would then consider the case before us as tailored to the exercise of federal abstention.

For the reasons set forth herein, the plaintiffs are not entitled to the relief sought and the action will be dismissed as to all defendants.

278 F.Supp. 488

END OF DOCUMENT

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

Recycled Paper
BLUEBIRD
(310) 477-6700

EXHIBIT 24

United States District Court,
D. Oregon.

JC2, ME, FH, PM, BO, BS and TS, Plaintiffs,
v.
Maurice GRAMMOND; the Archdiocese of Portland in Oregon, an Oregon corporation; the Roman Catholic Archbishop of Portland in Oregon, and successors, a corporation solo, dba the Archdiocese of Portland in Oregon, Defendants.

No. CIV.01-1111-AS.

March 18, 2002.

Former altar boys brought state court action against church and priest alleging that they had been sexually abused by priest. After removal to federal court, plaintiffs moved to remand to state court. The District Court, Robert E. Jones, J., adopted findings and recommendation of Ashmanskas, United States Magistrate Judge, which held that plaintiffs' claims against church did not implicate First Amendment.

Motion granted.

West Headnotes

[1] Constitutional Law 84.5(7.1)
92k84.5(7.1) Most Cited Cases

First Amendment generally precludes courts from interpreting church laws, policies or practices in manner that will limit church's ability to fully practice its religion or be guided by its religious principles, but does not prevent courts from addressing church-related disputes, provided court refrains from considering doctrinal matters and resolves dispute solely on neutral principles. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 1.

[2] Constitutional Law 84.5(7.1)
92k84.5(7.1) Most Cited Cases

Under First Amendment, courts may not, without justification, force religious bodies to abandon their religious beliefs or doctrines in favor of purely secular rules or rule on appropriateness or correctness of those beliefs or doctrines. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 1.

[3] Master and Servant 307
255k307 Most Cited Cases

Under Oregon law, employer will not be held liable for intentional criminal acts of its employees, as those acts are not committed for benefit of employer.

[4] Master and Servant 307
255k307 Most Cited Cases

Under Oregon law, employer may be held liable for employee's intentional criminal acts under doctrine of respondeat superior if acts that led to criminal conduct were within scope of employment.

[5] Constitutional Law 84.5(10)
92k84.5(10) Most Cited Cases

[5] Religious Societies 30
332k30 Most Cited Cases

[5] Removal of Cases 101.1
334k101.1 Most Cited Cases

State court's consideration of claim that church was liable under doctrine of respondeat superior for priest's abuse of his position as youth pastor to induce altar boys to engage in sexual acts with him would not infringe upon church's freedom of religion or implicate First Amendment, and thus remand of action to state court was required, despite church's contention that resolution of issue would require court to review, interpret and consider its religious rules and canons; parameters of priest's duties could be discerned by reviewing his "job description" and communications between church and priest, and court would not limit priest's duties or church's ability to supervise priest. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 1.

1167 David L. Slader, David Slader Trial Lawyer, Portland, OR, for Plaintiffs.

Thomas E. Cooney, Cooney & Crew, L.L.C., Portland, OR, for Maurice Grammon, defendant.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

Karen O'Kasey, Thomas V. Dulcich, Schwabe Williamson & Wyatt, Portland, OR, for Archdiocese of portland, Roman Catholic Archbishop of Portland, defendants.

ORDER

ROBERT E. JONES, District Judge.

Magistrate Judge Donald C. Ashmanskas filed Findings and Recommendation (# 24) on December 14, 2001, in the above entitled case. The matter is now before me pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 636(b)(1)(B) and Fed.R.Civ.P. 72(b). When either party objects to any portion of a magistrate judge's Findings and Recommendation, the district court must make a de novo determination of that portion of the magistrate judge's report. See 28 U.S.C. § 636(b)(1); McDonnell Douglas Corp. v. Commodore Business Machines, Inc., 656 F.2d 1309, 1313 (9th Cir.1981), cert. denied, 455 U.S. 920, 102 S.Ct. 1277, 71 L.Ed.2d 461 (1982).

Defendants have timely filed objections. I have, therefore, given de novo review of Magistrate Judge Ashmanskas's rulings.

I find no error. Accordingly, I ADOPT Magistrate Judge Ashmanskas's Findings and Recommendation dated December 13, 2001, in its entirety. Plaintiffs' motion (# 9) to remand is GRANTED.

IT IS SO ORDERED.

FINDINGS AND RECOMMENDATION

ASHMANSKAS, United States Magistrate Judge.

The plaintiffs in this action, designated as JC2, ME, FH, PM, BO, BS and TS (collectively "Plaintiffs"), are all men who were once parishioners of defendants the Archdiocese of Portland in Oregon and the Roman Catholic Archbishop of Portland in Oregon, a corporation sole, doing business as the Archdiocese of Portland in Oregon (collectively "Defendants"). Plaintiffs allege that Maurice Grammond, a Roman Catholic priest who, at all relevant times, was employed as a priest by Defendants, sexually abused them during the period of time they served as Altar Boys. Plaintiffs filed this action for sexual battery against Grammond and the Defendants in the Circuit Court of the State of Oregon for the County of Multnomah. Defendants removed the action to this court asserting that Plaintiffs' complaint "creates crucial First Amendment issues arising from their allegations of a religious-based 'breach of trust.' " Presently before the court is Plaintiffs' motion for remand pursuant to Fed.R.Civ.P. § 1447(c).

LEGAL STANDARD

Section 1447(c) provides, in part: "If at any time before final judgment it appears that the district court lacks subject matter jurisdiction, the case shall be remanded." 28 U.S.C. § 1447(c). Only cases that would have had original jurisdiction in a federal district court may be removed from state court. 28 U.S.C. § 1441(a). "Absent diversity of citizenship, federal- question jurisdiction is required." Caterpillar, Inc. v. Williams, 482 U.S. 386, 392, 107 S.Ct. 2425, 96 L.Ed.2d 318 (1987). There is no diversity jurisdiction in this matter. Thus, the court must determine whether there is federal question jurisdiction over the parties dispute.

Federal courts have original federal question jurisdiction in "all civil actions arising under the Constitution, laws, or treaties of the United States." 28 U.S.C. § § 1331, 1441(b). Normally, cases brought under the general federal question jurisdiction of the federal courts are those in which federal law creates the cause of action. 1168Merrell Dow Pharmaceuticals, Inc. v. Thompson*, 478 U.S. 804, 808, 106 S.Ct. 3229, 92 L.Ed.2d 650 (1986). Federal courts have recognized, however, that a case may arise under federal law "where the vindication of a right under state law necessarily turned on some construction of federal law." Franchise Tax Bd. v. Laborers Vacation Trust, 463 U.S. 1, 9, 103 S.Ct. 2841, 77 L.Ed.2d 420 (1983).

It is clear that the question whether a claim "arises under" federal law must be determined by reference to the "well-pleaded complaint." Merrell Dow, 478 U.S. at 808, 106 S.Ct. 3229. Federal question jurisdiction exists only if the federal question appears on the face of plaintiff's complaint; if not, original jurisdiction is lacking, even if the defense is based on federal law. Id.

DISCUSSION

Plaintiffs seek to establish vicarious liability against Defendants for Grammond's sexual abuse of Plaintiffs under the theory of respondeat superior. Defendants contend that the resolution of this issue requires the court to review, interpret and consider the religious rules and canons of the Roman Catholic Church, which is barred by the First Amendment. Accordingly, Defendants argue that Plaintiffs' complaint raises federal constitutional issues that must be addressed by a federal court.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

Plaintiffs do not dispute that the First Amendment limits the review of internal policies of a church by a secular court, that a federal constitutional issue is raised when the First Amendment is at issue or that this court has federal question jurisdiction over federal constitutional issues. Rather, Plaintiffs contend that the issue of vicarious liability can be resolved without consideration of Defendants' canons or religious rules and that any federal question before the court is limited to Defendants' third affirmative defense.

[1] The First Amendment of the United States Constitution, provides that: "Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof* * *." Courts are similarly restricted in their consideration of issues involving religious organizations or doctrine. Generally, courts may not interpret church laws, policies or practices in a manner that will limit the churches ability to fully practice its religion or be guided by its religious principles. Cantwell v. Connecticut, 310 U.S. 296, 303, 60 S.Ct. 900, 84 L.Ed. 1213 (1940). However, this does not prevent courts from addressing church-related disputes, provided the court refrains from considering doctrinal matters and resolves the dispute solely on neutral principles. Jones v. Wolf, 443 U.S. 595, 604, 99 S.Ct. 3020, 61 L.Ed.2d 775 (1979).

In an order granting a stay issued independently by him, Justice Rehnquist summarized the restriction imposed on courts by the First Amendment as follows:

> There are constitutional limitations on the extent to which a civil court may inquire into and determine matters of ecclesiastical cognizance and polity in adjudicating intrachurch disputes. But the Court never has suggested that those constraints similarly apply outside the context of such intraorganization disputes. * * * [Some] cases are premised on a perceived danger that in resolving intrachurch disputes the State will become entangled in essentially religious controversies or intervene on behalf of groups espousing particular doctrinal beliefs. Such considerations are not applicable to purely secular disputes between third parties and a particular defendant, albeit a religious affiliated organization, in which fraud, breach of contract, and statutory violations are alleged.

1169 General Council v. Superior Court of California, 439 U.S. 1355, 1372-3, 99 S.Ct. 35, 58 L.Ed.2d 63 (1978).

[2] Courts may not, without justification, [FN1] force religious bodies to abandon their religious beliefs or doctrines in favor of purely secular rules or rule on the appropriateness or correctness of those beliefs or doctrines. However, the mere consideration of religious authorities in an action involving the church and third parties does not necessarily amount to an infringement of the churches religious freedom. A court may look to such evidence to establish the basic purposes or policies of the religion as merely a guide to determining whether a plaintiff has a viable action against the church.

> FN1. Justification would include enforcement of criminal laws or statutes which are religiously neutral.

In order to resolve this controversy, the court must first examine the parameters of the respondeat superior liability alleged in Plaintiffs complaint. "Under the doctrine of respondeat superior, an employer is liable for the torts of his employee when the employee is acting within the scope of his employment." Stanfield v. Laccoarce, 284 Or. 651, 654, 588 P.2d 1271 (1978). In determining whether an employee was acting within the course and scope of his employment, the court applies a three-part test:

> (1) [W]hether the act occurred substantially within the time and space limits authorized by the employment; (2) whether the employee was motivated, at least partially, by a purpose to serve the employer; and (3) whether the act is of a kind which the employee was hired to perform.

Chesterman v. Barmon, 305 Or. 439, 442, 753 P.2d 404 (1988).

[3][4] Generally, an employer will not be held liable for the intentional criminal acts of its employees as these acts are not committed for the benefit of the employer. However, the Oregon Supreme Court has expanded the doctrine of respondeat superior to include the intentional criminal acts of employees if the acts that lead to the criminal conduct were within the scope of employment. In Chesterman, an employee ingested a hallucinatory drug while on the job to enable him to better focus his attention on work. While under the influence of the drug, the employee broke into the plaintiff's house and sexually assaulted her. The court recognized that the sexual assault itself was outside the scope of employment but reasoned that the appropriate inquiry was whether acts which contributed to the sexual assault were for the benefit of the employer. Id. at 444, 753 P.2d 404.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

In Fearing v. Bucher, 328 Or. 367, 977 P.2d 1163 (1999), the Oregon Supreme Court applied this reasoning to an action similar to the one before the court. The plaintiff, a man who had been ministered to in his youth by the defendant, a catholic priest, was sexually abused by the defendant. The complaint alleged that the defendant used his position as a youth pastor, spiritual guide, confessor and priest to get close to plaintiff and his family allowing him to spend a lot of time alone with the plaintiff and that these activities were conducted in connection with his employment with the church. Id. at 374, 977 P.2d 1163. The court held that the allegations were sufficient to "infer that the sexual assaults were the culmination of a progressive series of actions that began with and continued to involve [defendant's] performance of the ordinary and authorized duties of a priest" and that "in cultivating a relationship with plaintiff and his family, [defendant], at least initially, was motivated 1170 by a desire to fulfill his priestly duties and that, over time, his motives became mixed." Id. at 375, 977 P.2d 1163.

These cases make it clear that the court must know the limits of the employees job duties in order to determine whether he was acting in furtherance of those duties during the relevant period. Accordingly, the court will be required to learn the limits of Grammond's job duties as a priest for Defendants in order to determine whether the actions Plaintiffs allege he engaged in were within the parameters of his employment.

Plaintiffs allege that Grammond's assigned duties as a priest and youth pastor "included providing pastoral and religious ritual services, including, but not limited to, providing spiritual, moral and ethical guidance and religious instruction to the children-parishioners of Defendants." Plaintiffs then allege that, in furtherance of these duties:

> Grammond identified plaintiffs' families as ones with one or more adolescent or pre-adolescent male children; sought and gained the trust and confidence of the boys' parents as friend, spiritual guide, youth pastor, confessor and priest; sought and gained the parents' consent for each plaintiff to serve as an Altar Boy, participate in youth activities, and/or to otherwise spend considerable time alone with him; and sought and gained the parents' directive to the boys that they respect his authority and guidance and comply with his instruction.
>
> * * * * * *
>
> * * * Grammond also sought and gained the plaintiffs' trust, friendship, admiration, and obedience.

Finally, Plaintiffs allege that Grammond used "the power, authority and trust of his position as priest and youth pastor to the plaintiffs and to their parents" to entice, induce, direct and/or coerce each boy to engage in various sexual acts with him.

Plaintiffs claim that Defendants do not dispute Plaintiffs' allegation that a priest's authorized duties include gaining the trust of the children of his parish. In the Answer filed by Defendants on July 31, 2001, they deny Plaintiffs' allegations with regard to Grammond's authorized duties as a priest. In light of this denial, and the arguments made by Defendants in opposition to the motion to remand, it is clear that the extent of Grammond's authorized duties as a priest is an issue that will be contested.

The daily activities of a priest are generally known to his parishioners as a result of their relationship with him and with the church. However, it is impossible to know what acts the church has specifically authorized and directed the priest to engage in simply by watching the priest's routine. One must look more deeply into the relationship between the church and the priest to differentiate between those acts required by the job and those engaged in independently by the priest.

[5] As with any employer-employee relationship, the parameters of a priest's duties can be discerned by reviewing the "job description" of the priest, in addition to communications between the church and the priest. While this will require the court to consider a number of Defendants' canons delineating the duties of a priest, the court will not need to make any judgment on appropriateness, correctness or validity of any of the canons. The canons will merely define the duties of a priest and the court will then consider whether Grammond's acts of "grooming" fall within this definition. The court will not in any matter limit the priests duties or the ability of the church to supervise Grammond. Accordingly, the consideration by the court of Defendants' canons, or other religious rules, will not infringe in any way upon Defendants' freedom of religion and will not implicate the First Amendment. In 1171 the absence of any constitutional issues, this court lacks jurisdiction over this action and it should be remanded to state court.

CONCLUSION

Plaintiffs' motion (# 9) to remand should be GRANTED.

SCHEDULING ORDER

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

The above Findings and Recommendation will be referred to a United States District Judge for review. Objections, if any, are due December 28, 2001. If no objections are filed, review of the Findings and Recommendation will go under advisement on that date. If objections are filed, a response to the objections is due January 11, 2002, and the review of the Findings and Recommendation will go under advisement on that date.

Dec. 13, 2001.

232 F.Supp.2d 1166

END OF DOCUMENT

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

BLUEBIRD (888) 477-0700 www.bluebirdonline.com
OFFICE SUPPLIES

EXHIBIT 27

591 N.Y.S.2d 927
(Cite as: 153 Misc.2d 822, 591 N.Y.S.2d 927)

Supreme Court, Onondaga County, New York.

Martin JONES, [FN*] An Infant, by Betty JONES,* his mother and Natural Guardian, and Betty Jones,* Individually, Plaintiffs, FN* The names used are fictitious to protect the infant.

v.

Father Thomas TRANE,* Saint Adam's Academy,* Saint Adam's Parish* and the Diocese of Syracuse of the Roman Catholic Church, Defendants.

Oct. 19, 1992.

Mother, individually and on behalf of son, brought actions against priest and church for damages arising out of priest's alleged molestation of her son. On motion to dismiss, the Supreme Court, Onondaga County, Roy, J., held that: (1) plaintiffs could not bring negligence and malpractice actions based on intentional misconduct; (2) First Amendment did not protect priest from claims for breach of trust and outrageous conduct or church from negligent hiring claim; and (3) church was not vicariously liable for priest's intentional sexual misconduct.

Ordered accordingly.

West Headnotes

[1] Religious Societies ⇦30
332k30 Most Cited Cases

Claims for negligence and malpractice could not be based on allegation that priest sexually assaulted an 11-year-old boy; wrongful conduct alleged was compensable, if at all, under causes of action for assault and battery and was, therefore, outside the ambit of negligence.

[2] Religious Societies ⇦30
332k30 Most Cited Cases

Priest was not negligent for disrobing in pool shower area, thereby exposing himself to 11-year-old boy; although priest's alleged subsequent actions of kissing and fondling the boy could be actionable as intentional torts, disrobing in shower was common practice incident to swimming in pool used by many persons.

[3] Religious Societies ⇦30
332k30 Most Cited Cases

Despite contention that court could not constitutionally set standard of conduct for clergy, priest was subject to civil actions for breach of trust and outrageous conduct arising out of priest's alleged molestation of young boy; restraint on such conduct by imposition of civil liability would not intrude on the free exercise of religion in any way. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 1.

[4] Religious Societies ⇦30
332k30 Most Cited Cases

Despite contention that court could not constitutionally set standard of conduct for clergy, church could be civilly liable for negligent hiring if it knew of perverted proclivities of priest who allegedly molested young boys. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 1.

[5] Constitutional Law ⇦84.5(7.1)
92k84.5(7.1) Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 92k84.5(7))

[5] Religious Societies ⇦30
332k30 Most Cited Cases

First Amendment does not protect religious organization's decision to hire someone it knows is likely to commit crimes or torts. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 1.

[6] Religious Societies ⇦30
332k30 Most Cited Cases

Church could not be vicariously liable for priest's intentional sexual misconduct.

823 927 Birnbaum, McDermott & Friedman, P.C., Irwin Birnbaum, Syracuse, for plaintiffs.

Mackenzie, Smith, Lewis, Michell & Hughes, Syracuse, for defendant Father Thomas Trane.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

928 Hancock & Estabrook, Paul Hanrahan, Syracuse, for defendants St. Adam's Academy, St. Adam's Parish and the Diocese of Syracuse.

WILLIAM R. ROY, Justice.

This litigation by an infant and his mother was initiated by service of pleadings alleging that defendant Trane, while employed as parish priest at defendant St. Adam's Parish and as director of religious education for defendant St. Adam's Academy, improperly subjected the infant plaintiff to sexual and other conduct against the boy's will between August, 1988 and January, 1989. The first amended complaint set forth three causes of action against all defendants, the first of which combined a number of theories of liability predicated on the alleged misconduct of the priest; the second and third causes of action were a derivative action by the infant's mother and a claim for punitive damages.

Regarding the amended complaint as a pleading alleging clergy malpractice in a variety of forms, defendant Trane, joined by the institutional defendants, moved to dismiss on the ground that no such cause of action is recognized in this jurisdiction. Before that motion was argued however, plaintiffs made the present motion for leave to serve a second amended complaint, a copy of which is included in the moving papers. The proposed pleading states as separate causes of action the theories previously included in the first cause of action in the first amended complaint, adds two causes of action for outrageous conduct causing severe emotional distress to the infant, and expands claims that the institutional defendants not only were responsible for misconduct of the priest under the principal of respondeat superior but also were themselves at fault in *824 the hiring and the failure periodically to investigate and evaluate Trane in light of the priest's alleged known pedophilic disposition. Some of the fourteen causes of action now sought to be pleaded are against defendant Trane alone, some are against only the institutional defendants, and some are against all.

Of the causes of action against him in the proposed pleading, defendant Trane served objections to three of those actions: No. 3, alleging sexual misconduct and breach of trust; No. 5, alleging violation of trust; and No. 7, alleging clergy malpractice and negligence. The institutional defendants joined in those objections, identifying as "misplaced", "plaintiffs' claims that his pleadings could be interpreted to state causes of action other than clergy malpractice".

On argument of the motion to amend, the Court granted plaintiffs' motion, applying the principle of liberal allowance of amendment most recently articulated by the Appellate Division, Fourth Department, in Agway, Inc. v. Williams, 185 A.D.2d 636, 585 N.Y.S.2d 643. It then treated defendants' motions to dismiss as directed to the complaint as amended, and accepted the arguments tendered in objection to plaintiffs' motion to amend as arguments in support of motions to dismiss the clergy malpractice and negligence cause of action (No. 7) and the breach and violation of trust causes of action (Nos. 3 and 5), as well as the actions against the institutional defendants, in the second amended complaint. Additionally, with the consent of counsel, the Court anticipated motions by defendants to dismiss the causes of action for outrageous conduct causing severe emotional distress, now added by the second amended pleading, and indicated that it would also pass on such motions as though formally made on papers. The parties were given opportunity to tender additional submissions following argument of the motions, and each has done so, the most recent being received on August 6, 1992.

Turning first to the causes of action against the individual defendant Trane that are challenged: Because plaintiffs have alleged respondeat superior liability on the institutional defendants for the conduct of the priest, all the defendants have joined in seeking dismissal of the claims of clergy malpractice and negligence and of breach and violation of trust by him.

929 The facts on which the challenged claims are based, as alleged in the amended complaint and amplified by documents *825 submitted by plaintiffs in support of their motion to amend, are these:

The infant plaintiff, Martin Jones, his parents and siblings resided in the City of Oswego where, as practicing Roman Catholics, they attended and supported defendant St. Adam's Church, a parish under the jurisdiction of defendant Roman Catholic Diocese of Syracuse, New York. Prior to the beginning of the 1988-1989 school year, Mr. and Mrs. Jones enrolled Martin, then 11, and a younger sister, in defendant St. Adam's Elementary School, a school operated by the parish and diocese, for the coming year, and paid fees for the children's attendance at school.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

Defendant Trane was then employed as an associate pastor at the church and director of religious education for the school. Thereafter, on two occasions between August 1, 1988 and January 31, 1989, defendant Trane obtained permission from Martin's mother to take him with another boy to Laker Hall, an athletic facility at the SUNY Oswego Campus, in the evening to play racketball and basketball and to go swimming. Before entering the swimming pool, at the pass through showers at the pool Trane allegedly removed all his clothing and, against their will, made Martin and the other boy do the same; he then kissed and fondled them against their will. It is also alleged that, in addition to the actual physical contact, by the conduct of Trane, Martin was threatened with and placed in apprehension of imminent offensive sexual bodily contact. The complaint further alleges that defendant Trane's conduct arose out of and in the course of his employment by the institutional defendants and that a special relationship of trust existed between the Joneses and defendant Trane as a priest and educator of the Roman Catholic Church.

Plaintiffs contend that upon the foregoing alleged facts they may maintain actions to recover damages for substantial emotional, mental and physical injury, economic loss and expenses for care and treatment sustained and required by Martin.

Defendants jointly, in all motions directed to plaintiffs' complaints, have relied primarily and almost exclusively on the rationale of Chief Judge Charles L. Brieant of the United States District Court for the Southern District of New York in Schmidt v. Bishop, 779 F.Supp. 321, in which summary judgment on causes of action for clergy malpractice, negligence and breach of fiduciary duty was granted, both to a 826 church pastor who had allegedly carried on long term sexual contact with the plaintiff in the course of "emotional, spiritual and familial counseling" initiated at the request of plaintiff's parents, and to his congregational and judicatory employers. The judge concluded that, in addition to being without precedent in New York law and on other grounds, the causes of action constitutionally could not be sustained because they would require the definition of a standard of care for the cleric, and that the defining of such a standard would, in his view, necessarily run afoul of the prohibition against excessive entanglement in religion inherent in the First Amendment to the United States Constitution under Lemon v. Kurtzman, 403 U.S. 602, 91 S.Ct. 2105, 29 L.Ed.2d 745.

All defendants argue strenuously for adoption by this Court of the result and conclusions reached by Judge Brieant, with which the Court concurs, but in part only.

[1] On the facts as alleged by plaintiffs the Court is satisfied that the seventh cause of action, purporting to state a claim for clergy malpractice and negligence, must be dismissed, for the reason that the alleged wrongful conduct of the priest Trane constituted intentional torts--assault and battery, which are independently pleaded as three causes of action of the second amended complaint. As Judge Brieant affirmed (see, Schmidt v. Bishop, supra, 779 F.Supp. at 325), "New York has adopted the prevailing modern view that, once intentional offensive contact has been established, the actor is liable for assault and not negligence, even when the physical injuries may have been inflicted inadvertently *930(Trott v Merit Dept. Store, 106 AD2d 158, 160 [484 N.Y.S.2d 827]; Masters v Becker, 22 AD2d 118, 120 [254 N.Y.S.2d 633]; Restatement [Second] of Torts § 16 [1977]). 'There is, properly speaking, no such thing as a negligent assault' (Prosser and Keeton, Torts § 10, at 46 [5th ed])." (Mazzaferro v. Albany Motel Enters., 127 A.D.2d 374, 376, 515 N.Y.S.2d 631; see also Rafferty v. Ogden Mem. Hosp., 140 A.D.2d 911, 528 N.Y.S.2d 729.) The principle applies with equal force to the claims of negligence and malpractice, which "in its strict sense * * * means the negligence of a member of a profession in his relations with his client or patient" (76 N.Y.Jur.2d, Malpractice, § 1).

In the case now under consideration nothing alleged in plaintiffs' pleading or set out in their documents contains any suggestion that defendant Trane's conduct was an oversight, an inadvertent failure to exercise an expected standard of care, or a neglect; the wrongs alleged were intentional and deliberate and allegedly in their nature offensive. They therefore827 are outside the ambit of actionable negligence and will be compensable, if compensable, under one or more of the causes of action for assault and battery, as to which defendants have not sought dismissal.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

[2] At oral argument plaintiffs' counsel suggested that a pure negligence claim could be made out based on what was asserted to be the failure of due care by Trane in disrobing in the pool shower area, thereby exposing himself to the boy Martin. The Court cannot perceive how such activity, which is a common and often expected practice incident to swimming in a pool used by many persons, could be regarded as negligence.

In view of the foregoing, the Court does not find it necessary to determine whether the seventh cause of action is constitutionally infirm under the rationale of the Schmidt case. Because defendants also attack the breach and violation of trust actions (Nos. 3 and 5), which in concept bear a similarity to the breach of fiduciary duty cause of action struck down in Schmidt, further consideration of the relevance of Judge Brieant's constitutional point is, however, appropriate.

[3] Such consideration immediately discloses a significant, and, to this Court's mind, controlling distinction between that case and the one at hand: in Schmidt the alleged clergy misconduct occurred in the context of an established and existing ongoing pastoral counseling relationship--a setting in which the functioning of the clergyperson might naturally be expected to implicate dogma and practice of the religious body to which the cleric belonged, and in which the specter of excessive entanglement looms large. It is when what is sought is an evaluation of a member of the clergy while acting as a spiritual counselor that courts have refrained from undertaking to define a standard of care, for the reason stated by Judge Brieant:

> "Any effort by this Court to instruct the trial jury as to the duty of care which a clergyman should exercise, would of necessity require the Court or jury to define and express the standard of care to be followed by other reasonable Presbyterian clergy of the community. This in turn would require the Court and the jury to consider the fundamental perspective and approach to counseling inherent in the beliefs and practices of that denomination. This is as unconstitutional as it is impossible. It fosters excessive entanglement with religion." (779 F.Supp. 321, 328)

Other cases rejecting recognition of a cause of action for *828 clergy malpractice on the excessive entanglement ground have similarly been instances in which the alleged clerical wrongdoing occurred within the counseling framework (White v. Blackburn, 787 P.2d 1315 [Utah]; Nally v. Grace Community Church of the Valley, 47 Cal.3d 278, 253 Cal.Rptr. 97, 763 P.2d 948, cert. den. 490 U.S. 1007, 109 S.Ct. 1644, 104 L.Ed.2d 159).

In the present case, however, the facts alleged clearly fail to indicate the existence of any counseling relationship between defendant Trane and Martin of which the misconduct alleged was a part, such as might preclude an inquiry into the propriety 931 of the priest's conduct as an excessive involvement in the philosophy of his religious community. In this circumstance, the constitutional obstacle described in Schmidt v. Bishop, 779 F.Supp. 321, supra should not, as defendants contend, foreclose these plaintiffs' third and fifth causes of action for breach or violation of trust.

It may also be noted in passing that, although defendants persistently assert First Amendment protection, none makes any suggestion that the alleged sexual misconduct of defendant Trane is a part of the tenets or practices of the Roman Catholic Church, or that restraint on it by the imposition of civil liability will in any way intrude on the free exercise of religion to an extent protected by the First Amendment. For a similar situation, see Strock v. Pressnell, 38 Ohio St.3d 207, 527 N.E.2d 1235. [FN1] Indeed, inasmuch as it is conduct, and not *829 creed, that underlies plaintiffs' actions, and that the potential for civil consequences exists equally as to religious and non- religious persons, and as to clergy and lay persons of all religions alike, the Free Exercise aspect of the First Amendment does not come into play to preclude plaintiffs' actions (Employment Div., Department of Human Resources of Oregon v. Smith, 494 U.S. 872, 110 S.Ct. 1595, 108 L.Ed.2d 876 reh'g. denied 496 U.S. 913, 110 S.Ct. 2605, 110 L.Ed.2d 285).

> FN1. In this connection, the language of the Supreme Court of Colorado in DeStefano v. Grabrian, 763 P.2d 275, which involved a claim arising out of alleged sexual misconduct by a Roman Catholic priest, is instructive. At pages 283-284 that Court said:

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

"When the free exercise clause is raised as a defense, the threshold question is whether the conduct of the defendant is religious. Wisconsin v. Yoder, 406 U.S. 205, 215-16, 92 S.Ct. 1526, 1533-34, 32 L.Ed.2d 15 (1972) ('to have the protection of the [r]eligious [c]lauses the claims must be rooted in religious belief'); see Note, Intentional Infliction of Emotional Distress by Spiritual Counselors: Can Outrageous Conduct be 'Free Exercise'?, 84 Mich.L.Rev. 1269, 1302 (1986). 'In the spiritual counseling context, the free exercise clause is relevant only if the defendant can show that the conduct that allegedly caused plaintiff's distress was in fact "part of the belief and practices" of the religious group.' Id. (citing Christofferson v. Church of Scientology, 57 Or.App. 203, 245, 644 P.2d 577, 604 (1982)). The alleged misconduct of Grabrian that is at the very heart of Edna's crossclaim is that he induced Edna to engage in a sexual relationship during the course, and as a result, of marital counseling. Edna alleged that her damages were a direct result of the sexual relationship. If the alleged conduct of Grabrian were dictated by his sincerely held religious beliefs or was consistent with the practice of his religion, we would have to resolve a difficult first amendment issue. This, however, is not the case. It has not been asserted that Grabrian's conduct falls within the practices or beliefs of the Catholic church."

Finally, when, as here, the misconduct charged is sexual abuse of an infant, even if defendant Trane's conduct had been within a counseling setting, this Court would not dismiss the three challenged actions (Nos. 3, 5 and 7) on the ground of excessive entanglement, as did Judge Brieant in the Schmidt case for fear of venturing on a slippery slope into questions of liability impossible and unconstitutional to determine. This Court does not share that apprehension, and is confident the judicial process can provide a brake to the slide when needed. In the words of Mr. Justice Harlan, "It is always possible to shrink from a first step lest the momentum will plunge the law into pitfalls that lie in the trail ahead. I, for one, however, do not believe that a 'slippery slope' is necessarily without a constitutional toehold" (Walz v. Tax Commission of the City of New York, 397 U.S. 664, 699-700, 90 S.Ct. 1409, 1427, 25 L.Ed.2d 697).

For the foregoing reasons, cause of action No. 7 is dismissed and the motions for dismissal of causes of action Nos. 3 and 5 are denied, as are the motions to dismiss cause of action No. 6 alleging outrageous conduct by defendant Trane causing severe emotional distress to Martin. As to the latter cause of action, defendants have tendered no ground for dismissal by post- argument submissions beyond their inclusion of this cause of action in those opposed on oral argument for the reasons discussed above.

There remain to be considered claims asserted against the institutional defendants in the second amended complaint. These defendants (the parish, school and diocese *932 who were alleged employers of defendant Trane) do not identify specific causes of action that they seek to have dismissed or mount discrete attacks against particular claims; instead, they ask generally for dismissal of "all causes of action directed at the Diocesan defendants on alleged failure of supervision or respondeat superior theories". The gist of the various claims pleaded against the institutional defendants, in addition to an 830 action for outrageous conduct causing severe emotional distress, is that these defendants are vicariously liable under the principle of respondent superior for the alleged misconduct of the priest, or are liable for their own negligence in hiring and placing the priest in contact with boys and failing periodically to evaluate his activities, with inadequate investigation of his background and with actual or constructive knowledge of his propensities.

With repeated reliance on Judge Brieant's decision in the Schmidt case, which they acknowledge is not binding but which they urge as compelling, they assert:

"Under Judge Brieant's analysis, the First Amendment precludes any intervention by this Court which would serve to define a clerical standard of care or involve sensitive judgments as to the internal affairs of clerical administration. Such activity, apart from creating a monumentally difficult task, would have a chilling effect leading indirectly to state control over the future conduct of affairs of a religious denomination."

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

[4][5] Liability for negligent hiring or failing periodically to evaluate defendant Trane will of course be dependent upon a sufficient showing of notice of perverted proclivities--the nature and extent of which notice is not appropriately for decision on these motions to dismiss, in view of the allegations of both actual and constructive notice that are set out in the amended pleading. If, however, plaintiffs are successful in establishing that, with knowledge that the priest was likely to commit sexual abuse on youths with whom he was put in contact, his employers placed or continued him in a setting in which such abuse occurred, the fact that the placement occurred in the course of internal administration of the religious units does not preclude holding the institutions accountable to the victim of their neglect in administration. Indeed, a contrary holding--that a religious body must be held free from any responsibility for wholly predictable and foreseeable injurious consequences of personnel decisions, although such decisions incorporate no theological or dogmatic tenets--would go beyond First Amendment protection and cloak such bodies with an exclusive immunity greater than that required for the preservation of the principles constitutionally safeguarded. As the Supreme Court of Ohio has declared, "even the most liberal construction of the First Amendment will not protect a religious organization's decision to hire someone who it knows 831 is likely to commit criminal or tortious acts" (Byrd v. Faber, 57 Ohio St.3d 56, 61, 565 N.E.2d 584, 590). [FN2]

FN2. Absent legislative prescription or an appellate court's directive, this Court will not reach out to impose the "higher standard of pleading" required by Ohio's Supreme Court in Byrd with respect to a claim brought against a religious institution for negligent hiring (57 Ohio St.3d at p. 61, 565 N.E.2d at p. 589).

The question whether the facts alleged, if proved, would support the imposition of liability on the institutional defendants for the alleged misconduct of defendant Trane under the principles of respondeat superior is a somewhat more difficult one. Plaintiffs argue that there has been an expansion of these principles, citing language of the Court of Appeals in Riviello v. Waldron, 47 N.Y.2d 297, 418 N.Y.S.2d 300, 391 N.E.2d 1278 in which the Court recognized that "where the element of general foreseeability exists, even intentional tort situations have been found to fall within the scope of employment". (p. 304, 418 N.Y.S.2d 300, 391 N.E.2d 1278) The two cases cited there were both instances of assaults committed by employees; both, however, were committed in what might be said to have been in furtherance of the employers' interests; in one case a bartender assaulted an unruly patron to protect *933 the employer's property and to maintain order on the premises (Sims v. Bergamo, 3 N.Y.2d 531, 169 N.Y.S.2d 449, 147 N.E.2d 1); in the other a building superintendent assaulted a tenant while attempting to enforce occupancy rules (De Wald v. Seidenberg, 297 N.Y. 335, 79 N.E.2d 430). No New York case has been cited in which an employer has been held vicariously liable for intentional sexual misconduct by an employee; the contrary result was reached in Noto v. St. Vincent's Hosp. & Med. Center of N.Y., 160 A.D.2d 656, 559 N.Y.S.2d 510 appeal denied 76 N.Y.2d 714, 564 N.Y.S.2d 718, 565 N.E.2d 1269 referring to opinion by Supreme Court Justice Dontzin reported at 142 Misc.2d 292, 537 N.Y.S.2d 446.

[6] In light of the foregoing, the Court declines to follow the lead of Mary M. v. City of Los Angeles, 54 Cal.3d 202, 285 Cal.Rptr. 99, 814 P.2d 1341, which plaintiffs ask be applied, in which the Supreme Court of California held that defendant City might be liable under respondeat superior for a rape by an on-duty policeman of a woman taken into custody by him. In reversing the vacatur of a jury verdict for plaintiff and remanding for further consideration, the Court placed great emphasis on the fact that police officers are vested by the public entity with authority to arrest and to use deadly force, and one resisting an officer's proper exercise of authority is subject to criminal prosecution. In that circumstance the Court held that "(w)hen police officers on duty misuse that formidable power to commit 832 sexual assaults, the public employer must be held accountable for their actions. ' "It is, after all, the state which puts the officer in a position to employ force and which benefits from its use." ' " (54 Cal.3d at p. 221, 285 Cal.Rptr. at p. 110). The coercive authority possessed by the police officer in Mary M. serves to distinguish it from the present case. Inasmuch as plaintiffs have tendered no case in this jurisdiction imposing respondeat superior liability for intentional sexual misconduct by an employee, which on its face scarcely seems to fall within the scope of employment of a priest, the eighth cause of action will be dismissed.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

As has been indicated, defendants raise no separate objections to the two causes of action added against all the defendants for outrageous conduct causing severe emotional distress, but have simply swept them in as variants of what they regard as unconstitutional claims against clergy or religious institutions. Inasmuch as these causes of action are recognized forms of litigation (Freihofer v. Hearst Pub., 65 N.Y.2d 135, 490 N.Y.S.2d 735, 480 N.E.2d 349; Restatement [Second] of Torts § 46[1]), and are intentional torts, as distinguished from negligence, there is no reason why they should be dismissed at this stage.

Finally, defendant Trane asks that the derivative action by Martin's mother (the twelfth cause of action in the amended pleading) be dismissed as time- barred. He asserts that, of the primary causes of action pleaded on behalf of the infant, only the intentional tort claims are viable, and that the lapse of more than one year between Trane's alleged misconduct and the commencement of the litigation precludes the prosecution of the derivative action by the mother, who lacks the benefit of the tolling for infancy which Martin enjoys. The argument fails, however, in view of the fact that the breach and violation of trust actions, with 6-year statutes of limitation (CPLR 213[1]), have been sustained.

In sum, defendants' motions to dismiss are granted as to causes of action Nos. 7 and 8; as to the other causes of action to which motions have been addressed, the motions to dismiss are denied.

There remains the motion by the institutional defendants for a protective order against discovery sought by plaintiffs. By letter of August 6, defendants' counsel have withdrawn this motion "on the understanding that counsel's demands are limited to Father [Trane's] employment history prior to February 1, 1989 and to such communications made in the ordinary *833 course of Diocesan administrative activities", which appears to mirror the description set out in plaintiffs' attorney's letter of July 27 of the materials sought to be discovered. That 934 being so, and the Court having heard nothing by way of objection to the limitation contained in defendants' August 6 letter, the motion for a protective order is deemed withdrawn.

591 N.Y.S.2d 927, 153 Misc.2d 822

END OF DOCUMENT

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

EXHIBIT 28

99 S.Ct. 3020
61 L.Ed.2d 775
(Cite as: 443 U.S. 595, 99 S.Ct. 3020)

Briefs and Other Related Documents

Supreme Court of the United States

R. W. JONES, Sr., et al., Petitioners,
v.
Charles T. WOLF et al.

No. 78-91.

Argued Jan. 16, 1979.
Decided July 2, 1979.

In dispute over ownership of church property following schism in local church affiliated with a hierarchical church organization, the Superior Court, Bibb County, Georgia, granted judgment for majority of the local church, and appeal was taken. The Supreme Court of Georgia affirmed, 241 Ga. 208, 243 S.E.2d 860 and certiorari was granted. The Supreme Court, Mr. Justice Blackmun, held that: (1) a state is constitutionally entitled to adopt neutral principles of law as a means of adjudicating church property disputes; (2) if state has adopted a presumptive rule of majority representation, defeasible upon showing that identity of local church is to be determined by some other means, this would be consistent with both neutral principles analysis and the First Amendment, but (3) if state law provides that identity of local church is to be determined according to the "laws and regulations" of the general church, then the First Amendment requires that state courts give deference to determination of that church's identity by the authoritative ecclesiastical body.

Vacated and remanded.

Mr. Justice Powell, with whom Mr. Chief Justice Burger, Mr. Justice Stewart and Mr. Justice White joined, filed a dissenting opinion.

Opinion after remand, 244 Ga. 388, 260 S.E.2d 84.

West Headnotes

[1] Constitutional Law ⇐84.5(9)
92k84.5(9) Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 92k84)

[1] Religious Societies ⇐24
332k24 Most Cited Cases

Civil courts have general authority to resolve church property disputes, but the First Amendment severely circumscribes the role that such courts may play in resolving such disputes. U.S.C.A.Const. Amend. 1.

[2] Constitutional Law ⇐84.5(9)
92k84.5(9) Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 92k84)

[2] Religious Societies ⇐24
332k24 Most Cited Cases

The First Amendment prohibits civil courts from resolving church property disputes on the basis of religious doctrine and practice, and requires the civil courts to defer to the resolution of issues of religious doctrine or polity by the highest court of a hierarchical church organization, but subject to these limitations the First Amendment does not dictate that a state must follow a particular method of resolving church property disputes. U.S.C.A.Const. Amend. 1.

[3] Constitutional Law ⇐84.5(9)
92k84.5(9) Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 92k84)

A state is constitutionally entitled to adopt neutral principles of law, such as examination of the language of deeds, local church charters, state statutes, and provisions of constitution of general church, as a means of adjudicating church property disputes, but in undertaking such an examination the civil court must take special care to scrutinize documents in purely secular terms, and if deed, corporate charter, or constitution of general church incorporates religious concepts in a provision relating to ownership of property, so that interpretation of instruments of ownership would require civil court to resolve a religious controversy, court must defer to resolution of the doctrinal issue by the authoritative ecclesiastical body. U.S.C.A.Const. Amend. 1.

[4] Constitutional Law ⇐84.5(9)
92k84.5(9) Most Cited Cases

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

(Formerly 92k84)

The First Amendment does not require states to adopt a rule of compulsory deference to religious authority in resolving church property disputes, even where no issue of doctrinal controversy is involved. U.S.C.A.Const. Amend. 1.

[5] Constitutional Law ⇐84.5(9)
92k84.5(9) Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 92k84)

If, in resolving church property disputes, state has adopted a presumptive rule of majority representation, defeasible upon showing that identity of local church is to be determined by some other means, this will be consistent with neutral principles analysis and the First Amendment, but if state adopts rule of presumptive majority representation, it should specify how that presumption may be overcome. U.S.C.A.Const. Amend. 1.

[6] Constitutional Law ⇐84.5(7.1)
92k84.5(7.1) Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 92k84.5(7), 92k84)

If state law provides that identity of local church is to be determined according to the "laws and regulations" of general hierarchical church, First Amendment requires that state courts give deference to determination of that church's identity by the authoritative ecclesiastical body. U.S.C.A.Const. Amend. 1.

*3021 595 Syllabus [FN]

FN* The syllabus constitutes no part of the opinion of the Court but has been prepared by the Reporter of Decisions for the convenience of the reader. See United States v. Detroit Lumber Co., 200 U.S. 321, 337, 26 S.Ct. 282, 287, 50 L.Ed. 499.

This case involves a dispute over the ownership of church property following a schism in a local church affiliated with a hierarchical church organization. The property of the Vineville Presbyterian Church of Macon, Ga. (local church), is held in the names of the local church or of trustees for the local church. That church, however, was established as a member of the Augusta-Macon Presbytery of the Presbyterian Church in the United States (PCUS), which has a generally hierarchical form of government. Under the polity of the PCUS, the government of the local church is committed to its Session in the first instance, but the actions of this "court" are subject to the review and control of the higher church courts (the Presbytery, Synod, and General Assembly). At a congregational meeting attended by a quorum of the local church's members, 164 of them voted to separate from the PCUS, while 94 opposed the resolution. The majority then united with another denomination and has retained possession of the local church property. The Augusta-Macon Presbytery appointed a commission to investigate the dispute, and the commission eventually issued a ruling declaring that the minority faction constituted the "true congregation" of the local church, and withdrawing from the majority faction "all authority to exercise office derived from the [PCUS]." Representatives of the minority faction brought this class action in state court, seeking declaratory and injunctive orders establishing their right to exclusive possession and use of the local church's property as a member of the PCUS. The trial court, purporting to apply Georgia's "neutral principles of law" approach to church property disputes, granted judgment for the majority. The Georgia Supreme Court affirmed, holding that the trial court had correctly stated and applied Georgia law and rejecting the minority's challenge based on the First and Fourteenth Amendments.

Held:

1. As a means of adjudicating a church property dispute, a State is constitutionally entitled to adopt a "neutral principles of law" analysis involving consideration of the deeds, state statutes governing *3022 the holding of church property, the local church's charter, and the general church's constitution. The First Amendment does not require the States to adopt a rule of compulsory deference to religious authority in 596 resolving church property disputes, even where no issue of doctrinal controversy is involved. Pp. 3024-3027.

2. Here, the case must be remanded since the grounds for the Georgia courts' decision that the majority faction represents the local church were not articulated, both the trial court and the Georgia Supreme Court having applied Georgia's neutral-principles analysis as developed in cases involving church property disputes between general churches and entire local congregations, without alluding to the significant complicating factor in the present case that the local congregation was itself divided. If in fact Georgia has adopted a presumptive rule of majority representation, defeasible upon a showing that the identity of the local church is to be determined by some other means, this would be consistent with both the neutral-principles analysis and the First Amendment. However, there are at least some indications that under Georgia law the process of identifying the faction that represents a local church involves considerations of religious doctrine and polity, and thus if Georgia law provides that the identity of the local church here is to be determined according to the laws and regulations of the PCUS, then the First Amendment requires that the Georgia courts give deference to the presbyterial commission's determination that the minority faction represents the "true congregation." Pp. 3027-3029.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

241 Ga. 208, 243 S.E.2d 860, vacated and remanded.

E. Barrett Prettyman, Jr., Washington, D. C., for petitioners.

Frank C. Jones, Atlanta, Ga., for respondents.

*597 Mr. Justice BLACKMUN delivered the opinion of the Court.

This case involves a dispute over the ownership of church property following a schism in a local church affiliated with a hierarchical church organization. The question for decision is whether civil courts, consistent with the First and Fourteenth Amendments to the Constitution, may resolve the dispute on the basis of "neutral principles of law," or whether they must defer to the resolution of an authoritative tribunal of the hierarchical church.

I

The Vineville Presbyterian Church of Macon, Ga., was organized in 1904, and first incorporated in 1915. Its corporate charter lapsed in 1935, but was revived and renewed in 1939, and continues in effect at the present time.

The property at issue and on which the church is located was acquired in three transactions, and is evidenced by conveyances to the "Trustees of [or 'for'] Vineville Presbyterian Church and their successors in office," App. 251, 253, or simply to the "Vineville Presbyterian Church." Id., at 249. The funds used to acquire the property were contributed entirely by local church members. Pursuant to resolutions adopted by the congregation, the church repeatedly has borrowed money on the property. This indebtedness is evidenced by security deeds variously issued in the name of the "Trustees of the Vineville Presbyterian Church," e. g., id., at 278, or, again, simply the "Vineville Presbyterian Church." Id., at 299.

In the same year it was organized, the Vineville church was established as a member church of the Augusta-Macon Presbytery of the Presbyterian Church in the United States (PCUS). The PCUS has a generally hierarchical or connectional *598 form of government, as contrasted with a congregational form. Under the polity of the PCUS, the government of the local church is committed to its Session in the first instance, but the actions of this assembly or "court" are subject to the review and control 3023 of the higher church courts, the Presbytery, Synod, and General Assembly, respectively. The powers and duties of each level of the hierarchy are set forth in the constitution of the PCUS, the Book of Church Order, which is part of the record in the present case.

On May 27, 1973, at a congregational meeting of the Vineville church attended by a quorum of its duly enrolled members, 164 of them, including the pastor, voted to separate from the PCUS. Ninety-four members opposed the resolution. The majority immediately informed the PCUS of the action, and then united with another denomination, the Presbyterian Church in America. Although the minority remained on the church rolls for three years, they ceased to participate in the affairs of the Vineville church and conducted their religious activities elsewhere.

In response to the schism within the Vineville congregation, the Augusta- Macon Presbytery appointed a commission to investigate the dispute and, if possible, to resolve it. The commission eventually issued a written ruling declaring that the minority faction constituted "the true congregation of Vineville Presbyterian Church," and withdrawing from the majority faction "all authority to exercise office derived from the [PCUS]." App. 235. The majority took no part in the commission's inquiry, and did not appeal its ruling to a higher PCUS tribunal.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

Representatives of the minority faction sought relief in federal court, but their complaint was dismissed for want of jurisdiction. Lucas v. Hope, 515 F.2d 234 (CA5 1975), cert. denied, 424 U.S. 967, 96 S.Ct. 1464, 47 L.Ed.2d 734 (1976). They then brought this class action in state court, seeking declaratory and injunctive orders establishing their right to exclusive possession and use of the 599 Vineville church property as a member congregation of the PCUS. The trial court, purporting to apply Georgia's "neutral principles of law" approach to church property disputes, granted judgment for the majority. The Supreme Court of Georgia, holding that the trial court had correctly stated and applied Georgia law, and rejecting the minority's challenge based on the First and Fourteenth Amendments, affirmed. 241 Ga. 208, 243 S.E.2d 860 (1978). We granted certiorari. 439 U.S. 891, 99 S.Ct. 247, 58 L.Ed. 237 (1978).

II

Georgia's approach to church property litigation has evolved in response to Presbyterian Church v. Hull Church, 393 U.S. 440, 89 S.Ct. 601, 21 L.Ed.2d 658 (1969) (Presbyterian Church I), rev'g Presbyterian Church v. Eastern Heights Church, 224 Ga. 61, 159 S.E.2d 690 (1968). That case was a property dispute between the PCUS and two local Georgia churches that had withdrawn from the PCUS. The Georgia Supreme Court resolved the controversy by applying a theory of implied trust, whereby the property of a local church affiliated with a hierarchical church organization was deemed to be held in trust for the general church, provided the general church had not "substantially abandoned" the tenets of faith and practice as they existed at the time of affiliation. [FN1] This Court reversed, holding that Georgia would have to find some other way of resolving church property disputes that did not draw the state courts into religious controversies. The Court did not specify what that method should be, although it noted in passing that "there are neutral principles of law, developed for use in all property disputes, which can be applied without 'establishing' churches to which property is awarded." 393 U.S., at 449, 89 S.Ct., at 606.

> FN1. This is sometimes referred to as the "English approach" to resolving property disputes in hierarchical churches. See Presbyterian Church I, 393 U.S., at 443, and n. 2, 89 S.Ct., at 603; Watson v. Jones, 80 U.S. 679, 727-728, 13 Wall. 679, 727-728, 20 L.Ed. 666 (1872).

600 On remand, the Georgia Supreme Court concluded that, without the departure-from-doctrine element, the implied trust theory would have to be abandoned in its entirety. 3024Presbyterian Church v. Eastern Heights Church, 225 Ga. 259, 167 S.E.2d 658 (1969) (Presbyterian Church II). In its place, the court adopted what is now known as the "neutral principles of law" method for resolving church property disputes. The court examined the deeds to the properties, the state statutes dealing with implied trusts, Ga.Code §§ 108-106, 108-107 (1978), and the Book of Church Order to determine whether there was any basis for a trust in favor of the general church. Finding nothing that would give rise to a trust in any of these documents, the court awarded the property on the basis of legal title, which was in the local church, or in the names of trustees for the local church. 225 Ga., at 261, 167 S.E.2d, at 660. Review was again sought in this Court, but was denied. 396 U.S. 1041, 90 S.Ct. 680, 24 L.Ed.2d 685 (1970).

The neutral-principles analysis was further refined by the Georgia Supreme Court in Carnes v. Smith, 236 Ga. 30, 222 S.E.2d 322, cert. denied, 429 U.S. 868, 97 S.Ct. 180, 50 L.Ed.2d 148 (1976). That case concerned a property dispute between The United Methodist Church and a local congregation that had withdrawn from that church. As in Presbyterian Church II, the court found no basis for a trust in favor of the general church in the deeds, the corporate charter, or the state statutes dealing with implied trusts. The court observed, however, that the constitution of The United Methodist Church, its Book of Discipline, contained an express trust provision in favor of the general church. [FN2] On this basis, the church property was 601 awarded to the denominational church. 236 Ga., at 39, 222 S.E.2d, at 328.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

> FN2. The Book of Discipline of the United Methodist Church ¶ 1537 (1968), requires that > "title to all real property now owned or hereafter acquired by an unincorporated local church . . . shall be held by and/or conveyed and transferred to its duly elected trustees . . . and their successors in office . . . in trust, nevertheless, for the use and benefit of such local church and of The United Methodist Church. Every instrument of conveyance of real estate shall contain the appropriate trust clause as set forth in the Discipline (¶ 1503)" (emphasis added).
> Although in Carnes the deeds to the local church did not contain the required trust clause, The Book of Discipline provided that in the absence of a trust clause, a trust in favor of The United Methodist Church was to be implied if (a) the conveyance was to the trustees of a local church or agency of any predecessor to The United Methodist Church, or (b) the local church used the name of any predecessor to The United Methodist Church and was known to the community as a part of the denomination, or (c) the local church accepted the pastorate of ministers appointed by any predecessor to The United Methodist Church. The Book of Discipline ¶ 1503.5. The local church in Carnes satisfied all three of these conditions. 236 Ga., at 39, 222 S.E.2d, at 328.

In the present case, the Georgia courts sought to apply the neutral- principles analysis of Presbyterian Church II and Carnes to the facts presented by the Vineville church controversy. Here, as in those two earlier cases, the deeds conveyed the property to the local church. Here, as in the earlier cases, neither the state statutes dealing with implied trusts, nor the corporate charter of the Vineville church, indicated that the general church had any interest in the property. And here, as in Presbyterian Church II, but in contrast to Carnes, the provisions of the constitution of the general church, the Book of Church Order, concerning the ownership and control of property failed to reveal any language of trust in favor of the general church. The courts accordingly held that legal title to the property of the Vineville church was vested in the local congregation. Without further analysis or elaboration, they further decreed that the local congregation was represented by the majority faction, respondents herein. App. to Pet. for Cert. 9a.; 241 Ga., at 212, 243 S.E.2d, at 864.

602 III

[1][2] The only question presented by this case is which faction of the formerly united Vineville congregation is entitled to possess and enjoy the property located at 2193 Vineville Avenue in Macon, Ga. There can be little doubt about the general authority of civil courts to resolve this question. *3025 The State has an obvious and legitimate interest in the peaceful resolution of property disputes, and in providing a civil forum where the ownership of church property can be determined conclusively. Presbyterian Church I, 393 U.S., at 445, 89 S.Ct., at 604.

It is also clear, however, that "the First Amendment severely circumscribes the role that civil courts may play in resolving church property disputes." Id., at 449, 89 S.Ct., at 606. Most importantly, the First Amendment prohibits civil courts from resolving church property disputes on the basis of religious doctrine and practice. Serbian Orthodox Diocese v. Milivojevich, 426 U.S. 696, 710, 96 S.Ct. 2372, 2381, 49 L.Ed.2d 151 (1976); Maryland & Va. Churches v. Sharpsburg Church, 396 U.S. 367, 368, 90 S.Ct. 499, 500, 24 L.Ed.2d 582 (1970); Presbyterian Church I, 393 U.S., at 449, 89 S.Ct., at 606. As a corollary to this commandment, the Amendment requires that civil courts defer to the resolution of issues of religious doctrine or polity by the highest court of a hierarchical church organization. Serbian Orthodox Diocese, 426 U.S., at 724-725, 96 S.Ct., at 2387; cf. Watson v. Jones, 80 U.S. 679, 733-734, 13 Wall. 679, 733-734, 20 L.Ed. 666 (1872). Subject to these limitations, however, the First Amendment does not dictate that a State must follow a particular method of resolving church property disputes. Indeed, "a State may adopt any one of various approaches for settling church property disputes so long as it involves no consideration of doctrinal matters, whether the ritual and liturgy of worship or the tenets of faith." Maryland & Va. Churches, 396 U.S., at 368, 90 S.Ct., at 500. (BRENNAN, J., concurring) (emphasis in original).

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

[3] At least in general outline, we think the "neutral principles of law" approach is consistent with the foregoing constitutional principles. The neutral-principles approach was approved 603 in Maryland & Va. Churches, supra, an appeal from a judgment of the Court of Appeals of Maryland settling a local church property dispute on the basis of the language of the deeds, the terms of the local church charters, the state statutes governing the holding of church property, and the provisions in the constitution of the general church concerning the ownership and control of church property. Finding that this analysis entailed "no inquiry into religious doctrine," the Court dismissed the appeal for want of a substantial federal question. 396 U.S., at 368, 90 S.Ct., at 500. "Neutral principles of law" also received approving reference in Presbyterian Church I, 393 U.S., at 449, 89 S.Ct., at 606; in Mr. Justice BRENNAN's concurrence in Maryland & Va. Churches, 396 U.S., at 370, 90 S.Ct., at 501; and in Serbian Orthodox Diocese, 426 U.S., at 723 n. 15, 96 S.Ct., at 2387 [FN3].

> FN3. Indeed, even in Watson v. Jones, a common-law decision heavily relied upon by the dissent, Mr. Justice Miller, in speaking for the Court, stated that, regardless of the form of church government, it would be the "obvious duty" of a civil tribunal to enforce the "express terms" of a deed, will, or other instrument of church property ownership. 80 U.S., at 722-723, 13 Wall., at 722-723.

The primary advantages of the neutral-principles approach are that it is completely secular in operation, and yet flexible enough to accommodate all forms of religious organization and polity. The method relies exclusively on objective, well-established concepts of trust and property law familiar to lawyers and judges. It thereby promises to free civil courts completely from entanglement in questions of religious doctrine, polity, and practice. Furthermore, the neutral-principles analysis shares the peculiar genius of private-law systems in general--flexibility in ordering private rights and obligations to reflect the intentions of the parties. Through appropriate reversionary clauses and trust provisions, religious societies can specify what is to happen to church property in the event of a particular contingency, or what religious body will determine the ownership in the event of a schism or doctrinal controversy. In this manner, a religious organization 604 can *3026 ensure that a dispute over the ownership of church property will be resolved in accord with the desires of the members.

This is not to say that the application of the neutral-principles approach is wholly free of difficulty. The neutral-principles method, at least as it has evolved in Georgia, requires a civil court to examine certain religious documents, such as a church constitution, for language of trust in favor of the general church. In undertaking such an examination, a civil court must take special care to scrutinize the document in purely secular terms, and not to rely on religious precepts in determining whether the document indicates that the parties have intended to create a trust. In addition, there may be cases where the deed, the corporate charter, or the constitution of the general church incorporates religious concepts in the provisions relating to the ownership of property. If in such a case the interpretation of the instruments of ownership would require the civil court to resolve a religious controversy, then the court must defer to the resolution of the doctrinal issue by the authoritative ecclesiastical body. Serbian Orthodox Diocese, 426 U.S., at 709, 96 S.Ct., at 2380.

On balance, however, the promise of nonentanglement and neutrality inherent in the neutral-principles approach more than compensates for what will be occasional problems in application. These problems, in addition, should be gradually eliminated as recognition is given to the obligation of "States, religious organizations, and individuals [to] structure relationships involving church property so as not to require the civil courts to resolve ecclesiastical questions." Presbyterian Church I, 393 U.S., at 449, 89 S.Ct., at 606. We therefore hold that a State is constitutionally entitled to adopt neutral principles of law as a means of adjudicating a church property dispute.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

[4] The dissent would require the States to abandon the neutral-principles method, and instead would insist as a matter of constitutional law that whenever a dispute arises over the 605 ownership of church property, civil courts must defer to the "authoritative resolution of the dispute within the church itself." Post, at 3031. It would require, first, that civil courts review ecclesiastical doctrine and polity to determine where the church has "placed ultimate authority over the use of the church property." Post, at 3033. After answering this question, the courts would be required to "determine whether the dispute has been resolved within that structure of government and, if so, what decision has been made." Post, at 3033 n. 6. They would then be required to enforce that decision. We cannot agree, however, that the First Amendment requires the States to adopt a rule of compulsory deference to religious authority in resolving church property disputes, even where no issue of doctrinal controversy is involved.

The dissent suggests that a rule of compulsory deference would somehow involve less entanglement of civil courts in matters of religious doctrine, practice, and administration. Under its approach, however, civil courts would always be required to examine the polity and administration of a church to determine which unit of government has ultimate control over church property. In some cases, this task would not prove to be difficult. But in others, the locus of control would be ambiguous, and "[a] careful examination of the constitutions of the general and local church, as well as other relevant documents, [would] be necessary to ascertain the form of governance adopted by the members of the religious association." Post, at 3034. In such cases, the suggested rule would appear to require "a searching and therefore impermissible inquiry into church polity." Serbian Orthodox Diocese, 426 U.S., at 723, 96 S.Ct., at 2387. The neutral-principles approach, in contrast, obviates entirely the need for an analysis or examination of ecclesiastical polity or doctrine in settling church property disputes.

The dissent also argues that a rule of compulsory deference is necessary in order to protect the free exercise rights "of 606 those who have formed the association and submitted *3027 themselves to its authority." Post, at 3033. This argument assumes that the neutral-principles method would somehow frustrate the free-exercise rights of the members of a religious association. Nothing could be further from the truth. The neutral-principles approach cannot be said to "inhibit" the free exercise of religion, any more than do other neutral provisions of state law governing the manner in which churches own property, hire employees, or purchase goods. Under the neutral-principles approach, the outcome of a church property dispute is not foreordained. At any time before the dispute erupts, the parties can ensure, if they so desire, that the faction loyal to the hierarchical church will retain the church property. They can modify the deeds or the corporate charter to include a right of reversion or trust in favor of the general church. Alternatively, the constitution of the general church can be made to recite an express trust in favor of the denominational church. The burden involved in taking such steps will be minimal. And the civil courts will be bound to give effect to the result indicated by the parties, provided it is embodied in some legally cognizable form. [FN4]

> FN4. Given that the Georgia Supreme Court clearly enunciated its intent to follow the neutral-principles analysis in Presbyterian Church II and Carnes, this case does not involve a claim that retroactive application of a neutral-principles approach infringes free-exercise rights.

IV

It remains to be determined whether the Georgia neutral-principles analysis was constitutionally applied on the facts of this case. Although both the trial court and the Supreme Court of Georgia viewed the case as involving nothing more than an application of the principles developed in Presbyterian Church II and in Carnes, the present case contains a significant complicating factor absent in each of those earlier cases. Presbyterian Church II and Carnes each involved a 607 church property dispute between the general church and the entire local congregation. Here, the local congregation was itself divided between a majority of 164 members who sought to withdraw from the PCUS, and a minority of 94 members who wished to maintain the affiliation. Neither of the state courts alluded to this problem, however; each concluded without discussion or analysis that the title to the property was in the local church and that the local church was represented by the majority rather than the minority.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

Petitioners earnestly submit that the question of which faction is the true representative of the Vineville church is an ecclesiastical question that cannot be answered by a civil court. At least, it is said, it cannot be answered by a civil court in a case involving a hierarchical church, like the PCUS, where a duly appointed church commission has determined which of the two factions represents the "true congregation." Respondents, in opposition, argue in effect that the Georgia courts did no more than apply the ordinary presumption that, absent some indication to the contrary, a voluntary religious association is represented by a majority of its members.

[5] If in fact Georgia has adopted a presumptive rule of majority representation, defeasible upon a showing that the identity of the local church is to be determined by some other means, we think this would be consistent with both the neutral-principles analysis and the First Amendment. Majority rule is generally employed in the governance of religious societies. See Bouldin v. Alexander, 82 U.S. 131, 15 Wall. 131, 21 L.Ed. 69 (1872). Furthermore, the majority faction generally can be identified without resolving any question of religious doctrine or polity. Certainly, there was no dispute in the present case about the identity of the duly enrolled members of the Vineville church when the dispute arose, or about the fact that a quorum was present, or about the final vote. Most importantly, any rule of majority representation can always be overcome, under the neutral-principles approach, either by providing, in the corporate 608 charter or the constitution 3028 of the general church, that the identity of the local church is to be established in some other way, or by providing that the church property is held in trust for the general church and those who remain loyal to it. Indeed, the State may adopt any method of overcoming the majoritarian presumption, so long as the use of that method does not impair free-exercise rights or entangle the civil courts in matters of religious controversy. [FN5]

FN5. If the Georgia Supreme Court adopts a rule of presumptive majority representation on remand, then it should also specify how, under Georgia law, that presumption may be overcome. Because these critical issues of state law remain undetermined, we, unlike the dissent, express no view as to the ultimate outcome of the controversy if the Georgia Supreme Court adopts a presumptive rule of majority representation.

[6] Neither the trial court nor the Supreme Court of Georgia, however, explicitly stated that it was adopting a presumptive rule of majority representation. [FN6] Moreover, there are at least some indications that under Georgia law the process of identifying the faction that represents the Vineville church involves considerations of religious doctrine and polity. Georgia law requires that "church property be held according to the terms of the church government," and provides that a local church affiliated with a hierarchical religious association "is part of the whole body of the general church and is subject to the higher authority of the organization and its laws and regulations." 609 Carnes v. Smith, 236 Ga., at 33, 38, 222 S.E.2d, at 325, 328; see Ga.Code §§ 22-5507, 22-5508 (1978). All this may suggest that the identity of the "Vineville Presbyterian Church" named in the deeds must be determined according to terms of the Book of Church Order, which sets out the laws and regulations of churches affiliated with the PCUS. Such a determination, however, would appear to require a civil court to pass on questions of religious doctrine, [FN7] and to usurp the function of the commission appointed by the Presbytery, which already has determined that petitioners represent the "true congregation" of the Vineville church. Therefore, if Georgia law provides that the identity of the Vineville church is to be determined according to the "laws and regulations" of the PCUS, then the First Amendment requires that the Georgia courts give deference to the presbyterial commission's determination of that church's identity. [FN8]

FN6. The Georgia Code contains the following provision dealing with the identity of a religious corporation:

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

"The majority of those who adhere to its organization and doctrines represent the church. The withdrawal by one part of a congregation from the original body, or uniting with another church or denomination, is a relinquishment of all rights in the church abandoned." Ga.Code § 22-5504 (1978).
The trial court noted that the defendants (respondents here) did not claim any right of possession of the Vineville church property under this section. App. to Pet. for Cert. 6a. The Georgia Supreme Court did not mention the provision.

FN7. Issues of church doctrine and polity pervade the provisions of the Book of Church Order of the Presbyterian Church (1972) dealing with the identity of the local congregation. The local church corporation consists of "all the communing members on the active roll" of the church. Id., § 6-2; App. 35. The "active roll," in turn, is composed "of those admitted to the Lord's Table who are active in the church's life and work." § 8-7; App. 38. The Session is given the power "to suspend or exclude from the Lord's Supper those found delinquent, according to the Rules of Discipline." § 15-6(2); App. 51. See § 111-2; App. 124. The Session is subject to "the review and control" of the Presbytery, § 14-5; App. 49, as a part of the Presbytery's general authority to "order whatever pertains to the spiritual welfare of the churches under its care." § 16-7(19); App. 56.

FN8. There is no suggestion in this case that the decision of the commission was the product of "fraud" or "collusion." See Serbian Orthodox Diocese v. Milivojevich, 426 U.S. 696, 713, 96 S.Ct. 2372, 2382 (1976). In the absence of such circumstances, "the First and Fourteenth Amendments mandate that civil courts shall not disturb the decisions of the highest ecclesiastical tribunal within a church of hierarchical polity, but must accept such decisions as binding on them, in their application to the religious issues of doctrine or polity before them." Id., 426 U.S., at 709, 96 S.Ct., at 2380.

This Court, of course, does not declare what the law of Georgia is. Since the 3029 grounds for the decision that respondents *610 represent the Vineville church remain unarticulated, the judgment of the Supreme Court of Georgia is vacated, and the case is remanded for further proceedings not inconsistent with this opinion.

It is so ordered.

Mr. Justice POWELL, with whom THE CHIEF JUSTICE, Mr. Justice STEWART, and Mr. Justice WHITE join, dissenting.

This case presents again a dispute among church members over the control of a local church's property. Although the Court appears to accept established principles that I have thought would resolve this case, it superimposes on these principles a new structure of rules that will make the decision of these cases by civil courts more difficult. The new analysis also is more likely to invite intrusion into church polity forbidden by the First Amendment.

I

The Court begins by stating that "[t]his case involves a dispute over the ownership of church property," ante, at 3022, suggesting that the concern is with legal or equitable ownership in the real property sense. But the ownership of the property of the Vineville church is not at issue. The deeds place title in the Vineville Presbyterian Church, or in trustees of that church, and none of the parties has questioned the validity of those deeds. The question actually presented is which of the factions within the local congregation has the right to control the actions of the titleholder, and thereby to control the use of the property, as the Court later acknowledges. Ante,, at 3024.

Since 1872 disputes over control of church property usually have been resolved under principles established by Watson v. Jones, 80 U.S.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

679, 13 Wall. 679, 20 L.Ed. 666 (1872). Under the new and complex, two-stage analysis approved today, a court instead first must apply newly defined "neutral principles of law" to determine 611 whether property titled to the local church is held in trust for the general church organization with which the local church is affiliated. If it is, then the court will grant control of the property to the councils of the general church. If not, then control by the local congregation will be recognized. In the latter situation, if there is a schism in the local congregation, as in this case, the second stage of the new analysis becomes applicable. Again, the Court fragments the analysis into two substeps for the purpose of determining which of the factions should control the property.

As this new approach inevitably will increase the involvement of civil courts in church controversies, and as it departs from long-established precedents, I dissent.

A

The first stage in the "neutral principles of law" approach operates as a restrictive rule of evidence. A court is required to examine the deeds to the church property, the charter of the local church (if there is one), the book of order or discipline of the general church organization, and the state statutes governing the holding of church property. The object of the inquiry, where the title to the property is in the local church, is "to determine whether there [is] any basis for a trust in favor of the general church." Ante, at 3024. The court's investigation is to be "completely secular," "rel[ying] exclusively on objective, well-established concepts of trust and property law familiar to lawyers and judges." Ante, at 3025. Thus, where religious documents such as church constitutions or books of order must be examined "for language of trust in favor of the general church," "a civil court must take special care to scrutinize the document in purely secular terms, and not to rely on religious precepts in determining whether the document indicates that the parties have intended to create a trust." Ante, at 3026. It follows that the civil courts using this analysis may consider the form of religious government 612 adopted by the church members for the resolution of intrachurch disputes only if *3030 that polity has been stated, in express relation to church property, in the language of trust and property law. [FN1]

FN1. Despite the Court's assertion to the contrary, ante, at 3025, this "neutral principles" approach was not approved by the Court in dismissing the appeal, Maryland & Va. Eldership v. Sharpsburg Church, 254 Md. 162, 254 A.2d 162 (1969). 396 U.S. 367, 90 S.Ct. 499, 24 L.Ed.2d 582 (1970). The state court there examined the constitution of the general church, the charters of the local churches, the deeds to the property at issue, and the relevant state statutes. But it did not restrict its inquiry to a search for statements expressed in the language of trust and property law; see 254 Md., at 169-176, 254 A.2d, at 168- 170. Rather, the state court canvassed all of these sources, and others, see Maryland & Va. Eldership v. Sharpsburg Church, 249 Md. 650, 665-668, 241 A.2d 691, 700-701 (1968), for information about the basic polity of the Church of God. Having concluded that the local congregations retained final authority over their property, it awarded judgment accordingly. Contrary to the statement of the Court in the present case that such an inquiry into church polity requires analysis of "ecclesiastical . . . doctrine," ante, at 3026, "the Maryland court's resolution of the dispute involved no inquiry into religious doctrine." 396 U.S., at 368, 90 S.Ct., at 500.
In Presbyterian Church v. Hull Church, 393 U.S. 440, 89 S.Ct. 601, 21 L.Ed.2d 658 (1969), "neutral principles" were referred to in passing, but were never described. Id., at 449, 89 S.Ct., at 606. What the Court refers to as an "approving reference" to "neutral principles" in Serbian Orthodox Diocese v. Milivojevich, 426 U.S. 696, 96 S.Ct. 2372, 49 L.Ed.2d 151 (1976), was only an acknowledgment in a footnote that "[n]o claim is made that the 'formal title' doctrine by which church property disputes may be decided in civil courts is to be applied in this case." Id., at 723 n. 15, 96 S.Ct., at 2387. Nor can the Court find support for its position in Watson v. Jones, 80 U.S. 679, 724-729, 13

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

Wall. 679, 724-729, 20 L.Ed. 666 (1872). [FN2]

One effect of the Court's evidentiary rule is to deny to the courts relevant evidence as to the religious polity--that is, the form of governance--adopted by the church members. The constitutional documents of churches tend to be drawn in terms of religious precepts. Attempting to read them "in purely secular terms" is more likely to promote confusion than understanding. Moreover, whenever religious polity has not been expressed in specific statements referring to the property 613 of a church, there will be no evidence of that polity cognizable under the neutral-principles rule. Lacking such evidence, presumably a court will impose some rule of church government derived from state law. In the present case, for example, the general and unqualified authority of the Presbytery over the actions of the Vineville church had not been expressed in secular terms of control of its property. As a consequence, the Georgia courts could find no acceptable evidence of this authoritative relationship, and they imposed instead a congregational form of government determined from state law.

This limiting of the evidence relative to religious government cannot be justified on the ground that it "free[s] civil courts completely from entanglement in questions of religious doctrine, polity, and practice." Ante, at 3025. For unless the body identified as authoritative under state law resolves the underlying dispute in accord with the decision of the church's own authority, the state court effectively will have reversed the decisions of doctrine and practice made in accordance with church law. The schism in the Vineville church, for example, resulted from disagreements among the church members over questions of doctrine and practice. App. 233. Under the Book of Church Order, these questions were resolved authoritatively by the higher church courts, which then gave control of the local church to the faction loyal to that resolution. The Georgia courts, as a matter of state law, granted control to the schismatic faction, and thereby effectively reversed the doctrinal decision of the church courts. This indirect interference by the civil courts with the resolution of religious disputes within the church is no less proscribed by the First Amendment than is the direct decision of questions of doctrine and practice.

FN2. The neutral-principles approach appears to assume that the requirements of the Constitution will be satisfied if civil courts are forbidden to consider certain types of evidence. The First Amendment's Religion Clauses, however, are meant to protect churches and their members from civil law interference, not to protect the courts from having to decide difficult evidentiary questions. Thus, the evidentiary rules to be applied in cases involving intrachurch disputes over church property should be fashioned to avoid interference with the resolution of the dispute within the accepted church government. The neutral-principles approach consists instead of a rule of evidence that ensures that in some cases the courts will impose a form of church government and a doctrinal resolution at odds with that reached by the church's own authority.

The neutral-principles approach creates other difficulties. It imposes on the organization of churches additional legal requirements which in some cases might inhibit their formation by forcing the organizers to confront issues that otherwise might never arise. It also could precipitate church property disputes, for existing churches may deem it necessary, in light of today's decision, to revise their constitutional documents, charters, and deeds to include a specific statement of church polity in the language of property and trust law.

614 3031 When civil courts step in to resolve intrachurch disputes over control of church property, they will either support or overturn the authoritative resolution of the dispute within the church itself. The new analysis, under the attractive banner of "neutral principles," actually invites the civil courts to do the latter. The proper rule of decision, that I thought had been settled until today, requires a court to give effect in all cases to the decisions of the church government agreed upon by the members before the dispute arose.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

B

The Court's basic neutral-principles approach, as a means of isolating decisions concerning church property from other decisions made within the church, relies on the concept of a trust of local church property in favor of the general church. Because of this central premise, the neutral-principles rule suffices to settle only disputes between the central councils of a church organization and a unanimous local congregation. Where, as here, the neutral- principles inquiry reveals no trust in favor of the general church, and the local congregation is split into factions, the basic question remains unresolved: which faction should have control of the local church?

*615 The Court acknowledges that the church law of the Presbyterian Church in the United States (PCUS), of which the Vineville church is a part, provides for the authoritative resolution of this question by the Presbytery. Ante, at 3028, and n. 7. Indeed, the Court indicates that Georgia, consistently with the First Amendment, may adopt the Watson v. Jones rule of adherence to the resolution of the dispute according to church law--a rule that would necessitate reversal of the judgment for the respondents. Ante, at 3028. But instead of requiring the state courts to take this approach, the Court approves as well an alternative rule of state law: the Georgia courts are said to be free to "adop[t] a presumptive rule of majority representation, defeasible upon a showing that the identity of the local church is to be determined by some other means." Ante, at 3027. This showing may be made by proving that the church has "provid[ed], in the corporate charter or the constitution of the general church, that the identity of the local church is to be established in some other way." Ante, at 3028.

On its face, this rebuttable presumption also requires reversal of the state court's judgment in favor of the schismatic faction. The polity of the PCUS commits to the Presbytery the resolution of the dispute within the local church. Having shown this structure of church government for the determination of the identity of the local congregation, the petitioners have rebutted any presumption that this question has been left to a majority vote of the local congregation.

The Court nevertheless declines to order reversal. Rather than decide the case here in accordance with established First Amendment principles, the Court leaves open the possibility that the state courts might adopt some restrictive evidentiary rule that would render the petitioners' evidence3032 inadequate to overcome the presumption of majority control. Ante, at 3028 n. 5. But, aside from a passing reference to the use of the neutral-principles approach developed earlier in its *616 opinion, [FN3] the Court affords no guidance as to the constitutional limitations on such an evidentiary rule; the state courts, it says, are free to adopt any rule that is constitutional.

> FN3. Ante, at 3027-3028. Such a use would be an extension of this restrictive rule of evidence, and one likely to exacerbate further the interference with free religious exercise. See supra, at 3030-3031. Not only will a local congregation of a general hierarchical church be treated as an independent congregational church unless the rules of church government have been expressed in specified documents with explicit reference to church property, in addition, all local congregations will be regarded as having a rule of majority control unless they have related their general voting rules explicitly to disputes about church property. As a consequence, the resolution of doctrinal disputes within the polity chosen by the church members often will be overturned by the civil courts, an interference with religious exercise that cannot be squared with the First Amendment.

> "Indeed, the state may adopt any method of overcoming the majoritarian presumption, so long as the use of that method does not impair free-exercise rights or entangle the civil courts in matters of religious controversy." Ante, at 3028.

In essence, the Court's instructions on remand therefore allow the state courts the choice of following the long-settled rule of Watson v. Jones or of adopting some other rule--unspecified by the Court--that the state courts view as consistent with the First Amendment. Not only questions of state law but also important issues of federal constitutional law thus are left to the state courts for their decision, and, if they depart from Watson v. Jones, they will travel a course left totally uncharted by this Court.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

II

Disputes among church members over the control of church property arise almost invariably out of disagreements regarding doctrine and practice. Because of the religious nature of these disputes, civil courts should decide them according to principles that do not interfere with the free exercise of religion in accordance with church polity and doctrine. 617Serbian Orthodox Diocese v. Milivojevich*, 426 U.S. 696, 709, 720, 96 S.Ct. 2372, 2380-2385, 49 L.Ed.2d 151 (1976); Presbyterian Church v. Hull Church, 393 U.S. 440, 445-446, 449, 89 S.Ct. 601, 604, 606, 21 L.Ed.2d 658 (1969); Kedroff v. Saint Nicholas Cathedral, 344 U.S. 94, 107, 73 S.Ct. 143, 149, 97 L.Ed. 120 (1952); id., at 121-122, 73 S.Ct., at 157 (Frankfurter, J., concurring). See also Kreshik v. Saint Nicholas Cathedral, 363 U.S. 190, 80 S.Ct. 1037, 4 L.Ed.2d 1140 (1960); Maryland & Va. Eldership v. Sharpsburg Church, 254 Md. 162, 254 A.2d 162 (1969), appeal dismissed for want of substantial federal question, 396 U.S. 367, 90 S.Ct. 499, 24 L.Ed.2d 582 (1970). The only course that achieves this constitutional requirement is acceptance by civil courts of the decisions reached within the polity chosen by the church members themselves. The classic statement of this view is found in Watson v. Jones, 13 Wall., at 728-729: [FN4]

> "The right to organize voluntary religious associations to assist in the expression and dissemination of any religious doctrine, and to create tribunals for the decision of controverted questions of faith within the association, and for the ecclesiastical government of all the individual *3033 members, congregations, and officers within the general association, is unquestioned. All who unite themselves to such a body do so with an implied consent to this government, and are bound to submit to it. But it would be a vain consent and would lead to the total subversion of such religious bodies, if any one aggrieved by one of their decisions could appeal to the secular courts and have them reversed. It is of the essence of these religious 618 unions, and of their right to establish tribunals for the decision of questions arising among themselves, that those decisions should be binding in all cases of ecclesiastical cognizance, subject only to such appeals as the organism itself provides for."

Accordingly, in each case involving an intrachurch dispute--including disputes over church property--the civil court must focus directly on ascertaining, and then following, the decision made within the structure of church governance. By doing so, the court avoids two equally unacceptable departures from the genuine neutrality mandated by the First Amendment. First, it refrains from direct review and revision of decisions of the church on matters of religious doctrine and practice that underlie the church's determination of intrachurch controversies, including those that relate to control of church property. [FN5] Equally important, by recognizing the authoritative resolution reached within the religious association, the civil court avoids interfering indirectly with the religious governance of those who have formed the association and submitted themselves to its authority. See supra, at 3030-3031; Watson v. Jones, supra, 80 U.S., at 728-729; Kedroff v. Saint Nicholas Cathedral, supra, 344 U.S., at 107-110, 73 S.Ct., at 149-151.

FN4. Watson v. Jones was decided at a time when the First Amendment was not considered to be applicable to the States through the Fourteenth Amendment, and before Erie R. Co. v. Tompkins, 304 U.S. 64, 58 S.Ct. 817, 82 L.Ed. 1188 (1938), made state law applicable in diversity cases. But beginning with Kedroff v. Saint Nicholas Cathedral, 344 U.S., at 116, 73 S.Ct., at 154, this Court has indicated repeatedly that the principles of general federal law announced in Watson v. Jones are now regarded as rooted in the First Amendment, and are applicable to the States through the Fourteenth Amendment. Presbyterian Church v. Hull Church, 393 U.S., at 447-448, 89 S.Ct., at 605; Serbian Orthodox Diocese v. Milivojevich, 426 U.S., at 710-711, 96 S.Ct., at 2381.

FN5. Thus, in Presbyterian Church v. Hull

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

Church, supra, the Court forbade the use of the "English approach" in the resolution of church property disputes because it requires the civil courts to determine whether authoritative decisions of doctrine and practice are consistent with the longstanding tenets of faith of a particular church. 393 U.S., at 449- 450, 89 S.Ct., at 606; accord, Watson v. Jones, supra, 13 Wall., at 727-729. Similarly, in Serbian Orthodox Diocese v. Milivojevich, supra, the control of church property turned on the resolution of questions of doctrine and practice, "which under our cases is [only] for ecclesiastical and not civil tribunals." 426 U.S., at 709, 96 S.Ct., at 2380; see id ., at 720, 96 S.Ct., at 2385.

III

Until today, and under the foregoing authorities, the first question presented in a case involving an intrachurch dispute over church property was where within the religious association 619 the rules of polity, accepted by its members before the schism, had placed ultimate authority over the use of the church property. [FN6] The courts, in answering this question have recognized two broad categories of church government. One is congregational, in which authority over questions of church doctrine, practice, and administration rests entirely in the local congregation or some body within it. In disputes over the control and use of the property of such a church, the civil courts enforce the authoritative resolution of the controversy within the local church itself. Watson v. Jones, supra, 80 U.S., at 724-726. The second is hierarchical, in which the local church is but an integral and subordinate part of a larger church and is under the authority of the general church. Since the decisions of the local congregation are subject to review by the tribunals of the church hierarchy, this Court has held that the civil courts must give effect to the duly made decisions of the highest body within the hierarchy that has considered the dispute. As we stated in Serbian Orthodox Diocese v. Milivojevich:

FN6. After answering this question, of course, the civil court must determine whether the dispute has been resolved within that structure of government and, if so, what decision has been made.

"[T]he First and Fourteenth Amendments permit hierarchical religious organizations to establish their own rules and regulations for internal discipline and government, and to create tribunals for adjudicating disputes over these matters. When this choice is exercised and ecclesiastical *3034 tribunals are created to decide disputes over the government and direction of subordinate bodies, the Constitution requires that civil courts accept their decisions as binding upon them." 426 U.S., at 724-725, 96 S.Ct., at 2387, 2888 (emphasis added). [FN7]

FN7. Accord, Kedroff v. Saint Nicholas Cathedral, supra, 344 U.S., at 113-114, 73 S.Ct., at 153; Watson v. Jones, supra, 80 U.S., at 727.

A careful examination of the constitutions of the general 620 and local church, as well as other relevant documents, may be necessary to ascertain the form of governance adopted by the members of the religious association. But there is no reason to restrict the courts to statements of polity related directly to church property. For the constitutionally necessary limitations are imposed not on the evidence to be considered but instead on the object of the inquiry, which is both limited and clear: the civil court must determine whether the local church remains autonomous, so that its members have unreviewable authority to withdraw it (and its property) from the general church, or whether the local church is inseparably integrated into and subordinate to the general church. [FN8]

FN8. See Kauper, Church Autonomy and the First Amendment: the Presbyterian Church Case, in Church and State: The Supreme Court and the First Amendment 90-92, 97-98 (P. Kurland ed. 1975). The Court suggests that the careful consideration of church constitutions and other relevant documents as a prerequisite to deciding basic questions of church polity may be impermissible if it requires a "searching . . . inquiry into church polity." Ante, at 3026, quoting Serbian Orthodox Diocese v. Milivojevich, 426 U.S., at 723, 96 S.Ct., at 2387. The issue in Serbian Orthodox Diocese, however, was quite different. There, the hierarchical polity of the church was clear. Id., at 715-717, 96 S.Ct., at 2383-2384. What the Court held impermissible was the state court's further inquiry into the faithfulness of the church hierarchy's decisions to the detailed provisions of church law. Id., at 712-713, 718, 721-723, 96 S.Ct., at 2381-2382, 2386-2387; id., at 725, 96 S.Ct., at 2387 (WHITE, J., concurring).

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

IV

The principles developed in prior decisions thus afford clear guidance in the case before us. The Vineville church is presbyterian, a part of the PCUS. The presbyterian form of church government, adopted by the PCUS, is "a hierarchical structure of tribunals which consists of, in ascending order, (1) the Church Session, composed of the elders of the local church; (2) the Presbytery, composed of several churches in a geographical area; (3) the Synod, generally composed of all Presbyteries within a State; and (4) the General Assembly, the highest governing body." 621Presbyterian Church v. Hull Church*, 393 U.S., at 442, 89 S.Ct., at 602. The Book of Church Order subjects the Session to "review and control" by the Presbytery in all matters, even authorizing the Presbytery to replace the leadership of the local congregation, to winnow its membership, and to take control of it. No provision of the Book of Church Order gives the Session the authority to withdraw the local church from the PCUS; similarly, no section exempts such a decision by the local church from review by the Presbytery.

Thus, while many matters, including the management of the church property, are committed in the first instance to the Session and congregation of the local church, their actions are subject to review by the Presbytery. Here, the Presbytery exercised its authority over the local church, removing the dissidents from church office, asserting direct control over the government of the church, and recognizing the petitioners as the legitimate congregation and Session of the church. It is undisputed that under the established government of the Presbyterian Church--accepted by the members of the church before the schism--the use and control of the church property have been determined authoritatively to be in the petitioners. Accordingly, under the principles I have thought were settled, there is no occasion for the further examination of the law of Georgia that the Court directs. On remand, the Georgia courts should be directed to enter judgment for the petitioners.

99 S.Ct. 3020, 443 U.S. 595, 61 L.Ed.2d 775

Briefs and Other Related Documents (Back to top)

- 1979 WL 199554 (Appellate Brief) Petitioners' Reply Brief (Jan. 04, 1979)

- 1978 WL 206968 (Appellate Brief) Amicus Curiae Brief of the Anglican Catholic Church (Dec. 21, 1978)

- 1978 WL 206967 (Appellate Brief) Brief of United States Catholic Conference Amicus Curiae (Nov. 30, 1978)

- 1978 WL 206966 (Appellate Brief) Brief Amicus Curiae of the General Council on Finance and Administration of the United Methodist Church (Nov. 24, 1978)

- 1978 WL 206962 (Appellate Brief) Brief for the Petitioners (Nov. 22, 1978)

- 1978 WL 206965 (Appellate Brief) Brief for the Presbyterian Church in the United States as Amicus Curiae in Support of Petitioners (Nov. 22, 1978)

- 1978 WL 206964 (Appellate Brief) Brief of Amicus Curiae, William P. Thompson, Stated Clerk of the General Assembly of The United Presbyterian Church in the United States of America, in Which Officers of 8 other Denominations Join.%g*%g (Nov. 21, 1978)

- 1978 WL 206963 (Appellate Brief) Brief for Respondents (Oct. Term 1978)

END OF DOCUMENT

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

BLUEBIRD (888) 477-0700
OFFICE SUPPLIES www.bluebirdonline.com

EXHIBIT 29

73 S.Ct. 143
97 L.Ed. 120
(Cite as: 344 U.S. 94, 73 S.Ct. 143)

Supreme Court of the United States

KEDROFF et al.
v.
ST. NICHOLAS CATHEDRAL OF RUSSIAN ORTHODOX CHURCH IN NORTH AMERICA.

No. 3.

Reargued Oct. 14, 1952.
Decided Nov. 24, 1952.

Ejectment action. The Supreme Court of New York, Trial Term, 192 Misc. 327, 77 N.Y.S.2d 333, rendered judgment dismissing the complaint on the merits, and the plaintiff appealed. The Supreme Court of New York, Appellate Division, Callahan, J., 276 App.Div. 309, 94 N.Y.S.2d 453, affirmed, and the plaintiff appealed. The Court of Appeals of New York, 302 N.Y. 1, 96 N.E.2d 56, reversed the judgments and directed judgment for the plaintiff, and the defendants appealed. The Supreme Court, Mr. Justice Reed, held that Religious Corporations Law N.Y. s 105 et seq., undertaking to transfer control of New York churches of Russian Orthodox religion from central governing hierarchy of the Russian Orthodox Church, the Patriarch of Moscow and the Holy Synod, to governing authorities of Russian Church in America, a church organization limited to the diocese of North America and the Aleutian Islands, is unconstitutional as prohibiting the free exercise of religion.

Reversed and remanded.

Mr. Justice Jackson, dissented.

West Headnotes

[1] Federal Courts ⇐505
170Bk505 Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 106k394(10))

Where New York Court of Appeals made its determination on authority of New York statute against appellants' contention that such statute, as construed, violated the Fourteenth Amendment to federal Constitution, the Supreme Court, on appeal to it, would determine the constitutional issue on the merits. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 14.

[2] Federal Courts ⇐386
170Bk386 Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 106k366(1))

The interpretation placed by New York Court of Appeals on New York statute was binding on Supreme Court.

[3] Constitutional Law ⇐36
92k36 Most Cited Cases

While Legislature is free to act upon such information as it may have as to the necessity for legislation, an enactment by the Legislature cannot validate action which Constitution prohibits.

[4] Religious Societies ⇐2
332k2 Most Cited Cases

[4] Constitutional Law ⇐84.5(7.1)
92k84.5(7.1) Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 92k84.5(7), 92k274)

The New York statute undertaking to transfer control of the New York churches of the Russian Orthodox religion from the central governing hierarchy of the Russian Orthodox Church, the Patriarch of Moscow and the Holy Synod, to the governing authorities of the Russian Church in America, a church organization limited to the diocese of North America and the Aleutian Islands, is unconstitutional as prohibiting the free exercise of religion. Religious Corporations Law N.Y. §§ 105 et seq., 107; U.S.C.A.Const. Amends. 1, 14.

[5] Insurrection and Sedition ⇐2
218k2 Most Cited Cases

The Legislature has the power to punish subversive action.

[6] Insurrection and Sedition ⇐2
218k2 Most Cited Cases

If subversive action which has been made punishable by the Legislature should be actually attempted by a cleric, neither his robe nor his pulpit would be a defense.

[7] Religious Societies ⇐1

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

332k1 Most Cited Cases

"Hierarchical churches" are those organized as a body with other churches having similar faith and doctrine with a common ruling convocation or ecclesiastical head.

[8] Constitutional Law ⇐84.5(10)
92k84.5(10) Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 92k274)

Freedom to select the clergy, where there are no improper methods of choice, has federal constitutional protection as a part of the free exercise of religion against state interference. U.S.C.A. Const.Amends. 1, 14.

Federal Courts ⇐386
170Bk386 Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 106k366(1))

Interpretation of New York statute by Court of Appeals of New York is conclusive upon United States Supreme Court.

*143 *95 Mr. Philip Adler, New York City, for appellants.

Mr. Ralph Montgomery Arkush, New York City, for appellee.

Mr. Justice REED delivered the opinion of the Court.

*144 The right to the use and occupancy of a church in the city of New York is in dispute.

The right to such use is claimed by appellee, a corporation created in 1925 by an act of the Legislature of New York, Laws of New York 1925, c. 463, for the purpose of acquiring a cathedral for the Russian Orthodox Church in North America as a central place of worship and residence of the ruling archbishop 'in accordance with the doctrine, discipline and worship of the Holy Apostolic Catholic Church of Eastern Confession as taught by the holy scriptures, holy tradition, seven ecumenical councils and holy fathers of that church.'

The corporate right is sought to be enforced so that the head of the American churches, religiously affiliated with the Russian Orthodox Church, may occupy the 96 Cathedral. At the present time that head is the Metropolitan of All America and Canada, the Archbishop of New York, Leonty, who like his predecessors was elected to his ecclesiastical office by a sobor of the American churches. [FN1]

FN1. A sobor is a convention of bishops, clergymen and laymen with superior powers, with the assistance of which the church officials rule their dioceses or districts.

There is no problem of title. It is in the appellee corporation. The issue is the right of use. St. Nicholas Cathedral of Russian Orthodox Church in North America v. Kedroff, 302 N.Y. 1, 20, 96 N.E.2d 56, 66.

The deed to the Cathedral Corporation required the grantee to hold the property in accordance with the terms of the Act of 1925, set out at the opening of this opinion. As said by the Court of Appeals, 302 N.Y. at page 20, 96 N.E.2d at page 66 :

'Plaintiff does not dispute this trust theory, but on the contrary relies upon it. Plaintiff has endeavored to prove that the beneficial use of the property today rightfully belongs to the Russian church in America, Religious Corporations Law, s 105, which was forced to declare its administrative autonomy at the Detroit sobor of 1924 in order to preserve and adhere to those principles and practices fundamental to the Russian Orthodox faith, free from the influence of an atheistic and antireligious foreign civil government.'

See also Religious Corporations Law, McKinney's Consol.Laws, c. 51, s 5.

That claimed right of the corporation to use and occupancy for the archbishop chosen by the American churches is opposed by appellants who are in possession. Benjamin Fedchenkoff bases his right on an appointment in 1934 by the Supreme Church Authority of the Russian Orthodox Church, to wit, the Patriarch locum tenens of Moscow and all Russia and its Holy Synod, as Archbishop of the Archdiocese of North America and the Aleutian

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

Islands. The other defendant-appellant is a priest of the Russian Orthodox Church, also acknowledging the spiritual and administrative control of the Moscow hierarchy.

Determination of the right to use and occupy Saint Nicholas depends upon whether the appointment of Benjamin *97 by the Patriarch or the election of the Archbishop for North America by the convention of the American churches validly selects the ruling hierarch for the American churches. The Court of Appeals of New York, reversing the lower court, determined that the prelate appointed by the Moscow ecclesiastical authorities was not entitled to the Cathedral and directed the entry of a judgment that appellee corporation be reinvested with the possession and administration of the temporalities of St. Nicholas Cathedral. St. Nicholas Cathedral of Russian Orthodox Church in North America v. Kedroff, 302 N.Y. 1, 33, 96 N.E.2d 56, 74. This determination was made on the authority of Article 5--C of the Religious Corporations Law of New York, 302 N.Y. at page 24 et seq., 96 N.E.2d at page 68, against appellants' contention that this New York statute, as construed, violated the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

[1] Because of the constitutional questions thus generally involved, we noted probable jurisdiction, and, after argument 145 and submission of the case last term, ordered reargument and requested counsel to include a discussion of whether the judgment might be sustained on state grounds. 343 U.S. 972, 72 S.Ct. 1069. Both parties concluded that it could not, and the unequivocal remittitur of the New York Court of Appeals, 302 N.Y. 689, 98 N.E.2d 485, specifically stating the constitutionality of the statute as the necessary ground for decision, compels this view and precludes any doubt as to the propriety of our determination of the constitutional issue on the merits. Grayson v. Harris, 267 U.S. 352, 45 S.Ct. 317, 69 L.Ed. 652; State of Indiana ex rel. Anderson v. Brand, 303 U.S. 95, 58 S.Ct. 443, 82 L.Ed. 685. The case now has been reargued and submitted.

[2] Article 5--C was added to the Religious Corporations Law of New York in 1945 and provided both for the incorporation and administration of Russian Orthodox churches. Clarifying amendments were added in 1948. *98 The purpose of the article was to bring all the New York churches, formerly subject to the administrative jurisdiction of the Most Sacred Governing Synod in Moscow or the Patriarch of Moscow, into an administratively autonomous metropolitan district. That district was North American in area, created pursuant to resolutions adopted at a sobor held at Detroit in 1924. [FN2] This declared autonomy was made effective by a further legislative requirement that all the churches formerly administratively subject to the Moscow synod and patriarchate *99 should for the future be governed by the ecclesiastical body and hierarchy of the American metropolitan district. [FN3] The foregoing analysis follows the interpretation of this article by the 146 Court of Appeals of New York, an interpretation binding upon us. [FN4]

FN2. 50 McKinney's N.Y.Laws s 105:
'The 'Russian Church in America', as that term is used anywhere in this article, refers to that group of churches, cathedrals, chapels, congregations, societies, parishes, committees and other religious organizations of the Eastern Confession (Eastern Orthodox or Greek Catholic Church) which were known as (a) Russian American Mission of the Russian Orthodox Church from in or about seventeen hundred ninety-three to in or about eighteen hundred seventy; (b) Diocese of Alaska and the Aleutian Islands of the Russian Orthodox Church from in or about eighteen hundred seventy to or in or about nineteen hundred four; (c) Diocese of North America and the Aleutian Islands (or Alaska) of the Russian Orthodox Church from in or about nineteen hundred four to in or about nineteen hundred twenty-four; and (d) Russian Orthodox Greek Catholic Church of North America since in or about nineteen hundred twenty-four; and were subject to the administrative jurisdiction of the Most Sacred Governing Synod in Moscow until in or about nineteen hundred seventeen, later the Patria(r)chate of Moscow, but now constitute an administratively autonomous metropolitan district created pursuant to resolutions adopted at a general convention (sobor) of said district held at Detroit, Michigan, on or about or between April second to fourth, nineteen hundred twenty-four.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

'A 'Russian Orthodox Church', as that term is used anywhere in this article, is a church, cathedral, chap(t)el, congregation, society, parish, committee or other religious organization founded and established for the purpose and with the intent of adhering to, and being subject to the administrative jurisdiction of said mission, diocese or autonomous metropolitan district hereinabove defined as the Russian Church in America.'

FN3. Id., s 107:
'1. Every Russian Orthodox church in this state, whether incorporated before or after the creation of said autonomous metropolitan district, and whether incorporated or reincorporated pursuant to this article or any other article of the religious corporations law, or any general or private law, shall recognize and be and remain subject to the jurisdiction and authority of the general convention (sobor), metropolitan archbishop or other primate or hierarch, the council of bishops, the metropolitan council and other governing bodies and authorities of the Russian Church in America, pursuant to the statutes for the government thereof adopted at a general convention (sobor) held in the city of New York on or about or between October fifth to eighth, nineteen hundred thirty-seven, and any amendments thereto and any other statutes or rules heretofore or hereafter adopted by a general convention (sobor) of the Russian Church in America and shall in all other respects conform to, maintain and follow the faith, doctrine, ritual, communion, discipline, canon law, traditions and usages of the Eastern Confession (Eastern Orthodox or Greek Catholic Church).
'3. The trustees of every Russian Orthodox church shall have the custody and control of all temporalities and property, real and personal, belonging to such church and of the revenues therefrom and shall administer the same in accordance with the by-laws of such church, the normal statutes for parishes of the Russian Church in America approved at a general convention (sobor) thereof held at Cleveland, Ohio, on or about or between November twentieth or twenty-third, nineteen hundred thirty-four, and any amendments thereto and all other rules, statutes, regulations and usages of the Russian Church in America.'

FN4. Hebert v. State of Louisiana, 272 U.S. 312, 317, 47 S.Ct. 103, 104, 71 L.Ed. 270; Winters v. New York, 333 U.S. 507, 514, 68 S.Ct. 665, 669, 92 L.Ed. 840.
The court expressed its conclusion in reversing the judgment of the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court, St. Nicholas Cathedral of Russian Orthodox Church in North America v. Kedroff, 276 App.Div. 309, 94 N.Y.S.2d 453, which had affirmed the Trial Term. 192 Misc. 327, 77 N.Y.S.2d 333. The Court of Appeals held:
'The only construction which gives meaning to all the language in sections 105 and 107 is that the statute was intended to apply to those Russian Orthodox churches founded and established before 1924 for the purpose of adhering and being subject to the North American Mission or North American Diocese, and to those Russian Orthodox churches founded and established after 1924 for the purpose of adhering and being subject to the autonomous metropolitan district. The majority in the Appellate Division further intimated that to read the statute literally would result in an interference in ecclesiastical concerns not within the competency of the Legislature. The latter suggestion is the only one which requires discussion, for, as already indicated, the intent of the Legislature (as distinguished from its competency) is unmistakable.' 302 N.Y. at page 29, 96 N.E.2d at page 71.

100 Article 5--C is challenged as invalid under the constitutional prohibition against interference with the exercise of religion. [FN5] The appellants' contention, of course, is based on the theory that the principles of the First Amendment are made applicable to the states by the Fourteenth. [FN6] See Stokes, Church and State in the United States (1950), vol. 1, c. VIII.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

FN5. First Amendment to the Constitution: 'Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof; * * *.'

FN6. Hamilton v. Regents of University of California, 293 U.S. 245, 262, 55 S.Ct. 197, 204, 79 L.Ed. 343; Cantwell v. State of Connecticut, 310 U.S. 296, 303, 60 S.Ct. 900, 903, 84 L.Ed. 1213; Everson v. Board of Education of Ewing Tp., 330 U.S. 1, 14--15, 67 S.Ct. 504, 510, 511, 91 L.Ed. 711; People of State of Illinois ex rel. McCollum v. Board of Education of School Dist. No. 71, Champaign County, Ill., 333 U.S. 203, 210--211, 68 S.Ct. 461, 464, 465, 92 L.Ed. 648; Zorach v. Clauson, 343 U.S. 306, 310, 72 S.Ct. 679, 682.

The Russian Orthodox Church is an autocephalous member of the Eastern Orthodox Greek Catholic Church. It sprang from the Church of Constantinople in the Tenth Century. The schism of 1054 A.D. split the Universal Church into those of the East and the West. Gradually self-government was assumed by the Russian Church until in the Sixteenth Century its autonomy was recognized and a Patriarch of Moscow appeared. Fortescue, Orthodox Eastern Church, c. V. For the next one hundred *101 years the development of the church kept pace with the growth of power of the Czars but it increasingly became a part of the civil government--a state church. Throughout that period it also remained an hierarchical church with a Patriarch at its head, governed by the conventions or sobors called by him. However, from the time of Peter the Great until 1917 no sobor was held. No patriarch ruled or was chosen. During that time the church was governed 147 by a Holy Synod, a group of ecclesiastics with a Chief Procurator representative of the government as a member.

Late in the Eighteenth Century the Russian Church entered the missionary field in the Aleutian Islands and Alaska. From there churches spread slowly down the Pacific Coast and later with the Slavic immigration to our eastern cities, particularly to Detroit, Clevelant, Chicago, Pittsburgh and New York. The character of the administrative unit changed with the years as is indicated by the changes in its name. See note 2. In 1904 when a diocese of North America was created its first archbishop, Tikhon, shortly thereafter established himself in his seat at Saint Nicholas Cathedral. His appointment came from the Holy Synod of Russia as did those of his successors in order Platon and Evdokim. Under those appointments the successive archbishops occupied the Cathedral and residence of Saint Nicholas under the administrative authority of the Holy Synod.

In 1917 Archbishop Evdokim returned to Russia permanently. Early that year an All Russian Sobor was held, the first since Peter the Great. It occurred during the interlude of political freedom following the fall of the Czar. A patriarch was elected and installed--Tikhon who had been the first American Archbishp. Uncertainties as to the succession to and administration of the American archbishopric made their appearance following this sobor and were largely induced *102 by the almost contemporaneous political disturbances which culminated swiftly in the Bolshevik Revolution of 1917. The Russian Orthodox Church was drawn into this maelstrom. After a few years the Patriarch was imprisoned. There were suggestions of his counter-revolutionary activity. Church power was transferred, partly through a sobor considered by many as non- canonical to a Supreme Church Council. The declared reforms were said to have resulted in a 'Living Church' or sometimes in a 'Renovated Church.' Circumstances and pressures changed. Patriarch Tikhon was released from prison and died in 1925. He named three bishops as locum tenens for the patriarchal throne. It was one of these, Sergius, who in 1933 appointed the appellant Benjamin as Archbishop. The Church was registered as a religious organization under Soviet law in 1927. Thereafter the Russian Church and the Russian State approached if not a reconciliation at least an adjustment which eventuated by 1943 in the election of Sergius, one of the bishops named as locum tenens by Tikhon, to the Patriarchate. The Living or Renovated Church, whether deemed a reformed, a schismatic or a new church, apparently withered away. After Sergius' death a new patriarch of the Russian Orthodox Church, Alexi, was chosen Patriarch in 1945 at Moscow at a sobor recognized by all parties to this litigation as a true sobor held in accordance with the church canons. [FN7]

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

FN7. Fortescue, supra (1916); Brian-Chaninov, The Russian Church (1931), c. VIII; Zernov, The Russians and Their Church (1945); French, The Eastern Orthodox Church (1951), c. VII;Danzas, The Russian Church (1936); Anderson, People, Church and State in Modern Russia (1944), pp. 121--140; Bolshakoff, Foreign Missions of the Russian Orthdox Church (1943), c. IV.

The Russian upheaval caused repercussions in the North American diocese. That Diocese at the time of the Soviet Revolution recognized the spiritual and administrative 103 control of Moscow. White Russians, both lay and clerical, found asylum in America from the revolutionary conflicts, strengthening the feeling of abhorrence of the secular attitude of the new Russian Government. The church members already here, immigrants and nativeborn, while habituated to look to Moscow for religious direction, were accustomed to our theory of separation between church and state. The Russian turmoil, the restraints on religious activites and the evolution of a new ecclesiastical hierarchy in the form of the 'Living Church,' deemed noncanonical or schismatic by most churchmen, made very difficult Russian administration of the American diocese. Furthermore, *148 Patriarch Tikhon, on November 20, 1920, issued Decision No. 362 relating to church administration for troublesome times. This granted a large measure of autonomy, when the Russsian ruling authority was unable to function, subject to 'confirmation later to the Central Church Authority when it is reestablished.' Naturally the growing number of American-born members of the Russian Church did not cling to a hierarchy identified with their country of remote origin with the same national feeling that moved their immigrant ancestors. These facts and forces generated in America a separatist movement. That movement brought about the arrangemens at the Detroit Sobor of 1924 for a temporary American administration of the church on account of the disturbances in Russia. [FN8] This was followed by the declarations of autonomy of the successive sobors since that date, a spate of 104 litigation concerning control of the various churches and occupancy of ecclesiastical positions, [FN9] the New York legislation (known as Article 5-C, notes 2 and 3, supra), and this controversy.

FN8. The attitude of the Russian Church in America will be made sufficiently plain by these extracts from their records of action taken at the Detroit Sobor, 1924:
'Point 1. Temporarily, until the convocation of the All Russian Sobor further indicated in Point 5, to declare the Russian Orthodox Diocese in America a self-governed Church so that it be governed by its own elected Archbishop by means of a Sobor of Bishops, a Council composed of those elected from the clergy and laity, and periodic Sobors of the entire American Church.
'Point 5. To leave the final regulation of questions arising from the relationship of the Russian and the American Churches to a future Sobor of the Russian Orthodox Church which will be legally convoked, legally elected, will sit with the participation of representatives of the American Church under conditions of political freedom, guaranteeing the fullness and authority of its decisions for the entire Church, and will be recognized by the entire Oecumenical Orthodox Church as a true Sobor of the Russian Orthodox Church.'

FN9. Nemolovsky v. Rykhloff, 187 App.Div. 290, 175 N.Y.S. 617; Kedrovsky v. Archbishop and Consistory of Russian Orthodox Greek Catholic Church, 195 App.Div. 127, 186 N.Y.S. 346; Kedrovsky v. Rojdesvensky, 214 App.Div. 483, 212 N.Y.S. 273; Id., 242 N.Y. 547, 152 N.E. 421; Kedrovsky v. Archbishop and Consistory of Russian Orthodox Greek Catholic Church, 218 App.Div. 121, 217

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

N.Y.S. 873; Id., 218 App.Div. 124, 217 N.Y.S. 875; Id., 220 App.Div. 750, 222 N.Y.S. 831; Id., 249 N.Y. 75, 162 N.E. 588; Id., 249 N.Y. 516, 164 N.E. 566; Nikulnikoff v. Archbishop and Consistory of Russian Orthodox Greek Catholic Church, 142 Misc. 894, 255 N.Y.S. 653; Waipa v. Kushwara, 259 App.Div. 843, 20 N.Y.S.2d 174; Id., 283 N.Y. 781, 28 N.E.2d 417.

Delegates from the North American Diocese intended to be represented at an admittedly canonical Sobor of the Russian Orthodox Church held in 1945 at Moscow. They did not arrive in time on account of delays, responsibility for which has not been fixed. The following stipulation appears as to their later actions while at Moscow:

'It is stipulated that Bishop Alexi and Father Dzvonchik, representing the local group of American Churches under Bishop Theophilus, appeared before the Patriarch and the members of his Synod in Moscow, presented a written report on the condition of the American Church, with a request for autonomy and a few days later received from the Patriarch the Ukase * * *.'

105 There came to the Russian Church in America this Ukase of the Moscow Patriarchy of February 14 or 16, 1945, covering Moscow's requirements for reunion of the American Orthodox Church with the Russian. It required for reunion that the Russian Church in America hold promptly an 'all American Orthodox Church Sobor'; that it express the decision of the dioceses to reunite with the Russian Mother Church, declare the agreement of the American Orthodox *149 Church to abstain 'from political activities against the U.S.S.R.' and so direct its parishes, and elect a Metropolitan subject to confirmation by the Moscow Patriarchy. The decree said, 'In view of the distance of the American Metropolitan District from the Russian Mother Church * * * the Metropolitan-Exarch * * * may be given some extended powers by the Moscow Patriarchy * * *.'

The American congregations speaking through their Cleveland Sobor of 1946 refused the proffered arrangement and resolved in part:

'That any administrative recognition of the Synod of the Russian Orthodox Church Abroad is hereby terminated, retaining, however, out spiritual and brotherly relations with all parts of the Russian Orthodox Church abroad * * *.'

This ended the efforts to compose the differences between the Mother Church and its American offspring, and this litigation and the enactment of Article 5--C of the Religious Corporations Law of New York followed. We understand the above factual summary corresponds substantially with the factual basis for determination formulated by the Court of Appeals of New York. From those circumstances it seems clear that the Russian Orthodox Church was, until the Russian Revolution, an hierarchical church with unquestioned paramount jurisdiction in the governing body in Russia over the American Metropolitanate. Nothing indicates that either the Sacred Synod or the succeeding Patriarchs 106 relinquished that authority or recognized the autonomy of the American church. The Court of Appeals decision proceeds, we understand, upon the same assumption. 302 N.Y. at pages 5, 23, 24, 96 N.E.2d at pages 57, 68, 69. That court did consider 'whether there exists in Moscow at the present time a true central organization of the Russian Orthodox Church capable of functioning as the head of a free international religious body.' It concluded that this aspect of the controversy had not been sufficiently developed to justify a judgment upon that ground. 302 N.Y. at pages 22--24, 96 N.E.2d at pages 67--69.

[3][4] The Religious Corporations Law.--The New York Court of Appeals depended for its judgment, refusing recognition to Archbishop Benjamin, the appointee of the Moscow Hierarchy of the Russian Orthodox Church, upon Article 5-C of the Religious Corporations Law, quoted and analyzed at notes 2 and 3, supra. [FN10] Certainly a legislature 107 is free to act upon such *150 information as it may have as to the necessity for legislation. But an enactment by a legislature cannot validate action which the Constitution prohibits, and we think that the statute here in question passes the constitutional limits. We conclude that Article 5--C undertook by its terms to transfer the control of the New York churches of the Russian Orthodox religion from the central governing hierarchy of the Russian Orthodox Church, the Patriarch of Moscow and the Holy Synod, to the governing authorities of the Russian Church in America, a church organization limited to the diocese of North America and the Aleutian Islands. This transfer takes place by virtue of the statute. Such a law violates the Fourteenth Amendment. It prohibits in this country the free exercise of religion. Legislation that regulates church administration, the operation of the churches, the appointment of clergy, by requiring conformity to church statutes 'adopted at a general convention (*108 sobor) held in the City of New York on or about or between October fifth to eighth, nineteen hundred thirty-seven, and any amendments thereto,' note 3, supra, prohibits the free exercise of religion. Although this statute requires the New York churches to 'in all other respects conform to, maintain and follow the faith, doctrine, ritual, communion, discipline, canon law, traditions and usages of the Eastern Confession (Eastern Orthodox or Greek Catholic Church),' their conformity is by legislative fiat and subject to legislative will. Should the state assert power to change the statute requiring conformity to ancient faith and doctrine to one establishing a different doctrine, the invalidity would be unmistakable.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

> FN10. The Court said, 302 N.Y. 1, 96 N.E.2d 56:
> 'The Legislature has made a determination that the 'Russian Church of America' was the one which, to use our words in 249 N.Y. at pages 77-- 78, 162 N.E. at page 589, was the trustee which 'may be relied upon to carry out more effectively and faithfully the purposes of this religious trust (Carrier v. Carrier, 226 N.Y. 114, 123 N.E. 135)' by reason of the changed situation of the patriarchate in Russia.' 302 N.Y. at page 30, 96 N.E.2d at page 72.
> 'The courts have always recognized that it is the province of the Legislature to make the underlying findings of fact which give meaning and substance to its ultimate directives. The courts have traditionally refused to consider the wisdom or technical validity of such findings of fact, ifthere be some reasonable basis upon which they may rest.' 302 N.Y. at page 31, 96 N.E.2d at page 72.
> 'The Legislature of the State of New York, like the Congress, must be deemed to have investigated the whole problem carefully before it acted. The Legislature knew that the central authorities of the Russian Orthodox Church in Russia had been suppressed after the 1917 revolution, and that the partriarchate was later resurrected by the Russian Government. The Legislature, like Congress, knew the character and method of operation of international communism and the Soviet attitude toward things religious. The Legislature was aware of the contemporary views of qualified observers who have visited Russia and who have had an opportunity to observe the present status of the patriarchate in the Soviet system. The Legislature realized that the North American church, in order to be free of Soviet interference in its affairs, had declared its temporary administrative autonomy in 1924, pursuant to the ukase of 1920, while retaining full spiritual communion with the patriarchate, and that there was a real danger that those properties and temporalities long enjoyed and used by the Russian Orthodox Church worshippers in this State would be taken from them by the representatives of the patriarchate. On the basis of these facts, and the facts stated (supra) and no doubt other facts we know not of, our Legislature concluded that the Moscow Patriarchate was no longer capable of functioning as a true religious body, but had become a tool of the Soviet Government primarily designed to implement its foreign policy. Whether we, as judges, would have reached the same conclusion is immaterial. It is sufficient that the Legislature reached it, after full consideration of all the facts.' 302 N.Y. at pages 32--33, 96 N.E.2d at page 73.

Although s 5 of the Religious Corporation Law [FN11] had long controlled religious corporations, the Court of Appeals held that its rule was not based on any constitutional requirement or prohibition. [FN12] Since certain events of which the Court took judicial notice indicated to it that the Russian Government exercised control over the central *109 church authorities and that the 151 American church acted to protect its pulpits and faith from such influences, the Court of Appeals felt that the Legislature's reasonable belief in such conditions justified the State in enacting a law to free the American group from infiltration of such atheistic or subversive influences. [FN13]

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

FN11. 'The trustees of every religious corporation shall have the custody and control of all the temporalities and property, real and personal, belonging to the corporation and of the revenues therefrom, and shall administer the same in accordance with the discipline, rules and usages of the corporation and of the ecclesiastical governing body, if any, to which the corporation is subject, * * *.'

FN12. 302 N.Y. at page 30, 96 N.E.2d at page 72:
'As a broad guide this rule undoubtedly has worked well, but it is by no means a constitutional doctrine not subject to change or modification by the same Legislature which announced it, in cases where literal enforcement would be unreasonable and opposed to the public interest. The Legislature, in the exercise of its extensive and acknowledged power to act for the common welfare, may find as a fact that a situation has arisen of such novelty and uniqueness that existing law is incapable of performing its avowed function--the preservation of religious temporalities for the use of their original and accustomed beneficiaries. If the Legislature find as a fact that, because of drastically changed circumstances, the accustomed beneficiaries of religious properties are thus threatened with their loss, and if there be a basis for such finding, we perceive no constitutional objection to a legislative attempt to trace and identify, as of today, the authentic group entitled to the administration of such properties.'

FN13. 302 N.Y. at page 13, 96 N.E.2d at page 62:
'The control of all phases of Russian life by the Government was not as apparent in 1924 as it is a quarter of a century later and on the surface, at least, the case appeared to be a proper one for the application of the rule that in an ecclesiastical dispute involving a denominational church, the decision of the highest church judicatories will be accepted as final and conclusive by the civil courts, Trustees of Presbytery of N(ew) Y(ork) v. Westminster Presbyterian Church, 222 N.Y. 305, 315, 118 N.E. 800, 802; Watson v. Jones, 13 Wall. 679, 724--727, 20 L.Ed. 666, Religious Corporations Law, ss 4, 5.' '* * * we feel we must accept the historical statements contained in the dissenting opinion of Mr. Justice Van Voorhis, below: '* * * In recent public pronouncements the State Department, and our representatives in the United Nations, have frequently recognized and denounced the suppression of human rights and basic liberties in religion as well as in other aspects of life, existing in Soviet Russia and in all of its satellite states. * * * " Id., 302 N.Y. at page 23, 96 N.E.2d at page 68.

[5][6] This legislation, Art. 5--C, in the view of the Court of Appeals, gave the use of the churches to the Russian Church in America on the theory that this church would most faithfully carry out the purposes of the religious trust. [FN14] Thus dangers of political use of church pulpits would be minimized. Legislative power to punish subversive action cannot be doubted. If such action should be actually attempted by a cleric, neither his robe nor his pulpit would be a defense. But in this case no problem *110 of punishment for the violation of law arises. There is no charge of subversive or hostile action by any ecclesiastic Here there is a transfer by statute of control over churches. This violates our rule of separation between church and state. That conclusion results from the purpose, meaning and effect of the New York legislation stated above, considered in the light of the history and decisions considered below.

FN14. See note 10, supra.

[7] Hierarchical churches may be defined as those organized as a body with other churches having similar faith and doctrine with a common ruling convocation or ecclesiastical head. In Watson v. Jones, 13 Wall. 679, 20 L.Ed. 666, they are spoken of in like terms. [FN15] That opinion has been given consideration in subsequent church litigation--state and national. [FN16] The opinion itself, however, did not turn on either the establishment or the prohibition of the free exercise of religion. It was a church controversy in the Third or Walnut Street Presbyterian Church of Louisville, Kentucky, arising out of the slavery conflict and was filled with the acrimony of that period. It was decided here at the 1871 Term. 'The government of the (Presbyterian) church is exercised by and through an ascending series of 'judicatories', known as Church Sessions, Presbyteries, *111 Synods and a General Assembly.' 152Id., 13 Wall. at page 681, 20 L.Ed. 666. The opinion of this Court assumed without question that the Louisville church, its property and its officers were originally and up to the beginning of the disagreements subjected to the operation of the laws of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church. Id., 13 Wall. at page 683, 20 L.Ed. 666. The actual possession of the church property was in trustees; its operation or use controlled by the Session composed of elders. [FN17] Both were groups elected at intervals by the members.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

FN15. 'The third is where the religious congregation or ecclesiastical body holding the property is but a subordinate member of some general church organization in which there are superior ecclesiastical tribunals with a general and ultimate power of control more or less complete, in some supreme judicatory over the whole membership of that general organization.' 13 Wall. 679, 722--723, 20 L.Ed. 666.

FN16. Zollman, American Church Law (1933), c. 9. E.g., Shepard v. Barkley, 247 U.S. 1, 38 S.Ct. 422, 62 L.Ed. 939; Barkley v. Hayes, D.C., 208 F. 319, 326; McGinnis v. Watson, 41 Pa. 9; State of Missouri ex rel. Watson v. Farris, 45 Mo. 183, 197--198; First English Lutheran Church v. Evangelical Lutheran Synod of Kansas and Adjacent States, 10 Cir., 135 F.2d 701. Cf. Gibson v. Armstrong, 7 B. Mon., Ky., 481; German Reformed Church v. Commonwealth ex rel. Seibert, 3 Pa. 282 .

FN17. 'One or two propositions which seem to admit of no controversy are proper to be noticed in this connection. 1. Both by the act of the Kentucky legislature creating the trustees of the church a body corporate, and by the acknowledged rules of the Presbyterian Church, the trustees were the mere nominal title holders and custodians of the church property, and other trustees were, or could be elected by the congregation, to supply their places once in every two years. 2. That in the use of the property for all religious services or ecclesiastical purposes, the trustees were under the control of the church session. 3. That by the constitution of all Presbyterian churches, the session, which is the governing body in each, is composed of the ruling elders and pastor, and in all business of the session the majority of its members govern, the number of elders for each congregation being variable.' Id., 13 Wall. at page 720, 20 L.Ed. 666.

In May of 1865 the General Assembly, the highest judicatory of the church, made a declaration of loyalty to the Federal Government denouncing slavery, and directed that new members with contrary views should not be received. The Louisville Presbytery, the immediate superior of the Walnut Street Church, promptly issued a Declaration and Testimony, refusing obedience and calling for resistance to the alleged usurpation of authority. The Louisville Presbytery divided as did the Walnut Street Church and the proslavery group obtained admission into the Presbyterian Church of the Confederate States. In June 1867 the Presbyterian General Assembly *112 for the United States declared the Presbytery and Synod recognized by the proslavery party were 'in no sense a true and lawful Synod and Presbytery in connection with and under the care and authority of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in the United States of America.' They were "permanently excluded from connection with or representation in the Assembly.' By the same resolution the Synod and Presbytery adhered to by those whom (the proslavery party) opposed were declared to be the true and lawful Presbytery of Louisville, and Synod of Kentucky.' Id., 13 Wall. at page 692, 20 L.Ed. 666.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

Litigation started in 1866 with a suit in the state court by certain of the antislavery group to have declared their right to act as duly elected additional elders 'in the management of church property for purposes of religious worship.' Id., 13 Wall. at page 685, 20 L.Ed. 666. As the Court of Appeals of Kentucky thought that certain acts of the Louisville Presbytery and the General Assembly of the United States, in pronouncing the additional elders duly elected, were void as beyond their functions, id., 13 Wall. at page 693, 20 L.Ed. 666, [FN18] it refused the plea of the antislavery group and left the proslavery elders and trustees in control of the Walnut Street Church.

> FN18. Watson v. Avery, 2 Bush, Ky., 332, 347, et seq. 'But we hold that the assembly, like other courts, is limited in its authority by the law under which it acts; and when rights of property, which are secured to congregations and individuals by the organic law of the church, are violated by unconstitutional acts of the higher (church) courts, the parties thus aggrieved are entitled to relief in the civil courts, as in ordinary cases of injury resulting from the violation of a contract, or the fundamental law of a voluntary association.' Id., 2 Bush at page 349.

Thereupon a new suit, Watson v. Jones, was begun by alleged members of the church to secure the use of the Walnut Street Church for the antislavery group. This suit was to decide not the validity of 153 an election of elders *113 fought out in Watson v. Avery, supra, but which one of two bodies should be recognized as entitled to the use of the Walnut Street Presbyterian Church. It was determined that plaintiffs had a beneficial interest in the church property and therefore a standing to sue for its proper use, if they were members. Id., 13 Wall. at pages 697, 714, 20 L.Ed. 666. A schism was recognized. Id., 13 Wall. at page 717, 20 L.Ed. 666. It was held:

> 'The trustees obviously hold possession for the use of the persons who by the constitution, usages, and laws of the Presbyterian body, are entitled to that use.' Id., 13 Wall. at page 720, 20 L.Ed. 666.

They were required to recognize 'the true uses of the trust.' Id., 13 Wall. at page 722, 20 L.Ed. 666. Then turning to the consideration of an hierarchical church, as defined in note 15, supra, and, as it found the Presbyterian church to be, this Court said:

> 'In this class of cases we think the rule of action which should govern the civil courts, founded in a broad and sound view of the relations of church and state under our system of laws, and supported by a preponderating weight of judicial authority is, that, whenever the questions of discipline, or of faith, or ecclesiastical rule, custom, or law have been decided by the highest of these church judicatories to which the matter has been carried, the legal tribunals must accept such decisions as final, and as binding on them, in their application to the case before them.' Id., 13 Wall. at page 727, 20 L.Ed. 666.

As the General Assembly of the Church had recognized the antislavery group 'as the regular and lawful Walnut Street Church and officers,' id., 13 Wall. at page 694, 20 L.Ed. 666, newly elected, and the trial court had found complainants members of that group, and had entered a decree adjudging that this group's duly chosen and elected pastor, ruling elders *114 and trustees 'respectively entitled to exercise whatever authority in the said church, or over its members or property, rightfully belonged to pastor, elders, and trustees, respectively, in churches in connection with 'The Presbyterian Church in the United States of America,' Old School, and according to the regulations and usages of that church,' id., 13 Wall. at page 698, 20 L.Ed. 666, this Court affirmed the decree.

In affirming, the Court recognized the contrariety of views between jurists as to civil jurisdiction over church adjudications having an effect upon property or its uses, when the civil courts determine the church judicatory has violated the church's organic law. [FN19] Its ruling is summed up in these words:

> FN19. Compare Watson v. Avery, note 27, supra, at page 349 of 2 Bush, with Watson

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

v. Jones, supra, 13 Wall. at page 732 et seq., 20 L.Ed. 666.

'In this country the full and free right to entertain any religious belief, to practice any religious principle, and to teach any religious doctrine which does not violate the laws of morality and property, and which does not infringe personal rights, is conceded to all. The law knows no heresy, and is committed to the support of no dogma, the establishment of no sect. The right to organize voluntary religious associations to assist in the expression and dissemination of any religious doctrine, and to create tribunals for the decision of controverted questions of faith within the association, and for the ecclesiastical government of all the individual members, congregations, and officers within the general association, is unquestioned. All who unite themselves to such a body do so with an implied consent to this government, and are bound to submit to it. But it would be a vain consent and would lead to the total subversion of such religious bodies, if any one aggrieved by one of their decisions could appeal 154 to the secular *115 courts and have them reversed. It is of the essence of these religious unions, and of their right to establish tribunals for the decision of questions arising among themselves, that those decisions should be binding in all cases of ecclesiastical cognizance, subject only to such appeals as the organism itself provides for.' Id., 13 Wall. at pages 728--729, 20 L.Ed. 666.

This is applicable to 'questions of discipline, or of faith, or of ecclesiastical rule, custom, or law,' id., 13 Wall. at page 727, 20 L.Ed. 666. [FN20] This controversy concerning the right to use St. Nicholas Cathedral is strictly a matter of ecclesiastical government, the power of the Supreme Church Authority of the Russian Orthodox Church to appoint the ruling hierarch of the archdiocese of North America. No one disputes that such power did lie in that Authority prior to the Russian Revolution.

FN20. The decision has encountered vivid and strong criticism for the breadth of its statement that where 'a subject-matter of dispute, strictly and purely ecclesiastical in its character,' is decided, the civil court may not examine the conclusion to see whether the decision exceeds the powers of the judicatory. Id., 13 Wall. at page 733, 20 L.Ed. 666. See Zollman, American Church Law (1933), c. 9, p. 291. The criticism does not go so far, however, as to condemn the nonreviewability of questions of faith, religious doctrine and ecclesiastical government, Watson v. Jones, 13 Wall. at pages 729, 732, 20 L.Ed. 666, when within the 'express or implied stipulations of the agreement of membership.' Zollman, supra, ss 310, 311, 315, 340.

[8] Watson v. Jones, although it contains a reference to the relations of church and state under our system of laws, [FN21] was decided without depending upon prohibition of state interference with the free exercise of religion. It was decided in 1872, before judicial recognition of the coercive power of the Fourteenth Amendment to protect the limitations of the First Amendment against state action. It long antedated the 1938 decisions of Erie R. *116 Co. v. Tompkins and Ruhlin v. New York Life Ins. Co., 304 U.S. 64, 58 S.Ct. 817, 82 L.Ed. 1188 and 304 U.S. 202, 58 S.Ct. 860, 82 L.Ed. 1290, and, therefore, even though federal jurisdiction in the case depended solely on diversity, the holding was based on general law rather than Kentucky law. [FN22] The opinion radiates, however, a spirit of freedom for religious organizations, an independence from secular control or manipulation, in short, power to decide for themselves, free from state interference, matters of church government as well as those of faith and doctrine. Freedom to select the clergy, where no improper methods of choice are proven, [FN23] we think, must now be said to 155 have federal constitutional protection as a part of the free exercise of religion against state interference.

FN21. Id., 13 Wall. at page 727, 20 L.Ed. 666. See, 344 U.S. 113, 73 S.Ct. 153, supra.

FN22. Barkley v. Hayes, D.C., 208 F. 319, 334; Sherard v. Walton, D.C., 206 F. 562, 564; Helm v. Zarecor, D.C., 213 F. 648, 657.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

FN23. Gonzalez v. Roman Catholic Archbishop of Manila, 280 U.S. 1, 16--17, 50 S.Ct. 5, 7, 74 L.Ed. 131:
'Because the appointment is a cononical act, it is the function of the church authorities to determine what the essential qualifications of a chaplain are and whether the candidate possesses them. In the absence of fraud, collusion, or arbitrariness, the decisions of the proper church tribunals on matters purely ecclesiastical, although affecting civil rights, are accepted in litigation before the secular courts as conclusive, because the parties in interest made them so by contract or otherwise. Under like circumstances, effect is given in the courts to the determinations of the judicatory bodies established by clubs and civil associations.'
See Brundage v. Deardorf, C.C., 55 F. 839, where Taft, Circuit Judge, in overruling a demurrer, stated: 'Even if the supreme judicatory has the right to construe the limitations of its own power, and the civil courts may not interfere with such a construction, and must take it as conclusive, we do not understand the supreme court, in Watson v. Jones, to hold that an open and avowed defiance of the original compact, and an express violation of it, will be taken as a decision of the supreme judicatory which is binding on the civil courts.' 55 F. at page 847.
Later the case was considered on appeal by the Circuit Court of Appeals; Lurton, Circuit Judge, writing, thought that the facts proven showed conclusively that Watson v. Jones did control. 92 F. 214, 230

*117 Legislative Power.--The Court of Appeals of New York recognized, generally, the soundness of the philosophy of ecclesiastical control of church administration and polity but concluded that the exercise of that control was not free from legislative interference. [FN24] That Court presented forcefully the argument supporting legislative power to act on its own knowledge of 'the Soviet attitude toward things religious.' 302 N.Y. pages 32--33, 96 N.E.2d at page 74. It was said:

FN24. St. Nicholas Cathedral of Russian Orthodox Church in North America v. Kedroff, 302 N.Y. 1, 30, 96 N.E.2d 56, 72, Note 12, supra.

'The Legislature realized that the North American church, in order to be free of Soviet interference in its affairs, had declared its temporary administrative autonomy in 1924, pursuant to the ukase of 1920, while retaining full spiritual communion with the patriarchate, and that there was a real danger that those properties and temporalities long enjoyed and used by the Russian Orthodox Church worshippers in this State would be taken from them by the representatives of the patriarchate.' 302 N.Y. at page 33, 96 N.E.2d at page 74.

It was thought that American Communications Ass'n v. Douds, 339 U.S. 382, 70 S.Ct. 674, 94 L.Ed. 925, supported the thesis that where there is some specific evil, found as a fact 'some infringement upon traditional liberties was justifiable' to effect a cure. 302 N.Y., at page 31, 96 N.E.2d at page 73. On that reasoning it was thought permissible, in view 'of the changed situation of the patriarchate in Russia', to replace it with the Russian Church in America as the ruling authority over the administration of the church. The legal basis for this legislative substitution was found in the theory that the Russian Church in America 'was the trustee which 'may be relied upon to carry out more *118 effectively and faithfully the purposes of this religious trust (Carrier v. Carrier, 226 N.Y. 114, 123 N.e. 135)". Id., 302 N.Y. at page 30, 96 N.E.2d at page 72. Mindful of the authority of the Court of Appeals in its interpretation of the powers of its own legislature and with respect for its standing and ability, we do not agree with its statement as to legislative power over religious organizations.

In our view the Douds case may not be interpreted to validate New York's Article 5--C. That case involved the validity of s 9(h) of the National Labor Relations Act as amended, 61 Stat. 136, 146, 29 U.S.C. s 159(h), 29 U.S.C.A. s 159(h). That section forbade the N.L.R.B. from acting at the suggestion of a labor organization unless affidavits of its officers were filed denying affiliation with subversive organizations or belief in the overthrow of this Government by force or other unconstitutional means. We upheld the enactment as a proper exercise of the power to protect commerce from the evil of disreption from strikes so politically inspired. In so doing we said, 'legitimate attempts to protect the public, not from the remote possible effects of noxious ideologies, but from present excesses of direct, active conduct are not presumptively bad because they interfere with and, in some of its manifestations, restrain the exercise of First Amendment rights.' Id., 339 U.S. at page 399, 70 S.Ct. at page 684. And added, 'But insofar as the problem is one of drawing inferences concerning the need for regulation of particular forms of conduct from conflicting evidence, this Court is in no position to substitute its judgment as to the necessity or desirability of the statute for that of Congress.' Id., 339 U.S. at page 400, 70 S.Ct. at page 685. It is an exaggeration to say that those sound statements point to a *156 legislative power to take away from a church's governing body and its duly ordained representative the possession and use of a building held in trust for the purposes for which it is being employed because of an apprehension, even though reasonable, 119 that it may be employed for improper purposes. In Douds we saw nothing that was aimed at the free expression of views. Unions could have officers with such affiliations and political purposes as they might choose but the Government was not compelled to allow those officers an opportunity to disrupt commerce for their own political ends. We looked upon the affidavit requirement as an assurance that disruptive forces would not utilize a government agency to accomplish their purposes. Id., 339 U.S. at page 403, 70 S.Ct. at page 686.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

In upholding the validity of Article 5--C, the New York Court of Appeals apparently assumes Article 5--C does nothing more than permit the trustees of the Cathedral to use it for services consistent with the desires of the members of the Russian Church in America. Its reach goes far beyond that point. By fiat it displaces one church administrator with another. It passes the control of matters strictly ecclesiastical from one church authority to another. It thus intrudes for the benefit of one segment of a church the power of the state into the forbidden area of religious freedom contrary to the principles of the First Amendment. Such prohibition differs from the restriction of a right to deal with Government allowed in Douds, in that the Union in the Douds case had no such constitutionally protected right. New York's Article 5--C directly prohibits the free exercise of an ecclesiastical right, the Church's choice of its hierarchy.

We do not think that New York's legislative application of a cy-pres doctrine to this trust avoids the constitutional rule against prohibition of the free exercise of religion. Late Corporation of Church of Jesus Christ of Latter- Day Saints v. United States, 136 U.S. 1, 10 S.Ct. 792, 34 L.Ed. 478, relied upon by the appellee, does not support its argument. There the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints had been incorporated as a religious corporation by the State of Deseret, with subsequent confirmation by the Territory of Utah. Its property was held 120 for religious and charitable purposes. That charter was revoked by Congress and some of the property of the church was escheated to the United States for the use of the common schools of Utah. This Court upheld the revocation of the charter, relying on the reserved power of the Congress over the acts of territories, 136 U.S. at pages 45--46, 10 S.Ct. at pages 803--804. The seizure of the property was bottomed on the general rule that where a charitable corporation is dissolved for unlawful practices, id., 136 U.S. at pages 49--50, 10 S.Ct. at page 805, the sovereign takes and distributes the property according to the cy-pres doctrine to objects of charity and usefulness, e.g., schools. Id., 136 U.S. at pages 47, 50--51, 10 S.Ct. at pages 804, 805--806. A failure of the charitable purpose could have the same effect. Id., 136 U.S. at page 59, 10 S.Ct. at page 808. None of these elements exist to support the validity of the New York statute putting the Russian Orthodox churches of New York under the administration of the Russian Church in America. See notes 2 and 3, supra.

The record before us shows no schism over faith or doctrine between the Russian Church in America and the Russian Orthodox Church. It shows administrative control of the North American Diocese by the Supreme Church Authority of the Russian Orthodox Church, including the appointment of the ruling hierarch in North America from the foundation of the diocese until the Russian Revolution. We find nothing that indicates a relinquishment of this power by the Russian Orthodox Church.

Ours is a government which by the 'law of its being' allows no statute, state or national, that prohibits the free exercise of religion. There are occasions when civil courts must draw lines between the responsibilities 157 of church and state for the disposition or use of property. [FN25] Even in those cases when the property right follows as an incident from decisions of the church custom or law on ecclesiastical *121 issues, the church rule controls. [FN26] This under our Constitution necessarily follows in order that there may be free exercise of religion.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

FN25. Ponce v. Roman Catholic Apostolic Church in Porto Rico, 210 U.S. 296, 322, 28 S.Ct. 737, 747, 52 L.Ed. 1068.

FN26. Watson v. Jones, supra; Barkley v. Hayes, D.C., 208 F. 319, 327, affirmed on appeal, Duvall v. Synod of Kansas of Presbyterian Church, 8 Cir., 222 F. 669; Shepard v. Barkley, 247 U.S. 1, 38 S.Ct. 422, 62 L.Ed. 939.

The decree of the Court of Appeals of New York must be reversed, and the case remanded to that court for such further action as it deems proper and not in contravention of this opinion. It is so ordered.

Reversed and remanded.

Mr. Justice FRANKFURTER, concurring.

Let me put to one side the question whether in our day a legislature could, consistently with due process, displace the judicial process and decide a particular controversy affecting property so as to decree that A not B owns it or is entitled to its possession. Obviously a legislature would not have that power merely because the property belongs to a church.

In any event, this proceeding rests on a claim which cannot be determined without intervention by the State in a religious conflict. St. Nicholas Cathedral is not just a piece of real estate. It is no more that than is St. Patrick's Cathedral or the Cathedral of St. John the Divine. A cathedral is the seat and center of ecclesiastical authority. St. Nicholas Cathedral is an archiepiscopal see of one of the great religious organizations. What is at stake here is the power to exercise religious authority. That is the essence of this controversy. It is that even though the religious authority becomes manifest and is exerted through authority over the Cathedral as the outward symbol of a religious faith.

*122 The judiciary has heeded, naturally enough, the menace to a society like ours of attempting to settle such religious struggles by state action. And so, when courts are called upon to adjudicate disputes which, though generated by conflicts of faith, may fairly be isolated as controversies over property and therefore within judicial competence, the authority of courts is in strict subordination to the ecclesiastical law of a particular church prior to a schism. Watson v. Jones, 13 Wall. 679, 20 L.Ed. 666. This very limited right of resort to courts for determination of claims, civil in their nature, between rival parties among the communicants of a religious faith is merely one aspect of the duty of courts to enforce the rights of members in an association, temporal or religious, according to the laws of that association. See Gonzalez v. Roman Catholic Archbishop of Manila, 280 U.S. 1, 16--17, 50 S.Ct. 5, 7--8, 74 L.Ed. 131.

Legislatures have no such obligation to adjudicate and no such power. Assuredly they have none to settle conflicts of religious authority and none to define religious obedience. These aspects of spiritual differences constitute the heart of this controversy. The New York legislature decreed that one party to the dispute and not the other should control the common center of devotion. In doing so the legislature effectively authorized one party to give religious direction not only to its adherents but also to its opponents. See St. Nicholas Cathedral of Russian Orthodox Church in North America v. Kedroff, 302 N.Y. 1, 24--29, 96 N.E.2d 56, 68--72.

The arguments by which New York seeks to justify this inroad into the realm of faith are echoes of past attempts at secular intervention in religious conflicts. It is said that an impressive majority both of the laity and of the priesthood of the old local church now adhere to the party whose 158 candidate New York enthroned, as it were, as Archbishop. Be that as it may, it is not a function of civil government under our constitutional system to assure rule to any religious body by a counting of heads. *123 Our Constitution does assure that anyone is free to worship according to his conscience. A legislature is not free to vest in a schismatic head the means of acting under the authority of his old church, by affording him the religious power which the use and occupancy of St. Nicholas Cathedral make possible.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

Again, it is argued that New York may protect itself from dangers attributed to submission by the mother church in Moscow to political authority To reject this claim one does not have to indulge in the tendency of lawyers to carry arguments to the extreme of empty formal logic. Scattered throughout the country there are religious bodies with ties to various countries of a world in tension--tension due in part to shifting political affiliation and orientation. The consideration which permeates the court's opinion below would give each State the right to assess the circumstances in the foreign political entanglements of its religious bodies that make for danger to the State, and the power, resting on plausible legislative findings, to divest such bodies of spiritual authority and of the temporal property which symbolizes it.

Memory is short but it cannot be forgotten that in the State of New York there was strong feeling against the Tsarist regime at a time when the Russian Church was governed by a Procurator of the Tsar. And when Mussolini exacted the Lateran Agreement, argument was not wanting by those friendly to her claims that the Church of Rome was subjecting herself to political authority. [FN1] The fear, perhaps not wholly groundless, that the loyalty of its citizens might be diluted by their adherence to a *124 church entangled in antagonistic political interests, reappears in history as the ground for interference by civil government with religious attachments. [FN2] Such fear readily leads to persecution of religious beliefs deemed dangerous to ruling political authority. It was on this basis, after all, that Bismarck sought to detach German Catholics from Rome by a series of laws not too different in purport from that before us today. [FN3] The long, unedifying history of the contest between the secular state and 159 the church is replete with instances of attempts by civil government *125 to exert pressure upon religious authority. Religious leaders have often made gestures of accommodation to such pressures. History also indicates that the vitality of great world religions survived such efforts. In any event, under our Constitution it is not open to the governments of this Union to reinforce the loyalty of their citizens by deciding who is the true exponent of their religion.

FN1. The Encyclopedia Britannica recounts that under the agreement between the Papal See and Mussolini, 'The supremacy of the state was recognized by compelling bishops and archbishops to swear loyalty to the government.' Encyclopedia Britannica: 'Anticlericalism,' 62, 62A (1948 ed.).

FN2. Such apprehension, at least in part, seems to have underlain two important religious controversies in a nation as devoted to freedom as Great Britain and as recently as a century ago. Both the dispute giving rise to the Free Church of Scotland Appeals and the brief but vigorous anti-Catholic outburst of 1850 are not unfairly attributable to a claim by the State of comprehensive loyalty, undeflected by the competing claims of religious faith. See Laski, The Problem of Sovereignty, 27--68, 121--210. See also Buchanan, The Ten Years' Conflict (Edinburgh 1849); Free Church of Scotland v. Overtown, (1904) A.C. 515; Free Church of Scotland Appeals (Orr. ed., Edinburgh, 1904).

FN3. Reichs-Gesetzblatt, 1871, p. 442; Reichs-Gesetzblatt, 1872, p. 253; Reichs-Gesetzblatt, 1874, p. 43; Reichs-Gesetzblatt, 1876, p. 28; 5 Gesetz-Sammlung fu r die Ko niglich Preussischen Staaten, 154, 221, 223, 225, 228, 337, 342; 6 id., at 30, 38, 40, 75, 170; 7 id., at 291. These laws have been thus summarized: 'The Falk Laws are an attempt to insist on the universal paramountcy of German influences. The expulsion of the Jesuits removed an order which he (Bismarck) believed to be concerned with the promotion of Polish interests. The refusal of bishoprics to any save a German who has followed a course > of study approved by the government has a clear purport * * * of purging the Catholic episcopate of men not likely to be in sympathy with German ideals. * * * The twenty-fourth article went even further and gave the State the right of interference with ecclesiastical functions where it deemed them improperly performed. *  The law of the twentieth of May, 1874, virtually handed over the control of vacant bishoprics to the State. * * * Catholic Churches on Prussian soil were handed over to the old Catholics (those refusing to adhere to the newly-promulgated dogma of papal infallibility) in such parishes as those in which the majority consisted of their sympathisers, for certain hours of the day * * *.' Laski, op. cit. supra, note 2, at 256--258. Bismarck's Culturkampf, of which these laws were a part, is fully discussed in Goyau, Bismarck et l'Eglise. A full text of the laws may be found in the appendix to that work.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

Finally, we are told that the present Moscow Patriarchate is not the true superior church of the American communicants. The vicissitudes of war and revolution which have beset the Moscow Patriarchate since 1917 are said to have resulted in a discontinuity which divests the present Patriarch of his authority over the American church. Both parties to the present controversy agree that the present Patriarch is the legitimately chosen holder of his office, and the account of the proceedings and pronouncements of the American schismatic group so indicate. Even were there doubt about this it is hard to see by what warrant the New York Legislature is free to substitute its own judgment as to the validity of Patriarch Alexy's claim and to disregard acknowledgment of the present Patriarch by his co-equals in the Eastern Confession, the Patriarchs of Constantinople, Alexandria, Antioch, and Jerusalem, and by religious leaders throughout the world, including the present Archbishop of York. [FN4]

> FN4. See Garbett, In an Age of Revolution, 207--213; Niemo ller, Why I Went to Moscow, The Christian Century, March 19, 1952, p. 338.

*126 These considerations undermine the validity of the New York legislation in that it enters the domain of religious control barred to the States by the Fourteenth Amendment.

Mr. Justice BLACK agrees with this opinion on the basis of his view that the Fourteenth Amendment makes the First Amendment applicable to the States.

Mr. Justice DOUGLAS, while concurring in the opinion of the Court, also joins this opinion.

Mr. Justice JACKSON, dissenting.

New York courts have decided an ordinary ejectment action involving possession of New York real estate in favor of the plaintiff, a corporation organized under the Religious Corporations Law of New York under the name 'Saint Nicholas Cathedral of the Russian Orthodox Church in North America.' Admittedly, it holds, and since 1925 has held, legal title to the Cathedral property. The New York Court of Appeals decided that it also has the legal right to its possession and control.

The appellant Benjamin's defense against this owner's demand for possession and the basis of his claimed right to enjoy possession of property he admittedly does not own is set forth in his answer to the ejectment suit in these words: 'Said premises pursuant to the above rules of the Russian Orthodox Church are held in trust for the benefit of the accredited Archbishop of said Archdiocese, to be possessed, occupied and used by said Archbishop as his residence, as a place for holding religious services, and other purposes related to his office and as the seat and headquarters for the administration, by him, of the affairs of the Archdiocese both temporal and spiritual.' And, says the appellant Benjamin, he is that Archbishop. These allegations are denied, and they define the issues as tendered to the state courts.

160 *127 I greatly oversimplify the history of this controversy to indicate its nature rather than to prove its merits. This Cathedral was incorporated and built in the era of the Czar, under the regime of a state-ridden church in a church-ridden state. The Bolshevik did not free the church from the grip of state from the grip of the church, but it did nto free the church from the grip of the state. It only brought to the top a new master for a captive and submissive ecclesiastical establishment. By 1945, the Moscow patriarchy had been reformed and manned under the Soviet regime and it sought to re-establish in other countries its prerevolutionary control of church property and its sway over the minds of the religious. As the Court's opinion points out, it demanded of the Russian Church in America, among other things, that it abstain 'from political activities against the U.S.S.R.' The American Cathedral group, along with others, refused submission to the representative of the Moscow Patriarch, whom it regarded as an arm of the Soviet Government. Thus, we have an ostensible religious schism with decided political overtones.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

If the Fourteenth Amendment is to be interpreted to leave anything to the courts of a state to decide without our interference, I should suppose it would be claims to ownership or possession of real estate within its borders and the vexing technical questions pertaining to the creation, interpretation, termination, and enforcement of uses and trusts, even though they are for religious and charitable purposes. This controversy, I believe, is a matter for settlement by state law and not within the proper province of this Court.

I.

As I read the prevailing opinions, the Court assumes that some transfer of control has been accomplished by legislation which results in a denial of due process. This, *128 of course, would raise a question of deprivation of property, not of liberty, while only the latter issue is raised by the parties. And it could be sustained only by a finding by us that the legislation worked a transfer rather than a confirmation of property rights. The Court of Appeals seems to have regarded the statute merely as a legislative reaffirmation of principle the Court would find to be controlling in its absence.

But this Court apparently thinks that by mere enactment of the statute the legislature invaded a field of action reserved to the judiciary. However desirable we may think a rigid separation of powers to be (and I, for one, think it is basic in the Federal Government), I do not think the Fourteenth Amendment undertakes to control distribution of powers within the states. At all events, I do not think we are warranted in holding that New York may not enact this legislation in question, which is in form and in substance an amendment of its Religious Corporations Law.

Nothing in New York law required this denomination to incorporate its Cathedral. The Religious Corporations Law of the State expressly recognizes unincorporated churches (s 2) and undertakes no regulation of them or their affairs. But this denomination wanted the advantages of a corporate charter for its Cathedral, to obtain immunity from personal liability and other benefits. This statute does not interfere with religious freedom but furthers it. If they elect to come under it, the statute makes separate provision for each of many denominations with corporate controls appropriate to its own ecclesiastical order. When it sought the privilege of incorporation under the New York law applicable to its denomination, it seems to me that this Cathedral and all connected with its temporal affairs were submitted to New York law.

As a consequence of this Court's decision in Trustees of Dartmouth College v. Woodward, 4 Wheat. 518, 4 L.Ed. 629, the Constitution of *129 New York since 1846 has authorized the legislature to create corporations by general laws and special acts, subject, however, to a reservation that all such acts 'may be altered from time to time or 161 repealed.' New York Const., Art. X, s 1. That condition becomes a part of every corporate charter subsequently granted by New York. Lord v. Equitable Life Assurance Society of United States, 194 N.Y. 212, 87 N.E. 443, 22 L.R.A.,N.S., 420; People ex rel. Cooper Union for Advancement of Science & Art v. Gass, 190 N.Y. 323, 83 N.E. 64; Pratt Institute v. City of New York, 183 N.Y. 151, 75 N.E. 1119.

What has been done here, as I see it, is to exercise this reserved power which permits the State to alter corporate controls in response to the lessons of experience. Of course, the power is not unlimited and could be so exercised as to deprive one of property without due process of law. But, I do not think we can say that a legislative application of a principle so well established in our common law as the cy-pres doctrine is beyond the powers reserved by the New York Constitution.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

II.

The Court holds, however, that the State cannot exercise its reserved power to control this property without invading religious freedom, because it is a Cathedral and devoted to religious uses. I forbear discussion of the extent to which restraints imposed upon Congress by the First Amendment are transferred against the State by the Fourteenth Amendment beyond saying that I consider that the same differences which apply to freedom of speech and press, see dissenting opinion in Beauharnais v. Illinois, 343 U.S. 250, 287, 72 S.Ct. 725, 746, are applicable to questions of freedom of religion and of separation of church and state.

It is important to observe what New York has not done in this case. It has not held that Benjamin may not act as Archbishop or be revered as such by all who will follow him. It has not held that he may not have a Cathedral. *130 Indeed, I think New York would agree that no one is more in need of spiritual guidance than the Soviet faction. It has only held that this cleric may not have a particular Cathedral which, under New York law, belongs to others. It has not interfered with his or anyone's exercise of his religion. New York has not outlawed the Soviet-controlled sect nor forbidden it to exercise its authority or teach its dogma in any place whatsoever except on this piece of property owned and rightfully possessed by the Cathedral Corporation.

The fact that property is dedicated to a religious use cannot, in my opinion, justify the Court in sublimating an issue over property rights into one of deprivation of religious liberty which alone would bring in the religious guaranties of the First Amendment. I assume no one would pretend that the State cannot decide a claim of trespass, larceny, conversion, bailment or contract, where the property involved is that of a religious corporation or is put to religious use, without invading the principle of religious liberty.

Of course, possession of the property will help either side that obtains it to maintain its prestige and to continue or extend its sway over the minds and souls of the devout. So would possession of a bank account, an income- producing office building, or any other valuable property. But if both claimants are religious corporations or personalities, can not the State decide the issues that arise over ownership and possession without invading the religious freedom of one or the other of the parties?

Thus, if the American group, which owns the title to the Cathedral, had by force barred Benjamin from entering it physically, would the Court say it was an interference with religious freedom to entertain and decide his ejectment action? If state courts are to decide such controversies at all instead of leaving them to be settled by a show of force, is it constitutional to decide for only *131 one side of the controversy and unconstitutional to decide for the other? In either case, the religious freedom of one side or the other is impaired if the temporal goods they need are withheld or taken from them.

As I have earlier pointed out, the Soviet Ecclesiast's claim, denial of which is said 162 to be constitutional error, is not that this New York property is impressed with a trust by virtue of New York law. The claim is that it is impressed with a trust by virtue of the rules of the Russian Orthodox Church. This Court so holds.

I shall not undertake to wallow through the complex, obscure and fragmentary details of secular and ecclesiastical history, theology, and canon law in which this case is smothered. To me, whatever the canon law is found to be and whoever is the rightful head of the Moscow patriarchate, I do not think New York law must yield to the authority of a foreign and unfriendly state masquerading as a spiritual institution. See 'The Soviet Propaganda Program,' Staff Study No. 3, Subcommittee on Overseas Information Programs of the United States, 82d Cong., 2d Sess.

I have supposed that a State of this Union was entirely free to make its own law, independently of any foreign-made law, except as the Full Faith and Credit Clause of the Constitution might require deference to the law of a sister state or the Supremacy Clause require submission to federal law. I do not see how one can spell out of the principles of separation of church and state a doctrine that a state submit property rights to settlement by canon law. If there is any relevant inference to be drawn, I should think it would be to the contrary, though I see no obstacle to the state allowing ecclesiastical law to govern in such a situation if it sees fit. I should infer that from the trend of such decisions as Erie R. Co. v. Tompkins, 304 U.S. 64, 58 S.Ct. 817, 82 L.Ed. 1188; Klaxon Co. v. Stentor Electric Mfg. Co., 313 U.S. 487, 61 S.Ct. 1020, 85 L.Ed. 1477; Griffin v. McCoach, 313 U.S. 498, 61 S.Ct. 1023, 85 L.Ed. 1481.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

132 The only ground pressed upon this appeal is that the judgment below violates the religious freedom guaranteed by the Fourteenth Amendment. I find this contention so insubstantial that I would dismiss the appeal. Whether New York has arrived at the correct solution of this question is a matter on which its own judges have disagreed. But they have disagreed within the area which is committed to them for agreement or disagreement and I find nothing which warrants our invading their jurisdiction.

73 S.Ct. 143, 344 U.S. 94, 97 L.Ed. 120

END OF DOCUMENT

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

BLUEBIRD OFFICE SUPPLIES (888) 477-0700 www.bluebirdonline.com

EXHIBIT 30

654 N.Y.S.2d 791
1997 N.Y. Slip Op. 01949
(Cite as: 229 A.D.2d 159, 654 N.Y.S.2d 791)

Supreme Court, Appellate Division, Second Department, New York.

KENNETH R. (Anonymous), et al., Respondents,
v.
ROMAN CATHOLIC DIOCESE OF BROOKLYN, Appellant, et al., Defendant.

March 3, 1997.
Certiorari Denied Nov. 10, 1997. See 118 S.Ct. 413.

Plaintiffs sued diocese for negligent hiring, supervision, and retention of priest. The Supreme Court, Kings County, Shaw, J., entered order denying cross-motion to dismiss filed by diocese, and diocese appealed. The Supreme Court, Appellate Division, Goldstein, J., held that: (1) plaintiffs failed to state negligent hiring claim based on allegations that diocese failed to screen or determine priest's fitness for priesthood; (2) diocese could not be charged with negligence for failing to investigate further prior to hiring priest, thus defeating plaintiffs' claim alleging failure to establish proper guidelines and procedures and negligent hiring; (3) allegations that diocese had notice of priest's propensity to sexually abuse children stated claims for negligent supervision and retention; and (4) negligent supervision and retention claims were not barred by First Amendment or by Religious Freedom Restoration Act (RFRA).

Modified, and affirmed as modified.

West Headnotes

[1] Religious Societies ⇐30
332k30 Most Cited Cases

Sexual abuse by priest did not fall within scope of priest's employment, and thus diocese was not vicariously liable for his conduct under theory of respondeat superior.

[2] Master and Servant ⇐303
255k303 Most Cited Cases

In instances where employer cannot be held vicariously liable for its employee's torts, employer can still be held liable under theories of negligent hiring, negligent retention, and negligent supervision. Restatement (Second) of Torts § 317; Restatement (Second) of Agency § 213 comment.

[3] Master and Servant ⇐303
255k303 Most Cited Cases

Necessary element for claims of negligent hiring, negligent retention, and negligent supervision is that employer knew or should have known of employee's propensity for conduct which caused injury. Restatement (Second) of Torts § 317; Restatement (Second) of Agency § 213 comment.

[4] Pretrial Procedure ⇐622
307Ak622 Most Cited Cases

When considering application to dismiss, criterion is whether proponent of pleading has cause of action, not whether he has stated one. McKinney's CPLR 3211(a), par. 7.

[5] Pleading ⇐48
302k48 Most Cited Cases

Generally, determination as to whether proponent of pleading has cause of action can be made from factual allegations in four corners of complaint. McKinney's CPLR 3211(a), par. 7.

[6] Pretrial Procedure ⇐682.1
307Ak682.1 Most Cited Cases

Evidentiary material may be considered to remedy defects in complaint, and, unless it can be shown that material fact as claimed by pleader to be one is not a fact at all and unless it can be said that no significant dispute exists regarding it, dismissal may not be predicated on such evidentiary material. McKinney's CPLR 3211(a), par. 7.

[7] Master and Servant ⇐329
255k329 Most Cited Cases

[7] Pretrial Procedure ⇐649
307Ak649 Most Cited Cases

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

There is no statutory requirement that causes of action sounding in negligent hiring, negligent retention, or negligent supervision be pleaded with specificity, but complaint which contains bare legal conclusions and/or factual claims which are flatly contradicted by documentary evidence should be dismissed for failure to state claim. McKinney's CPLR 3211(a), par. 7.

[8] Religious Societies ⚿30
332k30 Most Cited Cases

Plaintiffs asserted no facts from which one could infer that diocese in New York was responsible for priest's status as Roman Catholic priest, since priest was ordained in Venezuela by officials of diocese there, and thus plaintiffs failed to state negligent hiring claim based on allegations that New York diocese failed to screen or determine priest's fitness for priesthood.

[9] Constitutional Law ⚿84.5(10)
92k84.5(10) Most Cited Cases

[9] Religious Societies ⚿30
332k30 Most Cited Cases

Ordination to priesthood confers religious, not legal status, and may be characterized as "quintessentially religious" matter, and imposing liability for conferring that status would create serious concerns of excessive entanglement in religious affairs, in violation of First Amendment. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 1.

[10] Religious Societies ⚿30
332k30 Most Cited Cases

Because priest came to diocese in New York with letter of reference from his Archbishop, which gave New York diocese no reason to believe there was any problem, diocese could not be charged with negligence for failing to investigate further prior to hiring him, thus defeating plaintiffs' claim alleging failure to establish proper guidelines and procedures and negligent hiring; diocese did not and could not have known of priest's sexually deviant propensities when he arrived in New York from Venezuela with letter of reference.

[11] Master and Servant ⚿332(1.1)
255k332(1.1) Most Cited Cases

Question of whether employer had common-law duty to investigate potential hire is question of law for courts.

[12] Master and Servant ⚿303
255k303 Most Cited Cases

There is no common-law duty to institute specific procedures for hiring employees unless employer knows of facts that would lead reasonably prudent person to investigate prospective employee.

[13] Religious Societies ⚿31(4)
332k31(4) Most Cited Cases

Allegations that diocese acquired actual or constructive notice of codefendant priest's propensity to sexually abuse children from statements made by infant plaintiffs to priests at two churches and from codefendant himself stated claims of negligent supervision and retention. Restatement (Second) of Torts § 317; Restatement (Second) of Agency § 213 comment.

[14] Pretrial Procedure ⚿681
307Ak681 Most Cited Cases

Allegations in bill of particulars are to be taken into account in considering sufficiency of challenged cause of action. McKinney's CPLR 3211(a), par. 7.

[15] Constitutional Law ⚿84.5(10)
92k84.5(10) Most Cited Cases

[15] Religious Societies ⚿30
332k30 Most Cited Cases

Generally, imposing liability against church for negligent retention and negligent supervision of priest would not violate constitutional and statutory guarantees of free exercise of religion and separation of church and state. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 1; Restatement (Second) of Torts § 317.

[16] Constitutional Law ⚿84.1
92k84.1 Most Cited Cases

Generally, law that is neutral and of general applicability need not be justified by compelling governmental interest even if law has incidental effect of burdening particular religious practice.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 1.

[17] Constitutional Law ⇐84.5(10)
92k84.5(10) Most Cited Cases

[17] Religious Societies ⇐30
332k30 Most Cited Cases

First Amendment did not prevent negligent supervision and retention claims based on allegations that diocese had notice of codefendant priest's propensity to sexually abuse children from statements made by infant plaintiffs to priests at two churches and from codefendant himself, absent any indication that requiring increased supervision of priest or termination of his employment by diocese based upon priest's conduct would violate any religious doctrine or inhibit any religious practice. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 1; Restatement (Second) of Torts § 317.

[18] 78k1035 Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 78k113)

[18] Religious Societies ⇐30
332k30 Most Cited Cases

Religious Freedom Restoration Act (RFRA) did not prevent negligent supervision and retention claims based on allegations that diocese had notice of codefendant priest's propensity to sexually abuse children from statements made by infant plaintiffs to priests at two churches and from codefendant himself, absent any indication that level of supervision exercised over priest, or his retention in employ of diocese, was dictated by any religious doctrine. Religious Freedom Restoration Act of 1993, § 2 et seq., 42 U.S.C.A. § 2000bb et seq.

[19] 78k1032 Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 78k110.1)

Religious Freedom Restoration Act (RFRA) only applies if free exercise of religion is "substantially burdened" because activities in question are motivated by religious beliefs. Religious Freedom Restoration Act of 1993, § 2 et seq., 42 U.S.C.A. § 2000bb et seq.

[20] Constitutional Law ⇐84.5(7.1)
92k84.5(7.1) Most Cited Cases

While First Amendment prohibits regulation of religious beliefs, conduct by religious entity remains subject to regulation for protection of society. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 1.

[21] Constitutional Law ⇐84.5(7.1)
92k84.5(7.1) Most Cited Cases

[21] Religious Societies ⇐30
332k30 Most Cited Cases

First Amendment does not grant religious organizations absolute immunity from tort liability, and thus religious entities must be held accountable for their actions, even if that conduct is carried out as part of church's religious practices. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 1.

[22] Religious Societies ⇐30
332k30 Most Cited Cases

Religious entities have some duty to prevent injuries incurred by persons in their employ whom they have reason to believe will engage in injurious conduct.

*793 *160 Conway, Farrell, Curtin & Kelly, P.C., New York City, (Jonathan Uejio, of counsel), for appellant.

Kenneth Litwack, Bayside, NY, (Robert Litwack of counsel), for respondents.

Before MILLER, J.P., and JOY, ALTMAN and GOLDSTEIN, JJ.

GOLDSTEIN, Justice.

Appeal by the defendant Roman Catholic Diocese of Brooklyn, as limited by its brief, from so much of an order of the Supreme Court (James H. Shaw, J.), dated December 11, 1995, and entered in Kings County, as, in an action to recover damages, inter alia, for the negligent hiring, supervision, and retention of Enrique Diaz Jimenez, a priest who was employed by the appellant, denied those branches of its cross motion pursuant to CPLR 3211(a)(7) which were to dismiss the fourth, fifth, sixth, seventh, eighth, ninth, and eleventh causes of action of the plaintiffs' amended complaint sounding, inter alia, in negligent hiring, negligent retention, and negligent supervision.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

At issue here is whether the plaintiffs have stated causes of action against the appellant Roman Catholic Diocese of Brooklyn sounding in negligent hiring, negligent retention, and negligent supervision. We find that their allegations with *161 respect to negligent retention and negligent supervision are sufficient to withstand the appellant's cross motion to dismiss the complaint pursuant to CPLR 3211(a)(7), but that they do not have a cause of action to recover damages for negligent hiring.

[1] The plaintiffs' amended complaint alleges that, "on or about or between July 13, 1983, and August 31, 1989", the appellant's codefendant, Enrique Diaz Jimenez, an ordained Roman Catholic priest, sexually abused the infant plaintiffs. Enrique Diaz Jimenez pleaded guilty to sexual abuse in the third degree based upon this conduct. However, as noted by the Supreme Court, that conduct did not fall within the scope of his employment and therefore the appellant is not vicariously liable for his conduct under the theory of respondeat superior (see, Cornell v. State of New York, 46 N.Y.2d 1032, 416 N.Y.S.2d 542, 389 N.E.2d 1064; Mercer v. State of New York, 125 A.D.2d 376, 509 N.Y.S.2d 103). Consequently, the Supreme Court granted those branches of the appellant's cross motion which were to dismiss the first and second causes of action insofar as asserted against it. The Supreme Court also dismissed the plaintiffs' third cause of action sounding in clergy malpractice, and their tenth cause of action alleging that the appellant created a "climate and custom" of indifference to sexual abuse. Those rulings are not before us on this appeal.

[2][3] In instances where an employer cannot be held vicariously liable for its employee's torts, the employer can still be held liable under theories of negligent hiring, negligent retention, and negligent supervision (see, Hall v. Smathers, 240 N.Y. 486, 148 N.E. 654; Restatement [Second] of Torts § 317). However, a necessary element of such causes of action is that the employer knew or should have known of the employee's propensity for the conduct which caused the injury (see, e.g., Park v. N.Y.C. & H.R.R. Co., 155 N.Y. 215, 49 N.E. 674; 794 Gallo v. Dugan, 228 A.D.2d 376, 645 N.Y.S.2d 7; Mataxas v. North Shore Univ. Hosp., 211 A.D.2d 762, 621 N.Y.S.2d 683; Detone v. Bullit Courier Serv., 140 A.D.2d 278, 528 N.Y.S.2d 575; Di Cosala v. Kay, 91 N.J. 159, 450 A.2d 508; Restatement [Second] of Agency § 213, comment d).

[4][5][6] When considering an application to dismiss a cause of action pursuant to CPLR 3211(a)(7), "the criterion is whether the proponent of the pleading has a cause of action, not whether he has stated one" (Guggenheimer v. Ginzburg, 43 N.Y.2d 268, 275, 401 N.Y.S.2d 182, 372 N.E.2d 17; see, Leon v. Martinez, 84 N.Y.2d 83, 614 N.Y.S.2d 972, 638 N.E.2d 511; Rovello v. Orofino Realty Co., 40 N.Y.2d 633, 636, 389 N.Y.S.2d 314, 357 N.E.2d 970). Generally, such a determination can be made from the factual allegations in the four corners of the complaint (see, Guggenheimer v. Ginzburg, supra, at 275, 401 N.Y.S.2d 182, 372 N.E.2d 17; *162*Foley v. D'Agostino,* 21 A.D.2d 60, 64-65, 248 N.Y.S.2d 121). Evidentiary material may be considered to "remedy defects in the complaint" (Rovello v. Orofino Realty Co., supra, at 636, 389 N.Y.S.2d 314, 357 N.E.2d 970), "and, unless it has been shown that a material fact as claimed by the pleader to be one is not a fact at all and unless it can be said that no significant dispute exists regarding it", dismissal may not be predicated on such evidentiary material (Guggenheimer v. Ginzburg, supra, at 275, 401 N.Y.S.2d 182, 372 N.E.2d 17).

[7] There is no statutory requirement that causes of action sounding in negligent hiring, negligent retention, or negligent supervision be pleaded with specificity (see, Jones v. Trane, 153 Misc.2d 822, 831, 591 N.Y.S.2d 927; cf., CPLR 3016; Byrd v. Faber, 57 Ohio St.3d 56, 61, 565 N.E.2d 584, 589). However, a complaint which contains bare legal conclusions and/or factual claims which are "flatly contradicted by documentary evidence" should be dismissed pursuant to CPLR 3211(a)(7) (Corporate National Realty v. Philson, Ltd., 232 A.D.2d 518, 648 N.Y.S.2d 974; see, e.g., Doria v. Masucci, 230 A.D.2d 764, 646 N.Y.S.2d 363; Lovisa Constr. Co. v. Metropolitan Transp. Auth., 198 A.D.2d 333, 603 N.Y.S.2d 886).

[8] The plaintiffs' amended complaint alleges that the appellant "had prior knowledge or should have known that the defendant Jimenez was a sexual deviant" and therefore was negligent in hiring, supervising, and retaining him. The plaintiffs further contend that the appellant failed to "establish proper guidelines and procedures", failed to "properly screen and hire applicants to the priesthood", and "failed to have Defendant Jimenez examined psychiatrically and/or psychologically to determine his fitness for serving in the capacity as a Roman Catholic priest".

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

Certain undisputed facts emerge from the documentary evidence in the record. The codefendant Jimenez was ordained a Roman Catholic priest in 1977, in Venezuela. He came to the Roman Catholic Diocese of Brooklyn in 1983, with a letter of reference from the Archbishop of Merida, Venezuela, and was assigned to work in St. Leo's Church.

[9] Ordination to the priesthood confers a religious, not legal status, and may be characterized as a "quintessentially religious" matter (Serbian Eastern Orthodox Diocese v. Milivojevich, 426 U.S. 696, 720, 96 S.Ct. 2372, 2385, 49 L.Ed.2d 151). Imposing liability for conferring that status would create serious concerns of excessive entanglement in religious affairs, in violation of the First Amendment of the United States Constitution (see, Pritzlaff v. Archdiocese of Milwaukee, 194 Wis.2d 302, 327, 533 N.W.2d 780, 790, cert. 163 denied 516 U.S. 1116, 116 S.Ct. 920, 133 L.Ed.2d 849; see also, Rayburn v. General Conference of Seventh-day Adventists, 772 F.2d 1164, cert. denied 478 U.S. 1020, 106 S.Ct. 3333, 92 L.Ed.2d 739; Downs v. Roman Catholic Archbishop of Baltimore, 111 Md.App. 616, 683 A.2d 808).

However, the question of whether liability could ever be imposed for ordination to the priesthood need not be determined here since the only entity of the Roman Catholic Church sued by the plaintiffs is the appellant Roman Catholic Diocese of Brooklyn which the amended complaint alleges "is a corporation duly licensed to do business in the State of New York". Thus, pursuant to the allegations in the amended complaint, the appellant *795 is a separate entity (see generally, Heenan v. Roman Catholic Diocese of Rockville Centre, 158 A.D.2d 587, 551 N.Y.S.2d 555). The plaintiffs assert no facts from which one could infer that the appellant was responsible for Jimenez's status as a Roman Catholic priest, since he was ordained in Venezuela by officials of the diocese there. Accordingly, the fifth and eighth causes of action, alleging that the appellant failed to screen or determine Jimenez's fitness for the priesthood, must be dismissed.

[10][11] With respect to negligent hiring, the documentary evidence in the record establishes that the appellant did not and could not have known of Jimenez's propensities when he arrived here from Venezuela with a letter of reference. The plaintiffs allege that the appellant should have initiated some investigations of Jimenez before hiring him to work in a church under its control. The question of whether there is such a common-law duty is a question of law for the courts (see, D'Amico v. Christie, 71 N.Y.2d 76, 524 N.Y.S.2d 1, 518 N.E.2d 896; Eiseman v. State of New York, 70 N.Y.2d 175, 190, 518 N.Y.S.2d 608, 511 N.E.2d 1128).

[12] There is no common-law duty to institute specific procedures for hiring employees unless the employer knows of facts that would lead a reasonably prudent person to investigate the prospective employee (see, Ford v. Gildin, 200 A.D.2d 224, 226-227, 613 N.Y.S.2d 139; Stevens v. Lankard, 31 A.D.2d 602, 297 N.Y.S.2d 686, affd. 25 N.Y.2d 640, 306 N.Y.S.2d 257, 254 N.E.2d 339; Amendolara v. Macy's N.Y., 19 A.D.2d 702, 241 N.Y.S.2d 39; cf., Rhames v. Supermarkets Gen. Corp., 230 A.D.2d 780, 646 N.Y.S.2d 622). Since Jimenez came to the appellant with a letter of reference from his Archbishop, which gave the appellant no reason to believe there was any problem, the appellant cannot be charged with negligence for failing to investigate further (see, Lopez v. William J. Burns Int. Detective Agency, 48 A.D.2d 645, 368 N.Y.S.2d 221; Roman Catholic Bishop of San Diego v. Superior Ct., 42 Cal.App.4th 1556, 50 Cal.Rptr.2d 399; 164 Kennedy v. Roman Catholic Diocese of Burlington, Vermont, Inc., 921 F.Supp. 231). [FN*] Accordingly, the plaintiffs' sixth cause of action, alleging "failure to establish proper guidelines and procedures", and the plaintiffs' seventh cause of action, alleging that the appellant "was negligent in hiring Jimenez", must be dismissed.

FN* The plaintiffs allege in their bill of particulars that certain unspecified "studies" have been published "showing > the existence of ongoing problems in the priesthood relating to sexual activity with children thereby raising a duty to inquire". However, imposing a special duty to inquire as to backgrounds of priests as a class has no legal basis, and carries with it discriminatory overtones against individuals merely because they have been ordained to the priesthood (see generally, McDaniel v. Paty, 435 U.S. 618, 98 S.Ct. 1322, 55 L.Ed.2d 593).

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

[13][14][15] In their bill of particulars, the plaintiffs allege that the appellant acquired actual or constructive notice of the codefendant Jimenez's propensity to sexually abuse children from "statements made by the infant plaintiffs to priests at St. Leo's Church and Our Lady of Sorrows Church", and from the codefendant Jimenez himself. Allegations in a "bill of particulars are to be taken into account in considering the sufficiency of the challenged causes of action" (Moore v. Johnson, 147 A.D.2d 621, 538 N.Y.S.2d 28; see, Nader v. General Motors Corp., 25 N.Y.2d 560, 565, 307 N.Y.S.2d 647, 255 N.E.2d 765). If, as the plaintiffs allege in their bill of particulars, the infant plaintiffs and/or Jimenez himself made statements to other priests at St. Leo's Church or Our Lady of Sorrows Church giving them notice of Jimenez's conduct, the plaintiffs may have causes of action sounding in negligent retention and negligent supervision. Pursuant to prevailing case law, as a general rule, imposition of such liability would not violate constitutional and statutory guarantees of free exercise of religion and separation of church and State.

[16][17] It is well settled that generally, "a law that is neutral and of general applicability need not be justified by a compelling governmental interest even if the law has the incidental effect of burdening a particular religious practice" (Church of Lukumi Babalu Aye v. City of Hialeah, 508 U.S. 520, 531, 113 S.Ct. 2217, 2226, 124 L.Ed.2d 472; see, 796*Employment Division, Dept. of Human Resources of Ore. v. Smith,* 494 U.S. 872, 110 S.Ct. 1595, 108 L.Ed.2d 876). Some cases have indicated that the First Amendment to the United States Constitution may be asserted as a defense if the defendant's conduct that caused the plaintiff's injury finds its basis in religious beliefs and practices (see, Wisconsin v. Yoder, 406 U.S. 205, 215-216, 92 S.Ct. 1526, 1533-1534, 32 L.Ed.2d 15; Konkle v. Henson, 672 N.E.2d 450 [Ind App]; Destefano v. Grabrian, 763 P.2d 275, 283 [Colo]). Here, however, there is no indication that requiring increased supervision of Jimenez or the termination of his employment by the appellant *165 based upon Jimenez's conduct would violate any religious doctrine or inhibit any religious practice (see, Jimmy Swaggart Ministries v. Board of Equalization of Cal., 493 U.S. 378, 110 S.Ct. 688, 107 L.Ed.2d 796; L.L.N. v. Clauder, 203 Wis.2d 570, 552 N.W.2d 879).

[18][19] The enactment of the Religious Freedom Restoration Act of 1993 (42 U.S.C. § 2000bb, et seq.) does not alter this analysis. That statute provides that if a law of general applicability substantially burdens the exercise of religion, such application must be in furtherance of a compelling state interest and must constitute "the least restrictive means of furthering that compelling governmental interest" (42 U.S.C. § 2000bb-1[b][2]). However, that statute only applies if the free exercise of religion is " 'substantially' burdened" (Geisinsky v. Village of Kings Point, 226 A.D.2d 340, 341, 640 N.Y.S.2d 212) because the activities in question are motivated by religious beliefs (see, Mack v. O'Leary, 7th Cir., 80 F.3d 1175, 1178; Bryant v. Gomez, 9th Cir., 46 F.3d 948, 949; Matter of Salahuddin v. Coughlin, 222 A.D.2d 950, 636 N.Y.S.2d 145, cert. denied 519 U.S. 937, 117 S.Ct. 317, 136 L.Ed.2d 232). As previously noted, there is no indication that the level of supervision exercised over Jimenez, or his retention in the appellant's employ, was dictated by any religious doctrine. Indeed, it appears from the record that Jimenez's employment relationship with the appellant was ultimately terminated, and his requests for additional employment were denied (cf., Schmidt v. Bishop, 779 F.Supp. 321, 331).

[20][21][22] Moreover, while the First Amendment to the United States Constitution prohibits regulation of religious beliefs, conduct by a religious entity "remains subject to regulation for the protection of society" (Cantwell v. State of Connecticut, 310 U.S. 296, 304, 60 S.Ct. 900, 903, 84 L.Ed. 1213; see, Employment Division Dept. of Human Resources of Oregon v. Smith, 494 U.S. 872, 110 S.Ct. 1595, supra; Destefano v. Grabrian, 763 P.2d 275, 283, supra). The First Amendment does not grant religious organizations absolute immunity from tort liability (see, Konkle v. Henson, 672 N.E.2d 450, 456, supra; Moses v. Diocese of Colorado, 863 P.2d 310, 319). Therefore, religious entities must be held accountable for their actions, "even if that conduct is carried out as part of the church's religious practices" (Meroni v. Holy Spirit Assn. for Unification of World Christianity, 119 A.D.2d 200, 203, 506 N.Y.S.2d 174). Religious entities have some duty to prevent injuries inflicted by persons in their employ whom they have reason to believe will engage in injurious conduct (see, Konkle v. Henson, supra, at 456; L.L.N. v. Clauder, 203 Wis.2d 570, 552 N.W.2d 879, supra; Erickson v. Christenson, 99 Or.App. 104, 109, 781 P.2d 383, 386-387; Gallas v. Greek Orthodox Archdiocese of N & S Am., 154 Misc.2d 494, 499-500, 587 N.Y.S.2d 82; Jones v. Trane, 153 Misc.2d 822, 830-831, 591 N.Y.S.2d 927, supra).

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

166 Therefore, the plaintiffs' fourth and ninth causes of action, sounding in negligent supervision and retention, and the eleventh cause of action, asserting a derivative claim, are sufficient to withstand a motion to dismiss the complaint pursuant to CPLR 3211.

Accordingly, the order should be modified, on the law, by deleting the provisions thereof which denied those branches of the appellant's cross motion which were to dismiss the fifth, sixth, seventh, and eighth causes of action, and substituting therefor provisions granting those branches of the cross motion.

ORDERED that the order is modified, on the law, by deleting the provisions thereof which denied those branches of the appellant's cross motion which were to dismiss the fifth, sixth, seventh, and eighth causes of action, and substituting therefor provisions granting those branches of the cross motion; as so modified, the order is affirmed insofar *797 as appealed from, without costs or disbursements.

MILLER, J.P., and JOY, and ALTMAN, JJ., concur.

654 N.Y.S.2d 791, 229 A.D.2d 159, 1997 N.Y. Slip Op. 01949

END OF DOCUMENT

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

BLUEBIRD OFFICE SUPPLIES (888) 477-0700 www.bluebirdoffice.com

EXHIBIT 31

672 N.E.2d 450
(Cite as: 672 N.E.2d 450)

Court of Appeals of Indiana.

Katherine A. KONKLE, Appellant-Plaintiff,
v.
Floyd B. HENSON; The United Pentecostal Church located in Warsaw, Indiana; Indiana District Board of the United Pentecostal Church International (incorporated); and The United Pentecostal Church International (incorporated), Appellees-Defendants.

No. 43A03-9507-CV-250.

Oct. 28, 1996.

Victim of sexual molestation by minister brought negligence action premised on doctrine of respondeat superior and negligent hiring and retention against church and church associations. The Circuit Court, Kosciusko County, Daniel J. Vanderpool, Special Judge, granted summary judgment for defendants. Plaintiff appealed. The Court of Appeals, Staton, J., held that: (1) First Amendment did not bar claims; but (2) minister was not acting in scope of his employment, such that plaintiff could not maintain claim under respondeat superior doctrine; (3) limitations period began to run each time minister touched plaintiff; (4) fact question as to whether plaintiff was member of church precluded summary judgment; and (5) plaintiff failed to establish that associations knew about minister's misconduct, as required to maintain claim for negligent hiring and retention.

Affirmed in part, reversed in part and remanded.

West Headnotes

[1] Appeal and Error ⇐934(1)
30k934(1) Most Cited Cases

On review of entry of summary judgment, Court of Appeals does not weigh evidence, but considers facts in light most favorable to nonmoving party. Trial Procedure Rule 56(c).

[2] Master and Servant ⇐303
255k303 Most Cited Cases

Indiana recognizes tort of negligent hiring and retention of employee. Restatement (Second) of Torts § 317.

[3] Master and Servant ⇐303
255k303 Most Cited Cases

In order to determine if employer was liable for negligent hiring or retention of employee, court must determine if employer exercised reasonable care. Restatement (Second) of Torts § 317.

[4] Constitutional Law ⇐84.5(10)
92k84.5(10) Most Cited Cases

First Amendment does not bar negligence claims against churches for actions of ministers. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 1.

[5] Constitutional Law ⇐84.5(10)
92k84.5(10) Most Cited Cases

[5] Religious Societies ⇐30
332k30 Most Cited Cases

First Amendment did not bar action against church and church associations for negligent hiring and retention of minister by victim of minister's sexual molestation; review of victim's claims involved applying secular standards to secular conduct. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 1.

[6] Constitutional Law ⇐84.5(10)
92k84.5(10) Most Cited Cases

[6] Religious Societies ⇐30
332k30 Most Cited Cases

First Amendment did not bar sexual molestation victim's claim against church and church association under doctrine of respondeat superior, for actions of minister; review of claim involved applying traditional tort law to claims in determining whether minister was acting within course and scope of his employment when tort occurred. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 1.

[7] Master and Servant ⇐302(2)
255k302(2) Most Cited Cases

Under doctrine of respondeat superior, employer is liable for acts of its employees which are committed within course and scope of their employment; diligence, could have discovered that injury had been sustained as result of tortious act of another.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

[20] Limitation of Actions ⇐55(6)
241k55(6) Most Cited Cases

Sexual molestation victim's claim against church and church associations for negligent hiring, supervision, and retention of minister who committed acts of molestation was not continuing tort, but rather, accrued, such that limitations period began to run, each time minister touched victim inappropriately. West's A.I.C. 34-1-2-2(1).

[21] Associations ⇐20(1)
41k20(1) Most Cited Cases

Generally, member of unincorporated association is precluded from bringing suit against association.

[22] Judgment ⇐185.2(8)
228k185.2(8) Most Cited Cases

Party cannot create issue of material fact to prevent grant of summary judgment by submitting affidavit which directly contradicts prior, sworn deposition testimony. Trial Procedure Rule 56(C).

[23] Judgment ⇐181(21)
228k181(21) Most Cited Cases

Fact question as to whether victim of sexual molestation was member of church precluded summary judgment in victim's action against church and church associations for negligent hiring and retention of minister who committed molestations. Trial Procedure Rule 56(C).

[24] Religious Societies ⇐30
332k30 Most Cited Cases

Victim of sexual molestation by minister failed to establish that church association knew about minister's misconduct when he was hired, as required to maintain cause of action for negligent hiring and retention against associations.

*452 Kirk A. Weikart, Harrington Maley Gardner & Sayre, Richmond, Thomas R. Lemon, Jane L. Kauffman, Lemon Arney Hearn & Leininger, Warsaw, for appellant-plaintiff.

Arthur G. Surguine, Jr., Craig J. Bobay, Hunt, Suedhoff, Borror & Eilbacher, Fort Wayne, Frank J. Gray, Travis S. Friend, Beckman, Lawson, Sandler, Snyder & Federoff, Fort Wayne, for United Pentecostal Church International.

Richard K. Helm, Rockhill, Pinnick, Pequignot, Helm & Landis, Warsaw, for United Pentecostal Church Located in Warsaw, Indiana.

OPINION

STATON, Judge.

Katherine A. Konkle ("Konkle") had been sexually molested by Floyd Henson, a minister of her church, since she was seven years old. The minister, Floyd Henson, is not a party to this appeal. After a grant of summary *453 judgment in favor of the United Pentecostal Church located in Warsaw, Indiana (the "Local Church"); the Indiana District Board of the United Pentecostal Church International (the "District Board"); and the United Pentecostal Church International (the "International Church") (collectively referred to as the "Church Defendants"), Konkle appeals and presents three issues for our review which we restate as follows:

I. Whether the trial court erred in granting summary judgment because the First Amendment bars judicial intervention in ecclesiastical affairs.

II. Whether the trial court erred in determining that the acts committed by Floyd Henson were committed outside the scope of his employment.

III. Whether the trial court erred in determining that Konkle's claims were barred by the statute of limitations.

On cross-appeal, the Church Defendants raise several issues which we consolidate and restate as follows:

IV. Whether the trial court erred in denying summary judgment to the Local Church because a member of an unincorporated association cannot sue an association of which she is a member.

V. Whether any of the claims made by Konkle are causes of action recognized in the State of Indiana.

We affirm in part, reverse in part, and remand.

The facts most favorable to the nonmovant, Konkle, reveal that she was molested by Floyd Henson ("Henson"), a minister at the Local Church, from the time she was seven. Konkle began experiencing emotional problems and entered counseling in middle school. The counseling continued for seven or eight years, but Konkle never told her counselor about the on-going molestation. When Konkle was about fifteen or sixteen, she realized that Henson's behavior was wrong. Approximately one year later, she also realized that she could control and prevent some of Henson's behavior. She was able to limit his actions to occasionally touching her breast or other parts of her body through her clothes. When Konkle was approximately seventeen or eighteen, she and her mother discussed the possibility of filing criminal charges against Henson but decided against it. The last touching occurred in November or December 1990, when Konkle was twenty, shortly before Henson resigned.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

Konkle filed her complaint on October 2, 1992, four years after she reached the age of majority, but less than two years after the final touching occurred. She alleged various causes of action against Henson and the Church Defendants. [FN1] Through her various allegations of misconduct by the Church Defendants, Konkle states claims for negligent hiring, supervision and retention of an employee and respondeat superior liability.

> FN1. Her claims against Henson included breach of fiduciary duty, intentional infliction of emotional distress, assault and battery, sexual battery, molestation of a child, false imprisonment and "other intentional acts." They are not at issue in this appeal except to the extent the Church Defendants might be liable under the doctrine of respondeat superior.

The Church Defendants filed motions for summary judgment on Konkle's claims. [FN2] The trial court granted summary judgment in favor of the Church Defendants on the basis that the First Amendment bars judicial intervention in ecclesiastical affairs. In its order, the trial court recognized that the issue of intervention was an issue of first impression in Indiana and that a higher court might disagree with that determination. To aid the reviewing court, the trial court also ruled on additional grounds for summary judgment which might become relevant if judicial intervention is proper. Thus, the trial court: (1) granted summary judgment to the Church Defendants upon the issue of respondeat superior because the acts were outside the scope of the minister's employment; (2) denied summary judgment to the Local Church on the issue of claims by a member of an unincorporated association; (3) denied summary judgment to the Church Defendants upon the issues of negligence against the Church Defendants; and (4) * 454 found that the statute of limitations would bar recovery against the Church Defendants with the exception of acts committed after August 4, 1990. Konkle now appeals.

> FN2. Henson did not take part in the motions for summary judgment and is not a party to this appeal.

Summary judgment is appropriate only when there is no genuine issue of material fact and the moving party is entitled to judgment as a matter of law. Ind. Trial Rule 56(C). The burden is on the moving party to prove there are no genuine issues of material fact and that the moving party is entitled to judgment as a matter of law. Once the moving party has sustained this burden, the non-moving party must respond by setting forth specific facts showing a genuine issue for trial; he may not simply rest on the allegations of his pleadings. Stephenson v. Ledbetter, 596 N.E.2d 1369, 1371 (Ind.1992). At the time of filing the motion or a response to the motion, a moving party or non-moving party shall designate to the court all parts of pleadings, depositions, answers to interrogatories, admissions, matters of judicial notice, and any other matters on which it relies for purposes of the motion. T.R. 56(C).

[1] When reviewing an entry of summary judgment, we stand in the shoes of the trial court. We do not weigh the evidence but will consider the facts in the light most favorable to the non-moving party. Reed v. Luzny, 627 N.E.2d 1362, 1363 (Ind.Ct.App.1994), reh. denied, trans. denied. We may sustain a summary judgment upon any theory supported by the designated materials. T.R. 56(C).

I.
The First Amendment

Konkle first argues that the trial court erred in determining that the First Amendment barred judicial intervention in her claims. The First Amendment, applicable to the states through the Fourteenth Amendment, contains two freedoms with respect to religion: the freedom to believe and the freedom to act. Cantwell v. Connecticut, 310 U.S. 296, 303, 60 S.Ct. 900, 903, 84 L.Ed. 1213(1940). The freedom to believe is absolute, while the freedom to act is subject to regulation for the protection of society. Id. at 303-04, 60 S.Ct. at 903-04. However, any regulation must meet a three-part test:

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

> First, the statute must have a secular legislative purpose; second, its principal or primary effect must be one that neither advances nor inhibits religion; finally, the statute must not foster 'an excessive government entanglement with religion.'

Lemon v. Kurtzman, 403 U.S. 602, 612-13, 91 S.Ct. 2105, 2111, 29 L.Ed.2d 745 (1970) (citations omitted). [FN3] Our review focuses on part three, "excessive government entanglement" in addressing the tort liability of churches for acts committed by ministers.

> FN3. Although Lemon has been criticized and not always applied by the U.S. Supreme Court in freedom of religion cases, it has not been overruled and is still a viable doctrine. See Lamb's Chapel v. Center Moriches Union Free School District, 508 U.S. 384, 394-400, 113 S.Ct. 2141, 2148-50, 124 L.Ed.2d 352 (1993).

Excessive entanglement occurs when the courts begin to review and interpret a church's constitution, laws, and regulations. Serbian Eastern Orthodox Diocese v. Milivojevich, 426 U.S. 696, 709-10, 96 S.Ct. 2372, 2380-81, 49 L.Ed.2d 151 (1976), reh. denied, 429 U.S. 873, 97 S.Ct. 191, 50 L.Ed.2d 155 (1976). The First Amendment prohibits courts from resolving doctrinal disputes or determining whether a religious organization acted in accordance with its canons and bylaws. Id. at 713, 96 S.Ct. at 2382. As a result, to determine whether Konkle can be permitted to proceed on her claims of negligent hiring and respondeat superior liability, each of these causes of action must be analyzed in light of the First Amendment.

[2][3] First, we address whether Konkle's claim for negligent hiring may be curtailed by the First Amendment. Indiana recognizes a tort of negligent hiring and retention of an employee. See Levinson v. Citizens Nat. Bank of Evansville, 644 N.E.2d 1264, 1269 (Ind.Ct.App.1994). Indiana has adopted the Restatement (Second) of Torts § 317 as the standard with regard to this tort. Frye v. American Painting, 642 N.E.2d 995, 998 (Ind.Ct.App.1994). [FN4] In order to determine *455 if an employer is liable for negligent hiring or retention of an employee, the court must determine if the employer exercised reasonable care. Id.

> FN4. Section 317 states: A master is under a duty to exercise reasonable care so to control his servant while acting outside the scope of his employment as to prevent him from intentionally harming others or from so conducting himself as to create an unreasonable risk of bodily harm to them, if
> (a) the servant
> (I) is upon the premises in possession of the master or upon which the servant is privileged to enter only as his servant, or > (ii) is using a chattel of the master, and
> (b) the master
> (I) knows or has reason to know that he has the ability to control his servant, and > (ii) knows or should know of the necessity and opportunity for exercising such control.
> COMMENT:
>
> * * * * * *
>
> c. Retention in employment of servants known to misconduct themselves. There may be circumstances in which the only effective control which the master can exercise over the conduct of his servant is to discharge the servant. Therefore the master may subject himself to liability under the rule stated in this Section by retaining in his employment servants who, to his knowledge, are in the habit of misconducting themselves in a manner dangerous to others. This is true although he has without success made every other effort to prevent their misconduct by the exercise of his authority as master. Thus a railroad company which knows that the > crews of its coal trains are in the habit of throwing coal from the cars as they pass along tracks laid through a city street, to the danger of travelers, is subject to liability if it retains the delinquents in its employment, although it has promulgated rules strictly forbidding such practices. Restatement (Second) of Torts, § 317 (emphasis in original).

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

The Church Defendants argue that in order to determine if their actions were reasonable, the court must judge the church's internal policies and procedures, which are based upon scripture. They argue that this would constitute excessive entanglement. Konkle counters that the First Amendment does not preclude review of a church's operational activities when they endanger public safety. This is an issue of first impression in Indiana and other courts are divided in their approach.

The United States Supreme Court has instructed that the First Amendment does not prohibit courts from opening their doors to religious organizations. [FN5] Presbyterian Church in the United States v. Mary Elizabeth Blue Hull Memorial Presbyterian Church, 393 U.S. 440, 449, 89 S.Ct. 601, 606, 21 L.Ed.2d 658 (1969). Instead, a court can apply neutral principles of law to churches without violating the First Amendment. Id. The First Amendment only prohibits the court from determining underlying questions of religious doctrine and practice. Id.

> FN5. Scott C. Idleman, "Liberty in the Balance: Religion, Politics, and American Constitutionalism," 71 Notre Dame L.Rev. 991, 1024-5, n. 150 (1996).

[4] Applying this analysis to tort claims against religious organizations, several courts have determined that when purely secular conduct is at issue, courts can apply secular standards and hold churches responsible for the effects of their conduct on third parties. See Moses v. Diocese of Colorado, 863 P.2d 310, 320 (Colo.1993), cert. denied, 511 U.S. 1137, 114 S.Ct. 2153, 128 L.Ed.2d 880 (1994) (claims for breach of fiduciary duty, negligent hiring and supervision, and vicarious liability are not based solely on ecclesiastical or disciplinary matters which would raise First Amendment concerns); Erickson v. Christenson, 99 Or.App. 104, 781 P.2d 383 (1989) (claims for breach of fiduciary duty and intentional infliction of emotional distress do not violate First Amendment); Destefano v. Grabrian, 763 P.2d 275 (Colo.1988) (no First Amendment protection when claims are not rooted in religious belief). Thus, the First Amendment does not bar negligence claims against churches for actions of ministers. [FN6] Moses, supra, at 321.

> FN6. Chief Justice Rehnquist has previously indicated that the cases involving the court's power to act in internal church disputes are not applicable to cases involving harm to third persons. The limits on the court's power are confined to intra-church disputes. See General Council on Finance & Administration, United Methodist Church v. California Superior Court, San Diego County, 439 U.S. 1369, 1372, 99 S.Ct. 35, 37-38, 58 L.Ed.2d 77 (1978) (Rehnquist, Circuit Justice 1978).

Other courts, however, have rejected this conclusion, holding that the First Amendment bars a claim against a church for negligent hiring, supervision, and retention of a 456 minister. See Schmidt v. Bishop, 779 F.Supp. 321 (S.D.N.Y.1991) ; Pritzlaff v. Archdiocese of Milwaukee, 194 Wis.2d 302, 533 N.W.2d 780 (1995). These courts hold that even though religious conduct per se is not at issue, the court would have to determine if the Church's conduct was reasonable, requiring "interpretation of church canons and internal church policies and practices." Pritzlaff, supra, 533 N.W.2d at 790.

[5] Here, review of Konkle's claims does not require any inquiry into religious doctrine or practice. Henson's actions were not religiously motivated. Instead, review only requires the court to determine if the Church Defendants knew of Henson's inappropriate conduct, yet failed to protect third parties from him. The court is simply applying secular standards to secular conduct which is permissible under First Amendment standards. Moses, supra.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

The First Amendment does not provide an absolute freedom to act with regard to religious beliefs. Cantwell, supra at 303, 60 S.Ct. at 903. Instead, that freedom can be regulated for the protection of society. Id. The protection of society requires that religious organizations be held accountable for injuries they cause to third persons. Accordingly, we conclude that Konkle's claim is not barred by the First Amendment. To hold otherwise would be to extend the protections beyond that included within the First Amendment and cloak churches with an absolute and exclusive immunity for their actions.

[6] Second, with regard to Konkle's claim under the doctrine of respondeat superior, the Church Defendants cite no authority to support their contention that the First Amendment prohibits such claims nor does our research reveal such authority. Instead, courts apply traditional tort law to the claims and determine whether the minister was acting within the course and scope of his employment when the tort occurred. See Tichenor v. Roman Catholic Church of New Orleans, 32 F.3d 953, 959-60 (5th Cir.1994); Moses, supra, at 329-31; Byrd v. Faber, 57 Ohio St.3d 56, 565 N.E.2d 584, 588 (1991); Destefano, supra, at 286-87. Thus, we conclude that Konkle's respondeat superior claims are not barred by the First Amendment.

Because the Church Defendants are not afforded First Amendment protection from Konkle's claims, we conclude that the trial court erred in granting summary judgment in their favor. However, our review is not complete because the trial court made alternate findings which can serve as the basis for summary judgment. Because we may affirm a grant of summary judgment on any theory supported by the designated evidence, we must review the other issues raised on appeal in conjunction with these alternative findings.

II.

Respondeat Superior Liability

[7][8][9] Konkle next alleges that the trial court erred in determining that the acts committed by Henson were outside the scope of his employment and thus, the Church Defendants were not vicariously liable for his actions. [FN7] Under the doctrine of respondeat superior, an employer is liable for the acts of its employees which were committed within the course and scope of their employment. Stropes v. Heritage House Childrens Center of Shelbyville, 547 N.E.2d 244, 247 (Ind.1989), reh. denied. An employee is acting within the scope of his employment when he is acting, at least in part, to further the interests of his employer. Gomez v. Adams, 462 N.E.2d 212, 223 (Ind.Ct.App.1984), reh. denied, trans. denied. Even if an employee is primarily motivated by self-serving purposes, if he was at least partially serving his *457 employer's interests, liability will accrue. Id. However, simply because an act could not have occurred without access to the employer's facilities does not bring it within the scope of employment. Id.

> FN7. Konkle also raises the issue of whether the Church Defendants' owed a non-delegable duty, under the common carrier exception to respondeat superior liability, to protect her from harm. Stropes v. Heritage House Childrens Center of Shelbyville, 547 N.E.2d 244, 250 (Ind.1989). However, this is a separate and distinct theory of liability from respondeat superior because it is not dependant on whether Henson was acting within the course and scope of his employment. Id. at 251. In her complaint, Konkle made no allegations that the Church Defendants owed her a non- delegable duty of care. Thus, the allegations of her complaint do not support this theory of liability.

[10][11][12][13] The determination of whether an employee was acting within the scope of his employment does not turn on the type of act committed. Stropes, supra, at 249. An employer can be vicariously liable for the criminal acts of an employee. See id.; Gomez, supra. The test is whether the employee's actions were at least for a time authorized. Stropes, supra, at 250. If there is a sufficient association between the authorized and unauthorized acts, then the unauthorized acts can be within the scope of employment. Id. at 249-50. If some of the employee's actions were authorized, the question of whether the unauthorized acts were within the scope of employment is one for the jury. Id. However, if none of the employee's acts were authorized, there is no respondeat superior liability and summary judgment is proper. Id.; Gomez, supra, at 224-25.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

In Stropes, a hospital aide sexually assaulted a mentally retarded individual left in the hospital's care. He began by bathing the boy and changing his bedding which was in furtherance of his employer's business. However, he then sexually molested the boy, an act not authorized by his employer. The unauthorized acts were not drastically different from the authorized acts. Both involved touching the unclothed body of the patient. Id. at 249. The court determined that because both authorized and unauthorized acts were at issue and they were of similar character, there was a question of fact for the jury and summary judgment was not proper. Id. at 250.

The Stropes Court contrasted these facts with the situation in Eagle Mach. Co. v. Am. Dist. Tel. Co., 127 Ind.App. 403, 140 N.E.2d 756 (1957), trans. denied. In Eagle Machine, two employees of a security company stole car parts from a repair shop while they were responding to an alarm. Id., 140 N.E.2d at 758. The employees were not performing authorized acts when they took the car parts because they were not authorized to touch or move the inventory of the repair shop while responding to the alarm. Thus, they did not begin by performing authorized acts which melted into unauthorized acts, so the employer was not vicariously liable. Id. at 759.

[14][15] Here, the acts of molestation perpetrated by Henson were not acts authorized by the Pentecostal Church. Although many of the acts took place in the church building, that is not enough to create liability. Gomez, supra, at 223. The church constitution specifically states that acts of sexual deviance are grounds for dismissal from the ministry. In addition, there is no evidence that at the time Henson molested Konkle he was engaging in authorized acts. Konkle testified that on one occasion, Henson gave her a bible to read as he began to attempt to engage in intercourse with her. However, there is no showing that he was teaching Konkle or performing any other pastoral acts at the time. The unauthorized acts committed by Henson are not similar to his duties as a minister. Henson may have had access to Konkle because of his position as pastor, but he was not engaging in authorized acts or serving the interests of his employer at the time he molested Konkle. Thus, we conclude that summary judgment in favor of the Church Defendants on the issue of respondeat superior liability was proper. [FN8]

FN8. The Church Defendants also dispute whether Henson was an employee of the District Board or the International Church. The trial court did not make a finding concerning the employment relationship. Normally, the question of whether a master-servant relationship exists is a question of fact making summary judgment inappropriate. Daugherty v. Fuller Engineering, 615 N.E.2d 476, 480 (Ind.Ct.App.1993), trans. denied. However, because we determine that Henson's acts were outside the scope of his employment, summary judgment in favor of the Church Defendants was appropriate.

III.
Statute of Limitations

Konkle further argues that the trial court erred when it determined that the statute of limitations bars recovery against the Church Defendants with the exception of acts occurring 458 after August 4, 1990. Konkle's only claim remaining against the Church Defendants is her claim for negligent hiring, supervision and retention of Henson. The parties agree that the applicable statute of limitations for such claims is two years. Ind.Code § 34-1-2- 2(1) (1988). The parties disagree, however, concerning when the statute of limitations began to run for Konkle's claims.

Konkle argues that the acts constitute a continuing wrong so the statute of limitations did not begin to run until November or December 1990, the date of the final incident; therefore, her action filed on October 2, 1992, was timely. The Church Defendants, on the other hand, argue that each act was a separate tort and the statute of limitations began to run when each act was committed. [FN9]

FN9. Because Konkle was less than eighteen years old when most of the conduct at issue occurred, she had until two years after her eighteenth birthday, August 2, 1990, to bring any claims for acts occurring before her eighteenth discovered that an injury had been sustained as a result of the tortious act of another." Wehling, supra, at 843. Here, the basis for Konkle's remaining claim against the Church Defendants is because of their supervision and retention of Henson. As a result, she was injured. Thus, each time Henson touched Konkle inappropriately, she was injured by the Church Defendants' breach of duty, and a new cause of action arose. Thus, the statute of limitations would begin to run once Konkle "discovered" the wrongdoing and the resulting injury.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

Konkle admits that she knew the sexual molestation was occurring and that it was wrong when she was fifteen or sixteen years old. She also had been receiving counseling for her behavioral problems which were attributable to Henson's actions. Thus, she had "discovered" that the tort had occurred and the statute of limitations began running at that time for prior acts committed by Henson. Each subsequent time Henson touched Konkle inappropriately, the discovery was simultaneous to the injury and a new statute of limitations began running for that claim.

Konkle's complaint was filed on October 2, 1992. Because the applicable statute of limitations is two years, Konkle's claim against the Church Defendants for Henson's actions which occurred prior to October 2, 1990, is barred. Thus, we conclude that partial summary judgment in favor of the Church Defendants was proper and the only viable claims remaining are for acts which occurred after October 2, 1990. [FN11]

> FN11. The trial court erroneously used the date August 4, 1990, in its order rather than October 2, 1990. August 4, 1990, is the date when claims from Konkle's minority expired.

IV.

Suit by a Member of an Unincorporated Association

On cross-appeal, the Local Church argues that the trial court erred by not granting summary judgment in its favor because Konkle, as a member of an unincorporated association, is precluded from suing the association. Konkle counters that there is a genuine issue of material fact concerning whether she was a member of the Local Church which precludes summary judgment. In support of her argument, she points to her affidavit in which she stated that she did not consider herself to be a member of the Local Church or any other Pentecostal church.

[21] The general rule in Indiana is that a member of an unincorporated association is precluded from bringing suit against the association. Calvary Baptist Church of Marion, Indiana v. Joseph, 522 N.E.2d 371, 374 (Ind.1988).

> The theory of the general rule is that the members of an unincorporated association are engaged in a joint enterprise. The negligence of each member in the prosecution of that enterprise is imputed to each and every other member so that the member who has suffered damages through the tortious conduct of another member of the association may not recover from the association for such damage. It would be akin to the person suing himself as each member becomes both a principal and an agent as to all other members for the actions of the group itself.

Id. at 374-75.

[22] Furthermore, a party cannot create an issue of material fact by submitting an affidavit which directly contradicts prior, sworn deposition testimony. Keesling v. Baker & Daniels, 571 N.E.2d 562, 568 (Ind.Ct.App.1991), trans. denied (citing Gaboury v. Ireland Road Grace Brethren, Inc., 446 N.E.2d 1310 (Ind.1983), reh. denied). If this were allowed, it would " 'greatly diminish the utility of summary judgment as a procedure for screening out sham issues of fact.' " Gaboury, supra, at 1314 (quoting Perma Research & Development Co. v. Singer Co., 410 F.2d 572, 578 (2d Cir.1969)).

460 [23] Here, Konkle attempts to create a material issue of fact in her affidavit by stating that "she does not now consider herself ever to have been a member of the United Pentecostal Church in Warsaw, Indiana, nor of any other United Pentecostal churches." Record at 335. In support of her statement, she contends that she did not have the requisite understanding to fulfill her membership nor did she contribute financially to the Local Church. In addition, she states that her attendance at services and church activities declined as she grew older. The Local Church points to

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

EXHIBIT 32

91 S.Ct. 2105
29 L.Ed.2d 745
(Cite as: 403 U.S. 602, 91 S.Ct. 2105)

Briefs and Other Related Documents

Supreme Court of the United States

Alton J. LEMON et al., Appellants,
v.
David H. KURTZMAN, as Superintendent as Public Instruction of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, et al.
John R. EARLEY et al., Appellants,
v.
John DiCENSO et al.
William P. ROBINSON, Jr., Commissioner of Education of the State of Rhode Island, et al., Appellants,
v.
John DiCENSO et al.

Nos. 89, 569, 570.

Argued March 3, 1971.
Decided June 28, 1971.

Actions challenging constitutionality of state aid to, or for the benefit of, nonpublic schools. A three-judge United States District Court for the District of Rhode Island, 316 F.Supp. 112, held the Rhode Island statute unconstitutional, while a three-judge United States District Court for the Eastern District of Pennsylvania, 310 F.Supp. 35, dismissed the complaint challenging the Pennsylvania statute, and appeals were taken. The Supreme Court, Mr. Chief Justice Burger, held that both statutes were unconstitutional under the religion clauses of the First Amendment, though promoting secular legislative purposes, since both involved excessive entanglement of state with church, where the Rhode Island program, consisting of salary supplements paid to teachers of secular subjects in nonpublic schools, operated to the benefit of parochial schools constituting integral part of the religious mission of the church and in which the recipient teachers were under religious control and discipline, and involved necessity of comprehensive and continuing state surveillance to insure obedience to restrictions as to the courses which could be taught, the materials which could be used, where the Pennsylvania program, involving reimbursement of nonpublic schools for teachers' salaries, taxtbooks, and instructional materials used in the teaching of specific secular subjects, provided direct aid to church schools and intimate and continuing relationship arising from state's postaudit power to inspect and evaluate schools' financial records and to determine which expenditures were religious and which were secular, and where both posed danger of divisive political activity and possibility of progression leading toward the establishment of state churches and state religion.

Judgment in Rhode Island cases affirmed; judgment in Pennsylvania case reversed and case remanded.

Mr. Justice Douglas filed concurring opinion in which Mr. Justice Black joined and in which Mr. Justice Marshall joined as to the Rhode Island cases; Mr. Justice Brennan filed a concurring opinion and would reverse outright the judgment in the Pennsylvania case; Mr. Justice White filed an opinion concurring in the judgment in the Pennsylvania case and dissenting in the Rhode Island cases; Mr. Justice Marshall took no part in the consideration or decision of the Pennsylvania case.

For the concurring opinion of Mr. Justice Brennan see 91 S.Ct. 2125.

For the concurring and dissenting opinion of Mr. Justice White see 91 S.Ct. 2135.

West Headnotes

[1] Constitutional Law ⇐84.1
92k84.1 Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 92k84(1), 92k84)

Establishment clause of the First Amendment was intended to afford protection against sponsorship, financial support, and active involvement of the sovereign in religious activity. U.S.C.A.Const. Amend. 1.

[2] Constitutional Law ⇐84.1
92k84.1 Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 92k84(1), 92k84)

To avoid conflict with the religion clauses of the First Amendment, statute must have secular legislative purpose, its principal or primary effect must be one that neither advances nor inhibits religion, and it must not foster excessive government entanglement with religion. U.S.C.A.Const. Amend. 1.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

[3] Constitutional Law ⇐84.5(3)
92k84.5(3) Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 92k84)

[3] Schools ⇐7
345k7 Most Cited Cases

[3] Constitutional Law ⇐84.5(4.1)
92k84.5(4.1) Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 92k84.5(4), 92k84)

Rhode Island statutes providing salary supplement to teachers of secular subjects in nonpublic, elementary schools, though derived from a secular legislative purpose, involved impermissible degree of entanglement of the state with religion, since, inter alia, the church schools benefited by the program constituted an integral part of the religious mission of the church, since teachers under religious control and discipline, even acting with good faith, would inevitably experience great difficulty in remaining religiously neutral, and since, to avoid impermissible fostering of religion and to secure compliance with statutory requirements, comprehensive, discriminating and continuing state surveillance would be required. Gen.Laws R.I.1956, § 16- 51-1 et seq.; U.S.C.A.Const. Amend. 1.

[4] Constitutional Law ⇐84.5(3)
92k84.5(3) Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 92k84)

[4] Constitutional Law ⇐84.5(4.1)
92k84.5(4.1) Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 92k84.5(4))

[4] Schools ⇐8
345k8 Most Cited Cases

[4] Schools ⇐7
345k7 Most Cited Cases

Pennsylvania statutes providing direct aid to nonpublic elementary and secondary schools in the form of reimbursement to those schools for teachers' salaries, textbooks, and instructional materials in connection with the teaching of specific secular subjects involved, despite the secular legislative purpose therein, excessive entanglement of the state with religion where, inter alia, recipient schools were controlled by religious organizations having the purpose of promulgating and promoting particular religious faith and conducting their operations to fulfill that purpose, and state had postaudit power to inspect and evaluate church-related schools' financial records to determine which expenditures were religious and which were secular. 24 P.S.Pa. §§ 5601- 5609; U.S.C.A.Const. Amend. 1.

[5] Constitutional Law ⇐84.5(3)
92k84.5(3) Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 92k84)

[5] Schools ⇐3
345k3 Most Cited Cases

[5] Constitutional Law ⇐84.5(4.1)
92k84.5(4.1) Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 92k84.5(4), 92k84)

Both Pennsylvania and Rhode Island statutory programs of aid for nonpublic schools involved impermissible entanglement of church and state in that both involved need for continuing annual appropriations and likelihood of larger and larger demands, presenting hazard of divisive political activity. Gen.Laws R.I.1956, § 16-51-1 et seq.; 24 P.S.Pa. §§ 5601-5609; U.S.C.A.Const. Amend. 1.

[6] Constitutional Law ⇐84.1
92k84.1 Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 92k84(1), 92k84)

Political division along religious lines was one of the principal evils against which the First Amendment was intended to protect. U.S.C.A.Const. Amend. 1.

[7] Constitutional Law ⇐84.5(4.1)
92k84.5(4.1) Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 92k84.5(4), 92k84)

Innovative programs of state aid to nonpublic schools, having self-perpetuating and self-expanding propensities, present more danger that they will, contrary to the First Amendment, lead to the establishment of state churches and state religion than do the long established benefits involved in tax exemption for places of religious worship. U.S.C.A.Const. Amend. 1.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

2107 602 Syllabus [FN]

FN* NOTE: The syllabus constitutes no part of the opinion of the Court but has been prepared by the Reporter of Decisions for the convenience of the reader. See United States v. Detroit Timber & Lumber Co., 200 U.S. 321, 337, 26 S.Ct. 282, 287, 50 L.Ed. 499.

Rhode Island's 1969 Salary Supplement Act provides for a 15% salary supplement to be paid to teachers in nonpublic schools at which the average perpupil expenditure on secular education is below the average in public schools. Eligible teachers must teach only courses offered in the public schools, using only materials used in the public schools, and must agree not to teach courses in religion. A three-judge court found that about 25% of the State's elementary students attended nonpublic schools, about 95% of whom attended Roman Catholic affiliated schools, and that to date about 250 teachers at Roman Catholic schools are the sole beneficiaries under the Act. The court found that the parochial school system was 'an integral part of the religious mission of the Catholic Church,' and held that the Act fostered 'excessive entanglement' between government and religion, thus violating the Establishment Clause. Pennsylvania's Nonpublic Elementary and Secondary Education Act, passed in 1968, authorizes the state Superintendent of Public Instruction to 'purpose' certain 'secular educational services' from nonpublic schools, directly reimbursing those schools solely for teachers' salaries, textbooks, and instructional materials. Reimbursement is restricted to courses in specific secular subjects, the textbooks and materials must be approved by the Superintendent, and no payment is to be made for any course containing 'any subject matter expressing religious teaching, or the morals or forms of worship of any sect.' Contracts were made with schools that have more than 20% of all the students in the State, most of which were affiliated with the Roman Catholic Church. The complaint challenging the constitutionality of *603 the Act alleged that the church-affiliated schools are controlled by religious organizations, have the purpose of propagating and promoting a particular religious faith, and conduct their operations to fulfill that purpose. A three-judge court granted the State's motion to dismiss the complaint for failure to state a claim for relief, finding no violation of the Establishment or Free Exercise Clause. Held: Both statutes are unconstitutional under the Religion Clauses of the First Amendment, as the cumulative impact of the entire relationship arising under the statutes involves excessive entanglement between government and religion. Pp. 2110--2117.

(a) The entanglement in the Rhode Island program arises because of the religious activity, and purpose of the church-affiliated schools, especially with respect to children of impressionable age in the primary grades, and the dangers that a teacher under religious control and discipline poses to the separation of religious from purely secular aspect of elementary education in such schools. These factors require continuing state surveillance to ensure that the statutory restrictions are obeyed and the First Amendment otherwise respected. Furthermore, under the Act the government must inspect school records to determine what part of the expenditures is attributable to secular education as opposed to religious activity, in the event a nonpublic school's expenditures per pupil exceed the comparable figures for public schools. Pp. 2112--2115.

(b) The entanglement in the Pennsylvania program also arises from the restrictions and surveillance necessary to ensure that teachers play a strictly nonideological role and the state supervision of nonpublic school accounting procedures required to establish the cost of secular as distinguished from religious education. In addition, the Pennsylvania statute has the further defect of providing continuing financial aid directly to the church-related schools. Historically 2108 governmental control and surveillance measures tend to follow cash grant programs, and here the government's post-audit power to inspect the financial records of church-related schools creates an intimate and continuing relationship between church and state. P. 2115.

(c) Political division along religious lines was one of the evils at which the First Amendment aimed, and in these programs, where successive and probably permanent annual appropriations that benefit relatively few religious groups are involved, political 604 fragmentation and divisiveness on religious lines are likely to be intensified. Pp. 2115--2116.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

(d) Unlike the tax exemption for places of religious worship, upheld in Walz v. Tax Commission, 397 U.S. 664, 90 S.Ct. 1409, 25 L.Ed.2d 697, which was based on a practice of 200 years, these innovative programs have self- perpetuating and self-expanding propensities which provide a warning signal against entanglement between government and religion. Pp. 2116--2117.

No. 89, 310 F.Supp. 35, reversed and remanded; Nos. 569 and 570, 316 F.Supp. 112, affirmed.

Henry W. Sawyer, III, Philadelphia, Pa., for appellants.

J. Shane Creamer, Philadelphia, Pa., for appellees Kurtzman and Sloan.

William B. Ball, Harrisburg, Pa., for appellee Schools.

605 Charles F. Cottam, Providence, R.I., for appellants Robinson and others.

Edward Bennett Williams, Washington, D.C., for appellants Earley and others.

Leo Pfeffer, New York City, and Milton Stanzler, Providence, R.I., for appellees Joan DiCenso and others.

606 Mr. Chief Justice BURGER delivered the opinion of the Court.

These two appeals raise questions as to Pennsylvania and Rhode Island statutes providing state aid to church-related elementary and secondary schools. Both statutes are challenged as violative of the Establishment and Free Exercise Clauses of the First Amendment and the Due Process Clause of the Fourteenth Amendment.

Pennsylvania has adopted a statutory program that provides financial support to nonpublic elementary and 607 secondary schools by way of reimbursement for the cost of teachers' salaries, textbooks, and instructional materials in specified secular subjects. Rhode Island has adopted a statute under which the State pays directly to teachers in nonpublic elementary schools a supplement of 15% of their annual salary. Under each statute state aid has been given to church-related educational institutions. We hold that both statutes are unconstitutional.

I
The Rhode Island Statute

The Rhode Island Salary Supplement Act [FN1] was enacted in 1969. It rests on the legislative finding that the quality of education available in nonpublic elementary schools has been jeopardized by the rapidly rising salaries needed to attract competent and dedicated teachers. The Act authorizes state officials to supplement the salaries of teachers of secular subjects in nonpublic elementary schools by paying directly to a teacher an amount not in excess of 15% of his current annual salary. As supplemented, however, a nonpublic school teacher's salary cannot exceed the maximum paid to teachers in the State's public schools, and the recipient must be certified by the state board of education in substantially the same manner as public school teachers.

FN1. R.I.Pen.Laws Ann. s 16--51--1 et seq. (Supp.1970).

In order to be eligible for the Rhode Island salary supplement, the recipient must teach in a nonpublic school at which *2109 the average per-pupil expenditure on secular education is less than the average in the State's public schools during a specified period. Appellant State Commissioner of Education also requires eligible schools to submit financial data. If this information indicates a per-pupil expenditure in excess of the statutory limitation, 608 the records of the school in question must be examined in order to assess how much of the expenditure is attributable to secular education and how much to religious activity. [FN2]

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

FN2. The District Court found only one instance in which this breakdown between religious and secular expenses was necessary. The school in question was not affiliated with the Catholic church. The court found it unlikely that such determinations would be necessary with respect to Catholic schools because their heavy reliance on nuns kept their wage costs substantially below those of the public schools.

The Act also requires that teachers eligible for salary supplements must teach only those subjects that are offered in the State's public schools. They must use 'only teaching materials which are used in the public schools.' Finally, any teacher applying for a salary supplement must first agree in writing 'not to teach a course in religion for so long as or during such time as he or she receives any salary supplements' under the Act.

Appellees are citizens and taxpayers of Rhode Island. They brought this suit to have the Rhode Island Salary Supplement Act declared unconstitutional and its operation enjoined on the ground that it violates the Establishment and Free Exercise Clauses of the First Amendment. Appellants are state officials charged with administration of the Act, teachers eligible for salary supplements under the Act, and parents of children in church-related elementary schools whose teachers would receive state salary assistance.

A three-judge federal court was convened pursuant to 28 U.S.C. ss 2281, 2284. It found that Rhode Island's nonpublic elementary schools accommodated approximately 25% of the State's pupils. About 95% of these pupils attended schools affiliated with the Roman Catholic church. To date some 250 teachers have applied for benefits under the Act. All of them are employed by Roman Catholic schools.

*609 The court held a hearing at which extensive evidence was introduced concerning the nature of the secular instruction offered in the Roman Catholic schools whose teachers would be eligible for salary assistance under the Act. Although the court found that concern for religious values does not necessarily affect the content of secular subjects, it also found that the parochial school system was 'an integral part of the religious mission of the Catholic Church.'

The District Court concluded that the Act violated the Establishment Clause, holding that it fostered 'excessive entanglement' between government and religion. In addition two judges thought that the Act had the impermissible effect of giving 'significant aid to a religious enterprise.' 316 F.Supp. 112. We affirm.

The Pennsylvania Statute

Pennsylvania has adopted a program that has some but not all of the features of the Rhode Island program. The Pennsylvania Nonpublic Elementary and Secondary Education Act [FN3] was passed in 1968 in response to a crisis that the Pennsylvania Legislature found existed in the State's nonpublic schools due to rapidly rising costs. The statute affirmatively reflects the legislative conclusion that the State's educational goals could appropriately be fulfilled by government support of 'those purely secular educational objectives achieved through nonpublic education * * *.'

FN3. Pa.Stat.Ann., Tit. 24, ss 5601--5609 (Supp.1971).

The statute authorizes appellee state Superintendent of Public Instruction to 'purchase' specified 'secular educational services' from nonpublic schools. Under the 'contracts' authorized by the statute,2110 the State directly reimburses nonpublic schools solely for their actual expenditures for teachers' salaries, textbooks, and instructional materials. A school seeking reimbursement must *610 maintain prescribed accounting procedures that identify the 'separate' cost of the 'secular educational service.' These accounts are subject to state audit. The funds for this program were originally derived from a new tax on horse and harness racing, but the Act is now financed by a portion of the state tax on cigarettes.

There are several significant statutory restrictions on state aid. Reimbursement is limited to courses 'presented in the curricula of the public schools.' It is further limited 'solely' to courses in the following

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

'secular' subjects: mathematics, modern foreign languages, [FN4] physical science, and physical education. Textbooks and instructional materials included in the program must be approved by the state Superintendent of Public Instruction. Finally, the statute prohibits reimbursement for any course that contains 'any subject matter expressing religious teaching, or the morals or forms of worship of any sect.'

FN4. Latin, Hebrew, and classical Greek are excluded.

The Act went into effect on July 1, 1968, and the first reimbursement payments to schools were made on September 2, 1969. It appears that some $5 million has been expended annually under the Act. The State has now entered into contracts with some 1,181 nonpublic elementary and secondary schools with a student population of some 535,215 pupils--more than 20% of the total number of students in the State. More than 96% of these pupils attend church-related schools, and most of these schools are affiliated with the Roman Catholic church.

Appellants brought this action in the District Court to challenge the constitutionality of the Pennsylvania statute. The organizational plaintiffs-appellants are associations of persons resident in Pennsylvania declaring 611 belief in the separation of church and state; individual plaintiffs-appellants are citizens and taxpayers of Pennsylvania. Appellant Lemon, in addition to being a citizen and a taxpayer, is a parent of a child attending public school in Pennsylvania. Lemon also alleges that he purchased a ticket at a race track and thus had paid the specific tax that supports the expenditures under the Act. Appellees are state officials who have the responsibility for administering the Act. In addition seven church-related schools are defendants-appellees.

A three-judge federal court was convened pursuant to 28 U.S.C. ss 2281, 2284. The District Court held that the individual plaintiffs-appellants had standing to challenge the Act, 310 F.Supp. 42. The organizational plaintiffs-appellants were denied standing under Flast v. Cohen, 392 U.S. 83, 99, 101, 88 S.Ct. 1942, 1952, 1953, 20 L.Ed.2d 947 (1968).

The court granted appellees' motion to dismiss the complaint for failure to state a claim for relief. [FN5] 310 F.Supp. 35. It held that the Act violated neither the Establishment nor the Free Exercise Clause, Chief Judge Hastie dissenting. We reverse.

FN5. Plaintiffs-appellants also claimed that the Act violated the Equal Protection Clause of the Fourteenth Amendment by providing state assistance to private institutions that discriminated on racial and religious grounds in their admissions and hiring policies. The court unanimously held that no plaintiff had standing to raise this claim because the complaint did not allege that the child of any plaintiff had been denied admission to any nonpublic school on racial or religious grounds. Our decision makes it unnecessary for us to reach this issue.

II

In Everson v. Board of Education, 330 U.S. 1, 67 S.Ct. 504, 91 L.Ed. 711 (1947), this Court upheld a state statute that reimbursed the parents of parochial school children for bus transportation *2111 *612 expenses. There Mr. Justice Black, writing for the majority, suggested that the decision carried to 'the verge' of forbidden territory under the Religion Clauses. Id., at 16, 67 S.Ct., at 511. Candor compels acknowledgment, moreover, that we can only dimly perceive the lines of demarcation in this extraordinarily sensitive area of constitutional law.

[1] The language of the Religion Clauses of the First Amendment is at best opaque, particularly when compared with other portions of the Amendment. Its authors did not simply prohibit the establishment of a state church or a state religion, an area history shows they regarded as very important and fraught with great dangers. Instead they commanded that there should be 'no law respecting an establishment of religion.' A law may be one 'respecting' the forbidden objective while falling short of its total realization. A law 'respecting' the proscribed result, that is, the establishment of religion, is not always easily identifiable as one violative of the Clause. A given law might not establish a state religion but nevertheless be one 'respecting' that end in the sense of being a step that could lead to such establishment and hence offend the First Amendment.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

In the absence of precisely stated constitutional prohibitions, we must draw lines with reference to the three main evils against which the Establishment Clause was intended to afford protection: 'sponsorship, financial support, and active involvement of the sovereign in religious activity.' Walz v. Tax Commission, 397 U.S. 664, 668, 90 S.Ct. 1409, 1411, 25 L.Ed.2d 697 (1970).

[2] Every analysis in this area must begin with consideration of the cumulative criteria developed by the Court over many years. Three such tests may be gleaned from our cases. First, the statute must have a secular legislative purpose; second, its principal or primary effect must be one that neither advances nor inhibits religion, Board of Education v. Allen, 392 U.S. 236, 243, 88 S.Ct. 1923, 1926, 20 L.Ed.2d 1060 (1968); *613 finally, the statute must not foster 'an excessive government entanglement with religion.' Walz, supra, at 674, 90 S.Ct., at 1414.

Inquiry into the legislative purposes of the Pennsylvania and Rhode Island statutes affords no basis for a conclusion that the legislative intent was to advance religion. On the contrary, the statutes themselves clearly state that they are intended to enhance the quality of the secular education in all schools covered by the compulsory attendance laws. There is no reason to believe the legislatures meant anything else. A State always has a legitimate concern for maintaining minimum standards in all schools it allows to operate. As in Allen, we find nothing here that undermines the stated legislative intent; it must therefore be accorded appropriate deference.

In Allen the Court acknowledged that secular and religious teachings were not necessarily so intertwined that secular textbooks furnished to students by the State were in fact instrumental in the teaching of religion. 392 U.S., at 248, 88 S.Ct., at 1929. The legislatures of Rhode Island and Pennsylvania have concluded that secular and religious education are identifiable and separable. In the abstract we have no quarrel with this conclusion.

The two legislatures, however, have also recognized that church-related elementary and secondary schools have a significant religious mission and that a substantial portion of their activities is religiously oriented. They have therefore sought to create statutory restrictions designed to guarantee the separation between secular and religious educational functions and to ensure that State financial aid supports only the former. All these provisions are precautions taken in candid recognition that these programs approached, even if they did not intrude upon, the forbidden areas under the Religion Clauses. We need not decide whether these legislative precautions restrict the principal or primary effect of the programs to the point where they 2112 do not offend the Religion *614 Clauses, for we conclude that the cumulative impact of the entire relationship arising under the statutes in each State involves excessive entanglement between government and religion.

III

In Walz v. Tax Commission, supra, the Court upheld state tax exemptions for real property owned by religious organizations and used for religious worship. That holding, however, tended to confine rather than enlarge the area of permissible state involvement with religious institutions by calling for close scrutiny of the degree of entanglement involved in the relationship. The objective is to prevent, as far as possible, the intrusion of either into the precincts of the other.

Our prior holdings do not call for total separation between church and state; total separation is not possible in an absolute sense. Some relationship between government and religious organizations is inevitable. Zorach v. Clauson, 343 U.S. 306, 312, 72 S.Ct. 679, 683, 96 L.Ed. 954 (1952); Sherbert v. Verner, 374 U.S. 398, 422, 83 S.Ct. 1790, 1803, 10 L.Ed.2d 965 (1963) (Harlan, J., dissenting). Fire inspections, building and zoning regulations, and state requirements under compulsory school-attendance laws are examples of necessary and permissible contacts. Indeed, under the statutory exemption before us in Walz, the State had a continuing burden to ascertain that the exempt property was in fact being used for religious worship. Judicial caveats against entanglement must recognize that the line of separation, far from being a 'wall,' is a blurred, indistinct, and variable barrier depending on all the circumstances of a particular relationship.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

This is not to suggest, however, that we are to engage in a legalistic minuet in which precise rules and forms must govern. A true minuet is a matter of pure form and style, the observance of which is itself the substantive end. Here we examine the form of the relationship for the light that it casts on the substance.

*615 In order to determine whether the government entanglement with religion is excessive, we must examine the character and purposes of the institutions that are benefited, the nature of the aid that the State provides, and the resulting relationship between the government and the religious authority. Mr. Justice Harlan, in a separate opinion in Walz, supra, echoed the classic warning as to 'programs, whose very nature is apt to entangle the state in details of administration. * * *' Id., at 695, 90 S.Ct., at 1425. Here we find that both statutes foster an impermissible degree of entanglement.

(a) Rhode Island program

[3] The District Court made extensive findings on the grave potential for excessive entanglement that inheres in the religious character and purpose of the Roman Catholic elementary schools of Rhode Island, to date the sole beneficiaries of the Rhode Island Salary Supplement Act.

The church schools involved in the program are located close to parish churches. This understandably permits convenient access for religious exercises since instruction in faith and morals is part of the total educational process. The school buildings contain identifying religious symbols such as crosses on the exterior and crucifixes, and religious paintings and statutes either in the classrooms or hallways. Although only approximately 30 minutes a day are devoted to direct religious instruction, there are religiously oriented extracurricular activities. Approximately two-thirds of the teachers in these schools are nuns of various religious orders. Their dedicated efforts provide an atmosphere in which religious instruction and religious vocations are natural and proper parts of life in such schools. Indeed, as the District Court found, the role of teaching nuns in enhancing the religious atmosphere has led the parochial school authorities*616 2113 to attempt to maintain a one-to-one ratio between nuns and lay teachers in all schools rather than to permit some to be staffed almost entirely by lay teachers.

On the basis of these findings the District Court concluded that the parochial schools constituted 'an integral part of the religious mission of the Catholic Church.' The various characteristics of the schools make them 'a powerful vehicle for transmitting the Catholic faith to the next generation.' This process of inculcating religious doctrine is, of course, enhanced by the impressionable age of the pupils, in primary schools particularly. In short, parochial schools involve substantial religious activity and purpose. [FN6]

> FN6. See, e.g., J. Fichter, Parochial School: A Sociological Study 77--108 (1958); Giannella, Religious Liberty, Nonestablishment, and Doctrinal Development, pt. II, The Nonestablishment Principle, 81 Harv.L.Rev. 513, 574 (1968).

The substantial religious character of these church-related schools gives rise to entangling church-state relationships of the kind the Religion Clauses sought to avoid. Although the District Court found that concern for religious values did not inevitably or necessarily intrude into the content of secular subjects, the considerable religious activities of these schools led the legislature to provide for careful governmental controls and surveillance by state authorities in order to ensure that state aid supports only secular education.

The dangers and corresponding entanglements are enhanced by the particular form of aid that the Rhode Island Act provides. Our decisions from Everson to Allen have permitted the States to provide church-related schools with secular, neutral, or nonideological services, facilities, or materials. Bus transportation, school lunches, public health services, and secular textbooks supplied in common to all students were not *617 thought to offend the Establishment Clause. We note that the dissenters in Allen seemed chiefly concerned with the pragmatic difficulties involved in ensuring the truly secular content of the textbooks provided at state expense.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

In Allen the Court refused to make assumptions, on a meager record, about the religious content of the textbooks that the State would be asked to provide. We cannot, however, refuse here to recognize that teachers have a substantially different ideological character from books. In terms of potential for involving some aspect of faith or morals in secular subjects, a textbook's content is ascertainable, but a teacher's handling of a subject is not. We cannot ignore the danger that a teacher under religious control and discipline poses to the separation of the religious from the purely secular aspects of precollege education. The conflict of functions inheres in the situation.

In our view the record shows these dangers are present to a substantial degree. The Rhode Island Roman Catholic elementary schools are under the general supervision of the Bishop of Providence and his appointed representative, the Diocesan Superintendent of Schools. In most cases, each individual parish, however, assumes the ultimate financial responsibility for the school, with the parish priest authorizing the allocation of parish funds. With only two exceptions, school principals are nuns appointed either by the Superintendent or the Mother Provincial of the order whose members staff the school. By 1969 lay teachers constituted more than a third of all teachers in the parochial elementary schools, and their number is growing. They are first interviewed by the superintendent's office and then by the school principal. The contracts are signed by the parish priest, and he retains some discretion in negotiating salary levels. Religious authority necessarily pervades the school system.

618 The schools are governed by the standards set forth in a 'Handbook of School Regulations,' which has the force of *2114 synodal law in the diocese. It emphasizes the role and importance of the teacher in parochial schools: 'The prime factor for the success or the failure of the school is the spirit and personality, as well as the professional competency, of the teacher * * *.' The Handbook also states that: 'Religious formation is not confined to formal courses; nor is it restricted to a single subject area.' Finally, the Handbook advises teachers to stimulate interest in religious vocations and missionary work. Given the mission of the church school, these instructions are consistent and logical.

Several teachers testified, however, that they did not inject religion into their secular classes. And the District Court found that religious values did not necessarily affect the content of the secular instruction. But what has been recounted suggests the potential if not actual hazards of this form of state aid. The teacher is employed by a religious organization, subject to the direction and discipline of religious authorities, and works in a system dedicated to rearing children in a particular faith. These controls are not lessened by the fact that most of the lay teachers are of the Catholic faith. Inevitably some of a teacher's responsibilities hover on the border between secular and religious orientation.

We need not and do not assume that teachers in parochial schools will be guilty of bad faith or any conscious design to evade the limitations imposed by the statute and the First Amendment. We simply recognize that a dedicated religious person, teaching in a school affiliated with his or her faith and operated to inculcate its tenets, will inevitably experience great difficulty in remaining religiously neutral. Doctrines and faith are not inculcated or advanced by neutrals. With the best of intentions such a teacher would find it hard to make 619 a total separation between secular teaching and religious doctrine. What would appear to some to be essential to good citizenship might well for others border on or constitute instruction in religion. Further difficulties are inherent in the combination of religious discipline and the possibility of disagreement between teacher and religious authorities over the meaning of the statutory restrictions.

We do not assume, however, that parochial school teachers will be unsuccessful in their attempts to segregate their religious beliefs from their secular educational responsibilities. But the potential for impermissible fostering of religion is present. The Rhode Island Legislature has not, and could not, provide state aid on the basis of a mere assumption that secular teachers under religious discipline can avoid conflicts. The State must be certain, given the Religion Clauses, that subsidized teachers do not inculcate religion--indeed the State here has undertaken to do so. To ensure that no trespass occurs, the State has therefore carefully conditioned its aid with pervasive restrictions. An eligible recipient must teach only those courses that are offered in the public schools and use only those texts and materials that are found in the public schools. In addition the teacher must not engage in teaching any course in religion.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

A comprehensive, discriminating, and continuing state surveillance will inevitably be required to ensure that these restrictions are obeyed and the First Amendment otherwise respected. Unlike a book, a teacher cannot be inspected once so as to determine the extent and intent of his or her personal beliefs and subjective acceptance of the limitations imposed by the First Amendment. These prophylactic contacts will involve excessive and enduring entanglement between state and church.

620 There is another area of entanglement in the Rhode Island program that gives concern. The statute excludes teachers employed by nonpublic schools whose average per-pupil expenditures on secular education equal or exceed the comparable figures for public schools. In the event that the total expenditures of an otherwise eligible school exceed this norm, the program requires the government to examine *2115 the school's records in order to determine how much of the total expenditures is attributable to secular education and how much to religious activity. This kind of state inspection and evaluation of the religious content of a religious organization is fraught with the sort of entanglement that the Constitution forbids. It is a relationship pregnant with dangers of excessive government direction of church schools and hence of churches. The Court noted 'the hazards of government supporting churches' in Walz v. Tax Commission, supra, 397 U.S., at 675, 90 S.Ct., at 1414, and we cannot ignore here the danger that pervasive modern governmental power will ultimately intrude on religion and thus conflict with the Religion Clauses.

(b) Pennsylvania program

[4] The Pennsylvania statute also provides state aid to church-related schools for teachers' salaries. The complaint describes an educational system that is very similar to the one existing in Rhode Island. According to the allegations, the church-related elementary and secondary schools are controlled by religious organizations, have the purpose of propagating and promoting a particular religious faith, and conduct their operations to fulfill that purpose. Since this complaint was dismissed for failure to state a claim for relief, we must accept these allegations as true for purposes of our review.

As we noted earlier, the very restrictions and surveillance necessary to ensure that teachers play a strictly non-ideological role give rise to entanglements between 621 church and state. The Pennsylvania statute, like that of Rhode Island, fosters this kind of relationship. Reimbursement is not only limited to courses offered in the public schools and materials approved by state officials, but the statute excludes 'any subject matter expressing religious teaching, or the morals or forms of worship of any sect.' In addition, schools seeking reimbursement must maintain accounting procedures that require the State to establish the cost of the secular as distinguished from the religious instruction.

The Pennsylvania statute, moreover, has the further defect of providing state financial aid directly to the church-related schools. This factor distinguishes both Everson and Allen, for in both those cases the Court was careful to point out that state aid was provided to the student and his parents--not to the church-related school. Board of Education v. Allen, supra, 392 U.S., at 243--244, 88 S.Ct., at 1926--1927; Everson v. Board of Education, supra, 330 U.S., at 18, 67 S.Ct., at 512. In Walz v. Tax Commission, supra, 397 U.S., at 675, 90 S.Ct., at 1414, the Court warned of the dangers of direct payments to religious organizations:

> 'Obviously a direct money subsidy would be a relationship pregnant with involvement and, as with most governmental grant programs, could encompass sustained and detailed administrative relationships for enforcement of statutory or administrative standards * * *.'

The history of government grants of a continuing cash subsidy indicates that such programs have almost always been accompanied by varying measures of control and surveillance. The government cash grants before us now provide no basis for predicting that comprehensive measures of surveillance and controls will not follow. In particular the government's post-audit power to inspect and evaluate a church-related school's financial records and to determine which expenditures are religious and *622 which are secular creates an intimate and continuing relationship between church and state.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

IV

[5] A broader base of entanglement of yet a different character is presented by the devisive political potential of these state programs. In a community where such a large number of pupils are served by church-related schools, it can be assumed 2116 that state assistance will entail considerable political activity. Partisans of parochial schools, understandably concerned with rising costs and sincerely dedicated to both the religious and secular educational missions of their schools, will inevitably champion this cause and promote political action to achieve their goals. Those who oppose state aid, whether for constitutional, religious, or fiscal reasons, will inevitably respond and employ all of the usual political campaign techniques to prevail. Candidates will be forced to declare and voters to choose. It would be unrealistic to ignore the fact that many people confronted with issues of this kind will find their votes aligned with their faith.

[6] Ordinarily political debate and division, however vigorous or even partisan, are normal and healthy manifestations of our democratic system of government, but political division along religious lines was one of the principal evils against which the First Amendment was intended to protect. Freund, Comment, Public Aid to Parochial Schools, 82 Harv.L.Rev. 1680, 1692 (1969). The potential divisiveness of such conflict is a threat to the normal political process. Walz v. Tax Commission, supra, at 695, 90 S.Ct., at 1424. (separate opinion of Harlan, J.). See also Board of Education v. Allen, 392 U.S., at 249, 88 S.Ct., at 1929 (Harlan, J., concurring); Abington School District v. Schempp, 374 U.S. 203, 307, 83 S.Ct. 1560, 1616, 10 L.Ed.2d 844 (1963) (Goldberg, J., concurring). To have States or communities divide on the issues presented by state aid to parochial schools would tend to confuse *623 and obscure other issues of great urgency. We have an expanding array of vexing issues, local and national, domestic and international, to debate and divide on. It conflicts with our whole history and tradition to permit questions of the Religion Clauses to assume such importance in our legislatures and in our elections that they could divert attention from the myriad issues and problems that confront every level of government. The highways of church and state relationships are not likely to be one-way streets, and the Constitution's authors sought to protect religious worship from the pervasive power of government. The history of many countries attests to the hazards of religion's intruding into the political arena or of political power intruding into the legitimate and free exercise of religious belief.

Of course, as the Court noted in Walz, '(a)dherents of particular faiths and individual churches frequently take strong positions on public issues.' Walz v. Tax Commission, supra, at 670, 90 S.Ct., at 1412. We could not expect otherwise, for religious values pervade the fabric of our national life. But in Walz we dealt with a status under state tax laws for the benefit of all religious groups. Here we are confronted with successive and very likely permanent annual appropriations that benefit relatively few religious groups. Political fragmentation and divisiveness on religious lines are thus likely to be intensified.

The potential for political divisiveness related to religious belief and practice is aggravated in these two statutory programs by the need for continuing annual appropriations and the likelihood of larger and larger demands as costs and populations grow. The Rhode Island District Court found that the parochial school system's 'monumental and deepening financial crisis' would 'inescapably' require larger annual appropriations subsidizing greater percentages of the salaries of lay teachers. Although no facts have been developed in this respect *624 in the Pennsylvania case, it appears that such pressures for expanding aid have already required the state legislature to include a portion of the state revenues from cigarette taxes in the program.

V

[7] In Walz it was argued that a tax exemption for places of religious worship would prove to be the first step in an inevitable progression leading to the 2117 establishment of state churches and state religion. That claim could not stand up against more than 200 years of virtually universal practice imbedded in our colonial experience and continuing into the present.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

The progression argument, however, is more persuasive here. We have no long history of state aid to church-related educational institutions comparable to 200 years of tax exemption for churches. Indeed, the state programs before us today represent something of an innovation. We have already noted that modern governmental programs have self-perpetuating and self-expanding propensities. These internal pressures are only enhanced when the schemes involve institutions whose legitimate needs are growing and whose interests have substantial political support. Nor can we fail to see that in constitutional adjudication some steps, which when taken were thought to approach 'the verge,' have become the platform for yet further steps. A certain momentum develops in constitutional theory and it can be a 'downhill thrust' easily set in motion but difficult to retard or stop. Development by momentum is not invariably bad; indeed, it is the way the common law has grown, but it is a force to be recognized and reckoned with. The dangers are increased by the difficulty of perceiving in advance exactly where the 'verge' of the precipice lies. As well as constituting an independent evil against which the Religion Clauses were intended to protect, involvement 625 or entanglement between government and religion serves as a warning signal.

Finally, nothing we have said can be construed to disparage the role of church-related elementary and secondary schools in our national life. Their contribution has been and is enormous. Nor do we ignore their economic plight in a period of rising costs and expanding need. Taxpayers generally have been spared vast sums by the maintenance of these educational institutions by religious organizations, largely by the gifts of faithful adherents.

The merit and benefits of these schools, however, are not the issue before us in these cases. The sole question is whether state aid to these schools can be squared with the dictates of the Religion Clauses. Under our system the choice has been made that government is to be entirely excluded from the area of religious instruction and churches excluded from the affairs of government. The Constitution decrees that religion must be a private matter for the individual, the family, and the institutions of private choice, and that while some involvement and entanglement are inevitable, lines must be drawn.

The judgment of the Rhode Island District Court in No. 569 and No. 570 is affirmed. The judgment of the Pennsylvania District Court in No. 89 is reversed, and the case is remanded for further proceedings consistent with this opinion.

Mr. Justice MARSHALL took no part in the consideration or decision of No. 89.

Mr. Justice DOUGLAS, whom Mr. Justice BLACK joins, concurring.

While I join the opinion of the Court, I have expressed at some length my views as to the rationale of today's decision in these three cases.

626 They involve two different statutory schemes for providing aid to parochial schools. Lemon deals with the Pennsylvania Nonpublic Elementary and Secondary Education Act, Laws 1968, Act No. 109. By its terms the Pennsylvania Act allows the State to provide funds directly to private schools to purchase 'secular educational service' such as teachers' salaries, textbooks, and educational materials. Pa.Stat.Ann., Tit. 24, s 5604 (Supp.1971). Reimbursement for these services may be made only for courses in mathematics, modern foreign languages, physical science, and physical education. Reimbursement is prohibited for any course containing subject matter 'expressing religious teaching, or the morals or forms of worship of any sect.' s 5603 (Supp.1971). To qualify, a school must demonstrate that its pupils achieve a satisfactory level of performance in standardized tests approved by the Superintendent of Public Instruction, *2118 and that the textbooks and other instructional materials used in these courses have been approved by the Superintendent of Public Instruction. The three-judge District Court below upheld this statute against the argument that it violates the Establishment Clause. We noted probable jurisdiction. 397 U.S. 1034, 91 S.Ct. 1354, 25 L.Ed.2d 646.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

2120 While the evolution of the public school system in this country marked an escape from denominational control and was therefore admirable as seen through the eyes of those who think like Madison and Jefferson, it has disadvantages. The main one is that a state system may attempt to mold all students alike according to the views of the dominant group and to discourage the emergence of individual idiosyncrasies.

Sectarian education, however, does not remedy that condition. The advantages of sectarian education relate solely to religious or doctrinal matters. They give the *631 church the opportunity to indoctrinate its creed delicately and indirectly, or massively through doctrinal courses.

Many nations follow that course: Moslem nations teach the Koran in their schools; Sweden vests its elementary education in the parish; Newfoundland puts its school system under three superintendents--one from the Church of England, one from the Catholic church, one from the United Church. In Ireland the public schools are under denominational managership--Catholic, Episcopalian, Presbyterian, and Hebrew.

England puts sectarian schools under the umbrella of its school system. It finances sectarian education; it exerts control by prescribing standards; it requires some free scholarships; it provides nondenominational membership on the board of directors. [FN15]

FN15. S. Curtis, History of Education in Great Britain 316--383 (5th ed. 1963); W. Alexander, Education in England, c II (2d ed. 1964).

The British system is, in other words, one of surveillance over sectarian schools. We too have surveillance over sectarian schools but only to the extent of making sure that minimum educational standards are met, viz., competent teachers, accreditation of the school for diplomas, the number of hours of work and credits allowed, and so on.

But we have never faced, until recently, the problem of policing sectarian schools. Any surveillance to date has been minor and has related only to the consistently unchallenged matters of accreditation of the sectarian school in the State's school system. [FN16]

FN16. See Pierce v. Society of Sisters, 268 U.S. 510, 534, 45 S.Ct. 571, 573, 69 L.Ed. 1070; Meyer v. Nebraska, 262 U.S. 390, 402, 43 S.Ct. 625, 627, 67 L.Ed. 1042.

The Rhode Island Act allows a supplementary salary to a teacher in a sectarian school if he or she 'does not teach a course in religion.'

*632 The Pennsylvania Act provides for state financing of instruction in mathematics, modern foreign languages, physical science, and physical education, provided that the instruction in those courses 'shall not include any subject matter expressing religious teaching, or the morals or forms of worship of any sect.'

Public financial support of parochial schools puts those schools under disabilities with which they were not previously burdened. For, as we held in Cooper v. Aaron, 358 U.S. 1, 19, 78 S.Ct. 1401, 1410, 3 L.Ed.2d 5, governmental activities relating to schools 'must be exercised consistently with federal constitutional requirements.' There we were concerned with equal protection; here we are faced with issues of Establishment of religion and its Free Exercise as those concepts are used in the First Amendment.

Where the governmental activity is the financing of the private school, the various limitations or restraints imposed by the Constitution on state governments come into play. Thus, Arkansas, as part of its attempt to avoid the consequences of Brown v. Board of Education, 347 U.S. 483, 74 S.Ct. 686, 98 L.Ed. 873, 349 U.S. 294, 75 S.Ct. 753, 99 L.Ed. 1083, withdrew its financial support from some public schools and sent the funds instead to private schools. That state action was held to violate the Equal Protection Clause. Aaron v. McKinley, D.C., 173 F.Supp. 944, 952. We affirmed, sub nom. 2121Faubus v. Aaron, 361 U.S. 197, 80 S.Ct. 291, 4 L.Ed.2d 237. Louisiana tried a like tactic and it too was invalidated. Poindexter v. Louisiana Financial Assistance Commission, D.C., 296 F.Supp. 686. Again we affirmed. Louisiana Ed. Commission for Needy Children v. Poindexter, 393 U.S. 17, 89 S.Ct. 48, 21 L.Ed.2d 16. Whatever might be the result in case of grants to students, [FN17] it is clear that once *633 one of the States finances a private school, it is duty-bound to make certain that the school stays within secular bounds and does not use the public funds to promote sectarian causes.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

FN17. Grants to students in the context of the problems of desegregated public schools have without exception been stricken down as tools of the forbidden discrimination. See Griffin v. County School Board of Prince Edward County, 377 U.S. 218, 84 S.Ct. 1226, 12 L.Ed.2d 256; Hall v. St. Helena Parish School Bd., D.C., 197 F.Supp. 649, aff'd, 368 U.S. 515, 82 S.Ct. 529, 7 L.Ed.2d 521; Lee v. Macon County Bd., D.C., 267 F.Supp. 458, aff'd sub nom. Wallace v. United States, 389 U.S. 215, 88 S.Ct. 415, 19 L.Ed.2d 422; Poindexter v. Louisiana Financial Assistance Commission, D.C., 275 F.Supp. 833, aff'd, 389 U.S. 571, 88 S.Ct. 693, 19 L.Ed.2d 780; Brown v. South Carolina State Bd., 296 F.Supp. 199, aff'd, 393 U.S. 222, 89 S.Ct. 449, 21 L.Ed.2d 391; Coffey v. State Educ. Finance Commission, D.C., 296 F.Supp. 1389; Lee v. Macon County Bd., D.C., 231 F.Supp. 743.

The government may, of course, finance a hospital though it is run by a religious order, provided it is open to people of all races and creeds. Bradfield v. Roberts, 175 U.S. 291, 20 S.Ct. 121, 44 L.Ed. 168. The government itself could enter the hospital business; and it would, of course, make no difference if its agents who ran its hospitals were Catholics, Methodists, agnostics, or whatnot. For the hospital is not indulging in religious instruction or guidance or indoctrination. As Mr. Justice Jackson said in Everson v. Board of Education, 330 U.S. 1, 26, 67 S.Ct. 504, 516, 91 L.Ed. 711 (dissenting):

'(Each State has) great latitude in deciding for itself, in the light of its own conditions, what shall be public purposes in its scheme of things. It may socialize utilities and economic enterprises and make taxpayers' business out of what conventionally had been private business. It may make public business of individual welfare, health, education, entertainment or security. But it cannot make public business of religious worship or instruction, or of attendance at religious institutions of any character.'

The reason is that given by Madison in his Remonstrance: [FN18]

FN18. Remonstrance 3. The Memorial and Remonstrance Against Religious Assessments has been reproduced in appendices to the opinion of Rutledge, J., in Everson, 330 U.S., at 63, 67 S.Ct., at 534, and to that of Douglas, J., in Walz, 397 U.S., at 719, 90 S.Ct., at 1437.

'(T)he same authority which can force a citizen to contribute three pence only of his property for *634 the support of any one establishment, may force him to conform to any other establishment * * *.'

When Madison in his Remonstrance attacked a taxing measure to support religious activities, he advanced a series of reasons for opposing it. One that is extremely relevant here was phrased as follows: [FN19] '(I)t will destroy that moderation and harmony which the forbearance of our laws to intermeddle with Religion, has produced amongst its several sects.' Intermeddling, to use Madison's word, or 'entanglement,' to use what was said in Watz, has two aspects. The intrusion of government into religious schools through grants, supervision, or surveillance may result in establishment of religion in the constitutional sense when what the State does enthrones a particular sect for overt or subtle propagation of its faith. Those activities of the State may also intrude on the Free Exercise Clause by depriving a teacher, under threats of reprisals, 2122 of the right to give sectarian construction or interpretation of, say, history and literature, or to use the teaching of such subjects to inculcate a religious creed or dogma.

FN19. Remonstrance 11.

Under these laws there will be vast governmental suppression, surveillance, or meddling in church affairs. As I indicated in Tilton v. Richardson, 403 U.S. 672, 91 S.Ct. 2091, 29 L.Ed.2d 790, decided this day, school prayers, the daily routine of parochial schools, must go if our decision in Engel v. Vitale, 370 U.S. 421, 82 S.Ct. 1261, 8 L.Ed.2d 601, is honored. If it is not honored, then the state has established a religious sect. Elimination of prayers is only part of the problem. The curriculum presents subtle and difficult problems. The constitutional mandate can in part be carried out by censoring the curricula. What is palpably a sectarian course can be marked for *635 deletion. But the problem only starts there. Sectarian instruction, in which, of course, a State may not indulge, can take place in a course on Shakespeare or in one on mathematics. No matters what the curriculum offers, the question is, what is taught? We deal not with evil teachers but with zealous ones who may use any opportunity to indoctrinate a class. [FN20]

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

> FN20. 'In the parochial schools Roman Catholic indoctrination is included in every subject. History, literature, geography, civics, and science are given a Roman Catholic slant. The whole education of the child is filled with propaganda. That, of course, is the very purpose of such schools, the very reason for going to all of the work and expense of maintaining a dual school system. Their purpose is not so much to educate, but to indoctrinate and train, not to teach Scripture truths and Americanism, but to make loyal Roman Catholics. The children are regimented, and are told what to wear, what to do, and what to think.' L. Boettner, Roman Catholicism 360 (1962).

It is well known that everything taught in most parochial schools is taught with the ultimate goal of religious education in mind. Rev. Joseph H. Fichter, S.J., stated in Parochial School: A Sociological Study 86 (1958):

> 'It is a commonplace observation that in the parochial school religion permeates the whole curriculum, and is not confined to a single half-hour period of the day. Even arithmetic can be used as an instrument of pious thoughts, as in the case of the teacher who gave this problem to her class: 'If it takes forty thousand priests and a hundred and forty thousand sisters to care for forty million Catholics in the United States, how many more priests and sisters will be needed to convert and care for the hundred million non-Catholics in the United States?"

One can imagine what a religious zealot, as contrasted to a civil libertarian, can do with the Reformation *636 or with the Inquisition. Much history can be given the gloss of a particular religion. I would think that policing these grants to detect sectarian instruction would be insufferable to religious partisans and would breed division and dissension between church and state.

This problem looms large where the church controls the hiring and firing of teachers:

> '(I)n the public school the selection of a faculty and the administration of the school usually rests with a school board which is subject to election and recall by the voters, but in the parochial school the selection of a faculty and the administration of the school is in the hands of the bishop alone, and usually is administered through the local priest. If a faculty member in the public school believes that he has been treated unjustly in being disciplined or dismissed, he can seek redress through the civil court and he is guaranteed a hearing. But if a faculty member in a parochial school is disciplined or dismissed he has no recourse whatsoever. The word of the bishop or priest is final, even without explanation if he so chooses. The tax payers have a voice in the way their money is used in the 2123 public school, but the people who support a parochial school have no voice at all in such affairs.' L. Boettner, Roman Catholicism 375 (1962).

Board of Education v. Allen, 392 U.S. 236, 88 S.Ct. 1923, 20 L.Ed.2d 1060, dealt only with textbooks. Even so, some had difficulty giving approval. Yet books can be easily examined independently of other aspects of the teaching process. In the present cases we deal with the totality of instruction destined to be sectarian, at least in part, if the religious character of the school is to be maintained. A school which operates to commingle religion with other instruction plainly cannot completely secularize its instruction. *637 Parochial schools, in large measure, do not accept the assumption that secular subjects should be unrelated to religious teaching.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

Lemon involves a state statute that prescribes that courses in mathematics, modern foreign languages, physical science, and physical education 'shall not include any subject matter expressing religious teaching, or the morals or forms of worship of any sect.' The subtleties involved in applying this standard are obvious. It places the State astride a sectarian school and gives it power to dictate what is or is not secular, what is or is not religious. I can think of no more disrupting influence apt to promote rancor and ill-will between church and state than this kind of surveillance and control. They are the very opposite of the 'moderation and harmony' between church and state which Madison thought was the aim and purpose of the Establishment Clause.

The DiCenso cases have all the vices which are in Lemon, because the supplementary salary payable to the teacher is conditioned on his or her not teaching 'a course in religion.'

Moreover the DiCenso cases reveal another, but related, knotty problem presented when church and state launch one of these educational programs. The Bishop of Rhode Island has a Handbook of School Regulations for the Diocese of Providence. [FN21]

> FN21. It was said on oral argument that the handbook shown as an exhibit in the record had been superseded. The provisions hereinafter quoted are from the handbook as it reads after all the deletions to which we were referred.

The school board supervises 'the education, both spiritual and secular, in the parochial schools and diocesan high schools.'

The superintendent is an agent of the bishop and he interprets and makes 'effective state and diocesan educational directives.'

*638 The pastors visit the schools and 'give their assistance in promoting spiritual and intellectual discipline.'

Community supervisors 'assist the teacher in the problems of instruction' and these duties are:

'I. To become well enough acquainted with the teachers of their communities so as to be able to advise the community superiors on matters of placement and reassignment.

II. To act as liaison between the provincialate and the religious teacher in the school.

'III. To cooperate with the superintendent by studying the diocesan school regulations and to encourage the teachers of their community to observe these regulations. 'IV. To avoid giving any orders or directions to the teachers of their community that may be in conflict with diocesan regulations or policy regarding curriculum, testing, textbooks, method, or administrative matters.

'V. To refer questions concerning school administration beyond the scope of their own authority to the proper diocesan school authorities, namely, the superintendent of schools or the pastor.'

2124 The length of the school day includes Mass:

'A full day session for Catholic schools at the elementary level consists of five and one-half hours, exclusive of lunch and Mass, [FN22] but inclusive of recess for pupils in grades 1--3.'

> FN22. 'The use of school time to participate in the Holy Sacrifice of the Mass on the feasts of All Saints, Ascension, and the patronal saint of the parish or school, as well as during the 40 Hours Devotion, is proper and commendable.'

A course of study or syllabus prescribed for an elementary or secondary school is 'mandatory.'

*639 Religious instruction is provided as follows:

'A. Systematic religious instructions must be provided in all schools of the diocese.

'B. Modern catechetics requires a teacher with unusual aptitudes, specialized training, and such unction of the spirit that his words possess the force of a personal call. He should be so filled with his subject that he can freely improvize in discussion, dramatization, drawing, song, and prayer. A teacher so gifted and so permeated by the message of the Gospel is rare. Perhaps no teacher in a given school attains that ideal. But some teachers come nearer it than others. If our pupils are to hear the Good News so that their minds are enlightened and their hearts respond to the love of God and His Christ, if they are to be formed into vital, twentieth-century Christians, they should receive their religious instructions only from the very best teachers.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

'C. Inasmuch as the textbooks employed in religious instruction above the fifth grade require a high degree of catechetical preparation, religion should be a departmentalized subject in grade six through twelve.'

Religious activities are provided, through observance of specified holy days and participation in Mass.

'Religious formation' is not restricted to courses but is achieved 'through the example of the faculty, the tone of the school * * * and religious activities.'

No unauthorized priest may address the students. 'Retreats and days of recollection form an integral part of our religious program in the Catholic schools.'

Religious factors are used in the selection of students:

'Although wealth should never serve as a criterion for accepting a pupil into a Catholic school, all other 640 things being equal, it would seem fair to give preference to a child whose parents support the parish. Regular use of the budget, rather than the size of the contributions, would appear equitable. It indicates whether parents regularly attend Mass.'

These are only highlights of the handbook. But they indicate how pervasive is the religious control over the school and how remote this type of school is from the secular school. Public funds supporting that structure are used to perpetuate a doctrine and creed in innumerable and in pervasive ways. Those who man these schools are good people, zealous people, dedicated people. But they are dedicated to ideas that the Framers of our Constitution placed beyond the reach of government.

If the government closed its eyes to the manner in which these grants are actually used it would be allowing public funds to promote sectarian education. If it did not close its eyes but undertook the surveillance needed, it would, I fear, intermeddle in parochial affairs in a way that would breed only rancor and dissension.

We have announced over and over again that the use of taxpayers' money to support parochial schools violates the First Amendment, applicable to the States by virtue of the Fourteenth.

*2125 We said in unequivocal words in Everson v. Board of Education, 330 U.S. 1, 16, 67 S.Ct. 504, 511, 91 L.Ed. 711, 'No tax in any amount, large or small, can be levied to support any religious activities or institutions, whatever they may be called, or whatever form they may adopt to teach or practice religion.' We reiterated the same idea in Zorach v. Clauson, 343 U.S. 306, 314, 72 S.Ct. 679, 684, 96 L.Ed. 954, and in McGowan v. Maryland, 366 U.S. 420, 443, 81 S.Ct. 1101, 1114, 6 L.Ed.2d 393, and in Torcaso v. Watkins, 367 U.S. 488, 493, 81 S.Ct. 1680, 1682, 6 L.Ed.2d 982. We repeated the same idea in McCollum v. Board of Education, 333 U.S. 203, 210, 68 S.Ct. 461, 464, 92 L.Ed. 648, and added that a State's 641 tax-supported public schools could not be used 'for the dissemination of religious doctrines' nor could a State provide the church 'pupils for their religious classes through use of the state's compulsory public school machinery.' Id., at 212, 68 S.Ct., at 466.

Yet in spite of this long and consistent history there are those who have the courage to announce that a State may nonetheless finance the secular part of a sectarian school's educational program. That, however, makes a grave constitutional decision turn merely on cost accounting and bookkeeping entries. A history class, a literature class, or a science class in a parochial school is not a separate institute; it is part of the organic whole which the State subsidizes. The funds are used in these cases to pay or help pay the salaries of teachers in parochial schools; and the presence of teachers is critical to the essential purpose of the parochial school, viz., to advance the religious endeavors of the particular church. It matters not that the teacher receiving taxpayers' money only teaches religion a fraction of the time. Nor does it matter that he or she teaches no religion. The school is an organism living on one budget. What the taxpayers give for salaries of those who teach only the humanities or science without any trace of proseletyzing enables the school to use all of its own funds for religious training. As Judge Coffin said, 316 F.Supp. 112, 120, we would be blind to realities if we let 'sophisticated bookkeeping' sanction 'almost total subsidy of a religious institution by assigning the bulk of the institution's expenses to 'secular' activities.' And sophisticated attempts to avoid the Constitution are just as invalid as simple-minded ones. Lane v. Wilson, 307 U.S. 268, 275, 59 S.Ct. 872, 876, 83 L.Ed. 1281.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

In my view the taxpayers' forced contribution to the 642 parochial schools in the present cases violates the First Amendment.

Mr. Justice MARSHALL, who took no part in the consideration or decision of No. 89, see ante, p. 2117, while intimating no view as to the continuing vitality of Everson v. Board of Education, 330 U.S. 1, 67 S.Ct. 504, 91 L.Ed. 711 (1947), concurs in MR. JUSTICE DOUGLAS' opinion covering Nos. 569 and 570.

91 S.Ct. 2105, 403 U.S. 602, 29 L.Ed.2d 745

Briefs and Other Related Documents (Back to top)

• 1971 WL 126395 (Appellate Brief) Motion for Leave to File Brief Amicus Curiae and Brief for Amicus Curiae National Association of Laymen (Jan. 1971)

• 1970 WL 116878 (Appellate Brief) Reply Brief for Appellants (Nov. 06, 1970)

• 1970 WL 116843 (Appellate Brief) Brief for the United States as Amicus Curiae (Oct. 30, 1970)

• 1970 WL 116845 (Appellate Brief) Brief of Polish American Congress, Inc., Order of Sons of Italy in America, Ukrainian National Association, Inc., League of United Latin American Citizens, Slovak Catholic Federation of America, Croatian Catholic Union of U.S.A., American Slovenian Catholic Union, Lithuanian Roman Catholic Alliance of America, Hungarian Catholic League of America, Inc., Ancient Order of Hibernians in America, Inc., Greek Catholic Union of the U.S.A., Union Saint-Jean-Baptiste, Catholic Central Union of America, (Aug. 24, 1970)

• 1970 WL 116844 (Appellate Brief) Brief of the City of Pittsburgh, Amicus Curiae (Aug. 22, 1970)

• 1970 WL 116846 (Appellate Brief) Brief of National Association of Independent Schools, Inc., Amicus Curiae (Aug. 18, 1970)

• 1970 WL 116838 (Appellate Brief) Brief for the National Catholic Educational Association, the National Association of Episcopal Schools, the National Union of Christian Schools, the National Conference of Yeshiva Principals, and the Lutheran Education Association, Amici Curiae (Aug. 14, 1970)

• 1970 WL 116841 (Appellate Brief) Brief of City of Philadelphia, Amicus Curiae (Aug. 14, 1970)

• 1970 WL 116847 (Appellate Brief) Brief for Amicus Curiae Citizens for Educational Freedom (Aug. 14, 1970)

• 1970 WL 116849 (Appellate Brief) Brief of Amicus Curiae City of Erie, Pennsylvania (Aug. 14, 1970)

• 1970 WL 116837 (Appellate Brief) Brief of the Pennsylvania State AFL-CIO, as Amicus Curiae (Aug. 10, 1970)

• 1970 WL 116839 (Appellate Brief) Brief of the Long Island Conference of Religious Elementary and Secondary School Administrators (Licressa), Amicus Curiae in Support of Defendants-Appellees and Intervener Defendant-Appellee (Aug. 10, 1970)

• 1970 WL 116850 (Appellate Brief) Brief for Amicus Curiae Attorney General of Ohio Cleveland, Ohio Public School District Cincinnati, Ohio Public School District Youngstown, Ohio Public School District (Aug. 10, 1970)

• 1970 WL 116851 (Appellate Brief) Brief of the School District of Philadelphia, Amicus Curiae (Aug. 10, 1970)

• 1970 WL 116870 (Appellate Brief) Brief for Appellee Pennsylvania Association of Independent Schools (Aug. 10, 1970)

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

• 1970 WL 116928 (Appellate Brief) Brief for Appellee Schools (Aug. 10, 1970)

• 1970 WL 116852 (Appellate Brief) Brief for Appellees, Kurtzman and Sloan (Aug. 05, 1970)

• 1970 WL 116848 (Appellate Brief) Brief of American Association of School Administrators, American Vocational Association, Association for Supervision and Curriculum Development, Horace Mann League of the United States, National Association of Elementary School Principals, National E ducation Association, National School Boards Association, and Rural Education Association, Amici Curiae (Jul. 10, 1970)

• 1970 WL 116840 (Appellate Brief) Brief of American Jewish Committee, American Jewish Congress, Anti-Defamation League of B'Nai B'rith, Central Conference of American Rabbis, National Council of Jewish Women and Union of American Hebrew Congregations, Amici Curiae (Jun. 27, 1970)

• 1970 WL 116836 (Appellate Brief) Brief of Protestants and Other Americans United for Separation of Church and State as Amicus Curiae (Jun. 04, 1970)

• 1970 WL 116871 (Appellate Brief) Brief for Appellants (Jun. 04, 1970)

END OF DOCUMENT

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

91 S.Ct. 2125 (Mem)
29 L.Ed.2d 745
(Cite as: 403 U.S. 602, 91 S.Ct. 2125)

Supreme Court of the United States

Alton J. LEMON et al., Appellants,
v.
David H. KURTZMAN, as Superintendent of Public Instruction of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, et al.
John R. EARLEY et al., Appellants,
v.
Joan DiCENSO et al.
William P. ROBINSON, Jr., Commissioner of Education of the State of Rhode Island, et al., Appellants,
v.
Joan DiCENSO et al.

Nos. 89, 569, 570. [FN*]

FN* This opinion also applies to No. 153, Tilton et al. v. Richardson, Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare, et al., 403 U.S. 672, 91 S.Ct. 2091, 29 L.Ed. 790.

June 28, 1971

For opinions of the Court see 91 S.Ct. 2091, 2105.

*2126 *642 Mr. Justice BRENNAN.

I agree that the judgments in Nos. 569 and 570 must be affirmed. In my view the judgment in No. 89 must be reversed outright. I dissent in No. 153 insofar as the plurality opinion and the opinion of my Brother WHITE sustain the constitutionality, as applied to sectarian institutions, of the Federal Higher Education Facilities Act of 1963, as amended, 77 Stat. 363, 20 U.S.C. s 711 et seq. (1964 ed. and Supp. V). In my view that Act is unconstitutional insofar as it authorizes grants of federal tax monies to sectarian institutions, but is unconstitutional only to that extent. I therefore think that our remand of the case should be limited to the direction of a hearing to determine whether the four institutional appellees here are sectarian institutions.

I continue to adhere to the view that to give concrete meaning to the Establishment lishment Clause

> 'the line we must draw between the permissible and the impermissible is one which accords with history and faithfully reflects the understanding of the Founding Fathers. It is a line which the Court has consistently sought to mark in its decisions expounding the religious guarantees of the First 643 Amendment. What the Framers meant to foreclose, and what our decisions under the Establishment Clause have forbidden, are those involvements of religious with secular institutions which (a) serve the essentially religious activities of religious institutions; (b) employ the organs of government for essentially religious purposes; or (c) use essentially religious means to serve governmental ends, where secular means would suffice. When the secular and religious institutions become involved in such a manner, there inhere in the relationship precisely those dangers--as much to church as to state--which the Framers feared would subvert religious liberty and the strength of a system of secular government.' Abington School District v. Schempp, 374 U.S. 203, 294--295, 83 S.Ct. 1560, 1609--1610, 10 L.Ed.2d 844 (1963) (concurring opinion); Walz v. Tax Commission, 397 U.S. 664, 680--681, 90 S.Ct. 1409, 1417--1418, 25 L.Ed.2d 697 (1970) (concurring opinion).

The common feature of all three statutes before us is the provision of a direct subsidy from public funds for activities carried on by sectarian educational institutions. We have sustained the reimbursement of parents for bus fares of students under a scheme applicable to both public and nonpublic schools, Everson v. Board of Education, 330 U.S. 1, 67 S.Ct. 504, 91 L.Ed. 711 (1947). We have also sustained the loan of textbooks in secular subjects to students of both public and nonpublic schools, Board of Education of Central School Dist. No. 1 v. Allen, 392 U.S. 236, 88 S.Ct. 1923, 20 L.Ed.2d 1060 (1968). See also Bradfield v. Roberts, 175 U.S. 291, 20 S.Ct. 121, 44 L.Ed. 168 (1899).

The statutory schemes before us, however, have features not present in either the Everson or Allen schemes. For example, the reimbursement or the loan of books ended government involvement in Everson and Annen. In contrast each of the schemes here exacts a promise in some form that the subsidy will not be used to finance 644 courses in religious subjects--promises that must be and are policed to assure compliance. Again, although the federal subsidy, similar to the Everson and Allen subsidies, is available to both public and nonpublic colleges and universities, the Rhode Island and Pennsylvania subsidies are restricted to nonpublic schools, and for practical purposes to Roman Catholic parochial schools. [FN1] 2127 These and other features I shall mention mean for me that Everson and Allen do not control these cases. Rather, the history of public subsidy of sectarian schools, and the purposes and operation of these particular statutes must be examined to determine whether the statutes breach the Establishment Clause. Walz v. Tax Commission, supra, 397 U.S., at 681, 90 S.Ct., at 1417 (concurring opinion).

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

FN1. At the time of trial, 95% of the elementary school children in private schools in Rhode Island attended Roman Catholic schools. Only nonpublic school teachers could receive the subsidy and then only if they taught in schools in which the average per pupil expenditure on secular education did not equal or exceed the average for the State's public schools. Some 250 of the 342 lay teachers employed in Rhode Island Roman Catholic schools had applied for and been declared eligible for the subsidy. To receive it the teacher must (1) have a state teaching certificate; (2) teach exclusively secular subjects taught in the State's public schools; (3) use only teaching materials approved for use in the public schools; (4) not teach religion; and (5) promise in writing not to teach a course in religion while receiving the salary supplement.
Unlike the Rhode Island case, the Pennsylvania case lacks a factual record since the complaint was dismissed on motion. We must therefore decide the constitutional challenge as addressed to the face of the Pennsylvania statute. Appellants allege that the nonpublic schools are segregated in Pennsylvania by race and religion and that the Act perpetrates and promotes the segregation of races 'with the ultimate result of promoting two school systems in Pennsylvania--a public school system predominantly black, poor and inferior and a private, subsidized school system predominantly white, affluent and superior.' Brief for Appellants Lemon et al. 9. The District Court held that appellants lacked standing to assert this equal protection claim. In my view this was plain error.

*645 I

In sharp contrast to the 'undeviating acceptance given religious tax exemptions from our earliest days as a Nation,' ibid., subsidy of sectarian educational institutions became embroiled in bitter controversies very soon after the Nation was formed. Public education was, of course, virtually nonexistent when the Constitution was adopted. Colonial Massachusetts in 1647 had directed towns to establish schools, Benjamin Franklin in 1749 proposed a Philadelphia Academy, and Jefferson labored to establish a public school system in Virginia. [FN2] But these were the exceptions. Education in the Colonies was overwhelmingly a private enterprise, usually carried on as a denominational activity by the dominant Protestant sects. In point of fact, government generally looked to the church to provide education, and often contributed support through donations of land and money. E. Cubberley, Public Education in the United States 171 (1919).

FN2. E. Cubberley, Public Education in the United States 17 (1919); Abington School District v. Schempp, 374 U.S. 203, 238 n. 7, 83 S.Ct. 1560, 1580, 10 L.Ed.2d 844 and authorities cited therein (Brennan, J., concurring).

Nor was there substantial change in the years immediately following ratification of the Constitution and the Bill of Rights. Schools continued to be local and, in the main, denominational institutions. [FN3] But the demand for public education soon emerged. The evolution of the struggle in New York City is illustrative. [FN4] In 1786, the first New York State Legislature ordered that one section in each township be set aside for the 'gospel and schools.'

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

With no public schools, various private agencies and churches operated 'charity schools' for the poor of New *646 York City and received money from the state common school fund. The forerunner of the city's public schools was organized in 1805 when DeWitt Clinton founded 'The Society for Establishment of a Free School in the City of New York for the Education of such poor Children as do not belong to or are not provided for by any Religious Society.' The State and city aided the society, and it built many schools. Gradually, however, competition and bickering among the Free School Society and the various church schools developed over the apportionment of state school funds. As a result, in 1825, the legislature transferred to the city council the responsibility for distributing New York City's share 2128 of the state funds. The council stopped funding religious societies which operated 16 sectarian schools but continued supporting schools connected with the Protestant Orphan Asylum Society. Thereafter, in 1831, the Catholic Orphan Asylum Society demanded and received public funds to operate its schools but a request of Methodists for funds for the same purpose was denied. Nine years later, the Catholics enlarged their request for public monies to include all parochial schools, contending that the council was subsidizing sectarian books and instruction of the Public School Society, which Clinton's Free School Society had become. The city's Scotch Presbyterian and Jewish communities immediately followed with requests for funds to finance their schools. Although the Public School Society undertook to revise its texts to meet the objections, in 1842, the state legislature closed the bitter controversy by enacting a law that established a City Board of Education to set up free public schools, prohibited the distribution of public funds to sectarian schools, and prohibited the teaching of sectarian doctrine in any public school.

FN3. C. Antieau, A. Downey, E. Roberts, Freedom from Federal Establishment 174 (1964).

FN4. B. Confrey, Secularism in American Education: Its History 127-- 129 (1931).

The Nation's rapidly developing religious heterogeneity, the tide of Jacksonian democracy, and growing *647 urbanization soon led to widespread demands throughout the States for secular public education. At the same time strong opposition developed to use of the States' taxing powers to support private sectarian schools. [FN5] Although the controversy over religious exercises in the public schools continued into this century, Schempp, 374 U.S., at 268--277, 83 S.Ct., at 1596--1601 (Brennan, J., concurring), the opponents of subsidy to sectarian schools had largely won their fight by 1900. In fact, after 1840, no efforts of sectarian schools to obtain a share of public school funds succeeded. Cubberley, supra, at 179. Between 1840 and 1875, 19 States added provisions to their constitutions iprohibiting the use of public school funds to aid sectarian schools, id., at 180, and by 1900, 16 more States had added similar provisions. In fact, no State admitted to the Union after 1858, except West Virginia, omitted such provision from its first constitution. Ibid. Today fewer than a half-dozen States omit such provisions from their constitutions. [FN6] *648 And in 1897, 2129 Congress included in its appropriation act for the District of Columbia a statement declaring it FN5. See generally R. Butts, The American Tradition in Religion and Education 111--145 (1950); 2 A. Stokes, Church and State in the United States 47--72 (1950); Cubberley, supra n. 2, at 155--181.

FN6. See Ala.Const., Art. XIV, s 263; Alaska Const., Art. VII, s 1; Ariz.Const., Art. II, s 12, Art. XI, ss 7, 8, A.R.S.; Ark. Const., Art. XIV, s 2; Calif.Const., Art. IX, s 8; Colo.Const., Art. IX, s 7; Conn.Const., Art. VIII s 4; Del.Const., Art. X, s 3; Fla.Const., Decl. of Rights, Art. I, s 3, F.S.A.; Ga.Const., Art. VIII, s 12, par. 1; Hawaii Const., Art. IX, s 1; Idaho Const., Art. IX, s 5; Ill.Const., Art. VIII, s 3; Ind.Const., Art. 8, s 3; Kan.Const., Art. 6, s 6(c); Ky.Const., s 189; La.Const., Art. XII, s 13; Mass.Const., Amend. Art. XLVI, s 2; Mich.Const., Art. I, s 4; Minn.Const., Art. VIII, s 2; Miss.Const., Art. 8, s 208; Mo.Const., Art. IX, s 8;

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

Mont.Const., Art. XI, s 8; Neb.Const., Art. VII, s 11; Nev.Const., Art. 11, s 10; N.H.Const., Pt. II, Art. 83; N.J.Const., Art. VIII, s 4, par. 2; N.Mex.Const., Art. XII, s 3; N.Y.Const., Art. XI, s 3; N.Car.Const., Art. IX, ss 4, 12; N.Dak.Const., Art. VIII, s 152; Ohio Const., Art. VI, s 2; Okla.Const., Art. II, s 5; Ore.Const., Art. VII, s 2; Penn.Const., Art. 3, s 15; R.I.Const., Art. XII, s 4; S.C.Const., Art. XI, s 9; S.Dak.Const., Art. VIII, s 16; Tenn.Const., Art. XI, s 12; Tex.Const., Art. VII, s 5; Utah Const., Art. X, s 13; Va.Const., Art. IX, s 141; Wash.Const., Art. IX, s 4; W.Va.Const., Art. XII, s 4; Wis.Const., Art. I, s 18, Art. X, s 2; Wyo.Const., Art. 7, s 8.

The overwhelming majority of these constitutional provisions either prohibit expenditures of public funds on sectarian schools, or prohibit the expenditure of public school funds for any purpose other than support of public schools. For a discussion and categorization of the various constitutional formulations, see Note, Catholic Schools and Public Money, 50 Yale L.J. 917 (1941). Many of the constitutional provisions are collected in B. Confrey, Secularism in American Education: Its History 47-- 125 (1931).

Many state constitutions explicitly apply the prohibition to aid to sectarian colleges and universities. See, e.g., Colo. Const., Art. IX, s 7; Idaho Const., Art. IX, s 5; Ill.Const., Art. VIII, s 3; Kan.Const., Art. 6, s 6(c); Mass.Const., Amend. Art. XLVI, s 2; Mo.Const., Art. IX, s 8; Mont.Const., Art. XI, s 8; Neb.Const., Art. VII, s 11; N.Mex.Const., Art. XII, s 3; S.C.Const., Art. XI, s 9; Utah Const., Art. X, s 13; Wyo.Const., Art. 7, s 8. At least one judicial decision construing the word 'schools' held that the word does not include colleges and universities, Opinion of the Justices, 214 Mass. 599, 102 N.E. 464 (1913), but that decision was overruled by constitutional amendment. Mass.Const., Amend. Art. XLVI, s 2.

'to be the policy of the Government of the United States to make no appropriation of money or property for the purpose of founding, maintaining, or aiding by payment for service, expenses, or otherwise, any church or religious denomination, or any institution or society which is under sectarian or ecclesiastical control.' 29 Stat. 411.

Thus for more than a century, the consensus, enforced by legislatures and courts with substantial consistency, has been that public subsidy of sectarian schools constitutes an impermissible involvement of secular with 649 religious institutions. [FN7] If this history is not itself compelling against the validity of the three subsidy statutes, in the sense we found in Walz that 'undeviating acceptance' was highly significant in favor of the validity of religious tax exemption, other forms of governmental involvement that each of the three statutes requires tips the scales in my view against the validity of each of them. These are involvements that threaten 'dangers--as much to church as to state--which the Framers feared would subvert religious liberty and the strength of a system of secular government.' Schempp, 374 U.S., at 295, 83 S.Ct., at 1610. (Brennan, J., concurring). '(G)overnment and religion have discrete interests which are mutually best served when each avoids too close a proximity to the other. It is not only the nonbeliever who fears the injection of sectarian doctrines and controversies into the civil polity, but in as high degree it is the devout believer who fears the secularization of a creed which becomes too deeply involved with and dependent upon the government.' Id., at 259, 83 S.Ct., at 1591 (Brennan, J., concurring). All three of these statutes require 'too close a proximity' of government to the subsidized sectarian institutions and in my view create real dangers of 'the secularization of a creed.'

FN7. See, e.g., Wright v. School Dist., 151 Kan. 485, 99 P.2d 737 (1940); Atchison, T. & S.F.R. Co. v. City of Atchison, 47 Kan. 712, 28 P. 1000 (1892); Williams v. Board of Trustees, 173 Ky. 708, 191 S.W. 507 (1917); Opinion of the Justices, 214 Mass. 599, 102 N.E. 464 (1913); Jenkins v. Inhabitants of Andover, 103 Mass. 94 (1869); Otken v. Lamkin, 56 Miss. 758 (1879); Harfst v. Hoegen, 349 Mo. 808, 163 S.W.2d 609 (1942); State ex rel. Public School Dist., etc. v. Taylor, 122 Neb. 454, 240 N.W. 573 (1932); State ex

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

rel. Nevada Orphan Asylum v. Hallock, 16 Nev. 373 (1882); Synod of Dakota v. State, 2 S.D. 366, 50 N.W. 632 (1891).

*650 II

The Rhode Island statute requires Roman Catholic teachers to surrender their right to teach religion courses and to promise not to 'inject' religious teaching into their secular courses. This has led at least one teacher to stop praying with his classes, [FN8] a concrete testimonial to the self-censorship that inevitably accompanies state regulation of delicate First Amendment freedoms. Cf. Smith v. California, 361 U.S. 147, 80 S.Ct. 215, 4 L.Ed.2d 205 (1959); Speiser v. Randall, 357 U.S. 513, 526, 78 S.Ct. 1332, 1342, 2 L.Ed.2d 1460 (1958). Both the Rhode 2130 Island and Pennsylvania statutes prescribe extensive standardization of the content of secular courses, and of the teaching materials and textbooks to be used in teaching the courses. And the regulations to implement those requirements necessarily require policing of instruction in the schools. The picture of state inspectors prowling the halls of parochial schools and auditing classroom instruction surely raises more than an imagined specter of governmental 'secularization of a creed.'

FN8. 'Already the Act has restricted the role of teachers. The evidence before us indicates that some otherwise qualified teachers have stopped teaching courses in religion in order to qualify for aid under the Act. One teacher, in fact, testified that he no longer prays with his class lest he endanger his subsidy.' 316 F.Supp., at 121.

The same dangers attend the federal subsidy even if less obviously. The Federal Government exacts a promise that no 'sectarian instruction' or 'religious worship' will take place in a subsidized building. The Office of Education polices the promise. [FN9] In one instance federal *651 officials demanded that a college cease teaching a course entitled 'The History of Methodism' in a federally assisted building, although the Establishment Clause 'plainly does not foreclose teaching about the Holy Scriptures or about the differences between religious sects in classes in literature or history.' Schempp, 374 U.S., at 300, 83 S.Ct., at 1612 (Brennan, J., concurring). These examples illustrate the complete incompatibility of such surveillance with the restraints barring interference with religious freedom. [FN10]

FN9. The Office of Education stipulated as follows:
'The Office of Education is now engaged in making a series of on-site reviews of completed projects to verify that conditions under which Federal assistance was provided are being implemented. During these visits, class schedules and course descriptions contained in the school catalog are analyzed to ascertain that nothing in the nature of sectarian instruction is scheduled in any area constructed with the use of Federal funds. If there is found to be an indication that a portion of academic facilities constructed with Federal assistance is used in any way for sectarian purposes, either the questionable practice must be terminated or the institution must assume full responsibility for the cost of constructing the area involved.' App. in No. 153, p. 82 (emphasis added).

FN10. The plurality opinion in No. 153 would strike down the 20-year 'period of Federal interest,' 20 U.S.C. s 754(a), upon the ground that '(t)he restrictive obligations of a recipient institution under s 751(a)(2) cannot, compatibly with the Religion Clauses, expire while the building has substantial value.' 403 U.S., at 683, 91 S.Ct., at 2098. Thus the surveillance constituting the 'too close a proximity' which for me offends the Establishment Clause continues for the life of the building.

Policing the content of courses, the specific textbooks used, and indeed the words of teachers is far different from the legitimate policing carried on under state compulsory attendance laws or laws regulating minimum levels of educational achievement. Government's legitimate interest in ensuring certain minimum skill levels and the acquisition of certain knowledge does not carry with it power to prescribe what shall not be taught, or what methods of instruction shall be used, or what opinions the teacher may offer in the course of teaching.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

Moreover, when a sectarian institution accepts state financial aid it becomes obligated under the Equal Protection Clause of the Fourteenth Amendment not to discriminate in admissions policies and faculty selection. *652 The District Court in the Rhode Island case pinpointed the dilemma:

> 'Applying these standards to parochial schools might well restrict their ability to discriminate in admissions policies, and in the hiring and firing of teachers. At some point the school becomes 'public' for more purposes than the Church could wish. At that point, the Church may justifiably feel that its victory on the Establishment Clause has meant abandonment of the Free Exercise Clause.' 316 F.Supp. at 121--122 (citations omitted).

III

In any event, I do not believe that elimination of these aspects of 'too close a proximity' would save these three statutes. I expressed the view in Walz that '(g)eneral subsidies of religious activities would, of course, constitute impermissible state involvement with religion.' 2131 397 U.S., at 690, 90 S.Ct., at 1422 (concurring opinion). I do not think the subsidies under these statutes fall outside '(g)eneral subsidies of religious activities' merely because they are restricted to support of the teaching of secular subjects. In Walz, the passive aspect of the benefits conferred by a tax exemption, particularly since cessation of the exemptions might easily lead to impermissible involvements and conflicts, led me to conclude that exemptions were consistent with the First Amendment values. However, I contrasted direct government subsidies:

> 'Tax exemptions and general subsidies, however, are qualitatively different. Though both provide economic assistance, they do so in fundamentally different ways. A subsidy involves the direct transfer of public monies to the subsidized enterprise and uses resources exacted from taxpayers as a whole. An exemption, on the other hand, involves no such *653 transfer. It assists the exempted enterprise only passively, by relieving a privately funded venture of the burden of paying taxes. In other words, '(i)n the case of direct subsidy, the state forcibly diverts the income of both believers and nonbelievers to churches,' while '(i)n the case of an exemption, the state merely refrains from diverting to its own uses income independently generated by the churches through voluntary contributions.' Thus, 'the symbolism of tax exemption is significant as a manifestation that organized religion is not expected to support the state; by the same token the state is not expected to support the church." 397 U.S., at 690--691, 90 S.Ct., at 1423 (footnotes and citations omitted) (concurring opinion).

Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, and the Federal Government argue strenuously that the government monies in all these cases are not '(g)eneral subsidies of religious activities' because they are paid specifically and solely for the secular education that the sectarian institutions provide. [FN11]

> FN11. The Pennsylvania statute. differs from Rhode Island's in providing the subsidy without regard to whether the sectarian school's average per-pupil expenditure on secular education equals or exceeds the average of the State's public schools. Nor is there any limitation of the subsidy to nonpublic schools that are financially embarrassed. Thus the statute on its face permits use of the state subsidy for the purpose of maintaining or attracting an audience for religious education, and also permits sectarian schools not needing the aid to apply it to exceed the quality of secular education provided in public schools. These features of the Pennsylvania scheme seem to me to invalidate it under the Establishment Clause as granting preferences to sectarian schools.

Before turning to the decisions of this Court on which this argument is based, it is important to recall again the history of subsidies to sectarian schools. See Part *654 I, supra. The universality of state constitutional provisions forbidding such grants, as well as the weight of judicial authority disapproving such aid as a violation of our tradition of separation of church and state, reflects a time-tested judgment that such grants do indeed constitute impermissible aid to religion. See nn. 6 and 7, supra. The recurrent argument, consistently rejected in the past, has been that government grants to sectarian schools ought not be viewed as impermissible subsidies 'because (the schools) relieve the State of a burden, which it would otherwise be itself required to bear * * * they will render a service to the state by performing for it its duty of educating the children of the people.' Cook County v. Chicago Industrial School, 125 Ill. 540, 571, 18 N.E. 183, 197 (1888).

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

Nonetheless, it is argued once again in these cases that sectarian schools and universities perform two separable functions. First, they provide secular education, and second, they teach the tenets of a particular sect. Since the State has determined that the secular education provided in sectarian schools serves the legitimate state interest in the education of its citizens, it is contended that state 2132 aid solely to the secular education function does not involve the State in aid to religion. Pierce v. Society of Sisters, 268 U.S. 510, 45 S.Ct. 571, 69 L.Ed. 1070 (1925), and Board of Education of Central School Dist. No. 1 v. Allen, supra, are relied on as support for the argument.

Our opinion in Allen recognized that sectarian schools provide both a secular and a sectarian education:

> '(T)his Court has long recognized that religious schools pursue two goals, religious instruction and secular education. In the leading case of Pierce v. Society of Sisters, 268 U.S. 510, 45 S.Ct. 571, 69 L.Ed. 1070 (1925), the Court held that * * * Oregon had not shown that its interest in secular education required that all children attend publicly operated schools. A premise of this *655 holding was the view that the State's interest in education would be served sufficiently by reliance on the secular teaching that accompanied religious training in the schools maintained by the Society of Sisters.
>
> '(T)he continued willingness to rely on private school systems, including parochial systems, strongly suggests that a wide segment of informed opinion, legislative and otherwise, has found that those schools do an acceptable job of providing secular education to their students. This judgment is further evidence that parochial schools are performing, in addition to their sectarian function, the task of secular education.' Board of Education of Central School Dist. No. 1 v. Allen, 392 U.S., at 245, 247--248, 88 S.Ct., at 1929 (footnote omitted).

But I do not read Pierce or Allen as supporting the proposition that public subsidy of a sectarian institution's secular training is permissible state involvement. I read them as supporting the proposition that as an identifiable set of skills and an identifiable quantum of knowledge, secular education may be effectively provided either in the religious context of parochial schools, or outside the context of religion in public schools. The State's interest in secular education may be defined broadly as an interest in ensuring that all children within its boundaries acquire a minimum level of competency in certain skills, such as reading, writing, and arithmetic, as well as a minimum amount of information and knowledge in certain subjects such as history, geography, science, literature, and law. Without such skills and knowledge, an individual will be at a severe disadvantage both in participating in democratic self- government and in earning a living in a modern industrial economy. But the State has no proper interest in prescribing the precise forum in which such skills and knowledge are learned since acquisition of this *656 secular education is neither incompatible with religious learning, nor is it inconsistent with or inimical to religious precepts.

When the same secular educational process occurs in both public and sectarian schools, Allen held that the State could provide secular textbooks for use in that process to students in both public and sectarian schools. Of course, the State could not provide textbooks giving religious instruction. But since the textbooks involved in Allen would, at least in theory, be limited to secular education, no aid to sectarian instruction was involved.

More important, since the textbooks in Allen had been previously provided by the parents, and not the schools, 392 U.S., at 244 n. 6, 88 S.Ct., at 1926, no aid to the institution was involved. Rather, as in the case of the bus transportation in Everson, the general program of providing all children in the State with free secular textbooks assisted all parents in schooling their children. And as in Everson, there was undoubtedly the possibility that some parents might not have been able to exercise their constitutional right to send their children to parochial school if the parents were compelled themselves to pay for textbooks. However, as my Brother Black wrote for the Court in Everson, > 2133 '(C)utting off church schools from these (general) services, so separate and so indisputably marked off from the religious function, would make it far more difficult for the schools to operate. But such is obviously not the purpose of the First Amendment. That Amendment requires the state to be a neutral in its relations with groups of religious believers and non-believers; it does not require the state to be their adversary. State power is no more to be used so as to handicap religions than it is to favor them.' 330 U.S., at 18, 67 S.Ct., at 512.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

*657 Allen, in my view, simply sustained a statute in which the State was 'neutral in its relations with groups of religious believers and non- believers.' The only context in which the Court in Allen employed the distinction between secular and religious in a parochial school was to reach its conclusion that the textbooks that the State was providing could and would be secular. [FN12] The present cases, however, involve direct subsidies of tax monies to the schools themselves and we cannot blink the fact that the secular education those schools provide goes hand in hand with the religious mission that' is the only reason for the schools' existence. Within the institution, the two are inextricably intertwined.

> FN12. The three dissenters in Allen focused primarily on their disagreement with the Court that the textbooks provided would be secular. See 392 U.S., at 252--253, 88 S.Ct., at 1931--1932 (Black, J., dissenting); id., at 257, 88 S.Ct., at 1933 (Douglas, J., dissenting); id., at 270, 88 S.Ct. at 1940 (Fortas, J., dissenting).

The District Court, in the DiCenso case found that all the varied aspects of the parochial school's program--the nature of its faculty, its supervision, decor, program, extracurricular activities, assemblies, courses, etc.--produced an 'intangible 'religious atmosphere," since the 'diocesan school system is an integral part of the religious mission of the Catholic Church' and 'a powerful vehicle for transmitting the Catholic faith to the next generation.' 316 F.Supp., at 117. Quality teaching in secular subjects is an integral part of this religious enterprise. 'Good secular teaching is as essential to the religious mission of the parochial schools as a roof for the school or desks for the classrooms.' 316 F.Supp., at 117--118. That teaching cannot be separated from the environment in which it occurs, for its integration with the religious mission is both the theory and the strength of the religious school.

The common ingredient of the three prongs of the test *658 set forth at the outset of this opinion is whether the statutes involve government in the 'essentially religious activities' of religious institutions. My analysis of the operation, purposes, and effects of these statutes leads me inescapably to the conclusion that they do impermissibly involve the States and the Federal Government with the 'essentially religious activities' of sectarian educational institutions. More specifically, for the reasons stated, I think each government uses 'essentially religious means to serve governmental ends, where secular means would suffice.' This Nation long ago committed itself to primary reliance upon publicly supported public education to serve its important goals in secular education. Our religious diversity gave strong impetus to that commitment.

> '(T)he American experiment in free public education available to all children has been guided in large measure by the dramatic evolution of the religious diversity among the population which our public schools serve. * * * The public schools are supported entirely, in most communities, by public funds--funds exacted not only from parents, nor alone from those who hold particular religious views, nor indeed from those who subscribe to any creed at all. It is implicit in the history and character of American public education that the public schools serve a uniquely public function: the training of American citizens in an atmosphere free of parochial 2134 divisive, or separatist influences of any sort--an atmosphere in which children may assimilate a heritage common to all American groups and religions. This is a heritage neither theistic nor atheistic, but simply civic and patriotic.'

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

Schempp, 374 U.S., at 241--242, 83 S.Ct., at 1581--1582 (citation omitted) (Brennan, J., concurring).

*659 I conclude that, in using sectarian institutions to further goals in secular education, the three statutes do violence to the principle that 'government may not employ religious means to serve secular interests, however legitimate they may be, at least without the clearest demonstration that nonreligious means will not suffice.' Schempp, supra, at 265, 83 S.Ct., at 1594 (Brennan, J., concurring).

IV

The plurality's treatment of the issues in Tilton, No. 153, diverges so substantially from my own that I add these further comments. I believe that the Establishment Clause forbids the Federal Government to provide funds to sectarian universities in which the propagation and advancement of a particular religion are a function or purpose of the institution. Since the District Court made no findings whether the four institutional appellees here are sectarian, I would remand the case to the District Court with directions to determine whether the institutional appellees are 'sectarian' institutions.

I reach this conclusion for the reasons I have stated: the necessarily deep involvement of government in the religious activities of such an institution through the policing of restrictions, and the fact that subsidies of tax monies directly to a sectarian institution necessarily aid the proselytizing function of the institution. The plurality argues that neither of these dangers is present. [FN13]

> FN13. Much of the plurality's argument is directed at establishing that the specific institutional appellees here, as well as most church- related colleges, are not sectarian in that they do not have a purpose or function to advance or propagate a specific religion. Those questions must await hearings and findings by the District Court.

At the risk of repetition, I emphasize that a sectarian university is the equivalent in the realm of higher education of the Catholic elementary schools in Rhode Island; it is an educational institution in which the propagation *660 and advancement of a particular religion are a primary function of the institution. I do not believe that construction grants to such a sectarian institution are permissible. The reason is not that religion 'permeates' the secular education that is provided. Rather, it is that the secular education is provided within the environment of religion; the institution is dedicated to two goals, secular education and religious instruction. When aid flows directly to the institution, both functions benefit. The plurality would examine only the activities that occur within the federally assisted building and ignore the religious nature of the school of which it is a part. The 'religious enterprise' aided by the construction grants involves the maintenance of an educational environment--which includes high-quality, purely secular educational courses--within which religious instruction occurs in a variety of ways.

The plurality also argues that no impermissible entanglement exists here. My Brother WHITE cogently comments upon that argument: 'Why the federal program in the Tilton case is not embroiled with the same difficulties (as the Rhode Island program) is never adequately explained.' Post, at 2138. I do not see any significant difference in the Federal Government's telling the sectarian university not to teach any nonsecular subjects in a certain building, and Rhode Island's telling the Catholic school teacher not to teach religion. The vice is the 2135 creation through subsidy of a relationship in which the government policies the teaching practices of a religious school or university. The plurality suggests that the facts that college students are less impressionable and that college courses are less susceptible to religious permeation may lessen the need for federal policing. But the record shows that such policing has occurred and occurred in a heavy-handed way. Given the dangers of self-censorship in such a situation, I cannot agree that the dangers of *661 entanglement are insubstantial. Finally, the plurality suggests that the 'nonideological' nature of a building, as contrasted with a teacher, reduces the need for policing. But the Federal Government imposes restrictions on every class taught in the federally assisted building. It is therefore not the 'nonideological' building that is policed; rather, it is the courses given there and the teachers who teach them. Thus, the policing is precisely the same as under the state statutes, and that is what offends the Constitution.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

V

I, therefore, agree that the two state statutes that focus primarily on providing public funds to sectarian schools are unconstitutional. However, the federal statute in No. 153 is a general program of construction grants to all colleges and universities, including sectarian institutions. Since I believe the statute's extension of eligibility to sectarian institutions is severable from the broad general program authorized, I would hold the Higher Education Facilities Act unconstitutional only insofar as it authorized grants of federal tax monies to sectarian institutions--institutions that have a purpose or function to propagate or advance a particular religion. Therefore, if the District Court determines that any of the four institutional appellees here are 'sectarian,' that court, in my view, should enjoin the other appellees from making grants to it.

91 S.Ct. 2125 (Mem), 403 U.S. 602, 29 L.Ed.2d 745

END OF DOCUMENT

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

91 S.Ct. 2135 (Mem)
29 L.Ed.2d 745
(Cite as: 403 U.S. 602, 91 S.Ct. 2135)

H

Supreme Court of the United States

Alton J. LEMON et al., Appellants,
v.
David H. KURTZMAN, as Superintendent of Public Instruction of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, et al.

No. 89.

June 28, 1971

For opinions of the Court see 91 S.Ct. 2091, 2105.

661 2135 Mr. Justice WHITE, concurring in the judgment in 89 and 153 and dissenting in Nos. 569 and 570.

It is our good fortune that the States of this country long ago recognized that instruction of the young and old ranks high on the scale of proper governmental functions 662 and not only undertook secular education as a public responsibility but also required compulsory attendance at school by their young. Having recognized the value of educated citizens and assumed the task of educating them, the States now before us assert a right to provide for the secular education of children whether they attend public schools or chose to enter private institutions, even when those institutions are church- related. The Federal Government also asserts that it is entitled, where requested, to contribute to the cost of secular education by furnishing buildings and facilities to all institutions of higher learning, public and private alike. Both the United States and the States urge that if parents choose to have their children receive instruction in the required secular subjects in a school where religion is also taught and a religious atmosphere may prevail, part or all of the cost of such secular instruction may be paid for by governmental grants to the religious institution conducting the school and seeking the grant. Those who challenge this position would bar official contributions to secular education where the family prefers the parochial *2136 to both the public and nonsectarian private school.

The issue is fairly joined. It is precisely the kind of issue the Constitution contemplates this Court must ultimately decide. This is true although neither affirmance nor reversal of any of these cases follows automatically from the spare language of the First Amendment, from its history, or from the cases of this Court construing it and even though reasonable men can very easily and sensibly differ over the import of that language.

But, while the decision of the Court is legitimate, it is surely quite wrong in overturning the Pennsylvania and Rhode Island statutes on the ground that they amount to an establishment of religion forbidden by the First Amendment.

663 No one in these cases questions the constitutional right of parents to satisfy their state-imposed obligation to educate their children by sending them to private schools, sectarian or otherwise, as long as those schools meet minimum standards established for secular instruction. The States are not only permitted, but required by the Constitution, to free students attending private schools from any public school attendance obligation. Pierce v. Society of Sisters, 268 U.S. 510, 45 S.Ct. 571, 69 L.Ed. 1070 (1925). The States may also furnish transportation for students, Everson v. Board of Education, 330 U.S. 1, 67 S.Ct. 504, 91 L.Ed. 711 (1947), and books for teaching secular subjects to students attending parochial and other private as well as public schools, Board of Education of Central School Dist. No. 1 v. Allen, 392 U.S. 236, 88 S.Ct. 1923, 20 L.Ed.2d 1060 (1968); we have also upheld arrangements whereby students are released from public school classes so that they may attend religious instruction. Zorach v. Clauson, 343 U.S. 306, 72 S.Ct. 679, 96 L.Ed. 954 (1952). Outside the field of education, we have upheld Sunday closing laws, McGowan v. Maryland, 366 U.S. 420, 81 S.Ct. 1101, 6 L.Ed.2d 393 (1961), state and federal laws exempting church property and church activity from taxation, Walz v. Tax Commission, 397 U.S. 664, 90 S.Ct. 1409, 25 L.Ed.2d 697 (1970) , and governmental grants to religious organizations for the purpose of financing improvements in the facilities of hospitals managed and controlled by religious orders. Bradfield v. Roberts, 175 U.S. 291, 20 S.Ct. 121, 44 L.Ed. 168 (1899).

Our prior cases have recognized the dual role of parochial schools in American society: they perform both religious and secular functions. See Board of Education v. Allen, supra, 392 U.S., at 248, 88 S.Ct., at 1929. Our cases also recognize that legislation having a secular purpose and extending governmental assistance to sectarian schools in the performance of their secular functions does not constitute 'law(s) respecting an establishment of religion' forbidden by the First Amendment merely because a secular program may incidentally benefit a church in fulfilling its religious mission. 664 That religion may indirectly benefit from governmental aid to the secular activities of churches does not convert that aid into an impermissible establishment of religion.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

This much the Court squarely holds in the Tilton case, where it also expressly rejects the notion that payments made directly to a religious institution are, without more, forbidden by the First Amendment. In Tilton, the Court decides that the Federal Government may finance the separate function of secular education carried on in a parochial setting. It reaches this result although sectarian institutions undeniably will obtain substantial benefit from federal aid; without federal funding to provide adequate facilities for secular education, the student bodies of those institutions might remain stationary or even decrease in size and the institutions might ultimately have to close their doors.

It is enough for me that the States and the Federal Government are financing a separable secular function of overriding importance in order to sustain the legislation here challenged. That *2137 religion and private interests other than education may substantially benefit does not convert these laws into impermissible establishments of religion.

It is unnecessary, therefore, to urge that the Free Exercise Clause of the First Amendment at least permits government in some respects to modify and mold its secular programs out of express concern for free-exercise values. See Walz v. Tax Commission, supra, 397 U.S., at 673, 90 S.Ct., at 1413 (tax exemption for religious properties; '(t)he limits of permissible state accommodation to religion are by no means coextensive with the noninterference mandated by the Free Exercise Clause. To equate the two would be to deny a national heritage with roots in the Revolution itself'); Sherbert v. Verner, 374 U.S. 398, 83 S.Ct. 1790, 10 L.Ed.2d 965 (1963) (exemption of Seventh Day Adventist from eligibility requirements for 665 unemployment insurance not only permitted but required by the Free Exercise Clause); Zorach v. Clauson, supra, 343 U.S., at 313--314, 72 S.Ct., at 683--684 (students excused from regular public school routine to obtain religious instruction; '(w)hen the state encourages religious instruction * * * it follows the best of our traditions. For it then respects the religious nature of our people and accommodates the public service to their spiritual needs'). See also Abington School District v. Schempp, 374 U.S. 203, 308, 83 S.Ct. 1560, 1616, 10 L.Ed.2d 844 (1963) (Stewart, J., dissenting); Welsh v. United States, 398 U.S. 333, 367, 90 S.Ct. 1792, 1810, 26 L.Ed.2d 308 (1970) (White, J., dissenting). The Establishment Clause, however, coexists in the First Amendment with the Free Exercise Clause and the latter is surely relevant in cases such as these. Where a state program seeks to ensure the proper education of its young, in private as well as public schools, free exercise considerations at least counsel against refusing support for students attending parochial schools simply because in that setting they are also being instructed in the tenets of the faith they are constitutionally free to practice.

I would sustain both the federal and the Rhode Island programs at issue in these cases, and I therefore concur in the judgment in No. 153 [FN1] and dissent from the judgments in Nos. 569 and 570. Although I would also reject the facial challenge to the Pennsylvania statute, I concur in the judgment in No. 89 for the reasons given below.

FN1. I accept the Court's invalidation of the provision in the federal legislation whereby the restriction on the use of buildings constructed with federal funds terminates after 20 years.

The Court strikes down the Rhode Island statute on its face. No fault is found with the secular purpose of the program; there is no suggestion that the purpose of the program was aid to religion disguised in secular attire. Nor does the Court find that the primary effect of the program is to aid religion rather than to implement secular goals. The Court nevertheless finds *666 that impermissible 'entanglement' will result from administration of the program. The reasoning is a curious and mystifying blend, but a critical factor appears to be an unwillingness to accept the District Court's express findings that on the evidence before it none of the teachers here involved mixed religious and secular instruction. Rather, the District Court struck down the Rhode Island statute because it concluded that activities outside the secular classroom would probably have a religious content and that support for religious education therefore necessarily resulted from the financial aid to the secular programs, since that aid generally strengthened the parochial schools and increased the number of their students.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

In view of the decision in Tilton, however, where these same factors were found insufficient to invalidate the federal plan, the Court is forced to other considerations. Accepting the District Court's observation in DiCenso that education 2138 is an integral part of the religious mission of the Catholic church--an observation that should neither surprise nor alarm anyone, especially judges who have already approved substantial aid to parochial schools in various forms--the majority then interposes findings and conclusions that the District Court expressly abjured, namely, that nuns, clerics, and dedicated Catholic laymen unavoidably pose a grave risk in that they might not be able to put aside their religion in the secular classroom. Although stopping short of considering them untrustworthy, the Court concludes that for them the difficulties of avoiding teaching religion along with secular subjects would pose intolerable risks and would in any event entail an unacceptable enforcement regime. Thus, the potential for impermissible fostering of religion in secular classrooms--an untested assumption of the Court-- paradoxically renders unacceptable the State's efforts at insuring that secular teachers under religious discipline successfully avoid conflicts between the religious mission *667 of the school and the secular purpose of the State's education program.

The difficulty with this is twofold. In the first place, it is contrary to the evidence and the District Court's findings in DiCenso. The Court points to nothing in this record indicating that any participating teacher had inserted religion into his secular teaching or had had any difficulty in avoiding doing so. The testimony of the teachers was quite the contrary. The District Court expressly found that '(t)his concern for religious values does not necessarily affect the content of secular subjects in diocesan schools. On the contrary, several teachers testified at trial that they did not inject religion into their secular classes, and one teacher deposed that he taught exactly as he had while employed in a public school. This testimony gains added credibility from the fact that several of the teachers were non- Catholics. Moreover, because of the restrictions of Rhode Island's textbook loan law * * * and the explicit requirement of the Salary Supplement Act, teaching materials used by applicants for aid must be approved for use in the public schools.' DiCenso v. Robinson, 316 F.Supp. 112, 117 (RI 1970). Elsewhere, the District Court reiterated that the defect of the Rhode Island statute was 'not that religious doctrine overtly intrudes into all instruction,' ibid., but factors aside from secular courses plus the fact that good secular teaching was itself essential for implementing the religious mission of the parochial school.

Secondly, the Court accepts the model for the Catholic elementary and secondary schools that it was rejected for the Catholic universities or colleges in the Tilton case. There it was urged that the Catholic condition of higher learning was an integral part of the religious mission of the church and that these institutions did everything they could to foster the faith. The Court's response was that on the record before it none of *668 the involved institutions was shown to have complied with the model and that it would not purport to pass on cases not before it. Here, however, the Court strikes down this Rhode Island statute based primarily on its own model and its own suppositions and unsupported views of what is likely to happen in Rhode Island parochial school classrooms, although on this record there is no indication that entanglement difficulties will accompany the salary supplement program.

The Court thus creates an insoluble paradox for the State and the parochial schools. The State cannot finance secular instruction if it permits religion to be taught in the same classroom; but if it exacts a promise that religion not be so taught--a promise the school and its teachers are quite willing and on this record able to give--and enforces it, it is then entangled in the 'no entanglement' aspect of the Court's Establishment Clause jurisprudence.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

Why the federal program in the Tilton case is not embroiled in the same difficulties is never adequately explained. Surely the notion that college students 2139 are more mature and resistant to indoctrination is a make- weight, for in Tilton there is careful note of the federal condition on funding and the enforcement mechanism available. If religious teaching in federally financed buildings was permitted, the powers of resistance of college students would in no way save the federal scheme. Nor can I imagine the basis for finding college clerics more reliable in keeping promises than their counterparts in elementary and secondary schools--particularly those in the Rhode Island case, since within five years the majority of teachers in Rhode Island parochial schools will be lay persons, many of them non-Catholic.

Both the District Court and this Court in DiCenso have seized on the Rhode Island formula for supplementing *669 teachers' salaries since it requires the State to verify the amount of school money spent for secular as distinguished from religious purposes. Only teachers in those schools having per-pupil expenditures for secular subjects below the state average qualify under the system, an aspect of the state scheme which is said to provoke serious 'entanglement.' But this is also a slender reed on which to strike down this law, for as the District Court found, only once since the inception of the program has it been necessary to segregate expenditures in this manner.

The District Court also focused on the recurring nature of payments by the State of Rhode Island; salaries must be supplemented and money appropriated every year and hence the opportunity for controversy and friction over state aid to religious schools will constantly remain before the State. The Court adopts this theme in DiCenso and makes much of the fact that under the federal scheme the grant to a religious institution is a one-time matter. But this argument is without real force. It is apparent that federal interest in any grant will be a continuing one since the conditions attached to the grant must be enforced. More important, the federal grant program is an ongoing one. The same grant will not be repeated, but new ones to the same or different schools will be made year after year. Thus the same potential for recurring political controversy accompanies the federal program. Rhode Island may have the problem of appropriating money each year to supplement the salaries of teachers, but the United States must each year seek financing for the new grants it desires to make and must supervise the ones already on the record.

With respect to Pennsylvania, the Court, accepting as true the factual allegations of the complaint, as it must for purposes of a motion to dismiss, would reverse the dismissal of the complaint and invalidate the legislation. *670 The critical allegations, as paraphrased by the Court, are that 'the church-related elementary and secondary schools are controlled by religious organizations, have the purpose of propagating and promoting a particular religious faith, and conduct their operations to fulfill that purpose.' 403 U.S., at 620, 91 S.Ct., at 2115. From these allegations the Court concludes that forbidden entanglements would follow from enforcing compliance with the secular purpose for which the state money is being paid.

I disagree. There is no specific allegation in the complaint that sectarian teaching does or would invade secular classes supported by state funds. That the schools are operated to promote a particular religion is quite consistent with the view that secular teaching devoid of religious instruction can successfully be maintained, for good secular instruction is, as Judge Coffin wrote for the District Court in the Rhode Island case, essential to the success of the religious mission of the parochial school. I would no more here than in the Rhode Island case substitute presumption for proof that religion is or would be taught in state-financed secular courses or assume that enforcement measures would be so extensive as to border on a free exercise violation. We should not forget that the Pennsylvania statute does not 2140 compel church schools to accept state funds. I cannot hold that the First Amendment forbids an agreement between the school and the State that the state funds would be used only to teach secular subjects.

I do agree, however, that the complaint should not have been dismissed for failure to state a cause of action. Although it did not specifically allege that the schools involved mixed religious teaching with secular subjects, the complaint did allege that the schools were operated to fulfill religious purposes and one of the legal theories stated in the complaint was that the Pennsylvania Act 'finances and participates in the blending of sectarian *671 and secular instruction.' At trial under this complaint, evidence showing such a blend in a course supported by state funds would appear to be admissible and, if credited, would establish financing of religious instruction by the State. Hence, I would reverse the judgment of the District Court and remand the case for trial, thereby holding the Pennsylvania legislation valid on its face but leaving open the question of its validity as applied to the particular facts of this case.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

I find it very difficult to follow the distinction between the federal and state programs in terms of their First Amendment acceptability. My difficulty is not surprising, since there is frank acknowledgment that 'we can only dimly perceive the boundaries of permissible government activity in this sensitive area of constitutional adjudication,' Tilton v. Richardson, 403 U.S., at 678, 91 S.Ct., at 2095, and that '(j)udicial caveats against entanglement' are a 'blurred, indistinct and variable barrier.' Lemon v. Kurtzman, 403 U.S., at 614, 91 S.Ct. at 2112. I find it even more difficult, with these acknowledgments in mind, to understand how the Court can accept the considered judgment of Congress that its program is constitutional and yet reject the equally considered decisions of the Rhode Island and Pennsylvania legislatures that their programs represent a constitutionally acceptable accommodation between church and state. [FN2]

> FN2. As a postscript I should note that both the federal and state cases are decided on specified Establishment Clause considerations, without reaching the questions that would be presented if the evidence in any of these cases showed that any of the involved schools restricted entry on racial or religious grounds or required all students gaining admission to receive instruction in the tents of a particular faith. For myself, if such proof were made, the legislation would to that extent be unconstitutional.

91 S.Ct. 2135 (Mem), 403 U.S. 602, 29 L.Ed.2d 745

END OF DOCUMENT

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

EXHIBIT 33

814 So.2d 347
27 Fla. L. Weekly S234, 101 A.L.R.5th 655
(Cite as: 814 So.2d 347)

H
Briefs and Other Related Documents

Supreme Court of Florida.

Jan MALICKI, St. David Catholic Church, and the Archdiocese of Miami, Petitioners,
v.
Jane DOE, et al., Respondents.

No. SC01-179.

March 14, 2002.

Parishioners sued church and archdiocese for negligent hiring and supervision in connection with alleged sexual assaults by priest during the time parishioners were working at church. The Circuit Court, Dade County, David L. Tobin, J., dismissed those claims. Parishioners appealed. The District Court of Appeal, Fletcher, J., reversed and remanded, 771 So.2d 545. Granting review, the Supreme Court, Pariente, J., held that First Amendment cannot be used at initial pleading stage to bar claims founded on a religious institution's alleged negligence in failing to prevent harm from sexual assault on a minor or adult parishioner by one of its clergy, disapproving Doe v. Evans, 718 So.2d 286; abrogating Doe v. Dorsey, 683 So.2d 614.

Decision of District Court of Appeal approved and case remanded.

Wells, C.J., concurred in result only with an opinion.

Quince, J., concurred specially with an opinion.

Harding, J., dissented with an opinion.

West Headnotes

[1] Appeal and Error ⇐919
30k919 Most Cited Cases

In reviewing dismissal of a complaint, appellate court must accept all well- pled allegations of the complaint as true.

[2] Constitutional Law ⇐274(3.1)
92k274(3.1) Most Cited Cases

Constitutional guarantees regarding religion, as contained in Free Exercise Clause and Establishment Clause of First Amendment, are made applicable to the states through the Fourteenth Amendment. U.S.C.A. Const.Amends. 1, 14.

[3] Constitutional Law ⇐84.1
92k84.1 Most Cited Cases

Free Exercise Clause guarantees first and foremost the right to believe and profess whatever religious doctrine one desires. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 1.

[4] Constitutional Law ⇐84.1
92k84.1 Most Cited Cases

At a minimum, the protections of the Free Exercise Clause pertain if the law at issue discriminates against some or all religious beliefs or regulates or prohibits conduct because it is undertaken for religious reasons. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 1.

[5] Constitutional Law ⇐84.5(1)
92k84.5(1) Most Cited Cases

In context of Free Exercise Clause, permissible government regulation of otherwise prohibitable conduct that is accompanied by religious convictions includes both statutory law and court action through civil lawsuits. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 1.

[6] Constitutional Law ⇐84.2
92k84.2 Most Cited Cases

Before the constitutional right to free exercise of religion is implicated, the threshold inquiry is whether the conduct sought to be regulated was rooted in religious belief. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 1

[7] Constitutional Law ⇐84.1
92k84.1 Most Cited Cases

In order to launch a free exercise challenge, it is necessary to show the coercive effect of the enactment as it operates against the individual in the practice of his religion. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 1.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

[8] Constitutional Law ⇐84.2
92k84.2 Most Cited Cases

In context of free exercise challenge, if it is demonstrated that conduct subjected to government regulation was rooted in religious beliefs, then the court must determine whether the law regulating that conduct is neutral both on its face and in its purpose. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 1.

[9] Constitutional Law ⇐84.1
92k84.1 Most Cited Cases

If the object of a law is to infringe upon or restrict practices because of their religious motivation, the law is not neutral, and it is invalid under Free Exercise Clause unless it is justified by a compelling interest and is narrowly tailored to advance that interest. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 1.

[10] Constitutional Law ⇐84.1
92k84.1 Most Cited Cases

[10] Constitutional Law ⇐84.2
92k84.2 Most Cited Cases

Notwithstanding protections of Free Exercise Clause, state may regulate conduct rooted in religious beliefs through neutral laws of general applicability; thus, a law that is neutral and of general applicability need not be justified by a compelling governmental interest even if the law has the incidental effect of burdening a particular religious practice. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 1.

[11] Constitutional Law ⇐84.1
92k84.1 Most Cited Cases

Establishment Clause involves the separation of church and state and prevents the government from passing laws that aid one religion, aid all religions, or prefer one religion over the other. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 1.

[12] Constitutional Law ⇐84.5(7.1)
92k84.5(7.1) Most Cited Cases

Under First Amendment, civil courts must defer to the interpretations of religious doctrine made by the highest ecclesiastical tribunal. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 1.

[13] Constitutional Law ⇐84.5(7.1)
92k84.5(7.1) Most Cited Cases

First Amendment provides churches with the power to decide for themselves, free from state interference, matters of church government as well as those of faith and doctrine. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 1.

[14] Constitutional Law ⇐84.5(7.1)
92k84.5(7.1) Most Cited Cases

In determining whether it may exercise jurisdiction over dispute allegedly implicating Free Exercise or Establishment Clause, a court must determine whether the dispute is an ecclesiastical one about discipline, faith, internal organization, or ecclesiastical rule, custom, or law, or whether case is one in which courts should hold a religious organization liable for purely secular disputes between third parties and a particular defendant, albeit a religiously affiliated organization. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 1.

[15] Constitutional Law ⇐84.1
92k84.1 Most Cited Cases

Although the Free Exercise and Establishment Clauses protect different interests, the analysis under the two clauses is intertwined. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 1.

[16] Constitutional Law ⇐84.5(7.1)
92k84.5(7.1) Most Cited Cases

Both the Free Exercise and Establishment Clauses of First Amendment must be analyzed in determining whether the reach of the constitutional protection extends to what amounts to an immunity from a tort claim where the religious institution is a defendant. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 1.

[17] Constitutional Law ⇐84.1
92k84.1 Most Cited Cases

A law establishing standards of conduct does not implicate the Free Exercise Clause unless adherence to those standards interferes with religious belief or activity. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 1.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

First Amendment cannot be used at the initial pleading stage to shut the courthouse door on a plaintiff's claims which are founded on a religious institution's alleged negligence arising from failure to prevent harm resulting from one of its clergy who sexually assaults and batters a minor or adult parishioner; disapproving Doe v. Evans, 718 So.2d 286; abrogating Doe v. Dorsey, 683 So.2d 614. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 1.

*350 James F. Gilbride and Adam D. Horowitz of Gilbride, Heller & Brown, P.A., Miami, FL; and J. Patrick Fitzgerald, Coral Gables, FL, for Petitioners.

May L. Cain and William J. Snihur, Jr. of Cain & Snihur, North Miami Beach, FL, for Respondents.

Peter A. Miller of Conroy, Simberg & Ganon, Coral Gables, Florida; and Law Offices of Robert S. Glazier, Miami, FL, for Miami Shores Presbyterian Church, Amicus Curiae.

Philip M. Burlington of Caruso, Burlington, Bohn & Compiani, P.A., West Palm Beach, FL, for Academy of Florida Trial Lawyers, Amicus Curiae.

PARIENTE, J.

We have for review the Third District Court of Appeal's decision in *351*Doe v. Malicki,* 771 So.2d 545 (Fla. 3d DCA 2000), which expressly construes the First Amendment of the United States Constitution. We have jurisdiction. See art. V, § 3(b)(3), Fla. Const. [FN1] The issue presented in this case is whether the First Amendment bars a third-party tort action against a religious institution grounded on the alleged tortious act by one of its clergy. We conclude that the First Amendment does not provide a shield behind which a church may avoid liability for harm caused to an adult and a child parishioner arising from the alleged sexual assault or battery by one of its clergy, and accordingly approve the Third District's decision. We thus join the majority of both state and federal jurisdictions that have found no First Amendment bar under similar circumstances. [FN2]

FN1. Petitioners also invoke our jurisdiction based on express and direct conflict with the Fourth District Court of Appeal's decision in Doe v. Evans, 718 So.2d 286 (Fla. 4th DCA 1998), review granted, 735 So.2d 1284 (Fla.1999), which we also have pending on review. See art. V, § 3(b)(3), Fla. Const.

FN2. State cases: Colorado: Bear Valley Church of Christ v. DeBose, 928 P.2d 1315, 1323 (Colo.1996) (holding the First Amendment not a bar to child's various tort claims against pastor and church for "pattern of inappropriate touching" that arose during counseling relationship); Moses v. Diocese of Colorado, 863 P.2d 310, 314-15 (Colo.1993) (holding First Amendment no bar to adult parishioner's claims against bishop and diocese for breach of fiduciary duty and negligent hiring and supervision grounded on sexual relationship between parishioner and priest during the course of counseling); Destefano v. Grabrian, 763 P.2d 275, 283-88 (Colo.1988) (same); Illinois: Amato v. Greenquist, 287 Ill.App.3d 921, 223 Ill.Dec. 261, 679 N.E.2d 446, 450, 454 (1997) (Illinois does not recognize claim of breach of fiduciary duty based upon relationship between cleric and parishioner because religion is the foundation of the claim, but recognizing that negligent supervision claim may not be barred by First Amendment); Bivin v. Wright, 275 Ill.App.3d 899, 212 Ill.Dec. 287, 656 N.E.2d 1121, 1124-25 (1995) (recognizing that claim brought by husband and wife against church alleging negligent supervision of minister who engaged in sexual relationship with wife during the course of marital counseling is not barred by First Amendment); Indiana: Konkle v. Henson, 672 N.E.2d 450, 456 (Ind.Ct.App.1996) (holding that child victim of sexual molestation could bring claim of negligent hiring and supervision against church); Minnesota: Mrozka v. Archdiocese of St. Paul and Minneapolis, 482 N.W.2d 806, 812 (Minn.Ct.App.1992) (holding that First Amendment is not violated by the imposition of punitive damages a gainst c hurch based u pon p riest's sexual abuse of child); New Jersey: F.G. v. MacDonell, 150 N.J. 550, 696 A.2d 697, 702-03 (1997) (holding that First Amendment does not bar breach of fiduciary duty claim against priest who engaged in sexual relationship with adult parishioner during counseling); New York: Kenneth R. v. Roman Catholic Diocese, 229 A.D.2d 159, 654 N.Y.S.2d 791, 795-96 (1997) (holding that child's negligent supervision and retention claims against diocese not barred by First Amendment); but see Langford v. Roman Catholic Diocese, 271 A.D.2d 494, 705 N.Y.S.2d 661, 662 (N.Y.App.Div.2000) (holding that parishioner's breach of fiduciary duty claim against member of the clergy in connection with sexual relationship during the course of spiritual counseling was tantamount to impermissible clergy malpractice claim); North Carolina: Smith v. Privette, 128 N.C.App. 490, 495 S.E.2d 395, 398 (1998) (holding adult's claim of negligent retention and supervision against church arising out of alleged "inappropriate, unwelcome, offensive and nonconsensual acts of a sexual nature" by minister not barred by First Amendment); Ohio: Byrd v. Faber, 57 Ohio St.3d 56, 565 N.E.2d 584, 589 (1991) (recognizing that negligent hiring claim may not violate First Amendment, but that complaint must plead the operative facts with particularity); Oregon: Erickson v. Christenson, 99 Or.App. 104, 781 P.2d 383, 386 (1989) (holding that First Amendment did not bar tort claims against church for actions of pastor who engaged in sexual relations with plaintiff during course of counseling relationship when plaintiff was a minor); Texas: Martinez v. Primera Asemblea de Dios, Inc., No. 05-96-01458, 1998 WL 242412, at *3 (Tex.Ct.App. May 15, 1998) (holding that First Amendment did not bar parishioner's negligence claims against church based upon allegations that church elder sexually assaulted her); but see Hawkins v. Trinity Baptist Church, 30 S.W.3d 446, 453 (Texas Ct.App.2000) (declining to recognize breach of fiduciary duty claim against pastor for sexual relationship with adult parishioner during the course of marital counseling because of "concerns towards treading upon the Free Exercise Clause"); Washington: C.J.C. v. Corporation of the Catholic Bishop of Yakima, 138 Wash.2d 699, 985 P.2d 262, 277 (1999) (holding that First Amendment did not bar minor sexual abuse victim from bringing tort claims against priest and church).

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

Federal cases: Martinelli v. Bridgeport Roman Catholic Diocesan Corp., 196 F.3d 409 (2d Cir.1999) (holding Free Exercise Clause did not bar finding of fiduciary relationship between diocese and parishioner for child sexual abuse by priest); Smith v. O'Connell, 986 F.Supp. 73, 80 (D.R.I.1997) (holding First Amendment did not bar minor's claim of sexual molestation against priest and church for negligent supervision); Doe v. Hartz, 970 F.Supp. 1375, 1431-32 (N.D.Iowa 1997) (holding negligent supervision claim brought by adult who claimed improper sexual contact by priest not barred by First Amendment; however, First Amendment did bar negligent hiring claim), rev'd on other grounds, 134 F.3d 1339 (8th Cir.1998); Sanders v. Casa View Baptist Church, 898 F.Supp. 1169, 1175 (N.D.Tex.1995) (holding First Amendment no bar to claims of professional negligence and breach of fiduciary duty brought by church employee who had counseling relationship with minister), aff'd, 134 F.3d 331 (5th Cir.1998); Nutt v. Norwich Roman Catholic Diocese, 921 F.Supp. 66 (D.Conn.1995) (holding Free Exercise Clause does not bar claim for negligent employment based upon alleged sexual abuse of altar boys by priest); Isely v. Capuchin Province, 880 F.Supp. 1138, 1151 (E.D.Mich.1995) (holding no First Amendment bar to claim of negligent supervision by student sexual abuse victim, but First Amendment does bar claim of negligent hiring).

*352 BACKGROUND

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

814 So.2d 347
27 Fla. L. Weekly S234, 101 A.L.R.5th 655
(Cite as: 814 So.2d 347)

Jane Doe I and Jane Doe II ("parishioners") jointly brought an eight-count lawsuit against Father Jan Malicki ("Malicki"), St. David Catholic Church, and the Archdiocese of Miami (the second two defendants are referred to collectively as "Church Defendants"). The parishioners alleged in their complaint that, at the time of the incident, Jane Doe I was a minor parishioner who worked at St. David in exchange for her tuition to attend St. Thomas Catholic High School, [FN3] and that Jane Doe II was an adult parishioner who worked at St. David and was under the direct control and supervision of Malicki and the Church Defendants.

FN3. The Archdiocese of Miami, in conjunction with St. Thomas Catholic High School, owns and manages St. Thomas.

[1] The complaint alleges that on numerous occasions, Malicki "fondled, molested, touched, abused, sexually assaulted and/or battered" the parishioners on the premises of St. David. Moreover, Count I also alleges that on numerous occasions, Malicki unlawfully served alcohol to Jane Doe I. Counts I and II set forth claims of negligent hiring, retention, and supervision against the Church Defendants based upon Malicki's conduct. In particular, the complaint alleges that the Church Defendants "knew, or in the exercise of reasonable care, should have known, [that Malicki] was unsuited for teaching, counseling, spiritually guiding, supervising and leading employees and parishioners." Moreover, the parishioners assert that the Church Defendants negligently failed "to make inquiries into Malicki's background, qualifications, reputation, work history, and/or criminal history prior to employing him in the capacity of Associate Pastor." Finally, the parishioners contend that the Church Defendants negligently placed them under the supervision of Malicki, when the Church Defendants either knew or should have known that Malicki had the propensity to commit sexual assaults and molestations. [FN4]

FN4. Because this case is before us on the dismissal of a complaint, we must accept all well-pled allegations of the complaint as true. See Mazzoni Farms, Inc. v. E.I. DuPont De Nemours & Co., 761 So.2d 306, 309 n. 3 (Fla.2000); Stone v. Wall, 734 So.2d 1038, 1039 (Fla.1999).

*353 The Church Defendants moved to dismiss the complaint, arguing, among other claims, that the resolution of these issues would "involve the internal ecclesiastical decisions of the Roman Catholic Church required by Canon Law" and therefore are barred by the First Amendment. Moreover, the Church Defendants argued that the parishioners' negligence claim was improper because the parishioners failed to establish a secular duty and the parishioners failed to establish a sufficient physical injury to establish their emotional damages.

The trial court reached only the First Amendment argument and entered an order granting the Church Defendants' motion to dismiss with prejudice, concluding that the First Amendment barred consideration of the parishioners' claims. On appeal, the Third District reversed and remanded. The Third District framed the issue as whether the Church Defendants had reason to know of Malicki's misconduct and did nothing to prevent reasonably foreseeable harm from being inflicted on the parishioners. See Malicki, 771 So.2d at 548. Because this determination "is one governed by tort law and does not require inquiry into the religious doctrines and practices of the Catholic Church," the Third District concluded that the First Amendment did not bar consideration of the parishioners' claims. Id.

Chief Judge Schwartz wrote a dissenting opinion, in which he took issue with the majority's premise that the resolution of these issues turned on neutral principles of tort law. See id. at 548 (Schwartz, C.J., dissenting). Chief Judge Schwartz stated that it was erroneous to equate "the relationships between the church, its bishops and its priests--and any consequent tort responsibility for hiring, firing, retention and assignment ... to those involving, say, a landlord and the custodian to whom it entrusts the keys to the tenants' apartments." Id. Chief Judge Schwartz reasoned that it would be inconceivable to hold the Church Defendants to the secular standard of a reasonable businessman, and that it would be unconstitutional to hold the Church Defendants to the standard of a reasonable church. See id. at 550. Therefore, Chief Judge Schwartz concluded that the First Amendment barred consideration of the parishioners' claims in this case.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

LAW AND ANALYSIS
I. OVERVIEW OF THE FIRST AMENDMENT

The general issue presented in this case is whether, in the name of the First Amendment, religious institutions can be shielded from otherwise cognizable tort claims caused by their agents and employees. In the context of this case, the specific question is whether the First Amendment bars a secular court's consideration of the parishioners' claims of negligent hiring and supervision against the Church Defendants based upon the claim that Malicki "fondled, molested, touched, abused, sexually assaulted and/or battered" the minor and adult parishioners.

[2] The First Amendment to the United States Constitution provides that "Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof...." U.S. Const. amend. I. The First Amendment, which is one of the hallmarks of our Bill of Rights, contains two clauses regarding religion--the Free Exercise Clause and the Establishment Clause. This constitutional guarantee 354 is made applicable to the states through the Fourteenth Amendment. See Santa Fe Indep. Sch. Dist. v. Doe, 530 U.S. 290, 301, 120 S.Ct. 2266, 147 L.Ed.2d 295 (2000); Capitol Square Review & Advisory Bd. v. Pinette, 515 U.S. 753, 757, 115 S.Ct. 2440, 132 L.Ed.2d 650 (1995).

[3][4] The Free Exercise Clause guarantees "first and foremost, the right to believe and profess whatever religious doctrine one desires." Employment Div. v. Smith, 494 U.S. 872, 877, 110 S.Ct. 1595, 108 L.Ed.2d 876 (1990). Moreover, "[a]t a minimum, the protections of the Free Exercise Clause pertain if the law at issue discriminates against some or all religious beliefs or regulates or prohibits conduct because it is undertaken for religious reasons." Church of the Lukumi Babalu Aye v. City of Hialeah, 508 U.S. 520, 532, 113 S.Ct. 2217, 124 L.Ed.2d 472 (1993).

[5] The United States Supreme Court has explained that the Free Exercise Clause "embraces two concepts--freedom to believe and freedom to act. The first is absolute but, in the nature of things, the second cannot be. Conduct remains subject to regulation for the protection of society." Cantwell v. Connecticut, 310 U.S. 296, 303-04, 60 S.Ct. 900, 84 L.Ed. 1213 (1940). Thus, the First Amendment has never been interpreted to mean that "when otherwise prohibitable conduct is accompanied by religious convictions, not only the convictions but the conduct itself must be free from government regulation." Smith, 494 U.S. at 882, 110 S.Ct. 1595. Government regulation includes both statutory law and court action through civil lawsuits. See Kreshik v. Saint Nicholas Cathedral, 363 U.S. 190, 191, 80 S.Ct. 1037, 4 L.Ed.2d 1140 (1960).

[6][7] Importantly, before the constitutional right to free exercise of religion is implicated, the threshold inquiry is whether the conduct sought to be regulated was "rooted in religious belief." Wisconsin v. Yoder, 406 U.S. 205, 215, 92 S.Ct. 1526, 32 L.Ed.2d 15 (1972); see Sanders v. Casa View Baptist Church, 134 F.3d 331, 337-38 (5th Cir.1998); Destefano v. Grabrian, 763 P.2d 275, 283-84 (Colo.1988). Further, in order to launch a free exercise challenge, it is necessary "to show the coercive effect of the enactment as it operates against [the individual] in the practice of his religion." School Dist. v. Schempp, 374 U.S. 203, 223, 83 S.Ct. 1560, 10 L.Ed.2d 844 (1963).

[8][9] If it is demonstrated that the conduct at issue was rooted in religious beliefs, then the court must determine whether the law regulating that conduct is neutral both on its face and in its purpose. See Lukumi Babalu, 508 U.S. at 531, 113 S.Ct. 2217. "[I]f the object of a law is to infringe upon or restrict practices because of their religious motivation, the law is not neutral, and it is invalid unless it is justified by a compelling interest and is narrowly tailored to advance that interest." Id. at 533, 113 S.Ct. 2217 (citation omitted).

[10] The State may, however, regulate conduct through neutral laws of general applicability. See id. at 531, 113 S.Ct. 2217. Thus, "a law that is neutral and of general applicability need not be justified by a compelling governmental interest even if the law has the incidental effect of burdening a particular religious practice." Id. at 531, 113 S.Ct. 2217.

[11] The second aspect of the First Amendment

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

religion clause, the Establishment Clause, states that government "shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion." U.S. Const. amend. I. This aspect of the First Amendment involves the separation of church and state and prevents the government from passing laws that "aid one religion, aid all religions,*355 or prefer one religion over the other." Schempp, 374 U.S. at 216, 83 S.Ct. 1560.

The United States Supreme Court has explained that there are "three main evils against which the Establishment Clause was intended to afford protection: 'sponsorship, financial support, and active involvement of the sovereign in religious activity.' " Lemon v. Kurtzman, 403 U.S. 602, 612, 91 S.Ct. 2105, 29 L.Ed.2d 745 (1971) (quoting Walz v. Tax Comm'n, 397 U.S. 664, 668, 90 S.Ct. 1409, 25 L.Ed.2d 697 (1970)). In Lemon, the Court provided a three-part test to determine whether a neutral law violates the Establishment Clause: (1) the law must have a secular legislative purpose; (2) the primary or principal effect of the law must neither advance nor inhibit religion; and (3) the law must not foster an excessive government entanglement with religion. 403 U.S. at 612-13, 91 S.Ct. 2105. More recent cases examining the Establishment Clause have clarified that excessive government entanglement is merely a factor to consider in evaluating the second prong; that is, whether the principal effect of the statute is to advance or inhibit religion. See Mitchell v. Helms, 530 U.S. 793, 120 S.Ct. 2530, 147 L.Ed.2d 660 (2000); Agostini v. Felton, 521 U.S. 203, 233, 117 S.Ct. 1997, 138 L.Ed.2d 391 (1997). [FN5]

FN5. We note that several U.S. Supreme Court Justices have expressed dissatisfaction with the Lemon test, advocating an alternative analytical framework for evaluating First Amendment claims. See, e.g., Lee v. Weisman, 505 U.S. 577, 112 S.Ct. 2649, 120 L.Ed.2d 467 (1992) (advocating and applying a coercion-accommodation test); Lynch v. Donnelly, 465 U.S. 668, 691, 104 S.Ct. 1355, 79 L.Ed.2d 604 (1984) (O'Connor, J., concurring) (advocating adoption of an endorsement test). But see Capitol Square Review and Advisory Bd. v. Pinette, 515 U.S. 753, 766-67, 115 S.Ct. 2440, 132 L.Ed.2d 650 (1995), plurality opinion by Scalia, J., joined by Rehnquist, C.J., and Kennedy and Thomas, JJ., (rejecting endorsement test because it "exiles private religious speech to a realm of less-protected expression.... [T]he Establishment Clause ... was never meant ... to serve as an impediment to purely private religious speech connected to the State only through its occurrence in a public forum."). However, we must continue to apply the Lemon test until the U.S. Supreme Court reaches a consensus on the successor to the Lemon test.

[12][13] As particularly relevant to the analysis of the First Amendment challenge in this case, the Supreme Court has also held that the First Amendment prevents courts from resolving internal church disputes that would require adjudication of questions of religious doctrine. [FN6] See Serbian E. Orthodox Diocese v. Milivojevich, 426 U.S. 696, 708-09, 96 S.Ct. 2372, 49 L.Ed.2d 151 (1976); Presbyterian Church v. Mary Elizabeth Blue Hull Mem. Presbyterian Church, 393 U.S. 440, 449, 89 S.Ct. 601, 21 L.Ed.2d 658 (1969); Kedroff v. St. Nicholas Cathedral, 344 U.S. 94, 107-08, 73 S.Ct. 143, 97 L.Ed. 120 (1952). For example, the Supreme Court has stated that "it is not within 'the judicial function and judicial competence' " of civil courts to determine which of two competing *356 interpretations of scripture are correct. United States v. Lee, 455 U.S. 252, 256, 102 S.Ct. 1051, 71 L.Ed.2d 127 (1982). Instead, civil courts must defer to the interpretations of religious doctrine made by the "highest ecclesiastical tribunal." Serbian E. Orthodox Diocese, 426 U.S. at 709, 96 S.Ct. 2372. Thus, the First Amendment provides churches with the "power to decide for themselves, free from state interference, matters of church government as well as those of faith and doctrine." Kedroff, 344 U.S. at 116, 73 S.Ct. 143; see Serbian E. Orthodox Diocese, 426 U.S. at 724-25, 96 S.Ct. 2372.

FN6. This protection has been referred to as the religious autonomy principle. See Smith v. O'Connell, 986 F.Supp. 73, 76 (D.R.I.1997). Although the United States Supreme Court has often discussed this > principle in the context of the Free Exercise Clause, see United States v. Lee, 455 U.S. 252, 256, 102 S.Ct. 1051, 71 L.Ed.2d 127 (1982); Kedroff v. St. Nicholas Cathedral, 344 U.S. 94, 107-08, 73 S.Ct. 143, 97 L.Ed. 120 (1952), the United States Supreme Court has also referred to this principle in the context of the Establishment Clause. See Presbyterian Church v. Mary Elizabeth Blue Hull Mem. Presbyterian Church, 393 U.S. 440, 449, 89 S.Ct. 601, 21 L.Ed.2d 658 (1969). It is apparent that the religious autonomy principle articulated by the United States Supreme Court may implicate both the Free Exercise Clause and the Establishment Clause.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

In Kedroff, the Supreme Court held unconstitutional a New York state statute passed specifically to address an intrachurch property dispute. 344 U.S. at 121, 73 S.Ct. 143. Moreover, in Serbian E. Orthodox Diocese, the Supreme Court held that the Illinois Supreme Court had no authority, consistent with the First Amendment, to adjudicate a dispute concerning a priest's defrockment by the mother church. 426 U.S. at 724-25, 96 S.Ct. 2372. In reversing the judgment of the state court, the Supreme Court explained:

> The fallacy fatal to the judgment of the Illinois Supreme Court is that it rests upon an impermissible rejection of the decisions of the highest ecclesiastical tribunals of this hierarchical church upon the issues in dispute, and impermissibly substitutes its own inquiry into church polity and resolutions based thereon of those disputes.... "To permit civil courts to probe deeply enough into the allocation of power within a [hierarchical] church so as to decide ... religious law [governing church polity] ... would violate the First Amendment in much the same manner as civil determination of religious doctrine." For where resolution of the disputes cannot be made without extensive inquiry by civil courts into religious law and polity, the First and Fourteenth Amendments mandate that civil courts shall not disturb the decisions of the highest ecclesiastical tribunal within a church of hierarchical polity, but must accept such decisions as binding on them, in their application to the religious issues of doctrine or polity before them.

Id. at 708-09, 96 S.Ct. 2372 (emphasis added) (citations omitted) (quoting Maryland & Va. Eldership v. Church of God, 396 U.S. 367, 369, 90 S.Ct. 499, 24 L.Ed.2d 582 (1970) (Brennan, J., concurring)).

Intrachurch disputes, however, must be distinguished from disputes between churches and third parties. As then Justice Rehnquist observed, in rejecting the argument by the United Methodist Church that the Free Exercise Clause barred the Court's exercise of jurisdiction in a civil dispute involving a third party:

> In my view, applicant plainly is wrong when it asserts that the First and Fourteenth Amendments prevent a civil court from independently examining, and making the ultimate decision regarding, the structure and actual operation of a hierarchical church and its constituent units in an action such as this. There are constitutional limitations on the extent to which a civil court may inquire into and determine matters of ecclesiastical cognizance and polity in adjudicating intrachurch disputes. See Serbian Eastern Orthodox Diocese .... But this Court has never suggested that those constraints similarly apply outside the context of such intraorganization disputes.... [Serbian Eastern Orthodox Diocese and other related cases] are premised on a perceived danger that in resolving intrachurch disputes the State will become entangled in essentially religious controversies or intervene on behalf*357 of groups espousing particular doctrinal beliefs. Such considerations are not applicable to purely secular disputes between third parties and a particular defendant, albeit a religious affiliated organization, in which fraud, breach of contract, and statutory violations are alleged.

General Council on Fin. & Admin. v. California Superior Court, 439 U.S. 1355, 1372-73, 99 S.Ct. 35, 58 L.Ed.2d 63 (Rehnquist, Circuit Justice 1978) (emphasis added).

[14] A court thus must determine whether the dispute "is an ecclesiastical one about 'discipline, faith, internal organization, or ecclesiastical rule, custom or law,' or whether it is a case in which [it] should hold religious organizations liable in civil courts for 'purely secular disputes between third parties and a particular defendant, albeit a religiously affiliated organization.' " Bell v.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

Presbyterian Church, 126 F.3d 328, 331 (4th Cir.1997) (quoting Serbian E. Orthodox Diocese, 426 U.S. at 713, 96 S.Ct. 2372; and General Council, 439 U.S. at 1373, 99 S.Ct. 35). See also Mary Elizabeth Blue Hull Mem. Presbyterian Church, 393 U.S. at 449, 89 S.Ct. 601 ("[T]here are neutral principles of law, developed for use in all property disputes, which can be applied without 'establishing' churches to which the property is awarded.") [15][16] From this overview of the applicable United States Supreme Court precedent, it is clear that although the Free Exercise and Establishment Clauses protect different interests, the analysis under the two clauses is intertwined. Thus, both clauses of the First Amendment must be analyzed in determining whether the reach of the constitutional protection extends to what amounts to an immunity from a tort claim where the religious institution is a defendant. Although an entanglement inquiry is associated with the adjudication of an Establishment Clause claim, the extent to which the courts will be called upon to determine matters of church practice also implicates the Free Exercise Clause. With this framework in mind, we turn to the split of authority among the jurisdictions that have considered the issue presented in this case.

II. SPLIT OF AUTHORITY

The United States Supreme Court has not yet resolved the issue of whether the First Amendment protects a religious institution from liability when a church employee engages in tortious conduct against a third-party, whether it arises from sexual assault and battery of a minor and an adult--as in this case--or whether it arises in the context of adult counseling, as in many other cases. [FN7] The question unanswered thus far by the United States Supreme Court is how far the religious autonomy principle of Kedroff and Serbian E. Orthodox Diocese may be extended to bar the adjudication of a third-party tort claim that calls into question a religious institution's acts or omissions.

> FN7. The difference in the result reached by courts engaged in the analysis of whether the First Amendment would bar a negligence claim against a religious institution may stem in part from the fact that "[i]t is generally acknowledged that this area of the First Amendment law is in flux and the United States Supreme Court cases offer very limited guidance." Pritzlaff v. Archdiocese of Milwaukee, 194 Wis.2d 302, 533 N.W.2d 780, 794 (1995) (Abrahamson, J., dissenting). See also Swanson v. Roman Catholic Bishop of Portland, 692 A.2d 441, 446-47 (Me.1997) (Lipez, J., dissenting) (explaining that this is "an area of the law in which the U.S. Supreme Court cases offer limited guidance and there remains significant doctrinal uncertainty").

Courts that have addressed this issue are divided. As the Third District observed in this case:

> 358 In recent years courts throughout the nation have confronted the issue of a religious institution's liability in response to increased litigation arising from allegations of sexual misconduct by members of the clergy. Various theories of liability have been used in an attempt to resolve any First Amendment entanglement problem. And, not surprisingly given the delicate balance between religious freedom and the protection of the public safety, there is considerable diversity in the judicial analysis employed by the different courts. See Joseph B. Conder, Liability of Church or Religious Society for Sexual Misconduct of Clergy, 5 A.L.R. 5th 530 (1993).

Malicki, 771 So.2d at 546.

Substantial authority in both the state and federal courts concludes that the right to religious freedom and autonomy protected by the First Amendment is not violated by permitting the courts to adjudicate tort liability against a religious institution based on a claim that a clergy member engaged in tortious conduct such as sexual assault and battery in the course of his or her relationship with a parishioner. [FN8] These courts conclude that there is no impermissible interpretation of religious doctrine because the courts are applying a neutral principle of generally applicable tort law. [FN9] This is especially so where the religious institution does not allege that the conduct was undertaken in furtherance of a sincerely held religious belief. See Sanders, 134 F.3d at 338 n. 7; Destefano, 763 P.2d at 284. Thus, the Colorado Supreme Court has reasoned that "[i]n the spiritual counseling context, the free exercise clause is relevant only if the defendant can show that the conduct that allegedly caused plaintiff's distress was in fact 'part of the belief and practices' of the religious group." Destefano, 763 P.2d at 283-84; see Sanders, 134 F.3d at 337-38; MacDonell, 696 A.2d at 702. Moreover, it has been asserted that a contrary holding actually places a church or its clergy in a preferred position of being immune from tort liability solely because of religion, which in itself would have the impermissible effect of recognizing a religion in violation of the Establishment Clause. See Smith v. O'Connell, 986 F.Supp. 73, 80 (D.R.I.1997) (citing City of Boerne v. Flores, 521 U.S. 507, 537, 117 S.Ct. 2157, 138 L.Ed.2d 624 (1997) (Stevens, J., concurring)); Smith v. Raleigh Dist., 63 F.Supp.2d 694, 716 n. 18 (E.D.N.C.1999).

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

FN8. See supra note 2.

FN9. See id.

On the other hand, there is contrary authority from some state and federal courts that concludes that any tort claim against a religious institution founded on negligent hiring or supervision or breach of fiduciary duty is barred because the adjudication of the tort dispute would necessarily involve an examination of the religious institution's method of hiring, supervising, and disciplining its clergy, thus interfering with its religious autonomy. [FN10] These courts reason that the evaluation *359 of these claims would impermissibly interfere with the right of the church to determine standards governing the relationship between the church and its clergy.

FN10. State courts: Louisiana: Roppolo v. Moore, 644 So.2d 206, 207 (La.Ct.App.1994) (holding that negligence claims against clergy member and religious organization for alleged sexual relationship during the course of a counseling relationship were tantamount to impermissible clergy malpractice claim); Maine: Bryan R. v. Watchtower Bible & Tract Soc'y, 738 A.2d 839, 848 (Me.1999) (stating in dicta that "[a]llowing a secular court or jury to determine whether a church and its clergy have sufficiently disciplined, sanctioned, or counseled a church member would insert the State into church matters in a fashion wholly forbidden by the Free Exercise Clause of the First Amendment"); Swanson v. Roman Catholic Bishop of Portland, 692 A.2d 441, 444 (Me.1997) (holding that First Amendment barred negligent supervision claim against a church regarding sexual relationship between adult parishioner and priest during the course of a marital counseling); Michigan: Teadt v. Lutheran Church Missouri Synod, 237 Mich.App. 567, 603 N.W.2d 816, 822-23 (1999) (holding that claim of breach of fiduciary duty against pastor for sexual relationship with parishioner during the course of pastoral counseling was tantamount to impermissible clergy malpractice claim); Minnesota: Mulinix v. Mulinix, No. C2-97-297, 1997 WL 585775, *6 (Minn.Ct.App. Sept.22, 1997) (holding that negligent retention and supervision claims based upon a pastor's sexual contact with parishioners was barred by the First Amendment); Missouri: Gibson v. Brewer, 952 S.W.2d 239, 246-48 (Mo.1997) (holding that First Amendment barred child victim of sexual abuse by priest from bringing negligent hiring and supervision claims, but that First Amendment would not be violated by adjudication of claim of intentional failure to supervise priest); H.R.B. v. J.L.G., 913 S.W.2d 92, 98-99 (Mo.Ct.App.1995) (holding that First Amendment barred child victim of sexual abuse by priest from bringing breach of fiduciary duty claim against priest, church official, and church); Nebraska: Schieffer v. Catholic Archdiocese of Omaha, 244 Neb. 715, 508 N.W.2d 907, 911-13 (1993) (holding that First Amendment barred adult parishioner who engaged in sexual relationship with priest during the course of pastoral counseling from bringing intentional infliction of emotional distress, negligence, and breach of fiduciary duty claims); Wisconsin: L.L.N. v. Clauder, 209

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

> Wis.2d 674, 563 N.W.2d 434, 445 (1997) (holding that First Amendment barred consideration of negligent supervision claim against diocese for sexual relationship between adult parishioner and priest while the priest was counseling the parishioner in his position as a hospital chaplain); Pritzlaff v. Archdiocese of Milwaukee, 194 Wis.2d 302, 533 N.W.2d 780, 790 (1995) (same).
> Federal courts: Dausch v. Rykse, 52 F.3d 1425, 1429 (7th Cir.1994) (holding that First Amendment barred parishioner's negligent hiring and supervision and breach of fiduciary duty claims against pastor and church for sexual contact that occurred between pastor and parishioner during the course of a counseling relationship); Ayon v. Gourley, 47 F.Supp.2d 1246, 1250 (D.Colo.1998) (holding that First Amendment barred negligent hiring and supervision claim against archdiocese for alleged sexual abuse of minor by priest), aff'd on other grounds 185 F.3d 873 (10th Cir.1999) (unpublished decision); Schmidt v. Bishop, 779 F.Supp. 321, 325-26 (S.D.N.Y.1991) (holding that First Amendment barred adult's breach of fiduciary duty claim against pastor for actions that occurred when parishioner was a minor).

III. DOE V. EVANS

In contrast to the Third District's broad holding that an inquiry into the negligent hiring decision "is one governed by tort law," Malicki, 771 So.2d at 548, the Fourth District has held that the First Amendment bars consideration of claims for negligent hiring and supervision and breach of fiduciary duty against a church and a diocese where a pastor allegedly engaged in a sexual relationship with a parishioner during the course of a marital counseling relationship. See Doe v. Evans, 718 So.2d 286, 289-92 (Fla. 4th DCA 1998). In Evans, the Fourth District, in interpreting the First Amendment, appears to have adopted an approach based on the criminality of the underlying conduct of the clergy member. Under the Fourth District's analysis, a tort claim for negligent hiring and supervision and breach of fiduciary duty against a religious institution would be allowed only if the underlying conduct of the clergy involved criminal behavior. [FN11] As the Fourth District explained:

> FN11. In Gibson v. Brewer, 952 S.W.2d 239 (Mo.1997), the Missouri Supreme Court made a somewhat similar distinction between negligent conduct and the imposition of liability for an intentional tort. The court held that a claim for negligent supervision would result in excessive entanglement with religion and in the endorsement of one model of supervision. See id. at 247-48. However, in contrast, that court also decided that a claim for an intentional failure to supervise clergy would not offend the First Amendment because "[r]eligious conduct intended or certain to cause harm need not be tolerated under the First Amendment" just as "generally applicable criminal law" does not offend the First Amendment. Gibson, 952 S.W.2d at 248-49.

360 In any event, we are persuaded that just as the State may prevent a church from offering human sacrifices, it may protect its children against injuries caused by pedophiles by authorizing civil damages against a church that knowingly (including should know) creates a situation in which such injuries are likely to occur. We recognize that the State's interest must be compelling indeed in order to interfere in the church's selection, training and assignment of its clerics. We would draw the line at criminal conduct.

Id. at 289 (quoting the Fifth District's dicta in Doe v. Dorsey, 683 So.2d 614, 617 (Fla. 5th DCA 1996)). In affirming the dismissal of the complaint based on First Amendment principles, the Fourth District expressed its view that a relationship between parishioner and pastor in which the allegations fall short of alleging criminal conduct presented a "less compelling factual scenario" than cases involving criminal assaults, especially against children. 718 So.2d at 289-90.

IV. NEGLIGENT HIRING AND SUPERVISION

The Church Defendants in this case assert that despite the fact that one of the plaintiffs is alleged to be a child victim of criminal sexual assault and battery, the First Amendment shields the church from tort liability because the inquiry for negligent hiring and supervision necessarily implicates church practices and doctrine. In other words, they assert that the First Amendment bars the tort claims at issue here because evaluating the "reasonableness" of their decisions regarding the hiring or supervision of Malicki would excessively entangle the civil courts in the internal workings of the church.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

The Miami Shores Presbyterian Church, in an amicus brief filed in this case, urges that we reject the analytical framework of Evans and Dorsey, which would allow negligent hiring and supervision cases to proceed only if the underlying conduct of the clergy member was criminal. The Miami Shores Presbyterian Church asserts, and our research confirms, that this "criminality distinction" appears in practically no law outside of Florida." Rather, the position of amicus is that every negligent hiring and supervision lawsuit intrudes into core constitutionally protected areas and the "proposed exception is undefined and will be difficult to apply."

We reject the contention that the First Amendment may be invoked to bar the adjudication of this dispute because this case is not an internal church matter. Rather, this is a dispute between church officials and two parishioners who allege that they were injured as a result of the negligence of the church officials.

[17][18] A law establishing standards of conduct does not implicate the Free Exercise Clause unless adherence to those standards interferes with religious belief or activity. See Lukumi Babalu Aye, 508 U.S. at 532, 113 S.Ct. 2217. Thus, the "threshold inquiry is whether there is a conflict between conduct that is required by law and conduct that is prohibited by religious principles." Smith v. O'Connell, 986 F.Supp. at 78.

[19] In this case, the Church Defendants do not claim that the underlying acts of its priest in committing sexual assault 361 and battery was governed by sincerely held religious beliefs or practices. Nor do they claim that the reason they failed to exercise control over Malicki was because of sincerely held religious beliefs or practices. Therefore, it appears that the Free Exercise Clause is not implicated in this case because the conduct sought to be regulated; that is, the Church Defendants' alleged negligence in hiring and supervision is not rooted in religious belief. Moreover, even assuming an "incidental effect of burdening a particular religious practice," the parishioners' cause of action for negligent hiring and supervision is not barred because it is based on neutral application of principles of tort law. See Lukumi Babalu Aye, 508 U.S. at 531, 113 S.Ct. 2217.

Through neutral application of principles of tort law, we thus give no greater or lesser deference to tortious conduct committed on third parties by religious organizations than we do to tortious conduct committed on third parties by non-religious entities. [FN12] For example, Florida courts, as well as courts in other jurisdictions, have applied neutral principles of tort law to religious institutions in premises liability cases. [FN13]

FN12. Moreover, it is noteworthy that the common law of this State never embraced the charitable immunity doctrine, which arguably may have provided charitable institutions, including the Church Defendants in this case, immunity from respondeat superior liability for the tortious acts of their employees. See Community Blood Bank, Inc. v. Russell, 196 So.2d 115, 120-21 (Fla.1967) (Roberts, J., concurring specially) (citing Nicholson v. Good Samaritan Hosp., 145 Fla. 360, 199 So. 344 (1940)). As has been explained: "the public policy of this state, as declared by Section 4 of the Declaration of Rights of our Florida Constitution, 'is to put justice "by due course of law" above or before charity.' " Russell, 196 So.2d at 121 (Roberts, J., concurring). Likewise, most jurisdictions have rejected this doctrine, recognizing that it is inappropriate that a charity should be held to a lesser standard of reasonable care than that required of any other person or entity. See generally John H. Arnold, Clergy Sexual Malpractice, 8 U. Fla. J.L. & Pub. Pol'y 25, 36 (1996).

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

FN13. See Cutler v. St. John's United Methodist Church, 489 So.2d 123, 125 (Fla. 1st DCA 1986) (finding that church could be sued for negligent supervision of a seventeen-year old girl, who drowned at Jacksonville Beach during a church-sponsored trip to Florida); Heath v. First Baptist Church, 341 So.2d 265 (Fla. 2d DCA 1977) (ruling that church may be liable for slip and fall based on traditional premises liability theories); see also Laake v. Our Lady of Lourdes Church, Nos. 9-261, 98-959, 1999 WL 975751, at *4 (Iowa Ct.App. Oct.27, 1999) (holding that church had legal duty to prevent personal injuries sustained by referee during collision with spectator at church basketball game); Bass v. Aetna Ins. Co., 370 So.2d 511 (La.1979) (finding church responsible for negligence of pastor who created an unreasonable risk of injury by not clearing aisles to make way for the "running of the spirit," a common form of religious expression in that church); Stitt v. Holland Abundant Life Fellowship, 462 Mich. 591, 614 N.W.2d 88, 95 (2000) (holding that person attending bible study on church premises who injured herself after falling over a concrete tire stop in church parking lot was licensee for purposes of church's duty of care); Castronovo v. Doe, 274 A.D.2d 442, 711 N.Y.S.2d 27 (N.Y.App.Div.2000) (ruling that issues of fact precluded summary judgment for church when artist was injured after falling from scaffold).

[20][21][22] With regard to the tort of negligent supervision, this Court recognized the viability of the common law cause of action for the negligent supervision of an employee more than forty-five years ago. See Mallory v. O'Neil, 69 So.2d 313, 315 (Fla.1954). [FN14] The rule articulated in Mallory 362 has evolved to encompass the tort of negligent hiring as well as negligent supervision. [FN15] See Garcia v. Duffy, 492 So.2d 435, 438 (Fla. 2d DCA 1986). To bring a prima facie case for negligent hiring, a plaintiff must demonstrate that:

FN14. In Mallory, this Court adopted section 317 of the Restatement of Torts. Section 317 of the Restatement (Second) of Torts (1965), which is identical to its predecessor, provides:

Duty of Master to Control Conduct of Servant.

A master is under a duty to exercise reasonable care so to control his servant while acting outside the course of his employment as to prevent him from intentionally harming others or from so conducting himself as to create an unreasonable risk of bodily harm to them, if

(a) the servant

(i) is upon the premises in the possession of the master or upon which the servant is privileged to enter only as his servant, or

(ii) is using a chattel of the master, and

(b) the master

(i) knows or has reason to know that he has the ability to control his servant, and

(ii) knows or should know of the necessity and opportunity for exercising such control.

(Emphasis added.)

FN15. The primary distinction between a claim for negligent hiring and a claim for negligent supervision or retention concerns the time at which the employer is charged with knowledge of the employee's unfitness. See Garcia v. Duffy, 492 So.2d 435, 438 (Fla. 2d DCA 1986). A claim for negligent hiring arises when, before the time the employee is hired, the employer knew or should have known that the employee was unfit. See id. Liability in these cases focuses on the adequacy of the employer's pre-employment investigation into the employee's background. See id. Liability for negligent supervision or retention, however, occurs after employment begins, where the employer knows or should know of an employee's unfitness and fails to take further action such as "investigating, discharge or reassignment." Id. at 438-39.

(1) the employer was required to make an > appropriate investigation of the employee and failed to do so; (2) an appropriate investigation would have revealed the unsuitability of the employee for the particular duty to be performed or for employment in general; and (3) it was unreasonable for the employer to hire the employee in light of the information he knew or should have known.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

Id. at 440.

These are the primary factual inquiries of the negligent hiring count in this case. For example, the parishioners assert that the Church Defendants negligently failed "to make inquiries into Malicki's background, qualifications, reputation, work history, and/or criminal history prior to employing him in the capacity of Associate Pastor." As to the negligent supervision claim, the parishioners contend that the Church Defendants negligently placed them under the supervision of Malicki, when the Church Defendants either knew or should have known that Malicki had the propensity to commit sexual assaults and molestations. These allegations are the classic elements of negligent hiring and negligent supervision claims.

[23][24] The core predicate for imposing liability is one of reasonable foreseeability--the cornerstone of our tort law. See generally McCain v. Florida Power Corp., 593 So.2d 500, 503 (Fla.1992). With regard to the claim for negligent hiring, the inquiry is focused on whether the specific danger that ultimately manifested itself (e.g., sexual assault and battery) reasonably could have been foreseen at the time of hiring. See Van Osdol v. Vogt, 908 P.2d 1122, 1132-33 (Colo.1996).

In rejecting a similar First Amendment challenge [FN16] to a claim for negligent hiring of a clergy member, the Colorado Supreme Court explained:

> FN16. Although the Colorado Supreme Court did not specify which of the religion clauses it was discussing, the court's inquiry appears to have focused on the Free Exercise Clause.

> *363 While claims for illegal hiring or discharge of a minister inevitably involve religious doctrine, that is not the case for a claim of negligent hiring of a minister. The claim of negligent hiring is brought after an employee has harmed a third party through his or her office of employment. An employer is found liable for negligent hiring if, at the time of hiring, the employer had reason to believe that hiring this person would create an undue risk of harm to others. Hence, the court does not inquire into the employer's broad reasons for choosing this particular employee for the position, but instead looks to whether the specific danger which ultimately manifested itself could have reasonably been foreseen at the time of hiring.

Bear Valley Church, 928 P.2d at 1323 (citations omitted) (quoting Van Osdol, 908 P.2d at 1132 n. 17) (emphasis added).

Similarly, in finding that the Free Exercise Clause does not bar a claim for negligent supervision against a church for the sexual misconduct of its priest, the United States District Court for the District of Connecticut stated:

> The court's determination of an action against the defendants based upon their alleged negligent supervision of [the priest] would not prejudice or impose upon any of the religious tenets or practices of Catholicism. Rather, such a determination would involve an examination of the defendants' possible role in allowing one of its employees to engage in conduct which they, as employers, as well as society in general expressly prohibit. Since the Supreme Court has consistently failed to allow the Free Exercise Clause to "relieve [ ][an] individual from obedience to a general law not aimed at the promotion or restriction of religious beliefs," the defendants cannot appropriately implicate the First Amendment as a defense to their alleged negligent conduct.

Nutt v. Norwich Roman Catholic Diocese, 921 F.Supp. 66, 74 (D.Conn.1995) (quoting Minersville School Dist. v. Gobitis, 310 U.S. 586, 594, 60 S.Ct. 1010, 84 L.Ed. 1375 (1940)).

In its reasoning in Evans, the Fourth District appears to have assumed that a First Amendment violation will occur any time a court may be required to either review or interpret church doctrine and that the only basis for a court to interfere in a church-related dispute is if the State's interest is compelling. However, the United States Supreme Court has not extended the religious autonomy principle as articulated in Kedroff and

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

Serbian E. Orthodox Diocese to disputes beyond strictly ecclesiastical intrachurch disputes that have been resolved through an ecclesiastical tribunal. In addition, resolution of the dispute would have to involve "extensive inquiry" into religious law and polity before the First Amendment would bar a secular court from adjudicating a civil dispute. Serbian E. Orthodox Diocese, 426 U.S. at 709, 96 S.Ct. 2372.

The religious autonomy principle is further inapplicable in a case such as this, where "the court does not run the risk of displacing the free religious choices of defendants by placing its weight behind a particular religious belief." Raleigh Dist., 63 F.Supp.2d at 709. As the United States Court of Appeal for the Fifth Circuit succinctly explained:

> The First Amendment does not categorically insulate religious relationships from judicial scrutiny, for to do so would necessarily extend constitutional protection to the secular components of these relationships....
>
> Instead, the Free Exercise Clause protects religious relationships ... by preventing the judicial resolution of ecclesiastical 364 disputes turning on matters of "religious doctrine or practice."

Sanders, 134 F.3d at 335-36. Therefore, for all these reasons, we conclude that the Free Exercise Clause does not bar consideration of the parishioners' claims for negligent hiring and supervision as alleged in their complaint.

[25] Moreover, the Establishment Clause does not bar these causes of action because the imposition of tort liability in this case has a secular purpose and the primary effect of imposing tort liability based on the allegations of the complaint neither advances nor inhibits religion. The core inquiry in determining whether the Church Defendants are liable will focus on whether they reasonably should have foreseen the risk of harm to third parties. This is a neutral principle of tort law. Therefore, based on the allegations in the complaint, we do not foresee "excessive" entanglement in internal church matters or in interpretation of religious doctrine or ecclesiastical law.

[26] Finally, we reject the distinction that the Fourth District drew in Evans, 718 So.2d at 289-90, that would apparently allow a negligent supervision claim against a church defendant only if the underlying sexual misconduct involved criminal activity (e.g., sexual assault and battery, as in this case). As the United States Supreme Court explained in Lukumi Babalu Aye and Smith, strict scrutiny will not be triggered by neutral laws of general applicability that are not intended to "infringe upon or restrict practices because of their religious motivation." Lukumi Babalu Aye, 508 U.S. at 533, 113 S.Ct. 2217; see Smith, 494 U.S. at 884-85, 110 S.Ct. 1595. Moreover, this "neutral principles of law" doctrine applies in both the criminal and the civil context. [FN17]

> FN17. See Miller v. Reed, 176 F.3d 1202, 1207 (9th Cir.1999) (applicant challenged denial of driver's license renewal because of applicant's refusal, on religious grounds, to supply his social security number); Fraternal Order of Police Newark Lodge No. 12 v. City of Newark, 170 F.3d 359, 363 (3d Cir.1999) (police officers challenged police department policy of requiring officers to shave their beards in violation of their Sunni Muslim religious beliefs); Vandiver v. Hardin County Bd. of Educ., 925 F.2d 927, 932 (6th Cir.1991) (challenge to requirement that student pass equivalency exam in order to gain credit for his religious home study program); Rector, Wardens, and Members of the Vestry of St. Bartholomew's Church v. City of New York, 914 F.2d 348, 354 (2d Cir.1990) (church challenge to Landmark Preservation Law as violative of Free Exercise Clause). Cf. City of Boerne v. Flores, 521 U.S. 507, 117 S.Ct. 2157, 138 L.Ed.2d 624 (1997) (assuming that Smith would apply in the context of local zoning ordinances in the absence of the Religious Freedom Restoration Act).

Whether the priest's tortious conduct in this case involved improper sexual relations with an adult parishioner he was counseling or sexual assault and battery of a minor, the necessary inquiry in the claim against the Church Defendants is similarly framed: whether the Church Defendants had reason to know of the tortious conduct and did nothing to prevent reasonably foreseeable harm from being inflicted upon the plaintiffs. Because the

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

814 So.2d 347
27 Fla. L. Weekly S234, 101 A.L.R.5th 655
(Cite as: 814 So.2d 347)

underlying claim arises from the alleged sexual assault and battery of a minor and adult parishioner by a priest, and because the claim for negligence involves whether the Church Defendants knew or should have known of the tortious conduct, we conclude that the First Amendment may not be invoked to bar the parishioners from seeking redress for the alleged tortious conduct of the Church Defendants. [FN18]

FN18. We have addressed only Counts I and II in this opinion. Counts VII and VIII of the complaint are assault and battery charges against Malicki. These counts remain pending in the trial court and are not before this Court. As to the claim for respondeat superior set forth in Counts III and IV, although not addressing the viability of the cause of action in this case, the Third District in a subsequent opinion has explained that [a]s a matter of common sense, having sexual relations with a counselee is not part of the job responsibilities of a minister. Iglesia Cristiana La Casa Del Senor, Inc. v. L.M., 783 So.2d 353, 356-57 (Fla. 3d DCA 2001). Plainly the sexual conduct alleged by plaintiffs was for the personal motives of the pastor, and not designed to further the interests of the church.

See Elders v. United Methodist Church, 793 So.2d 1038, 1041 (Fla. 3d DCA 2001); see also Iglesia Cristiana La Casa Del Senor, 783 So.2d at 357 (explaining that vicarious liability was inapplicable where "the sexual assault did not occur on Church property, and the record does not support a finding that [the pastor's] criminal act against L.M. constituted the kind of conduct he was employed to perform, or that he was in any way motivated by his desire to serve the Church"). Further, with regard to Counts V and VI, we do not reach the issue of whether the allegations of the complaint set forth a cause of action for breach of implied contract because that question was neither reached by the trial court nor addressed by the Third District.

*365 CONCLUSION

We recognize that the Free Exercise Clause and the Establishment Clause require constant vigilance to prevent the government from either stifling the free exercise of religion or excessively and impermissibly entangling itself with interpreting religious doctrine on matters solely within the purview of religious institutions. However, with regard to a third party tort claim against a religious institution, we conclude that the First Amendment does not provide a shield behind which a church may avoid liability for harm arising from an alleged sexual assault and battery by one of its clergy members.

[27] By holding that the First Amendment does not bar the court's consideration of the parishioners' allegations, we expressly do not pass on the merits of the underlying case. Our holding today is only that the First Amendment cannot be used at the initial pleading stage to shut the courthouse door on a plaintiff's claims, which are founded on a religious institution's alleged negligence arising from the institution's failure to prevent harm resulting from one of its clergy who sexually assaults and batters a minor or adult parishioner. [FN19] To hold otherwise and immunize the Church Defendants from suit could risk placing religious institutions in a preferred position over secular institutions, a concept both foreign and hostile to the First Amendment. Accordingly, we approve the decision below, disapprove of the Fourth District's decision in Evans, and remand for further proceedings consistent with this opinion.

FN19. We note that many of the decisions holding that the First Amendment bars tort claims based on similar allegations in a complaint arise at the motion to dismiss stage and appear to be grounded in theoretical speculation that an inquiry into a religious institution's conduct would result in excessive entanglement. See, e.g., Watchtower Bible, 738 A.2d at 845; Swanson, 692 A.2d at 444-45; Gibson, 952 S.W.2d at 246-47. In contrast, many courts that have actually adjudicated these claims, or have at least reached the summary judgment phase, have done so based on a concrete record revealing little, > if any, doctrinal entanglement and certainly not excessive entanglement. See, e.g., Bear Valley Church, 928 P.2d at 1322-23; Konkle, 672 N.E.2d at 456; C.J.C., 985 P.2d at 262; Martinelli, 196 F.3d at 430-32.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

It is so ordered.

SHAW, ANSTEAD, LEWIS, and QUINCE, JJ., concur.

WELLS, C.J., concurs in result only with an opinion.

QUINCE, J., concurs specially with an opinion.

HARDING, J., dissents with an opinion.

366 WELLS, C.J., concurring in result only.

I concur in result only in this decision which, when stripped of substantial dicta, is stated in the opinion's third from final sentence:

> Our holding today is only that the First Amendment cannot be used at the initial pleading stage to shut the courthouse door on a plaintiff's claims, which are founded on a religious institution's alleged negligence arising from the institution's failure to prevent harm resulting from one of its clergy who sexually assaults and batters a minor or adult parishioner. Majority op. at 365 (emphasis added). I expressly do not join in what I conclude is overly broad and imprecise language in the opinion, such as use of the term "tortious conduct," which is otherwise undefined and ambiguous as to tort law meaning.

I would limit the liability of the religious organization by finding a specific bright-line exception to the First Amendment bar of secular court involvement to allegations and proof of criminal sexual assault and battery. See Doe v. Dorsey, 683 So.2d 614 (Fla. 5th DCA 1996). I am in agreement with much of the well-reasoned opinion of Judge Polen in Doe v. Evans, 718 So.2d 286 (Fla. 4th DCA 1998), although I question whether the allegations of the operative complaint in that case even state a cause of action to be evaluated for a First Amendment bar. I would also adopt the exception as stated in Dorsey.

I do have a very real concern about the breadth and imprecise language of the majority opinion. My concern is that the religious organizations in this state are going to be severely financially burdened by having to defend claims for undefined and unlimited "tortious conduct" which claim to be grounded upon the majority opinion. The problem I foresee is that the vagueness of this language, which does not define the elements of any torts or draw lines for which conduct is actionable, will particularly burden religious organizations because these are the organizations that provide these counseling services on an affordable basis.

Certainly, I in no way condone abusive sexual conduct, whether it takes place in a religious organization or elsewhere. However, I believe that this Court should recognize that by its opinion in this case and by quashing Doe v. Evans, 718 So.2d 286 (Fla. 4th DCA 1998), it is placing in severe jeopardy these counseling programs provided by religious organizations in this state. These organizations provide real, beneficial, and needed services that the citizens using these services will not otherwise find available. The costs of defending claims founded upon the language of this opinion will simply make the financial burden of providing the services too great.

With the express limited exception stated in this opinion, I concur with the reasoning of Justice Harding.

QUINCE, J., specially concurring.

While I fully agree with the majority opinion in this case, I write to address the concerns articulated by Chief Justice Wells in his concurring in result only opinion. He opines that the majority's decision may result in religious institutions becoming "severely financially burdened" by being forced to defend tort claims brought against them based on the actions of their employees against third party plaintiffs. Concurring in result only op. of Wells,

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

C.J., at 366. Furthermore, he contends that our decision makes the risk of defending these types of claims too great to continue to offer counseling services.

I agree with Chief Justice Wells that religious organizations provide beneficial services to the citizens of Florida. However, 367 I fail to see how placing religious organizations on the same playing field as secular institutions for the purposes of tort liability will result in a severe financial burden for these organizations. Today's opinion simply holds that when religious organizations undertake to provide services to the public, they have a duty to protect the citizens who use those services from the tortious conduct of their employees.

Additionally, Chief Justice Wells' assertion that religious organizations will be severely financially burdened by subjecting them to tort liability does not take into account the fact that religious organizations, like secular organizations, carry insurance policies to protect against the expense of defending claims based upon the acts of their employees. See, e.g., Evangelical Lutheran Church in America v. Atlantic Mut. Ins. Co., 169 F.3d 947, 951 (5th Cir.1999) (holding that church synod's allegedly negligent training, supervision, and placement of minister who allegedly committed sexual assault constituted an "occurrence" within the meaning of synod's CGL and umbrella insurance policies); Melendez v. Commercial Union Ins. Co., No. 3:94CV00776(AVC), 2000 WL 303434 (D.Conn. Feb.8, 2000) (recognizing insurance policy covering church for sexual misconduct of its priest); Bohrer v. Church Mut. Ins. Co., 965 P.2d 1258 (Colo.1998) (holding that religious organization's insurance policy covered a minister's alleged sexual misconduct).

In essence, one of Chief Justice Wells' assertions is that religious organizations, based on that status alone and without any demonstration that these tort claims unduly infringe on the religious tenets of the organizations, should be given preferential legal treatment. However, as the majority points out, shielding religious organizations from tort liability solely because of their status would have the impermissible effect of recognizing a religion in violation of the Establishment Clause. Smith v. O'Connell, 986 F.Supp. 73, 80 (D.R.I.1997) (citing City of Boerne v. Flores, 521 U.S. 507, 537, 117 S.Ct. 2157, 138 L.Ed.2d 624 (1997) (Stevens, J., concurring)). [FN20] Such a recognition of religion would, in my opinion, violate the principles of the First Amendment of the United States Constitution and article I, section 3 of the Florida Constitution.

> FN20. The First Amendment to the United States Constitution provides in pertinent part that "Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof...." See also art. I, § 3, Fla. Const.

HARDING, J., dissenting.

While I recognize that the First Amendment does not shield a religious institution against all vicarious liability arising from the tortious actions of its employees, I dissent because allowing a tort claim for negligent hiring and supervision against the hierarchy of a religious institution would necessarily require a secular court to impermissibly interpret the religious institution's law, policies, and practices. Such intrusion into the internal affairs of the church--or any other religious institution--would amount to excessive entanglement of religion by the state and, therefore, such a claim is barred by the First Amendment.

In reaching its conclusion, the majority generally undervalues the First Amendment concerns at stake and specifically overlooks the undeniable, and constitutionally violative, result that secular standards of care and duties will be unilaterally imposed upon the ecclesiastical hierarchy. "Defining such a duty would necessarily require a court to express the standard of care to be followed by other reasonable 368 clerics in the performance of their ecclesiastical counseling duties, which, by its very nature, would embroil the courts in establishing the training, skill, and standards applicable for members of the clergy in this state in a diversity of religions professing widely varying beliefs." Franco v. Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints, 21 P.3d 198, 206 (Utah 2001).

To determine that a church negligently installed or transferred a particular pastor is effectively to override the church's prior decision in this regard and to impermissibly dictate the church's or its congregation's decision-making in the future, and it interferes with a church's freedom to interact with its own clergy. Moreover, "judicial inquiry into the hiring, ordaining, and retaining of clergy would result in an endorsement of religion 'by approving one model for church hiring, ordination, and retention of clergy.' " Doe v. Evans, 718 So.2d 286, 290 (Fla. 4th DCA 1998) (quoting Gibson v. Brewer, 952 S.W.2d 239, 247 (Mo.1997)). [FN21]

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

> FN21. The majority's decision today is directly at odds with the recognition by our United States Supreme Court that the First Amendment provides churches with the " power to decide for themselves, free from state interference, matters of church government, as well as those of faith and doctrine." Kedroff v. St. Nicholas Cathedral, 344 U.S. 94, 116, 73 S.Ct. 143, 97 L.Ed. 120 (1952) (emphasis added).

While I recognize that, arguably, two of the most authoritarian structures of human existence--religion and state--are not static structures, a closer examination into the nature of the dispute is required before eviscerating the independent significance of religion in our Constitution. As such, I find the majority's conclusion is falsely premised on the notion that the instant case is a "purely secular" dispute "between church officials and a third person" and, therefore, not violative of the First Amendment. While it is true that the pleading caption in the instant case does identify a dispute between church officials and a third a party, a closer inquiry reveals that the nature of the dispute in this instance, i.e., negligent hiring and supervision, implicates a secular examination into "intra-church" process and procedure; an action proscribed by our Constitution.

> In rejecting a claim similar to the one posed here against a Presbyterian church for the negligent placement, retention, or supervision of one of its pastors for the alleged sexual misconduct against a twelve-year-old, then Chief Judge Brieant of the Southern District of New York noted: [A]ny inquiry into the policies and practices of the Church Defendants in hiring or supervising their clergy raises the same kind of First Amendment problems of entanglement ... [and] might involve the Court in making sensitive judgments about the propriety of the Church Defendants' supervision in light of their religious beliefs. Insofar as concerns retention or supervision, the pastor of a Presbyterian Church is not analogous to a common law employee. He may not demit his charge nor be removed by the session, without the consent of the presbytery, functioning essentially as an ecclesiastical court. The traditional denominations each have their own intricate principles of governance, as to which the state has no rights of visitation. Church governance is founded in scripture, modified by reformers over almost two millenia. As the Supreme Court stated long before the Lemon formulation was developed:
>
> It is not to be supposed that the judges of the civil courts can be as competent in the ecclesiastical law and religious faith of all these bodies as *369 the ablest men in each are in reference to their own. It would therefore be an appeal from the more learned tribunal in the law which should decide the case, to one which is less so.
>
> It would therefore also be inappropriate and unconstitutional for this Court to determine after the fact that the ecclesiastical authorities negligently supervised or retained the defendant Bishop. Any award of damages would have a chilling effect leading indirectly to state control over the future conduct of affairs of a religious denomination, a result violative of the text and history of the establishment clause.
>
> Schmidt v. Bishop, 779 F.Supp. 321, 332 (S.D.N.Y.1991) (citations omitted) (quoting Watson v. Jones, 80 U.S. (13 Wall.) 679, 729, 20 L.Ed. 666 (1871)).

Furthermore, the majority's reliance on statements by then Justice Rehnquist in General Council on Fin. & Admin. v. California Superior Court, 439 U.S. 1369, 1372-73, 99 S.Ct. 35, 58 L.Ed.2d 63 (Rehnquist, Circuit Justice 1978) is also misplaced. In General Council, then Justice Rehnquist said the Free Exercise Clause does not bar the Court's exercise of jurisdiction in a civil dispute between churches and third parties. See General Council, 439 U.S. at 1372-73, 99 S.Ct. 35. His conclusion, however, is expressly limited to "purely secular disputes between third parties ... [and religious organizations] ... in which fraud, breach of contract, and statutory violations are alleged." Id. at 1373, 99 S.Ct. 35. Such an inquiry would be primarily concerned with the inter-relationship between the third party and the church, and allegations of fraud, breach of contract, or statutory violations would not necessarily require a secular examination of intra-church policy and practice. Those circumstances are not present here.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

To support its assertion that the instant claim is "based upon a neutral principles of law" and, therefore, not barred, the majority cites to Presbyterian Church v. Mary Elizabeth Blue Hull Mem. Presbyterian Church, 393 U.S. 440, 449, 89 S.Ct. 601, 21 L.Ed.2d 658 (1969). Reliance on this case, however, is also misplaced. In Presbyterian Church, the Court examined "whether the restraints of the First Amendment ... permit a civil court to award church property on the basis of the interpretation and significance the civil court assigns to aspects of church doctrine." Id. at 441, 89 S.Ct. 601. Although the Supreme Court stated, and the majority in the instant case noted, "there are neutral principles of law ... which can be applied without 'establishing' churches to which property is awarded," Id. at 449, 89 S.Ct. 601, the Court also recognized that "[s]pecial problems arise ... when these disputes implicate controversies over church doctrine and practice." Id. at 445, 89 S.Ct. 601. Thus, when a Georgia court interpreted particular church doctrines and the importance of those doctrines to the religion, it "violated the command of the First Amendment." Id. at 449, 89 S.Ct. 601. The Court concluded that:

> First Amendment values are plainly jeopardized when church property litigation is made to turn on the resolution by civil courts of controversies over religious doctrine and practice. If civil courts undertake to resolve such controversies in order to adjudicate the property dispute, the hazards are ever present of inhibiting the free development of religious doctrine and of implicating secular interests in matters of purely ecclesiastical concerns.

Id. at 449, 89 S.Ct. 601.

While I recognize there are some courts which have found no First Amendment bar to claims similar to the ones at issue here, 370 I would instead, for the reasons mentioned above, join the large number of jurisdictions which have concluded that allowing a tort claim for negligent hiring and supervision against a religious organization violates the First Amendment of our Constitution. [FN22]

> FN22. See the cases cited in the majority opinion at footnote 10.

814 So.2d 347, 27 Fla. L. Weekly S234, 101 A.L.R.5th 655

Briefs and Other Related Documents (Back to top)

• 2001 WL 34114887 (Appellate Filing) Respondent's Brief on Jurisdiction (Feb. 05, 2001)

• 2001 WL 34114886 (Appellate Filing) Petitioners' Brief on Jurisdiction (Jan. 18, 2001)

END OF DOCUMENT

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

EXHIBIT 34

196 F.3d 409
(Cite as: 196 F.3d 409)

Briefs and Other Related Documents

United States Court of Appeals,
Second Circuit.

Frank MARTINELLI, Plaintiff-Appellee,
v.
BRIDGEPORT ROMAN CATHOLIC DIOCESAN CORPORATION, Defendant-Appellant.

Docket No. 98-7876.

Argued April 1, 1999.
Decided Nov. 10, 1999.

Former parishioner brought action against diocese, seeking compensation for child sexual abuse by priest. Following jury finding that diocese had breached fiduciary duty it owed to parishioner, diocese moved for judgment as a matter of law. The United States District Court for the District of Connecticut, Janet Bond Arterton, J., 10 F.Supp.2d 138, denied motion, and diocese appealed. The Court of Appeals, Sack, Circuit Judge held that: (1) Connecticut fraudulent concealment tolling statute applies to claims governed by the sexual assault statute of limitations; (2) when a defendant is sued by a person to whom it owes a fiduciary duty, the burden shift to the defendant to prove that one of the three Bartone elements for application of the tolling statute is not met; (3) burden of proof on the question of the plaintiff's own ignorance of the existence of the cause of action does not shift to the defendant; (4) Bartone requirement that defendant had actual knowledge of significant facts that it concealed from the plaintiff is not excused on ground that defendant's ignorance was the result of a failure to fulfill a duty to investigate and warn; (5) actual awareness factor did not require that diocese knew that plaintiff was one of priest's victims; (6) plaintiff's ignorance of the facts that the defendant has sought to conceal is a necessary element of tolling under the statute; (7) evidence was sufficient to support the jury's finding of a fiduciary relationship; (8) the Free Exercise Clause of the First Amendment did not prohibit court's finding of a fiduciary relationship; and (9) giving of missing witness charge was proper.

Affirmed in part, vacated, and remanded.

Moran, District Judge, filed a dissenting opinion.

West Headnotes

[1] Limitation of Actions ⇐104(1)
241k104(1) Most Cited Cases

Connecticut fraudulent concealment tolling statute applies to claims governed by the sexual assault statute of limitations. C.G.S.A. §§ 52-577d, 52- 595

[2] Federal Civil Procedure ⇐2173.1(1)
170Ak2173.1(1) Most Cited Cases

[2] Federal Courts ⇐908.1
170Bk908.1 Most Cited Cases

A jury charge is erroneous if it misleads the jury as to the correct legal standard, or if it does not adequately inform the jury of the law, and an erroneous instruction, unless harmless, requires a new trial.

[3] Federal Civil Procedure ⇐2182.1
170Ak2182.1 Most Cited Cases

A court's charge must be tested by viewing it as a whole and will not be disturbed on appeal if it is correct and sufficiently covers the case so that a jury can intelligently determine the questions presented to it.

[4] Limitation of Actions ⇐104(1)
241k104(1) Most Cited Cases

Under Connecticut law, in the ordinary case in which fraudulent concealment is asserted by a party attempting to extend the statute of limitations under tolling statute, the plaintiff is required to shoulder the burden with respect to all three parts of the Bartone test: (1) the defendant's actual, not imputed, awareness of the facts necessary to establish the plaintiff's cause of action; (2) its intentional concealment of such facts; and (3) that the concealment is for the purpose of obtaining delay, but when a defendant is sued by a person to whom it owes a fiduciary duty and that person is trying to extend the limitations period, the burden shifts to the defendant to prove that one of the three Bartone elements has not been met, and such proof must be by clear and convincing evidence.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

C.G.S.A. § 52-595.

[5] Fraud ⇐50
184k50 Most Cited Cases

Under Connecticut law, where an allegation of fraud, self-dealing, or conflict of interest is made against a fiduciary, the burden shifts to the fiduciary to prove that it acted fairly.

[6] Contracts ⇐96
95k96 Most Cited Cases

[6] Contracts ⇐99(1)
95k99(1) Most Cited Cases

Under Connecticut law, undue influence generally will not be presumed, but where one party has a dominant and controlling force or influence over the other and the superior party obtains a possible benefit, equity raises a presumption against the validity of the transaction or contract, but it is only when the confidential relationship is shown together with suspicious circumstances, or where there is a transaction, contract, or transfer between persons in a confidential or fiduciary relationship, and where the dominant party is the beneficiary of the transaction, contract, or transfer, that the burden shifts to the fiduciary to prove fair dealing.

[7] Fraud ⇐50
184k50 Most Cited Cases

Where the fiduciary has not received some kind of benefit that would engender suspicion and there is no other evidence of wrongdoing, the burden of proof on claim against the fiduciary remains on the plaintiff under Connecticut law, but Connecticut law routinely shifts the burden of proof, irrespective of circumstances, where a fiduciary appears to have obtained a benefit at the expense of a person to whom it owes a fiduciary duty.

[8] Limitation of Actions ⇐197(2)
241k197(2) Most Cited Cases

Under the Connecticut fraudulent concealment tolling statute, fraudulent concealment is treated as akin to other forms of fraud, with similar requirements of proof; thus, the evidence must be clear, precise, and unequivocal. C.G.S.A. § 52-595.

[9] Limitation of Actions ⇐104(1)
241k104(1) Most Cited Cases

For the Connecticut fraudulent concealment tolling statute to be applicable, defendant must have had actual knowledge of significant facts that it concealed from the plaintiff; knowledge imputed to it by law is not enough, and the requirement of actual knowledge is not excused on ground that defendant's ignorance was the result of a failure to fulfill a duty to investigate and warn. C.G.S.A. § 52-595.

[10] Federal Courts ⇐776
170Bk776 Most Cited Cases

[10] Federal Courts ⇐798
170Bk798 Most Cited Cases

[10] Federal Courts ⇐801
170Bk801 Most Cited Cases

Court of Appeals reviews de novo the district court's denial of a motion for judgment as a matter of law, and in so doing, the Court must view the evidence in the light most favorable to the party against which the motion was made, making all credibility assessments and drawing all inferences in favor of the non-movant. Fed.Rules Civ.Proc.Rule 50(b), 28 U.S.C.A.

[11] Limitation of Actions ⇐104(1)
241k104(1) Most Cited Cases

Requirement for application of the Connecticut fraudulent concealment tolling statute that defendant had actual awareness of the facts necessary to establish plaintiff's cause of action, in former parishioner's action against diocese for priest's sexual assault on him while he was a child, did not mean that diocese had to be aware that priest sexually assaulted plaintiff; if the diocese had a fiduciary duty toward plaintiff and knew that at least one other young person to whom it owed such a duty had been assaulted and that the diocese's failure to disclose priest's conduct or discover who the victim was would likely compound this victim's injury, a jury could conclude that the diocese was actually aware of the facts necessary to establish plaintiff's cause of action, sufficiently to satisfy the actual awareness factor under Bartone. C.G.S.A. § 52-595.

[12] Limitation of Actions ⇐104(1)

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

241k104(1) Most Cited Cases

Connecticut Supreme Court would hold that to establish the first Bartone factor for application of the Connecticut fraudulent concealment tolling statute, actual awareness of the facts necessary to establish the plaintiff's cause of action, it is sufficient to show that the defendant had and concealed actual awareness of facts that created a likely potential for harm, even though it did not know the identity of the actual victim, especially if the defendant was a fiduciary for the likely victim. C.G.S.A. § 52-595.

[13] Limitation of Actions ⇐104(1)
241k104(1) Most Cited Cases

Plaintiff's ignorance of the facts that the defendant has sought to conceal is a necessary element of tolling under the Connecticut fraudulent concealment tolling statute. C.G.S.A. § 52-595.

[14] Limitation of Actions ⇐195(5)
241k195(5) Most Cited Cases

For application of the Connecticut fraudulent concealment tolling statute, though the burden of proof on the issue of the propriety of the defendant's conduct is shifted to the defendant when defendant owes a fiduciary duty to the plaintiff, the burden of proving plaintiff's ignorance of the facts that the defendant has sought to conceal remains with plaintiff. C.G.S.A. § 52-595.

[15] Evidence ⇐91
157k91 Most Cited Cases

In general, the law places the burden of proof on the party that asserts a contention and seeks to benefit from it.

[16] Federal Courts ⇐909
170Bk909 Most Cited Cases

In action in which plaintiff invoked the Connecticut fraudulent concealment tolling statute, erroneous instruction that, to avoid tolling the statute of limitations, the defendant had to prove that plaintiff had knowledge of his cause of action was not harmless.

[17] Fraud ⇐7
184k7 Most Cited Cases

Under Connecticut law, a "fiduciary relationship" is a relationship that is characterized by a unique degree of trust and confidence between the parties, one of whom has superior knowledge, skill or expertise and is under a duty to represent the interests of the other.

[18] Limitation of Actions ⇐197(2)
241k197(2) Most Cited Cases
Action.

[18] Religious Societies ⇐31(5)
332k31(5) Most Cited Cases

Under Connecticut law, evidence was sufficient to support the jury's finding of a fiduciary relationship between the diocese and former parishioner, which was relevant both the substantive claim of breach of fiduciary duty and to application of the Connecticut fraudulent concealment tolling statute in suit seeking compensation for child sexual assault on parishioner by priest, irrespective of the duties of the diocese to its parishioners generally, where diocese knew that parishioner had a special and privileged relationship with priest as a member of a small group of boys interested in liturgical reform, priest, surely with the knowledge and approval of the diocese, also escorted boys on church field trips, and diocese was entrusted with reports from other young victims, including a member of the same group, that they had been abused by priest. C.G.S.A. § 52-595.

[19] Religious Societies ⇐30
332k30 Most Cited Cases

Under Connecticut law, finding of a fiduciary relationship between diocese and child parishioner, who was sexually assaulted by priest did not require that diocese had clearly undertaken to act as a fiduciary with respect to parishioner and had individual contact with him.

[20] Constitutional Law ⇐84.5(7.1)
92k84.5(7.1) Most Cited Cases

[20] Religious Societies ⇐30
332k30 Most Cited Cases

The Free Exercise Clause of the First Amendment did not prohibit court's finding of a fiduciary relationship between diocese and child parishioner claiming sexual abuse by priest, on theory that the finding was based on religious doctrine and practices, where claim was brought under state law, not church law, the jury's finding of a fiduciary duty was supported by ample evidence apart from the evidence of a religious nature, and to the extent that the jury did consider religious teachings and tenets, it did so to determine not their validity but whether, as a matter of fact, parishioner's following of the teachings and belief in the tenets gave rise to a fiduciary relationship between him and the diocese. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 1.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

[21] Constitutional Law ⇐84.5(7.1)
92k84.5(7.1) Most Cited Cases

Although First Amendment values are jeopardized when litigation is made to turn on the resolution by civil courts of controversies over religious doctrine and practice, the Free Exercise Clause does not prevent courts from deciding secular civil disputes involving religious institutions when and for the reason that they require reference to religious matters. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 1.

[22] Constitutional Law ⇐84.5(7.1)
92k84.5(7.1) Most Cited Cases

Where a person's beliefs are alleged to give rise to a special legal relationship between him and his church, court may be required to consider with other relevant evidence the nature of that person's beliefs in order properly to determine whether the asserted relationship in fact exists, and this does not violate the Free Exercise clause of the First Amendment where court judges nothing to be heresy, supports no dogma, and acknowledges no beliefs or practices of any sect to be the law. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 1.

[23] Federal Courts ⇐822
170Bk822 Most Cited Cases

Giving of missing witness charge is reviewed only for abuse of discretion.

[24] Federal Civil Procedure ⇐2173
170Ak2173 Most Cited Cases

Giving of missing witness charge was proper under both federal and Connecticut law, based on failure of diocese to produce priest in action against diocese by former parishioner seeking compensation for child sexual abuse by priest, as evidence that priest was still incardinated to the diocese, that the diocese knew his address, telephone number, and place of employment after plaintiff brought his claim, and that person apparently acting on behalf of diocese had more recent contact with him sufficiently showed that priest was available to be produced at trial.

*413 William M. Laviano, Ridgefield, Connecticut (Donna L. Laviano, Jennifer D. Laviano, Norman J. Voog, Laviano Law Offices P.C., Ridgefield, Connecticut, of Counsel), for Plaintiff-Appellee.

Gary P. Naftalis, New York, New York (Jonathan M. Wagner, Justine A. Harris, Kramer, Levin, Naftalis & Frankel, New York, New York, Matthew G. Conway, Danaher, Tedford, Lagnese & Neal, P.C., Hartford, Connecticut, Joseph T. Sweeney, Halloran & Sage LLP, Hartford, Connecticut, of Counsel), for Defendant-Appellant.

Michael L. Costello, Tobin and Dempf, Albany, New York; Mark E. Chopko, Jeffrey Hunter Moon, Washington, D.C. (on the brief), for amici curiae United States Catholic Conference, the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints, the Rev. Clifton Kirkpatrick as Stated Clerk of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), the General Conference of Seventh-Day Adventists, the General Council on Finance and Administration of the United Methodist Church, the First Church of Christ, Scientist, and the Evangelical Lutheran Church in America.

Before: LEVAL and SACK, Circuit Judges, and MORAN, District Judge. [FN*]

FN* The Honorable James B. Moran, Senior United States District Judge for the Northern District of Illinois, sitting by designation.

SACK, Circuit Judge:

The Bridgeport Roman Catholic Diocesan Corporation (the "Diocese") appeals from the second amended judgment of the United States District Court for the District of Connecticut (Janet Bond Arterton, Judge) entered on June 11, 1998 in favor of the plaintiff Frank Martinelli following a jury verdict. The jury found the Diocese liable for breaching fiduciary duties it owed to Martinelli, a parishioner, who claimed that as a teenager he had been sexually assaulted on three occasions between 1961 and 1963 by Father Laurence Brett, one of the Diocese's priests. The jury awarded Martinelli $750,000 in compensatory damages and held the Diocese liable for punitive damages. The district court subsequently fixed Martinelli's punitive damages in the amount of $250,000, and denied the Diocese's Fed.R.Civ.P. 50(b) renewed motion for judgment as a matter of law.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

We affirm the district court's ruling denying the Diocese's motion for judgment as a matter of law under Rule 50(b). We conclude, however, that the district court erred in two respects in instructing the jury on the Connecticut fraudulent concealment tolling statute, Conn. Gen.Stat. § 52- 595, which the plaintiff invoked to proceed with his otherwise untimely claim. First, the district court erred by failing to instruct the jury that the plaintiff had the burden to prove that he lacked knowledge of the existence of his cause of action during the time he claimed that it was fraudulently concealed from him. Second, the district court erroneously instructed the jury that the tolling statute did not require that the defendant have actual awareness of facts necessary to establish the plaintiff's cause of action if the defendant's lack of awareness resulted from a breach of fiduciary duties it owed to the plaintiff. We therefore vacate the judgment and remand for a new trial on at least the issues of (1) whether Martinelli, in invoking the tolling statute, has met his burden of proof as to his own lack of knowledge; and (2) whether the Diocese has demonstrated that it lacked knowledge of the plaintiff's cause of action such that the tolling statute does not apply.

BACKGROUND

In June 1962, Father Laurence Brett began his Catholic priesthood as assistant *414 to the pastor at St. Cecilia's Parish in Stamford, Connecticut, a church operating within the Bridgeport Diocese. Martinelli, then a fourteen- year-old student at Stamford Catholic High School, a school affiliated with the Bridgeport Diocese, was a parishioner at St. Cecilia's.

During Father Brett's tenure at St. Cecilia's, which lasted a little more than two years, he acted as a mentor and spiritual advisor to a small group of boys, including Martinelli, who were interested in liturgical reforms in the Catholic Church. Brett referred to the group as "Brett's Mavericks." [FN1]

> FN1. "Bret Maverick" (played by Jack Kelly), and his brother "Bart" (James Garner), were characters in a popular ABC television comedy-Western series that originally aired between 1957 and 1962. See Alan Morton, Maverick: An Episode Guide, www.xnet.com/djk/Maverick_2.shtml (1999). A motion picture based on the television series was released in 1994. See id.

Martinelli claims that Father Brett abused his position of trust and induced members of the group to engage in sexual relations with him. Martinelli testified to three occasions on which Brett sexually assaulted him as a minor. On the first, Brett performed fellatio on Martinelli in a walkway behind the grade school of the church after confession. On the second, Brett induced Martinelli to perform fellatio on him in Brett's car in St. Cecilia's parking lot by telling him that the act was a way to receive Holy Communion. The third incident of abuse allegedly occurred when Brett fondled Martinelli in a bathroom during a field trip the two made with another boy to Baltimore and Washington, D.C. Although Martinelli's recollection of the dates of these alleged incidents is not clear, he testified that they occurred sometime in 1962, 1963, or 1964. He further claims that his memory of the abuse he suffered was repressed and not recovered until after a conversation with a high-school friend in October 1991 and during subsequent therapy.

In September 1964, Father Brett left St. Cecilia's in Stamford to become a spiritual director at Sacred Heart University in nearby Bridgeport. On December 1 of that year, the Diocese received a complaint that Brett had sexually assaulted a 19-year-old Sacred Heart University student, "T.F.," the month before. A December 2, 1964 report of the incident prepared by Monsignor William A. Genuario, the Diocese's Vice Chancellor, indicated that Diocesan officials confronted Brett the day the complaint was lodged and that Brett admitted the truth of the student's allegations. The report added that the complaining student, "T.F.," "was worried about other boys who had gone to [a] New York Hotel with Father Brett" but that "Father Brett denies that anything happened on those occasions." The report also indicated, however, that Brett "admitted ... involvement with one other University boy," or perhaps, as Msgr. McGough, a second Diocesan official present at the meeting with Brett, recalled the conversation, "one or two other [boys] on one or two occasions." According to the Diocese's report, Brett stated that he "discovered his problem in Stamford, and had been involved there," and that his "problem" was known to a small number of people, including Brett's Stamford pastor, Father Stephen, to whom "[s]omeone from Stamford [had] reported an incident." The report concluded that the Diocese would relieve Father Brett of his local duties and that "[a] recurrence of hepatitis [for which Brett had been hospitalized in early 1964] was to be feigned should anyone ask."

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

Shortly thereafter, Father Brett was sent to New Mexico for several months' psychiatric treatment. Although the Diocese refused Brett's requests to resume his work as a priest in Connecticut, it continued to provide him with financial support. Brett served briefly as a parish priest in New Mexico, spent time in California, and eventually relocated to Maryland where, in addition to ecclesiastical 415 appointments that included a summer position at the Parish of St. Patrick, Cumberland, and a stint as Chaplain at Calvert Hall College, Baltimore, he developed a career as a writer and editor.

In January 1966, while Father Brett was still in New Mexico, the Bridgeport Diocese learned of another allegation of Brett's misconduct that was said to have occurred in Connecticut prior to the "T.F." episode and Brett's transfer from St. Cecilia's. It involved a teenage boy identified as "M.F." In a letter written in April 1966 on the matter to the Apostolic Delegate to the United States, Bishop Walter W. Curtis explained that in late 1963 Brett had allegedly "said something which the boy interpreted as a solicitation to homosexual misconduct." "M.F.," whom plaintiff Martinelli has identified as one of "Brett's Mavericks," reportedly declined Brett's solicitation and terminated his relationship with the priest. The bishop goes on to state that > ["M.F."] probably became aware of Father Brett's disappearance from the diocese because the high school is close to the university. However, I doubt that he knew the precise reason since the incident involving the university student did not become known, and the departure of Father Brett was accomplished very quietly.

By way of response to the letter, the Apostolic Delegate suggested that Bishop Curtis meet with "M.F." 's parents because "[s]uch an expression of pastoral concern may relieve them while an official attitude may leave them bitter." A May 1, 1967 memorandum prepared by Bishop Curtis after his meeting with the boy's parents reports that they believed that "the Church bears great responsibility in this whole matter toward their son ... and they expect that help will be given.... Both parents judge that the Church or someone in the Church was at fault in advising the boy not to report this incident, when it happened, to [his parents]." Bishop Curtis apparently disagreed with this assessment, however, writing that > the boy himself ... said that he could not bring himself to tell [his parents] and I tried to indicate that this might have been the reason why the advice was given not to tell them, mainly that the boy did not feel up to it and it was judged there was no obligation under the circumstances to do so.

Accordingly, Bishop Curtis "made it clear" to the parents that the Diocese could not accept responsibility for Father Brett's conduct or for "the financial state of this young man for the rest of his life." But Bishop Curtis agreed that a Father Vaughan would remain in contact with the family and that the Diocese would consider providing whatever assistance he suggested was appropriate.

Martinelli claims that he had no recollection of the abuse he suffered from Father Brett until a conversation with a childhood friend in October 1991 sparked his memory of the events. Martinelli testified that as a result of the alleged abuse he has experienced long-term emotional difficulties, including depression, relationship difficulties, work problems, and a loss of religious faith, requiring ongoing counseling and psychotherapy. According to Martinelli, his therapy proved more successful once he discovered that he had been assaulted as a teenager.

In December 1992 or January 1993, Martinelli, had actual knowledge of the alleged incidents of his own individual *417 abuse if you find that the defendant Diocese breached a fiduciary duty to undertake additional investigation of Father Brett's alleged sexual misconduct that would have revealed Mr. Martinelli as a victim.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

The court further instructed the jury that if Martinelli were to demonstrate that a fiduciary relationship existed between him and the Diocese the burden would shift to the Diocese to prove that it did not breach its fiduciary duty by intentionally concealing Martinelli's cause of action for the purpose of delaying his lawsuit. Otherwise, the statute of limitations would be tolled. The court also instructed the jury that while a plaintiff claiming fraudulent concealment normally needs to demonstrate his or her own lack of knowledge of the cause of action, if the Diocese owed Martinelli a fiduciary duty it also carried the burden to demonstrate that Martinelli knew about his cause of action in order to avoid application of the tolling provision on that basis. The court charged:

If you find that a fiduciary relationship existed between the defendant Diocese and the plaintiff, Frank Martinelli, and if you find that the defendant Diocese violated its duties in that relationship, then you must decide whether the defendant Diocese has met its burden of disproving ... at least one of the elements of fraudulent concealment by clear and convincing evidence.... These elements are as follows:

1) That the plaintiff, Frank Martinelli, was not aware of the essential alleged factual elements of his cause of action for breach of fiduciary duty and negligent infliction of emotional distress prior to July 27, 1990;

2) That the defendant intentionally concealed from the plaintiff facts necessary for the plaintiff to know that he had a cause of action against the Diocese, i.e. that he had a legally actionable injury; and

3) That the defendant concealed those facts for the purpose of obtaining delay on the plaintiff's part in filing a lawsuit on his cause of action.

By special verdict, the jury found that Martinelli had demonstrated that there existed a fiduciary relationship between him and the Diocese. The jury also found that the Diocese had failed to demonstrate by clear and convincing evidence that Martinelli was aware of his own cause of action or that the Diocese had not concealed the action from Martinelli for the purpose of delay. The statute of limitations was therefore tolled and the action timely.

As to the merits of the action, the jury rejected Martinelli's claim for negligent infliction of emotional distress, but found the Diocese liable for breach of its fiduciary duties. The jury awarded Martinelli compensatory damages of $750,000 and imposed punitive damages to be set by the court at a later date.

After trial, the Diocese renewed its motion for judgment as a matter of law pursuant to Fed.R.Civ.P. 50(b). The Diocese argued principally that Martinelli's claim was time-barred, that there was insufficient evidence to support the finding of a fiduciary relationship between the Diocese and Martinelli, and that the First Amendment precluded reliance on religious doctrine to support such a finding. The district court denied the motion in a ruling dated March 31, 1998. Martinelli v. Bridgeport Roman Catholic Diocesan Corp., 10 F.Supp.2d 138 (D.Conn.1998).

On June 5, 1998, the district court entered the order awarding Martinelli $250,000 in punitive damages. Final judgment was entered on June 11, 1998.

The Diocese now appeals from the final judgment and from the denial of its Rule 50(b) motion. It argues principally that: (1) the district court erred in its application of the tolling statute, particularly with respect to its jury instructions on the allocation of the burden of proof as to fraudulent concealment and a fiduciary's knowledge of the cause of action, and that because the tolling statute does not apply *418 Martinelli's claims are time-barred as a matter of law; (2) there was insufficient evidence to support a finding of a fiduciary relationship between the Diocese and Martinelli and the lower court's reliance on religious teachings to support such a finding violated the First Amendment; and (3) the district court committed reversible error by instructing the jury that it could draw a negative inference from the Diocese's failure to produce Father Brett as a witness at trial. We disagree with these arguments save for two aspects of the first.

We agree with the Diocese that the district court erred by charging the jury that the Diocese had to prove that Martinelli possessed knowledge of the existence of his cause of action if the Diocese was to avoid application of the fraudulent concealment tolling statute on that basis. We agree with the district court that Connecticut law requires a defendant owing fiduciary duties to the plaintiff to prove under the tolling statute that it did not fraudulently conceal the plaintiff's cause of action. However, in order to invoke the tolling statute, it is the plaintiff who must demonstrate that he or she was ignorant of the existence of his or her cause of action. Martinelli must therefore carry the burden of proof in establishing that he was unaware of the existence of his claim against the Diocese until at least July 27, 1990, three years (the limitation period) or less before he brought suit.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

We also agree with the Diocese that the district court erred by instructing the jury that under the fraudulent concealment tolling statute, the limitation period would be tolled, notwithstanding the Diocese's ignorance of the plaintiff's claim, if the Diocese's ignorance resulted from a breach of its fiduciary duties to the plaintiff. The Diocese's knowledge of Martinelli's cause of action remained an element of fraudulent concealment under the tolling statute even if the Diocese owed fiduciary duties to Martinelli. The jury should have considered this element. We disagree, however, with the Diocese's related claim that it was entitled to judgment as a matter of law because there was no evidence that it knew that Martinelli, specifically, had been molested. No such showing was required.

We therefore affirm the district court's ruling denying the Diocese's Rule 50(b) motion. In light of the two erroneous jury instructions, however, we vacate the judgment and remand for a new trial on at least the issues of (1) whether Martinelli has met his burden of proof as to his own lack of knowledge in order to invoke the fraudulent concealment tolling statute, and (2) whether the Diocese has demonstrated that it lacked knowledge of the plaintiff's cause of action, so as to prevent application of the tolling statute.

DISCUSSION

I. Statute of Limitations

A. Generally

Breach of fiduciary duty claims in Connecticut are ordinarily subject to a three-year statute of limitations under Conn. Gen.Stat. § 52-577. However, a different statute of limitations applies to Connecticut cases of alleged sexual abuse such as Martinelli's.

> [N]o action to recover damages for personal injury to a minor, including emotional distress, caused by sexual abuse, sexual exploitation or sexual assault may be brought by such person later than seventeen years from the date such person attains the age of majority.

Conn. Gen.Stat. § 52-577d. As the district court observed in its opinion denying the Diocese's Rule 50(b) renewed motion for judgment as a matter of law, until October 1972 the age of majority in Connecticut was twenty-one. See Conn. Gen.Stat. § 1-1d. Accordingly, Martinelli, who turned twenty-one on August 3, 1968, had until 1985 to bring this action; filed in July 1993, it was therefore eight years out of time unless the running of the limitations 419 period was somehow suspended under Connecticut law.

[1] The provision of Connecticut law that Martinelli asserts tolled the statute of limitations applicable to his claims is Connecticut Gen.Stat. § 52-595, which may relieve a plaintiff from operation of the statute of limitations for a claim that has been fraudulently concealed from him by the person against whom the claim is to be made. It reads:

> If any person, liable to an action by another, fraudulently conceals from him the existence of the cause of such action, such cause of action shall be deemed to accrue against such person so liable therefor at the time when the person entitled to sue thereon first discovers its existence.

Because this statute "constitutes a clear and unambiguous general exception to any statute of limitations that does not specifically preclude its application," Connell v. Colwell, 214 Conn. 242, 246 n. 4, 571 A.2d 116, 118 n. 4 (1990), it applies to claims governed by § 52-577d, the sexual assault statute of limitations. [FN3]

> FN3. The dissent suggests that because "[t]he Connecticut legislature gave victims an extraordinary 17 year period after the age of majority in which to bring claims regarding sexual abuse," dissent, post at [----], we should be wary of concluding that Martinelli's time to bring suit was further extended by § 52-595. It seems to us that tolling has, if anything, a greater > impact on brief limitations periods where the legislature has determined that the plaintiff ordinarily must bring his or her action shortly after the events in issue have occurred than it does on long ones, such as that applicable here, where the legislature is content that many years may pass before litigation is begun and prosecuted. Be that as it may, § 52-595 by its terms applies to long and short limitations periods alike.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

Once a tolling period has ended because of the plaintiff's discovery of his or her cause of action, the statute of limitations begins to run again. The district court instructed the jury that if the statute of limitations as to Martinelli's claims had been tolled by reason of the Diocese's fraudulent concealment, he had three years after his discovery of the facts underlying those claims to assert them in a lawsuit against the Diocese. [FN4]

> FN4. The court employed a three-year limitations period from the date of the plaintiff's discovery of the basis for his alleged causes of action. It is not clear whether the court adopted that period from the general breach of fiduciary duty statute of limitations, Conn. Gen.Stat. § 52-577, or elsewhere, but neither Martinelli nor the Diocese has challenged the court's ruling.

In arguing on appeal that § 52-595 does not save Martinelli's long-delayed claims, the Diocese directs our attention principally to Bartone v. Robert L. Day Co., 232 Conn. 527, 656 A.2d 221 (1995). In Bartone, the Connecticut Supreme Court held that in order to benefit from the § 52-595 tolling provision, a plaintiff must demonstrate:

> (1) a defendant's actual awareness, rather than imputed knowledge, of the facts necessary to establish the plaintiffs' cause of action; (2) that [sic] defendant's intentional concealment of these facts from the plaintiffs; and (3) that [sic] defendant's concealment of the facts for the purpose of obtaining delay on the plaintiffs' part in filing a complaint on their cause of action.

Id. at 225 (citations omitted); see also Lippitt v. Ashley, 89 Conn. 451, 480, 94 A. 995, 1005 (1915) (actions of the defendant must be "directed to the very point of obtaining the delay, of which he afterwards seeks to take advantage by pleading the statute"). The Bartone court further held that a plaintiff seeking tolling under § 52-595 must demonstrate these elements by "clear, precise, and unequivocal evidence." 656 A.2d at 224.

B. Jury Instructions on the Burden of Proof.

[2][3] The Diocese argues that the district court erred in instructing the jury that the burden of proof as to fraudulent concealment under § 52- 595 shifts to the *420 defendant upon a finding that it is a fiduciary with respect to the plaintiff. [FN5] Our review of the instructions the district court gave the jury is governed by a well-established standard:

> FN5. It is unclear from the record whether the defendant objected to, failed to object to, or agreed with the district court's jury instructions as to who had the burden of proof on the second and third Bartone factors. Inasmuch as we agree with these portions of the district court's charge in any event and a discussion of our reasoning will help explain our views on the portions of the charge with which we disagree, we assume for purposes of this discussion that the Diocese's objection to these instructions was preserved. Were we to hold that the objections were forfeited or waived, the result would be the same.

> A jury charge is erroneous if it misleads the jury as to the correct legal standard, or if it does not adequately inform the jury of the law. A court's charge must be tested by viewing it as a whole and will not be disturbed if it is correct and sufficiently covers the case so that a jury can intelligently determine the questions presented to it. An erroneous instruction, unless harmless, requires a new trial.

Pahuta v. Massey-Ferguson, Inc., 170 F.3d 125, 135 (2d Cir.1999) (quotations and citation omitted).

[4] To be sure, under Connecticut law, in the ordinary case in which fraudulent concealment is asserted by a party attempting to extend the statute of limitations, the plaintiff is required to shoulder the burden with respect to all three parts of the Bartone test: [1] the defendant's actual, not imputed, awareness of the facts necessary to establish the plaintiff's cause of action; [2] its intentional concealment of such facts; and [3] that the concealment is for the purpose of obtaining delay. But when a defendant is sued by a person to whom it owes a fiduciary duty and that person is trying to extend the limitations period, Connecticut law requires that the burden shift to the defendant to prove that one of the three Bartone elements has not been met. The district court therefore did not err in allocating to the Diocese the burden of proof as to the Bartone elements.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

We agree with the Diocese, however, that a plaintiff who invokes the tolling statute, even a plaintiff to whom the defendant owes fiduciary duties, carries the burden of proof on the question of the plaintiff's own ignorance of the existence of the cause of action. That burden does not shift to the defendant. The district court therefore erred in requiring the Diocese to prove that Martinelli was unaware of the existence of his claim. See infra Section I.F.

C. Elements of Fraudulent Concealment.

[5] The Connecticut Supreme Court has recently reiterated its rule that where an allegation of fraud, self-dealing, or conflict of interest is made against a fiduciary, the burden shifts to the fiduciary to prove that it acted fairly:

> Our law on the obligations of a fiduciary is well settled. A fiduciary or confidential relationship is characterized by a unique degree of trust and confidence between the parties, one of whom has superior knowledge, skill or expertise and is under a duty to represent the interests of the other. The superior position of the fiduciary or dominant party affords him great opportunity for abuse of the confidence reposed in him. Once a fiduciary relationship is found to exist, the burden of proving fair dealing properly shifts to the fiduciary. Furthermore, the standard of proof for establishing fair dealing is not the ordinary standard of fair preponderance of the evidence, but requires proof either by clear and convincing evidence, clear and satisfactory evidence or clear, convincing and unequivocal evidence. Proof of a fiduciary relationship, therefore, generally imposes a twofold burden on the fiduciary. First, the burden of proof shifts to the fiduciary; and second, the *421 standard of proof is clear and convincing evidence.

Murphy v. Wakelee, 247 Conn. 396, 400, 721 A.2d 1181, 1183-84 (1998) (citation and quotation marks omitted).

[6] At issue in Murphy was whether a claim against a fiduciary based on negligence shifts the burden of proof to the fiduciary. The court held that it did not. "[I]n the absence of a claim of fraud, self-dealing or conflict of interest, the trial court was not required to charge the jury that the defendant had a duty to prove his fair dealing by clear and convincing evidence." Id. 721 A.2d at 1183 (footnotes omitted). But the court took the occasion to spell out why the burden of proof does shift to the fiduciary when fraud is alleged. When a fiduciary, who has superior knowledge and influence and who is accorded a significant measure of trust, benefits in its dealings with those to whom it owes duties of care and candor, a suspicion naturally arises that the fiduciary has gained by taking advantage of its special relationship. [FN6] The fiduciary is required to explain itself, to prove fair dealing and thus to dispel the suspicion. "The full knowledge of the transaction is within his possession; he can and he must assume the burden of its proof." Id. at 1184 (quoting Jordan v. Jordan Co., 94 Conn. 384, 390, 109 A. 181, 184 (1920)).

> FN6. Although not always expressly stated, the basis upon which the aforementioned burden-shifting and enhanced burden of proof rests is, essentially, that undue influence will not be presumed; Connell v. Colwell, 214 Conn. 242, 252, 571 A.2d 116 (1990) (fraud is not presumed and burden of establishing fraud rests on party who alleges it); and that the presumption of fraud does not arise from the relationship itself. We note, however, that this rule is somewhat relaxed in cases where a fiduciary relation exists between the parties to a transaction or contract, and where one has a dominant and controlling force or influence over the other. In such cases, if the superior party obtains a possible benefit, equity raises a presumption against the validity of the transaction or contract, and casts upon such party the burden of proving fairness, honesty, and integrity in the transaction or contract.... Therefore, it is only when the confidential relationship is shown together with suspicious circumstances, or where > there is a transaction, contract, or transfer between persons in a confidential or fiduciary relationship, and where the dominant party is the beneficiary of the transaction, contract, or transfer, that the burden shifts to the fiduciary to prove fair dealing. A fiduciary seeking to profit by a transaction with the one who confided in him has the burden of showing that he has not taken advantage of his influence or knowledge and that the arrangement is fair and conscientious.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

> Id. 721 A.2d at 1186 (additional quotations, citations and alterations omitted).

Shifting the burden of proof protects fiduciary relationships by helping to ensure that the fiduciary acts consistently with the responsibilities such relationships entail. "[A]ny one acting in a fiduciary relation shall not be permitted to make use of that relation to benefit his own personal interest. This rule is strict in its requirements and in its operation. It extends to all transactions where the individual's personal interests may be brought into conflict with his acts in the fiduciary capacity...." Id. 721 A.2d at 1184 (quoting State v. Culhane, 78 Conn. 622, 629, 63 A. 636, 638 (1906) (internal quotation marks and citation omitted)).

[7] To be sure, where the fiduciary has not received some kind of benefit that would engender suspicion and there is no other evidence of wrongdoing, the burden of proof remains on the plaintiff. See id. 721 A.2d at 1183 (no shift in burden of proof where sole claim is fiduciary's negligence in failing to preserve ward's assets and no allegation of fraud or a conflict of interest). But Connecticut law routinely shifts the burden of proof, irrespective of circumstances, where a fiduciary appears to have obtained a benefit at the expense of a person to whom it owes a fiduciary duty. See, e.g., Konover Development Corp. v. Zeller, 228 Conn. 206, 635 A.2d 798 (1994) (general partner who terminates agreement with limited partner on ground that project is no longer feasible has burden to show fair dealing); *422*Dunham v. Dunham,* 204 Conn. 303, 528 A.2d 1123 (1987) (executor of will who consolidates all property in his own name and leaves brother with virtually nothing has burden to prove fair dealing); Alaimo v. Royer, 188 Conn. 36, 448 A.2d 207 (1982) (real estate broker has burden to prove fair dealing where elderly disabled woman gives broker life savings for purposes of investment and broker instead spends money).

A fiduciary obtains an obvious benefit if the person to whom it owes a fiduciary duty delays bringing a cause of action against the fiduciary beyond the expiration of the statute of limitations: The claim against the fiduciary is forever barred. The benefit the fiduciary derives comes at the expense of the very party who has placed trust in the fiduciary and expects fair dealing. In this situation as in others involving a fiduciary's duty of fair dealing, we agree with the district court that Connecticut law requires the fiduciary to show that it has not abused its position of trust, knowledge and influence by concealing the claim from the would-be plaintiff. Indeed, the possible concealment of a fiduciary's own wrongdoing egregious enough to give rise to a legal claim seems particularly the type of behavior that the law requires the fiduciary to explain.

> [S]tatutes of limitation ... were enacted to prevent frauds; to prevent parties from asserting rights after the lapse of time had destroyed or impaired the evidence which would show that such rights never existed, or had been satisfied, transferred, or extinguished, if they ever did exist. To hold that by concealing a fraud, or by committing a fraud in a manner that it concealed itself until such time as the party committing the fraud could plead the statute of limitations to protect it, is to make the law which was designed to prevent fraud the means by which it is made successful and secure.

Bailey v. Glover, 21 Wall. 342, 88 U.S. 342, 349, 22 L.Ed. 636 (1874).

Although there is no Connecticut decision specifically addressing whether the usual practice of shifting the burden of proof to a fiduciary to prove it has acted fairly extends to an allegation of fraudulent concealment under the tolling statute, we think that under Connecticut law such an allocation is compelled. As the Connecticut Supreme Court observed many years ago:

> In all cases, where by accident, mistake, fraud or otherwise, a party has an unfair advantage in proceeding in a court of law, which must necessarily make that court an instrument of injustice, and it is, therefore, against conscience that he should use that advantage, a court of equity will interfere, and restrain him from using the advantage which he has thus improperly gained.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

Folwell v. Howell, 117 Conn. 565, 568-69, 169 A. 199, 200 (1933) (quoting Tucker v. Baldwin, 13 Conn. 136, 144 (1839)(emphasis added)). We have no reason to believe that Connecticut courts would make an exception from "all cases" where, as here, a plaintiff asserts that a person with a fiduciary duty toward him has taken unfair advantage of the plaintiff to deprive him of the timely assertion of a cause of action against the fiduciary. There is nothing about this circumstance that requires a special rule to the contrary.

[8] This conclusion is bolstered by our observation that under Connecticut law fraudulent concealment for purposes of the tolling statute is consistently treated as akin to other forms of fraud, with similar requirements of proof. See, e.g., Puro v. Henry, 188 Conn. 301, 308, 449 A.2d 176, 179 (1982) (observing, in a discussion of fraudulent concealment, the general rule that "[f]raud is not to be presumed, but must be strictly proven. The evidence must be clear, precise, and unequivocal."); see also Bound Brook Assocs. v. City of Norwalk, 198 Conn. 660, 664-66, 504 A.2d 1047, 1050-51 (1986); Beckenstein v. Potter and Carrier, Inc., 191 Conn. 150, 162-63, 464 A.2d 18, 25 (1983); 423Armellino v. Dowling,* No. CV 92-0330634, 1995 WL 317098, at *4 (Conn.Super.Ct. May 16, 1995) (treating fraudulent concealment as a form of the fraud of misrepresentation); Krupa v. Kelley, 5 Conn. Cir. Ct. 127, 129-30, 245 A.2d 886, 888-89 (1968). See generally John P. Dawson, Fraudulent Concealment and Statutes of Limitation, 31 Mich. L.Rev. 875, 879 (1933) ("[A]ny circumstances, such as personal inequality or 'fiduciary' or confidential relationships, which would tend to explain credulity in actions based on fraud will have the same effect in claims that were fraudulently concealed.").

In arguing that the district court erred in instructing the jury that the burden of proof shifts to a fiduciary, the Diocese emphasizes the statement in Bartone that it is the "plaintiffs [who] ha[ve] to prove fraudulent concealment by ... clear, precise, and unequivocal evidence." Bartone, 656 A.2d at 224 (quoting Bound Brook Assocs., 504 A.2d at 1051)(emphasis added). According to the Diocese, this language establishes that the burden of proof as to all the elements of fraudulent concealment is on the plaintiff who invokes the tolling statute, and that it may not be shifted to the defendant.

We disagree. We know of no Connecticut case that holds that the burden of proof is on the plaintiff to prove fraudulent concealment if the action is brought by a person against someone with a fiduciary duty toward him or her that is related to the claim, and Murphy is clearly to the contrary. While Bartone spoke of the plaintiff's burden, that litigation, brought by a homeowner, against a building contractor and its subcontractors for the faulty installation of a septic system, did not involve a fiduciary relationship. The opinion said nothing about the allocation of the burden of proof as to fiduciaries.

We conclude that where a defendant owes a fiduciary duty to a plaintiff and the plaintiff asserts under the fraudulent concealment tolling statute that the defendant has fraudulently concealed the plaintiff's cause of action, Connecticut law requires that the defendant bear the burden of proof as to the elements of fraudulent concealment set out in Bartone. If the fiduciary is to avoid the application of the tolling statute, the defendant must show that one of these elements is not met.

Finally, as in other instances in which the burden shifts to the fiduciary to show fair dealing, such proof must be by "clear and convincing evidence," Murphy, 721 A.2d at 1184. As we have seen, fraudulent concealment in the fiduciary context is simply one of many possible forms of unfair dealing by a fiduciary. We have no reason to think that Connecticut courts would adopt some lighter burden of proof for the fiduciary to meet here. The district court's instructions to the jury with respect to the second and third Bartone factors--intentional concealment by the defendant for the purpose of obtaining delay--were therefore proper.

D. The Diocese's Knowledge

[9] The first Bartone factor that must be established in order to conclude that a defendant is guilty of fraudulent concealment so as to toll the statute of limitations in a claim against it is that the defendant harbor "actual awareness, rather than imputed knowledge, of the facts necessary to establish the plaintiff's cause of action." Bartone, 656 A.2d at 225. In ruling on the Diocese's motion for summary judgment, the district court concluded that the Diocese did not possess the actual knowledge required under Bartone because there was no evidence that the Diocese knew prior to the institution of this lawsuit that Martinelli had been sexually abused. Agreeing, however, with Martinelli that "the Diocese should not be permitted to take advantage of its ignorance now when its ignorance was the result of a failure to fulfill a duty to investigate and warn," the district court decided that this first requirement of Bartone could be "relax[ed]." Martinelli I, 989 F.Supp. at 116. The court reasoned that "[a]lthough Connecticut courts do not appear to have squarely addressed this particular claim ... [there is] ample support 424 in the case law for the proposition that a defendant may not avoid application of § 52-595 by relying on the violation of a legal duty." Id. The court concluded that Martinelli therefore could "demonstrate § 52-595 to be applicable notwithstanding the Diocese's ignorance of his cause of action if [he could] show that the Diocese's ignorance was the result of a violation of a legal duty to [him] to investigate and warn." Id. at 116. Thus the district court decided that if there is a fiduciary duty to investigate and warn, the first Bartone requirement relating to the defendant's actual knowledge disappears. The district court instructed the jury accordingly.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

We agree with the Diocese that this was error. We are aware of no Connecticut decision that can be made to stand for such a proposition. But see Bound Brook Assocs., 504 A.2d at 1052 n. 12 ("In view of our finding that [the] evidence does not establish an intent to conceal, we need not decide whether [the defendant] had a duty to investigate or to warn, or whether an intentional failure to act in such circumstances would be sufficient to establish fraudulent concealment.").

The district court, in so holding, relied on cases that address whether a defendant's silence is sufficient to constitute concealment under Connecticut's tolling statute and similar laws in other states. See Martinelli I, 989 F.Supp. at 116-17. Those cases indicate that silence is insufficient to meet the concealment standard absent a special duty to disclose. See Manufacturers Hanover Trust Co. v. Stamford Hotel Ltd. Partnership, No. CV 91 011697 IS, 1994 WL 720368, at *3-4 (Conn.Super.Ct. Dec. 15, 1994) (considering whether special circumstances giving rise to duty to disclose were present and noting that if they were defendant may have had a duty to disclose to plaintiff facts giving rise to the fraud); Lapuk v. Simons, No. PJR CV 93 0704542S, 1995 WL 5633, at *16 (Conn.Super.Ct. Jan. 3, 1995) (acknowledging that Connecticut courts have found that silence may constitute an act of concealment despite the fact that the courts have also held that the concealment must be for the purpose of delaying the onset of a lawsuit); A.M. v. Roman Catholic Church, 669 N.E.2d 1034, 1038 (Ind.Ct.App.1996) (under Indiana law, equitable tolling on grounds of fraudulent concealment can arise either from an active effort to conceal a cause of action or from the violation of a fiduciary or confidential relationship, described as constructive fraud); Koenig v. Lambert, 527 N.W.2d 903, 905 (S.D.1995), overruled on other grounds, Stratmeyer v. Stratmeyer, 567 N.W.2d 220 (S.D.1997) (in South Dakota silence by party with duty to disclose constitutes fraudulent concealment without need to show any affirmative attempt to hide facts from plaintiff); see also Hamilton v. Smith, 773 F.2d 461, 468 (2d Cir.1985) ("To establish fraudulent concealment under Connecticut law, a plaintiff must show that ... absent a fiduciary relationship, the defendant was guilty of some affirmative act of concealment.") (emphasis added) (citations omitted). Whether a defendant's silence in the face of a duty to speak constitutes an affirmative act of concealment is relevant to the second Bartone factor, the defendant's intentional concealment, but has no bearing on the first with which we are now concerned, the defendant's actual awareness of the facts necessary to establish the plaintiffs' cause of action. We do not agree with the district court that the cited cases justify the elimination of the need to establish the first Bartone requirement.

The first Bartone factor reflects a policy judgment by the Supreme Court of Connecticut that a defendant should not be subjected to the tolling provided by § 52-595 unless it had actual knowledge of significant facts that it concealed from the plaintiff; knowledge imputed to it by law is not enough. Murphy requires that where the defendant owes the plaintiff a fiduciary duty, it is the defendant that must prove the absence of such actual knowledge. Irrespective of who must 425 prove it, though, the defendant's actual knowledge remains necessary in order to establish fraudulent concealment. We therefore agree with the Diocese that the court erred in dispensing with the first Bartone factor.

E. Facts Necessary To Establish the Cause of Action

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

The Diocese argues that since, as we hold, the first Bartone factor was improperly eliminated from the case by the district court, it is entitled to judgment as a matter of law: There was no evidence that the Diocese knew that Martinelli had been injured and it therefore could not have been found to have, as the first Bartone factor requires, "actual awareness ... of the facts necessary to establish the ... cause of action," Bartone, 656 A.2d at 225 (emphasis added). We do not agree.

[10] We review de novo the district court's denial of the Diocese's Rule 50(b) motion. See EEOC v. Ethan Allen, Inc., 44 F.3d 116, 119 (2d Cir.1994). In doing so, we "must view the evidence in the light most favorable to the party against which the motion was made ... making all credibility assessments and drawing all inferences in favor of the non- movant." Id. (internal quotation marks and citations omitted).

Although the district court erred in instructing the jury that the "actual awareness" element of Bartone was not fully required to be met, we agree with its conclusion on the Rule 50(b) motion that the Diocese is nonetheless not entitled to judgment as a matter of law on the issue, but for different reasons.

[11] In our view, both the parties and the district court misconstrue what the first Bartone factor--"actual awareness ... of the facts necessary to establish [Martinelli's] cause of action," Bartone, 656 A.2d at 225-- requires with respect to the Diocese's knowledge. We do not think it means that for the Diocese to have fraudulently concealed Martinelli's cause of action, it had to have been aware that Father Brett sexually assaulted Martinelli rather than another of Brett's students. Such specific knowledge is not necessary to establish Martinelli's cause of action.

The import of Bartone 's first element is that defendant's knowledge must be actual not imputed. Although the clause went on to state that the knowledge needed to be of the "facts necessary to establish plaintiff's cause of action," that language was beside the point that the Bartone court was making.

The Supreme Court of Connecticut's articulation of the first Bartone factor must be understood in light of the Bartone facts. The issue in Bartone was straightforward: whether one of the defendants, a building general contractor, was aware of defects in the work of its employees which it concealed from the plaintiffs, owners of a new home built by the contractor, in order to avoid liability to the plaintiffs. The identity of the plaintiffs as the victims of the contractor's negligence, if any, was obvious and therefore not an issue in the case. Bartone did not involve, as does the present case, a potential for harm to unknown persons allegedly exacerbated by the defendant's failure to disclose.

Bartone would be similar to the present case only if the defendant contractor there had actual knowledge of something like the delivery of dangerously defective building materials to one of its work sites, but did not know to which of several sites the defective materials had gone. If that had been the case, we are confident that the Bartone opinion would not have described that which the defendant needed to know to establish fraudulent concealment as the "facts necessary to establish plaintiff's cause of action." We seriously doubt that the Supreme Court of Connecticut would have thereby exempted the defendant from operation of the tolling statute simply because it did not know whose home had been built with the defective materials and, not knowing who the potential plaintiff 426 was, did not know all of the "facts necessary to establish" the claim.

[12] We conclude that, in the proper case, the Connecticut Supreme Court would hold that to establish the first Bartone factor it is sufficient to show that the defendant had and concealed actual awareness of facts that created a likely potential for harm, especially if the defendant was a fiduciary for the likely victim.

This is, of course, just such a case. The claim on which the jury based its award to Martinelli is that, when the Diocese learned that Father Brett had sexually molested boys, at least one of them unidentified, it owed the boys within the scope of its fiduciary obligations, including Martinelli, a duty to investigate and to warn possible past and future victims of the harm. Its failure to do so prevented Martinelli from receiving the treatment he required, thereby exacerbating his injury.

A jury could reasonably find that in December 1964 the Diocese learned that Father Brett had sexually abused "T.F." in Bridgeport, and that Brett had "been involved" with another youth in

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

Stamford. In January 1966, the Diocese learned about another minor, "M.F.," whom Father Brett had allegedly solicited; "M.F." did not tell his parents about Father Brett's conduct for some two years, and at the end of that period "M.F." required hospitalization. Assuming, as the jury found, that the Diocese owed parishioners in Martinelli's circumstances a fiduciary duty, the jury could also conclude that the Diocese breached that duty by failing to investigate who the additional victims were, or by failing to warn or inform parishioners in Martinelli's circumstances of Brett's conduct so as to increase the likelihood that victims would seek counseling and treatment.

If the Diocese had a fiduciary duty toward Martinelli and knew that at least one other young person to whom it owed such a duty had been assaulted and that the Diocese's failure to disclose Brett's conduct or discover who the victim was would likely compound this victim's injury, a jury could conclude that the Diocese was actually aware of the "facts necessary" to establish Martinelli's cause of action sufficiently to satisfy the first Bartone factor. Just as a hit-and-run driver need not know the identity of an injured pedestrian to recognize that the pedestrian likely has a cause of action against the driver, the Diocese's knowledge of the actual identity of an assaulted child was not required for it to realize that there was likely to be an actionable claim, or for it to seek to conceal from such a potential plaintiff the facts underlying the claim. [FN7]

> FN7. It is at this point, we think, that the dissent's analysis goes awry. The dissent describes a Diocese with "early storm warnings," dissent, post at 433, or "hints," id. at 433, that Father Brett may have molested an unknown boy, or knowledge of the "potential for injury." Id. at 435 (emphasis in original). The evidence suggests facts starkly to the contrary. A jury could conclude that the Diocese actually--not by imputation--knew that at least one unidentified boy had probably been sexually abused by Father Brett and that it deliberately failed to disclose that fact or to determine the identity of the victim or victims. Such a finding of actual awareness and failure to investigate or disclose would support a finding for the plaintiff on the first Bartone factor, whether or not possession of "early storm warnings" or "hints" or knowledge of "potential for injury" would suffice.
>
> We question the dissent's reliance on Bound Brook Associates v. City of Norwalk, 198 Conn. 660, 504 A.2d 1047 (1986). See dissent, post at [433- 35]. There the defendant had no knowledge of the facts underlying the plaintiffs cause of action "[w]ithout [which defendant] could hardly have intended to conceal the rights the plaintiffs now claim to have." 198 Conn. at 668, 504 A.2d at 1052. Here, by contrast, a jury could conclude that the defendant had knowledge of the facts necessary to establish the plaintiff's cause of action, excepting only his identity which it failed to seek to determine, and that it carefully concealed those facts. Bound Brook hardly seems to us an "analog," "close[ ]" or otherwise, to the case at bar; that there was no duty to investigate or warn in Bound Brook says little about the duties owed by the defendant to the plaintiff here.

We therefore agree with the district court's conclusion that an absence of evidence 427 that the Diocese knew that Martinelli rather than another boy was the victim of abuse did not preclude a finding that the Diocese fraudulently concealed Martinelli's cause of action. Bartone does not require that the Diocese have possessed such knowledge and the Diocese was not therefore entitled to judgment as a matter of law on that basis.

On retrial, the court will be obliged to charge the jury on this issue. While we predict with confidence that, when similar issues are presented to the Connecticut Supreme Court, it will allow the first Bartone factor to be satisfied by evidence of the character adduced by the plaintiff in this case, we cannot safely predict precisely how the court will formulate the test. In view of this uncertainty, it would, we think, be prudent for the district judge when fashioning a charge to adhere as closely as possible to the facts on which Martinelli's claim depends, rather than attempting to anticipate the more generalized standard that the Connecticut court will ultimately adopt. We suggest in the margin [FN8] for the guidance of the district court an approach that we think would lead to a jury instruction that would come within the Bartone rule as it is likely to be interpreted when the Connecticut courts deal with facts similar to these.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

> FN8. The court might instruct the jury that it must determine whether the Diocese had actual knowledge of the following: 1) Father Brett provided leadership and guidance to a group of minor male students at a school affiliated with the Diocese; 2) he sexually abused at least one of those boys whose identity was known to the Diocese and it was likely that he was sexually involved with or sexually abused another boy; 3) such sexual abuse of a minor could be injurious to the minor; 4) the extent or gravity of the injury could be reduced if the victim received treatment or help; 5) a minor in such circumstances is likely to conceal, suppress or repress the facts of such abuse and would therefore be less likely to receive beneficial treatment or help if the Diocese failed to disclose what it had learned of Father Brett's misconduct; and 6) the Diocese knew that, despite its knowledge of the first five facts, it had failed to disclose Father Brett's misconduct to other potential victims, including Martinelli, and their families. The instruction might continue: "If you find that the Diocese has proven by clear and convincing evidence that it did not have actual knowledge of one or more of those six facts, you must find for the Diocese on the issue of the Diocese's actual knowledge; otherwise you must find for the plaintiff on the issue."

F. Plaintiff's Ignorance.

The district court instructed the jury that the Diocese carried the burden of proof not only with respect to the Bartone factors, but as to Martinelli's own ignorance of the existence of his cause of action under § 52-595 as well. The Diocese was required by the court to "disprove ... by clear and convincing evidence ... [t]hat [Martinelli] was not aware of the essential factual elements of his cause of action prior to July 27, 1990," three years prior to his institution of suit. We agree with the Diocese that this was error.

[13] Although § 52-595 does not explicitly say so, it clearly implies that plaintiff's ignorance of the facts is a necessary element of tolling under that statute. A statute that tolls a limitations period because of the defendant's fraudulent concealment of a fact or facts obviously operates for the benefit of those--and we think only those--who are not aware of the facts that have been concealed. Moreover, because the statute provides that, after tolling, "the cause of action shall be deemed to accrue ... at the time when the person entitled to sue thereon first discovers its existence," there plainly can be no effective tolling for a plaintiff who was aware of the existence of his or her cause of action from the time the claim originally accrued. We therefore conclude that the plaintiff must be ignorant of the facts that the defendant has sought to conceal for the statute of limitations to toll under § 52-595.

[14] Because the Diocese owed a fiduciary duty to Martinelli and the principles of Murphy call for shifting some burdens 428 of proof to a fiduciary defendant, the district court placed the burden of proof with respect to the issue of plaintiff's ignorance on the defendant. We do not think that the Connecticut cases so hold or justify the district court's having done so.

[15] In general, the law places the burden of proof on the party that asserts a contention and seeks to benefit from it. See, e.g., Katz v. Goodyear Tire and Rubber Co., 737 F.2d 238, 243 (2d Cir.1984) (burden of proving residency under New York borrowing statute placed on party seeking to take advantage of its terms). From time to time, however, for reasons of policy often involving fairness to the parties, the law shifts the burden. Thus, in cases not involving a fiduciary relationship, § 52-595 places the burden of proving both the plaintiff's ignorance and the defendant's fraudulent concealment on a plaintiff who seeks to assert and benefit from a finding of the defendant's fraudulent concealment. See Bartone, 656 A.2d at 224-25. For the policy reasons explored in Murphy, when a plaintiff seeks the tolling provided by the statute and the defendant owes a fiduciary duty to the plaintiff, the burden of proof on the issue of the propriety of the defendant's conduct is shifted to the defendant; it must prove its own fair dealing. The reasons that justify shifting the burden to the fiduciary defendant on that question do not apply to the issue of plaintiff's ignorance.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

The Murphy burden-shifting relates to the fiduciary's fair dealing. See Murphy, 721 A.2d at 1183 ("the burden of proving fair dealing properly shifts to the fiduciary") (citations and internal quotation marks omitted). Fair dealing is also the issue addressed by Bartone 's three-factor test relating to the defendant's awareness, conduct and motivation. Several factors justify shifting the burden of proof on fair dealing, including the fiduciary's "superior knowledge, skill ... expertise" and "dominant" position which "afford[ ] him great opportunity for abuse," id.; the difficulty such a plaintiff may have gathering the information needed to establish unfair dealing; and the fact that the fiduciary relationship places the fiduciary under an obligation to reveal such information to the person to whom the fiduciary duty is owed for his or her benefit.

But nothing in the language or the reasoning of Murphy similarly calls for shifting the burden on the issue of plaintiff's ignorance. Here, by contrast with the Bartone factors, the defendant's "superior knowledge, skill ... expertise" and "dominant" position do not deter the plaintiff from establishing that he did not learn the facts necessary for his or her cause of action from some other source; with respect to the plaintiff's knowledge, defendant's knowledge and access are inferior to the plaintiff's; and the fiduciary defendant cannot be expected to know, and has no duty to learn, what the knowledge the plaintiff may have obtained from others. There is therefore no reason to shift the burden of proof to the fiduciary defendant.

[16] Because the district court wrongly instructed the jury that to avoid tolling the statute of limitations the Diocese had to prove that Martinelli had knowledge of his cause of action, the jury deliberated on a critical issue under an erroneous legal standard. And because we cannot say that the jury would have reached the same conclusion if Martinelli had been required to bear the burden of establishing his ignorance of the facts underlying his cause of action, the error was not harmless. We therefore reverse the judgment and remand for a new trial on the issue of whether under the tolling statute Martinelli can demonstrate by a preponderance of the evidence that he was unaware of the existence of his cause of action until after July 27, 1990.

II. Sufficiency of the Evidence

The Diocese also argued in its Rule 50(b) motion that there was insufficient evidence to support the jury's finding that there was a fiduciary relationship between *429 the Diocese and Martinelli. In asserting on appeal that the district court erred in denying the motion on this ground, the Diocese claims principally that Martinelli was merely one of 300,000 parishioners to whom it owed no particular duty. We agree with the district court.

This Circuit has not resolved whether in a diversity action the sufficiency of the evidence is a question governed by state or federal law. See Willis v. Westin Hotel Co., 884 F.2d 1556, 1563 n. 5 (2d Cir.1989). We need not do so in this instance because there is no material difference between the two standards' application here. [FN9]

> FN9. Compare SEC v. Warde, 151 F.3d 42, 46 (2d Cir.1998) ("We will overturn a jury's verdict in favor of a plaintiff if the evidence supporting the verdict, viewed in the light most favorable to the plaintiff, is insufficient to support a reasonable finding in plaintiff's favor."), with Blanchette v. Barrett, 229 Conn. 256, 266, 640 A.2d 74, 80 n. 8 (1994) ("In an appeal from a judgment rendered upon a jury verdict, we review the evidence in the case in the light most favorable to the prevailing party to determine if it reasonably supports the jury's verdict.") (citation omitted).

[17][18] Under Connecticut law, a fiduciary relationship is a relationship that is "characterized by a unique degree of trust and confidence between the parties, one of whom has superior knowledge, skill or expertise and is under a duty to represent the interests of the other." Dunham, 528 A.2d at 1133. We are unable to say that the evidence did not reasonably support the jury's finding of a fiduciary relationship between the Diocese and Martinelli.

[19] Relying primarily on cases from other states, the Diocese asserts that for a fiduciary relationship to have arisen, the Diocese would have had to have clearly undertaken to act as a fiduciary with respect to Martinelli and to have had individual contact with him; and that there was no evidence that it did so here. We are unpersuaded. The Connecticut Supreme Court has specifically "refused to define a fiduciary relationship in precise detail and in such a manner as to exclude new situations, choosing instead to leave the bars down for situations in which there is a justifiable trust confided on one side and a resulting superiority and influence on the other." Alaimo v. Royer, 188 Conn. 36, 41, 448 A.2d 207, 209 (1982) (internal quotation marks and citation omitted). We are disinclined to read the specific requirements that the Diocese offers into Connecticut law.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

The Diocese argues forcefully that it was not and must not be held to have been in a fiduciary relationship with all of its parishioners. But that is not the issue before us and we express no view with respect to it. We agree with the district court that irrespective of the duties of the Diocese to its parishioners generally, the jury could reasonably have found that the Diocese's relationship with Martinelli, based on the particulars of his ties to Brett and the Diocese's knowledge and sponsorship of that relationship, was of a fiduciary nature:

- Martinelli attended Stamford Catholic High School, a diocesan school where he was taught by priests who were employed by the Diocese.
- Martinelli had, and the Diocese knew he had, a special and privileged relationship with Father Brett, another of the Diocese's priests although not a Diocesan employee, as a member of "Brett's Mavericks," the small group of boys interested in liturgical reform in the Catholic Church to whom Brett acted as a mentor and spiritual advisor.
- Martinelli, as the Diocese was of course aware, was taught in grade school catechism classes and thereafter to trust and respect the bishop of the diocese; he considered his bishop his caretaker and moral authority.
- Martinelli's parents allowed him to participate with Father Brett and others in church-sponsored and extracurricular activities because they trusted Brett inasmuch as he was a priest.

430 - Father Brett spent more time with this identifiable group of boys than with others. In addition to more formal contacts, the group and Father Brett went for dinners, ice cream, and on walks, and rode around in his car together. These contacts were well known in the school and Diocesan communities. Msgr. Cusack, the guidance counselor at the Diocesan high school that Martinelli attended, knew specifically about Father Brett's contacts with Martinelli and the other boys.

- The Diocese encouraged Father Brett to work with the youth of the church. His responsibility, shared with another priest, for conducting the activities of the Diocese's Catholic Youth Organization, which sponsored weekly social and educational activities for high school parishioners, was widely known.
- Father Brett, surely with the knowledge and approval of the Diocese, also escorted boys on church field trips, on one occasion taking Martinelli and another boy to Baltimore and Washington where the three stayed at a seminary.
- The Diocese was entrusted with reports from young victims that they had been abused by Father Brett, who had used his position to influence them and inflict injury. One victim, "T.F.," specifically informed the Diocese of his concerns for other students who had accompanied Father Brett on his trips.
- The Diocese also learned, after its representatives confronted Father Brett, that he had assaulted other boys in Stamford. "M.F.," a second victim who complained to the Diocese, was also a member of Brett's Mavericks.

We agree with the district court that there was thus sufficient evidence from which the jury could reasonably have found that there existed a special relationship of trust and confidence between Martinelli and not only Father Brett, but the Diocese. It is reasonable for the jury to conclude that Martinelli, through the particular activities in which he was involved, including those which the Diocese sponsored, had a particularly close relationship with the Diocese from which a fiduciary duty might arise. The Diocese, in turn, occupied a superior position of influence and authority over Martinelli. It was also reasonable for the jury to conclude, based on evidence as to the specific information that the Diocese received about Brett's misconduct, including the existence and location of other likely victims and the ease with which the Diocese might have determined precisely who the likely victims were, that the Diocese owed Martinelli, and youths with a similar relationship with the Diocese, a duty of care including a duty to investigate and warn or inform so as to prevent or alleviate harm to additional victims. We agree with the district court, therefore, that the jury's finding of a fiduciary relationship under Connecticut law was supported by the evidence.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

III. First Amendment Claim

[20] The Diocese argues to us, as it did in its Rule 50(b) motion to the district court, that the Free Exercise Clause of the First Amendment prohibits the court's finding of a fiduciary relationship between the Diocese and Martinelli because the finding was based on religious doctrine and practices. The Diocese draws our attention to evidence at trial concerning religious matters, including testimony that Martinelli was taught that the bishop is like a "shepherd" to his "flock" of parishioners, and testimony about the status and responsibilities of the bishop under Canon Law. The Diocese makes the related point on appeal that in sustaining the jury's finding of a fiduciary relationship in its ruling denying the Rule 50(b) motion, the district court unconstitutionally relied on its own interpretation of religious doctrine, thereby determining for the church the religious duties it owes to its parishioners.

These arguments are meritless. As our preceding discussion makes clear, the jury's finding of a fiduciary duty was supported by ample evidence apart from the *431 evidence of a religious nature singled out by the Diocese.

[21] To the extent that the jury did consider religious teachings and tenets, moreover, it did so to determine not their validity but whether, as a matter of fact, Martinelli's following of the teachings and belief in the tenets gave rise to a fiduciary relationship between Martinelli and the Diocese. The First Amendment does not prevent courts from deciding secular civil disputes involving religious institutions when and for the reason that they require reference to religious matters. See, e.g., Jones v. Wolf, 443 U.S. 595, 603, 99 S.Ct. 3020, 61 L.Ed.2d 775 (1979) (court permitted to decide issue as to church property even though it required court to examine religious documents). Although "First Amendment values are plainly jeopardized when ... litigation is made to turn on the resolution by civil courts of controversies over religious doctrine and practice," Presbyterian Church v. Hull Church, 393 U.S. 440, 449, 89 S.Ct. 601, 21 L.Ed.2d 658 (1969), neither the district court nor we have made any decision for or against any religious doctrine or practice. The Diocese points to no disputed religious issue which the jury or the district judge in this case was asked to resolve.

[22] Amici cite the teaching of the Supreme Court that under the Constitution, "[t]he law knows no heresy, and is committed to the support of no dogma, the establishment of no sect." Watson v. Jones, 80 U.S. (13 Wall.) 679, 728, 20 L.Ed. 666 (1871). That is now an American truism, but it is unrelated to this appeal. Where a person's beliefs are alleged to give rise to a special legal relationship between him and his church, we may be required to consider with other relevant evidence the nature of that person's beliefs in order properly to determine whether the asserted relationship in fact exists. In doing so, we judge nothing to be heresy, support no dogma, and acknowledge no beliefs or practices of any sect to be the law.

The obvious distinction between the proper use of religious principles as facts and an improper decision that religious principles are true or false bears a certain family resemblance to the more mundane rules of hearsay. Evidence of a statement made out of court may be inadmissible as hearsay to prove the truth of the facts asserted in it, but may be admissible for the non- hearsay purposes of proving that the statement was made or that other facts can be inferred from the making of the statement. See Fed.R.Evid. 801(c). Similarly, the proposition advanced by a particular religion that "a bishop is like a 'shepherd' to the 'flock' of parishioners" cannot be considered by a jury to assess its truth or validity or the extent of its divine approval or authority, but may be considered by the same jury to determine the character of the relationship between a parishioner and his or her bishop.

Finally on this score, we find no merit to the Diocese's claim that the judgment violated the First Amendment by determining the Diocese's obligations to its parishioners as a matter of church doctrine. Martinelli's claim was brought under Connecticut law, not church law; church law is not ours to assess or to enforce. Martinelli's claim neither relied upon nor sought to enforce the duties of the Diocese according to religious beliefs, nor did it require or involve a resolution of whether the Diocese's conduct was consistent with them. The jury's consideration of church doctrine here was both permissible under First Amendment principles and required by Connecticut law.

In Watson v. Jones, a decision involving a dispute over church property that is relied upon by amici and quoted above, the Supreme Court made an observation that applies fully, we think, to the tort case now before us:

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

> [T]he courts when so called on must perform their functions [in cases involving churches] as in other cases.
>
> Religious organizations come before us in the same attitude as other voluntary *432 associations for benevolent or charitable purposes, and their rights of property, or of contract [or, we would add, their liability arising from the commission of a tort], are equally under the protection of the law, and the actions of their members subject to its restraints.... [W]e enter upon [the appeal's] consideration with the satisfaction of knowing that the principles on which we are to decide so much of it as is proper for our decision, are those applicable alike to all of its class, and that our duty is the simple one of applying those principles to the facts before us.

80 U.S. at 714.

IV. Missing Witness Charge

The Diocese's final argument is that it was reversible error for the district court to charge the jury that it could draw a negative inference from the Diocese's failure to produce Father Brett as a witness.

[23][24] We need not determine whether in a diversity case a missing witness charge is governed by federal or state law because here the two standards are similar, [FN10] and the charge, which we review only for abuse of discretion, see United States v. Torres, 845 F.2d 1165, 1170-71 (2d Cir.1988); State v. Lewis, 245 Conn. 779, 813-14, 717 A.2d 1140, 1159 (1998), was plainly proper under both standards.

> FN10. In this circuit, the charge "permits the jury to draw an adverse inference against a party failing to call a witness when the witness's testimony would be material and the witness is peculiarly within the control of that party." United States v. Caccia, 122 F.3d 136, 138 (2d Cir.1997). In determining whether a witness was available to be called by the party, the court considers "all the facts and circumstances bearing upon the witness's relation to the parties, rather than merely on physical presence or accessibility." United States v. Torres, 845 F.2d 1165, 1170 (2d Cir.1988) (internal quotation marks and citation omitted). In Connecticut, an adverse inference instruction may be given where a witness "is available; and ... could reasonably be expected, by his relationship to the party or the issues, to have peculiar or superior information material to the case that, if favorable, the party would produce." State v. Lewis, 245 Conn. 779, 813-14, 717 A.2d 1140, 1159 (1998) (citing Secondino v. New Haven Gas Co., 147 Conn. 672, 165 A.2d 598 (1960)) (quotation and additional citations omitted).

The Diocese's principal complaint is that Martinelli did not show that Father Brett was available to be produced at trial. The record shows, however, that Brett remained incardinated to the Bridgeport Diocese; Diocesan officials were in contact with him as late as in 1993, and after the date that Martinelli brought his claim; the Diocese knew Brett's address, telephone number, and place of employment; and a Ms. Warick, apparently acting on the Diocese's behalf, also had more recent contact with the priest. In light of evidence of this nature, we are unable to conclude that the district court's instruction was an abuse of discretion.

CONCLUSION

For the foregoing reasons, we affirm the district court's order denying the Diocese's Rule 50(b) renewed motion for judgment as a matter of law. We also vacate the judgment and remand for a new trial on the issues of (1) whether Martinelli has met his burden of proof as to his own lack of knowledge of his cause of action and therefore can invoke the tolling statute; and (2) whether the Diocese has demonstrated by clear and convincing evidence that it lacked knowledge of the plaintiff's cause of action, so as to avoid application of the tolling statute on that basis. While a new trial is necessary on these two points, we leave it to the district court's discretion to determine the extent to which these issues may fairly be tried in isolation from other aspects of the case. If the district judge thinks it preferable, she may conduct a broader retrial on remand.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

The parties shall bear their own costs on appeal.

MORAN, District Judge, dissenting:

While I agree with a great deal of the majority's thorough and thoughtful opinion, *433 I must dissent. Even if we accept that the Diocese had a duty to inquire further into Brett's misconduct and thus charge the defendant with an awareness of Martinelli's cause of action based on earlier "storm warnings," [FN1] the fact remains that the Diocese' knowledge of Martinelli's trauma is still imputed knowledge. Bartone, the last word from the Connecticut Supreme Court, is very clear on this point: imputed knowledge is insufficient to toll the statute of limitations.

> FN1. See Dodds v. Cigna Securities, Inc., 12 F.3d 346, 350 (1993) (2d Cir.1993) (noting that sufficient "storm warnings" of fraud will trigger a duty of inquiry and knowledge will be imputed to an investor who does not make such an inquiry), cert. denied, 511 U.S. 1019, 114 S.Ct. 1401, 128 L.Ed.2d 74 (1994).

> Under our case law, to prove fraudulent concealment, the plaintiffs were required to show: (1)[the] defendant's actual awareness, rather than imputed knowledge, of the facts necessary to establish the plaintiffs' cause of action; (2)[the] defendant's intentional concealment of these facts from the plaintiffs; and (3)[the] defendant's concealment of the facts for the purpose of obtaining delay on the plaintiffs' part in filing a complaint on their cause of action.

Bartone v. Robert L. Day, Co., 232 Conn. 527, 533, 656 A.2d 221 (Conn.1995) (emphasis added) (citations omitted).

The majority contends that the actual knowledge requirement can be met here by showing that the Diocese knew of the essential facts giving rise to Martinelli's claim of "breach of duty to investigate and warn." In other words, the first Bartone prong is satisfied if the Diocese had actual knowledge that it failed to investigate hints that Father Brett abused at least one other parish boy. The majority speculates, at 40-41, that on different facts involving an unknown victim the Bartone court would not have stated the test to require defendant's knowledge of the "facts necessary to establish plaintiff's cause of action," and that this second clause "was beside the point that the Bartone court was making."

The hypothesis does not take into account that this formulation of the test was previously stated by the high court in 1986 in a case involving an alleged duty to investigate and warn unidentified victims. In Bound Brook Associates v. City of Norwalk, 198 Conn. 660, 504 A.2d 1047 (Conn.1986), arguably the closest analog to the case at hand, subdivision residents sought damages from the City, its chief building inspector, and other city officials for latent damage to their homes. Part of the subdivision had been constructed on a swamp with a fluctuating water table and settlement problems resulted when the untreated wood pilings on which the homes were built began to decay. All parties agreed that absent a finding of fraudulent concealment, the suits would be time-barred. The Supreme Court set aside the judgment for the homeowners after finding insufficient evidence that the building inspectors intended to conceal information regarding potential piling defects with an intent to delay the plaintiffs' discovery of their cause of action. The Court consequently declined to decide whether the defendants had a duty to investigate and warn (although it is obvious that investigation and enforcement of standards was a core purpose of the municipal department) or whether an intentional failure to act in such circumstances would be sufficient to establish fraudulent concealment. Bound Brook, 198 Conn. at 669-70 & nn.12, 13, 504 A.2d 1047. It is instructive, however, that despite plaintiffs' argument that defendants owed a duty to investigate and warn other homeowners after the inspectors learned of the first three homes needing repiling, the Court did not reassign the burden of proof or reformulate the actual knowledge requirement to focus on defendants' knowledge of the red flags.

"Knowledge" is imputed where it is reasonable to charge a party with information it should know whether by agency, respondeat superior, or breach of a duty to investigate. In this last category, the defendant *434 can always be said to have actual knowledge of the "warning" facts that make imputing knowledge of the ultimate facts a reasonable thing to do. The majority's theory would effectively eliminate the actual knowledge requirement any time there is an allegation that the defendant had a duty to investigate. There is no indication that the Legislature or the Supreme Court of Connecticut would favor liberalizing the limitations period for such claims. On the contrary, by refusing to allow imputed knowledge to satisfy the first prong, the Connecticut Supreme Court has implicitly rejected the theory on which the majority relies. Furthermore, breach of a duty to disclose is foreseeably implicated by Conn. Gen.Stat. § 52-595 , which by its terms involves concealment of actionable information. Breach of a duty to warn or investigate, on the other hand, is more tenuously connected to the purposes of the statute. [FN2]

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

> FN2. See, e.g., Lippitt v. Ashley, 89 Conn. 451, 94 A. 995, 1005 (Conn.1915) (no fraudulent concealment where directors of bank failed to discover treasurer's ongoing embezzlement). We can find no case from Connecticut (or any other jurisdiction) in which defendant's breach of a duty to investigate was sufficient to meet the actual knowledge requirement for fraudulent concealment.

Father Brett's conduct was reprehensible and, assuming Martinelli's account is accurate, I don't doubt that it has caused him significant pain. This is not a claim against Brett, however; nor is it a claim against the parish leadership. It is actually a rather remote claim against the regional diocese. The result here will mean that if an organization may owe a fiduciary duty to someone, anyone, it must investigate any possible source of harm and disclose the details to all potential plaintiffs. If it does not, the statute of limitations will offer no protection when the unknown claim ripens years later. Given that the source of the duty to investigate here is not the master-servant relationship with Brett but the Diocese' relationship with Martinelli, what new obligations does this holding impose on boys and girls clubs, and YMCAs, and other organizations who regularly shelter children at risk? Moreover, if awareness that someone might or would be harmed is the standard, then anyone injured in an auto accident who claims defective design can now argue that the manufacturer knew of the potential for injury, if not the victim, and the statute will be tolled. Back pains may materialize years after a collision.

We should not let this sad case disrupt the carefully balanced tolling framework established by the State of Connecticut. As the United States Supreme Court explained in Johnson v. Railway Express Agency, Inc.:

> Any period of limitation ... is understood fully only in the context of the various circumstances that suspend it from running against a particular cause of action. Although any statute of limitations is necessarily arbitrary, the length of the period allowed for instituting suit inevitably reflects a value judgment concerning the point at which the interests in favor of protecting valid claims are outweighed by the interests in prohibiting the prosecution of stale ones. In virtually all statutes of limitations the chronological length of the limitation period is interrelated with provisions regarding tolling, revival, and questions of application.

421 U.S. 454, 463-464, 95 S.Ct. 1716, 44 L.Ed.2d 295 (1975). See also Spinozzi v. ITT Sheraton Corp., 174 F.3d 842, 848 (7th Cir.1999) (("[A]ccrual and tolling rules ... are reciprocals of the length of the period. A short limitations period can be offset by generous accrual and tolling rules, and a long limitations period offset by miserly ones")). The Connecticut legislature gave victims an extraordinary 17 year period after the age of majority in which to bring claims regarding sexual abuse. In doing so, it has rendered its "value judgment concerning the point at which the interests in favor of protecting valid claims are outweighed by the interests in prohibiting the prosecution of stale ones." Johnson, 421 U.S. at 463-464, 95 S.Ct. 1716. I do not *435 share the majority's belief that the State Supreme Court would follow such an attenuated path to release Martinelli from his obligation to timely file his claim or to prove tolling by "clear, precise, and unequivocal evidence." Bartone, 656 A.2d at 224.

As a federal court sitting in diversity, we should be circumspect with our predictions, particularly if they expand the scope of liability. See Guaranty Trust Co.of N.Y. v. York, 326 U.S. 99, 105, 65 S.Ct. 1464, 89 L.Ed. 2079 (1945) ("In giving federal courts 'cognizance' of equity suits in cases of diversity jurisdiction, Congress never gave, nor did the federal courts every claim, the power to deny substantive rights created by State law or to create substantive rights denied by State law."); Todd v. Societe Bic, S.A., 21 F.3d 1402, 1412 (7th Cir.) ("When given a choice between an interpretation of Illinois law which reasonably restricts liability, and one which greatly expands liability, we should choose the narrower and more reasonable path (at least until the Illinois Supreme Court tells us differently)."), cert. denied, 513 U.S. 947, 115 S.Ct. 359, 130 L.Ed.2d 312 (1994). If we guess wrong, and we sometimes do, [FN3] we "inevitably skew the decisions of [those] who rely on [our opinion] and inequitably affect the losing federal litigant who cannot appeal the decision to the state's supreme court; [we] may even mislead lower state courts that may be inclined to accept federal predictions as applicable precedent." Sloviter, supra, 78 Va.L.Rev. at 1681, quoted in Lexington Ins. Co. v. Rugg & Knopp, Inc., 165 F.3d 1087, 1092-93 (7th Cir.1999). Worse, we will have intruded on the exclusive prerogative of the State to control the development of its laws. See Factors Etc., Inc. v. Pro Arts, Inc., 652 F.2d 278, 282 (2d Cir.1981) (noting that courts sitting in diversity should seek to minimize any "interruption of the orderly development and authoritative exposition of state law."); Torres v. Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co., Inc., 857 F.2d 1293, 1296 (9th Cir.1988) ("We hesitate prematurely to extend the law of products liability in the absence of an indication from the Arizona courts or the Arizona legislature that such an extension would be desirable. We have limited discretion in a diversity case 'to adopt untested legal theories brought under the rubric of state law.' "). Given my belief that the majority has guessed wrong, I must respectfully dissent.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

FN3. See, e.g., Dolores K. Sloviter, A Federal Judge Views Diversity Jurisdiction through the Lens of Federalism, 78 Va.L.Rev. 1671, 1679-80 & nn.48-51 (1992) (collecting erroneous "Erie guesses" in the 3rd Circuit); Poindexter v. Armstrong, 934 F.Supp. 1052, 1056 (W.D.Ark.1994) (noting that 8th Circuit Court of Appeals was "apparently mistaken" in light of subsequent decision by Arkansas Supreme Court); DeWeerth v. Baldinger (DeWeerth II), 38 F.3d 1266, 1272 (2d Cir.1994) (acknowledging that New York Court of Appeals subsequently applied a different standard on applicable statute of limitations from the one predicted by the Second Circuit, but refusing any post-judgment relief for the plaintiff because the doctrine of finality of judgments outweighed "any injustice DeWeerth believes she has suffered by litigating her case in the federal as opposed to the state forum."). In DeWeerth II, at least, the plaintiff had chosen the federal forum. Here, the Diocese never had the opportunity to secure a state court interpretation of Conn. Gen.Stat. § 52-595.

196 F.3d 409

Briefs and Other Related Documents (Back to top)

• 1999 WL 33628829 (Appellate Brief) Brief of the United States Catholic Conference, the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints, the Rev. Clifton Kirkpatrick as Stated Clerk of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), the General Conference of Seventh-Day Adventist s, the General Council on Finance and Administration of the United States Methodist Church, the First Church of Christ, Scientist, and the Evangelical Lutheran Church in America, as Amici Curiae in Support of Defendant-Appellant's Petition for Rehea (Nov. 30, 1999)

• 1998 WL 34088286 (Appellate Brief) Reply Brief for Defendant-Appellant (Nov. 04, 1998)

• 1998 WL 34088284 (Appellate Brief) Brief for Plaintiff-Appellee Frank Martinelli (Oct. 21, 1998)

• 1998 WL 34088283 (Appellate Brief) Brief for Defendant-Appellant (Aug. 31, 1998)

• 1998 WL 34088285 (Appellate Brief) Brief of the United States Catholic Conference, the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints, the Rev. Clifton Kirkpatrick As Stated Clerk of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), the General Conference of Seventh-Day Adventist s, the General Council on Finance and Administration of the United Methodist Church, the First Church of Christ, Scientist, and the Evangelical Lutheran Church in America. As Amici Curiae in Support of Appellant Bridgeport Roman Catholic Diocesan Co (Aug. 31, 1998)

• 1998 WL 34089768 (Appellate Brief) Brief for Defendant-Appellant (Aug. 31, 1998)

END OF DOCUMENT

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

EXHIBIT 35

C
Only the Westlaw citation is currently available.

NOTICE: NOT DESIGNATED FOR PUBLICATION. UNDER TX R RAP RULE 47.7, UNPUBLISHED OPINIONS HAVE NO PRECEDENTIAL VALUE BUT MAY BE CITED WITH THE. NOTATION "(not designated for publication)."

Court of Appeals of Texas, Dallas.

Maria G. MARTINEZ, Appellant
v.
PRIMERA ASEMBLEA DE DIOS, INC., Appellee

No. 05-96-01458-CV

May 15, 1998.

On Appeal from the 193rd District Court Dallas County, Texas Trial Court Cause No. 96-01054-L.

Before Justices LAGARDE, KINKEADE, and Morris.

OPINION

Justice LAGARDE.

*1 Primera Asemblea de Dios, Inc., a church located in Grand Prairie, terminated the membership of Maria G. Martinez after she alleged that Jonathan Armenta, a church elder, sexually assaulted her. Thereafter, Martinez sued the church alleging that (1) the church improperly terminated her membership, and (2) the church's negligence proximately caused the sexual assaults. [FN1] The church moved for summary judgment on two discrete grounds. First, the church argued that the Free Exercise and Establishment Clauses of the First Amendment of the United States Constitution prohibited the trial court from exercising jurisdiction over Martinez's suit. Second, the church argued that, as a matter of law, it can not be held liable for the tortious conduct of Armenta. Apparently agreeing with the church's jurisdictional argument, the trial court dismissed Martinez's suit in its entirety. Martinez appeals the trial court's dismissal order. We conclude that the trial court (1) lacked jurisdiction over Martinez's claims concerning her membership status and (2) had jurisdiction over Martinez's negligence claims. Accordingly, we affirm that portion of the trial court's order dismissing Martinez's claims regarding her membership status, and we reverse that portion of the trial court's dismissal order relating to Martinez's negligence claims and remand only those claims to the trial court for further proceedings.

FN1. Martinez's parents and husband also sued the church. Martinez, however, is the sole appellant.

MARTINEZ'S MEMBERSHIP STATUS

In reviewing this summary judgment, we follow well established rules articulated by the supreme court in Nixon v. Mr. Property Management Co., 690 S.W.2d 546, 548-49 (Tex.1985). Taking evidence favorable to Martinez, the nonmovant, as true, the summary judgment record reflects that between 1991 and 1994, Martinez and Armenta had a number of encounters that Martinez characterizes as sexual assaults. [FN2] Martinez reported Armenta's conduct to the church pastor and members of the board of directors. Thereafter, the board of directors wrote Martinez a letter informing her that her church membership had been terminated.

FN2. In her affidavit in opposition to the church's motion for summary judgment, Martinez states that Armenta "repeatedly committed sexual assault against" her. The only encounter that Martinez describes with particularity is the first encounter. Martinez averred: "I was the choir secretary and Jonathan Armenta had assisted me in getting that appointment. I was helping him and he asked me to turn out the lights in the ladies room, and when I emerged from the ladies room he approached me, began putting his hands on me and kissed me. I turned and left."

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

Martinez decided to contest the termination. She reviewed the church's constitution and rules to determine the appeal procedure and noted the following:

> Any member that has been expelled must be notified according to action taken by the Pastor and Directive Table. The secretary of the assembly should notify and make known that he has a right to appeal. If the expelled member appeals to the directive table asking it to reconsider its action and a reintegration is denied, the expelled member will also have the right to appeal to the congregation. The action of the assembly manifested by majority of vote will be considered final. Mat. 18: 15-18; Rom. 16: 17, 18; I Cor. 5: 1-5; II Tes. 3: 6- 15. (Note: The appeal is related to persons who believe to be right with God and are not violating the requirements that must characterize a Christian, or of a member of the assembly). [FN3]

> FN3. The church's constitution and rules are written in Spanish. Martinez translated them into English and attached them to her response to the church's motion for summary judgment.

*2 In accordance with the above provision, Martinez orally requested the opportunity to address the entire congregation regarding her membership. Additionally, her attorneys communicated the same request in writing.

When the church did not respond to either request, Martinez filed this lawsuit. In her live petition, Martinez requests the following relief vis-a-vis her membership status: (1) "the court enter a final and permanent injunction, enjoining defendant from asserting any validity of any action taken in terminating the membership of plaintiffs;" and (2) "on final trial, the court declare that all actions taken on or about May 28, 1994, in terminating the membership of plaintiffs are null and void; and that plaintiffs are valid members of the church." [FN4]

> FN4. At oral argument, Martinez's counsel stated that Martinez was not seeking a judicial declaration regarding the status of her membership but instead only seeks to have the trial court order the church to allow her to address the congregation. Martinez's live petition belies her counsel's representation at oral argument because it clearly requests that the trial court declare that Martinez is a "valid member of the church." The only portion of Martinez's live petition that is conceivably consistent with counsel's statement at oral argument is Martinez's general prayer which requests "all other relief, both at law and in equity, to which these plaintiffs are due and owing and will ever pray."

The First Amendment to the United States Constitution, applied to the states through the Fourteenth Amendment, provides: "Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof." U.S. Const. amends. I, XIV. Over a century ago, the United States Supreme Court determined that when the highest authority of a church judicatory has decided questions of discipline, faith, or ecclesiastical rule, custom, or law, secular civil courts must accept such decisions as final and binding:

> The right to organize voluntary religious associations to assist in the expression and dissemination of any religious doctrine, and to create tribunals for the decision of controverted questions of faith within the association, and for the ecclesiastical government of all the individual members, congregations, and officers within the general association, is unquestioned. All who unite themselves to such a body do so with an implied consent to this government, and are bound to submit to it. But it would be vain consent and would lead to total subversion of such religious bodies, if any one aggrieved by one of their decisions could appeal to the secular courts and have them reversed. It is of the essence of these religious unions, and of their right to establish tribunals for the decision of questions arising among themselves, that those decisions should be binding in all cases of ecclesiastical cognizance, subject only to such appeals as the organism itself provides for.

Watson v. Jones, 80 U.S. (13 Wall.) 679, 728-29, 20 L.Ed. 666 (1871). More recently, the Supreme Court followed its holding in Watson in Serbian East Orthodox Diocese v. Milivojevich, 426 U.S. 696, 708-09, 96 S.Ct. 2372, 49 L.Ed.2d 151 (1976).

Martinez argues that the holding of Watson and

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

Milivojevich applies only to churches of a hierarchical polity and not to churches of a congregational polity. As to the issues presented in this case, we disagree. A hierarchical church is one where the religious ecclesiastical body is but a subordinate member of some general church organization in which there are superior ecclesiastic tribunals with a general and ultimate power of control more or less complete, and some supreme judicatory over the whole membership of that organization. Mangum v. Swearingen, 565 S.W.2d 957, 958 (Tex.App.--San Antonio 1978, writ ref'd n.r.e.). A congregational church is a religious congregation which, by the nature of its organization is strictly independent of other ecclesiastic organizations, as far as church government is concerned, and owes no fealty or obligation to any higher authority. Id. Thus, for example, a catholic or methodist church would be hierarchical whereas a baptist church or jewish synagogue would be congregational. For purposes of this opinion, we accept Martinez's representation that the appellee church, which is affiliated with Assemblies of God, is congregational rather than hierarchical.

*3 In Hill v. Sargent, 615 S.W.2d 300, 301 (Tex.Civ.App.--Dallas 1981, no writ), this Court, citing Watson and Milivojevich, recognized that the "civil courts of this country are prohibited by the First Amendment from interfering "in the purely ecclesiastical or administrative affairs of the church." Hill affirmed the trial court's refusal to entertain a civil suit that would have required the court to determine whether a particular church meeting was proper under the church's written laws and constitutions. This Court affirmed the trial court's dismissal of the cause of action for lack of jurisdiction under the First Amendment because "for us to make that determination would require the interpretation of ambiguous religious law and usage." Id. at 301. Although this Court recognized that Watson and Milivojevich concerned churches of hierarchical polity, and the church in Hill was of a congregational polity, this Court concluded that there was no "meaningful distinction between the two forms of government for the purpose of applying the First Amendment." Id. at 302 note 1. Similarly in this case, for the purpose of applying the First Amendment, we conclude that it is immaterial whether appellee is a congregational or a hierarchical church. The issue is whether the redress of Martinez's complaint would result in the civil courts interfering "in purely ecclesiastical or administrative affairs of the church." See Hill, 615 S.W.2d at 301.

The civil courts cannot redress Martinez's membership status complaint without entangling themselves in ecclesiastical or religious matters. The appeal provision in the church's constitution and rules provides that the appeal is "related to persons who believe to be right with God and are not violating the requirements that must characterize a Christian, or a member of the assembly." The provision references the books of Matthew, Romans, I Corinthians, and II Thessalonians. Thus, to redress Martinez's membership status claim, the civil courts would be required to interpret Christian scriptures rather than neutral principles of law. The trial court, and this Court, are without jurisdiction to engage in such a review. See Hill, 615 S.W.2d at 302. Accordingly, we conclude that the trial court properly dismissed for want of jurisdiction Martinez's cause of action regarding her membership status. [FN5] We affirm the trial court's order of dismissal relating to that claim.

FN5. We express no opinion on whether a motion for summary judgment is the proper procedural vehicle for challenging a trial court's jurisdiction. Compare Patterson v. Southwestern Baptist Seminary, 858 S.W.2d 602 (Tex.App.--Fort Worth 1993, no writ) (granting summary judgment on jurisdictional grounds) with Green v. United Pentecostal Church, 899 S.W.2d 28 (Tex.App.--Austin 1995, writ denied) (granting church's motion to dismiss for want of jurisdiction).

MARTINEZ'S TORT CLAIMS

Martinez's live petition asserted several negligence-based causes of action against the church relating to Jonathan Armenta. [FN6] The trial court apparently also dismissed Martinez's negligence-based claims for want of jurisdiction. [FN7] The Free Exercise clause has never immunized clergy or churches from all causes of action alleging tortious conduct. See Tilton v. Marshall, 925 S.W.2d 672, 677 (Tex.1996).

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

Religious groups may be held liable in tort for secular acts. Assuming jurisdiction over Martinez's negligence- based claims will not entangle the trial court in the ecclesiastical affairs of the church. Accordingly, we conclude that the trial court has jurisdiction over Martinez's negligence-based claims. We express no opinion on the merits of Martinez's negligence-based claims but, instead, remand those claims to the trial court for its consideration of the merits.

FN6. Martinez alleged, among other things, that the church negligently hired Armenta, failed to do a background check on him, failed to have him undergo psychiatric testing prior to hiring him, failed to properly supervise him, failed to train him, and negligently placed him in a position wherein he would be able to take advantage of women in a vulnerable state.

FN7. The order granting the church's summary judgment decrees that the motion for summary judgment is granted as to all claims and the court "further orders that this cause of action be dismissed in its entirety." Had the trial court addressed the merits of Martinez's negligence-based claims and concluded in favor of the church, it would have entered a judgment that Martinez take nothing on those claims.

*4 In conclusion, we affirm the trial court's dismissal order for want of jurisdiction insofar as it relates to Martinez's membership status claim. [FN8] We reverse the trial court's dismissal order insofar as it relates to Martinez's negligence claims and we remand those claims to the trial court for further proceedings consistent with this opinion.

FN8. We affirm the trial court's dismissal of all claims that are in any way related to Martinez's status as a member of Primera Asemblea de Dios, Inc. or concerning her right to appeal the church's termination of her membership, including those claims that Martinez has couched in terms of negligence such as "negligently terminating the membership of plaintiffs."

1998 WL 242412 (Tex.App.-Dallas)

END OF DOCUMENT

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

EXHIBIT 36

90 S.Ct. 499
24 L.Ed.2d 582
(Cite as: 396 U.S. 367, 90 S.Ct. 499)

Supreme Court of the United States

The MARYLAND AND VIRGINIA ELDERSHIP OF the CHURCHES OF GOD et al.
v.
The CHURCH OF GOD AT SHARPSBURG, INC., et al.

No. 414.

Jan. 19, 1970.

Actions by regional church against local churches and others to prevent local churches from withdrawing from regional church and to determine which of two factions should control local churches and their property and corporations. The Circuit Court, Washington County, Maryland, dismissed the complaint and regional church appealed. Thejudgment was affirmed, 249 Md. 650, 241 A.2d 691, and regional church appealed. The United States Supreme Court, 393 U.S. 528, 89 S.Ct. 850, 21 L.Ed.2d 750, vacated the judgment and remanded the cause. The Court of Appeals again affirmed, 254 Md. 162, 254 A.2d 162, and an appeal was taken. The Supreme Court then held that since the Maryland Court of Appeals, resolution of the dispute involved no inquiry into religious doctrine, the appeal of the regional church, which argued primarily that the Maryland statute, as applied, deprived the regional church of property in violation of the First Amendment, had to be dismissed for want of a substantial federal question.

Appeal dismissed.

West Headnotes

Federal Courts ⇐505
170Bk505 Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 106k394(3))

Since state court's resolution of dispute between regional church and two secessionist congregations involved no inquiry into religious doctrine, appeal of the regional church, which argued primarily that the state statute, as applied, deprived the regional church of property in violation of the First Amendment, had to be dismissed for want of a substantial federal question. Code Md.1957, art. 23, §§ 256-270; U.S.C.A.Const. Amend. 1.

*499 *367 Alfred L. Scanlan, James H. Booser and Charles O. Fisher, for appellants.

Arthur G. Lambert, for appellees.

PER CURIAM.

In resolving a church property dispute between appellants, representing the General Eldership, and appellees, two secessionist congregations, the Maryland Court of Appeals relied upon provisions of state statutory law governing the holding of property by religious corporations, [FN1] upon language in the deeds conveying the properties in question to the local church corporations, upon the terms of the charters of the corporations, and upon provisions in the constitution of the General Eldership pertinent to the ownership and control of church property. 254 Md. 162, 254 A.2d 162 (1969) . [FN2] Appellants *500 argue primarily that the statute, as applied, deprived the General Eldership 368 of property in violation of the First Amendment. Since, however, the Maryland court's resolution of the dispute involved no inquiry into religious doctrine, appellees' motion to dismiss is granted, and the appeal is dismissed for want of a substantial federal question. It is so ordered.

FN1. Md.Ann.Code, Art. 23, ss 256--270 (1966 Repl.Vol.).

FN2. The Maryland court reached the same decision in May 1968. 249 Md. 650, 241 A.2d 691. This Court vacated and remanded the case 'for further consideration in light of Presbyterian Church in the United States v. Mary Elizabeth Blue Hull Memorial Presbyterian Church * * *.' 393 U.S. 528, 89 S.Ct. 850, 21 L.Ed.2d 750 (1969).

Appeal dismissed.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

Mr. Justice BRENNAN, with whom Mr. Justice DOUGLAS and Mr. Justice MARSHALL join, concurring.

I join the per curiam but add these comments. We held in Presbyterian Church in the United States v. Mary Elizabeth Blue Hull Memorial Presbyterian Church, 393 U.S. 440, 449, 89 S.Ct. 601, 606, 21 L.Ed.2d 658 (1969), that 'First Amendment values are plainly jeopardized when church property litigation is made to turn on the resolution by civil courts of controversies over religious doctrine and practice. If civil courts undertake to resolve such controversies in order to adjudicate the property dispute, the hazards are ever present of inhibiting the free development of religious doctrine and of implicating secular interests in matters of purely eccelesiastical concern. * * * (T)he (First) Amendment therefore commands civil courts to decide church property disputes without resolving underlying controversies over religious doctrine.' It follows that a State may adopt any one of various approaches for settling church property disputes so long as it involves no consideration of doctrinal matters, whether the ritual and liturgy of worship or the tenets of faith.

Thus the States may adopt the approach of Watson v. Jones, 13 Wall. 679, 20 L.Ed. 666 (1872), and enforce the property decisions made within a church of congregational polity 'by a majority of its members or by such other local organism as it may ahve instituted for the purpose of ecclesiastical government,' id., at 724 and within a 369 church of hierarchical polity by the highest authority that has ruled on the dispute at issue, [FN1] unless 'express terms' in the 'instrument by which the property is held' condition the property's use or control in a specified manner. [FN2] Under Watson civil courts do not inquire whether the relevant church governing body has power under religious law to control the property in question. Such a determination, unlike the identification of the governing body, frequently necessitates the interpretation of ambiguous religious law and usage. To permit civil courts to probe deeply enough into the allocation of power within a church so as to decide where religious law places control over the use of church property 501 would violate the First Amendment in much the same manner as civil determination of religious doctrine. [FN3] Similarly, where the identity of the governing body or bodies that exercise general authority within a church is a matter of substantial controversy, civil courts are not to make the inquiry into religious law and usage that would be 370 essential to the resolution of the controversy. In other words, the use of the Watson approach is consonant with the prohibitions of the First Amendment only if the appropriate church governing body can be determined without the resolution of doctrinal questions and without extensive inquiry into religious policy.

FN1. Under the Watson definition, supra, at 722--723, congregational polity exists when 'a religious congregation * * *, by the nature of its organization, is strictly independent of other ecclesiastical associations, and so far as church government is concerned, owes no fealty or obligation to any higher authority.' Hierarchical polity, on the other hand, exists when 'the religious congregation * * * is but a subordinate member of some general church organization in which there are superior ecclesiastical tribunals with a general and ultimate power of control more or less complete, in some supreme judicatory over the whole membership of that general organization.'

FN2. Id., at 722. Except that 'express terms' cannot be enforced if enforcement is constitutionally impermissible under Presbyterian Church. Any language in Watson, supra, at 722--723, that may be read to the contrary must be disapproved. Only express conditions that may be effected without consideration of doctrine are civilly enforceable.

FN3. Except that civil tribunals may examine church rulings alleged to be the product of 'fraud, collusion, or arbitrariness.' Gonzalez v. Roman Catholic Archibishop, 280 U.S. 1, 16, 50 S.Ct. 5, 7, 74 L.Ed. 131 (1929).

'(N)eutral principles of law, developed for use in all

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

property disputes,' Presbyterian Church, supra, 393 U.S. 440 at 449, 89 S.Ct. at 606, provide another means for resolving litigation over religious property. Under the 'formal title' doctrine, civil courts can determine ownership by studying deeds, reverter clauses, and general state corporation laws. Again, however, general principles of property law may not be relied upon if their application requires civil courts to resolve doctrinal issues. For example, provisions in deeds or in a denomination's constitution for the reversion of local church property to the general church, if conditioned upon a finding of departure from doctrine, could not be civilly enforced. [FN4]

> FN4. Thus a State that normally resolves disputes over religious property by applying general principles of property law would have to use a different method in cases involving such provisions, perhaps that defined in Watson. By the same token, States following the Watson approach would have to find another ground for decision, perhaps the application of general property law, when identification of the relevant church governing body is impossible without immersion in doctrinal issues or extensive inquiry into church polity.

A third possible approach is the passage of special statutes governing church property arrangements in a manner that precludes state interference in doctrine. Such statutes must be carefully drawn to leave control of ecclesiastical policy, as well as doctrine, to church governing bodies. [FN5] Kedroff v. St. Nicholas Cathedral, 344 U.S. 94, 73 S.Ct. 143, 98 L.Ed. 120 (1952).

> FN5. See, e.g., Goodson v. Northside Bible Church, 261 F.Supp. 99 (D.C.S.D.Ala. 1966), aff'd, 387 F.2d 534 (C.A.5th Cir. 1967).

90 S.Ct. 499, 396 U.S. 367, 24 L.Ed.2d 582

END OF DOCUMENT

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

EXHIBIT 37

130 A.2d 881
(Cite as: 44 N.J.Super. 468, 130 A.2d 881)

C

Superior Court of New Jersey.
Appellate Division.

James McBRIDE, Plaintiff-Appellant,
v.
Lloyd W. McCORKLE, Principal Keeper of the New Jersey State Prison, Defendant-Respondent.

No. A--121.

Argued April 8, 1957.
Decided April 15, 1957.

Proceeding brought for review of determination that prisoner was not being subjected to cruel and unusual punishment in violation of his constitutional rights. The Appellate Division, Goldmann, S.J.A.D., held that prisoner who, in common with the other 30 men in the segregation wing of the State Prison, was prevented from attending Mass on Sundays and Holy Days as prescribed by Roman Catholic Church, was not thereby subjected to cruel and unusual punishment or deprived of his constitutional right of free exercise of his religion.

Appeal dismissed.

West Headnotes

[1] Prisons ⇐13(3)
310k13(3) Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 310k13)

Whether Chancery Division was proper forum before which to bring prisoner's claim, that denial to him of right to attend Mass constituted cruel and unusual punishment, would depend upon existence of adequate remedy elsewhere.

[2] Prisons ⇐4(1)
310k4(1) Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 310k4)

Actions, decisions and rules of Principal Keeper of State Prison were in fact those of a "state administrative agency". R.R. 4:88-8; R.S. 30:1-2, 7, 30:4-1, N.J.S.A.

[3] Sentencing and Punishment ⇐1553
350Hk1553 Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 110k1213.10(4), 110k1213)

[3] Prisons ⇐13(5)
310k13(5) Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 310k13)

Prisoner's refusal to obey orders and his repeated use of foul and obscene language to prison officials merited his continued confinement in segregation wing of State Prison, and he was not thereby subjected to cruel and unusual punishment.

[4] Prisons ⇐4(3)
310k4(3) Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 310k4)

Courts are not required to supervise administration of prison rules and regulations and prison disciplinary procedures, and reasonable discretion must be accorded Principal Keeper of State Prison in discharging his duties; but there must be a rule of reason in all prison discipline, and if Principal Keeper treats prisoner arbitrarily, or deprives him of constitutional rights, and such treatment or deprivation is uncorrected by administrative action or review, prisoner has a judicial remedy.

[5] Constitutional Law ⇐84.5(14)
92k84.5(14) Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 92k84)

[5] Sentencing and Punishment ⇐1553
350Hk1553 Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 110k1213.10(2), 110k1213)

Prisoner who, in common with other 30 men in segregation wing of State Prison was prevented from attending Mass on Sundays and Holy Days as prescribed by Roman Catholic Church, was not thereby subjected to cruel and unusual punishment or deprived of his constitutional right of free exercise of his religion.

[6] Constitutional Law ⇐84.1
92k84.1 Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 92k84(1), 92k84)

[6] Constitutional Law ⇐274(3.1)
92k274(3.1) Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 92k274(3), 92k274)

The First Amendment to the Federal Constitution

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

guarantees free exercise of religion and, coupled with Fourteenth Amendment, also protects citizens from state action prohibiting such exercise. U.S.C.A.Const. Amends. 1, 14; Const.1947, Art. I, par. 3.

[7] Constitutional Law ⇦84.1
92k84.1 Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 92k84(1), 92k84)

Freedom to believe is absolute, but freedom to exercise one's belief is not and must be considered in light of the general public welfare; and attendance at Mass on Sundays and Holy Days as prescribed by Roman Catholic Church is "exercise" of religion. U.S.C.A.Const. Amends. 1, 14; Const.1947, Art. I, par. 3.

470 882 Hamilton F. Kean, Newark, for appellant.

Eugene T. Urbaniak, Deputy Atty. Gen., for respondent (Grover C. Richman, Jr., Atty. Gen., attorney).

Before Judges GOLDMANN, FREUND, and CONFORD.

The opinion of the court was delivered by

GOLDMANN, S.J.A.D.

Plaintiff is now serving a life sentence at the New Jersey State Prison as an habitual offender. In October 1956 he filed what was in effect a petition in the Chancery Division praying that an order to show cause be issued directing defendant McCorkle, then Principal Keeper of the State Prison, to explain why he was subjecting plaintiff to cruel and unusual punishment through prolonged 'solitary confinement' and denying him free exercise of his religious beliefs through attendance at Mass on Sundays and Holy Days as prescribed by the Roman Catholic Church. Defendant moved to dismiss on the ground *471 that the matter was reviewable only in the Appellate Division under R.R. 4:88--8. The Chancery Division thereupon ordered the proceedings transferred to the Appellate Division 'for its consideration' as to whether the matter was reviewable under that rule.

In his initial brief in this court, filed Pro se, plaintiff stated that 'he is not questioning the reason or reasons as to why he is not released from solitary (sic) confinement nor * * * attacking the rules or regulations of the Board of Managers of the Prison or * * * of the State Board of Control of Institutions and Agencies,' but was 'only seeking an 'order to show cause' why the Principal Keeper of the New Jersey State Prison should not be restrained from invoking cruel and inhuman and unusual punishment upon the plaintiff, because the Principal Keeper has prevented in the past and is now preventing the plaintiff * * * the right to the free exercise of religious beliefs and attendance of Mass on Sundays and Holy days as prescribed by the Roman Catholic Church and nothing else.' The Attorney-General, acting on behalf of defendant, then filed an answering brief questioning whether matters relating to the disciplining of an inmate for infraction of prison rules are reviewable under R.R. 4:88--8, but in any event arguing that defendant was not subjected to cruel and unusual punishment or deprived of his religious liberties in violation of the State or Federal Constitution. Attached to this brief was an appendix, certified by the Attorney-General, setting out plaintiff's disciplinary record at the State Prison in detail.

The appendix reveals that plaintiff is not in solitary confinement, as he claims, but has been kept in the segregation wing of the Prison. Although inmates in segregation do not have contact with the general inmate population, they do have contact with each other in the segregation exercise yard and are permitted exercise outdoors for two hours each day, weather permitting. If their conduct warrants, they are permitted commutation credits for good behavior as provided in R.S. 30:4--140, N.J.S.A., and may take special *472 correspondence school courses through the educational department. They have the same mail privileges as other inmates, and visiting privileges are the same except that visitors must come at stated hours. The case of each inmate in segregation is reviewed once each month by the supervising officer in the custodial department, at which time a decision is made as to whether the inmate 883 may be returned to the general prison population. Inmates in segregation are not allowed to accompany the general prison population to chapel for religious services on Sunday and other appropriate days, but a chaplain of each religious faith is available to such men to visit them in their cells for spiritual guidance, including Holy Communion. Any request made by plaintiff for spiritual assistance would be granted. None of these matters relating to men in segregation is denied. We were informed at oral argument that there are presently some 30 men in the segregation wing of the State Prison.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

Following the coming in of plaintiff's reply brief this court, on its own motion, appointed Hamilton F. Kean, Esquire, to brief and argue the appeal on behalf of the prisoner. Counsel was instructed to argue, among such other points as he might desire to raise, whether this appeal properly comes before the Appellate Division under R.R. 4:88--8 and whether the denial to plaintiff of attendance at Mass amounted to what he describes as cruel and unusual punishment. This court desires to express its appreciation to assigned counsel for the thoroughness and excellence of his presentation.

The following facts are not in dispute:

(1) Plaintiff has been in the segregation wing since October 1952. Defendant alleges he was so confined because he participated in the riot in No. 7 Wing at the State Prison on October 12, 1952; plaintiff, however, denies such participation. Plaintiff's disciplinary record shows no acts of misconduct between October 1952 and July 29, 1954, but lists some 15 violations since then which have resulted in a continuation of confinement in segregation. Most of these charges relate to the use of 'foul, obscene and indecent language' to prison officials and plaintiff's refusal to obey orders.

*473 (2) While in segregation plaintiff has not been permitted to attend Mass in the prison chapel along with the nonsegregated inmates. The Catholic chaplain will not hold Mass in the segregation wing in the absence of a chapel.

(3) The Catholic chaplain has at all times been available to plaintiff and others in segregation, to offer spiritual advice, guidance and counsel as well as the benefits of the Holy Sacraments.

(4) Plaintiff never complained to or sought a hearing before the Board of Managers of the State Prison as to the matters now complained of, prior to the institution of these proceedings. He has since--as noted below.

Taking advantage of the opportunity afforded under our order assigning counsel, plaintiff's attorney not only attacks as unconstitutional the action of the prison authorities in prohibiting plaintiff from attending Mass on Sundays and other Holy Days, but also their determination that he should be kept in segregation.

[1][2] We first consider whether the Appellate Division is the proper forum for judicial relief under R.R. 4:88--8, which provides that review of 'the final decision or action of any state administrative agency'--other than the Workmen's Compensation Division and the Wage Collection Section of the Wage and Hour Bureau of the Department of Labor and Industry--shall be by appeal to this court.

The State Prison is one of the institutions within the organizational frame of the New Jersey Department of Institutions and Agencies. That Department is headed by the State Board of Control, with the Commissioner of Institutions and Agencies as principal executive officer. N.J.S.A. 30:1--2, N.J.S.A. The State Board of Control has 'complete and exclusive jurisdiction, supreme and final authority, and the requisite power to accomplish its aims and purposes in and upon' the State Prison, among other institutions and agencies. R.S. 30:1--7, N.J.S.A. R.S. 30:4--1, N.J.S.A. provides for the appointment by the State 884 Board of Control of a board of managers for each institution or agency within the Department, and R.S. 30:4--4, N.J.S.A. states that 'Subject to the supervision, control and ultimate authority of the state board, the management, direction and control of the several *474 institutions and noninstitutional agencies shall be vested in the several boards of managers who shall be responsible to the state board for their efficient, economical and scientific operation.'

Under the provisions of R.S. 30:4--5, N.J.S.A., the chief executive officer of each institution or agency shall be its executive and administrative officer and, subject to the rules and regulations adopted by the board of managers, be responsible to that board for 'the proper conduct and management of the institution or agency, * * * and the care and treatment of the inmates.' Finally, R.S. 30:4--6, N.J.S.A. provides in part that

'* * * The principal keeper of the state prison * * * shall receive from the hands of the sheriff or other proper officer every person sentenced to imprisonment in his institution and safely keep him therein according to law and the rules and regulations of the institution until lawfully discharged therefrom. * * *'

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

Plaintiff argues that whether the Principal Keeper is in fact a 'state administrative agency' would appear to be immaterial, for under the statutory scheme outlined above, he operates the State Prison under the direct control of the Board of Managers which, in turn, is under the control of and responsible to the State Board of Control, the chief component of the Department of Institutions and Agencies. Even though he may not technically be a 'state administrative agency,' his actions, decisions and rules are in fact those of a state administrative agency.

Since the burden of plaintiff's argument is that he has the remedy at law he presently pursues for any wrongs suffered, he consistently urges that the Chancery Division was not the proper forum for him to bring his action initially. This conclusion depends, of course, upon the existence of an adequate remedy elsewhere. An injunction may not be the most appropriate remedy where the execution of a criminal sentence or the violation of personal rights is involved. McClintock, Equity, 426, 428 (1936); Note, 'Habeas Corpus, Coram Nobis, Remedies Available to Validly Sentenced Prisoners Who Are Mistreated by State *475 Prison Authorities,' 33 Neb.L.Rev. 434, 436 (1954). There is some precedent for the granting of equitable relief upon the threatened deprivation of constitutional rights of a prisoner. Davis v. Berry, 216 F. 413, 418 (D.C.S.D.Iowa 1914). Plaintiff contends, however, that if the relief requested in the instant case can be obtained from proceedings in the nature of Certiorari and Mandamus, there would appear to be no need for invocation of the extraordinary powers of equity.

Defendant agrees that if plaintiff has any remedy, it must be by review under R.R. 4:88--8, citing McKenna v. N.J. Highway Authority, 19 N.J. 270, 274 ff., 116 A.2d 29 (1955), where the court discusses the broad reach of New Jersey's former Certiorari practice. However, he contends that this action should proceed against the Board of Managers of the State Prison, rather than against the Principal Keeper, for the latter is only the Board's agent and in carrying out its directives must do so within the limits of the rules and regulations promulgated by it. His action is the ultimate responsibility of the Board of Managers, so that plaintiff properly should have proceeded against it as the 'state administrative agency' contemplated by R.R. 4:88--8. Defendant also argues that there is lacking here a final decision or action of a state administrative agency, as required by the cited rule, and that there can be no such decision or action 885 until the prisoner has first made representations to the Board of Managers that he is being subjected to cruel and unusual punishment and being deprived of his religious liberties, with consequent action and determination by that board.

There is no need for further exploration of the question presented by these oppositive views. Directly after being assigned, counsel did make written request of the Board of Managers for a hearing and determination as to whether plaintiff (a) was being subjected to cruel and unusual punishment in violation of his constitutional rights; (b) was being denied the free exercise of his religion; (c) should be allowed to attend Mass in the prison chapel with the *476 other prisoners; and (d) should be released from segregation at this time. The Attorney-General stipulates that the request may be considered as one also addressed to the Principal Keeper, the Disciplinary Court of the State Prison, and the Department of Institutions and Agencies itself, and turned down because, in the considered opinion of those concerned, plaintiff is not being subjected to cruel and unusual punishment, is not being deprived of the free exercise of his religion, cannot be allowed to attend Mass where he may mingle with the inmate population at the regular chapel, and cannot be released from segregation in view of his disciplinary record. We have, then, a final decision or action by a state administrative agency within the meaning of R.R. 4:88--8, and so proceed to discuss the merits.

[3][4][5] Does plaintiff's continued confinement in the segregation wing of the State Prison amount to cruel and unusual punishment within the prohibition of the Eighth and Fourteenth Amendments of the United States Constitution or Article I, paragraph 12 of the New Jersey Constitution of 1947? He calls our attention to the fact that he was in segregation from October 1952 to the end of July 1954, although no disciplinary charges were brought against him and he was never afforded the opportunity of a hearing on any charge that may have existed. If there was any cause for complaint, none was made at the time. Nor was any addressed to the prison authorities or to the courts until the institution of the present proceedings, well over two years later. The fact is that since July 29, 1954 plaintiff has on 15 different occasions, while in segregation, been charged with violations, none of them denied, resulting in disciplinry action. His record is one of continued misconduct, exhibiting not the slightest contrition or desire for rehabilitation. Significantly, that record of misconduct came to a sudden stop the moment plaintiff instituted his Chancery Division proceedings. We cannot and will not say that plaintiff's refusal to obey orders and his repeated *477 use of foul and obscene language to prison officials did not merit his continued confinement in the segregation wing

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

Although plaintiff initially stated that he was not questioning the reason for his continuation in segregation, or attacking the rules and regulations of the Prison Board of Managers, he now claims that his lot within prison walls is not in strict keeping with these rules and regulations. Courts are not required to supervise the administration of prison rules and regulations and prison disciplinary procedures. To do so would effectively disrupt prison administration and contravene public policy. We do not believe the Legislature or the rules of court intended any such review or result. Such matters are left to the discretion of prison authorities so long as their conduct does not involve deprivation of the prisoner's constitutional rights and is not clearly capricious or arbitrary. The moment a man is sentenced to State Prison and received within its walls, there arises a duty on the part of the Principal Keeper to discipline him according to the practice laid down by the Board of Managers and the State Board of Control. Reasonable discretion must be accorded the Principal Keeper in discharging his duties; penal administration must be kept flexible to the 886 circumstances of a particular case. Whether he is properly enforcing prison rules and regulations is left to the judgment of the Board of Managers, to whom he is responsible in the first instance, and of the State Board of Control ultimately.

Thus, the only situation calling for review would be one where there was presented a statement of facts which, if true, would clearly amount to arbitrary or capricious treatment of the prisoner by the Principal Keeper, or a deprivation of the prisoner's constitutional rights. Present such treatment or deprivation, uncorrected by administrative action or review, there unquestionably would be a judicial remedy. United States ex rel. Foley v. Ragen, 52 F.Supp. 265 (D.C.N.D.Ill.1943); Coffin v. Reichard, 143 F.2d 443, 155 A.L.R. 143 (6 Cir., 1944); and see Notes, 59 Yale L.J. 800 (1950), 33 Neb.L.Rev. 434 (1954). *478 Such is not the case here. The essential facts are manifested by the recitals and admissions before us and do not require any further showing by formal hearing.

There must be a rule of reason in all prison discipline. Conduct leading to open rebellion or insolence on the part of prisoners cannot be permitted. A prisoner forfeits his free choice of conduct at the moment of his commitment, especially where such conduct is calculated to destroy the order and effectiveness of the institution. In the light of plaintiff's disciplinary record during more than two years last past, his continued confinement in segregation is well within the rule of reason which must obtain in the administration of our penal institutions. It does not amount to cruel and unusual punishment. Cf. Rosenberg v. Carroll, 99 F.Supp. 630 (D.C.S.D.N.Y.1951); In re Pinaire, 46 F.Supp. 113 (D.C.N.D.Tex.1942).

We find, further, that the denial of permission for plaintiff to attend Mass on Sundays and Holy Days in the prison chapel, along with the general prison population, does not amount to cruel and unusual punishment or a deprivation of his constitutional rights of the free exercise of his religion. We do not deal here with a case where plaintiff has been singled out from the whole prison population as the only inmate so treated. All men in the segregation wing are treated alike; they are not permitted to attend Mass, but they are all afforded visitation by the chaplains of their respective faiths and, in the cases of Catholic prisoners, the opportunity to receive the Holy Sacraments.

[6][7] The First Amendment to the United States Constitution guarantees the free exercise of religion, and coupled with the Fourteenth Amendment it also protects citizens from state action prohibiting such exercise. Cantwell v. State of Connecticut, 310 U.S. 296, 60 S.Ct. 900, 84 L.Ed. 1213 (1940). And our own State Constitution, Article I, paragraph 3, provides that 'No person shall be deprived of the inestimable privilege of worshipping Almighty God in a manner agreeable to the dictates of his own conscience; * * *.' The Supreme Court in the Cantwell *479 case drew a distinction between freedom to believe and freedom to exercise one's belief, pointing out that the former is absolute, the latter not. 310 U.S. at pages 303--304, 60 S.Ct. at page 903. Freedom to practice one's religion must be considered in the light of the general public welfare. Sadlock v. Carlstadt Board of Education, 137 N.J.L. 85, 91, 58 A.2d 218 (Sup.Ct.1948); Reynolds v. United States, 98 U.S. 145, 25 L.Ed. 244 (1878). Attendance at Mass is the exercise of religion, and the action taken by the prison authorities in the instant case undeniably curtails it. Examination of decisions upholding curtailment of the free exercise of religion shows that they involved situations where the court found the restriction reasonably necessary to protect some paramount societal interest. Prince v. Commonwealth of Massachusetts, 321 U.S. 158, 64 S.Ct. 438, 88 L.Ed. 645 (1944); Hamilton v. Regents of the University of California, 293 U.S. 245, 55 S.Ct. 197, 79 L.Ed. 343 (1934); Cantwell v. State of Connecticut, above; and see 887 Antieau, 'The Limitation of Religious Liberty,' 18 Fordham L.Rev. 221 (1949).

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

Chief Justice Hughes, speaking for the court in Cox v. State of New Hampshire, 312 U.S. 569, 574, 61 S.Ct. 762, 765, 85 L.Ed. 1049, 1052 (1941), said that 'Civil liberties, as guaranteed by the Constitution, imply the existence of an organized society maintaining public order without which liberty itself would be lost in the excesses of unrestrained abuses.' The statement is appropriate here. While the State and Federal Constitutions stand as essential barriers against arbitrary or unjust deprivation of civil liberties, they have not been transgressed in this case. The social interest involved in depriving plaintiff of the opportunity to attend Mass with the rest of the prison population can only be the preservation of order and discipline in the prison. If plaintiff has lost any right, it has come about by his own hand. The interest of an orderly society that required his imprisonment insists only that he be privileged to worship God to the extent that his conduct in prison permits.

*480 Plaintiff argues that defendant has not shown that it is necessary to keep him from Mass to preserve prison discipline. We think he has. Such attendance would obviously impair the disciplinary effect of continuous segregation. It is not for us to review the practiced judgment of the prison authorities, based upon experience, that this would interfere with plaintiff's discipline and the existing regimen of discipline and order of the remainder of the prison population.

We have noted the availability of the chaplain of the Catholic faith to prisoners in the segregation wing. In the light of plaintiff's claims, the Attorney-General has felt impelled to present the chaplain's affidavit, in which he states that his offers of spiritual advice, guidance and counsel, as well as of the Holy Sacraments, have consistently been refused by the prisoner. We find it difficult to believe plaintiff's denial of these representations. Whatever merit there may be in his claim of frustration of a deeply held religious desire, his spiritual wants will soon be completely provided for. We were informed at oral argument that the request of the Department of Institutions and Agencies for funds to erect a small chapel in the segregation wing--a request first made in 1953--has finally been met. The chapel with be ready for religious services within a few weeks.

The appeal is dismissed.

130 A.2d 881, 44 N.J.Super. 468

END OF DOCUMENT

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

EXHIBIT 38

863 P.2d 310
(Cite as: 863 P.2d 310)

Supreme Court of Colorado,
En Banc.

Mary E. MOSES, n/k/a Mary Elaine Tenantry, Plaintiff-Appellee and Cross-Appellant,
v.
The DIOCESE OF COLORADO, a Colorado corporation, and Bishop William Frey, Defendants-Appellants and Cross-Appellees.

No. 92SA415.

Nov. 15, 1993.
Rehearing Denied Dec. 6, 1993.

Parishioner brought action against Episcopal dioceses and bishop for injuries sustained as result of her sexual relations with priest, whom she sought for counseling. The District Court, City and County of Denver, Herbert L. Stern, III, J., entered judgment on jury verdict awarding $1,216,500 as damages. Diocese and bishop appealed. The Supreme Court, Erickson, J., held that: (1) recovery was not barred by First Amendment; (2) evidence supported claims of negligent hiring and supervision; but (3) bishop and diocese were not subject to vicarious liability.

Affirmed in part and reversed in part.

Rovira, C.J., concurred in part and dissented in part with separate opinion.

West Headnotes

[1] Constitutional Law ⇐84.5(1)
92k84.5(1) Most Cited Cases

The First Amendment does not grant religious organizations absolute immunity from tort liability; liability can attach for breach of fiduciary duty and negligent hiring and supervision. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 1.

[2] Appeal and Error ⇐169
30k169 Most Cited Cases

Issues not raised in trial court cannot form basis of appeal.

[3] Appeal and Error ⇐170(2)
30k170(2) Most Cited Cases

Fact that issue involves questions of constitutional analysis interpretation, or application is not dispositive of whether it will be addressed on appeal despite fact that it was not properly preserved.

[4] Constitutional Law ⇐84.5(7.1)
92k84.5(7.1) Most Cited Cases

Pursuant to First Amendment, court must not become embroiled in dispute involving religious organization if court would be required to interpret or weigh church doctrine. West's C.R.S.A. § 13-21-102.5; U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 1.

[5] Constitutional Law ⇐84.5(7.1)
92k84.5(7.1) Most Cited Cases

"Neutral principles" doctrine allows court to apply neutral laws of state to religious organizations, but forbids court from resolving disputed issues of religious doctrine and practice. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 1.

[6] Constitutional Law ⇐84.5(7.1)
92k84.5(7.1) Most Cited Cases

Application of secular standards to religious organization's secular conduct that is tortious is not prohibited by the Constitution; civil actions against clergymen and their superiors that involve claims of breach of fiduciary duty, negligent hiring and supervision, and vicarious liability are actionable if they are supported by competent evidence in record. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 1.

[7] Constitutional Law ⇐84.5(7.1)
92k84.5(7.1) Most Cited Cases

Parishioner's claim against Episcopal diocese and bishop for injuries sustained when priest entered into sexual relationship with parishioner, who came to priest for counseling, and bishop attempted to resolve problems created by relationship, was not barred by First Amendment; claims did not involve disputes within church and were not based solely on ecclesiastical or disciplinary matters which would call into question trial court's power to render judgment against diocese and bishop. U.S.C.A. Const.Amends. 1, 14.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

[8] Religious Societies ⇐31(5)
332k31(5) Most Cited Cases

Sufficient evidence existed to allow jury to find that Episcopal diocese and bishop had fiduciary relationship with parishioner and that breach of fiduciary duty caused parishioner's injuries, where bishop held superior position over parishioner, who sought counseling regarding her sexual relation with priest, bishop assumed control of situation, which demanded that he consider parishioner's interest, and bishop then used parishioner's trust to her detriment by failing to act to help her and instead binding her to secrecy.

[9] Fraud ⇐7
184k7 Most Cited Cases

A fiduciary relationship may arise where one party occupies superior position relative to another.

[10] Fraud ⇐7
184k7 Most Cited Cases

While professional relationship can be used as evidence that one party has both position and opportunity to influence the other party, it is not prerequisite to finding fiduciary relationship; fiduciary relationship can arise out of relationship of blood, business, friendship, or association.

[11] Religious Societies ⇐27(3)
332k27(3) Most Cited Cases

Clergy-parishioner relationship is not necessarily a fiduciary relationship, but does involve type of interaction that creates trust and reliance.

[12] Fraud ⇐7
184k7 Most Cited Cases

Unequal relationship does not automatically create fiduciary duty; superior party must assume duty to act in independent party's best interest to be liable.

[13] Religious Societies ⇐30
332k30 Most Cited Cases

Once member of clergy accepts parishioner's trust and accepts the role of counselor, duty exists to act with utmost good faith for benefit of parishioner.

[14] Religious Societies ⇐31(5)
332k31(5) Most Cited Cases

There was sufficient evidence that employment relationship existed between Episcopal diocese and priest, that diocese was negligent in hiring and supervising priest, and that such negligence caused injuries to parishioner who had sexual relations with priest to support verdict for parishioner on her negligence claims against diocese and bishop, considering evidence of structure of Episcopal Church, control of bishop and diocese over manner in which priests conduct their activities and bishop's potential input on discipline decisions, reliance and trust induced by priest's position, psychological reports that put diocese on notice to inquire whether priest was capable of counseling parishioners, and failure of diocese and bishop to communicate questions regarding priest's fitness to handle counseling to parishioners or to assume greater degree of care in monitoring priest's conduct.

[15] Master and Servant ⇐303
255k303 Most Cited Cases

Employer may be liable for harm to others for negligently employing improper person for task which may involve risk to others.

[16] Master and Servant ⇐303
255k303 Most Cited Cases

Prerequisite to establishing negligent hiring is employment or agency relationship.

[17] Master and Servant ⇐332(1.1)
255k332(1.1) Most Cited Cases

Existence of agency relationship necessary to claim of negligent hiring is ordinarily question of fact to be determined by fact finder; court can decide whether agency relationship exists as matter of law only when facts are not in dispute.

[18] Master and Servant ⇐303
255k303 Most Cited Cases

Tort of negligent hiring does not involve vicarious liability; principle of negligent hiring is based not on rule of agency but on law of torts and is therefore distinguishable from agency doctrine of vicarious liability.

[19] Master and Servant ⇐303

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

255k303 Most Cited Cases

Agency necessary to claim of negligent hiring is ultimately question of intention of parties and is evidenced by their acts and not on what relationship is called; what is critical is that parties materially agree to enter into particular relation to which legal consequences of agency attach even though those consequences might not have been contemplated by parties at time of their agreement.

[20] Principal and Agent ⇐1
308k1 Most Cited Cases

"Agent" is generally one who acts for, or in place of, another, or is entrusted with business of another.

[21] Principal and Agent ⇐1
308k1 Most Cited Cases

Control principal exercises over manner of work performed by agent is evidence that agency relationship exists; while no one factor is determinative, most important factor is right to control, not fact of control.

[22] Master and Servant ⇐303
255k303 Most Cited Cases

Employer's liability for negligent hiring is predicated on employer's antecedent ability to recognize potential employee's attributes of character or prior conduct which would create an undue risk of harm to those with whom employee came in contact in executing his employment responsibilities.

[23] Master and Servant ⇐303
255k303 Most Cited Cases

Employer has duty to exercise reasonable care in making his decision to hire, and scope of employer's duty depends on employee's anticipated degree of contact with other persons in carrying out duties of employment; requisite degree of care increases and may require expanded inquiry into employee's background, when employer expects employee to have frequent contact with public or when nature of employment fosters close contact and special relationship between particular persons and employee.

[24] Religious Societies ⇐30
332k30 Most Cited Cases

Episcopal diocese was subject to increased degree of care in hiring priest who was placed in position that required not only frequent contact with others, but induced reliance of trust through counseling process.

[25] Master and Servant ⇐303
255k303 Most Cited Cases

Employer may be liable for negligent supervision if employer knows or should have known that employee's conduct would subject third parties to unreasonable risk of harm.

[26] Religious Societies ⇐30
332k30 Most Cited Cases

Episcopal priest was not acting within scope and course of his employment when he engaged in sexual relations with parishioner, and therefore diocese and bishop were not vicariously liable for his tortious conduct.

[27] Master and Servant ⇐300
255k300 Most Cited Cases

Agency doctrine of vicarious liability is based on theory of respondeat superior which postulates that master may be liable for acts of agent acting on master's behalf.

[28] Master and Servant ⇐302(1)
255k302(1) Most Cited Cases

Employer may be held vicariously liable for employee's tort only when tort is committed within course and scope of employment.

[29] Master and Servant ⇐302(2)
255k302(2) Most Cited Cases

Employee is acting within scope of his employment, for purposes of vicarious liability, if he is doing work assigned to him by employer, or what is necessarily incidental to that work, or customary in employer's business.

[30] Master and Servant ⇐302(2)
255k302(2) Most Cited Cases

Although commission of intentional tort may

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

sometimes be within scope of employment, for purposes of vicarious liability, agent's intent in committing tortious act must be to further employer's business; if employee commits intentional tort solely for reasons that do not further his employer's business or cannot be considered natural incident of employment, employer cannot be vicariously liable.

[31] Religious Societies ⇦30
332k30 Most Cited Cases

That Episcopal priest does not take vow of celibacy, but is free to marry and engage in sexual acts, does not compel finding that he, unlike Catholic priest who takes vow of celibacy, is acting within scope of employment, when he engages in sexual relations with mentally ill parishioner, for purposes of claim of vicarious liability.

[32] Religious Societies ⇦30
332k30 Most Cited Cases

Vicarious liability of religious organization for torts of its employees would not be expanded to cover foreseeable acts.

313 Holland, Seelen & Pagliuca, Joyce A. Seelen, Denver, Jean E. Dubofsky, P.C., Boulder, for plaintiff-appellee and cross-appellant.

Cooper & Kelley, P.C., Paul D. Cooper, John R. Mann, Denver, for defendants-appellants and cross-appellees.

Justice ERICKSON delivered the Opinion of the Court.

This appeal is from a judgment entered on a jury verdict awarding Mary E. Moses, who is now known as Mary Moses Tenantry (Tenantry), $1,216,500 as damages against the Episcopal Diocese of Colorado, a Colorado corporation (Diocese), and Bishop 314 William Frey (Bishop Frey). Tenantry was a parishioner at St. Philip and St. James Episcopal Church in Denver. She sought counseling from Father Paul Robinson (Father Robinson), who was then an assistant priest at St. Philip and St. James. Although Tenantry had a long history of mental illness, her condition was relatively stable at the time she began her counseling with Father Robinson. While counseling and advising Tenantry, Father Robinson entered into a sexual relationship with her that included multiple acts of both fellatio and cunnilingus. When her relationship with Father Robinson ended, Tenantry suffered a relapse and aggravation of her mental illness. Shortly thereafter, her marriage ended in divorce. Tenantry is now under psychiatric care which will be required indefinitely.

The jury found that Bishop Frey and the Diocese breached their fiduciary duties to the plaintiff, the Diocese negligently hired and negligently supervised Father Robinson, and was vicariously liable for Robinson's breach of his fiduciary duty to Tenantry. The award consisted of $598,000 for economic damage and $618,000 for noneconomic damage. The trial judge reduced the verdict for noneconomic damage by $118,000 to comply with the statutory limit of $500,000 imposed by section 13-21-102.5, 6A C.R.S. (1987 & 1993 Supp.).

On appeal, the Diocese and Bishop Frey assert that the First Amendment of the United States Constitution forecloses recovery for clergy malpractice and an award against them for the damages sustained by Tenantry. If the First Amendment defense is valid, the remaining issues on appeal are moot. In our view, the First Amendment does not grant the Diocese and its employees immunity from liability in this case. The Diocese and Bishop Frey also assert that the evidence was insufficient to support the jury's findings. [FN1] We disagree in part. The evidence was sufficient to support Tenantry's claims for breach of fiduciary duty, negligent hiring, and supervision. The evidence, however, was not sufficient to prove that Robinson was acting within the scope of his employment when he engaged in oral sex with Tenantry; therefore, the Diocese is not vicariously liable for Robinson's sexual acts with Tenantry.

FN1. On appeal, all of the evidence must be construed to support the jury's verdict if such construction is reasonable. Lambrecht v. Archibald, 119 Colo. 356, 203 P.2d 897 (1949); see also City of Aurora v. Loveless, 639 P.2d 1061 (Colo.1981) (stating if reasonable, court must interpret evidence adduced at trial to make the jury's verdict consistent).

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

Tenantry asserts in her cross appeal that the trial court should not have reduced the noneconomic damage award because section 13-21-102.5, 6A C.R.S. (1987 & 1993 Supp.), is unconstitutional. Because we vacate the award predicated on vicarious liability, the noneconomic damage award does not exceed the statutory cap and the issue submitted on cross appeal is moot. [FN2]

FN2. Section 13-21-102.5, 6A C.R.S. (1987 & 1993 Supp.), creates a "damage cap" for "noneconomic loss or injury." Subsection 3(a) provides that "[i]n no case shall the amount of such damages exceed five hundred thousand dollars." The jury awarded Tenantry $618,000 in noneconomic damages and the trial court reduced that award to $500,000 pursuant to the statute.

Tenantry contends that section 13-21-102.5 violates tort victims' due process and equal protection rights and the open courts provision of the Colorado Constitution embodied in article II, section 6. Although we have upheld statutory damage caps as constitutional in the past, see State v. DeFoor, 824 P.2d 783 (Colo.) (upholding a cap on damages in an action against a public entity), cert. denied, --- U.S. ----, 113 S.Ct. 483, 121 L.Ed.2d 387 (1992), we do not address the constitutionality of the $500,000 statutory damage cap because the jury erroneously found the Diocese vicariously liable for the breach of fiduciary duty by Father Robinson. When the erroneous portion of the award is vacated, the remainder of the jury award for noneconomic damages is $370,800. See infra note 26.

Section 13-21-102.5(4) requires that the statutory cap "not be disclosed to a jury in any such action, but shall be imposed by the court before judgment." Therefore, the damage cap was applied by the trial judge after the jury awarded damages, and the jury's deliberation concerning the total damage award was not affected prior to the time the trial judge applied the statutory cap. Because the statutory cap could not have influenced the jury's damage award, no remand is necessary to determine the amount of damages the jury would have awarded had the trial court not applied the statutory cap.

The statutory damage cap also limits an award for "noneconomic loss or injury" to $250,000 unless the court finds justification by clear and convincing evidence of damages which exceed that amount. The trial judge found by clear and convincing evidence that total noneconomic damages exceeded $250,000. The portion of the noneconomic damages awarded by the jury and supported by this decision remains over $250,000 and we agree with the trial court that there is clear and convincing evidence which justifies a noneconomic damage award over $250,000. The cross-appellant does not challenge the constitutionality of the $250,000 statutory cap.

*315 Accordingly, we affirm the judgment of the trial court on Tenantry's claims for breach of fiduciary duty and negligent hiring and supervision. We reverse the judgment for damages against the Diocese and Bishop Frey based upon the claim of vicarious liability, and remand with directions.

I

A

Tenantry and one of her older sisters, Joyce Mohr (Mohr), were sexually abused by their father when they were children. Expert testimony established that Tenantry developed a multiple personality disorder as protection against the sexual abuse by her father. [FN3] Before Tenantry entered grade school she had developed several separate identities.

FN3. A multiple personality disorder is a protective mechanism which may be employed by children who suffer extensive abuse. The mechanism disassociates the child from the abusive acts.

Tenantry married Geoffrey Moses (Moses) in 1974. Moses knew of, and attempted to help Tenantry overcome, her mental illness. The couple were married for sixteen years and five children were born as issue of their marriage. Tenantry was hospitalized and attempted suicide in 1978 and 1979 because of her mental illness. While Tenantry was being treated for her mental illness, there were periods during which she was permitted to visit her children only if an outside party supervised the visitation. Father Vernon Myers (Father Myers), the priest at St. Philip and St. James Parish, often supervised these visits. The association between Father Myers and Tenantry existed before he supervised the visits because he performed the marriage ceremony for Moses and Tenantry and baptized all of their children.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

After treatment for her mental illness concluded in 1979, Tenantry became an active member of St. Philip and St. James Parish. Two of Tenantry's sisters were also members of the parish and together the three sisters participated in social events, taught Bible classes, and supervised children's programs. The husbands of the three sisters were also involved in the activities of the parish and all three men served on the parish vestry--the governing board of the church. By all accounts, Tenantry's mental illness appeared to be in remission during the period that she and members of her family actively participated in church programs and activities. Tenantry's membership in the church started the longest period of improved mental health she had ever experienced.

In 1984, the vestry of St. Philip and St. James decided to hire an assistant priest because Father Myers was nearing retirement. Father Myers suggested the vestry interview Father Robinson, a newly ordained priest who would help the vestry accomplish its goal of attracting young families to the parish. Father Myers interviewed Father Robinson during his ordination period and knew that Bishop Frey considered Father Robinson to be "bishop material." Neither Bishop Frey nor the Diocese provided the church vestry with any of the information about Father Robinson contained in the Diocese's personnel files. Included in Father Robinson's personnel file were reports of psychological examinations that were conducted as a result of Father Robinson seeking ordination. These reports indicated Father Robinson had problems with depression, low self-esteem, and possessed a "sexual identification ambiguity."

Father Robinson was selected by the vestry to begin his duties as assistant priest at St. Philip and St. James Parish in June 1984. Tenantry and her husband were among many of the young couples who befriended Father Robinson and his wife. *316 An outgrowth of Father Robinson's interaction with the young members of the parish was that a number of the women in the parish, including Tenantry and Mohr, were attracted to, and infatuated with, Father Robinson. Tenantry's brother-in-law, Michael Padbury (Padbury), warned Father Robinson that both Tenantry and Mohr were infatuated with him. [FN4]

> FN4. Among the difficulties Tenantry experienced as a result of the sexual abuse she suffered as a child was her inability to understand appropriate behavior or recognize accepted boundaries with respect to her relationships with men.

In September 1984, Tenantry sought counseling with Father Robinson to discuss her fear that she was responsible for the cerebral palsy that afflicted her youngest child. At the time of these counseling sessions, Father Robinson knew Tenantry and Mohr had been sexually abused as children. Tenantry's counseling sessions with Father Robinson always ended with a prayer and a hug. The hugs eventually led to fondling, and finally, to mutual oral sex. On at least one occasion, Tenantry and Father Robinson attempted to have intercourse but were interrupted. During the course of the sexual relationship, they never had intercourse.

In mid-1985, Tenantry told Mohr about her sexual relationship with Father Robinson. Mohr confronted Father Robinson who at first denied, but then admitted, there was a sexual relationship. Father Robinson concluded his conversation with Mohr by indicating that Mohr must keep his sexual relationship with Tenantry a secret because the conversation constituted a confession. Despite Father Robinson's attempt to keep Mohr from disclosing the sexual relationship with Tenantry, Mohr discussed the conversation with her husband. While visiting another Episcopal church, Mohr and her husband consulted Father Bruce McNabb (Father McNabb) regarding whether Father Robinson had made a confession and what course of action they should take to help Tenantry. Father McNabb told Mohr she had not received a confession and was not required to keep the relationship confidential. He recommended that

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

Mohr and her husband immediately tell Father Robinson's superior, Father Myers, about the relationship.

Acting on Father McNabb's recommendation, Mohr and her husband saw Father Myers. Mohr told Father Myers about the sexual relationship between Tenantry and Father Robinson and about Father Robinson's attempt to keep the relationship a secret. Mohr advised Father Myers that she had consulted Father McNabb and that he told her Father Robinson could not force her to be quiet. Father Myers' reaction to the sexual relationship shocked both Mohr and her husband. [FN5] Father Myers was angered that Mohr did not keep Father Robinson's secret and scolded her for discussing the relationship with her husband and Father McNabb. Father Myers said that Father Robinson was bishop material and that Mohr and her husband should not ruin his career. Father Myers also asked them why they were trying to destroy Father Robinson and said that Father Robinson's actions were not that bad and that Tenantry had not been injured. As a result of this meeting, Mohr's husband resigned from the vestry and the couple decided to disassociate themselves from the St. Philip and St. James parish.

FN5. Evidence presented at trial indicated that Myers had known of the relationship before being confronted by Mohr. Specifically, Myers had ordered Tenantry to stop talking to Robinson before Tenantry spoke to Mohr about the relationship.

After the meeting, Father Myers confronted Father Robinson and Father Robinson admitted to having oral sex with Tenantry. Father Myers told Father Robinson to be more careful in the future. Once Father Myers had spoken with Father Robinson, he involved the Diocese in the matter. [FN6] No action was taken by the Diocese *317 to help Tenantry after Father Myers' meeting with Mohr and her husband.

FN6. Father Myers was impeached at trial concerning whether he notified the Diocese of Tenantry and Robinson's relationship immediately after Mohr's allegations in August of 1985. In deposition, Father Myers stated that as a result of the meeting with Mohr, he confronted Robinson and then immediately involved the bishop because the bishop should be involved in any serious matter. This evidence contradicts the Diocese's assertion that it was not aware of the matter until March of 1986.

Mohr and her husband related the content and outcome of their discussion with Father Myers to Padbury, who was a member of the vestry and was married to Tenantry's oldest sister. Padbury decided that his strong relationship with Father Myers would enable him to compel Father Myers to address the issue. At a vestry retreat, Padbury confronted Father Myers about the relationship between Tenantry and Father Robinson seeking to understand what had happened. Father Myers told Padbury that he did not understand why Mohr and her husband were so upset and that there were worse things a priest could do. The response caused Padbury to question Father Myers about what action the church had taken. Father Myers indicated that he had received a "satisfactory response" from Father Robinson and was not pursuing the matter. Both Father Myers and Father Robinson attempted to ignore the situation. Father Myers also ordered Tenantry not to talk to Father Robinson.

In an attempt to separate herself from Father Robinson, Tenantry persuaded her husband to leave St. Philip and St. James and to attend Ascension Episcopal Church. By the fall of 1985, the traditional Tenantry family gatherings after church had disintegrated and Tenantry's mental illness resurfaced. The pressure of maintaining the secrecy of the affair caused Tenantry not only to deteriorate mentally but also to become physically ill. By February 1986, Father Robinson and Tenantry's sexual relationship had ended.

After leaving the church, Tenantry learned that Father Robinson had received a call to be the pastor at St. Michael's Episcopal Church in Colorado Springs. She asked her husband, Moses, about his feelings concerning Father Robinson's new position. Unaware of any relationship between his wife and Father Robinson, Moses said he was sorry to see a friend go, but it was a good job and he was happy for Father Robinson. Over the course of the next few days, Tenantry continued to tell her husband she was upset by Father Robinson's appointment and eventually told him of her sexual relationship with Father Robinson.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

Moses confronted Father Robinson and Father Robinson denied, and then admitted, the existence of a sexual relationship. Moses told Father Robinson he intended to call Bishop Frey and tell him of the relationship. Father Robinson then called Father Myers who arranged to see Moses. Moses demanded Father Myers inform Bishop Frey about the relationship. Bishop Frey scheduled a meeting on March 4, 1986, with Moses, Father Robinson, and Father Myers. On March 3, 1986, the day before the scheduled meeting, Bishop Frey signed a letter which promoted Father Robinson to the position of pastor of the Colorado Springs church. [FN7]

> FN7. Bishop Frey did not inform the vestry of Father Robinson's newly assigned parish about the allegations against Father Robinson despite the fact that Bishop Frey knew that the prior priest assigned to the Colorado Springs parish had left that church because of his illicit sexual relationship with a parishioner.
> An expert who testified at trial expressed the opinion that the likelihood of a priest repeating sexual relationships with parishioners is fifty percent.

At the March 4 meeting, Father Robinson admitted to a sexual relationship with Tenantry which included oral sex but not intercourse. Bishop Frey asked Moses if he would be content to let the Bishop supervise "whatever needed to happen." Moses acquiesced to Bishop Frey assuming control of the matter. Bishop Frey arranged to meet with Tenantry in order to resolve the matter. After Moses left, Bishop Frey informed Father Robinson that if this was a one- time episode, he would not mention it to the Colorado Springs parish. The Bishop also gave Father Robinson a book entitled "Affair Prevention" and told him to get counseling and to advise him immediately if the matter came up in the Colorado Springs parish.

Moses returned home and informed Tenantry that Bishop Frey wanted to see her. *318 Tenantry was terrified about the loss of her salvation and feared having to meet with the Bishop. At their meeting, Tenantry described her past to Bishop Frey and explained that she had an intimate sexual relationship with Father Robinson. Tenantry discussed her fear of not having salvation because of her acts and Bishop Frey granted Tenantry absolution. At trial, Bishop Frey testified that at this meeting his impression of Tenantry was that she was fragile and had a sense of guilt that bordered on pathological because she blamed herself for the relationship. [FN8]

> FN8. Subsequent to Tenantry's commencement of her legal action for damages in February 1990, Bishop Frey provided a statement to the newspapers in which he described Father Robinson as "a fine priest" and Tenantry as "an unfortunate lady."

Tenantry explained to Bishop Frey that she still loved Father Robinson. Bishop Frey told Tenantry that if she loved Father Robinson she should not talk to anyone about her relationship with him, never go near the church, and never talk to Father Robinson again. Tenantry received permission from Bishop Frey to speak to a priest or counselor. Tenantry told Bishop Frey that she had discussed the relationship with her sister and asked if she needed to stop talking with her. Bishop Frey stated that the prohibition on talking to people included Tenantry's sister. Tenantry then asked if she could talk to her husband and Bishop Frey gave her permission to talk to him. The Bishop took no further action to assist Tenantry after this meeting.

Soon after her meeting with Bishop Frey, Tenantry started a day-care business and stopped participating in church activities. In 1989, she encountered Father Robinson by chance at Denver General Hospital. Tenantry reported the meeting to her husband. The reoccurrence of contact between Tenantry and Father Robinson resulted in dissolution of Tenantry's marriage. In May 1990, Tenantry and Moses separated, and in October 1990, they divorced. Subsequently, Tenantry's mental health deteriorated; she stopped spending time with her family, and her day-care business failed. At trial, mental health experts testified that the discovery of Bishop Frey's promotion of Father Robinson led to the unraveling of Tenantry's personality structure. Tenantry was diagnosed as suffering a recurrence of her multiple personality disorder and post-traumatic stress syndrome. [FN9]

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

> FN9. These experts testified that the church provided Tenantry with a structure that helped her deal with multiple personality disorder and taught her to organize her life and to act in an acceptable way. The structure provided by the church broke down as a result of Tenantry's sexual relationship with Father Robinson because she lost her capacity to trust in God and the church. Bishop Frey aggravated the breakdown in trust when he (1) allowed her to believe that she was primarily at fault; (2) did not ask to hear her side of the affair; (3) did not ask her how she felt about the relationship or how she planned to deal with it; and (4) requested that she maintain secrecy about the relationship.

B

In February 1990, Tenantry commenced a civil action against the Diocese and Father Robinson. Tenantry later amended her complaint to include Bishop Frey. Subsequently, Father Robinson filed for bankruptcy and Tenantry's claims against him were severed from the case. The jury returned a verdict finding the defendants liable for breach of fiduciary duty and negligent hiring and supervision and awarded Tenantry damages of $728,100; the jury also found the defendants vicariously liable for Father Robinson's breach of fiduciary duty and awarded $488,400.

We affirm the judgment of the trial court on the issues of breach of fiduciary duty and negligent hiring and supervision. We reverse the judgment on vicarious liability.

II

[1][2][3] For the first time on appeal, the defendants have formulated First Amendment defenses that were not raised in the trial court and allegedly bar Tenantry's claims for the injuries she suffered as a result of the conduct of Father Robinson, *319 Bishop Frey, and the Diocese. The First Amendment issues raised on appeal were not properly preserved in the trial court. However, it is within our discretion to review the First Amendment defenses. [FN10] C.A.R. 1(d); see Mt. Emmons Mining Co. v. Town of Crested Butte, 690 P.2d 231, 238 (Colo.1984) (stating the exercise of discretion to notice an issue not raised below "is especially appropriate in a case involving a record that does not clearly establish the evidentiary basis for the rendition of a final judgment on substantial constitutional claims"). The First Amendment to the United States Constitution does not grant religious organizations absolute immunity from tort liability. Liability can attach for breach of a fiduciary duty, negligent hiring and supervision. Destefano v. Grabrian, 763 P.2d 275, 284, 286-87 (Colo.1988).

> FN10. The defendants' only argument at trial regarding the First Amendment was it barred admission of two pamphlets that described the hierarchical structure of the Episcopal Church. The defendants submitted a trial brief in support of their position that the pamphlets should not be admitted. In their brief, the defendants asserted that any evidence of church law or discipline should not be admitted. The defendants phrased the summary of this argument very broadly in their Rule 16 disclosure statement--"the First Amendment prevents the court from resolving any claims based upon interpretations of 'church law.' " The trial briefs and the record show that the defendants' only argument at trial was that the First Amendment barred admission of church documents in a civil court proceeding. The defendants did not argue at trial that the First Amendment forbids claims of breach of fiduciary duty, negligent hiring and supervision and vicarious liability against a religious organization.
> We have consistently held, with few exceptions, issues not raised in the trial court cannot form the basis of an appeal. See, e.g., Paine, Webber, Jackson & Curtis, Inc. v. Adams, 718 P.2d 508, 513 (Colo.1986) (recognizing that appellate challenges to issues that do not call into question the trial court's subject matter jurisdiction and that are not raised in the trial court are waived and will not be reviewed for the first time on appeal). The fact that the non-preserved issue involves questions of constitutional analysis, interpretation, or application is not dispositive of whether we will address the issue on appeal. See, e.g., Massey v. People, 656 P.2d 658, 662 (Colo.1982) (declining to address a constitutional argument on appeal that was not presented for determination by the trial court).

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

A

The First Amendment to the United States Constitution prohibits any "law respecting the establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof." U.S. Const. amend. I. The amendment "embraces two concepts-- freedom to believe and freedom to act. The first is absolute but, in the nature of things, the second cannot be. Conduct remains subject to regulation for the protection of society." Cantwell v. Connecticut, 310 U.S. 296, 303- 04, 60 S.Ct. 900, 903, 84 L.Ed. 1213 (1940).

Watson v. Jones, 80 U.S. (13 Wall.) 679, 20 L.Ed. 666 (1871), established the doctrine of judicial abstention in matters involving court interpretation of ecclesiastical law. Watson involved a struggle between two factions of a local Presbyterian church for control of the local church's property. Id. 80 U.S. at 684-85. The governing body of the Presbyterian Church of the United States ordered all members of local congregations who believed in the divine character of slavery to "repent and forsake these sins." Id. at 691. A minority faction of one local congregation deemed this order a deviation from the church's original doctrine. The minority faction alleged they were the true church and should control their local church's property. An ecclesiastical judiciary of the Presbyterian Church interpreted the church's law and decided which of the disputants should have possession of the local church property. The losing faction sought a contrary determination in the civil courts. The Supreme Court held that civil courts could not deprive religious bodies of the right to construe their own church laws. [FN11]

FN11. Watson was decided prior to the application of the First Amendment to the states. The case, however, is the basis for later cases that adopted its rationale in applying the doctrine of judicial abstention to the states on a constitutional basis.

The Court has continued to define what are matters of purely ecclesiastical concern and has applied the doctrine of judicial abstention to cases that do not involve property disputes. *See 320Bouldin v. Alexander, 82 U.S. (15 Wall.) 131, 21 L.Ed. 69 (1872) (stating civil courts have no power to question ordinary acts of church discipline, requirements for membership, or whether excommunication is proper in specific cases); Kedroff v. St. Nicholas Cathedral, 344 U.S. 94, 73 S.Ct. 143, 97 L.Ed. 120 (1952) [FN12] (holding state statute that declared one faction of the Russian Orthodox Church to be the owner of certain church property an unconstitutional intrusion on the decision making ability of the church authorities); Presbyterian Church v. Mary Elizabeth Blue Hull Memorial Presbyterian Church, 393 U.S. 440, 89 S.Ct. 601, 21 L.Ed.2d 658 (1968) (holding if intra-church property dispute required interpreting and weighing church doctrine, a court could not intervene; if, however, neutral principles of law could be applied without determining underlying question of religious doctrine and practice, a court could intervene); Serbian E. Orthodox Diocese v. Milivojevich, 426 U.S. 696, 96 S.Ct. 2372, 49 L.Ed.2d 151 (1976) (forbidding judicial inquiry into whether the church judicatory body properly followed its own rules of procedure in removing a bishop from office).

FN12. Kedroff was the first case to come before the Supreme Court involving the doctrine of judicial abstention following the application of the First Amendment's religion clauses to the states. See Cantwell v. Connecticut, 310 U.S. 296, 60 S.Ct. 900, 84 L.Ed. 1213 (1940) (specifying that First Amendment, as to religion, was made applicable to the states by the Fourteenth Amendment).

[4][5] The principle of these cases, as this court has recognized, is that courts must not become embroiled in disputes involving a religious organization if the court would be required to interpret or weigh church doctrine. See Bishop and Diocese of Colorado v. Mote, 716 P.2d 85, 102 (Colo.1986) (stating that Jones and its progeny do not require a court to abstain from religious controversy "as long as the inquiry does not require resolutions of disputed issues of religious doctrine"). Mote held that Colorado law required application of the "neutral principles" doctrine when a court is resolving a religious property dispute. Id. at 96. The "neutral principles" doctrine was first announced in Blue Hull, 393 U.S. at 449, 89 S.Ct. at 606, and allows a court to apply the neutral laws of the state to religious organizations but forbids a court from resolving disputed issues of religious doctrine and practice. In Jones v. Wolf, 443 U.S. 595, 99 S.Ct. 3020, 61 L.Ed.2d 775 (1979), the Supreme Court of the United States explained, "[t]he neutral-principles approach cannot be said to 'inhibit' the free exercise of religion, any more than do other neutral provisions of state law governing the manner in which churches own property, hire employees, or purchase goods." Id. at 606, 99 S.Ct. at 3027.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

Even though Mote involved a church property dispute, we noted that during the turn of the century this court had held that religious corporations, "are subject to the principles of the common law and the practice and procedure applicable to corporations under the general incorporation laws, so far as the same are pertinent." Mote, 716 P.2d at 98 (quoting Horst v. Traudt, 43 Colo. 445, 96 P. 259 (1908)). We recognized in Mote that Horst was not controlling precedent but we read Horst as general guidance and "as a persuasive statement that this court should analyze legal issues that arise out of church organizations in the same manner as we would analyze those issues if they arose out of any other corporation or voluntary association." Mote, 716 P.2d at 99.

[6] Application of a secular standard to secular conduct that is tortious is not prohibited by the Constitution. See Mote, 716 P.2d at 98-99; Horst, 43 Colo. at 448, 96 P. at 259; Employment Div., Dept. of Human Resources of Oregon v. Smith, 494 U.S. 872, 110 S.Ct. 1595, 108 L.Ed.2d 876 (1990) (stating that even religiously motivated conduct is not immune from neutral laws of general applicability). The Supreme Court has not granted churches broad immunity against being sued in civil courts. See Destefano, 763 P.2d at 284 n. 9; see generally Carl H. Esbeck, *Tort Claims Against Churches and Ecclesiastical Officers: The First Amendment Considerations, 321 89 W.Va.L.Rev. 1 (1986). Civil actions against clergy members and their superiors that involve claims of a breach of fiduciary duty, negligent hiring and supervision, and vicarious liability are actionable if they are supported by competent evidence in the record. Destefano, 763 P.2d at 284, 286-87.

[7] The facts of Tenantry's case indicate that an organization, confronted with the misdeeds of one of its agents, assumed control of the matter and in the process of protecting itself injured a vulnerable individual. The defendants have not argued that Bishop Frey's decision to assume control and resolve the problems created by Father Robinson and Tenantry's relationship was a matter of purely ecclesiastical concern. Tenantry's claims in this case do not involve disputes within the church and are not based solely on ecclesiastical or disciplinary matters which would call into question the trial court's power to render a judgment against the defendants. Our decision does not require a reading of the Constitution and Canons of the Protestant Episcopal Church or any other documents of church governance. Because the facts of this case do not require interpreting or weighing church doctrine and neutral principles of law can be applied, the First Amendment is not a defense against Tenantry's claims.

III

[8] On appeal, Bishop Frey and the Diocese have urged this court to overrule Destefano v. Grabrian, 763 P.2d 275 (Colo.1988). The defendants contend the claims of breach of fiduciary duty and clergy malpractice are merely different names for professional liability. Their position is that because we refused to recognize a claim for clergy malpractice in Destefano, and all of Tenantry's claims relating to the negligence of the church and the acts of the church's agents are in reality claims for clergy malpractice, Tenantry's case should have been dismissed. We have declared that breach of fiduciary duty and clergy malpractice are not identical claims and involve different elements. [FN13] Sufficient evidence existed to allow the jury to find that a fiduciary relationship existed between Bishop Frey and the Diocese and Tenantry and that the breach of the fiduciary duty caused

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

Tenantry's injuries.

> FN13. Destefano held that a cause of action for breach of fiduciary duty was separate and distinct from a claim of clergy malpractice. The fundamental difference between the two causes of action is the former is a breach of trust and does not require a professional relationship or a professional standard of care, while the latter is an action for negligence based on a professional relationship and a professional standard of care. In Destefano, we held the defendant owed a fiduciary duty to the plaintiff that "was created by his undertaking to counsel [the plaintiff]." Destefano v. Grabrian, 763 P.2d 275, 284 (Colo.1988). The position of trust occupied by the defendant, when coupled with his positive act of counseling the plaintiff, resulted in a duty to the plaintiff. The relevant common facts in Destefano and Tenantry's case are not the profession of the defendants; the relevant facts are that the defendants in both cases occupied a position of superiority, assumed a duty to act in good faith, and then breached their duty. In Colorado, breach of fiduciary duty is actionable, clergy malpractice is not. Id. at 284-86.

A

[9][10] A prerequisite to finding a fiduciary duty is the existence of a fiduciary relationship. "A fiduciary relation exists between two persons when one of them is under a duty to act for or to give advice for the benefit of another upon matters within the scope of the relation." Restatement (Second) of Torts § 874 cmt. a (1979). A fiduciary relationship may arise where one party occupies a superior position relative to another. Stuart M. Speiser et al., The American Law of Torts, § 36:81 (1983) (stating that there are two ways to find a fiduciary relationship: it may presumed from the relationship of the parties; or, it may exist as a result of the superiority and influence that accompanies a repose of trust); see also Bailey v. Allstate Ins. Co., 844 P.2d 1336 (Colo.App.1992) (recognizing that although some relationships give rise to a fiduciary duty as a matter of law, e.g., attorney-client, the nature of the claim is a relationship of trust, confidence and reliance). Although a professional relationship can be used as evidence that one party 322 has both the position and opportunity to influence the other party, a professional relationship is not a prerequisite to finding a fiduciary relationship. A fiduciary relationship can arise out of a relationship of blood, business, friendship, or association. Speiser et al., supra, § 36:81. The claim for breach of fiduciary duty in this case involves a party who used his superior position as a counselor, a bishop, and a final arbiter of problems with the clergy to the detriment of a vulnerable, dependent party.

[11] The clergy-parishioner relationship is not necessarily a fiduciary relationship. It does, however, involve the type of interaction that creates trust and reliance. Courts have recognized the fiduciary nature of the clergy-parishioner relationship. See, e.g., Destefano, 763 P.2d at 284 (holding a priest who abuses his role as counselor can be liable for breach of fiduciary duty); Erickson v. Christenson, 781 P.2d 383, 386 (Or.App.1989) (same); Adams v. Moore, 96 N.C.App. 359, 385 S.E.2d 799, 801 (1989) (finding preacher owed fiduciary duty to parishioner and violated that duty by using his position and influence to obtain the deed to parishioner's home).

The existence of the fiduciary relationship is a question of fact for the jury. Paine, Webber, Jackson & Curtis, Inc. v. Adams, 718 P.2d 508, 516-18 (Colo.1986); Tschudy v. Amos C. Sudler & Co., 158 Colo. 421, 426, 407 P.2d 877, 879 (1965). In this case, the jury was properly instructed on the requisite elements of a fiduciary relationship and determined a fiduciary relationship existed between Bishop Frey and Tenantry. [FN14] The jury's determination of a factual issue will not be reversed if the record reveals a reasonable basis to support it. Alzado v. Blinder, Robinson & Co., 752 P.2d 544 (Colo.1988); Rupert v. Clayton Brokerage Co. of St. Louis, Inc., 737 P.2d 1106 (Colo.1987); City of Aurora v. Loveless, 639 P.2d 1061 (Colo.1981).

> FN14. The trial court instructed the jury to consider, among other things, the extent to which Tenantry trusted the defendants; whether Tenantry's repose of trust was justified; whether the Diocese or Bishop Frey knew, or should have known, that

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

> Tenantry was relying on Bishop Frey to look out for her interests; whether the Diocese or Bishop Frey invited, accepted, or acquiesced in Tenantry's trust; and, whether the Diocese or Bishop Frey undertook to represent her interests. The defendants did not object to these instructions.

In the meeting between Bishop Frey and Tenantry the parties did not occupy equal positions. Bishop Frey held a position of authority in the church and had the power to resolve conflicts in the church. In addition, Bishop Frey's role during the meeting was as a counselor to Tenantry, not as a representative of the Diocese or Father Robinson. If Bishop Frey was acting only for the Diocese and Father Robinson, he failed to convey that fact to Tenantry and led her to believe he was acting in her interest.

Bishop Frey had ordered a meeting with Tenantry and Tenantry believed he had the power to decide if she would lose her salvation. Tenantry was mentally unstable and Bishop Frey recognized that she was fragile and had a pathological sense of guilt. The superior position of Bishop Frey and the power he had over Tenantry is evinced by Tenantry's request for permission to talk to people in her family and for special permission to speak to her husband. The record supports the jury's finding that Bishop Frey was in a superior position and was able to exert substantial influence over Tenantry.

B

[12] An unequal relationship does not automatically create a fiduciary duty. In order to be liable the superior party must assume a duty to act in the dependent party's best interest. See Hill v. Bache Halsey Stuart Shields Inc., 790 F.2d 817 (10th Cir.1986) (recognizing that fiduciary liability requires not only a repose of trust, but an assumption of a duty and breach of that duty); First Nat'l Bank of Meeker v. Theos, 794 P.2d 1055 (Colo.App.1990) (same). The defendants assert they are not liable because Bishop Frey and the Diocese did not take any action that would allow the jury to conclude they assumed a duty to Tenantry. There is sufficient evidence that the defendants assumed a duty *323 to Tenantry when they acted to resolve the problems that were the result of the relationship between Father Robinson and Tenantry.

Father Myers informed the Diocese of the relationship between Tenantry and Father Robinson as early as August of 1985. Father Myers stated he took no action after informing the Diocese because the Diocese had assumed control of the matter. The fact the Diocese had assumed control was reinforced by Bishop Frey's assumption of personal responsibility for the resolution of the matter. Bishop Frey asked Moses to rely on him to take care of "whatever needed to happen" to resolve the issues created by the sexual relationship between Tenantry and Father Robinson. Bishop Frey asked to speak to Tenantry to resolve the problem. The record supports the jury's finding that Bishop Frey and the Diocese assumed a duty on behalf of Tenantry.

[13] One of the fiduciary's duties is the duty to deal "with utmost good faith and solely for the benefit" of the dependent party. Destefano, 763 P.2d at 284. Once a member of the clergy accepts the parishioner's trust and accepts the role of counsellor, a duty exists to act with the utmost good faith for the benefit of the parishioner. See Destefano, 763 P.2d at 284. The breach of the duty which the Diocese and Bishop Frey assumed is evinced by Bishop Frey's actions.

Bishop Frey had significant experience in addressing the issue of a priest's sexual involvement with a parishioner. During the course of his seventeen years as a bishop in Colorado, Bishop Frey had, on seven occasions, dealt with sexual relationships between a priest and a parishioner. Bishop Frey also knew of Tenantry's vulnerability. Despite his experience in handling issues of clergy misconduct and his knowledge of Tenantry's extreme vulnerability, Bishop Frey took no action to help Tenantry. Acting as the representative for the Diocese, Bishop Frey failed to assist Tenantry in understanding that she was not the only person responsible for her sexual relationship with Father Robinson. He did not recommend counseling for Tenantry but did recommend counseling for Father Robinson and ordered Father Robinson to make progress reports on the counseling. Bishop Frey's only action in regard to Tenantry was to bind her to secrecy. Thus, Bishop Frey assumed control of a situation that demanded he consider Tenantry's interests and then used Tenantry's trust to her detriment.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

The record supports the jury's finding that a fiduciary relationship existed between Bishop Frey and Tenantry, that the Diocese and Bishop Frey assumed a duty toward Tenantry, and that the Diocese and Bishop Frey breached their duty.

IV

[14] Bishop Frey and the Diocese contend that the jury erred in finding the Diocese negligent in hiring and supervising Father Robinson and that the alleged negligence caused Tenantry's injuries. Bishop Frey and the Diocese maintain that there was no employment relationship between the Diocese and Father Robinson and even if there was, there was insufficient evidence in the record to support these negligence claims. [FN15]

FN15. Frey and the Diocese also contend that the First Amendment of the United States Constitution was violated by the trial court when it admitted into evidence two pamphlets which helped establish the employment relationship between the Diocese and Robinson. As discussed supra part II, Tenantry's claims for negligent hiring and supervision are not barred by the First Amendment of the United States Constitution because neutral principles of law can be applied. In order to determine if an employer- employee relationship exists, we do not have to interpret or weigh church doctrine. See Bishop and Diocese of Colorado v. Mote, 716 P.2d 85, 95 (Colo.1986) (quoting Jones v. Wolf, 443 U.S. 595, 604, 99 S.Ct. 3020, 3026, 61 L.Ed.2d 775 (1979)) (Colorado, in adopting the 'neutral-principles' doctrine, recognized "a civil court must take special care to scrutinize the [church] document in purely secular terms, and not to rely on religious precepts....").

A

[15][16][17][18] An employer may be liable for harm to others for negligently employing 324 an improper person for a task which may involve a risk to others. [FN16] Restatement (Second) of Agency § 213(b) (1958); Connes v. Molalla Transport System, Inc., 831 P.2d 1316, 1320 (Colo.1992). It is axiomatic that a prerequisite to establishing negligent hiring is an employment or agency relationship. The existence of an agency relationship is ordinarily a question of fact to be determined by the fact finder. Stortroen v. Beneficial Fin. Co., 736 P.2d 391 (Colo.1987); Marron v. Helmecke, 100 Colo. 364, 67 P.2d 1034 (1937). A court can only decide whether an agency relationship exists as a matter of law when the facts are not in dispute. Stortroen, 736 P.2d at 395; Smith v. Davis, 67 Colo. 128, 186 P. 519 (1920). The existence of an agency relationship can be proven by the conduct of the parties. Victorio Realty Group, Inc. v. Ironwood IX, 713 P.2d 424 (Colo.App.1985); see also Restatement (Second) of Agency § 1 cmt. a (1958) (stating "[t]he relation of agency is created as the result of conduct"). Tenantry produced sufficient evidence to raise a factual dispute on the issue of the relationship between the Diocese and Father Robinson as well as the relationship between Bishop Frey and Father Robinson. Because a dispute existed, the trial court properly submitted the issue to the jury.

FN16. Almost invariably, in a claim for negligent hiring, the tort committed by the employee for which the employer may be held liable is an intentional tort committed outside the scope of employment. Connes v. Molalla Transport System, Inc., 831 P.2d 1316, 1321 (Colo.1992). Torts committed within the scope of employment, however, may create vicarious liability. The tort of negligent hiring is a separate cause of action and does not involve vicarious liability. The principle of negligent hiring is based not on the rule of agency but on the law of torts and is therefore distinguishable from the agency doctrine of vicarious liability discussed infra in part V. Id. at 1320-21 (quoting Di Cosala v. Kay, 91 N.J. 159, 450 A.2d 508, 515 (1982)) ("Thus, the tort of negligent hiring addresses the risk created by exposing members of the public to a potentially dangerous individual, while the doctrine of respondeat superior is based on the theory that the employee is the agent or is acting for the employer. Therefore the scope of employment limitation on liability which is part of the respondeat superior doctrine is not implicit in the wrong of negligent hiring.").

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

[19][20] Agency is ultimately a question of the intention of the parties and is evidenced by their acts and not on what the relationship is called. Granite State Fire Ins. Co. v. Mitton, 98 F.Supp. 706 (D.Colo.1951), aff'd 196 F.2d 988 (10th Cir.1952). What is critical is that the parties materially agree to enter into a particular relation to which the legal consequences of agency attach even though those consequences might not have been contemplated by the parties at the time of their agreement. Stortroen, 736 P.2d at 391. An "agent" is generally one who acts for, or in place of, another, or is entrusted with the business of another. Victorio Realty Group, Inc., 713 P.2d at 424.

[21] The control a principal exercises over the manner of work performed by an agent is evidence that an agency relation exists. [FN17] United States v. Young, 736 F.2d 565, 567-68 (10th Cir.1983) rev'd on other grounds, 470 U.S. 1, 105 S.Ct. 1038, 84 L.Ed.2d 1 (1985). No one factor, including control, is determinative. Dana's Housekeeping v. Butterfield, 807 P.2d 1218, 1220 (Colo.App.1990). The most important factor in determining whether a person is an agent is "the right to control, not the fact of control." Id.; Olsen v. Bondurant & Co., 759 P.2d 861, 864 (Colo.App.1988).

FN17. For example, in Bradbury v. Phillips Petroleum Co., 815 F.2d 1356 (10th Cir.1987), the court found sufficient control to support a jury finding of agency, albeit under a lesser standard, between the exploration company and a drilling company that had contracted to perform work as an independent contractor. The court found the following evidence established an agency relation between the drilling company (agent) and the exploration company (principal): (1) the drilling company drilled where the exploration company requested; (2) the exploration company made arrangements with local landowners to secure access and drilling rights for the drilling company; (3) an employee of the exploration company would receive complaints about the drilling company drilling on the wrong property; and, (4) that the exploration company had an employee at the drilling site on a daily basis indicating a supervisory role. Id. at 1360. The evidence in this case establishes sufficient control to support the jury finding of agency.

325 At trial, sufficient evidence was presented to establish that the structure of the Episcopal Church was such that the Diocese and Bishop Frey had and exercised the right of control over the manner of work performed by a priest as well as the hiring, compensation, counseling performed by the priest and discipline of the priest. The evidence was sufficient, in this case, to support the finding of an agency relation between the Diocese and Father Robinson.

The evidence presented at trial shows that the structure of the Episcopal Church is basically hierarchal. A pamphlet distributed by the Episcopalian Church titled "About Being an Episcopalian" (Exhibit 25) contains a chart of the "Structure of the Episcopal Church." The chart graphically shows that the bishop presides over the Diocese and the priests. A priest presides over the parish "subject to the bishop's approval." In "The Episcopal Church: Essential Facts" another pamphlet admitted during the trial (Exhibit 24), the Episcopal Church defines the role of priests: "Priests (also known as presbyters) are ordained and consecrated to assist the bishop in overseeing the Church." The pamphlet sets forth that the diocese "is governed by its bishop and a diocesan convention composed of clergy of the diocese and lay persons elected by the parishes." Vestries call rectors to serve only after consultation with the bishop. [FN18] Additionally, the bishop signs a letter promoting a priest to a pastor of a parish.

FN18. The dissent distinguishes the hiring of a rector from the hiring of an assistant priest and points to evidence that the rector supervises the day-to-day duties of the assistant priest, and only the rector can terminate the assistant priest. This evidence was controverted by an expert in pastoral care who testified on cross-examination:
Q: As a matter of fact, in the Episcopal

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

> Church, you are familiar with the fact that the bishop of an Episcopal Church does not have the right to veto [the choice of] an assistant, a curate, I am talking about a curate [assistant priest] now, not a priest.
> A: If you are using the term "veto" which is not a church term to refer to some sort of canon which says you can say no, yes. If you are talking about the effect of the ability to veto, you are wrong. The reality is that the bishop can influence that choice quite easily. Even if we assume, arguendo, that the rector has exclusive control over an assistant priest, the rector's acts are imputed to the Diocese under the principles of agency. The Diocese and the bishop have substantial control over the rector and the rector and the Diocese, in turn, have control over the assistant priest. If the rector is a subagent of the bishop, an agent of the Diocese, and the assistant priest is a subagent of either the bishop or the rector, the actions of the rector and assistant priest are imputed to Bishop Frey and the Diocese. See Bradbury, 815 F.2d at 1360 (stating that because an employee of the principal exploration company supervised the day-to-day activities of an "independent contractor" drilling company, evidence existed of an agency relationship between the exploration company and the drilling company); see also Restatement (Second) of Agency § 5 cmt. d (1958) ("A subagent performing acts which the appointing agent has authorized him to perform in accordance with an authorization from the principal is an agent of the principal.... Furthermore, the subagent stands in a fiduciary relation to the principal, and is subject to all the liabilities of an agent to the principal....").

Other evidence presented at trial establishes the relationship among the rector, the bishop, the diocese, and the assistant priest. The rector supervises an assistant priest's counseling duties which are specifically prescribed by regulations promulgated by the Diocese. In addition, the rector in this case stated that he reported to the bishop and that the bishop made final decisions on discipline. Father Robinson testified that when a priest needs pastoral care, the priest looks to the bishop. The Diocese has independent responsibility for the employment of priests. The bishop oversees ordination, discipline, counseling, the maintenance of personnel files and the provision of information with respect to hiring. Vestries rely on the Diocese to prepare and educate candidates, to obtain psychological evaluations of candidates for ordination, and provide information about individuals who are being considered for clergy positions in the parish. While the individual priests and parishes may be independently responsible for their day-to-day activities, the Diocese exercises an employment option in the hiring of its pastors.

Gary Richard Schoener (Schoener), an expert in pastoral counseling and care and treatment of priests who have had sexual 326 contact with parishioners, testified that the structure of the Episcopal Church was such that the Diocese had substantial control over hiring, compensation, counseling by priests, and discipline of priests. [FN19]

> FN19. Schoener testified that his services had been utilized by the Episcopal Church on a number of occasions and that he serves on a faculty that trains bishops, priests, and lay people to be leaders in the Episcopal church. In addition, the Episcopal House of Bishops, which Schoener described as a national office that supports bishops around the country, refers cases of sexual exploitation of parishioners to him. The cost for instructing the diocese on issues such as counseling the pastor and communicating to the parishioners is paid for by the House of Bishops.

Schoener also testified that the Diocese is represented by the bishop. His testimony included a description of the bishop's role in the Diocese's hiring process:

> First of all, the diocese and specifically the Bishop basically keeps some degree of awareness of what is going on in the training of a potential priest. The priest sent from here to a seminary stays in contact, periodically lets the bishop know how things are going in the seminary training or in the practical experience that is connected with that. In addition, periodic reports are made by > the seminary or the people overseeing the actual pastoral counselor training experience to the bishop describing how the person is doing, how they are progressing and including problems or inadequacies in their work. The diocese does set policies and standards for the review of the person once they have finished seminary, and the question is are we going to have one of our churches hire them.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

(Emphasis added.) He described the mechanism that "the diocese through the bishop" uses to evaluate the individuals who have completed seminary and seek employment. Part of the process includes having the potential priest undergo psychological evaluations. The Diocese hires a psychologist to do the evaluation and, in addition to the psychologist's own report, the Diocese requires the psychologist to complete a form supplied by the Diocese. [FN20] Thus, the Diocese has a mechanism for directing the psychologist's assessment.

> FN20. Because the Diocese assumes this screening role, it keeps all the records on the candidates. The Diocese's file led Schoener to conclude:
> [The Diocese] had a fair degree of knowledge of his background during his training process, some of the problems [Father Robinson] had.... they had as is their job, helped work out a game plan for him to get a job, to get a decent salary, and served in the role as a helper to he and his family, to help him come back to Colorado and get a position and to get paid decently.

Schoener acknowledged that the vestries make the final hiring decision but "[t]he vestries or the managing bodies of the Episcopal congregation [are] counting on the bishop for checking out the clergy. Although they do the actual hiring, they assume they are being given candidates who have a clean bill of health." Schoener noted vestries "don't do the sort of screening that an employer might do with a certain amount of detailed background check. That's presumed to be done by the diocese." He explained the control the Diocese has over the hiring process by noting, "it is the bishop and the diocese that determines in effect who is available to be called by a congregation [i.e.,] to be considered to be hired. You can't just submit your name because you finished a seminary and be available to be hired."

The evidence of the Diocese's control does not end with the evidence of its substantial input in the hiring decisions. The bishop's role, Schoener said, also includes input into a priest's compensation:

> the bishop is expected to, and in this case in fact did, look after the well- being of priests and their families as regards what kind of money they get paid. For example, the bishop may not concur with an offer being made to a priest simply because the pay is not adequate or benefits are not adequate. And this file demonstrates that quite well. There is quite a bit of correspondence around money and benefits, and that's the key thing that the priest looks to the bishop to help with....

(Emphasis added.)

The bishop's control over the manner in which priests conduct their activities also *327 includes the bishop's substantial input on discipline decisions. Schoener testified that the bishop could propose discipline and because of his "considerable influence," the vestry would comply with his recommendation:

> I guarantee you if you want the bishop to walk over to the vestry, which is the managing body, and say you have a problem here. We have to do something about it. He has to go on medical leave for a period of time until we sort this out. The likelihood the vestry will say no is very, very slim. It is an extraordinary rather rare case where if a bishop says this is what you really should do, they don't do it. Now, bishops come to me with frustrations sometimes because the churches don't do it quickly enough. The bishop often realizes the kind of liability the Diocese has and wants something done quickly, beyond dragging their feet. I haven't known a Diocese or congregation at any time to say no [to the bishop].

He pointed out that Bishop Frey addressed seven cases of sexual misconduct by priests and that his recommendations regarding discipline had been followed in all seven cases. Schoener's testimony is supported by the testimony of Father Myers who acknowledged that the bishop is the final authority in all disciplinary matters.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

In addition to controlling certain aspects of hiring, compensation, and discipline, the Diocese also controls and supervises the duties of priests in their role as counselors. Schoener stated that the Diocese sets standards and rules regarding pastoral counseling and that priests "look to the diocese for some rules around pastoral counseling, ... that's where they see the rules coming from." Schoener specifically noted that Bishop Frey indicated he had given talks about national issues or standards to the priests in the Diocese. In addition, Father Farr testified that the Diocese had specific printed regulations on pastoral counseling and that these regulations describe the form counseling should take. The regulations include such details as how appointments are to be kept, what attire is to be worn, where in the room the prayer book and desk should be, and even how the pastor should sit.

All of these facts indicate that a priest is not independent of the Diocese but is controlled by the Diocese and the bishop. The priest's education is monitored by the bishop, he is put through a screening for hire by the Diocese which includes psychological evaluation. The priest's compensation is affected by the bishop, the priest's discipline is controlled by the bishop, and every part of the form of the priest's counseling is regulated by the Diocese. The evidence at trial created a factual issue regarding whether an agency relationship existed. The trial court properly submitted this issue to the jury for determination and the jury found that there was an agency relationship between Father Robinson and the Diocese.

[22][23] Because an agency or employment relationship existed between the Diocese and Father Robinson, and Father Robinson's duties included a close relationship with parishioners, the Diocese could be liable for negligent hiring and supervision. Liability of the employer is predicated on the employer's antecedent ability to recognize a potential employee's "attribute[s] of character or prior conduct" which would create an undue risk of harm to those with whom the employee came in contact in executing his employment responsibilities. [FN21] Connes, 831 P.2d at 1321. An employer has a duty to exercise reasonable care in making his decision to hire. 328Connes,* 831 P.2d at 1320; Island City Flying Service v. General Elec. Credit Corp., 585 So.2d 274, 278 (Fla.1991); Plains Resources, Inc. v. Gable, 235 Kan. 580, 682 P.2d 653, 662 (1984). The scope of the employer's duty in exercising reasonable care in a hiring decision depends on the employee's anticipated degree of contact with other persons in carrying out the duties of employment. Connes, 831 P.2d at 1321. The requisite degree of care increases, and may require expanded inquiry into the employee's background, when the employer expects the employee to have frequent contact with the public or when the nature of the employment fosters close contact and a special relationship between particular persons and the employee. See id. at 1322 (stating that employers who expect their employees to have frequent or close contact with others are required to go beyond the job application and perform an independent inquiry into the background of the candidate); Restatement (Second) of Agency § 213 cmt. d (1958) ("If, however, the work is likely to subject third persons to serious risk of great harm, there is a special duty of investigation.").

> FN21. Bishop Frey and the Diocese contend that in order to establish a claim of negligent hiring, the plaintiff must show that the employer was aware of the employee's specific propensity and that the employee has a history of criminal, tortious or otherwise dangerous conduct. We disagree. Liability for negligent hiring is not based on past conduct alone, but may also be based on character attributes of the employee. In Connes, we held that liability may be predicated on the employer's hiring of a person where the employer believes that the person by "reason of some attribute of character or prior conduct, would create an undue risk of harm to others in carrying out his or her employment responsibilities." Connes, 813 P.2d at 1321 (emphasis added).

[24] The duty is increased in this case because the Diocese placed Father Robinson in a position that required not only frequent contact with others, but induced reliance and trust through the counseling process. A parishioner in pastoral counseling may develop a deep emotional dependence on a priest. See Ferguson v. People, 824 P.2d 803 (Colo.1992). The emotional dependence is called "transference" and is a typical reaction characterized by a patient unconsciously attributing repressed feelings to the counselor. Transference is one of the most significant concepts in therapy. See Noyles & Kolb, Modern Clinical Psychiatry 505 (6th ed. 1963), quoted in Simmons v. United States, 805 F.2d 1363, 1365 (9th Cir.1986). A counselor must be capable of addressing these feelings, both loving and hostile. [FN22] See Simmons, 805 F.2d at 1365 (noting the counselor should look for manifestations of the transference and be prepared to handle it as it develops).

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

FN22. Courts have routinely regarded the mishandling of transference as malpractice or gross negligence. See, e.g., Vigilant Ins. Co. v. Employers Ins. of Wausau, 626 F.Supp. 262 (S.D.N.Y.1986); Aetna Life & Casualty Co. v. McCabe, 556 F.Supp. 1342 (E.D.Pa.1983); Waters v. Bourhis, 40 Cal.3d 424, 220 Cal.Rptr. 666, 709 P.2d 469 (1985); Seymour v. Lofgreen, 209 Kan. 72, 495 P.2d 969 (1972); L.L. v. Medical Protective Co., 122 Wis.2d 455, 362 N.W.2d 174 (1984).

Father Robinson's duties included counseling and close association with parishioners at the church. The Diocese was in possession of a psychological report which concluded that Father Robinson has a "sexual identification ambiguity." [FN23] Another psychological report indicated that Father Robinson had a problem with depression and suffered from low self-esteem. [FN24] An expert testified that a large number of clergy who have sexual relationships with their parishioners do so partially as a result of suffering from depression and low self-esteem. Father Robinson's struggle with his sexual identity and his problems with depression and low self-esteem put the Diocese on notice to inquire further whether Father Robinson was capable of counseling parishioners. These reports gave the Diocese a reason to believe Father Robinson should not be put in a position to counsel vulnerable individuals and that might be unable to handle the transference phenomenon. The failure to communicate this knowledge to the vestry and subsequent placement of Father Robinson in the role of *329 counselor breached the Diocese's duty of care to Tenantry.

FN23. At trial a clinical psychologist testified:

> Dr. Dolby [the psychologist filing the report on Father Robinson] makes a statement [Father Robinson] has a history of sexual identification ambiguity. Although he says that [Father Robinson] functions exclusively as a heterosexual both physically and in fantasy. His marriage is apparently satisfying. I don't understand what that means. Obviously, it would be of some concern to know if he is having any sort of struggle in the area of sexual identity. That is something that I think a reasonably prudent bishop or anyone else reading this would want to know what that meant, what is the issue that has been found here.

FN24. There were two psychological reports presented at trial that were in the possession of the Diocese. The first was dated June 9, 1980, and the second April 25, 1983.

B

[25] The jury also found the Diocese was negligent in its supervision of Father Robinson. The Restatement (Second) of Agency section 213 (1958) states:

> A person conducting an activity through servants or other agents is subject to liability for harm resulting from his conduct if he is negligent or reckless:
>
> ....
>
> (c) in the supervision of the activity....

Comment d states:

> The principal may be negligent because he has reason to know that the servant or other agent, because of his qualities, is likely to harm others in view of the work or instrumentalities entrusted to him. If the dangerous quality of the agent causes harm, the principal may be liable under the rule that one initiating conduct having undue tendency to cause harm is liable therefor.

An employer may therefore be subject to liability for negligent supervision if he knows or should have known that an "employee's conduct would subject third parties to an unreasonable risk of harm...." Destefano, 763 P.2d at 288.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

Both the Diocese and Bishop Frey had previous exposure to the problem of sexual relationships developing between priests and parishioners because the problem had arisen seven times before. The psychological reports gave notice that further supervision may be required. The reports indicate problems of sexual identification ambiguity, depression and low self-esteem. Father Robinson's file also indicated he had problems with authority. Father Robinson had an inability to respond to superior authority. A reasonable person would have inquired further into Father Robinson's known difficulty in dealing with superior authority, and would have assumed a greater degree of care in monitoring his conduct. In light of its knowledge, it was reasonable for the jury to determine the defendants should have been alert to the possibility of problems with Father Robinson and taken adequate steps to insure Father Robinson was not in a position where he could abuse the trust he enjoys as a priest conducting counseling. [FN25]

> FN25. Father Robinson testified that he did not have any guidance on how his office could adversely affect the people he counseled. He also testified that the church does not have any procedures for priests to follow when they have trouble in counseling nor does the church have any procedure for addressing romantic or physical relationships between priests and parishioners. Father Robinson stated that the only assistance for a troubled priest is the tradition of seeking the help of the bishop.

V

[26] The jury determined that the Diocese and Bishop Frey were vicariously liable for Father Robinson's tortious conduct. Father Robinson, however, was not acting within the scope and course of his employment and therefore the Diocese and Bishop Frey are not vicariously liable. [FN26]

> FN26. As noted supra part IV(A), the jury had sufficient evidence to find that Father Robinson was an agent of the Diocese.

[27][28][29][30][31] The agency doctrine of vicarious liability is based on the theory of respondeat superior which postulates that a master may be liable for the acts of an agent acting on the master's behalf. Connes, 831 P.2d at 1320-21; Cooley v. Eskridge, 125 Colo. 102, 241 P.2d 851 (1952); Restatement (Second) of Agency § 213 (1958). An employer may be held vicariously liable for an employee's tort only when the tort is committed within the course and scope of employment. [FN27] 330Destefano, 763 P.2d at 286;* McDonald v. Lakewood Country Club, 170 Colo. 355, 461 P.2d 437 (1969). An employee is acting within the scope of his employment if he is doing the work assigned to him by his employer, or what is necessarily incidental to that work, or customary in the employer's business. Destefano, 763 P.2d at 287; Russell v. First Am. Mortgage Co., 39 Colo.App. 360, 565 P.2d 972 (1977). We have previously held "[w]hen a priest has sexual intercourse with a parishioner it is not part of the priest's duties nor customary within the business of the church. Such conduct is contrary to the principles of Catholicism and is not incidental to the tasks assigned a priest by a diocese." [FN28] Destefano, 763 P.2d at 287; see also Dausch v. Rykse, 1993 WL 34873, 1993 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 1448 (N.D.Ill., Feb. 9, 1993) ("When a clergyman has sexual relations with a parishioner, particularly when he is counseling the parishioner for emotional problems, his actions would clearly not be part of his ministerial duties nor customary within the business of the church." (citations omitted)).

> FN27. The scope of employment requirement restricts vicarious liability for tortious conduct to actions that "should be considered as one of the normal risks to be borne by the business in which the servant is employed." Restatement (Second) of Agency § 229 cmt. a (1958). Although the commission of an intentional tort may sometimes be within the scope of employment, the agent's intent in committing the tortious act must be to further the employer's business. See Cooley v. Eskridge, 125 Colo. 102, 112, 241 P.2d 851, 856 (1952) (stating authority to do an unlawful act will not be implied unless it is warranted from the nature of the employment itself) (citations omitted); Byrd v. Faber, 57 Ohio St.3d 56, 565 N.E.2d 584, 587 (1991) (giving the example that a bar owner employing a bouncer may be vicariously liable to a patron if the bouncer injures the patron while removing him from the premises). However, if an employee commits an intentional tort solely for reasons that do not further his employer's business or cannot be considered a natural incident of employment, the employer cannot be vicariously liable. Cooley, 125 Colo. at 114, 241 P.2d at 857. The scope of employment limitation on vicarious liability partially distinguishes vicarious liability from the tort of negligent hiring. See supra note 16.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

FN28. We do not find the distinction between the Catholic priest in Destefano, who takes a vow of celibacy, and Episcopal priests, who are free to marry and engage in sexual acts, to be dispositive. Regardless of the denomination, when a priest engages in oral sex with a mentally ill parishioner, the priest is not acting within the scope of employment.

[32] There is no evidence in the record to support Tenantry's contention that Father Robinson was acting in the scope of his employment by engaging in oral sex with her. [FN29] In fact, the evidence in the record establishes that Father Robinson was not acting within the scope of his employment by engaging in fellatio and cunnilingus with Tenantry. Bishop Frey testified that Father Robinson's conduct was a "serious breach of [his] ordination vows." Father Robinson testified that his physical relationship was not within the scope of his employment with the church. Even Tenantry's own experts testified that Father Robinson's sexual conduct was outside the scope of his priestly duties. [FN30]

FN29. Although it is evident that a priest who engages in tortious sexual contact with a parishioner under the facts in this case is not acting within the scope of his employment, Tenantry nevertheless claims that the Diocese is vicariously liable because it was foreseeable that Robinson would mishandle the transference phenomenon. There is some support for the theory that reasonable foreseeability can establish vicarious liability. In Milla v. Roman Catholic Archbishop of Los Angeles, 187 Cal.App.3d 1453, 232 Cal.Rptr. 685 (1986), the California appellate court found that a Catholic Archdiocese could be held liable under the theory of respondeat superior for several priests' sexual contact with a parishioner if their conduct was characteristic of the activities of the church or reasonably foreseeable. This concept was adopted in Byrd, 565 N.E.2d at 588. While the phenomenon of transference is foreseeable, we do not wish to expand the concept of vicarious liability as the California appellate or Ohio supreme court did. Expanding vicarious liability of a religious organization to cover foreseeable acts may well intrude into the First Amendment of the United States Constitution. Rather, the phenomenon of transference is better dealt with in this case through the claim of negligent hiring and supervision.

FN30. Questions 8, 9, and 10 of the special verdict form completed by the jury read as follows:
QUESTION NO. 8. Was Robinson an agent of the defendant Diocese?
ANSWER: Yes
QUESTION NO. 9. If the answer to number 8 is "yes," was defendant Robinson acting within the course and scope of his agency during the events regarding Mary Tenantry?
ANSWER: Yes
QUESTION NO. 10. If the answer to number 9 is "yes," continue at question 11. If the answer to number 9 is "no," did the defendant Diocese ratify non-party Robinson's actions in connection with the events regarding Mary Tenantry?
ANSWER: ___
Based upon the answers to questions 8 and 9, it was not necessary to answer question 10 on ratification and question 10 was crossed out by the jury. Accordingly, we do not address the issue of whether the Diocese ratified Father Robinson's actions.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

*331 The jury's finding that Robinson was acting within the scope of his employment when he had tortious sexual contact with Tenantry is erroneous as a matter of law. The Diocese is not vicariously liable for Robinson's acts of oral sex with Tenantry. We therefore order the trial court to vacate its judgment holding the Diocese and Bishop Frey vicariously liable for Father Robinson's acts. [FN31]

FN31. An erroneous portion of a judgment may be set aside if susceptible to segregation, and the remainder of the judgment may be affirmed. Department of Transportation v. Kendricks, 148 Ga.App. 242, 250 S.E.2d 854, 859 (1978); Chicago, Indianapolis & Louisville Ry. Co. v. Brown, 157 Ind. 544, 60 N.E. 346 (1901). In this case, the jury findings in the trial court's special verdict form specifically awarded $488,400 in past and future damages and interest to Tenantry for the Diocese's vicarious liability for the acts of Father Robinson. It is this portion of the judgment we vacate.

VI

The judgment entered by the trial court is affirmed in part and reversed in part. We affirm the trial court judgment against the Diocese and Bishop Frey for breach of fiduciary duty, negligent hiring and supervision. We reverse the judgment that the Diocese and Bishop Frey are vicariously liable for the acts of Father Robinson and order the trial court to vacate the judgment predicated on the jury's finding of vicarious liability and the damages based on vicarious liability.

ROVIRA, C.J., concurs in part and dissents in part.

Chief Justice ROVIRA concurring in part and dissenting in part:

The majority holds that sufficient evidence was presented at trial to create a question for the jury regarding whether an employment or agency relationship existed between the Diocese of Colorado (diocese) and Father Paul Robinson and therefore, the diocese may be liable for the negligent hiring and supervision of Robinson. [FN1] For the reasons set forth below, I disagree and, accordingly, respectfully dissent.

FN1. It is unclear whether the majority concludes that the evidence supports a finding of either agency or employment, or both. Because the requirements for finding an employer-employee relation differ from those needed to find an agency relation--but either finding could support a claim for negligent hiring and supervision--I address each issue separately.

I

Mary Moses (plaintiff) was a parishioner at St. Philip and St. James Episcopal Church. Father Vernon Meyers was the head priest and rector of that parish. Father Paul Robinson was employed as an assistant priest at St. Philip and St. James. The parish is one local body of the Episcopal Diocese of Colorado. Bishop William Frey was the head of the diocese. [FN2]

FN2. Other relevant facts and information are detailed in the majority opinion, repetition of which is unnecessary here.

II

The majority correctly observes that "a prerequisite to establishing [a claim of] negligent hiring is an employment or agency relationship." Maj. op. at 324. Though not expressly stated by the majority, a finding of employment or agency, similarly, is a prerequisite to a claim of negligent supervision. See Restatement (Second) of Agency § 213 (1958). The question of agency is ordinarily a factual one, properly resolved by the trier of fact when conflicting evidence of agency is presented. Stortroen v. Beneficial Fin. Co., 736 P.2d 391, 395 (Colo.1987). A court may, however, properly decide whether an agency relation exists when the relevant facts are not in dispute. Id.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

While the majority points to several facts in support of its conclusion that the evidence presented was sufficient to create a factual dispute respecting whether the relationship between the diocese and Father Robinson was one of either agency or employment, those facts do not create such a dispute because they have no bearing on the critical elements needed to establish the existence of either of these legal relationships. Because the evidence pertaining to 332 those decisive elements* was undisputed and cannot, as a matter of law, support a finding of an agency or employment relationship, the Diocese of Colorado cannot be held liable for the negligent hiring and supervision of Father Robinson.

A

"Agency is the fiduciary relation which results from the manifestation of consent by one person to another that the other shall act on his behalf and subject to his control, and consent by the other so to act." Stortroen v. Beneficial Fin. Co., 736 P.2d 391, 395 (Colo.1987) (quoting Restatement (Second) of Agency § 1(1) (1957). See also Montano v. Land Title Guarantee Co., 778 P.2d 328, 331 (Colo.App.1989).

> The agency relation results if, but only if, there is an understanding between the parties which, as interpreted by the court, creates a fiduciary relation in which the fiduciary is subject to the directions of the one on whose account he acts. It is the element of continuous subjection to the will of the principal which distinguishes the agent from other fiduciaries and the agency agreement from other agreements.

Restatement (Second) of Agency § 1 cmt. b (1958) (emphasis added); United States v. Young, 736 F.2d 565, 567-68 (10th Cir.1983) rev'd on other grounds, 470 U.S. 1, 105 S.Ct. 1038, 84 L.Ed.2d 1 (1985) (holding that a showing of mere subordination to another is insufficient to establish agency or employment; the "right to control" must be shown under common law requirements); W. Edward Sell, Sell on Agency § 2 at 2 (1975) ("The agent differs from most other fiduciaries such as executors, trustees, etc., in that he remains under the continuous control of the principal as to matters relating to the object of his agency, throughout the entire period of his agency."); 2A C.J.S. Agency § 6 (1972) ("The right to control ... is the primary or essential test of agency ... without which no agency exists...."). As this authority makes clear, the sine qua non of the agency relationship is the right of continuous control by the principal over the acts of the agent. Thus, I agree with the majority's conclusion that "[t]he most important factor in determining whether a person is an agent is 'the right to control, not the fact of control.' " Maj. op. at 324 (quoting Dana's Housekeeping v. Butterfield, 807 P.2d 1218, 1220 (Colo.App.1990)).

The uncontradicted evidence presented at trial established that the diocese neither had the right of continuous control over Father Robinson nor exercised that "right." Indeed, no evidence was presented which created even the inference that the diocese was vested with such power over Father Robinson. Canon 14(a) of the Episcopal Church provides that "[a]ll assistant Clergy ... shall be selected by the rector ... and shall serve under the authority and direction of the Rector." Constitution & Canons for the Government of The Episcopal Church Title III, canon 14(a) at 80 (1988). Numerous witnesses testified that it was the rector at St. Philip and St. James Parish who gave Father Robinson his assignments and who instructed him as to how to carry out his day-to-day duties. Those same witnesses testified that those day-to-day activities would be supervised and controlled by the rector, and not the diocese or the bishop. Father Charles Farr, [FN3] Father Meyers, and Gary Schoener, [FN4] all were in complete agreement on these points. In short, the evidence established, as the majority concedes, that individual rectors are "independently responsible for their [assistant priests'] day-to-day activities." Maj. op. at 325.

FN3. Father Farr, who testified on behalf of plaintiff, was the rector at the Church of the Epiphany, another Episcopal Church located in Denver.

FN4. Schoener, who was qualified as an expert in the area of pastoral counseling and the care and treatment of offending priests, also testified on behalf of plaintiff.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

The fact that the individual rectors, and not the bishop or diocese, are charged with overseeing the day-to-day activities of assistant priests weighs heavily against a finding that an agency relation exists. See Restatement (Second) of Agency § 1 cmt. b (1958); maj. op. at 325. The power to *333 control and oversee Robinson's day-to-day activities is the method which, by definition, continuous control is exerted over him. Because it was the rector at St. Philip and St. James, and not the bishop or diocese, who exerted continuous control over Robinson, I would hold that no evidence was presented at trial to support the jury's verdict that an agency relation existed between Robinson and the diocese and that, as a matter of law, no such relation was established here.

B

The majority additionally concludes that "the Diocese exercises an employment option in the hiring of its pastors." Maj. op. at 325. Like continuous control in the context of agency, the power of continuous control is a critical element, or prerequisite, to finding an employer-employee relationship. Jacobson v. Doan, 136 Colo. 496, 503, 319 P.2d 975, 978 (1957) ("The determination of whose servant an employee is in a given case depends on who has the right to control him."); Magnuson v. Smith and Saetveit, P.C., 722 P.2d 1020, 1022 (Colo.App.1986) ("The central element in an employer-employee relationship is the right of the employer to control the details of performance of the employee's duties."); Miller v. Hirschbach Motor Lines, Inc., 714 S.W.2d 652, 658 (Mo.App.1986) (control over discharge of duties is a "preeminent characteristic" of employer-employee relationship). See also Restatement (Second) of Agency § 220 (1958). Other particularly probative indicators of an employment relationship include the power to hire and terminate, see e.g. King v. Southwestern Greyhound Lines, 169 F.2d 497, 499 (10th Cir.), cert. denied, 335 U.S. 891, 69 S.Ct. 245, 93 L.Ed. 428 (1948) (noting that numerous courts have held that the right to terminate a contract for services creates an employer-employee relationship as a matter of law); Hirschbach Motor Lines, Inc., 714 S.W.2d at 658 ("no single fact is more conclusive of the existence of the nature of the employment [relationship] than the right to discharge summarily"), and whether the purported employer pays the salary of or otherwise compensates the alleged employee. See Jacobson v. Doan, 136 Colo. 496, 319 P.2d 975 (1957). In sum, the dispositive elements needed to show an employer-employee relationship are:

> whether [the alleged employer] selected or employed [the employee]; whether wages or other consideration were to be paid; whether [the alleged employer] had the power or right to dismiss and the right to control [the alleged employee]. The central element is the right to control the details of performance.

CJI-Civ.3d 7:6 (1989).

As noted above, the undisputed evidence reveals that the diocese neither had nor exercised the right to control Father Robinson's day-to-day activities. Similarly, the undisputed evidence established that the diocese did not have the power or authority to either hire or terminate Father Robinson. Canon 14(a) provides that "[a]ny assistant selected shall serve at the discretion of the Rector...." Constitution & Canons for the Government of The Episcopal Church Title III, canon 14(a) at 80 (1988). Father Farr testified that an assistant priest serves at the pleasure of the rector, and only the rector can terminate the priest. Father Farr also stated that a bishop's approval is not needed prior to termination. Schoener testified that Bishop Frey did not have the authority to remove Father Robinson from his priestly duties. Rather, Schoener testified that "in that regard the church is the direct supervisor of that, that they have to make that decision."

Marie Fortune, another expert who testified on behalf of plaintiff, acknowledged that it was Father Meyers who presented Father Robinson to the vestry with the recommendation that he be hired. Meyers also conceded that the diocese had no "vote" in that matter. Furthermore, Meyers agreed that an assistant priest serves at the pleasure of the rector, and it is he who is charged with determining the priest's employment status.

Finally, it was undisputed that the parish, acting through its vestry, was the entity which compensated Robinson for his services, and not the diocese or Bishop Frey. *334 Again, Bishop Frey, Father Farr, and Father Meyers all confirmed this fact.

The diocese did not have the power to control Father Robinson's day-to-day activities. Nor did it have the power or authority to initiate or terminate Robinson's employment with the parish. [FN5] Finally, it was the parish of St. Philip and St. James that was responsible for compensating Robinson, not the diocese.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

> FN5. In my opinion, it strains credulity to conclude that one who lacks the power either to hire or terminate an "employee" can nevertheless occupy the position of employer with respect to hiring that employee. I for one am unable to see how the diocese could have been negligent in hiring Father Robinson when the undisputed evidence established not only that the diocese could not, but, in fact did not, hire Robinson.

Thus, I am of the opinion that the uncontradicted evidence precludes, as a matter of law, a finding that the diocese and Father Robinson occupied an employer-employee relationship.

III

The majority, however, points to number of facts about the structure of the Episcopal Church and places primary reliance on the testimony of Schoener in support of the conclusion that sufficient evidence was presented to create a jury question as to whether Robinson was either an agent or employee of the diocese. In my opinion, none of those facts support the conclusion for which they are enlisted, because none of them relate to the critical elements needed to establish an agency or employment relationship. The facts presented by the majority fall into two broad categories, each of which will be addressed in turn.

A

The first category of facts on which the majority relies in reaching its conclusion concerns the relationship among a diocese, bishop, and rector or head priest of a parish. Maj. op. at 325-326. Standing alone, all of these facts are entirely irrelevant to determining the legal relationship between Robinson and the diocese because Robinson was an assistant priest, not a rector. As common sense would suggest, extensive and uncontroverted evidence was presented at trial to establish that an assistant priest is not a rector, and that the duties, responsibilities, and supervisory relationships of rectors and assistant priests differ.

The majority apparently cites these facts, not to show that assistant priests and rectors are one and the same, but to establish that the doctrine of subagency is applicable here and that therefore, Robinson's conduct as a subagent of Meyers, who is an agent of the diocese, can be imputed to the diocese. Maj. op. at 325 n. 18.

The doctrine of subagency is set forth in the Restatement of Agency as follows: "A subagent is a person appointed by an agent empowered to do so, to perform functions undertaken by the agent for the principal, but for whose conduct the agent agrees with the principal to be primarily responsible for." Restatement (Second) of Agency § 5(1) (1958). In order to establish a subagent relation, it must be shown that the agent of the principal had agreed to be primarily responsible for the conduct of the alleged subagent. See id.; Estate of Greenberg v. Skurski, 95 Nev. 736, 602 P.2d 178, 179 (1979). In my opinion, while the doctrine of subagency could have been relied on here, the fact is, it was not.

The only instruction concerning the establishment of either an agency or employment relationship which the trial court tendered was Jury Instruction 23. That instruction provided:

> The term principal and agent refers to the relationship which exists when one person, the principal, retains another, the agent, to do certain work. In determining whether the relationship exists you should consider whether the Diocese of Colorado and/or Bishop William Frey selected or retained Father Robinson; whether wages or other consideration were to be paid by them; whether the Diocese of Colorado and/or Bishop William Frey had the power or right to dismiss and the right to control Father *335 Robinson. The central element is the right to control the details of performance. It matters not whether the Diocese of Colorado and/or Bishop William Frey actually exercised any right to control Father Robinson.

This was the only instruction proffered to the jury regarding the question of how, and whether, an agency or employment relationship exists. Consequently, no other possible legal bases for finding such relationships under the facts of this case could have been considered by the jury in reaching its verdict. Because the jury could not have concluded that Robinson was a subagent of the diocese, evidence which tends to establish subagency cannot be used to establish that evidence was presented either to create a question for the jury or to support the jury's verdict. Therefore, the majority's reliance on this first category of evidence is, in my opinion, misplaced, and in no way supports the conclusion that sufficient evidence was presented to create a jury question.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

B

The second category of evidence cited by the majority concerns the relationship among the diocese, bishop, and assistant priests, and is culled almost exclusively from the testimony of Gary Schoener. While I concede that the evidence cited by the majority establishes that a bishop can exert influence over assistant priests, such influence falls far short of establishing the requirements needed to prove an agency or employment relationship.

First, it is important to reiterate that the majority does not contend that either the bishop or diocese controlled the day-to-day activities of Father Robinson. Maj. op. at 325. Rather, the majority concedes that "individual priests and parishes may be independently responsible for [assistant priests'] day-to-day activities...." Id. [FN6] In spite of the fact that this critical element is lacking, the majority nevertheless concludes that the "Diocese exercises an employment option in the hiring of its priests." Id.

> FN6. While the majority acknowledges this fact, it nevertheless concludes that "Bishop Frey had and exercised the right of control over the manner of work performed by a priest as well as the hiring, compensation, and counseling performed by the priest and discipline." Maj. op. at 325. Irrespective of whatever inconsistency there may be in maintaining both of these propositions simultaneously, for the reasons that follow, I disagree that Bishop Frey had or exercised the right of control as described by the majority.

The majority notes that "[t]he rector supervises an assistant priest's counseling duties...." Maj. op. at 325. This is indicative of the fact that it is the rector, and not the bishop or diocese, that exerts continuous control over assistant priests. The fact that those counseling duties "are specifically prescribed by regulations promulgated by the Diocese," id., in no way alters this conclusion for the simple reason that pastoral counseling is only one of myriad duties and activities in which an assistant priest engages. In addition, this fact has no bearing on the question of the power to hire, terminate, or compensate assistant priests.

Similarly, though a priest may look to the bishop for "pastoral care," id., this fact is inapposite to the question of whether the bishop exerts continuous control over the conduct of the assistant priest. In fact, Schoener testified that an assistant priest would consult with a bishop only in exceptional circumstances. Likewise, even if the bishop has "independent responsibility" for the employment of assistant priests (including overseeing ordination, discipline, counseling, and maintenance of personal files), id., the sort of independent responsibility identified by the majority has no relevance to the question of whether the diocese exerts continuous control over the daily conduct of assistant priests, whether the diocese has the power to actually hire and terminate assistant priests, or whether the diocese compensates assistant priests. Finally, the fact that vestries rely on the bishop and diocese to prepare candidates and provide information about them is entirely irrelevant to the questions of control, employment decisions, and duty to compensate.

*336 In addition to the aforementioned facts, the majority quotes at length the testimony of Schoener as it related to his "description of the bishop's role in the Diocese's hiring process...." Maj. op. at 326, 326-327. Though I acknowledge that the Diocese does indeed play a role in the hiring of assistant priests--i.e., having "substantial input in the hiring decisions," maj. op. at 327--the majority fails to point to any evidence which established that the diocese is actually vested with the authority to hire or terminate assistant priests.

The closest the majority comes to pointing to such evidence is Schoener's statement that "it is the bishop and the diocese that determines in effect who is available to be called by a congregation [i.e.,] to be considered to be hired. You can't just submit your name because you finished a seminary and be available to be hired." Maj. op. at 326. However, Schoener also acknowledged that a given diocese determines who is available to be called only if a parish looks to that diocese for hiring guidance. Schoener stated that a parish is not bound to look only to candidates who have been approved by that parish's diocese. In fact, Schoener stated that in most states, local parishes look outside their own diocese for assistant priests. Furthermore, Schoener testified that St. Philip and St. James was in no way required or obligated to look only to the Diocese of Colorado for eligible candidates. Thus, a given diocese actually exerts much less influence in the hiring process than one could otherwise be led to assume. The majority, however, apparently misconstrues the extent to which a given parish is dependent on its diocese in the hiring of assistant priests, by concluding that the Diocese of Colorado exercises an employment "option," maj. op. at 326, with respect to the hiring of assistant priests at the diocese's parishes.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

The majority also paraphrases Schoener's testimony regarding the influence a bishop may exert over disciplinary decisions as follows: "the bishop could propose discipline and because of his 'considerable influence,' the vestry would comply with his recommendation...." Maj. op. at 327. Schoener did indeed testify as to the influence a bishop could exert in such matters, however he stated only that the likelihood of a vestry ignoring a bishop's advice was "very, very slim." Nevertheless, he acknowledged not only that sometimes parishes do not follow the advice of a bishop quickly enough but specifically recognized that vestries and churches do not always follow the advice of a Bishop: "If you talk to bishops," Schoener stated, "you will learn about that." Regardless of the precise scope of a bishop's influence in matters of discipline, nowhere was it ever suggested that such influence rises to the level of continuous control or that such influence extends to the actual hiring, termination, or duty to compensate assistant priests.

Finally, the fact that an assistant "priest's compensation is affected by the bishop," has nothing to do with the critical elements needed to establish an agency or employment relationship. The ability to affect the rate of compensation certainly cannot be equated with the power to actually hire or terminate employment. Nor is this ability to "affect" tantamount to a duty of compensation. The jury was specifically instructed that they should consider "whether wages or other consideration were to be paid by them [i.e., Bishop Frey or the diocese]," in determining whether an employment relation existed between Robinson and the diocese. See supra p. 334-335 (quoting Jury Instruction 23). The jury was not instructed to consider whether the diocese could "affect" the rate at which Robinson was compensated and therefore, the fact of such an ability cannot create a dispute properly resolved by the jury. Furthermore, it was undisputed that the bishop and diocese did not compensate Robinson, but that the parish, acting through its vestry, did.

C

Thus, the considerable number of facts and lengthy testimony cited by the majority do not support the conclusion that the diocese was either the principal or employer of Father Robinson, because none of those facts establish that the diocese had continuous control over Robinson, was *337 vested with the power to terminate his employment with the parish, or had the duty to compensate him for his services. [FN7] Though these facts do establish that Bishop Frey and the diocese were capable of exerting influence over the conduct of an assistant priest, such an ability cannot establish either an agency or employment relationship nor can it create a factual dispute as to whether such relationships exist.

FN7. This conclusion is supported by recognition that, standing alone, many of the facts cited by the majority occur in contexts which could in no way be regarded as agency or employment relations. For example, to the extent that the bishop oversees ordination, discipline, and the maintenance of personal files on prospective assistant priests, he is not unlike this court, which is vested with the power and obligation to oversee the admittance, discipline, and maintenance of personal files on members of the Colorado Bar. Similarly, to the extent that vestries rely on the diocese to prepare and educate candidates, they are not unlike government agencies and law firms who rely on law schools to properly train and educate prospective attorneys. In this sense, this > court and law schools are similarly vested with "independent responsibility" for the employment of lawyers. This fact does not of course, nor could it, support a conclusion that either the supreme court or law schools occupy an agency or employment relation with respect to all attorneys practicing in Colorado.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

>
> Likewise, while a bishop can "affect" an assistant priest's compensation, many people and organizations similarly affect the compensation paid to others while not occupying an employment relationship with them. For example, a labor union can affect the rate of compensation and nature of benefits paid to its members. Similarly, state and federal governments can affect the compensation of others by mandating minimum wage requirements or payment of disability or unemployment benefits. It could not, however, be argued that simply because such organizations and institutions affect the compensation paid to others in these ways, that they are therefore the employers of those affected.

The jury was properly instructed that in order to find an employment relation between the diocese and Robinson, they should consider whether: (1) the diocese selected or retained Robinson; (2) wages or other consideration were to be paid by them; (3) the diocese or bishop had the power to terminate Robinson; and (4) the diocese or Bishop Frey had the right to control Robinson. See supra p. 334-335 (quoting Jury Instruction 23). The majority concedes that the fourth, and "critical," element of control is wanting here because it is the rector who controls an assistant priest's day- to-day activities. Furthermore, the majority nowhere states or concludes that the diocese hired Robinson, had the duty to compensate Robinson, or had the actual ability to terminate Robinson's employment with the parish.

In short, the majority never contends that any of the elements that the jury was instructed to consider in determining whether an employment relation existed between the diocese and Robinson have been met here. Rather, all of the evidence cited establishes only that the bishop and diocese can exert influence over an assistant priest. The jury was not, however, instructed that "influence" alone could either support a finding of an employment relation or that such a fact should even be considered by them. Thus, the fact that such influence exists cannot support the conclusion that sufficient evidence was presented to either create a question for the jury or to support the jury's verdict.

Consequently, I would hold that the trial court erred in denying defendant's directed verdict motion dismissing plaintiff's claim for negligent hiring and supervision. Accordingly, I concur in the result in Part III, concur in Part V, and dissent from Part IV of the majority opinion.

863 P.2d 310

END OF DOCUMENT

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

Recycled Paper
BLUEBIRD
(818) 472-6700

EXHIBIT 39

482 N.W.2d 806
60 USLW 2680
(Cite as: 482 N.W.2d 806)

Court of Appeals of Minnesota.

Thomas Joseph MROZKA, et al., Appellants (C6-91-1441), Respondents (C9-91-1515, C0-91-1516),
v.
ARCHDIOCESE OF ST. PAUL AND MINNEAPOLIS, Respondent (C6-91-1441,
C0-91-1516),
Appellant (C9-91-1515).
The CHURCH OF THE IMMACULATE CONCEPTION IN COLUMBIA HEIGHTS,
MINNESOTA, et al.,
Defendants,
and
Diocese of Winona, defendant and third-party plaintiff, Respondent (C6-91-1441, C9-91-1515), Appellant (C0-91-1516),
v.
Thomas ADAMSON, third-party defendant,
Respondent.

Nos. C6-91-1441, C9-91-1515 and C0-91-1516.

March 24, 1992.
Review Denied May 24, 1992.

Child abuse victim and parent brought action against church for damages resulting from sexual abuse of child by pastor. Following jury trial, the District Court, Anoka County, Phyllis G. Jones, J., directed verdict against parents, awarded compensatory damages to child, and remitted punitive damage award, and all parties appealed. The Court of Appeals, Kalitowski, J., held that: (1) award of punitive damages against church did not violate public policy; (2) award of punitive damages against church was not unconstitutional; (3) award of punitive damages was supported by evidence; (4) trial court could grant remittitur; and (5) parents could not recover for intentional infliction of emotional distress.

Affirmed.

Randall, J., filed opinion concurring in part and dissenting in part.

West Headnotes

[1] Damages ⇐92
115k92 Most Cited Cases

[1] Religious Societies ⇐30
332k30 Most Cited Cases

Awarding punitive damages against church is not against public policy. M.S.A. § 549.20.

[2] Constitutional Law ⇐70.3(3)
92k70.3(3) Most Cited Cases

Public policy of state is for legislature to determine, not the court.

[3] Constitutional Law ⇐84.2
92k84.2 Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 92k84(2))

[3] Constitutional Law ⇐84.5(1)
92k84.5(1) Most Cited Cases

Although Free Exercise Clause of Federal Constitution affords absolute right to hold religious beliefs, it does not absolutely protect religiously based conduct; individual's religious beliefs do not excuse compliance with otherwise valid and neutral law prohibiting conduct that state is free to regulate. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 1.

[4] Constitutional Law ⇐84.5(7.1)
92k84.5(7.1) Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 92k84.5(7))

[4] Religious Societies ⇐30
332k30 Most Cited Cases

Award of punitive damages against church for negligence in permitting sexual abuse of child by pastor did not violate free exercise clause of United States Constitution, despite contention that statutory exemption for municipalities prevented law from being "neutral"; state's interest in protecting children from dangerous behavior was sufficiently compelling to justify any indirect burden church might incur by having its external actions subject to sanction. M.S.A. § 549.20; U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 1.

[5] Constitutional Law ⇐84.5(7.1)
92k84.5(7.1) Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 92k84.5(7))

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

[5] Religious Societies ⇐30
332k30 Most Cited Cases

Punitive damage award against church for negligence in permitting pastor to sexually abuse child did not violate establishment clause of United States Constitution, despite contention that inquiry into reasonableness of church's actions relating to discipline of priest would result in excessive governmental entanglement, where conduct by church resulted in external and secular harm, and church conceded that examination of reasonableness of its actions was constitutionally allowable for purpose of determining negligence and compensatory damages. M.S.A. § 549.20; U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 1.

[6] Constitutional Law ⇐84.5(7.1)
92k84.5(7.1) Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 92k84.5(7))

[6] Religious Societies ⇐30
332k30 Most Cited Cases

Inquiry into financial situation of church in order to assess punitive damages did not create excessive governmental entanglement with religion, where information relied on to determine church's net worth was taken largely from published information, and intrusion was secular and limited in scope and time. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 1.

[7] Constitutional Law ⇐84.5(7.1)
92k84.5(7.1) Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 92k84.5(7))

[7] Religious Societies ⇐30
332k30 Most Cited Cases

Award of punitive damages against church that negligently permitted pastor to sexually abuse child did not violate religious freedom provisions of the State Constitution, where criminal sanctions were unavailable and punitive damages award against individuals involved would have been ineffective; State's goals could not be accomplished through less restrictive means. M.S.A. Const. Art. 1, § 16.

[8] Damages ⇐184
115k184 Most Cited Cases

Punitive damages are allowed in civil actions only upon clear and convincing evidence that acts of defendant show willful indifference to rights and safety of others. M.S.A. § 549.20, subd. 1.

[9] Damages ⇐91(1)
115k91(1) Most Cited Cases

"Willful indifference," for purpose of statute permitting imposition of punitive damages, does not imply purpose of actually intending to harm plaintiff, but malicious, reckless or knowing disregard of plaintiff's rights or safety. M.S.A. § 549.20, subd. 1.

[10] Religious Societies ⇐30
332k30 Most Cited Cases

Evidence supported award of punitive damages against church that negligently permitted pastor to sexually abuse child, despite evidence that church tried to act responsibly, where jury could also conclude from evidence that church officials repeatedly and knowingly placed pastor in situations where he could sexually abuse boys and then failed to properly supervise him, and did not deal with allegations of sexual abuse until public disclosure was threatened. M.S.A. § 549.20, subd. 1.

[11] Appeal and Error ⇐930(1)
30k930(1) Most Cited Cases

[11] Appeal and Error ⇐1003(7)
30k1003(7) Most Cited Cases

Verdict should be overturned only when manifestly and palpably contrary to evidence considered in light most favorable to verdict.

[12] Religious Societies ⇐30
332k30 Most Cited Cases

Trial court did not abuse its discretion in remitting punitive damage award against church that allowed pastor to sexually abuse child from $2,700,000 to $187,000, where effect of other settlements and judgments and media coverage, which were unknown to jury, made full punitive award much larger than necessary to punish and deter.

[13] Damages ⇐128
115k128 Most Cited Cases

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

Trial court has broad discretion in determining whether to set aside verdict as being excessive, and should not hesitate to do so where it feels evidence does not justify amount, even if verdict was not actuated by passion and prejudice.

[14] Appeal and Error ⇐1004(11)
30k1004(11) Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 30k1004.1(10))

Open ended and volatile nature of punitive damages requires reviewing court to exercise close supervision over the award.

[15] Damages ⇐128
115k128 Most Cited Cases

When determining whether remittitur is proper, courts should look for proportionality between egregious misconduct and amount of damages, keeping in mind statutory factors. M.S.A. § 549.20.

[16] Appeal and Error ⇐979(5)
30k979(5) Most Cited Cases

Because trial court has significant advantage of viewing entire proceeding, some of which is not apparent on record, appellate court should not interfere with court's decision regarding remittitur unless there is clear abuse of discretion.

[17] Appeal and Error ⇐979(5)
30k979(5) Most Cited Cases

Where trial court grants remittitur, noting its reasons for doing so, appellate courts are not likely to tamper with that determination.

[18] Damages ⇐94
115k94 Most Cited Cases

Trial court may consider information and evidence not presented to jury, such as amount of other settlements and judgments and nature and extent of media coverage, in considering and granting remittitur of punitive damages.

[19] Damages ⇐208(6)
115k208(6) Most Cited Cases

Parents of child sexually abused by church pastor did not overcome high threshold standard of proof required to submit claim of intentional infliction of emotional distress to jury, even though emotional distress suffered by parents was significant.

[20] Damages ⇐50.10
115k50.10 Most Cited Cases

Tort actions seeking damages for intentional infliction of emotional distress are disfavored, and application of tort is limited to those cases where emotional distress is so severe that no reasonable person could be expected to endure it.

808 Syllabus by the Court

1. Whether an award of punitive damages against a religious organization is contrary to the public policy of the state is a legislative determination.

2. An award of punitive damages against a religious organization does not violate the United States or Minnesota Constitutions.

3. An award of punitive damages is allowed where evidence supports a finding that religious organizations repeatedly placed a known child molester in positions of authority over children.

4. The trial court did not abuse its discretion when it remitted punitive damages awards to amounts it believed would punish and deter in light of other settlements and judgments, negative publicity, and nature of religious organizations' assets.

5. A claim for intentional infliction of emotional distress by parents of sexual abuse victim was properly dismissed where distress was not sufficiently severe.

Jeffrey R. Anderson, Mark A. Wendorf, Susan Ford Bedor, Reinhardt and Anderson, St. Paul, for Thomas Joseph Mrozka, et al.

Andrew J. Eisenzimmer, Meier, Kennedy & Quinn, John R. Hoffman, 809Daniel A. Haws, Murnane, Conlin, White, Brandt & Hoffman, St. Paul, John D. French, Patrick J. Schiltz, Theresa H. Keninger, Faegre & Benson, Minneapolis, for Archdiocese of St. Paul and Minneapolis.

George F. Restovich, Bruce K. Piotrowski, Patterson-Restovich-Lund Law Offices, Ltd., Rochester, for Diocese of Winona.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

482 N.W.2d 806
60 USLW 2680
(Cite as: 482 N.W.2d 806)

Theodore J. Collins, Collins, Buckley, Sauntry & Haugh, St. Paul, for Thomas Adamson.

Considered and decided by KALITOWSKI, P.J., and RANDALL and MULALLY [FN*], JJ.

FN* Retired judge of the district court, acting as judge of the Court of Appeals by appointment pursuant to Minn. Const. art. VI, § 2.

OPINION

KALITOWSKI, Judge.

Following a jury trial, a victim of child sexual abuse was awarded compensatory and punitive damages against religious organizations. The trial court remitted the punitive damages award and the victim appeals. The religious organizations challenge the punitive damages awards as contrary to state public policy and unconstitutional. The victim's parents challenge the trial court's dismissal of their claim for intentional infliction of emotional distress. We affirm.

FACTS

The Diocese of Winona first learned that Father Thomas Adamson had sexually abused a boy in 1964. The Diocese learned of other sexual misconduct in 1966, 1973, and 1974. Adamson's superiors typically responded to these incidents by reprimanding Adamson, suggesting or insisting that he seek counselling, and transferring him to another parish. In December 1974, Bishop Loras Watters received a number of phone calls from two men who accused Adamson of sexually abusing their brother since the early 1960's. One brother said that Adamson had also abused him, and threatened to expose Adamson if he was not immediately removed. When confronted with the allegations, Adamson admitted sexually abusing the youth for a period of ten years.

To avoid public disclosure and scandal, Bishop Watters removed Adamson and transferred him to the Archdiocese of St. Paul and Minneapolis. Bishop Watters told Archbishop Roach that Adamson was receiving treatment, but he did not disclose the type of treatment or Adamson's sexual history. In the years that followed, Bishop Watters repeatedly denied Adamson's requests to return to the Diocese. Archbishop Roach, with Bishop Watters' approval, appointed Adamson associate pastor of St. Thomas Aquinas Church in January 1976, and head pastor of Immaculate Conception Church in June 1979. Adamson began abusing Thomas Mrozka shortly after his arrival at Immaculate Conception.

The Archdiocese first learned of sexual misconduct by Adamson in November 1980, when Adamson admitted to attempting to touch a parish boy. Although Archbishop Roach ordered Adamson to be psychologically evaluated, he allowed Adamson to return to his parish pending the evaluation. Adamson agreed to be monitored closely, cease all youth contact, and resign if his misconduct became known. In late December, Archbishop Roach instructed Adamson to resign amid concern that Adamson spent too much time with boys, including Mrozka, and threats by an abused boy's father to go to the police. Also, Bishop Watters had written Archbishop Roach that the latest incident was a "reoccurrence of a longstanding problem." Adamson underwent 19 days of inpatient treatment as a result of this incident. Although Adamson's doctor did not advocate him for a pastorate, both Diocese and Archdiocese officials testified that they understood Adamson could return to his priestly duties. Archbishop Roach appointed Adamson to an associate pastorship and instructed him to avoid youth contact and continue his therapy.

During the ensuing year, the Archdiocese learned that Adamson was having contact with youth, including Mrozka. The 810 violations were, for the most part, ignored. In February 1983, the Archdiocese learned that police had investigated and dismissed charges against Adamson for alleged child sexual abuse. When Archbishop Roach confronted Adamson about violating their agreement, Adamson stated that he had misunderstood the agreement's terms. Roach allowed Adamson to return to his parish, reduced their agreement to writing, and warned that any future violation would result in his immediate removal. In July 1984, Archbishop Roach removed Adamson after Adamson admitted to having sexually abused a boy for a number of years

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

482 N.W.2d 806
60 USLW 2680
(Cite as: 482 N.W.2d 806)

while at St. Thomas Aquinas parish.

Mrozka sued the Archdiocese and Diocese (collectively, the "Church"), alleging that they negligently allowed Adamson to sexually abuse him when he was a minor. His parents sued the Archdiocese alleging, among other things, intentional infliction of emotional distress. The Church admitted negligence. The jury awarded Mrozka $855,000 in compensatory damages and $2,700,000 in total punitive damages. The trial court remitted the punitive damages award to approximately $187,000.

Mrozka appeals the trial court's remittitur. His parents appeal the dismissal of their intentional infliction of emotional distress claim on directed verdict. The Church challenges the award of punitive damages as being violative of state public policy, unconstitutional, and contrary to the evidence.

ISSUES

I. Does an award of punitive damages against a religious organization violate state public policy?

II. Is an award of punitive damages against a religious organization unconstitutional?

III. Was the award of punitive damages supported by the evidence?

IV. Did the trial court abuse its discretion in granting remittitur?

V. Did the trial court err when it granted a directed verdict on the parents' claim of intentional infliction of emotional distress?

ANALYSIS

I.

[1] The Church, relying on City of Newport v. Fact Concerts, Inc., 453 U.S. 247, 101 S.Ct. 2748, 69 L.Ed.2d 616 (1981), argues that awarding punitive damages against a religious organization is contrary to public policy. In City of Newport, the U.S. Supreme Court held that punitive damages could be awarded against municipal employees, but not against the municipality itself. Id. 453 U.S. at 271, 101 S.Ct. at 2762. The Church contends that the same public policy considerations addressed in City of Newport, including the concern that the punishment is not a deterrent because it is inflicted on innocent persons rather than the wrongdoers, apply to religious organizations. See id. 453 U.S. at 266-70, 101 S.Ct. at 2759-61.

We find the municipal exception from punitive damages in City of Newport distinguishable from the Church's proposed exemption for religious organizations. In City of Newport the Court found it necessary to determine congressional intent because of its assumption that Congress would have specifically addressed municipal immunity if it meant to alter the longstanding common law rule exempting municipalities from punitive damages awards. Id. 453 U.S. at 263-66, 101 S.Ct. at 2758-59. Similarly, the Supreme Court also has looked to congressional intent in holding that punitive damages are not allowed in certain actions against labor unions because of the essentially remedial nature of the National Labor Relations Act. See International Bhd. of Elec. Workers v. Foust, 442 U.S. 42, 52, 99 S.Ct. 2121, 2128, 60 L.Ed.2d 698 (1979).

Here, legislative intent is not at issue. There is no common law rule exempting religious or non-profit organizations from punitive damages awards. Punitive damages have been sought against non-profit corporations in Minnesota, although disallowed on other grounds. See, e.g., Minnesota-Iowa Television Co. v. Watonwan T.V. Improvement Ass'n, 294 N.W.2d 297, 309-11 (Minn.1980); *811 Wild v. Rarig, 302 Minn. 419, 440-42, 234 N.W.2d 775, 789-90 (1975), cert. denied, 424 U.S. 902, 96 S.Ct. 1093, 47 L.Ed.2d 307 (1976). Furthermore, punitive damages have been allowed against religious organizations in other jurisdictions. See, e.g., Bredberg v. Long, 778 F.2d 1285, 1290 (8th Cir.1985); Christofferson v. Church of Scientology, 57 Or.App. 203, 251-53, 644 P.2d 577, 607-08 (1982), cert. denied, 459 U.S. 1206, 103 S.Ct. 1196, 75 L.Ed.2d 439 (1983).

[2] If the legislature intended to exempt religious organizations from Minn.Stat. § 549.20 (1986), it could have specifically done so, as it did with municipalities in Minn.Stat. § 466.04, subd. 1(b) (1990). The public policy of the state is for the legislature to determine, not the court. Mattson v. Flynn, 216 Minn. 354, 363, 13 N.W.2d 11, 16 information relied on to determine the Archdiocese and Diocese's net worth was taken largely from published information. The intrusion was secular and limited in scope and time. We find no excessive entanglement.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

B. Minnesota Constitution.

[7] Article I, § 16 of the Minnesota Constitution precludes infringement or interference with religious freedom. However, it further states:

> [T]he liberty of conscience hereby secured shall not be so construed as to excuse acts of licentiousness or justify practices inconsistent with the peace or safety of the state.

Minn. Const. art. I, § 16; see also State v. Hershberger, 462 N.W.2d 393, 397 (Minn.1990). The Church's actions as determined by the trial court fall within this exclusion. The repeated placement of Adamson in parishes without restriction arguably condoned acts of licentious behavior and justified practices inconsistent with the peace and safety of the state.

Awarding punitive damages furthers the state's interest in protecting its citizens from harm by deterring and punishing such conduct. Hodder v. Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co., 426 N.W.2d 826, 837 (Minn.1988). The state is not only concerned with compensating plaintiffs, but also ensuring that similar conduct does not harm others in the future. Here, the unavailability of criminal sanctions and the ineffectiveness of a punitive damages award against the individuals involved support the trial court's determination that an imposition of punitive damages against the Church is appropriate because the state's goals cannot be accomplished through less restrictive means.

III.

[8][9] Punitive damages are allowed in civil actions only upon clear and convincing evidence that the acts of the defendant show a willful indifference to the rights and safety of others. Minn.Stat. § 549.20, subd. 1 (1986). "Willful indifference" does not imply a purpose of actually intending to harm the plaintiff, but a malicious, reckless or knowing disregard of the plaintiff's rights or safety. Wirig v. Kinney Shoe Corp., 461 N.W.2d 374, 381 (Minn.1990); Wikert v. Northern Sand & Gravel, Inc., 402 N.W.2d 178, 182 (Minn.App.1987), pet. for rev. denied (Minn. May 18, 1987).

[10] The Church contends that punitive damages were not proper in this case because the jury failed to appreciate how little was known about pedophilia at the time the Church made decisions regarding Adamson. The Church argues that it was not "willfully indifferent" to the dangers Adamson posed; rather, it attributes its decisions to its inability to appreciate the extent of Adamson's problem or addiction, its reliance on his doctors' recommendations, and its subjective belief that he would not abuse again.

[11] A verdict should be overturned only when manifestly and palpably contrary to the evidence considered in the light most favorable to the verdict. Melina v. Chaplin, 327 N.W.2d 19, 20 (Minn.1982) . Although evidence exists that the Church 813 tried to act responsibly, there is also evidence from which the jury could conclude that Church officials repeatedly and knowingly placed Adamson in situations where he could sexually abuse boys and then failed to properly supervise him and disclose his sexual problem. There was also testimony that the Church avoided dealing with allegations of abuse until public disclosure was threatened. The jury's decision to award punitive damages is supported by the evidence.

IV.

[12][13][14] Appellant Mrozka argues that the trial court abused its discretion when it granted remittitur. A trial court, however, has broad discretion in determining whether to set aside a verdict as being excessive and should not hesitate to do so where it feels the evidence does not justify the amount, even if the verdict was not actuated by passion and prejudice. Caspersen v. Webber, 298 Minn. 93, 100, 213 N.W.2d 327, 331 (1973). The "open-ended and volatile nature of punitive damages" requires a reviewing court to exercise close supervision over the award. Estate of Hartz v. Nelson, 437 N.W.2d 749, 757 (Minn.App.1989) (quoting Hodder, 426 N.W.2d at 835), pet. for rev. denied (Minn. July 12, 1989).

[15][16][17] When determining whether remittitur is proper, courts should look for proportionality between the egregious misconduct and the amount of damages, keeping in mind the factors set forth in Minn.Stat. § 549.20. Hodder, 426 N.W.2d at 837. Because the trial court has the significant advantage of viewing the entire proceeding, some of which is not apparent on the record, an appellate court should not interfere with the court's decision regarding remittitur unless there is a clear abuse of discretion. Sorenson v. Kruse, 293 N.W.2d 56, 62 (Minn.1980); Caspersen, 298 Minn. at 100, 213 N.W.2d at 331. Where the trial court grants remittitur, noting its reasons for doing so, the appellate courts are not likely to tamper with that determination. Sorenson, 293 N.W.2d at 63.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

When it granted remittitur, the trial court took into account the total effect of other punishment upon the Church, including damages awarded and settlements in other actions and the extent of negative publicity generated by the trial. Appellant Mrozka argues the trial court was, in effect, reversing the jury on the basis of information and evidence not presented to the jury and that this constitutes an abuse of discretion. We disagree.

[18] The amount of other settlements and judgments and the nature and extent of media coverage were properly kept from the jury. However, in light of the trial court's responsibility to closely supervise an award of punitive damages, these matters were appropriately considered in granting remittitur. See Johnson v. Ramsey County, 424 N.W.2d 800, 807-08 (Minn.App.1988) (the trial court did not err in ordering remittitur where court but not jury had evidence of the defendant's ability to pay), pet. for rev. denied (Minn. Aug. 24, 1988). In light of the court's particular knowledge, it found that the damages were excessive and "much larger than necessary to punish and deter." This determination was not an abuse of discretion.

The trial court also specifically addressed the financial condition of the Church, distinguishing its net worth from its liquid assets. In light of the unique nature of the assets of the Church, the trial court's analysis of the Church's ability to pay and assessment as to the amount of punitive damages necessary to satisfy the purposes of Minn.Stat. § 549.20 was not an abuse of discretion.

V.

[19][20] The trial court properly directed a verdict on the parents' claim of intentional infliction of emotional distress. While we recognize that the emotional distress suffered by the parents was significant, the trial court properly concluded that it was not sufficient to overcome "the high threshold standard of proof required of a complainant before [the issue] may be submitted to a jury." Hubbard v. United Press Int'l, Inc., 330 N.W.2d 428, 439 (Minn.1983). Minnesota disfavors tort actions seeking damages for intentional infliction of emotional distress. 814Eklund v. Vincent Brass & Aluminum Co.,* 351 N.W.2d 371, 379 (Minn.App.1984), pet. for rev. denied (Minn. Nov. 1, 1984). Application of this tort is limited to those cases where the emotional distress is so severe that no reasonable person could be expected to endure it. Hubbard, 330 N.W.2d at 439-40.

DECISION

There was sufficient evidence to support an award of punitive damages against the Diocese and Archdiocese. Such an award of punitive damages against a religious organization is not violative of state public policy or the United States or Minnesota Constitutions. The trial court did not abuse its discretion in granting remittitur, and it did not err in dismissing appellant parents' claim of intentional infliction of emotional distress.

Affirmed.

RANDALL, Judge, concurring in part, dissenting in part.

I concur in part and dissent in part. I concur in the conclusions reached by the majority, including the holding that the punitive damages, if applicable, were not improperly reduced by the trial court. But on the issue of whether public policy allows any award of punitive damages against a recognized religious organization, I dissent. The conclusion is inescapable that the strong and pronounced public policy argument exempting municipalities and labor unions from awards of punitive damages exempts recognized religious organizations as well.

This issue of punitive damages does not involve a question of appropriate compensation. The defendants agree that even on public policy grounds, punitive damages can be assessed against the individual defendants. They also agree that both the individuals and the religious entity they are associated with can be liable for compensable damages. They do not agree, however, that bona fide religious organizations can be liable for punitive damages.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

Plaintiff has a right to be fully and properly compensated and has been. Punitive damages, by definition, are not intended as compensation. Rather, they are intended to punish and serve as a deterrence to others. I conclude that punitive damages, as a deterrence to organizations, overstep the bounds of public policy as applied to recognized religions, on the same principles that apply to municipalities and labor unions.

In City of Newport v. Fact Concerts, Inc., 453 U.S. 247, 101 S.Ct. 2748, 69 L.Ed.2d 616 (1981), the Supreme Court found that while punitive damages could be recovered against an individual municipality employee, punitive damages could not be awarded against the municipality itself. The Court discussed public policy considerations and found, among other things, that if punitive damages were to be assessed against a municipality, the money would come out of the pockets of the municipal taxpayers, resulting in a downgrading of the municipal services received by residents. The Court found that taxpayers and citizens of a municipality were innocent of any wrongdoing:

> [A]n award of punitive damages against a municipality "punishes" only the taxpayers, who took no part in the commission of the tort. These damages are assessed over and above the amount necessary to compensate the injured party. * * * [They] are in effect a windfall to a fully compensated plaintiff, and are likely accompanied by an increase in taxes or a reduction of public services for the citizens footing the bill. Neither reason nor justice suggests that such retribution should be visited upon the shoulders of blameless or unknowing taxpayers.

Id. 453 U.S. at 267, 101 S.Ct. at 2759-60 (footnote omitted).

The Court also noted that assessing punitive damages against a municipality does not achieve the aim of punishing the individual who committed the act:

> Under ordinary principles of retribution, it is the wrongdoer himself who is made to suffer for his unlawful conduct. If a government official acts knowingly and maliciously to deprive others of their civil rights, he may become the appropriate object of the community's vindictive sentiments. A municipality, however, *815 can have no malice independent of the malice of its officials. Damages awarded for punitive purposes, therefore, are not sensibly assessed against the governmental entity itself.

Id. 453 U.S. at 267, 101 S.Ct. at 2760 (citations omitted; emphasis in original).

The United States Supreme Court did not free municipalities from responsibility for compensable damages, and did not free employees of the municipality, as individuals, from punitive damages. It simply carved out for the municipality itself the one exception defendants here seek, an exemption from an assessment of punitive damages.

Relative to labor unions, the United States Supreme Court followed the same logic. In International Bhd. of Elec. Workers v. Foust, 442 U.S. 42, 99 S.Ct. 2121, 60 L.Ed.2d 698 (1979), the Supreme Court declined to allow punitive damages to be inflicted upon a union for a breach of duty to represent a member. The Court found that the award would penalize the very union members that the law mandating fair representation was intended to protect. Id. 442 U.S. at 50-51, 99 S.Ct. at 2127. The Court was concerned that punitive damages awards would burden the exercise of rights granted under federal labor law. Id. 442 U.S. at 51-52, 99 S.Ct. at 2127-28. The Supreme Court refused to burden unions "beyond the extent necessary to compensate employees for their injuries." Id. 442 U.S. at 50, 99 S.Ct. at 2126. I suggest that the allowance of punitive damages against religious organizations would unduly burden the free exercise of first amendment rights established by the United States Constitution. [FN1]

> FN1. The first amendment of our federal constitution provides:
> Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting > the free exercise thereof; or abridging the freedom of speech, or of the press; or the right of the people peaceably to assemble, and to petition the government for a redress of grievances. U.S. Const. amend. I.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

Given the priorities adopted by the federal government and by individual states, the right of citizens in a community to form a municipality, and the right of workers to organize a labor union are firmly established. I suggest that the first amendment right of the federal constitution guaranteeing to the people freedom of religion and religious organizing is equally firm. The public policy in City of Newport and Foust is sound. It should also be applied to established religion.

Both sides agree that present Minnesota law does not, with specificity, allow or disallow the assessment of punitive damages against recognized religion. It could be argued that the lack of a specific right to a punitive damages award against them by plaintiffs means that they do not have that right. It could be argued that the lack of a specific prohibition against assessing punitive damages against a religious organization means it can be done until the legislature speaks to it.

I suggest the overall intent to be gleaned from legislative enactments and prior Minnesota case law addressing the importance of taxpayers' rights, union members' rights, and the rights of religious organizations supports the conclusion that Minnesota public policy bars the assessment of punitive damages against an organized religion.

482 N.W.2d 806, 60 USLW 2680

END OF DOCUMENT

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

Recycled Paper

EXHIBIT 4C

921 F.Supp. 66
(Cite as: 921 F.Supp. 66)

United States District Court,
D. Connecticut.

Matthew J. NUTT, Mark D. Nutt, Plaintiffs,
v.
The NORWICH ROMAN CATHOLIC DIOCESE, Thomas J. Doyle, S.M., The Sacred Heart Church of Vernon, Connecticut, The Marianist Society, Inc., Brother Stephen Dematteis and Father Michael Melendez, Defendants.

Civil No. 3:94cv00776(AVC).

March 28, 1995.
Order Granting Renewed Motion For Summary Judgment July 24, 1995.

Former altar boys who were allegedly sexually abused by a priest brought negligent employment action against Catholic church, diocese, and order of priests; church and diocese moved for dismissal, or in alternative for summary judgment, and order moved for dismissal. The District Court, Covello, J., held that: (1) former altar boys failed to establish that priest was acting in furtherance of his employer's business as required for defendants to be liable under doctrine of respondeat superior; (2) 17-year limitations period for actions based upon sexually abusive conduct applied to claim for negligent employment; (3) First Amendment did not bar action for negligent employment; and on rehearing held that: (4) church and diocese were entitled to judgment as matter of law on negligence claims.

Motions granted in part, and denied in part.

*68 Holly Abery-Wetstone, Doris B. D'Ambrosio, Wetstone & D'Ambrosio, Farmington, CT, Susan K. Smith, Hartford, CT, for Matthew J. Nutt, Mark D. Nutt, Mary A. Nutt, James D. Nutt.

Joseph T. Sweeney, James M. Sconzo, Halloran & Sage, Hartford, CT, for Norwich Roman Catholic Diocese Corp., Sacred Heart Church of Vernon, CT.

Walter R. Hampton, Jr., Andrea Marie Melanson, Hampton & Hampton, Canton, CT, for Thomas J. Doyle, S.M.

Jeffrey L. Fisher, Richard A. Roberts, Nuzzo & Roberts, Cheshire, CT, for Marianist Society, Inc.

Joseph H. Farrell, Conway, Farrell, Curtin & Kelly, New York City, Terri Ann Knapsack, White, Dombroski, Knapsack & Hillis, New Haven, CT, for Michael Melendez.

Susan K. Smith, Hartford, CT, for amicus curiae Connecticut Network of Victims' Lawyers.

RULING ON DEFENDANTS' MOTIONS

COVELLO, District Judge.

This is an action for damages in which the plaintiffs claim they were sexually abused by the defendant, Thomas J. Doyle. The complaint alleges the following causes of action against him: 1) "reckless assault and battery"; 2) "negligent assault and battery"; 3) negligence; 4) intentional or reckless infliction of emotional distress; and 5) unintentional infliction of emotional distress. The plaintiffs also assert a claim for negligence against the defendants Stephen DeMatteis and Michael Melendez. The remaining three defendants are institutions, namely, the Sacred Heart Church of Vernon, Connecticut ("Sacred Heart"), the Norwich Roman Catholic Diocesan Corporation ("the Norwich Diocese"), and the Marianist Society, Inc. ("Marianist"). The plaintiffs claim that these three institutional defendants are liable for damages under the doctrine of respondeat superior and their own negligence.

Two of these institutions, Sacred Heart and the Norwich Diocese, now move to dismiss or, in the alternative, for summary judgment (document no. 16) on all counts as to them. The third institution, Marianist, moves only to dismiss (document no. 24) all the counts as they pertain to it.

For the reasons stated herein, the court grants the defendants' motions with respect to the claims based upon the doctrine of respondeat superior. With respect to the negligence claims against the defendants, Sacred Heart and Norwich Diocese, the motion is denied without prejudice. With respect to the negligence claims against the defendant, Marianist, the motion is denied. [FN1]

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

FN1. The plaintiffs and the defendants have presented facts and documentary proof outside the complaint. Fed.R.Civ.P. 12(b) states, in pertinent part, as follows:
If, on a motion asserting the defense numbered (6) to dismiss for failure of the pleading to state a claim upon which relief can be granted, matters outside the pleading are presented to and not excluded by the court, the motion shall be treated as one for summary judgment and disposed of as provided in Rule 56, and all parties shall be given reasonable opportunity to present all materials made pertinent to such a motion by Rule 56.
This provision expressly allows the court to examine matters in addition to the pleadings when considering a Rule 12(b)(6) motion to dismiss. "If such additional matters are examined, the motion will be construed as if it had been brought for summary judgment under Fed.R.Civ.P. 56." Galvin v. Lloyd, 663 F.Supp. 1572, 1575 (D.Conn.1987). The court has complete discretion in deciding whether to accept such matters, but once it does, conversion to a Rule 56 motion is mandatory. See Carter v. Stanton, 405 U.S. 669, 671, 92 S.Ct. 1232, 1234, 31 L.Ed.2d 569 (1972) (per curiam). The court elects to accept and analyze the additional materials submitted by the parties. The issues raised in the defendants' motions to dismiss will, therefore, be treated as motions for summary judgment for the purposes of this ruling.

69 FACTS

Examination of the pleadings, affidavits, exhibits, and other supporting materials accompanying the motions and the responses thereto discloses the following:

The plaintiffs, Matthew Nutt and Mark Nutt, (hereinafter Matthew and Mark) are twin brothers. They are currently 28 years old and live in Maine. The plaintiffs and their family have been members of the Roman Catholic Church, St. Bernard's Parish Church in Rockville, Connecticut, since 1977. In 1977, the plaintiffs, who were then twelve years old, began serving as altar boys at St. Bernard's.

One of the defendants, Thomas J. Doyle, is a Marianist priest. From 1976 through 1978, Doyle served as parish priest at St. Bernard's. From 1977 to 1978, Doyle was the parish priest for the plaintiffs. From September 1978 to September 1979, he also served at St. Joseph's Church in Clinton, Connecticut; from September 1979 to September 1981, he served at St. Mary's Church in Vernon, Connecticut; and from 1981 to 1992, he served at Sacred Heart Church in Vernon, Connecticut. As a priest, Doyle was required to adhere to the laws and standards of the Roman Catholic Church. The laws and standards of the Roman Catholic Church include a priests' personal commitment to celibacy and expressly prohibit all priests from engaging in any sexual activity of any kind.

All of the above-named Roman Catholic parishes and churches where Doyle served are within the jurisdiction of the defendant, Norwich Diocese.

The defendant, Marianist Society, Inc., admitted and ordained Doyle to the Catholic priesthood and assigned him to the Norwich Diocese, St. Bernard's Parish Church, and Sacred Heart Church. The Marianist Society also provided Doyle with a residence at the Marianist Community House and a condominium rented by the Marianist Society.

From 1979 through 1985 the plaintiffs allege that Doyle showed R-rated and X- rated movies to Mark in the Sacred Heart Rectory and the Marianist Community House in Vernon, Connecticut. In November or December 1980, the plaintiffs further allege that during an out-of-town Christmas shopping trip, Mark and Doyle were forced to stop at a motel in Stockbridge, Massachusetts, due to a snow storm. On this occasion, Doyle allegedly dumped ice on one of the double beds in the room, causing Mark to share a bed with Doyle. During this evening, Doyle allegedly placed his hands inside Mark's underwear and fondled Mark's genitals. Then Doyle allegedly removed Mark's underwear, positioned Mark's hands for mutual masturbation, and performed oral sex on Mark. This same manner of sexual activity also allegedly occurred on the following trips and occasions: in August 1982 on a trip from Maine to Nova Scotia and return; in February 1984, June 1986, and August 1988 on three trips to New York City to see

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

Broadway plays; and in the Summer of 1987 at the Marianist Community House in Vernon, Connecticut. In addition, the plaintiffs allege that from 1986 forward, Doyle's sexual activity included digital anal penetration of Mark.

In July 1983, Mark allegedly informed the defendant Stephen DeMatteis and the defendant, Michael Melendez, that Doyle was sexually abusing him. This report allegedly occurred July 18-23, 1983, during a Marianist family retreat held in New Jersey.

The plaintiffs further claim that from 1979 through 1985, Matthew went on trips with Doyle and watched X-rated movies. During this time, they also allegedly watched R-rated movies at the Sacred Heart Rectory.

On one such trip in 1979, Matthew and Doyle visited Doyle's mother's home on Long Island, New York. The plaintiffs claim that Matthew, then age fourteen, woke to find Doyle had pushed his twin bed next to Matthew's and was fondling Matthew's genitals *70 to the point of masturbation. The plaintiffs further claim that between 1979 and 1985, Doyle repeated the sexual act described above on the following occasions: in 1981 while Doyle and Matthew traveled to New York City to see a Broadway play; in February 1982 when they took a trip from Connecticut to New York City, to Cherry Hill, New Jersey, to Baltimore, Maryland, and then to Washington D.C.; and in January 1985, while Matthew and Doyle took a trip to Edgartown, Massachusetts.

In July 1983, during a Marianist family retreat in New Jersey, Matthew allegedly informed Melendez that Doyle had been sexually abusing him. The abuse was allegedly not reported to the legal authorities as required by law.

In mid-September 1992, Matthew and his parents allegedly met with Norwich Diocesan officials and complained about the sexual misconduct of Doyle. Shortly after these complaints, Doyle was relieved of his duties as Pastor of Sacred Heart Church, pending investigation.

STANDARD

[1][2] On a motion for summary judgment, the burden is on the moving party to establish that there are no genuine issues of material fact in dispute and that it is entitled to judgment as a matter of law. Fed.R.Civ.P. 56(c); Anderson v. Liberty Lobby, Inc., 477 U.S. 242, 256, 106 S.Ct. 2505, 2514, 91 L.Ed.2d 202 (1986). A dispute regarding a material fact is genuine " 'if the evidence is such that a reasonable jury could return a verdict for the nonmoving party.' " Aldrich v. Randolph Cent. Sch. Dist., 963 F.2d 520, 523 (2d Cir.), cert. denied, 506 U.S. 965, 113 S.Ct. 440, 121 L.Ed.2d 359 (1992) (quoting Anderson, 477 U.S. at 248, 106 S.Ct. at 2510). The court resolves "all ambiguities and draw[s] all inferences in favor of the nonmoving party in order to determine how a reasonable jury would decide." Aldrich, 963 F.2d at 523. Thus, "[o]nly when reasonable minds could not differ as to the import of the evidence is summary judgment proper." Bryant v. Maffucci, 923 F.2d 979, 982 (2d Cir.), cert. denied, 502 U.S. 849, 112 S.Ct. 152, 116 L.Ed.2d 117 (1991). See also Suburban Propane v. Proctor Gas, Inc., 953 F.2d 780, 788 (2d Cir.1992).

DISCUSSION

I. Respondeat Superior

The plaintiffs claim that the institutional defendants are liable for the acts of Doyle under the doctrine of respondeat superior. The defendants contend, however, that they can not be held liable because Doyle acted outside the scope of his employment when he allegedly abused the plaintiffs.

The doctrine of respondeat superior rests on common law agency principles of vicarious liability. Generally, the doctrine states that the master (employer) is responsible for the acts of his or her servant (employee) because the master controls the servant's actions. Restatement (Second) of Agency § 1, at 7. Central to the issue of liability under the doctrine is whether the employee was acting within the scope of his or her employment. If the employee was acting within the scope of his or her employment, the employer may be liable for the plaintiff's acts. Restatement (Second) of Agency, supra § 219, at 481.

[3] Often, the issue of whether or not an act is within the scope of one's employment is a question of fact for the jury to decide. In some situations, however, the acts of the servant are so clearly without the scope of his authority that the question is one of law. Gutierrez v. Thorne, 13 Conn.App.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

493, 499, 537 A.2d 527 (1988). The test in Connecticut as to whether an employee is acting within the scope of his or her employment rests on whether the employee was furthering the employer's business. This standard has been applied to an employee's negligent acts, Levitz v. Jewish Home for the Aged, Inc., 156 Conn. 193, 239 A.2d 490 (1968), and to an employee's willful torts such as a fatal stabbing, Cardona v. Valentin, 160 Conn. 18, 22, 273 A.2d 697 (1970). The doctrine of respondeat superior focuses on the employee's conduct rather than on the employer's knowledge or approval of the conduct. Belanger v. Village Pub I, 26 Conn.App. 509, 603 A.2d 1173 (1992).

[4] The plaintiffs claim that Doyle, as an "employee" of the three Roman Catholic institutional defendants, acted within the scope of his employment as a parish priest when he 71 allegedly sexually assaulted and abused the plaintiffs. Even if Doyle committed the acts alleged by the plaintiffs, however, there is no evidence to support a finding that these acts were in furtherance of his employer's business and therefore within the scope of his employment.

In Brown v. Housing Authority of New Haven, 23 Conn.App. 624, 583 A.2d 643 (1990), certification denied, 217 Conn. 808, 585 A.2d 1233 (1991), the plaintiff claimed that the defendant's employee, Sam Jones, assaulted and battered him. Jones, a maintenance mechanic, had been driving the defendant's van in between job sites when the intentional and criminal assault occurred. The plaintiff argued that the defendant was liable for Jones's acts under the doctrine of respondeat superior. The court held that "[i]t is clear in the present case that Jones was not furthering the defendant's business interests when he assaulted the plaintiff. His intentional, criminal acts were in no way connected to the defendant's business." Id. at 628, 583 A.2d 643. The court upheld the trial court's granting of summary judgment for the defendant because, "[a]s there were no facts before the court from which it could conclude that Jones was furthering the defendants interests, the defendant's nonliability under the doctrine of respondeat superior was properly determined as a matter of law." Id.

Similarly, in A-G Foods, Inc. v. Pepperidge Farm, Inc., 216 Conn. 200, 579 A.2d 69 (1990), the plaintiff claimed Pepperidge Farm was liable for the fraudulent acts of one of its distributors, Anthony Spinelli. Spinelli had defrauded the plaintiff by charging it for Pepperidge Farm products he was not actually delivering. In a criminal proceeding, Spinelli pleaded guilty to larceny. In a subsequent civil jury trial, the court awarded the plaintiff over one million dollars in damages and costs against Spinelli. The jury also awarded the plaintiff damages against Pepperidge Farm. Pepperidge Farm moved to set aside the verdict.

Pepperidge Farm argued that there was insufficient evidence to conclude Spinelli was acting within the scope of his employment and in furtherance of Pepperidge Farm's business when he stole from the plaintiff. The trial court agreed and rendered a judgment notwithstanding the verdict in favor of the defendant. On appeal, the supreme court agreed, stating that " '[o]rdinarily, it is a question of fact as to whether a wilful tort of the servant has occurred within the scope of the servant's employment and was done to further his master's business. See, e.g. Rappaport v. Rosen Film Delivery System, Inc., [127 Conn. 524, 526, 18 A.2d 362 (1941)]. But there are occasional cases where a servant's digression from duty is so clear-cut that the disposition of the case becomes a matter of law.' " A-G Foods, 216 Conn. at 207, 579 A.2d 69 (citations omitted). Although a servant may be acting within the scope of employment when the conduct is found negligent, disobedient, or willful, that is not the end of the inquiry. " '[T]he vital inquiry ... is whether the servant on the occasion in question was engaged in a disobedient or unfaithful conducting of the master's business, or was engaged in an abandonment of the master's business....' " Id. at 209, 579 A.2d 69 (quoting Butler v. Hyperion Theatre Co., 100 Conn. 551, 124 A. 220 (1924)).

There is nothing in the record to indicate that the alleged sexual abuse by Doyle was motivated by any purpose or object that would serve his employer. Indeed, as the affidavits submitted by the defendants indicate, the laws and standards of the Roman Catholic Church expressly prohibit priests from engaging in any sexual activity of any kind. Thus, even if Doyle engaged in sexually abusive conduct, he did so only after abandoning the church's tenets and his personal commitment to celibacy. Sexually abusive conduct amounts to the abandonment of the Churchs' business. As a matter of law, therefore, the alleged sexual abuse, even if true, can not be said to further the defendant's

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

Specifically, the defendants assert that the court's determination of the plaintiffs' claims of negligent employment would promote exactly that type of state involvement in religion which the First Amendment intends to prevent, i.e., the intrusion of secular interests into matters of purely ecclesiastical concerns. The defendants refer to Dausch v. Ryske, 1993 WL 34873 (N.D.Ill.), in which the court stated:

> Any inquiry into the policies and practices of church defendants in hiring or supervising their clergy is barred by the First *73 Amendment because it might foster excessive state entanglement with religion (Citations omitted.) It might involve the court in making sensitive judgments about the proprieties of the church defendants' supervision in light of their religious beliefs.

Id. at *6; see also Schmidt v. Bishop, 779 F.Supp. 321 (S.D.N.Y.1991). The defendants thus contend that personnel issues involving their clergy must be determined by the laws and policies of the Roman Catholic Church, which are based upon the religious tenets of Roman Catholicism, rather than upon nonecclesiastical law.

The plaintiffs, in response, argue that "[t]o have protection of the [r]eligious [c]lauses, the claims must be rooted in religious belief." Wisconsin v. Yoder, 406 U.S. 205, 215-16, 92 S.Ct. 1526, 1533, 32 L.Ed.2d 15 (1972); see also Sherbert v. Verner, 374 U.S. 398, 83 S.Ct. 1790, 10 L.Ed.2d 965 (1963). They contend that a claim of negligence does not implicate any religious belief or practice, and therefore, the Free Exercise Clause is inapplicable as a defense to such actions. The court agrees.

The First Amendment to the United States Constitution forbids any "law respecting the establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof." U.S. Const. Amend. I. The Free Exercise Clause prohibits excessive state entanglement with religion. See Lemon v. Kurtzman, 403 U.S. 602, 614-15, 91 S.Ct. 2105, 2112, 29 L.Ed.2d 745 (1971). Although no Supreme Court decision has determined the applicability of the Free Exercise Clause of the First Amendment as a defense for a religious organization's negligent conduct, the Court has held that the First Amendment does not create blanket tort immunity for religious institutions or their clergy, thus allowing clergy and clerical institutions to be sued for the torts they commit. United States v. Ballard, 322 U.S. 78, 64 S.Ct. 882, 88 L.Ed. 1148 (1944).

Moreover, the court has "never held that an individual's religious beliefs excuse him from compliance with an otherwise valid law prohibiting conduct that the State is free to regulate. On the contrary, the record of more than a century of our free exercise jurisprudence contradicts that proposition." Dept. of Human Resources v. Smith, 494 U.S. 872, 878-79, 110 S.Ct. 1595, 1600, 108 L.Ed.2d 876 (1990). The Smith Court went on to state as follows:

> As described succinctly by Justice Frankfurter in Minersville School Dist. Bd. of Ed. v. Gobitis, 310 U.S. 586, 594-595 [60 S.Ct. 1010, 1012-1013, 84 L.Ed. 1375] (1940): 'Conscientious scruples have not, in the course of the long struggle for religious toleration, relieved the individual from obedience to a general law not aimed at the promotion or restriction of religious beliefs....' We first had occasion to assert that principle in Reynolds v. United States, 98 U.S. 145 [25 L.Ed. 244] (1879), where we rejected the claim that criminal laws against polygamy could not be constitutionally applied to those whose religion commanded the practice. 'Laws,' we said, 'are made for the government of actions, and while they cannot interfere with mere religious belief and opinions, they may with practices.... Can a man excuse his practices to the contrary because of his religious belief? To permit this would make the professed doctrines of religious belief superior to the law of the land, and in effect to permit every citizen to become a law unto himself.' Id. at 166-67.
>
> Subsequent decisions have consistently held that the right of free exercise does not relieve an individual of the obligation to comply with a 'valid and neutral law of general applicability on the ground that the law proscribes (or prescribes) conduct that his religion prescribes (or proscribes).'

Id. at 879, 110 S.Ct. at 1600 (quoting United States v. Lee, 455 U.S. 252, 263, n. 3, 102 S.Ct. 1051, 1058, n. 3, 71 L.Ed.2d 127 (1982).

In Church of Lukumi Babalu Aye, Inc. v. City of Hialeah, 508 U.S. 520, 113 S.Ct. 2217, 124 L.Ed.2d 472 (1993), the Court further defined the 'religious beliefs or practices' afforded protection by the Free Exercise Clause in its examination of the constitutionality of certain civil and criminal laws.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works judgment with respect to the negligence claims. See Fed.R.Civ.P. 56(c).

Sacred Heart and the Norwich Diocese next argue that, even if the court concludes that the defendants did owe a duty to the plaintiffs, the alleged breach of that duty was not the proximate cause of the plaintiffs' alleged injuries. Specifically, they assert that it was the alleged sexual misconduct of Doyle which proximately caused the plaintiffs' injuries "rather than any possible negligence on the part of either Sacred Heart Church or the Diocese."

[9][10] Proximate cause is "[a]n actual cause that is a substantial factor in the resulting harm...." Doe v. Manheimer, 212 Conn. 748, 757, 563 A.2d 699 (1989) (quoting Coburn v. Lenox Homes, Inc., 186 Conn. 370, 383, 441 A.2d 620 (1982)). "[A conclusion of proximate cause] becomes a conclusion of law only when the mind of a fair and reasonable man could reach only one conclusion; if there is room for a reasonable disagreement the question is one to be determined by the trier of fact." Id. (quoting Trzcinski v. Richey, 190 Conn. 285, 295, 460 A.2d 1269 (1983)).

Because there is a disputed issue of fact as to whether the defendants had knowledge of Doyle's alleged sexual misconduct, the court cannot determine, as a matter of law, that the defendants' alleged negligence in supervising Doyle was not the proximate cause of the plaintiffs' injuries. Accordingly, the defendants' argument fails. Due to the court's conclusion that there is an issue of fact concerning the defendant's notice of Doyle's alleged sexual misconduct, the court must deny the defendant's motion for summary judgment. This denial however, is without prejudice to the defendant to renew the motion upon presentation, by affidavit or otherwise, of facts disproving the plaintiffs' allegations that during 1979-1993, Doyle underwent treatment for sexual abuse of minors at Servant's of Paraclete in New Mexico and/or St. Luke's Treatment Center in Maryland. Should the defendants submit such evidence, the plaintiffs are given leave to file counter affidavits.

CONCLUSION

For the foregoing reasons, Sacred Heart's and the Norwich Diocese's motion for summary judgment (document no. 16) is granted in part and denied in part. The motion is granted with respect to each of the plaintiff's claims based upon the doctrine of respondeat superior. Accordingly, Counts 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, and 20 are dismissed to the extent that they allege claims against Sacred Heart or the Norwich Diocese. The motion is denied without prejudice with respect to the negligence claims (Counts 9, 10, 22, and 23). Further, the court grants Marianist's motion (document no. 24) with respect to the plaintiff's respondeat superior claims (Counts 8 and 21), and denies the motion with respect to the negligence claims (Counts 11 and 24).

SO ORDERED.

RULING ON DEFENDANTS' RENEWED MOTION FOR SUMMARY JUDGMENT

[11] This is an action for damages in which the plaintiffs claim they were sexually abused by the defendant, Thomas J. Doyle. On March 28, 1995, the court granted in part and denied in part the defendants', Sacred Heart Church of Vernon, Connecticut ("Sacred Heart") and the Norwich Roman Catholic Diocesan Corporation ("the Norwich Diocese"), motion for summary judgment. See Nutt v. Norwich Roman Catholic Diocese et al., 921 F.Supp. 66 (D.Conn. March 28, 1995). The court granted the defendants' motion with respect to the claims against them based upon the doctrine of respondeat superior. The court denied, without prejudice, the defendants' motion as it pertained to the claims against them based upon negligence. The court gave the defendants leave to renew their motion "upon presentation, by affidavit or otherwise, of facts disproving the plaintiff's allegations that during [the period alleged in the complaint], Doyle underwent treatment for sexual abuse of minors at Servant's of Parcelete in New Mexico and/or St. *76 Luke's Treatment Center in Maryland." Id. at 75. On March 31, 1995, the defendants filed the within renewed motion for summary judgment as to the negligence claims with supporting affidavits. For the reasons stated herein, the court grants the motion.

DISCUSSION [FN1]

FN1. The court incorporates by reference the statement of facts recited in the court's March 28, 1995 "Ruling on Defendants' Motions."

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

In support of their renewed motion for summary judgment as to the negligence claims, the defendants argue that the affidavits filed in support thereof > make unequivocally clear that at no time prior to September 1992, did either of [the defendants] ever have any knowledge or reason to believe or suspect that [Doyle] had ever undergone or participated in any retreat or treatment for sexual abuse of minors or for any sexual misconduct of any kind ... at any retreat or treatment facility at any location.

This, the defendants argue, "clearly establish[es] the total absence of any ... knowledge or notice in this case. This demonstrated absence of any genuine issue of fact as to neither [of the defendants] having had any knowledge or notice of sexual misconduct relating to ... Doyle ... calls for the entry of summary judgment" as to the negligence counts.

Despite the court's express directive granting the plaintiffs leave to file counter affidavits, the plaintiffs have filed no formal response to the defendants' renewed motion. Rather, by way of letter to the court, the plaintiffs refer the court to their prior filings in connection with the defendants' initial motion for summary judgment.

"In order to defeat the defendants' motion for summary judgment [as to the negligence claims], the plaintiffs must demonstrate that there is a genuine issue of material fact as to whether the risk of injury suffered by the plaintiffs was foreseeable to the defendants. See Monahan v. Montgomery, 153 Conn. 386, 216 A.2d 824 (1966)." Nutt v. Norwich Roman Catholic Diocese et al., 921 F.Supp. 66, 74 (D.Conn. March 28, 1995); see Noebel v. Housing Authority, 146 Conn. 197, 201, 148 A.2d 766 (1959). The plaintiffs, moreover, "may not rest on the mere allegations ... of [their] pleading, but [their] response, by affidavits or ... otherwise ... must set forth specific facts showing that there is a genuine issue for trial. If the [plaintiffs do] not so respond, summary judgment, if appropriate, shall be entered against the [plaintiffs]." Fed.R.Civ.P. 56(e).

The affidavits of Bishop Daniel P. Reilly, Reverend Monsignor Paul J. St. Onge, Reverend John J. White, and Thomas J. Madden expressly state that these individuals had no knowledge or suspicion that Doyle underwent treatment for sexual abuse of minors at the locations or during the time period alleged in the complaint. The plaintiffs, despite being given ample opportunity to do so, have filed no affidavits or any other material whatsoever countering the factual assertions set forth in the defendants' affidavits. There is, therefore, nothing in the record establishing any issue of fact with respect to the defendants' notice of Doyle's alleged sexual misconduct. Accordingly, the defendants are entitled to judgment on the negligence counts as a matter of law.

CONCLUSION

For the foregoing reasons, the defendants' renewed motion for summary judgment (document no. 71) is granted. Counts nine, ten, twenty-two, and twenty-three are, therefore, dismissed to the extent they allege claims against Sacred Heart or the Norwich Diocese.

SO ORDERED.

921 F.Supp. 66

END OF DOCUMENT

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

41

BLUEBIRD OFFICE SUPPLIES (888) 477-0700 www.bluebirdonline.com

EXHIBIT 41

89 S.Ct. 601
21 L.Ed.2d 658
(Cite as: 393 U.S. 440, 89 S.Ct. 601)

Supreme Court of the United States

PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH IN the UNITED STATES et al., Petitioners,
v.
MARY ELIZABETH BLUE HULL MEMORIAL PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH et al.

No. 71.

Argued Dec. 9 and 10, 1968.
Decided Jan. 27, 1969.

Actions by local churches to enjoin general church from trespassing on local church properties. General church cross-claimed for injunctive relief. The Superior Court of Chatham County, Georgia, rendered judgment to plaintiffs, and defendants appealed. The Supreme Court of Georgia, 224 Ga. 61, 159 S.E.2d 690, affirmed. On certiorari, the United States Supreme Court, Mr. Justice Brennan, held that restraints of First Amendment, as applied to states through Fourteenth Amendment, forbid a civil court from awarding church property on basis of interpretation and significance the civil court assigns to aspects of church doctrine.

Reversed and remanded with directions.

West Headnotes

[1] Federal Courts ⇐504.1
170Bk504.1 Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 170Bk504)

The United States Supreme Court granted certiorari to consider First Amendment questions raised in actions by local churches to enjoin general church from trespassing on local church properties wherein general church contended that questions of ecclesiastical nature concerning whether or not a church has abandoned its tenets and doctrines are exclusively within jurisdiction of church courts and should not be submitted to a jury for determination as this would destroy doctrine of separation of church and state. U.S.C.A.Const. Amend. 1.

[2] Property ⇐1
315k1 Most Cited Cases

State has a legitimate interest in resolving property disputes.

[3] Courts ⇐5
106k5 Most Cited Cases

A civil court is a proper forum for resolution of property disputes.

[4] Constitutional Law ⇐84.5(9)
92k84.5(9) Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 92k84)

First Amendment severely circumscribes role that civil courts may play in resolving church property disputes. U.S.C.A.Const. Amends. 1, 14.

[5] Constitutional Law ⇐84.5(9)
92k84.5(9) Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 92k84)

Not every civil court decision as to property claimed by a religious organization jeopardizes values protected by the First Amendment. U.S.C.A.Const. Amends. 1, 14.

[6] Constitutional Law ⇐84.5(9)
92k84.5(9) Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 92k84)

Civil courts do not inhibit free exercise of religion merely by opening their doors to disputes involving church property. U.S.C.A.Const. Amends. 1, 14.

[7] Constitutional Law ⇐84.1
92k84.1 Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 92k84(1), 92k84)

First Amendment enjoins employment of organs of government for essentially religious purposes. U.S.C.A.Const. Amend. 1.

[8] Constitutional Law ⇐274(3.1)
92k274(3.1) Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 92k274(3), 92k274)

Restraints of First Amendment, as applied to states through Fourteenth Amendment, forbid a civil court from awarding church property on basis of interpretation and significance the civil court assigns to aspects of church doctrine. U.S.C.A.Const. Amends. 1, 14.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

[9] Religious Societies ⇐24
332k24 Most Cited Cases

States, religious organizations and individuals must structure relationships involving church property so as not to require civil courts to resolve ecclesiastical questions.

[10] Constitutional Law ⇐84.5(9)
92k84.5(9) Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 92k84)

First Amendment precluded resolution of property dispute between local churches and general church by civil court on basis of departure-from-doctrine standard, that is, whether general church had abandoned its tenets of faith and practice existing at time of affiliation by local churches. U.S.C.A.Const. Amend. 1.

[11] Constitutional Law ⇐84.1
92k84.1 Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 92k84(1), 92k84)

First Amendment prohibits state from employing religious organizations as an arm of civil judiciary to perform function of interpreting and applying state standards. U.S.C.A.Const. Amend. 1.

[12] Religious Societies ⇐14
332k14 Most Cited Cases

A civil court may no more review a church decision applying a state departure- from-doctrine standard than it may apply that standard itself. U.S.C.A.Const.Amend. 1.

*602 *440 Charles L. Gowen, Atlanta, Ga., for petitioners.

*441 Owen H. Page, Savannah, Ga., for respondents.

Mr. Justice BRENNAN delivered the opinion of the Court.

This is a church property dispute which arose when two local churches withdrew from a hierarchical general church organization. Under Georgia law the right to the property previously used by the local churches was made to turn on a civil court jury decision as to whether the general church abandoned or departed from the tenets of faith and practice it held at the time the local churches affiliated with it. The question presented is whether the restraints of the First Amendment, as applied to the States through the Fourteenth Amendment, permit a civil court to award church property on the basis of the interpretation and significance the civil court assigns to aspects of church doctrine.

Petitioner, Presbyterian Church in the United States, is an association of local Presbyterian churches governed *442 by a hierarchical structure of tribunals which consists of, in ascending order, (1) the Church Session, composed of the elders of the local church; (2) the Presbytery, composed of several churches in a geographical area; (3) the Synod, generally composed of all Presbyteries within a State; and (4) the General Assembly, the highest governing body.

A dispute arose between petitioner, the general church, and two local churches in Savannah, Georgia--the respondents, Hull Memorial Presbyterian Church and Eastern Heights Presbyterian Church--over control of the properties used until they by the local churches. In 1966, the membership of the local churches, in the belief that certain actions and pronouncements of the general church were violations of that organization's constitution and departures from the doctrine and practice in force at the time of affiliation, [FN1] voted to withdraw from the general church and to reconstitute the local churches as an autonomous Presbyterian organization. The ministers of the two *603 churches renounced the general church's *443 jurisdiction and authority over them, as did all but two of the ruling elders. In response, the general church, through the Presbytery of Savannah, established an Administrative Commission to seek a conciliation. The dissident local churchmen remained steadfast; consequently, the Commission acknowledged the withdrawal of the local leadership and proceeded to take over the local churches' property on behalf of the general church until new local leadership could be appointed.

FN1. The opinion of the Supreme Court of Georgia summarizes the claimed violations and departures from petitioner's original tenets of faith and practice as including the following: 'ordaining of women as ministers and ruling elders, making pronouncements and recommendations concerning civil, economic, social and political matters, giving support to the removal of Bible reading and prayers by children in the public schools, adopting certain Sunday School literature and teaching neo-orthodoxy alien to the Confession of Faith and Catechisms, as originally adopted by the general church, and causing all members to remain in the National Council of Churches of Christ and willingly accepting its leadership which advocated named practices, such as the subverting of parental authority, civil disobedience and intermeddling in civil affairs'; also 'that the general church has * * * made pronouncements in matters involving international issues such as the Vietnam conflict and has disseminated publications denying the Holy Trinity and violating the moral and ethical standards of the faith.' 224 Ga. 61, 62--63, 159 S.E.2d 690, 692 (1968).

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

[1] The local churchmen made no effort to appeal the Commission's action to higher church tribunals--the Synod of Georgia or the General Assembly. Instead, the churches filed separate suits in the Superior Court of Chatham County to enjoin the general church from trespassing on the disputed property, title to which was in the local churches. The cases were consolidated for trial. The general church moved to dismiss the actions and cross-claimed for injunctive relief in its own behalf on the ground that civil courts were without power to determine whether the general church had departed from its tenets of faith and practice. The motion to dismiss was denied, and the case was submitted to the jury on the theory that Georgia law implies a trust of local church property for the benefit of the general church on the sole condition that the general church adhere to its tenets of faith and practice existing at the time of affiliation by the local churches. [FN2] Thus, the jury was instructed to determine whether the actions of the general church 'amount to a fundamental or substantial abandonment of the original tenets and doctrines of the (general *444 church), so that the new tenets and doctrines are utterly variant from the purposes for which the (general church) was founded.' The jury returned a verdict for the local churches, and the trial judge thereupon declared that the implied trust had terminated and enjoined the general church from interfering with the use of the property in question. The Supreme Court of Georgia affirmed, 224 Ga. 61, 159 S.E.2d 690 (1968). We granted certiorari to consider the First Amendment questions raised. [FN3] 604392 U.S. 903, 88 S.Ct. 2060, 20 L.Ed.2d 1362 (1968). We reverse.

FN2. This theory derives from principles fashioned by English courts. See, e.g., Craigdallie v. Aikman, 1 Dow 1, 3 Eng.Rep. 601 (H.L.1813) (Scot.); Attorney General ex rel. Mander v. Pearson, 3 Mer. 353, 36 Eng.Rep. 135 (Ch. 1817). For the subsequent development of the implied trust theory in English courts, see Note, Judicial Intervention in Disputes Over the Use of Church Property, 75 Harv.L.Rev. 1142, 1148-- 1149 (1962).

FN3. We reject the contention of respondent local churches that no First Amendment issues were raised or decided in the state courts. Petitioner's answer and cross-claim in each case included an express allegation that the action of respondents in appropriating the church property to their use was 'in violation of the laws of Georgia, the United States of America, and the Southern Presbyterian Church.' (Italics supplied.) At trial, petitioners' counsel objected to the admission of all testimony 'pertaining to (the) alleged deviation from the faith and practice of the Presbyterian Church in the United States' because that question was 'exclusively within the right of the Presbyterian Church in the United States through its proper judicial body to determine.' On appeal, petitioners again contended 'that questions of an ecclesiastical nature concerning whether or not a church has abandoned its tenents (sic) and doctrines, or some of them, are exclusively within the jurisdiction of the church courts and should not be submitted to a jury for determination as this would > destroy the doctrine of separation of church and state.' Petitioners thus clearly raised claims under the First Amendment as applied to the States by the Fourteenth Amendment. Kedroff v. St. Nicholas Cathedral of Russian Orthodox Church in North America, 344 U.S. 94, 116, 119, 73 S.Ct. 143, 97 L.Ed. 120 (1952). The Georgia Supreme Court considered and decided these claims. 'In considering this contention (that the petitions raise ecclesiastical questions which are exclusively within the jurisdiction of the church, not of civil courts, and therefore that respondents could not maintain their action),' the court said, 'we are mindful that 'The traditional American doctrine of freedom of religion and separation of church and state carries with it freedom of the church from having its doctrines or beliefs defined, interpreted, or censored by civil courts. '" 224 Ga., at 68, 159 S.E.2d, at 695. The court concluded, however, that the trial court did not violate the doctrine. Citing Georgia Code Ann. s 22--408, which provides: 'Courts are reluctant to interpose in questions affecting the management of the temporalities of a church; but when property is devoted to a specific doctrine or purpose, the courts will prevent it from being diverted from the trust,' the court held that 'a trust (in favor of the general church) is conditioned upon the general church's adherence to its tenets of faith and practice existing when the local church affiliated with it and * * * an abandonment of, or departure from, such tenets is a diversion from the trust, which the civil courts will prevent.' 224 Ga., at 68, 159 S.E.2d, at 695.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

*445 [2][3] It is of course true that the State has a legitimate interest in resolving property disputes, and that a civil court is a proper forum for that resolution. Special problems arise, however, when these disputes implicate controversies over church doctrine and practice. The approach of this Court in such cases was originally developed in Watson v. Jones, 13 Wall. 679, 20 L.Ed. 666 (1872), a pre-Erie R. Co. v. Tompkins diversity decision decided before the application of the First Amendment to the States but nonetheless informed by First Amendment considerations. [FN4] There, as here, civil courts were asked to resolve a property dispute between a national Presbyterian organization and local churches of that organization. There, as here, the disputes arose out of a controversy over church doctrine. There, as here, the Court was asked to decree the termination of an implied trust because of departures from doctrine by the national organization. The Watson Court refused pointing out that it was wholly inconsistent with the American concept of the relationship 446 between church and state to permit civil courts to determine ecclesiastical questions. In language which has a clear constitutional ring, the Court said

> FN4. 'Watson v. Jones, although it contains a reference to the relations of church and state under our system of laws, was decided without depending upon prohibition of state interference with the free exercise of religion. It was decided in 1871 (sic), before judicial recognition of the coercive power of the Fourteenth Amendment to protect the limitations of the First Amendment against state action. It long antedated the 1938 decisions of Erie R. Co. v. Tompkins and Ruhlin v. New York Life Ins. Co., 304 U.S. 64, 58 S.Ct. 817, 82 L.Ed. 1188, and 304 U.S. 202, 58 S.Ct. 860, 82 L.Ed. 1290 and, therefore, even though federal jurisdiction in the case depended solely on diversity, the holding was based on general law rather than Kentucky law.' Kedroff v. St. Nicholas Cathedral of Russian Orthodox Church in North America, 344 U.S. 94, 115--116, 73 S.Ct. 143, 154 (1952).

'In this country the full and free right to entertain any religious belief, to practice any religious principle, and to teach any religious doctrine which does not violate the laws of morality and property, and which does not infringe personal rights, is conceded to all. The law knows no heresy, and is committed to the support of no dogma, the establishment of no sect. * * * All who unite themselves to such a body (the general church) do so with an implied consent to (its) government, and are bound to submit to it. But it would be a vain consent and would lead to the total subversion of such religious bodies, if any one aggrieved by one of their decisions could appeal to the secular courts and have them (sic) reversed. It is of the essence of these religious unions, and of their right to establish tribunals for the decision of questions arising among themselves, that those decisions should be binding in all cases of ecclesiastical cognizance, subject only to *605 such appeals as the organism itself provides for.' 13 Wall., at 728--729. [FN5]

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

FN5. Accord, see, e.g., decisions involving Presbyterian churches, Trustees of Pencader Presbyterian Church in Pencader Hundred v. Gibson, 26 Del.Ch. 375, 22 A.2d 782 (1941); Bramlett v. Young, 229 S.C. 519, 93 S.E.2d 873 (1956); St. John's Presbytery v. Central Presbyterian Church of St. Petersburg, 102 So.2d 714 (Fla.1958) ; see also Northside Bible Church v. Goodson, 387 F.2d 534 (C.A.5th Cir. 1967). See generally for an examination of the development and growth of the rules for settling church property disputes, Note, Judicial Intervention in Disputes Over the Use of Church Property, 75 Harv.L.Rev. 1142 (1962); 54 Va.L.Rev. 1451 (1968); Duesenberg, Jurisdiction of Civil Courts Over Religious Issues, 20 Ohio St.L.J. 508 (1959); Comment, Judicial Intervention in Church Property Disputes--Some Constitutional Considerations, 74 Yale L.J. 1113 (1965).

*447 The logic of this language leaves the civil courts no role in determining ecclesiastical questions in the process of resolving property disputes.

Later cases, however, also decided on nonconstitutional grounds, recognized that there might be some circumstances in which marginal civil court review of ecclesiastical determinations would be appropriate. [FN6] The scope of this review was delineated in Gonzalez v. Roman Catholic Archbishop of Manila, 280 U.S. 1, 50 S.Ct. 5, 74 L.Ed. 131 (1929). There, Gonzalez claimed the right to be appointed to a chaplaincy in the Roman Catholic Church under a will which provided that a member of his family receive that appointment. The Roman Catholic Archbishop of Manila, Philippine Islands, refused to appoint Gonzalez on the ground that he did not satisfy the qualifications established by Canon Law for that office. Gonzalez brought suit in the Court of First Instance of Manila for a judgment directing the Archbishop, among other things, to appoint him chaplain. The trial court entered such an order, but the Supreme Court of the Philippine Islands reversed and 'absolved the Archbishop from the complaint.' This Court affirmed. Mr. Justice Brandeis, speaking for the Court, defined the civil court role in the following words: 'In the absence of fraud, collusion, or arbitrariness, the decisions of the proper church tribunals on matters purely ecclesiastical, although affecting civil rights, are accepted in litigation before the secular courts as conclusive, because the parties in interest made them so by contract or otherwise.' 280 U.S., at 16.

FN6. See, e.g., Bouldin v. Alexander, 15 Wall. 131, 21 L.Ed. 69 (1872); Brundage v. Deardorf, 55 F. 839 (C.C.N.D.Ohio 1893).

In Kedroff v. St. Nicholas Cathedral of Russian Orthodox Church in North America, 344 U.S. 94, 73 S.Ct. 143, 97 L.Ed. 120 (1952), the Court converted the principle of Watson as qualified by Gonzalez into a constitutional rule. Kedroff grew out of a dispute between the Moscow-based general Russian Orthodox Church and the Russian Orthodox 448 churches located in North America over an appointment to St. Nicholas Cathedral in New York City. The North American churches declared their independence from the general church, and the New York Legislature enacted a statute recognizing their administrative autonomy. The New York courts sustained the constitutionality of the statute and held that the North American churches' elected hierarch had the right to use the cathedral. This Court reversed, finding that the Moscow church had not acknowledged the schism, and holding the statute unconstitutional. The Court said, 344 U.S., at 116, 73 S.Ct. at 154:

'The opinion (in Watson v. Jones) radiates * * * a spirit of freedom for religious organizations, an independence from secular control or manipulation-- in short, power to decide for themselves, free from state interference, matters of church government as well as those of faith and doctrine. Freedom to select the clergy, where no improper methods of choice *606 are proven, we think, must now be said to have federal constitutional protection as a part of the free exercise of religion against state interference.' (Italics supplied.)

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

And, speaking of the New York statute, the Court said further, id., at 119, 73 S.Ct. at 156:

'By fiat it displaces one church administrator with another. It passes the control of matters strictly ecclesiastical from one church authority to another. It thus intrudes for the benefit of one segment of a church the power of the state into the forbidden area of religious freedom contrary to the principles of the First Amendment.' (Italics supplied.)

This holding invalidating legislative action was extended to judicial action in Kreshik v. St. Nicholas Cathedral, 363 U.S. 190, 80 S.Ct. 1037, 4 L.Ed.2d 1140 (1960), where the Court held that the constitutional guarantees of religious liberty required the 449 reversal of a judgment of the New York courts which transferred control of St. Nicholas Cathedral from the central governing authority of the Russian Orthodox Church to the independent Russian Church of America.

[4][5][6][7][8][9] Thus, the First Amendment severely circumscribes the role that civil courts may play in resolving church property disputes. It is obvious, however, that not every civil court decision as to property claimed by a religious organization jeopardizes values protected by the First Amendment. Civil courts do not inhibit free exercise of religion merely by opening their doors to disputes involving church property. And there are neutral principles of law, developed for use in all property disputes, which can be applied without 'establishing' churches to which property is awarded. But First Amendment values are plainly jeopardized when church property litigation is made to turn on the resolution by civil courts of controversies over religious doctrine and practice. If civil courts undertake to resolve such controversies in order to adjudicate the property dispute, the hazards are ever present of inhibiting the free development of religious doctrine and of implicating secular interests in matters of purely ecclesiastical concern. Because of these hazards, the First Amendment enjoins the employment of organs of government for essentially religious purposes, School District of Township of Abington, Pa. v. Schempp, 374 U.S. 203, 83 S.Ct. 1560, 10 L.Ed.2d 844 (1963); the Amendment therefore commands civil courts to decide church property disputes without resolving underlying controversies over religious doctrine. Hence, States, religious organizations, and individuals must structure relationships involving church property so as not to require the civil courts to resolve ecclesiastical questions.

The Georgia courts have violated the command of the First Amendment. The departure-from-doctrine element of the implied trust theory which they applied 450 requires the civil judiciary to determine whether actions of the general church constitute such a 'substantial departure' from the tenets of faith and practice existing at the time of the local churches' affiliation that the trust in favor of the general church must be declared to have terminated. This determination has two parts. The civil court must first decide whether the challenged actions of the general church depart substantially from prior doctrine. In reaching such a decision, the court must of necessity make its own interpretation of the meaning of church doctrines. If the court should decide that a substantial departure has occurred, it must then go on to determine whether the issue on which the general church has departed holds a place of such importance in the traditional theology as to require that the trust be terminated. A civil court can make this determination *607 only after assessing the relative significance to the religion of the tenets from which departure was found. Thus, the departure-from-doctrine element of the Georgia implied trust theory requires the civil court to determine matters at the very core of a religion--the interpretation of particular church doctrines and the importance of those doctrines to the religion. Plainly, the First Amendment forbids civil courts from playing such a role.

[10][11][12] Since the Georgia courts on remand may undertake to determine whether petitioner is entitled to relief on its cross-claims, we find it appropriate to remark that the departure-from-doctrine element of Georgia's implied trust theory can play no role in any future judicial proceedings. The departure-from-doctrine approach is not susceptible of the marginal judicial involvement contemplated in Gonzalez. [FN7] Gonzalez' rights under a will 451 turned on a church decision, the Archbishop's, as to church law, the qualifications for the chaplaincy. It was the archbishopric, not the civil courts, which had the task of analyzing and interpreting church law in order to determine the validity of Gonzalez' claim to a chaplaincy. Thus, the civil courts could adjudicate the rights under the will without interpreting or weighing church doctrine but simply by engaging in the narrowest kind of review of a specific church decision--i.e., whether that decision resulted from fraud, collusion, or arbitrariness. Such review does not inject the civil courts into substantive ecclesiastical matters. In contrast, under Georgia's departure- from-doctrine approach, it is not possible for the civil courts to play so limited a role. Under this approach, property rights do not turn on a church decision as to church doctrine. The standard of departure-from-doctrine, though it calls for resolution of ecclesiastical questions, is a creation of state, not church, law. Nothing in the record suggests that this state standard has been interpreted and applied in a decision of the general church. Any decisions which have been made by the general church about the local churches' withdrawal have at most a tangential relationship to the state- fashioned departure-from-doctrine standard. A determination whether such decisions are fraudulent, collusive, or arbitrary would therefore not answer the questions posed by the state standard. To reach those questions would require the civil courts to engage in the forbidden process of interpreting and weighing church doctrine. Even if the general church had attempted to apply the state standard, the civil courts could not review and enforce the church decision without violating the Constitution. The First Amendment prohibits a State from employing religious organizations as an arm of the civil judiciary to perform the function of interpreting and applying state standards. See School District of Township of Abington, Pa. 452 v. Schempp, supra. Thus, a civil court may no more review a church decision applying a state departure-from-doctrine standard than it may apply that standard itself.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

FN7. We have no occasion in this case to define or discuss the precise limits of review for 'fraud, collusion, or arbitrariness' within the meaning of Gonzalez.

The judgment of the Supreme Court of Georgia is reversed, and the case is remanded for further proceedings not inconsistent with this opinion.

It is so ordered.

Judgment reversed and case remanded.

Mr. Justice HARLAN, concurring.

I am in entire agreement with the Court's rejection of the 'departure-from- doctrine' approach taken by the Georgia courts, as that approach necessarily requires the civilian courts to weigh the significance and the meaning of disputed *608 religious doctrine. I do not, however, read the Court's opinion to go further to hold that the Fourteenth Amendment forbids civilian courts from enforcing a deed or will which expressly and clearly lays down conditions limiting a religious organization's use of the property which is granted. If, for example, the donor expressly gives his church some money on the condition that the church never ordain a woman as a minister or elder, see ante, at 602, n. 1, or never amend certain specified articles of the Confession of Faith, he is entitled to his money back if the condition is not fulfilled. In such a case, the church should not be permitted to keep the property simply because church authorities have determined that the doctrinal innovation is justified by the faith's basic principles. Cf. Watson v. Jones, 13 Wall. 679, 722--724, 20 L.Ed. 666 (1872).

On this understanding, I join the Court's opinion.

89 S.Ct. 601, 393 U.S. 440, 21 L.Ed.2d 658

END OF DOCUMENT

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

BLUEBIRD (888) 477-0700 www.bluebirdonline.com
OFFICE SUPPLIES

EXHIBIT 42

64 S.Ct. 438
88 L.Ed. 645
(Cite as: 321 U.S. 158, 64 S.Ct. 438)

Supreme Court of the United States

PRINCE
v.
COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS.

No. 98.

Argued Dec. 14, 1943.
Decided Jan. 31, 1944.
Rehearing Denied Mar. 27, 1944.
See 321 U.S. 804, 64 S.Ct. 784.

Sarah Prince was convicted of furnishing an infant with magazines knowing she would sell them unlawfully on the street and of permitting such infant to work contrary to law, 313 Mass. 223, 46 N.E.2d 755, and she appeals.

Affirmed.

Mr. Justice JACKSON, Mr. Justice ROBERTS, Mr. Justice FRANKFURTER, and Mr. Justice MURPHY, dissenting.

West Headnotes

[1] Federal Courts ⇐506
170Bk506 Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 106k394(10))

On appeal to Federal Supreme Court from conviction in state court for furnishing infant with magazines knowing she would sell them unlawfully and for permitting infant to work contrary to law on ground that the statute abridged appellant's freedom of religion and denied appellant equal protection of the laws, whether what the infant did was a sale or an offer to sell or was work within state statute was not open to review. G.L.(Ter.Ed.) Mass. c. 149, s 69, as amended by St.1939, c. 461, s 7; s 81; U.S.C.A.Const. Amends. 1, 14.

[2] Child Custody ⇐22
76Dk22 Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 285k2(1))

The custody, care, and nurture of the child resides first in the parents, whose primary function and freedom include preparation for obligations the state can neither supply nor hinder.

[3] Constitutional Law ⇐84.1
92k84.1 Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 92k84(1), 92k84)

The family is not beyond regulation in the public interest as against a claim of religious liberty.

[4] Constitutional Law ⇐84.1
92k84.1 Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 92k84(1), 92k84)

[4] Parent and Child ⇐1
285k1 Most Cited Cases

Neither rights of religion nor rights of parenthood are beyond limitation.

[5] Constitutional Law ⇐84.1
92k84.1 Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 92k84(1), 92k84)

The authority of the State as parens partriae is not nullified merely because the parent grounds his claim to control the child's course of conduct on religion or conscience.

[6] Constitutional Law ⇐84.5(17)
92k84.5(17) Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 92k84)

The right to practice religion does not include liberty to expose the community or the child to communicable disease or the latter to ill health or death.

[7] Constitutional Law ⇐84.1
92k84.1 Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 92k84(1), 92k84)

[7] Parent and Child ⇐1
285k1 Most Cited Cases

The state has a wide range of power for limiting parental freedom and authority in things affecting the child's welfare, and such power includes to some extent matters of conscience and religious conviction.

[8] Infants ⇐11

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

211k11 Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 211k12)

The state's authority over children's activities is broader than over like actions of adults.

[9] Infants ⇐13
211k13 Most Cited Cases

A democratic society rests for its continuance upon the healthy, well-rounded growth of young people into full maturity as citizens with all that implies, and state may secure it against impeding restraints and dangers within a broad range of selection.

[10] Infants ⇐65
211k65 Most Cited Cases

What may be wholly permissible for adults may not be so for children either with or without their parents' presence.

[11] Highways ⇐165
200k165 Most Cited Cases

[11] Highways ⇐167
200k167 Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 200k168)

Street preaching, whether oral or by handing out literature, is not the primary use of the highway even for adults, and, within reasonable limits, use of highway can be regulated in accommodation to the primary and other incidental uses.

[12] Constitutional Law ⇐84.5(12)
92k84.5(12) Most Cited Cases

[12] Constitutional Law ⇐242.1(4)
92k242.1(4) Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 92k238(1))

[12] Constitutional Law ⇐274(2)
92k274(2) Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 92k274)

[12] Infants ⇐12(6)
211k12(6) Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 211k12)

A state statute forbidding boys under 12 and girls under 18 to sell magazines, etc., in street or public places and penalizing the furnishing of such minors magazines, etc., with knowledge of minor's intent to sell them in street or public place, and penalizing parent, custodian, etc., who permits such minors to sell magazines, etc., in street or public place, is not unconstitutional as denying or abridging "freedom of religion" or denying "equal protection of the laws" as applied to member of a religious sect who furnished religious periodicals to minor girl who was under custody of member, and permitted girl to sell and distribute periodicals on the streets. G.L.(Ter.Ed.) Mass. c. 149, § 69 as amended by St.1939, c. 461, § 7; §§ 80, 81; U.S.C.A.Const. Amends. 1, 14.

*438 *159 Appeal from the Superior Court of Massachusetts, Plymouth County.

*439 Mr. Hayden C. Covington, of Brooklyn, N.Y., for appellant.

Mr. R. T. Bushnell, of Boston, Mass., for appellee.

Mr. Justice RUTLEDGE delivered the opinion of the Court.

The case brings for review another episode in the conflict between Jehovah's Witnesses and state authority. This time Sarah Prince appeals from convictions for violating Massachusetts' child labor laws, by acts said to be a rightful exercise of her religious convictions.

When the offenses were committed she was the aunt and custodian of Betty M. Simmons, a girl nine years of age. Originally there were three separate complaints. They 160 were, shortly, for (1) refusal to disclose Betty's identity and age to a public officer whose duty was to enforce the statutes; (2) furnishing her with magazines, knowing she was to sell them unlawfully, that is, on the street; and (3) as Betty's custodian, permitting her to work contrary to law. The complaints were made, respectively, pursuant to Sections 79, 80 and 81 of Chapter 149, Gen.Laws of Mass. (Ter.Ed.). The Supreme Judicial Court reversed the conviction under the first complaint on state grounds; [FN1] but sustained the judgments founded on the other two. [FN2] 313 Mass. 223, 46 N.E.2d 755. They present the only questions for our decision. These are whether Sections 80 and 81, as applied, contravene the Fourteenth Amendment by denying or abridging appellant's freedom of religion and by denying to her the equal protection of the laws.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

FN1 The court found there was no evidence that appellant was asked Betty's age. It then held that conviction for refusal to disclose the child's name, based on the charge under Section 79, would violate Article 12 of the Declaration of Rights of the Commonwealth, which provides in part: 'No subject shall be held to answer for any crimes or offence, until the same is fully and plainly, substantially and formally, described to him; or be compelled to accuse, or furnish evidence against himself.'

FN2 Appellant received moderate fines on each complaint, first in the District Court of Brockton, then on pleas of not guilty by trial de novo without a jury in the Superior Court for Plymouth County. Motions to dismiss and quash the complaints, for directed findings, and for rulings, were made seasonably and denied by the Superior Court.

Sections 80 and 81 form parts of Massachusetts' comprehensive child labor law. [FN3] They provide methods for enforcing the prohibitions of Section 69, which is as follows:

FN3 Mass.Gen. Laws, Ter.Ed., c. 149, as amended by Acts and Resolves of 1939, c. 461.

'No boy under twelve and no girl under eighteen shall sell, expose or offer for sale any newspapers, magazines, periodicals or any other articles of merchandise of any 161 description, or exercise the trade of bootblack or scavenger, or any other trade, in any street or public place.'

Section 80 and 81, so far as pertinent, read:

'Whoever furnishes or sells to any minor any article of any description with the knowledge that the minor intends to sell such article in violation of any provision of sections sixty-nine to seventy-three, inclusive, or after having received written notice to this effect from any officer charged with the enforcement thereof, or knowingly procures or encourages any minor to violate any provisions of said sections, shall be punished by a fine of not less than ten nor more than two hundred dollars or by imprisonment for not more than two months, or both.' (Section 80)

'Any parent, guardian or custodian having a minor under his control who compels or permits such minor to work in violation of any provision of sections sixty to seventy-four, inclusive, * * * shall for a first offence be punished by a fine of not less than two nor more than ten dollars or by imprisonment for not more than *440 five days, or both; * * *.' (Section 81)

The story told by the evidence has become familiar. It hardly needs repeating, except to give setting to the variations introduced through the part played by a child of tender years. Mrs. Prince, living in Brockton, is the mother of two young sons. She also has legal custody of Betty Simmons who lives with them. The children too are Jehovah's Witnesses and both Mrs. Prince and Betty testified they were ordained ministers. The former was accustomed to go each week on the streets of Brockton to distribute 'Watchtower' and 'Consolation,' according to the usual plan. [FN4] She had permitted the children to 162 engage in this activity previously, and had been warned against doing so by the school attendance officer, Mr. Perkins. But, until December 18, 1941, she generally did not take them with her at night.

FN4 Cf. the facts as set forth in Jamison v. Texas, 318 U.S. 413, 63 S.Ct. 669; Largent v. Texas, 318 U.S. 418, 63 S.Ct. 667; Murdock v. Pennsylvania, 319 U.S. 105, 63 S.Ct. 870, 87 L.Ed. 1292, 146 A.L.R. 82; Busey v. District of Columbia, 75 U.S.App.D.C. 352, 129 F.2d 24. A common feature is that specified small sums are generally asked and received but the publications may be had without the payment if so desired.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

That evening, as Mrs. Prince was preparing to leave her home, the children asked to go. She at first refused. Childlike, they resorted to tears and, motherlike, she yielded. Arriving downtown, Mrs. Prince permitted the children 'to engage in the preaching work with her upon the sidewalks.' That is, with specific reference to Betty, she and Mrs. Prince took positions about twenty feet apart near a street intersection. Betty held up in her hand, for passersby to see, copies of 'Watch Tower' and 'Consolation.' From her shoulder hung the usual canvas magazine bag, on which was printed 'Watchtower and Consolation 5¢ per copy.' No one accepted a copy from Betty that evening and she received no money. Nor did her aunt. But on other occasions, Betty had received funds and given out copies.

Mrs. Prince and Betty remained until 8:45 p.m. A few minutes before this Mr. Perkins approached Mrs. Prince. A discussion ensued. He inquired and she refused to give Betty's name. However, she stated the child attended the Shaw School. Mr. Perkins referred to his previous warnings and said he would allow five minutes for them to get off the street. Mrs. Prince admitted she supplied Betty with the magazines and said, '(N)either you nor anybody else can stop me * * *. This child is exercising her God-given right and her constitutional right to preach the gospel, and no creature has a right to interfere with God's commands.' However, Mrs. Prince and Betty departed. She remarked as she went, 'I'm not going through this any more. We've been through it time and time again. I'm going home and put the little girl to bed.' It may be added that testimony, by Betty, her aunt and others, was offered at the trials, and was excluded, 163 to show that Betty believed it was her religious duty to perform this work and failure would bring condemnation 'to everlasting destruction at Armageddon.'

[1] As the case reaches us, the questions are no longer open whether what the child did was a 'sale' or an 'offer to sell' within Section 69 [FN5] or was 'work' within Section 81. The state court's decision has foreclosed them adversely to appellant as a matter of state law. [FN6] The only question *441 remaining therefore is whether, as construed and applied, the statute is valid. Upon this the court said: 'We think that freedom of the press and of religion is subject to incidental regulation to the slight degree involved in the prohibition of the selling of religious literature in streets and public places by boys under twelve and girls under eighteen and in the further statutory provisions herein considered, which have been adopted as a means of enforcing 164 that prohibition.' 313 Mass. 223, 229, 46 N.E.2d 755, 758.

FN5 In this respect the Massachusetts decision is contrary to the trend in other states. Compare State v. Mead, 230 Iowa 1217, 300 N.W. 523; State v. Meredith, 197 S.C. 351, 15 S.E.2d 678; State ex rel. Semansky v. Stark, 196 La. 307, 199 So. 129; City of Shreveport v. Teague, 200 La. 679, 8 So.2d 640; People v. Barber, 289 N.Y. 378, 46 N.E.2d 329; Thomas v. City of Atlanta, 59 Ga.App. 520, 1 S.E.2d 598; City of Cincinnati v. Mosier, 61 Ohio App. 81, 22 N.E.2d 418. Contra: McSparran v. City of Portland (Circuit Court, Multnomah County, Oregon, June 8, 1942), appeal dismissed, 169 Or. 377, 129 P.2d 65, certiorari denied, 318 U.S. 768, 63 S.Ct. 759.

FN6 The court's opinion said: 'The judge could find that if a passerby should hand over five cents in accordance with the sign on the bag and should receive a magazine in return, a sale would be effected. The judge was not required to accept the defendant's characterization of that transaction as a 'contribution.' He could believe that selling the literature played a more prominent part in the enterprise than giving it way. He could find that the defendant furnished the magazines to Betty, knowing that the latter intended to sell them, if she could, in violation of section 69. * * * The judge could find that the defendant permitted Betty to 'work' in violation of section 81. * * * (W)e cannot say that the evils at which the statutes were directed attendant upon the selling by children of newspapers, magazines, periodicals, and other merchandise in streets and public places do not exist where the publications are of a religious nature.' 313 Mass. 223, 227, 228, 46

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

N.E.2d 755, 757.

Appellant does not stand on freedom of the press. Regarding it as secular, she concedes it may be restricted as Massachusetts has done. [FN7] Hence, she rests squarely on freedom of religion under the First Amendment, applied by the Fourteenth to the states. She buttresses this foundation, however, with a claim of parental right as secured by the due process clause of the latter Amendment. [FN8] Cf. Meyer v. Nebraska, 262 U.S. 390, 43 S.Ct. 625, 67 L.Ed. 1042, 29 A.L.R. 1446. These guaranties, she thinks, guard alike herself and the child in what they have done. Thus, two claimed liberties are at stake. One is the parent's, to bring up the child in the way he should go, which for appellant means to teach him the tenets and the practices of their faith. The other freedom is the child's, to observe these; and among them is 'to preach the gospel * * * by public distribution' of 'Watchtower' and 'Consolation,' in conformity with the scripture: 'A little child shall lead them.'

> FN7 Appellant's brief says: 'The purpose of the legislation is to protect children from economic exploitation and keep them from the evils of such enterprises that contribute to the degradation of children.' And at the argument counsel stated the prohibition would be valid as against a claim of freedom of the press as a nonreligious activity.

> FN8 The due process claim, as made and perhaps necessarily, extends no further than that to freedom of religion, since in the circumstances all that is comprehended in the former is included in the latter.

If by this position appellant seeks for freedom of conscience a broader protection than for freedom of the mind, it may be doubted that any of the great liberties insured by the First Article can be given higher place than the others. All have preferred position in our basic scheme. Schneider v. State, 308 U.S. 147, 60 S.Ct. 146, 84 L.Ed. 155; Cantwell v. Connecticut, 310 U.S. 296, 60 S.Ct. 900, 84 L.Ed. 1213, 128 A.L.R. 1352. All are interwoven there together. Differences there are, in them and in the modes appropriate for their exercise. But they have unity in the charter's prime place because they have unity in their human sources and 165 functionings. Heart and mind are not identical. Intuitive faith and reasoned judgment are not the same. Spirit is not always thought. But in the everyday business of living, secular or otherwise, these variant aspects of personality find inseparable expression in a thousand ways. They cannot be altogether parted in law more than in life.

To make accommodation between these freedoms and an exercise of state authority always is delicate. It hardly could be more so than in such a clash as this case presents. On one side is the obviously earnest claim for freedom of conscience and religious practice. With it is allied the parent's claim to authority in her own household and in the rearing of her children. The parent's conflict with the state over control of the child and his training is serious enough when only secular matters are concerned. It becomes the more so when an element of religious conviction enters. Against these sacred private interests, basic in a democracy, stand the interests of society to protect the welfare of children, and the state's assertion of authority to that end, made here in a manner *442 conceded valid if only secular things were involved. The last is no mere corporate concern of official authority. It is the interest of youth itself, and of the whole community, that children be both safeguarded from abuses and given opportunities for growth into free and independent well-developed men and citizens. Between contrary pulls of such weight, the safest and most objective recourse is to the lines already marked out, not precisely but for guides, in narrowing the no man's land where this battle has gone on.

[2] The rights of children to exercise their religion, and of parents to give them religious training and to encourage them in the practice of religious belief, as against preponderant sentiment and assertion of state power voicing it, have had recognition here, most recently in 166West Virginia State Board of Education v. Barnette, 319 U.S. 624, 63 S.Ct. 1178. Previously in Pierce v. Society of Sisters, 268 U.S. 510, 45 S.Ct. 571, 69 L.Ed. 1070, 39 A.L.R. 468, this Court had sustained the parent's authority to provide religious with secular schooling, and the child's right to receive it, as against the state's requirement of attendance at public schools. And in

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

Meyer v. Nebraska, 262 U.S. 390, 43 S.Ct. 625, 67 L.Ed. 1042, 29 A.L.R. 1446, children's rights to receive teaching in languages other than the nation's common tongue were guarded against the state's encroachment. It is cardinal with us that the custody, care and nurture of the child reside first in the parents, whose primary function and freedom include preparation for obligations the state can neither supply nor hinder. Pierce v. Society of Sisters, supra. And it is in recognition of this that these decisions have respected the private realm of family life which the state cannot enter.

[3][4][5][6][7] But the family itself is not beyond regulation in the public interest, as against a claim of religious liberty. Reynolds v. United States, 98 U.S. 145, 25 L.Ed. 244; Davis v. Beason, 133 U.S. 333, 10 S.Ct. 299, 33 L.Ed. 637. And neither rights of religion nor rights of parenthood are beyond limitation. Acting to guard the general interest in youth's well being, the state as parens patriae may restrict the parent's control by requiring school attendance, [FN9] regulating or prohibiting the child's labor, [FN10] and in many other ways. [FN11] Its authority is not nullified merely because the parent grounds his claim to control the child's course of conduct on religion or conscience. Thus, he cannot claim freedom from compulsory vaccination for the child more than for himself on religious grounds. [FN12] The right to practice religion freedly does not include liberty to expose the community or the child 167 to communicable disease or the latter to ill health or death. People v. Pierson, 176 N.Y. 201, 68 N.E. 243, 63 L.R.A. 187, 98 Am.St.Rep. 666. [FN13] The catalogue need not be lengthened. It is sufficient to show what indeed appellant hardly disputes, that the state has a wide range of power for limiting parental freedom and authority in things affecting the child's welfare; and that this includes, to some extent, matters of conscience and religious conviction.

FN9 State v. Bailey, 157 Ind. 324, 61 N.E. 730, 59 L.R.A. 435; compare Meyer v. Nebraska, 262 U.S. 390, 43 S.Ct. 625, 67 L.Ed. 1042, 29 A.L.R. 1446; Pierce v. Society of Sisters, 268 U.S. 510, 45 S.Ct. 571, 69 L.Ed. 1070, 39 A.L.R. 468; West Virginia State Board of Education v. Barnette, 319 U.S. 624, 63 S.Ct. 1178.

FN10 Sturges & Burn Mfg. Co. v. Beauchamp, 231 U.S. 320, 34 S.Ct. 60, 58 L.Ed. 245, L.R.A.1915A, 1196; compare Muller v. Oregon, 208 U.S. 412, 28 S.Ct. 324, 52 L.Ed. 551, 13 Ann.Cas. 957.

FN11 Cf. People v. Ewer, 141 N.Y. 129, 36 N.E. 4, 25 L.R.A. 794, 38 Am.St.Rep. 788.

FN12 Jacobson v. Massachusetts, 197 U.S. 11, 25 S.Ct. 358, 49 L.Ed. 643, 3 Ann.Cas. 765.

FN13 See also State v. Chenoweth, 163 Ind. 94, 71 N.E. 197; Owens v. State, 6 Okl.Cr. 110, 116 P. 345, 36 L.R.A.,N.S., 633, Ann.Cas.1913B, 1218.

But it is said the state cannot do so here. This, first, because when state action impinges upon a claimed religious freedom, it must fall unless shown to be necessary for or conducive to the child's protection against some clear and present danger, cf. Schenck v. United States, 249 U.S. 47, 39 S.Ct. 247, 63 L.Ed. 470; and, it is added, there was no such showing here. The child's presence on the street, with her *443 guardian, distributing or offering to distribute the magazines, it is urged, was in no way harmful to her, nor in any event more so than the presence of many other children at the same time and place, engaged in shopping and other activities not prohibited. Accordingly, in view of the preferred position the freedoms of the First Article occupy, the statute in its present application must fall. It cannot be sustained by any presumption of validity. Cf. Schneider v. State, 308 U.S. 147, 60 S.Ct. 146, 84 L.Ed. 155. And, finally, it is said, the statute is, as to children, an absolute prohibition, not merely a reasonable regulation, of the denounced activity.

Concededly a statute or ordinance identical in terms with Section 69, except that it is applicable to adults or all persons generally, would be invalid. Young v. California, 308 U.S. 147, 60 S.Ct. 146, 84 L.Ed. 155; Nichols v. Massachusetts, 308 U.S. 147, 60 S.Ct. 146, 84 L.Ed. 155; Jamison v. Texas, 318

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

U.S. 413, 63 S.Ct. 669; Murdock v. Pennsylvania, 319 U.S. 105, 63 S.Ct. 870, 87 L.Ed. 1292, 146 A.L.R. 82; Martin v. City of Struthers, 319 U.S. 141, 63 S.Ct. 862, 87 L.Ed. 1313. [FN14] *168 But the mere fact a state could not wholly prohibit this form of adult activity, whether characterized locally as a 'sale' or otherwise, does not mean it cannot do so for children. Such a conclusion granted would mean that a state could impose no greater limitation upon child labor than upon adult labor. Or, if an adult were free to enter dance halls, saloons, and disreputable places generally, in order to discharge his conceived religious duty to admonish or dissuade persons from frequenting such places, so would be a child with similar convictions and objectives, if not alone then in the parent's company, against the state's command.

FN14 Pertinent also are the decisions involving license features: Lovell v. City of Griffin, 303 U.S. 444, 58 S.Ct. 666, 82 L.Ed. 949; Schneider v. State, 308 U.S. 147, 60 S.Ct. 146, 84 L.Ed. 155; Hague v. Committee for Industrial Organization, 307 U.S. 496, 59 S.Ct. 954, 83 L.Ed. 1423.

[8][9] The state's authority over children's activities is broader than over like actions of adults. This is peculiarly true of public activities and an matters of employment. A democratic society rests, for its continuance, upon the healthy, well-rounded growth of young people into full maturity as citizens, with all that implies. It may secure this against impeding restraints and dangers, within a broad range of selection. Among evils most appropriate for such action are the crippling effects of child employment, [FN15] more especially in public places, and the possible harms arising from other activities subject to all the diverse influences of the street. [FN16] It is too late now to doubt *169 that legislation appropriately designed to reach such evils is within the state's police power, whether against the parents claim to control of the child or one that religious scruples dictate contrary action.

FN15 See, e.g., Volumes 1-4, 6-8, 14, 18, Report on Condition of Woman and Child Wage Earners in the United States, Sen. Doc. No. 645, 61st Cong., 2d Sess.; The Working Children of Boston, U.S. Dept. of Labor, Children's Bureau Publication No. 89 (1922); Fuller, The Meaning of Child Labor (1922); Fuller and Strong, Child Labor in Massachusetts (1926).

FN16 See, e.g., Clopper, Child Labor in City Streets (1912); Children in Street Work, U.S. Dept. of Labor, Children's Bureau Publication No. 183 (1928); Children Engaged in Newspaper and Magazine Selling and Delivering, U.S. Dept. of Labor, Children's Bureau Publication No. 227 (1935).

[10] It is true children have rights, in common with older people, in the primary use of highways. But even in such use streets afford dangers for them not affecting adults. And in other uses, whether in work or in other things, this difference may be magnified. This is so not only when children are unaccompanied but certainly to some extent when they are with their parents. What may be wholly permissible for adults therefore may not be so for children, either with or without their parents' presence.

[11][12] Street preaching, whether oral or by handing out literature, is not the primary use of the highway, even for adults. 444 While for them it cannot be wholly prohibited, it can be regulated within reasonable limits in accommodation to the primary and other incidental uses. [FN17] But, for obvious reasons, notwithstanding appellant's contrary view, [FN18] the validity of such a prohibition applied to children not accompanied by an older person hardly would seem open to question. The case reduces itself therefore to the question whether the presence of the child's guardian puts a limit to the state's power. That fact may lessen the likelihood that some evils the legislation seeks to avert will occur. But it cannot forestall all of them. The zealous though lawful exercise of the right to engage in propagandizing the community, whether in religious, political or other matters, may and at times does create situations *170 difficult enough for adults to cope with and wholly inappropriate for children, especially of tender years, to face. Other harmful possibilities could be stated, of emotional

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

It is difficult for me to believe that going upon the streets to accost the public is the same thing for application of public law as withdrawing to a private structure for religious worship. But if worship in the churches and the activity of Jehovah's Witnesses on the streets 'occupy the same high estate' and have the 'same claim to protection' it would seem that child labor laws may be applied to both if to either. If the Murdock doctrine stands along with today's decision, a foundation is laid for any state intervention in the indoctrination and participation of children in religion, provided it is done in the name of their health or welfare.

This case brings to the surface the real basis of disagreement among members of this Court in previous Jehovah's Witness cases. Murdock v. Pennsylvania, 319 U.S. 105, 63 S.Ct. 870, 87 L.Ed. 1292, 146 A.L.R. 82; Martin v. Struthers, 319 U.S. 141, 63 S.Ct. 862, 87 L.Ed. 1313; Jones v. Opelika, 316 U.S. 584, 86 L.Ed. 1691, 141 A.L.R. 514; Id., 319 U.S. 103, 63 S.Ct. 890, 87 L.Ed. 1290; Douglas v. Jeannette, 319 U.S. 157, 63 S.Ct. 877, 882, 87 L.Ed. 1324. Our basic difference seems to be as to the method of establishing limitations which of necessity bound religious freedom.

My own view may be shortly put: I think the limits begin to operate whenever activities begin to affect or collide with liberties of others or of the public. Religious activities which concern only members of the faith are and ought to be free--as nearly absolutely free as anything can be. But beyond these, many religious denominations or sects engage in collateral and secular activities intended to obtain means from unbelievers to sustain the worshippers and their leaders. They raise money, not merely by passing the plate to those who voluntarily attend services or by contributions by their own people, but by solicitations and drives addressed to the public by holding public dinners and entertainments, by various kinds *178 of sales and Bingo games and lotteries. All such money-raising activities on a public scale are, I think, Caesar's affairs and may be regulated by the state so long as it does not discriminate against one because he is doing them for a religious purpose, and the regulation is not arbitrary and capricious, in violation of other provisions of the Constitution.

The Court in the Murdock case rejected this principle of separating immune religious activities from secular ones in declaring the disabilities which the Constitution imposed on local authorities. Instead, the Court now draws a line based on age that cuts across both true exercise of religion and auxiliary secular activities. I think this is not a correct principle for defining the activities immune from regulation on grounds of religion, and Murdock overrules the grounds on which I think affirmance should rest. I have no alternative but to dissent from the grounds of affirmance of a judgment which I think was rightly decided, and upon right grounds, by the Supreme Judicial Court of Massachusetts. 313 Mass. 223, 46 N.E.2d 755.

Mr. Justice ROBERTS and Mr. Justice FRANKFURTER join in this opinion.

Mr. Justice MURPHY, dissenting.

*171 This attempt by the state of Massachusetts to prohibit a child from exercising her constitutional right to practice her religion on the public streets cannot, in my opinion, be sustained.

The record makes clear the basic fact that Betty Simmons, the nine-year old child in question, was engaged in a genuine religious, rather than commercial, activity. 446 She was a member of Jehovah's Witnesses and had been taught the tenets of that sect by her guardian, the appellant. Such tenets included the duty of publicly distributing religious tracts on the street and from door to door. Pursuant to this religious duty and in the company of the appellant, Betty Simmons on the night of December 18, 1941, was standing on a public street corner and offering to distribute Jehovah's Witness literature to passersby. There was no expectation of pecuniary profit to *172 herself or to appellant. It is undisputed, furthermore, that she did this of her own desire and with appellant's consent. She testified that she was motivated by her love of the Lord and that He commanded her to distribute this literature; this was, she declared, her way of worshipping God. She was occupied, in other words, in 'an age-old form of missionary evangelism' with a purpose 'as evangelical as the revival meeting.' Murdock v. Pennsylvania, 319 U.S. 105, 108, 109, 63 S.Ct. 870, 872, 873, 87 L.Ed. 1292, 146 A.L.R. 82.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

Religious training and activity, whether performed by adult or child, are protected by the Fourteenth Amendment against interference by state action, except insofar as they violate reasonable regulations adopted for the protection of the public health, morals and welfare. Our problem here is whether a state, under the guise of enforcing its child labor laws, can lawfully prohibit girls under the age of eighteen and boys under the age of twelve from practicing their religious faith insofar as it involves the distribution or sale of religious tracts on the public streets. No question of freedom of speech or freedom of press is present and we are not called upon to determine the permissible restraints on those rights. Nor are any truancy or curfew restrictions in issue. The statutes in question prohibit all children within the specified age limits from selling or offering to sell 'any newspapers, magazines, periodicals or any other articles of merchandise of any description * * * in any street or public place.' Criminal sanctions are imposed on the parents and guardians who compel or permit minors in their control to engage in the prohibited transactions. The state court has construed these statutes to cover the activities here involved, cf. State v. Richardson, 92 N.H. 178, 27 A.2d 94, thereby imposing an indirect restraint through the parents and guardians on the free exercise by minors of their religious beliefs. This indirect restraint is no less effective than a direct one. A square conflict between the constitutional *173 guarantee of religious freedom and the state's legitimate interest in protecting the welfare of its children is thus presented.

As the opinion of the Court demonstrates, the power of the state lawfully to control the religious and other activities of children is greater than its power over similar activities of adults. But that fact is no more decisive of the issue posed by this case than is the obvious fact that the family itself is subject to reasonable regulation in the public interest. We are concerned solely with the reasonableness of this particular prohibition of religious activity by children.

In dealing with the validity of statutes which directly or indirectly infringe religious freedom and the right of parents to encourage their children in the practice of a religious belief, we are not aided by any strong presumption of the constitutionality of such legislation. United States v. Carolene Products Co., 304 U.S. 144, 152, 58 S.Ct. 778, 783, 82 L.Ed. 1234, note 4. On the contrary, the human freedoms enumerated in the First Amendment and carried over into the Fourteenth Amendment are to be presumed to be invulnerable and any attempt to sweep away those freedoms is prima facie invalid. It follows that any restriction or prohibition must be justified by those who deny that the freedoms have been unlawfully invaded. The burden was therefore on the state of Massachusetts to prove the reasonableness and necessity of prohibiting children from engaging in religious activity of the type involved in this case.

The burden in this instance, however, is not met by vague references to the reasonableness underlying child labor legislation in general. The great interest of the state in shielding minors from the evil vicissitudes of early life does not warrant every limitation on their religious training and activities. The reasonableness that justifies the prohibition of the ordinary distribution of literature in the public streets by children is not necessarily the reasonableness *174 447 that justifies such a drastic restriction when the distribution is part of their religious faith. Murdock v. Pennsylvania, supra, 319 U.S. 111, 63 S.Ct. 874, 87 L.Ed. 1292, 146 A.L.R. 82. If the right of a child to practice its religion in that manner is to be forbidden by constitutional means, there must be convincing proof that such a practice constitutes a grave and immediate danger to the state or to the health, morals or welfare of the child. West Virginia State Board of Education v. Barnette, 319 U.S. 624, 639, 63 S.Ct. 1178, 1186. The vital freedom of religion, which is 'of the very essence of a scheme of ordered liberty,' Palko v. Connecticut, 302 U.S. 319, 325, 58 S.Ct. 149, 152, 82 L.Ed. 288, cannot be erased by slender references to the state's power to restrict the more secular activities of children.

The state, in my opinion, has completely failed to sustain its burden of proving the existence of any grave or immediate danger to any interest which it may lawfully protect. There is no proof that Betty Simmons' mode of worship constituted a serious menace to the public. It was carried on in an orderly, lawful manner at a public street corner. And 'one who is rightfully on a street which the state has left open to the public carries with him there as elsewhere the constitutional right to express his views in an orderly fashion. This right extends to the communication of ideas by handbills and literature as well as by the spoken word.' Jamison v. Texas, 318 U.S. 413, 416, 63 S.Ct. 669, 672. The sidewalk, no less than the cathedral or the evangelist's tent, is a proper place, under the Constitution, for the orderly worship of God. Such use of the streets is as necessary to the Jehovah's Witnesses, the Salvation Army and others who practice religion without benefit of conventional shelters as is the use of the streets for purposes of passage.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

It is claimed, however, that such activity was likely to affect adversely the health, morals and welfare of the child. Reference is made in the majority opinion to 'the crippling effects of child employment, more especially in public *175 places, and the possible harms arising from other activities subject to all the diverse influences of the street.' To the extent that they flow from participation in ordinary commercial activities, these harms are irrelevant to this case. And the bare possibility that such harms might emanate from distribution of religious literature is not, standing alone, sufficient justification for restricting freedom of conscience and religion. Nor can parents or guardians be subjected to criminal liability because of vague possibilities that their religious teachings might cause injury to the child. The evils must be grave, immediate, substantial. Cf. Bridges v. California, 314 U.S. 252, 262, 62 S.Ct. 190, 193, 86 L.Ed. 192. Yet there is not the slightest indication in this record, or in sources subject to judicial notice, that children engaged in distributing literature pursuant to their religious beliefs have been or are likely to be subject to any of the harmful 'diverse influences of the street.' Indeed, if probabilities are to be indulged in, the likelihood is that children engaged in serious religious endeavor are immune from such influences. Gambling, truancy, irregular eating and sleeping habits, and the more serious vices are not consistent with the high moral character ordinarily displayed by children fulfilling religious obligations. Moreover, Jehovah's Witness children invariably make their distributions in groups subject at all times to adult or parental control, as was done in this case. The dangers are thus exceedingly remote, to say the least. And the fact that the zealous exercise of the right to propagandize the community may result in violent or disorderly situations difficult for children to face is no excuse for prohibiting the exercise of that right.

No chapter in human history has been so largely written in terms of persecution and intolerance as the one dealing with religious freedom. From ancient times to the present day, the ingenuity of man has known no limits in its ability to forge weapons of oppression for use against *176 those who dare to express or practice unorthodox religious beliefs. And the Jehovah's Witnesses are living proof of the fact that even in this nation, conceived as it was in the ideals of freedom, the right to practice religion in unconventional ways is still far from secure. Theirs is a militant and unpopular faith, pursued with a fanatical zeal. They have suffered brutal beatings; their property has been destroyed; they have been harassed at every turn by the resurrection and enforcement 448 of little used ordinances and statutes. See Mulder and Comisky, 'Jehovah's Witnesses Mold Constitutional Law,' 2 Bill of Rights Review, No. 4, p. 262. To them, along with other present-day religious minorities, befalls the burden of testing our devotion to the ideals and constitutional guarantees of religious freedom. We should therefore hesitate before approving the application of a statute that might be used as another instrument of oppression. Religious freedom is too sacred a right to be restricted or prohibited in any degree without convincing proof that a legitimate interest of the state is in grave danger.

64 S.Ct. 438, 321 U.S. 158, 88 L.Ed. 645

END OF DOCUMENT

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

BLUEBIRD OFFICE SUPPLIES (888) 477-0700 www.bluebirdonline.com

EXHIBIT 43

54 P.3d 349
382 Ariz. Adv. Rep. 21
(Cite as: 203 Ariz. 320, 54 P.3d 349)

H

Court of Appeals of Arizona,
Division 1, Department B.

Shirin RASHEDI, Plaintiff-Appellant,
v.
GENERAL BOARD OF CHURCH OF the NAZARENE, a foreign benevolent corporation; Arizona/Southern Nevada District Church of the Nazarene, an entity of unknown type, Defendants-Appellees.

No. 1 CA-CV 01-0550.

Sept. 19, 2002.
Review Denied June 30, 2003.

Parishioner, who was allegedly defrauded and seduced by her pastor, filed complaint against the district for her church, and its board, among others, alleging that defendants were liable for negligent hiring, negligent supervision, negligent retention, negligence under a theory of respondeat superior, intentional infliction of emotional distress, securities fraud, constructive fraud, and racketeering. The Superior Court, Maricopa County, No. CV 2000-013332, Cari A. Harrison, J., dismissed action as violative of doctrine of ecclesiastical abstention. Parishioner appealed. The Court of Appeals, E.G. Noyes, Jr., J., held that neither Free Exercise Clause nor doctrine of ecclesiastical abstention barred parishioner's cause of action for negligent hiring.

Reversed and remanded.

West Headnotes

[1] Appeal and Error ⇐893(1)
30k893(1) Most Cited Cases

A court's decision that it lacks jurisdiction to adjudicate a claim is a question of law that the Court of Appeals reviews de novo.

[2] Constitutional Law ⇐84.5(10)
92k84.5(10) Most Cited Cases

[2] Religious Societies ⇐27(.5)
332k27(.5) Most Cited Cases

The First Amendment and the ecclesiastical abstention doctrine preclude civil courts from inquiring into ecclesiastical matters, and thus, for example, courts may not consider employment disputes between a religious organization and its clergy because such matters necessarily involve questions of internal church discipline, faith, and organization that are governed by ecclesiastical rule, custom, and law. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 1.

[3] Constitutional Law ⇐84.5(10)
92k84.5(10) Most Cited Cases

[3] Religious Societies ⇐27(1)
332k27(1) Most Cited Cases

Pursuant to the First Amendment and the ecclesiastical abstention doctrine, whether an individual is qualified to be a clergy member of a particular faith is a matter to be determined by the procedures and dictates of that particular faith. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 1.

[4] Constitutional Law ⇐84.5(7.1)
92k84.5(7.1) Most Cited Cases

[4] Constitutional Law ⇐84.5(9)
92k84.5(9) Most Cited Cases

[4] Religious Societies ⇐14
332k14 Most Cited Cases

[4] Religious Societies ⇐24
332k24 Most Cited Cases

Pursuant to the First Amendment and the ecclesiastical abstention doctrine, civil courts may not inquire into internal organizational disputes between different factions of a religious organization or into property disputes that would require interpreting religious doctrine or practice. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 1.

[5] Constitutional Law ⇐84.5(7.1)
92k84.5(7.1) Most Cited Cases

[5] Religious Societies ⇐14
332k14 Most Cited Cases

Pursuant to the First Amendment and the ecclesiastical abstention doctrine, civil courts must accept the decisions of the highest judicatories of a religious organization of hierarchical polity on matters of discipline, faith, internal organization, or ecclesiastical rule, custom, or law; however, when a church-related dispute can be resolved by applying neutral principles of law without inquiry into religious doctrine and without resolving a religious controversy, the civil courts may adjudicate the dispute. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 1.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

[6] Constitutional Law ⇐84.5(7.1)
92k84.5(7.1) Most Cited Cases

[6] Constitutional Law ⇐84.5(9)
92k84.5(9) Most Cited Cases

[6] Religious Societies ⇐15.1
332k15.1 Most Cited Cases

[6] Religious Societies ⇐30
332k30 Most Cited Cases

Because religious organizations are part of the civil community, they are subject to societal rules governing property rights, torts, and criminal conduct; the First Amendment does not excuse individuals or religious groups from complying with valid neutral laws. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 1.

[7] Constitutional Law ⇐84.5(10)
92k84.5(10) Most Cited Cases

[7] Religious Societies ⇐30
332k30 Most Cited Cases

Neither Free Exercise Clause nor doctrine of ecclesiastical abstention barred parishioner's cause of action for negligent hiring, supervision, and retention, asserted against various officials of a religious organization, based on allegations that parishioner was defrauded of money by her pastor, even if examination of structure of the religious organization was necessary to define duties of the various defendants; application of neutral tort principles to determine whom any of the officials knew or had reason to know the pastor was likely to victimize members of the organization did not conflict with the polity of the church, as any inquiry into the organization's structure would be to factually determine the roles the parties played in the licensing and hiring of the pastor, and manual for the organization did provide for possibility of a district superintendent disapproving a proposed local pastor. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 1.

*350 *321 Sanders & Parks, P.C., By Rick N. Bryson, Shane D. Buntrock, Michele L. Forney, Phoenix, Attorneys for Plaintiff-Appellant.

Douglas & Cox, L.L.P., By Dean R. Cox, Daniel E. Fredenberg, Phoenix, Attorneys for Defendant-Appellee, General Board of Church of the Nazarene.

Law Office of Jerry Steele, By Jerry Steele, Phoenix, Attorney for Defendant-Appellee, Arizona/Southern Nevada District Church of the Nazarene.

OPINION

NOYES, Judge.

¶ 1 Shirin Rashedi, who was allegedly defrauded and seduced by her pastor, appeals the trial court's dismissal of her complaint against the General Board of the Church of the Nazarene ("Board") and the Arizona/Southern Nevada District Church of the Nazarene ("District"). The trial court concluded that it lacked subject-matter jurisdiction 322 351 because the case against the Board and the District would involve inquiry into the ecclesiastical doctrine, law, and polity of the Church of the Nazarene, in violation of the doctrine of ecclesiastical abstention. We conclude that the claims in question can be resolved by application of neutral principles of civil law and, therefore, that the trial court does have subject-matter jurisdiction.

I.

¶ 2 Rashedi's amended complaint alleged that the Board and District were guilty of negligent hiring, negligent supervision, negligent retention, negligence under a theory of respondeat superior, intentional infliction of emotional distress, securities fraud, constructive fraud, and racketeering. Named defendants also included the Crossroads Church of the Nazarene (the "Church"), pastor Edward Yousfi, church employee Joseph Youssefi, the senior pastor and president of the Church, the executive pastor of the Church, and several companies on whose behalf Edward Yousfi and Joseph Youssefi allegedly solicited investment funds from Rashedi. The Board and the District are the only defendants involved in this appeal.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

¶ 3 Rashedi's complaint alleged that in 1996 the Church began to reach out to the Persian community of the East Valley of Maricopa County. To that end, the Board, the District, and the Church hired Edward Yousfi as a pastor. However, according to the complaint, at or about the time these defendants hired Yousfi, they had credible information that he had a history of stealing money from, improperly soliciting investments from, and engaging in sexual misconduct with church members in other states. The complaint alleged that, between July 16, 1998, and January 2000, Yousfi and his brother (Youssefi) defrauded Rashedi of at least $286,000, that Yousfi gave the Church thousands of dollars improperly obtained from church members, and that he promised the Church a multi-million dollar donation. The complaint also alleged that, when the Church was informed that Yousfi and Youssefi were soliciting money from Church members, the Church vouched for Yousfi and conducted no investigation despite having knowledge of his reputation and history.

¶ 4 The complaint also alleged that Yousfi engaged in sexual relations with Rashedi by using his position as pastor and spiritual advisor to exert emotional and physical control over her in an attempt to defraud her of money.

¶ 5 In their answer, the Board and District denied that the court had subject- matter jurisdiction, denied having control over the business affairs of the Church, and denied hiring Yousfi. The Board and the District filed separate Motions to Dismiss.

¶ 6 The Board's motion argued that the doctrine of ecclesiastical abstention required dismissal of the lawsuit against the Board under Arizona Rules of Civil Procedure ("Rule") 12(b)(1) and (6). Citing the "Manual of the Church of the Nazarene" (the "Manual"), and attaching several pages of the Manual to its motion, the Board explained that the Church of the Nazarene is a hierarchical church composed of three independent authorities: the local churches, the district assemblies, and the General Assembly, over which presides the Board. The Board contended that the authority of the General Assembly, and therefore of the Board, was limited to making rules and regulations for departments related to the Church of the Nazarene, organizing the membership of the Church of the Nazarene into district assemblies, determining the qualifications of district assembly representatives and the boundaries of assembly districts, and defining the powers of the district assemblies. The Board maintained that it had no control over and no knowledge of the operations of local churches. The Board argued that, under the ecclesiastical abstention doctrine, civil courts must accept the provisions of the Manual and are precluded from inquiring further.

¶ 7 The District's motion to dismiss argued that the court lacked subject- matter jurisdiction under the First Amendment and the doctrine of ecclesiastical abstention. Also citing the Manual, the District stated that the Church was an independent entity that had the right to select and hire its own pastor, manage its own financial affairs, and 352 *323 control its own local work. According to the District, local churches report their activities to the District annually, but the District does not hire or discharge local pastors or staff members or set their duties. The District alleged that its only contact with Yousfi was in granting him the status of licensed minister for the Church of the Nazarene, which authorized him to preach the Word, to administer sacraments, and to officiate at marriages.

¶ 8 The District asserted that it approved or disapproved of a local church's selection of pastor based on an ecclesiastical review. The senior pastor was required to report annually to the District; others on the staff of the local church reported to the senior pastor. The District would review the status of licensed ministers annually for renewal of the license. Otherwise, the District exercised oversight with respect to its ministers only upon complaint by a church member.

¶ 9 The District argued that, because its role was limited to licensing Yousfi, any inquiry into the District's involvement in the case would necessarily require a review of the ecclesiastical doctrine of the Church of the Nazarene regarding licensing ministers, a matter over which, it asserted, the courts have no jurisdiction.

¶ 10 Rashedi responded that her complaint did not involve ecclesiastical issues; it involved a determination whether the Board and the District breached a secular duty by hiring and licensing Yousfi despite knowledge of his prior victimization of parishioners. Rashedi also argued that the Manual was outside the pleadings, and she requested a continuance to conduct further discovery under Rule 56(f) if the court considered the Manual in reaching its decision. Rashedi argued that attempts to depose the Board and the District had been unsuccessful and that she expected that the depositions would demonstrate that both the Board and the District had in fact been involved in hiring Yousfi.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

¶ 11 The court ruled that the Manual set out the duties of the Church, the District, and the Board, and that any review of the District's and the Board's role in the case "would necessarily require a review of the ecclesiastical doctrine, law and polity of the Church of the Nazarene as it relates to granting licenses to ministers." The court concluded that such an inquiry was precluded by the First Amendment of the United States Constitution and the doctrine of ecclesiastical abstention. The court granted the Board's and the District's motions to dismiss, and it denied Rashedi's Rule 56(f) motion, finding that the requested discovery would not "defeat the basis of the Court's granting dismissal."

¶ 12 Over objection of Rashedi, the court included Rule 54(b) language in its dismissal order. Rashedi timely appealed. We have jurisdiction pursuant to Arizona Revised Statutes section 12-2101(B) (1994).

II.

[1] ¶ 13 A court's decision that it lacks jurisdiction to adjudicate a claim is a question of law that we review de novo. Hughes v. Creighton, 165 Ariz. 265, 267, 798 P.2d 403, 405 (App.1990).

[2][3][4] ¶ 14 The First Amendment and the ecclesiastical abstention doctrine preclude civil courts from inquiring into ecclesiastical matters. For example, courts may not consider employment disputes between a religious organization and its clergy because such matters necessarily involve questions of internal church discipline, faith, and organization that are governed by ecclesiastical rule, custom, and law. Gonzalez v. Roman Catholic Archbishop of Manila, 280 U.S. 1, 16, 50 S.Ct. 5, 74 L.Ed. 131 (1929); Dobrota v. Free Serbian Orthodox Church St. Nicholas, 191 Ariz. 120, 124, ¶ 14, 952 P.2d 1190, 1194 (App.1998) (citing Lewis v. Seventh Day Adventists Lake Region Conf., 978 F.2d 940, 942 (6th Cir.1992)); Higgins v. Maher, 210 Cal.App.3d 1168, 258 Cal.Rptr. 757, 759-60 (App.1989). Whether an individual is qualified to be a clergy member of a particular faith is a matter to be determined by the procedures and dictates of that particular faith. Gonzalez, 280 U.S. at 16, 50 S.Ct. 5; Rayburn v. Gen. Conf. of Seventh-Day Adventists, 772 F.2d 1164, 1169 (4th Cir.1985). Nor can civil courts inquire into internal organizational disputes between different factions 324 353 of a religious organization or into property disputes that would require interpreting religious doctrine or practice. Serbian E. Orthodox Diocese v. Milivojevich, 426 U.S. 696, 709, 96 S.Ct. 2372, 49 L.Ed.2d 151 (1976); Crowder v. S. Baptist Convention, 828 F.2d 718, 726 (11th Cir.1987).

[5] ¶ 15 Civil courts must accept "the decisions of the highest judicatories of a religious organization of hierarchical polity on matters of discipline, faith, internal organization, or ecclesiastical rule, custom, or law." Milivojevich, 426 U.S. at 713, 96 S.Ct. 2372. However, when a church-related dispute can be resolved by applying neutral principles of law without inquiry into religious doctrine and without resolving a religious controversy, the civil courts may adjudicate the dispute. Jones v. Wolf, 443 U.S. 595, 602-04, 99 S.Ct. 3020, 61 L.Ed.2d 775 (1979); Barnes v. Outlaw, 188 Ariz. 401, 404, 937 P.2d 323, 326 (App.1996), vacated in part on other grounds, 192 Ariz. 283, 964 P.2d 484 (1998).

[6] ¶ 16 Because religious organizations are part of the civil community, they are subject to societal rules governing property rights, torts, and criminal conduct. Dobrota, 191 Ariz. at 125, ¶ 22, 952 P.2d at 1195. The First Amendment does not excuse individuals or religious groups from complying with valid neutral laws. Employment Div., Dep't of Human Res. v. Smith, 494 U.S. 872, 878-79, 110 S.Ct. 1595, 108 L.Ed.2d 876 (1990).

[7] ¶ 17 The question in the present case is whether the civil court can adjudicate claims against certain officials of a religious organization based on their alleged licensing and hiring of a pastor whom they knew or had reason to know was likely to victimize members of that organization. Courts addressing this kind of issue have reached various conclusions.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

¶ 18 In Ayon v. Gourley, the plaintiff alleged sexual abuse by a priest and sued the priest and the archdiocese on claims that included negligent hiring and supervision. 47 F.Supp.2d 1246, 1250 (D.Colo.1998). The court reasoned that the tort claims raised by the plaintiff required much more subjective judgment on the appropriateness of the conduct than the neutral law found applicable in Employment Division v. Smith, which concerned a statutory criminal prohibition. Ayon, 47 F.Supp.2d at 1248-49. The court concluded that any consideration of the hiring and supervision policies of the archdiocese would necessarily require examination of church policy and doctrine, as well as a determination whether those policies were reasonable and adequate. Id. at 1250-51. The court held that the First Amendment precluded this examination. Id. at 1251.

¶ 19 Church defendants obtained similar immunity for negligence-based claims in Isely v. Capuchin Province, 880 F.Supp. 1138, 1150-51 (E.D.Mich.1995), Gibson v. Brewer, 952 S.W.2d 239, 246-49 (Mo.1997), and Pritzlaff v. Archdiocese of Milwaukee, 194 Wis.2d 302, 533 N.W.2d 780, 790-91 (1995). [FN1] In Gibson, the court expressed concern that imposing tort standards of reasonableness on religious organizations would necessarily require evaluating "the reasonableness of religious beliefs, discipline, and government." Gibson, 952 S.W.2d at 247-50.

> FN1. The Isely court concluded that the court could not consider claims based on negligent hiring and retention because they would involve interpreting canon law and internal church policies and practices, but that the court could consider a claim of negligent supervision. 880 F.Supp. at 1150-51. The Gibson court found that claims based on negligence were barred, but that the court could consider claims based on intentional torts. 952 S.W.2d at 246-49.

¶ 20 However, other courts have decided that claims involving negligent hiring, supervision, and retention can be addressed without inquiring into ecclesiastical matters. In Smith v. O'Connell, plaintiffs sued Catholic priests and various officials of the diocese, alleging that the priests had sexually assaulted them. 986 F.Supp. 73, 75 (D.R.I.1997). Diocesan officials moved to dismiss based on the First Amendment. Id. The court noted that the case before it was not a dispute between factions within a church, or between a church and its clergy, or involving an internal church matter. Id. Rather, the dispute concerned whether the diocesan defendants failed to take appropriate action for the protection of the plaintiffs--a matter governed by tort law that did not require interpreting religious doctrine or ecclesiastical law. Id. *354 *325 The court found tort law principles to be neutral and generally applicable and therefore not violative of the First Amendment. Id. at 80. The court noted that although the defendants claimed that canon law limited their ability to discipline priests, nothing suggested that canon law precluded officials "from taking appropriate action to prevent priests, who are known pedophiles, from sexually abusing children." Id. at 78. The court acknowledged that some individual claims might require deciding questions of church doctrine, but did not address individual claims as the defendants raised only a general challenge to the court's jurisdiction. Id. at 81.

¶ 21 In Destefano v. Grabrian, a husband sued a priest and the diocese after the priest, who had been acting as a marriage counselor, engaged in a sexual relationship with his wife. 763 P.2d 275, 277-78 (Colo.1988). The defendants moved to dismiss, arguing that sacramental counseling was an ecclesiastical matter and that the court could not interfere. Id. at 283. The court acknowledged that marital counseling might involve spiritual counseling as well, but concluded that the First Amendment did not immunize the defendants there because it was not alleged that the priest's sexual activity was conduct that "falls within the practices or beliefs of the Catholic church." Id. at 283-84.

¶ 22 In Moses v. Diocese of Colorado, the plaintiff sued a priest, a bishop, and the diocese after the priest, from whom she had sought counseling, entered into a sexual relationship with her. 863 P.2d 310, 313-14 (Colo.1993). She alleged torts of negligent hiring and supervision against the diocese and the bishop. Id. at 314. After a jury verdict in plaintiff's favor, the diocese and the bishop asserted on appeal that the First Amendment precluded recovery on the claims. Id. The court disagreed. The court recognized that it could not become involved in a dispute concerning a religious organization where it would have to interpret church doctrine. Id. at 320. The court concluded, however, that the case did not require interpreting or weighing church doctrine but could be resolved by applying neutral principles. Id. at 320-21. The court found that claims of breach of fiduciary duty, negligent hiring and supervision, and vicarious liability were actionable if supported by competent evidence. Id. at 321.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

¶ 23 In the recent case of Malicki v. Doe, the Florida Supreme Court found that claims of negligent hiring and supervision in a case involving a priest's sexual assault of parishioners could be addressed through the neutral application of tort law principles. 814 So.2d 347, 360-61 (Fla.2002). The court found that, because the prohibited behavior was not governed by sincerely held religious beliefs or practices, the First Amendment did not bar adjudication of the case. Id. at 361. The court noted that adjudicating a negligent hiring claim did not involve inquiry into the general reasons why an individual was hired for a particular position, but rather whether the specific danger that came to pass was reasonably foreseeable at the time of hiring. Id. at 362. The court found that the U.S. Supreme Court had not extended what it termed the "religious autonomy principle" beyond ecclesiastical intrachurch disputes. Id. at 363.

¶ 24 In the present case, Rashedi claims that she was injured by the tortious conduct of individuals whom church officials placed in a position to injure her when they knew or should have known of the risk of harm presented by those individuals. In our opinion, resolution of these claims does not require the interpretation of religious doctrine or ecclesiastical law; it requires application of tort law principles that are neutral and generally applicable.

¶ 25 The Board contends that, even if neutral principles of tort law applied, the court would still have to examine the structure of the Church of the Nazarene to properly define the duties of the various defendants. Maybe so. But the court can examine the structure of a religious organization for such a purpose. A court may examine religious documents so long as it is done in purely secular terms. Wolf, 443 U.S. at 604, 99 S.Ct. 3020. Any inquiry into the structure of the religious organization would not be undertaken to resolve any internal organizational dispute or the appropriateness of the conduct of the parties in relation to their *355 *326 religious beliefs or obligations. Inquiry into the organizational structure would be to factually determine the roles the parties played in the licensing and hiring of an employee.

¶ 26 The District argues that Rashedi seeks to have it assert control over local churches and pastors in contradiction to the polity of the Church of the Nazarene, which precludes interference with the local church by the District. Rashedi's claims are not that broad. We also note that the Manual provides for the possibility of a district superintendent disapproving a proposed pastor to a local church. Manual of the Church of the Nazarene §§ 208.8, 208.11. Consequently, the application of neutral tort principles in this case does not conflict with the polity of the Church.

¶ 27 As in Smith v. O'Connell, the parties here have not specifically addressed individual claims at this stage of the litigation. Because the Board and District presented a general challenge to the court's jurisdiction to consider the case, we have addressed the matter generally.

¶ 28 Because of our resolution of the jurisdictional issue, we do not decide whether the trial court abused its discretion when denying Rashedi's Rule 56(f) motion or when including Rule 54(b) language in its dismissal order.

III.

¶ 29 We conclude that the trial court erred in concluding that it lacked subject-matter jurisdiction to adjudicate any of Rashedi's claims against the Board and the District. The judgment of dismissal is therefore reversed and the matter is remanded to the trial court for further proceedings.

CONCURRING: JON W. THOMPSON, Presiding Judge, and SHELDON H. WEISBERG, Judge.

54 P.3d 349, 203 Ariz. 320, 382 Ariz. Adv. Rep. 21

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

END OF DOCUMENT

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

BLUEBIRD OFFICE SUPPLIES (888) 477-0700 www.bluebirdchina.com

EXHIBIT 44

98 U.S. 145
8 Otto 145, 25 L.Ed. 244
(Cite as: 98 U.S. 145)

Supreme Court of the United States

REYNOLDS
v.
UNITED STATES.

October Term, 1878

West Headnotes

Criminal Law ⚿20
110k20 Most Cited Cases

A criminal intent is generally an element of crime, but every man is presumed to intend the necessary and legitimate consequences of what he knowingly does.

Criminal Law ⚿31
110k31 Most Cited Cases

A belief that particular law ought not to have been enacted, was no defense in prosecution for violation of such law, though such belief was part of defendant's professed religion.

Criminal Law ⚿32
110k32 Most Cited Cases

Ignorance of a fact may sometimes be taken as evidence of want of criminal intent, but not ignorance of the law.

Criminal Law ⚿543(2)
110k543(2) Most Cited Cases

The question whether witness is absent by defendant's procurement, so as to authorize admission of evidence concerning testimony of such witness at former trial, is practically one of fact, to be settled as preliminary to the admission of secondary evidence, and court's finding thereon has the effect of a jury verdict and should not be disturbed unless error is manifest.

Criminal Law ⚿543(2)
110k543(2) Most Cited Cases

In bigamy prosecution, evidence concerning defendant's refusal to assist in serving of subpoena on defendant's second wife, who lived with defendant, held to cast upon defendant burden of showing that he had not been instrumental in concealing or keeping her away, and to authorize admission of evidence concerning her testimony at former trial.

Criminal Law ⚿655(1)
110k655(1) Most Cited Cases

Every appeal by the trial court to the jury's passions or prejudices should be promptly rebuked, and reviewing court must take care that wrong is not done in that way.

Criminal Law ⚿662.60
110k662.60 Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 110k662(6))

In a criminal prosecution, the accused is in no condition to assert that his constitutional right to be confronted with the witnesses against him has been violated, by allowing competent evidence of the testimony which they gave on a previous trial between the United States and himself upon the same issue, when they are absent by his procurement, or when enough has been proved to cast upon him the burden of showing, and he, having full opportunity therefor, fails to show, that he has not been instrumental in concealing them, or in keeping them away. Such evidence is admissible.

Criminal Law ⚿1043(1)
110k1043(1) Most Cited Cases

Where it is apparent from the record that the challenge of a petit juror, if it had been made by the United States for favor, should have been sustained, the judgment against the prisoner will not be reversed simply because the challenge was in form for cause.

Criminal Law ⚿1133
110k1133 Most Cited Cases

Where error in trial court's sentence, in requiring imprisonment to be at hard labor though statute provided for imprisonment only, was not assigned for error on the original hearing by United States Supreme Court, court might decline to consider it on rehearing, but where such irregularity appeared on the face of the record, Supreme Court vacated its former judgment of affirmance, and reversed the judgment for the purpose of correcting such error.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

Criminal Law ⚿1152(2)
110k1152(2) Most Cited Cases

The trial court's finding upon question of juror's partiality ought not to be set aside by reviewing court unless the error is manifest, when tested by rules no less stringent than those applied in motions for new trial because verdict is against the evidence, and it must be made clearly to appear that upon the evidence, the court ought to have found that juror had formed an opinion, and that the law left nothing to the court's conscience or discretion.

Grand Jury ⚿3
193k3 Most Cited Cases

Rev.St. § 808, 28 U.S.C.A. § 419, providing for impaneling grand juries, and prescribing that they shall consist of not less than 16, nor more than 23, persons, applies only to the circuit and the district courts of the United States. Territorial courts are left free to act in obedience to the requirements of the territorial laws in force for the time being; and hence an indictment may be found in a district court of Utah by a grand jury of 15 persons, impaneled pursuant to the laws of that territory.

Jury ⚿97(1)
230k97(1) Most Cited Cases

In prosecution for bigamy, challenge of jurors on ground that they had been living in polygamy was good for favor, if not for principal cause.

Jury ⚿97(1)
230k97(1) Most Cited Cases

To be "impartial", a juror must be indifferent as he stands unsworn. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 6.

Jury ⚿99
230k99 Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 230k99(2))

It is good ground for challenge for principal cause that a juror has formed an opinion on the issue to be tried, but such opinion must be founded on some evidence, and be more than a mere impression or merely hypothetical.

Jury ⚿99.5
230k99.5 Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 230k99(6))

The fact that juror had not expressed his opinion concerning issue to be tried is important only as tending to show that he had not formed a disqualifying opinion, and positive and decided opinion renders juror incompetent even if it had not been expressed.

Jury ⚿103(3)
230k103(3) Most Cited Cases

A petit juror in a criminal case having testified on his voir dire that he had formed an opinion, although not upon evidence produced in court, as to the question of the innocence or guilt of the prisoner, but that he had not expressed it, and did not think that it would influence his verdict, he was challenged by the prisoner for cause, and the challenge was overruled by the court. Held, that the action of the court was not erroneous.

Jury ⚿131(4)
230k131(4) Most Cited Cases

To make out the existence of a principal cause of challenge, juror may be examined on his voir dire, and asked any questions that do not tend to his infamy or disgrace.

Jury ⚿133
230k133 Most Cited Cases

The question of whether opinion formed by juror renders juror subject to challenge for principal cause is one of mixed law and fact, to be tried upon the evidence.

Bigamy ⚿1
55k1 Most Cited Cases

Rev.St. § 5352, 18 U.S.C.A. § 513, defining and providing for the punishment of bigamy, is not in conflict with the constitutional provision against the making of laws respecting religion.

Bigamy ⚿2
55k2 Most Cited Cases

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

On a trial for polygamy, evidence was offered by defendant to show that polygamous marriage was a part of his religion. Held, that such evidence was not admissible, and has no foundation for its admission in either justice, reason, or law.

Bigamy ⚿14
55k14 Most Cited Cases

In the trial of a criminal prosecution for bigamy, the court told the jury to "consider what are to be the consequences to the innocent victims of this delusion [the doctrine of polygamy]. As this contest goes on, they multiply, and there are pure-minded women and there are innocent children,-innocent in a sense even beyond the degree of the innocence of childhood itself. These are to be the sufferers; and as jurors fail to do their duty, and as these cases come up in the territory of Utah, just so do these victims multiply and spread themselves over the land." Held, that the charge was not improper.

Constitutional Law ⚿84.5(1)
92k84.5(1) Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 92k84)

A party's religious belief cannot be accepted as a justification for his committing an overt act made criminal by the law of the land. Where, therefore, the prisoner, knowing that his wife was living, married again in Utah, and when indicted and tried therefor, set up that the church whereto he belonged enjoined upon its male members to practice polygamy, and that he, with the sanction of the recognized authorities of the church, and by a ceremony performed pursuant to its doctrines, did marry again, held, that the court properly refused to charge the jury that he was entitled to an acquittal, although they should find that he had contracted such second marriage pursuant to, and in conformity with, what he believed at the time to be a religious duty.

Constitutional Law ⚿84.1
92k84.1 Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 92k84)

The true distinction between what properly belongs to the church and what belongs to the state is found in the preamble of the Virginia statute for religious freedom, reciting that civil magistrate should not be suffered to intrude his powers into the field of opinion and to restrain the profession or propagation of principles on supposition of their ill tendency, and that civil officers should interfere only when principles break out into overt acts against peace and good order. 12 Hening's Stat. 84.

Constitutional Law ⚿84.5(1)
92k84.5(1) Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 92k84)

Section 5352 of the Revised Statutes, 18 U.S.C.A. § 513, which declares bigamy committed in the territories a crime against the United States, and prescribes its punishment, is in all respects constitutional and valid.

Constitutional Law ⚿84.1
92k84.1 Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 92k84)

In order to ascertain the meaning of the word "religion" as used in constitutional prohibition against interfering with religious freedom, court should consider the history of the times in the midst of which the provision was adopted.

Constitutional Law ⚿84.1
92k84.1 Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 92k84)

Under constitutional provision against establishment of religion or prohibiting free exercise thereof, Congress was deprived of all legislative power over mere opinion, but was left free to reach actions which were in violation of social duties or subversive of good order.

Constitutional Law ⚿84.1
92k84.1 Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 92k84)

Though laws cannot interfere with mere religious belief and opinions, they may interfere with practices.

Federal Courts ⚿1021
170Bk1021 Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 106k428)

The statute giving district courts of the Territory of Utah the same jurisdiction in all cases arising under the constitution and laws of the United States as is vested in the circuit and district courts of the United States does not make them circuit and district courts of the United States. Rev.Stat. § 1910.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

ERROR to the Supreme Court of the Territory of Utah.

This is an indictment found in the District Court for the third judicial district of the Territory of Utah, charging George Reynolds with bigamy, in violation of sect. 5352 of the Revised Statutes, which, omitting its exceptions, is as follows:----

'Every person having a husband or wife living, who marries another, whether married or single, in a Territory, or other place over which the United States have exclusive jurisdiction, is guilty of bigamy, and shall be punished by a fine of not more than $500, and by imprisonment for a term of not more than five years.'

The prisoner pleaded in abatement that the indictment was not found by a legal grand jury, because fifteen persons, and no more, were impanelled and sworn to serve as a grand jury at the term of the court during which the indictment was found, whereas sect. 808 of the Revised Statutes of the United States enacts that every grand jury impanelled before any District or Circuit Court shall consist of not less than sixteen persons.

An act of the legislature of Utah of Feb. 18, 1870, provides that the court shall impanel fifteen men to serve as a grand jury. Compiled Laws of Utah, ed. of 1876, p. 357, sect. 4.

The court overruled the plea, on the ground that the territorial enactment governed.

The prisoner then pleaded not guilty. Several jurors were examined on their voire dire by the district attorney. Among them was Eli Ransohoff, who, in answer to the question, 'Have you formed or expressed an opinion as to the guilt or innocence of the prisoner at the bar?' said, 'I have expressed an opinion by reading the papers with the reports of the trial.'

Q. 'Would that opinion influence your verdict in hearing the evidence?'

A. 'I don't think it would.'

By the defendant: 'You stated that you had formed some opinion by reading the reports of the previous trial?'

A. 'Yes.'

Q. 'Is that an impression which still remains upon your mind?'147

A. 'No; I don't think it does: I only glanced over it, as everybody else does.'

Q. 'Do you think you could try the case wholly uninfluenced by any thing?'

A. 'Yes.'

Charles Read, called as a juror, was asked by the district attorney, 'Have you formed or expressed any opinion as to the guilt or innocence of this charge?'

A. 'I believe I have formed an opinion.'

By the court: 'Have you formed and expressed an opinion?'

A. 'No, sir; I believe not.'

Q. 'You say you have formed an opinion?'

A. 'I have.'

Q. 'Is that based upon evidence?'

A. 'Nothing produced in court.'

Q. 'Would that opinion influence your verdict?'

A. 'I don't think it would.'

By defendant: 'I understood you to say that you had formed an opinion, but not expressed it.'

A. 'I don't know that I have expressed an opinion: I have formed one.'

Q. 'Do you now entertain that opinion?'

A. 'I do.'

The defendant challenged each of these jurors for cause. The court overruled the challenge, and

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

98 U.S. 145
8 Otto 145, 25 L.Ed. 244
(Cite as: 98 U.S. 145)

permitted them to be sworn. The defendant excepted.

The court also, when Homer Brown was called as a juror, allowed the district attorney to ask him the following questions: Q. 'Are you living in polygamy?' A. 'I would rather not answer that.' The court instructed the witness that he must answer the question, unless it would criminate him. By the district attorney: 'You understand the conditions upon which you refuse?' A. 'Yes, sir.'--Q. 'Have you such an opinion that you could not find a verdict for the commission of that crime?' A. 'I have no opinion on it in this particular case. I think under the evidence and the law I could render a verdict accordingly.' Whereupon the United States challenged the said Brown for favor, which challenge was sustained by the court, and the defendant excepted.148

John W. Snell, also a juror, was asked by the district attorney on voire dire: Q. 'Are you living in polygamy?' A. 'I decline to answer that question.'--Q. 'On what ground?' A. 'It might criminate myself; but I am only a fornicator.' Whereupon Snell was challenged by the United States for cause, which challenge was sustained, and the defendant excepted.

After the trial commenced, the district attorney, after proving that the defendant had been married on a certain day to Mary Ann Tuddenham, offered to prove his subsequent marriage to one Amelia Jane Schofield during the lifetime of said Mary. He thereupon called one Pratt, the deputy marshal, and showed him a subpoena for witnesses in this case, and among other names thereon was the name of Mary Jane Schobold, but no such name as Amelia Jane Schofield. He testified that this subpoena was placed in his hands to be served.

Q. 'Did you see Mr. Reynolds when you went to see Miss Schofield?'

A. 'Yes, sir.'

Q. 'Who did you inquire for?'

A. 'I inquired for Mary Jane Schofield, to the best of my knowledge. I will state this, that I inserted the name in the subpoena, and intended it for the name of the woman examined in this case at the former term of the court, and inquired for Mary Jane Schofield, or Mrs. Reynolds, I do not recollect certainly which.'

Q. 'State the reply.'

A. 'He said she was not at home.'

Q. 'Did he say any thing further.'

A. 'I asked him then where I could find her. I said, 'Where is she? And he said, 'You will have to find out."

Q. 'Did he know you to be a deputy marshal?'

A. 'Yes, sir.'

Q. 'Did you tell him what your business was as deputy marshal?'

A. 'I don't remember now: I don't think I did.'

Q. 'What else did he say?'149

A. 'He said, just as I was leaving, as I understood it, that she did not appear in this case.'

The court then ordered a subpoena to issue for Amelia Jane Schofield, returnable instanter.

Upon the following day, at ten o'clock A.M., the said subpoena for the said witness having issued about nine o'clock P.M. of the day before, the said Arthur Pratt was again called upon, and testified as follows:----

Q. (By district attorney.) 'State whether you are the officer that had subpoena in your hands.' (Exhibiting subpoena last issued, as above set forth.)

A. 'Yes, sir.'

Q. 'State to the court what efforts you have made to serve it.'

A. 'I went to the residence of Mr. Reynolds, and a lady was there, his first wife, and she told me that this woman was not there; that that was the only home that she had, but that she hadn't been there for two or three weeks. I went again this morning, and she was not there.'

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

Q. 'Do you know any thing about her home,--where she resides?'

A. 'I know where I found her before.'

Q. 'Where?'

A. 'At the same place.'

Q. 'You are the deputy marshal that executed the process of the court?'

A. 'Yes, sir.'

Q. 'Repeat what Mr. Reynolds said to you when you went with the former subpoena introduced last evening.'

A. 'I will state that I put her name on the subpoena myself. I know the party, and am well acquainted with her, and I intended it for the same party that I subpoenaed before in this case. He said that she was not in, and that I could get a search-warrant if I wanted to search the house. I said, 'Will you tell me where she is?' He said, 'No; that will be for you to find out.' He said, just as I was leaving the house,--I don't remember exactly what it was, but my best recollection is that he said she would not appear in this case.'*150

Q. 'Can't you state that more particularly?'

A. 'I can't give you the exact words, but I can say that was the purport of them.'

Q. 'Give the words as nearly as you can.'

A. 'Just as I said, I think those were his words.'

The district attorney then offered to prove what Amelia Jane Schofield had testified to on a trial of another indictment charging the prisoner with bigamy in marrying her; to which the prisoner objected, on the ground that a sufficient foundation had not been laid for the introduction of the evidence.

A. S. Patterson, having been sworn, read, and other witnesses stated, said Amelia's testimony on the former trial, tending to show her marriage with the defendant. The defendant excepted to the admission of the evidence.

The court, in summing up to the jury, declined to instruct them, as requested by the prisoner, that if they found that he had married in pursuance of and conformity with what he believed at the time to be a religious duty, their verdict should be 'not guilty,' but instructed them that if he, under the influence of a religious belief that it was right, had 'deliberately married a second time, having a first wife living, the want of consciousness of evil intent--the want of understanding on his part that he was committing crime--did not excuse him, but the law inexorably, in such cases, implies criminal intent.'

The court also said: 'I think it not improper, in the discharge of your duties in this case, that you should consider what are to be the consequences to the innocent victims of this delusion. As this contest goes on, they multiply, and there are pure-minded women and there are innocent children,--innocent in a sense even beyond the degree of the innocence of childhood itself. These are to be the sufferers; and as jurors fail to do their duty, and as these cases come up in the Territory, just so do these victims multiply and spread themselves over the land.'

To the refusal of the court to charge as requested, and to the charge as given, the prisoner excepted. The jury found him guilty, as charged in the indictment; and the judgment that he be imprisoned at hard labor for a term of two years, and pay *151 a fine of $500, rendered by the District Court, having been affirmed by the Supreme Court of the Territory, he sued out this writ of error.

The assignments of error are set out in the opinion of the court.

Mr. George W. Biddle and Mr. Ben Sheeks for the plaintiff in error.

First, The jury was improperly drawn. Two of the jurors were challenged for cause by the defendant below, because they admitted that they had formed, and still entertained, an opinion upon the guilt or innocence of the prisoner. The holding by a juror of any opinions which would disqualify him from rendering a verdict in accordance with the law of the land, is a valid objection to his serving.

An opinion based merely upon a hypothetical case, as that 'if so and so is true, the prisoner is guilty,' is not always sufficient; but where the opinion is as to the actual fact of guilt or innocence, it is a disqualification, according to all the authorities. Burr's Trial, 414, 415; United States v. Wilson, 1 Baldw. 83; Ex parte Vermilyea, 6 Cow. (N. Y.) 563; The People v. Mather, 4 Wend. (N. Y.) 238; Cancemi v. People, 16 N. Y. 502; Fouts v. The State , 11 Ohio St. 472; Neely v. The People, 23 Ill. 685; Schoeffler v. The State, 3 Wis. 831; Trimble v. The State, 2 Greene (Iowa), 404; Commonwealth v. Lesher, 17 Serg. & R. (Pa.) 155; Staup v. Commonwealth, 74 Pa. St. 458; Armistead's Case, 11 Leigh (Va.), 658; Stewart v. The State, 13 Ark. 740.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

It was clearly erroneous for the prosecution to ask several of the jurymen, upon voire dire, whether they were living in polygamy; questions which tend to disgrace the person questioned, or to render him amenable to a criminal prosecution, have never been allowed to be put to a juror. Anonymous, Salk. 153; Bacon, Abr., tit. Juries, 12(f); 7 Dane, Abr. 334; Hudson v. The State, 1 Blackf. (Ind.) 319.

Second, The proof of what the witness, Amelia Jane Schofield, testified to in a former trial, under another indictment, should not have been admitted. The constitutional right of a prisoner to confront the witness and cross-examine him is not to be abrogated, unless it be shown that the witness is dead, or 152 out of the jurisdiction of the court; or that, having been summoned, he appears to have been kept away by the adverse party on the trial. It appeared not only that no such person as Amelia Jane Schofield had been subpoenaed, but that no subpoena had ever been taken out for her. An unserved subpoena with the name of Mary Jane Schobold was shown. At nine o'clock in the evening, during the trial, a new subpoena was issued; and on the following morning, with no attempt to serve it beyond going to the prisoner's usual residence and inquiring for her, the witness Patterson was allowed to read from a paper what purported to be statements made by Amelia Jane Schofield on a former trial. No proof was offered as to the genuineness of the paper or its origin, nor did the witness testify to its contents of his own knowledge. This is in the teeth of the ruling in United States v. Wood (3 Wash. 440), and the rule laid down in all the American authorities. Richardson v. Stewart, 2 Serg. & R. (Pa.) 84; Chess v. Chess, 17 id. 409; Huidekopper v. Cotton, 3 Watts (Pa.) 56; Powell v. Waters, 17 Johns. (N. Y.) 176; Cary v. Sprague, 12 Wend. (N. Y.) 45; The People v. Newman, 5 Hill (N. Y.), 295; Brogy v. The Commonwealth, 10 Gratt. (Va.) 722; Bergen v. The People, 17 Ill. 426; Dupree v. The State, 33 Ala. 380.

Third, As to the constitutionality of the Poland Bill. Rev. Stat., sect. 5352. Undoubtedly Congress, under art. 4, sect. 3, of the Constitution, which gives 'power to dispose of and make all needful rules and regulations respecting the territory or other property belonging to the United States,' and under the decisions of this court upon it, may legislate over such territory, and regulate the form of its local government. But its legislation can be neither exclusive nor arbitrary. The power of this government to obtain and hold territory over which it might legislate, without restriction, would be inconsistent with its own existence in its present form. There is always an excess of power exercised when the Federal government attempts to provide for more than the assertion and preservation of its rights over such territory, and interferes by positive enactment with the social and domestic life of its inhabitants and their internal police. The offence prohibited by sect. 5352 is not a malum in se; it is not prohibited by the decalogue; and, if it be said 153 that its prohibition is to be found in the teachings of the New Testament, we know that a majority of the people of this Territory deny that the Christian law contains any such prohibition.

The Attorney-General and The Solicitor-General, contra.

MR. CHIEF JUSTICE WAITE delivered the opinion of the court.

The assignments of error, when grouped, present the following questions:----

1. Was the indictment bad because found by a grand jury of less than sixteen persons?

2. Were the challenges of certain petit jurors by the accused improperly overruled?

3. Were the challenges of certain other jurors by the government improperly sustained?

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

4. Was the testimony of Amelia Jane Schofield, given at a former trial for the same offence, but under another indictment, improperly admitted in evidence?

5. Should the accused have been acquitted if he married the second time, because he believed it to be his religious duty?

6. Did the court err in that part of the charge which directed the attention of the jury to the consequences of polygamy?

These questions will be considered in their order.

1. As to the grand jury.

The indictment was found in the District Court of the third judicial district of the Territory. The act of Congress 'in relation to courts and judicial officers in the Territory of Utah,' approved June 23, 1874 (18 Stat. 253), while regulating the qualifications of jurors in the Territory, and prescribing the mode of preparing the lists from which grand and petit jurors are to be drawn, as well as the manner of drawing, makes no provision in respect to the number of persons of which a grand jury shall consist. Sect. 808, Revised Statutes, requires that a grand jury impanelled before any district or circuit court of the United States shall consist of not less than sixteen nor more than twenty-three persons, while a statute of the Territory limits the number in the district courts of the Territory 154 to fifteen. Comp. Laws Utah, 1876, 357. The grand jury which found this indictment consisted of only fifteen persons, and the question to be determined is, whether the section of the Revised Statutes referred to or the statute of the Territory governs the case.

By sect. 1910 of the Revised Statutes the district courts of the Territory have the same jurisdiction in all cases arising under the Constitution and laws of the United States as is vested in the circuit and district courts of the United States; but this does not make them circuit and district courts of the United States. We have often so decided. American Insurance Co. v. Canter, 1 Pet. 511; Benner et al. v. Porter, 9 How. 235; Clinton v. Englebrecht, 13 Wall. 434. They are courts of the Territories, invested for some purposes with the powers of the courts of the United States. Writs of error and appeals lie from them to the Supreme Court of the Territory, and from that court as a territorial court to this in some cases.

Sect. 808 was not designed to regulate the impanelling of grand juries in all courts where offenders against the laws of the United States could be tried, but only in the circuit and district courts. This leaves the territorial courts free to act in obedience to the requirements of the territorial laws in force for the time being. Clinton v. Englebrecht, supra; Hornbuckle v. Toombs, 18 Wall. 648. As Congress may at any time assume control of the matter, there is but little danger to be anticipated from improvident territorial legislation in this particular. We are therefore of the opinion that the court below no more erred in sustaining this indictment than it did at a former term, at the instance of this same plaintiff in error, in adjudging another bad which was found against him for the same offence by a grand jury composed of twenty-three persons. 1 Utah, 226.

2. As to the challenges by the accused.

By the Constitution of the United States (Amend. VI.), the accused was entitled to a trial by an impartial jury. A juror to be impartial must, to use the language of Lord Coke, 'be indifferent as he stands unsworn.' Co. Litt. 155 b. Lord Coke also says that a principal cause of challenge is 'so called because, if it be found true, it standeth sufficient of itself, without 155 leaving any thing to the conscience or discretion of the triers' (id. 156 b); or, as stated in Bacon's Abridgment, 'it is grounded on such a manifest presumption of partiality, that, if found to be true, it unquestionably sets aside the . . . juror.' Bac. Abr., tit. Juries, E. 1. 'If the truth of the matter alleged is admitted, the law pronounces the judgment; but if denied, it must be made out by proof to the satisfaction of the court or the triers.' Id. E. 12. To make out the existence of the fact, the juror who is challenged may be examined on his voire dire, and asked any questions that do not tend to his infamy or disgrace.

All of the challenges by the accused were for principal cause. It is good ground for such a challenge that a juror has formed an opinion as to the issue to be tried. The courts are not agreed as to the knowledge upon which the opinion must rest in order to render the juror incompetent, or whether the opinion must be accompanied by malice or ill-will; but all unite in holding that it must be founded on some evidence, and be more than a mere impression. Some say it must be positive (Gabbet, Criminal Law, 391); others, that it must be decided and substantial (Armistead's Case, 11 Leigh (Va.), 659; Wormley's Case, 10 Gratt. (Va.) 658; Neely v. The People, 13 Ill. 685); others, fixed (State v. Benton, 2 Dev. & B. (N. C.) L. 196); and, still others, deliberate and settled (Staup v. Commonwealth, 74 Pa. St. 458; Curley v. Commonwealth, 84 id. 151). All concede, however, that, if hypothetical only, the partiality is not so manifest as to necessarily set the juror aside. Mr. Chief Justice Marshall, in Burr's Trial (1 Burr's Trial, 416), states the rule to be that 'light impressions, which may fairly be presumed to yield to the testimony that may be offered, which may leave the mind open to a fair consideration of the testimony, constitute no sufficient objection to a juror; but that those strong and deep impressions which close the mind against the testimony that may be offered in opposition to them, which will combat that testimony and resist its force, do constitute a sufficient objection to him.' The theory of the law is that a juror who has formed an opinion cannot be impartial. Every opinion which he may entertain need not necessarily have that effect. In these days of newspaper enterprise and universal education, every case of public interest is almost, as a matter of necessity, 156 brought to the attention of all the intelligent people in the vicinity, and scarcely any one can be found among those best fitted for jurors who has not read or heard of it, and who has not some impression or some opinion in respect to its merits. It is clear, therefore, that upon the trial of the issue of fact raised by a challenge for such cause the court will practically be called upon to determine whether the nature and strength of the opinion formed are such as in law necessarily to raise the presumption of partiality. The question thus presented is one of mixed law and fact, and to be tried, as far as the facts are concerned, like any other issue of that character, upon the evidence. The finding of the trial court upon that issue ought not to be set aside by a reviewing court, unless the error is manifest. No less stringent rules should be applied by the reviewing court in such a case than those which govern in the consideration of motions for new trial because the verdict is against the evidence. It must be made clearly to appear that upon the evidence the court ought to have found the juror had formed such an opinion that he could not in law be deemed impartial. The case must be one in which it is manifest the law left nothing to the 'conscience or discretion' of the court.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

The challenge in this case most relied upon in the argument here is that of Charles Read. He was sworn on his voire dire; and his evidence, [FN1] taken as a whole, shows that he 'believed' he had formed an opinion which he had never expressed, but which he did not think would influence his verdict on hearing the testimony. We cannot think this is such a manifestation of partiality as to leave nothing to the 'conscience or discretion' of the triers. The reading of the evidence leaves the impression that the juror had some hypothetical opinion about the case, but it falls far short of raising a manifest presumption of partiality. In considering such questions in a reviewing court, we ought not to be unmindful of the fact we have so often observed in our experience, that jurors not unfrequently seek to excuse themselves on the ground of having formed an opinion, when, on examination, it turns out that no real disqualification exists. In such cases the manner of the 157 juror while testifying is oftentimes more indicative of the real character of his opinion than his words. That is seen below, but cannot always be spread upon the record. Care should, therefore, be taken in the reviewing court not to reverse the ruling below upon such a question of fact, except in a clear case. The affirmative of the issue is upon the challenger. Unless he shows the actual existence of such an opinion in the mind of the juror as will raise the presumption of partiality, the juror need not necessarily be set aside, and it will not be error in the court to refuse to do so. Such a case, in our opinion, was not made out upon the challenge of Read. The fact that he had not expressed his opinion is important only as tending to show that he had not formed one which disqualified him. If a positive and decided opinion had been formed, he would have been incompetent even though it had not been expressed. Under these circumstances, it is unnecessary to consider the case of Ransohoff, for it was confessedly not as strong as that of Read.

FN1 Supra, p. 147.

3. As to the challenges by the government.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

The questions raised upon these assignments of error are not whether the district attorney should have been permitted to interrogate the jurors while under examination upon their voire dire as to the fact of their living in polygamy. No objection was made below to the questions, but only to the ruling of the court upon the challenges after the testimony taken in answer to the questions was in. From the testimony it is apparent that all the jurors to whom the challenges related were or had been living in polygamy. It needs no argument to show that such a jury could not have gone into the box entirely free from bias and prejudice, and that if the challenge was not good for principal cause, it was for favor. A judgment will not be reversed simply because a challenge good for favor was sustained in form for cause. As the jurors were incompetent and properly excluded, it matters not here upon what form of challenge they were set aside. In one case the challenge was for favor. In the courts of the United States all challenges are tried by the court without the aid of triers (Rev. Stat. sect. 819), and we are not advised that the practice in the territorial courts of Utah is different.

*158 4. As to the admission of evidence to prove what was sworn to by Amelia Jane Schofield on a former trial of the accused for the same offence but under a different indictment.

The Constitution gives the accused the right to a trial at which he should be confronted with the witnesses against him; but if a witness is absent by his own wrongful procurement, he cannot complain if competent evidence is admitted to supply the place of that which he has kept away. The Constitution does not guarantee an accused person against the legitimate consequences of his own wrongful acts. It grants him the privilege of being confronted with the witnesses against him; but if he voluntarily keeps the witnesses away, he cannot insist on his privilege. If, therefore, when absent by his procurement, their evidence is supplied in some lawful way, he is in no condition to assert that his constitutional rights have been violated.

In Lord Morley's Case (6 State Trials, 770), as long ago as the year 1666, it was resolved in the House of Lords 'that in case oath should be made that any witness, who had been examined by the coroner and was then absent, was detained by the means or procurement of the prisoner, and the opinion of the judges asked whether such examination might be read, we should answer, that if their lordships were satisfied by the evidence they had heard that the witness was detained by means or procurement of the prisoner, then the examination might be read; but whether he was detained by means or procurement of the prisoner was matter of fact, of which we were not the judges, but their lordships.' This resolution was followed in Harrison's Case (12 id. 851), and seems to have been recognized as the law in England ever since. In Regina v. Scaife (17 Ad. & El. N. S. 242), all the judges agreed that if the prisoner had resorted to a contrivance to keep a witness out of the way, the deposition of the witness, taken before a magistrate and in the presence of the prisoner, might be read. Other cases to the same effect are to be found, and in this country the ruling has been in the same way. Drayton v. Wells, 1 Nott & M. (S. C.) 409; Williams v. The State, 19 Ga. 403. So that now, in the leading text-books, it is laid down that if a witness is kept away by the adverse party, *159 his testimony, taken on a former trial between the same parties upon the same issues, may be given in evidence. 1 Greenl. Evid., sect. 163; 1 Taylor, Evid., sect. 446. Mr. Wharton (1 Whart. Evid., sect. 178) seemingly limits the rule somewhat, and confines it to cases where the witness has been corruptly kept away by the party against whom he is to be called, but in reality his statement is the same as that of the others; for in all it is implied that the witness must have been wrongfully kept away. The rule has its foundation in the maxim that no one shall be permitted to take advantage of his own wrong; and, consequently, if there has not been, in legal contemplation, a wrong committed, the way has not been opened for the introduction of the testimony. We are content with this long-established usage, which, so far as we have been able to discover, has rarely been departed from. It is the outgrowth of a maxim based on the principles of common honesty, and, if properly administered, can harm no one.

Such being the rule, the question becomes practically one of fact, to be settled as a preliminary to the admission of secondary evidence. In this respect it is like the preliminary question of the proof of loss of a written instrument, before secondary evidence of the contents of the instrument can be admitted. In Lord Morley's Case (supra), it would seem to have been considered a question for the trial court alone, and not subject to review on error or appeal; but without deeming it necessary in this case to go so far as that, we have no hesitation in saying that the finding of the court below is, at least, to have the effect of a verdict of a jury upon a question of fact, and should not be disturbed unless the error is manifest.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

The testimony shows that the absent witness was the alleged second wife of the accused; that she had testified on a former trial for the same offence under another indictment; that she had no home, except with the accused; that at some time before the trial a subpoena had been issued for her, but by mistake she was named as Mary Jane Schobold; that an officer who knew the witness personally went to the house of the accused to serve the subpoena, and on his arrival inquired for her, either by the name of Mary Jane Schofield or Mrs. Reynolds; that he was tole by the accused she was not at home; *160 that he then said, 'Will you tell me where she is?' that the reply was 'No; that will be for you to find out;' that the officer then remarked she was making him considerable trouble, and that she would get into trouble herself; and the accused replied, 'Oh, no; she won't, till the subpoena is served upon her,' and then, after some further conversation, that 'She does not appear in this case.'

It being discovered after the trial commenced that a wrong name had been inserted in the subpoena, a new subpoena was issued with the right name, at nine o'clock in the evening. With this the officer went again to the house, and there found a person known as the first wife of the accused. He was told by her that the witness was not there, and had not been for three weeks. He went again the next morning, and not finding her, or being able to ascertain where she was by inquiring in the neighborhood, made return of that fact to the court. At ten o'clock that morning the case was again called; and the foregoing facts being made to appear, the court ruled that evidence of what the witness had sworn to at the former trial was admissible.

In this we see no error. The accused was himself personally present in court when the showing was made, and had full opportunity to account for the absence of the witness, if he would, or to deny under oath that he had kept her away. Clearly, enough had been proven to cast the burden upon him of showing that he had not been instrumental in concealing or keeping the witness away. Having the means of making the necessary explanation, and having every inducement to do so if he would, the presumption is that he considered it better to rely upon the weakness of the case made against him than to attempt to develop the strength of his own. Upon the testimony as it stood, it is clear to our minds that the judgment should not be reversed because secondary evidence was admitted.

This brings us to the consideration of what the former testimony was, and the evidence by which it was proven to the jury.

It was testimony given on a former trial of the same person for the same offence, but under another indictment. It was *161 substantially testimony given at another time in the same cause. The accused was present at the time the testimony was given, and had full opportunity of cross-examination. This brings the case clearly within the well-established rules. The cases are fully cited in 1 Whart. Evid., sect. 177.

The objection to the reading by Mr. Patterson of what was sworn to on the former trial does not seem to have been because the paper from which he read was not a true record of the evidence as given, but because the foundation for admitting the secondary evidence had not been laid. This objection, as has already been seen, was not well taken.

5. As to the defence of religious belief or duty.

On the trial, the plaintiff in error, the accused, proved that at the time of his alleged second marriage he was, and for many years before had been, a member of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints, commonly called the Mormon Church, and a believer in its doctrines; that it was an accepted doctrine of that church 'that it was the duty of male members of said church, circumstances permitting, to practise polygamy; . . . that this duty was enjoined by different books which the members of said church believed to be of divine origin, and among others the Holy Bible, and also that the members of the church believed that the practice of polygamy was directly enjoined upon the male members thereof by the Almighty God, in a revelation to Joseph Smith, the founder and prophet of said church; that the failing or refusing to practise polygamy by such male members of said church, when circumstances would admit, would be punished, and that the penalty for such failure and refusal would be damnation in the life to come.' He also proved 'that he had received permission from the recognized authorities in said church to enter into polygamous marriage; . . . that Daniel H. Wells, one having authority in said church to perform the marriage ceremony, married the said defendant on or about the time the crime is alleged to have been committed, to some woman by the name of Schofield, and that such marriage ceremony was performed under and pursuant to the doctrines of said church.'

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

Upon this proof he asked the court to instruct the jury that if they found from the evidence that he 'was married as *162 charged--if he was married--in pursuance of and in conformity with what he believed at the time to be a religious duty, that the verdict must be 'not guilty." This request was refused, and the court did charge 'that there must have been a criminal intent, but that if the defendant, under the influence of a religious belief that it was right,--under an inspiration, if you please, that it was right,-- deliberately married a second time, having a first wife living, the want of consciousness of evil intent--the want of understanding on his part that he was committing a crime--did not excuse him; but the law inexorably in such case implies the criminal intent.'

Upon this charge and refusal to charge the question is raised, whether religious belief can be accepted as a justification of an overt act made criminal by the law of the land. The inquiry is not as to the power of Congress to prescribe criminal laws for the Territories, but as to the guilt of one who knowingly violates a law which has been properly enacted, if he entertains a religious belief that the law is wrong.

Congress cannot pass a law for the government of the Territories which shall prohibit the free exercise of religion. The first amendment to the Constitution expressly forbids such legislation. Religious freedom is guaranteed everywhere throughout the United States, so far as congressional interference is concerned. The question to be determined is, whether the law now under consideration comes within this prohibition.

The word 'religion' is not defined in the Constitution. We must go elsewhere, therefore, to ascertain its meaning, and nowhere more appropriately, we think, than to the history of the times in the midst of which the provision was adopted. The precise point of the inquiry is, what is the religious freedom which has been guaranteed.

Before the adoption of the Constitution, attempts were made in some of the colonies and States to legislate not only in respect to the establishment of religion, but in respect to its doctrines and precepts as well. The people were taxed, against their will, for the support of religion, and sometimes for the support of particular sects to whose tenets they could not and did not subscribe. Punishments were prescribed for a failure to attend upon public worship, and sometimes for entertaining *163 heretical opinions. The controversy upon this general subject was animated in many of the States, but seemed at last to culminate in Virginia. In 1784, the House of Delegates of that State having under consideration 'a bill establishing provision for teachers of the Christian religion,' postponed it until the next session, and directed that the bill should be published and distributed, and that the people be requested 'to signify their opinion respecting the adoption of such a bill at the next session of assembly.'

This brought out a determined opposition. Amongst others, Mr. Madison prepared a 'Memorial and Remonstrance,' which was widely circulated and signed, and in which he demonstrated 'that religion, or the duty we owe the Creator,' was not within the cognizance of civil government. Semple's Virginia Baptists, Appendix. At the next session the proposed bill was not only defeated, but another, 'for establishing religious freedom,' drafted by Mr. Jefferson, was passed. 1 Jeff. Works, 45; 2 Howison, Hist. of Va. 298. In the preamble of this act (12 Hening's Stat. 84) religious freedom is defined; and after a recital 'that to suffer the civil magistrate to intrude his powers into the field of opinion, and to restrain the profession or propagation of principles on supposition of their ill tendency, is a dangerous fallacy which at once destroys all religious liberty,' it is declared 'that it is time enough for the rightful purposes of civil government for its officers to interfere when principles break out into overt acts against peace and good order.' In these two sentences is found the

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

98 U.S. 145
8 Otto 145, 25 L.Ed. 244
(Cite as: 98 U.S. 145)

true distinction between what properly belongs to the church and what to the State.

In a little more than a year after the passage of this statute the convention met which prepared the Constitution of the United States.' Of this convention Mr. Jefferson was not a member, he being then absent as minister to France. As soon as he saw the draft of the Constitution proposed for adoption, he, in a letter to a friend, expressed his disappointment at the absence of an express declaration insuring the freedom of religion (2 Jeff. Works, 355), but was willing to accept it as it was, trusting that the good sense and honest intentions of the people would bring about the necessary alterations. *164 1 Jeff. Works, 79. Five of the States, while adopting the Constitution, proposed amendments. Three--New Hampshire, New York, and Virginia--included in one form or another a declaration of religious freedom in the changes they desired to have made, as did also North Carolina, where the convention at first declined to ratify the Constitution until the proposed amendments were acted upon. Accordingly, at the first session of the first Congress the amendment now under consideration was proposed with others by Mr. Madison. It met the views of the advocates of religious freedom, and was adopted. Mr. Jefferson afterwards, in reply to an address to him by a committee of the Danbury Baptist Association (8 id. 113), took occasion to say: 'Believing with you that religion is a matter which lies solely between man and his God; that he owes account to none other for his faith or his worship; that the legislative powers of the government reach actions only, and not opinions,--I contemplate with sovereign reverence that act of the whole American people which declared that their legislature should 'make no law respecting an establishment of religion or prohibiting the free exercise thereof,' thus building a wall of separation between church and State. Adhering to this expression of the supreme will of the nation in behalf of the rights of conscience, I shall see with sincere satisfaction the progress of those sentiments which tend to restore man to all his natural rights, convinced he has no natural right in opposition to his social duties.' Coming as this does from an acknowledged leader of the advocates of the measure, it may be accepted almost as an authoritative declaration of the scope and effect of the amendment thus secured. Congress was deprived of all legislative power over mere opinion, but was left free to reach actions which were in violation of social duties or subversive of good order.

Polygamy has always been odious among the northern and western nations of Europe, and, until the establishment of the Mormon Church, was almost exclusively a feature of the life of Asiatic and of African people. At common law, the second marriage was always void (2 Kent, Com. 79), and from the earliest history of England polygamy has been treated as an offence against society. After the establishment of the ecclesiastical *165 courts, and until the time of James I., it was punished through the instrumentality of those tribunals, not merely because ecclesiastical rights had been violated, but because upon the separation of the ecclesiastical courts from the civil the ecclesiastical were supposed to be the most appropriate for the trial of matrimonial causes and offences against the rights of marriage, just as they were for testamentary causes and the settlement of the estates of deceased persons.

By the statute of 1 James I. (c. 11), the offence, if committed in England or Wales, was made punishable in the civil courts, and the penalty was death. As this statute was limited in its operation to England and Wales, it was at a very early period re-enacted, generally with some modifications, in all the colonies. In connection with the case we are now considering, it is a significant fact that on the 8th of December, 1788, after the passage of the act establishing religious freedom, and after the convention of Virginia had recommended as an amendment to the Constitution of the United States the declaration in a bill of rights that 'all men have an equal, natural, and unalienable right to the free exercise of religion, according to the dictates of conscience,' the legislature of that State substantially enacted the statute of James I., death penalty included, because, as recited in the preamble, 'it hath been doubted whether bigamy or poligamy be punishable by the laws of this Commonwealth.' 12 Hening's Stat. 691. From that day to this we think it may safely be said there never has been a time in any State of the Union when polygamy has not been an offence against society, cognizable by the civil courts and punishable with more or less severity. In the face of all this evidence, it is impossible to believe that the constitutional guaranty of religious freedom was intended to prohibit legislation in respect to this most important feature of social life. Marriage, while from its very nature a sacred obligation, is nevertheless, in most civilized nations, a civil contract, and usually regulated by law. Upon it society may be said to be built, and out of its fruits spring social relations and social obligations and duties, with which government is necessarily required to deal. In fact, according as monogamous or polygamous marriages are allowed, do we find the principles on which the government of *166 the people, to a greater or less extent, rests. Professor, Lieber says, polygamy leads to the patriarchal principle, and which, when applied to large communities, fetters the people in stationary despotism, while that principle cannot long exist in connection with monogamy. Chancellor Kent observes that this remark is equally striking and profound. 2 Kent, Com. 81, note (e). An exceptional colony of polygamists under an exceptional leadership may sometimes exist for a time without appearing to disturb the social condition of the people who surround it; but there cannot be a doubt that, unless restricted by some form of constitution, it is within the legitimate scope of the power of every civil government to determine whether polygamy or monogamy shall be the law of social life under its dominion.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

In our opinion, the statute immediately under consideration is within the legislative power of Congress. It is constitutional and valid as prescribing a rule of action for all those residing in the Territories, and in places over which the United States have exclusive control. This being so, the only question which remains is, whether those who make polygamy a part of their religion are excepted from the operation of the statute. If they are, then those who do not make polygamy a part of their religious belief may be found guilty and punished, while those who do, must be acquitted and go free. This would be introducing a new element into criminal law. Laws are made for the government of actions, and while they cannot interfere with mere religious belief and opinions, they may with practices. Suppose one believed that human sacrifices were a necessary part of religious worship, would it be seriously contended that the civil government under which he lived could not interfere to prevent a sacrifice? Or if a wife religiously believed it was her duty to burn herself upon the funeral pile of her dead husband, would it be beyond the power of the civil government to prevent her carrying her belief into practice?

So here, as a law of the organization of society under the exclusive dominion of the United States, it is provided that plural marriages shall not be allowed. Can a man excuse his practices to the contrary because of his religious belief? *167 To permit this would be to make the professed doctrines of religious belief superior to the law of the land, and in effect to permit every citizen to become a law unto himself. Government could exist only in name under such circumstances.

A criminal intent is generally an element of crime, but every man is presumed to intend the necessary and legitimate consequences of what he knowingly does. Here the accused knew he had been once married, and that his first wife was living. He also knew that his second marriage was forbidden by law. When, therefore, he married the second time, he is presumed to have intended to break the law. And the breaking of the law is the crime. Every act necessary to constitute the crime was knowingly done, and the crime was therefore knowingly committed. Ignorance of a fact may sometimes be taken as evidence of a want of criminal intent, but not ignorance of the law. The only defence of the accused in this case is his belief that the law ought not to have been enacted. It matters not that his belief was a part of his professed religion: it was still belief, and belief only.

In Regina v. Wagstaff (10 Cox Crim. Cases, 531), the parents of a sick child, who omitted to call in medical attendance because of their religious belief that what they did for its cure would be effective, were held not to be guilty of manslaughter, while it was said the contrary would have been the result if the child had actually been starved to death by the parents, under the notion that it was their religious duty to abstain from giving it food. But when the offence consists of a positive act which is knowingly done, it would be dangerous to hold that the offender might escape punishment because he religiously believed the law which he had broken ought never to have been made. No case, we believe, can be found that has gone so far.

6. As to that part of the charge which directed the attention of the jury to the consequences of polygamy.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

The passage complained of is as follows: 'I think it not improper, in the discharge of your duties in this case, that you should consider what are to be the consequences to the innocent victims of this delusion. As this contest goes on, they multiply, *168 and there are pure-minded women and there are innocent children,--innocent in a sense even beyond the degree of the innocence of childhood itself. These are to be the sufferers; and as jurors fail to do their duty, and as these cases come up in the Territory of Utah, just so do these victims multiply and spread themselves over the land.'

While every appeal by the court to the passions or the prejudices of a jury should be promptly rebuked, and while it is the imperative duty of a reviewing court to take care that wrong is not done in this way, we see no just cause for complaint in this case. Congress, in 1862 (12 Stat. 501), saw fit to make bigamy a crime in the Territories. This was done because of the evil consequences that were supposed to flow from plural marriages. All the court did was to call the attention of the jury to the peculiar character of the crime for which the accused was on trial, and to remind them of the duty they had to perform. There was no appeal to the passions, no instigation of prejudice. Upon the showing made by the accused himself, he was guilty of a violation of the law under which he had been indicted: and the effort of the court seems to have been not to withdraw the minds of the jury from the issue to be tried, but to bring them to it; not to make them partial, but to keep them impartial.

Upon a careful consideration of the whole case, we are satisfied that no error was committed by the court below.

Judgment affirmed.

MR. JUSTICE FIELD.

I concur with the majority of the court on the several points decided except one,--that which relates to the admission of the testimony of Amelia Jane Schofield given on a former trial upon a different indictment. I do not think that a sufficient foundation was laid for its introduction. The authorities cited by the Chief Justice to sustain its admissibility seem to me to establish conclusively the exact reverse.

NOTE.--At a subsequent day of the term a petition for a rehearing having been filed, MR. CHIEF JUSTICE WAITE delivered the opinion of the court.

Since our judgment in this case was announced, a petition for rehearing has been filed, in which our attention is called to the fact that the sentence of the *169 court below requires the imprisonment to be at hard labor, when the act of Congress under which the indictment was found provides for punishment by imprisonment only. This was not assigned for error on the former hearing, and we might on that account decline to consider it now; but as the irregularity is one which appears on the face of the record, we vacate our former judgment of affirmance, and reverse the judgment of the court below for the purpose of correcting the only error which appears in the record, to wit, in the form of the sentence. The cause is remanded, with instructions to cause the sentence of the District Court to be set aside and a new one entered on the verdict in all respects like that before imposed, except so far as it requires the imprisonment to be at hard labor.

98 U.S. 145, 8 Otto 145, 25 L.Ed. 244

END OF DOCUMENT

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

BLUEBIRD OFFICE SUPPLIES (888) 477-0700 www.bluebirdonline.com

EXHIBIT 15

898 F.Supp. 1169
(Cite as: 898 F.Supp. 1169)

▷

United States District Court,
N.D. Texas,
Dallas Division.

Robyn SANDERS and Cynthia Mullanix, Plaintiffs,
v.
CASA VIEW BAPTIST CHURCH, Defendant, and Shelby Baucum, Defendant and Third-Party Plaintiff.

Civ. A. No. 3-92-CV-1630-P.

Aug. 24, 1995.

Church employees who received marital counseling from minister and had sexual relationship with minister brought action against church and minister, alleging negligence and violations of Title VII. Minister filed cross-claims against church for breach of contract and wrongful discharge. Minister and church moved for summary judgment. The District Court, Solis, J., held that: (1) employees' cause of action against minister for professional negligence with respect to marital counseling was actionable in Texas; (2) issue of fact precluded summary judgment for minister on employees' professional negligence claim; and (3) First Amendment barred minister's cross-claims for breach of contract and wrongful discharge against church.

Motions granted in part and denied in part.

West Headnotes

[1] Federal Civil Procedure ⚿2543
170Ak2543 Most Cited Cases

All reasonable doubts and inferences must be decided in light most favorable to the party opposing summary judgment motion. Fed.Rules Civ.Proc.Rule 56, 28 U.S.C.A.

[2] Federal Civil Procedure ⚿2544
170Ak2544 Most Cited Cases

Once proper motion for summary judgment is made, nonmovant must direct court's attention to evidence in the record sufficient to establish genuine issue of material fact and to satisfy this burden, nonmovant may not rely on mere allegations in its pleadings without setting forth specific facts establishing genuine issue worthy of trial. Fed.Rules Civ.Proc.Rule 56, 28 U.S.C.A.

[3] Religious Societies ⚿30
332k30 Most Cited Cases

Action for clergy malpractice cannot be maintained under Texas law because evaluation of such complaint would require court to extensively investigate and evaluate religious tenets and doctrines.

[4] Religious Societies ⚿30
332k30 Most Cited Cases

Tort claims for behavior by cleric that do not require examination of religious doctrine are cognizable under Texas law.

[5] Constitutional Law ⚿84.1
92k84.1 Most Cited Cases

[5] Constitutional Law ⚿84.5(10)
92k84.5(10) Most Cited Cases

Free exercise clause of First Amendment does not relieve individual of the obligation to comply with neutral laws of general applicability nor does it shield clergy from all liability for their wrongs. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 1.

[6] Constitutional Law ⚿84.2
92k84.2 Most Cited Cases

When free exercise clause is raised as a defense, the threshold question is whether conduct of defendant is religious. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 1.

[7] Constitutional Law ⚿84.5(10)
92k84.5(10) Most Cited Cases

In the spiritual counseling context, free exercise clause is relevant only if defendant can show that conduct that allegedly caused plaintiff's distress was part of the belief and practices of the religious group. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 1.

[8] Constitutional Law ⚿84.5(10)
92k84.5(10) Most Cited Cases

[8] Health ⚿813

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

198Hk813 Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 299k18.40 Physicians and Surgeons)

Under Texas law, to the extent that counselees' negligence claim was based on minister's holding himself out to provide services of a marriage counselor, counselees' claim was one for professional malpractice by marriage counselor, as opposed to noncognizable claim for clergy malpractice, and court would construe claim as such, even though complaint labeled claim negligence (malpractice in minister's pastoral counseling). Fed.Rules Civ.Proc.Rule 8(f), 28 U.S.C.A.

[9] Negligence ⚿202
272k202 Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 272k1)

In Texas, actionable negligence requires existence of legal duty owed by one person to another, breach of that duty, and damages proximately resulting from breach of that duty.

[10] Negligence ⚿1700
272k1700 Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 272k136(14))

In action for professional negligence under Texas law, the question of whether defendant owed duty to plaintiff is a question of law, but whether duty was breached is a question of fact.

[11] Negligence ⚿322
272k322 Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 272k5)

Under Texas law, professional owes his client duty to use skill and care in the performance of his duties commensurate with requirements of his profession and liability attaches only for failure to exercise reasonable care and skill in accordance with those requirements.

[12] Religious Societies ⚿30
332k30 Most Cited Cases

Counselees' cause of action against minister for professional negligence with respect to marital counseling was actionable in Texas.

[13] Federal Civil Procedure ⚿2515
170Ak2515 Most Cited Cases

Material issues of fact precluded summary judgment for minister with respect to counselees' cause of action for professional negligence with respect to marital counseling under Texas law. Fed.Rules Civ.Proc.Rule 56(c), 28 U.S.C.A.

[14] Fraud ⚿64(1)
184k64(1) Most Cited Cases

Under Texas law, existence of confidential relationship giving rise to fiduciary duty is usually question of fact.

[15] Federal Civil Procedure ⚿2515
170Ak2515 Most Cited Cases

Material issue of fact as to whether confidential relationships existed between minister and counselees as result of marital counseling precluded summary judgment for minister on counselees' breach of fiduciary duty claims under Texas law. Fed.Rules Civ.Proc.Rule 56, 28 U.S.C.A.

[16] Civil Rights ⚿1183
78k1183 Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 78k167)

To establish actionable Title VII claim of sexual harassment in the work place, plaintiff must show that: she belongs to protected class; she was subject to unwelcome sexual harassment; the harassment was based on sex; harassment affected term, condition, or privilege of employment; and employer knew or should have known of harassment and failed to take prompt remedial action. Civil Rights Act of 1964, § 701 et seq., 42 U.S.C.A. § 2000e et seq.

[17] Civil Rights ⚿1188
78k1188 Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 78k167)

Church employees who had sexual affairs with minister did not establish Title VII sexual harassment claim against minister: employees freely consented to sexual contact with minister; although minister allegedly criticized employees' work performance after sexual relationships had ended, minister never acted on any of his alleged threats to terminate employees; and church, independent of minister, terminated employees because employees had violated church policy by engaging in adulterous activity with minister. Civil Rights Act of 1964, § 701 et seq., 42 U.S.C.A. § 2000e et seq.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

[18] Damages ⇐50.10
115k50.10 Most Cited Cases

To establish claim for intentional infliction of emotional distress (IIED) under Texas law, plaintiffs must prove that defendants acted intentionally or recklessly, defendants' conduct was extreme or outrageous, defendants' actions caused plaintiff emotional distress, and the resulting emotional distress was severe.

[19] Federal Civil Procedure ⇐2515
170Ak2515 Most Cited Cases

Material issues of fact as to whether conduct of minister who had sexual relationship with church employees was extreme or outrageous precluded summary judgment for minister on employees' intentional infliction of emotional distress (IIED) claims under Texas law. Fed.Rules Civ.Proc.Rule 56(c), 28 U.S.C.A.

[20] Religious Societies ⇐30
332k30 Most Cited Cases

Under Texas law, church was not vicariously liable for any alleged intentional torts of minister unless church employees could show that minister was acting within the course and scope of his employment.

[21] Principal and Agent ⇐99
308k99 Most Cited Cases

Under Texas law, actual authority is that which principal intentionally confers upon agent, intentionally allows agent to believe that he possesses, or allows agent to believe that he possesses by want of care.

[22] Principal and Agent ⇐99
308k99 Most Cited Cases

Under Texas law, apparent authority is that which binds principal who has acted in such a way that reasonably prudent person would believe that agent had authority to act as he did in the circumstances.

[23] Religious Societies ⇐30
332k30 Most Cited Cases

Under Texas law, minister did not have actual or apparent authority to counsel church employees so as to make church vicariously liable for any alleged intentional torts committed by minister; counseling was not part of minister's job description or within his job authority, pastor informed minister that he was never to counsel, and church official told employee that minister was not supposed to be counseling and employee responded that minister was not counseling her.

[24] Master and Servant ⇐308
255k308 Most Cited Cases

Under Texas law, employer who ratifies tortious conduct of employee may be vicariously liable for such tortious conduct and ratification occurs when employer fails to repudiate the known acts of employee.

[25] Religious Societies ⇐30
332k30 Most Cited Cases

Since church employees who saw minister for marital counseling and who engaged in sexual relations with minister failed to show that church knew or should have known about such conduct, church did not ratify minister's alleged tortious acts so as to be vicariously liable under Texas law.

[26] Religious Societies ⇐30
332k30 Most Cited Cases

Sexual misconduct by member of the clergy is beyond scope of cleric's employment.

[27] Master and Servant ⇐303
255k303 Most Cited Cases

Under Texas law, employers have duty to inquire as to competence and qualifications of those that employer considers for employment.

[28] Master and Servant ⇐303
255k303 Most Cited Cases

To prevail on claim for negligent hiring or supervision under Texas law, plaintiff must show that employer retained in its employment an individual who was incompetent or unfit for job as result of a failure to make reasonable inquiry into individual's competence and qualifications.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

[29] Religious Societies ⚿30
332k30 Most Cited Cases

Church employees who received marital counseling from minister and who had sexual relationship with minister did not establish claims against church for negligent hiring, retention, or supervision under Texas law; church made reasonable inquiry into minister's competence and qualifications in that church contacted minister's references which were favorable and church did not know, nor should it have known, that minister, whose duties did not include counseling, was counseling employees and engaging in sexual relationship with them.

[30] Civil Rights ⚿1544
78k1544 Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 78k382.1)

[30] Civil Rights ⚿1545
78k1545 Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 78k383)

In Title VII case, plaintiff must prove by preponderance of the evidence a prima facie case of discrimination and she may prove her case by direct or circumstantial evidence. Civil Rights Act of 1964, § 701 et seq., 42 U.S.C.A. § 2000e et seq.

[31] Civil Rights ⚿1549
78k1549 Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 78k387)

Title VII plaintiff makes out prima facie case of sex discrimination by proving that she was discharged, that she was qualified for position, that she was within the protected class at time of discharge, and that she was replaced by someone outside the protected class or otherwise discharged because of her sex. Civil Rights Act of 1964, § 701 et seq., 42 U.S.C.A. § 2000e et seq.

[32] Civil Rights ⚿1536
78k1536 Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 78k378)

If Title VII plaintiff is successful in making out prima facie case of discrimination, burden shifts to defendant to show legitimate, nondiscriminatory reason for adverse employment action and if defendant does so, then the presumption of discrimination is rebutted and plaintiff must prove that the nondiscriminatory reason was pretext for discrimination. Civil Rights Act of 1964, § 701 et seq., 42 U.S.C.A. § 2000e et seq.

[33] Civil Rights ⚿1549
78k1549 Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 78k387)

Title VII plaintiffs failed to make out prima facie case of sex discrimination, absent evidence showing that they were replaced by someone outside the protected class or that they were discharged because of their sex. Civil Rights Act of 1964, § 701 et seq., 42 U.S.C.A. § 2000e et seq.

[34] Civil Rights ⚿1168
78k1168 Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 78k158.1)

Church which terminated employees because employees violated church policy by engaging in adulterous activity with minister was not liable for sex discrimination under Title VII; employees who offered no evidence to show that they were replaced by someone outside of the protected class or that they were discharged because of their sex failed to make out prima facie case of discrimination and even if they had, they produced no evidence to show that church's reasons for terminating them were pretext for discrimination. Civil Rights Act of 1964, § 701 et seq., 42 U.S.C.A. § 2000e et seq.

[35] Civil Rights ⚿1168
78k1168 Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 78k158.1)

Any difference in the termination package received by church employees who were terminated because they violated church policy by engaging in adulterous activity with minister and that received by minister who accepted church's request to resign was immaterial to proper determination of employees' Title VII sex discrimination claim against church. Civil Rights Act of 1964, § 701 et seq., 42 U.S.C.A. § 2000e et seq.

[36] Civil Rights ⚿1528
78k1528 Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 78k371)

Church employees could not recover from church for minister's alleged sexual harassment unless they could establish vicarious liability under respondeat superior and to establish such liability, employees had to prove that church either knew or should have known of the harassment and failed to take prompt remedial action. Civil Rights Act of 1964, § 701 et seq., 42 U.S.C.A. § 2000e et seq.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

[37] Civil Rights ⇐1243
78k1243 Most Cited Cases

[37] Master and Servant ⇐40(1)
255k40(1) Most Cited Cases

To construct prima facie case of retaliation under Title VII, plaintiffs must establish that they engaged in conduct protected under Title VII, that adverse employment action followed, and that causal connection existed between the activity and the adverse action. Civil Rights Act of 1964, § 701 et seq., 42 U.S.C.A. § 2000e et seq.

[38] Civil Rights ⇐1252
78k1252 Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 78k157)

Church employees failed to establish prima facie case of retaliation under Title VII against church, absent evidence of causal connection between protected activity and their termination. Civil Rights Act of 1964, § 701 et seq., 42 U.S.C.A. § 2000e et seq.

[39] Damages ⇐192
115k192 Most Cited Cases

Church employees who were terminated for violating church policy by engaging in adulterous activity with minister failed to establish intentional infliction of emotional distress (IIED) claim against church under Texas law; when employees informed church of their sexual relationships with minister, church promptly requested minister's resignation and church's conduct by itself, without taking into consideration minister's actions, fell far short of the "extreme or outrageous" conduct necessary for IIED claim.

[40] Constitutional Law ⇐82(3)
92k82(3) Most Cited Cases

First Amendment protects the act of a decision rather than a motivation behind it. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 1.

[41] Constitutional Law ⇐84.5(10)
92k84.5(10) Most Cited Cases

Civil court review of ecclesiastical decisions of church tribunals, particularly those pertaining to the hiring or firing of clergy, are in themselves an extensive inquiry into religious law and practice and, hence, forbidden by First Amendment. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 1.

[42] Constitutional Law ⇐84.5(10)
92k84.5(10) Most Cited Cases

Religious bodies may make apparently arbitrary decisions affecting employment status of their clergy members and be free from civil review having done so.

[43] Constitutional Law ⇐84.5(10)
92k84.5(10) Most Cited Cases

[43] Religious Societies ⇐27(2)
332k27(2) Most Cited Cases

First Amendment barred minister's breach of contract and wrongful discharge claims against church; minister's claims concerned internal church discipline, faith, and organization, all of which were governed by ecclesiastical rule, custom, and law. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 1.

[44] Contracts ⇐47
95k47 Most Cited Cases

Pastor's naked assertion that he would help discharged church minister find job did not constitute a binding contract because it lacked consideration.

[45] Religious Societies ⇐27(2)
332k27(2) Most Cited Cases

Minister who accepted church's request to resign once it was disclosed that minister had sexual relations with women who saw him for marital counseling did not establish breach of contract or wrongful discharge claims against church, even if First Amendment did not bar such claims: if minister had denied church's request to resign, church would have rightfully terminated minister for violating church's policy and although minister alleged that he suffered damages as result of church's failure to honor its oral promise to secure him reemployment without breaching confidences,

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

he admitted that he did not give church any confidences to disclose and that pastor did not promise to secure reemployment for him.
*1173 Robert G. Chadwick, Jr., Eric Eisenbraun, Ferrer, Montes, Poirot & Eisenbraun, Dallas, Texas, for plaintiffs.

John E. McFall, Kimberly N. Lonergan, Bryant S. McFall, Dallas, Texas, for defendant Casa View Baptist Church.

Ray Fargason, Harding, Bass, Fargason & Booth, Lubbock, Texas, for defendant Shelby Baucum.

ORDER

SOLIS, District Judge.

Presently before the Court are: 1) Defendant Casa View Baptist Church's ("Casa View's") Motion For Summary Judgment On Shelby Baucum's Cross-Claims filed on April 28, 1995, Baucum's Response filed on June 2, 1995, and Casa View's Reply filed on June 22, 1995; 2) Defendant Casa View's Motion For Summary Judgment On Plaintiffs' Claims filed on May 1, 1995, Plaintiffs' Response filed on May 31, 1995, and Casa View's Reply filed on June 20, 1995; and 3) Shelby Baucum's ("Baucum's") Motion For Summary Judgment filed on May 5, 1995, Plaintiffs' Response filed on June 2, 1995, and Baucum's Reply filed on June 21, 1995.

BACKGROUND

Baucum was a minister at Casa View until he resigned on September 25, 1991. Plaintiff Cynthia Mullanix ("Mullanix") claims that she entered into a marital counseling relationship with Baucum in January of 1991. This counseling relationship led to a sexual relationship between Baucum and Mullanix.

At the time the sexual relationship began, Mullanix was working as a waitress at a restaurant. On March 1, 1991, Mullanix became employed as a receptionist at Casa View. Baucum was her supervisor. On September 8, 1991, Mullanix informed Baucum that she wanted to end the sexual relationship.

Plaintiff Robyn Sanders ("Sanders") claims that she entered into a counseling relationship with Baucum due to her marital problems. On Memorial Day of 1990, Sanders claims that Baucum initiated sexual contact with her, and a sexual relationship between Sanders and Baucum continued periodically until she ended it on September 16, 1991.

On September 22, 1991, Mullanix confessed to Sanders that she was having an affair with Baucum. Sanders informed Mullanix that she too was having an affair with Baucum. On September 23, 1991, Plaintiffs told Joel Steed, deacon and personnel committee chairman of Casa View, about their relationships with Baucum. Baucum confessed to Pastor Smith that he had committed adultery *1174 with Plaintiffs. Baucum accepted Casa View's request to resign.

Plaintiffs were placed on administrative leave with pay pending an investigation and advice from Casa View's insurance carrier regarding potential church liability. Casa View terminated Plaintiffs on December 2, 1991.

STANDARD FOR SUMMARY JUDGMENT

[1][2] Summary Judgment is proper if the pleadings, discovery materials and affidavits "show that there is no genuine issue as to any material fact and that the moving party is entitled to judgment as a matter of law." Fed.R.Civ.P. 56(c). All reasonable doubts and inferences must be decided in the light most favorable to the party opposing the motion. Thornbrough v. Columbus and Greenville R.R. Co., 760 F.2d 633, 640 (5th Cir.1985). Once a proper motion for summary judgment is made, the nonmovant must then direct the court's attention to evidence in the record sufficient to establish that there is a genuine issue of material fact. Thurman v. Sears, Roebuck & Co., 952 F.2d 128, 131 (5th Cir.1992). To satisfy this burden, the nonmovant may not rely on "mere allegations in their pleadings without setting forth specific facts establishing a genuine issue worthy of trial." Topalian v. Ehrman, 954 F.2d 1125, 1131 (5th Cir.1992).

DISCUSSION

1) BAUCUM'S MOTION FOR SUMMARY JUDGMENT:

Plaintiffs allege the following claims against Baucum: negligence (malpractice in Baucum's pastoral counseling), breach of fiduciary duties, sex discrimination in employment pursuant to Title VII, and intentional infliction of emotional distress.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

Negligence-Malpractice In Pastoral Counseling

Baucum argues that malpractice in pastoral counseling is not actionable under Texas law. Again, Baucum cites to Dausch v. Rykse, 52 F.3d 1425 (7th Cir.1994), in asserting that pastoral counseling is centered on matters of religion, and claims of negligence are not cognizable in civil court. 52 F.3d at 1428.

[3][4][5] The Court agrees with the many decisions that have held that an action for clergy malpractice could not be maintained because the evaluation of such a complaint "would require the court to extensively investigate and evaluate religious tenets and doctrines." Dausch v. Rykse, 52 F.3d 1425, 1432 (7th Cir.1994). [FN1] However, "tort claims for behavior by a cleric that does not require the examination of religious doctrine are cognizable." Schmidt v. Bishop, 779 F.Supp. 321, 327 (S.D.N.Y.1991). The Free Exercise Clause does not relieve an individual of the obligation to comply with neutral laws of general applicability, Employment Div., Dep't of Human Resources v. Smith, 494 U.S. 872, 879, 110 S.Ct. 1595, 1600, 108 L.Ed.2d 876 (1990), nor does it "shield clergy from all liability for their wrongs." Dausch, 52 F.3d at 1435.

> FN1. The Texas legislature has enacted a 1993 statute that covers liability for sexual exploitation in counseling in a professional relationship, including a clergy member's assistance to an individual in resolving emotional, attitudinal, or relationship conflicts. However, the act does not include religious, moral, and spiritual counseling, teaching, and instruction. See Tex.Civ.Pract. & Rem.Code § 81.001, et seq. This statute is not available for causes of action arising prior to September 1, 1993.

[6][7] In addition, while spiritual counseling, including a cleric's marital counseling, may implicate First Amendment rights, the Court is not convinced that Plaintiffs' allegations permit Baucum to assert a free exercise defense. See Destefano v. Grabrian, 763 P.2d 275, 283 (Colo.1988). When the free exercise clause is raised as a defense, the threshold question is whether the conduct of the defendant is religious. Id; (citing Wisconsin v. Yoder, 406 U.S. 205, 215-18, 92 S.Ct. 1526, 1533-34, 32 L.Ed.2d 15 (1972). In the spiritual counseling context, "the free exercise clause is relevant only if the defendant can show that the conduct that allegedly caused plaintiff's distress was in fact part of the belief and practices of the religious group." Destefano, 763 P.2d at 283-84.

*1175 [8] If Plaintiffs' allegations are true, Baucum's preying on Plaintiffs, masqueraded in the form of marriage counseling, constitutes conduct that is not subject to First Amendment protection. Certainly such conduct is not part of the beliefs and practices of Casa View. Therefore, to the extent that Plaintiffs' claim is based on Baucum's holding himself out to provide services of a marriage counselor, Plaintiffs' claim under these circumstances is for professional malpractice by a marriage counselor, not clergy malpractice. Dausch, 52 F.3d at 1433-34. Although Plaintiffs' 2nd Amended Complaint labels this claim negligence (malpractice in Baucum's pastoral counseling), the Court will construe the claim based on the facts alleged as one for professional malpractice by a marriage counselor. Fed.R.Civ.P. 8(f); Quality Mercury, Inc. v. Ford Motor Company, 542 F.2d 466 (8th Cir.1976); Fitz-Patrick v. Commonwealth Oil Company, 285 F.2d 726 (5th Cir.1960).

Plaintiffs' 2nd Amended Complaint states that Baucum offered his services to help Plaintiffs with their marital problems. 2nd Amended Comp., pp. 6-7, 9-10, 13. Moreover, Plaintiffs assert that Baucum should be required to exercise that degree of skill and learning normally applied by "secular counselors." 2nd Amended Comp., p. 28. Mullanix specifically states that Baucum offered "to provide me with marital counseling and that he would like to do so." Mullanix Aff., ¶ 3. Furthermore, Mullanix describes the nature and extent of the marriage counseling, and that Baucum bragged about his skills and experience as a marital counselor. Mullanix Aff., pp. 2-3.

Likewise, Sanders made similar accusations with respect to Baucum's counseling of her marital problems. Sanders Aff., pp. 2-3. Thus, although Plaintiffs cannot maintain a claim of negligence in pastoral counseling or clergy malpractice, a viable claim for professional malpractice/negligence may exist regarding marriage counseling against Baucum. The next issue for discussion is whether Baucum owed a duty to Plaintiffs.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

[9][10] In Texas, actionable negligence requires the existence of a legal duty owed by one person to another, a breach of that duty, and damages proximately resulting from breach of that duty. Fed'l Sav. and Loan Insurance Corp. v. Texas Real Estate Counselors, 955 F.2d 261, 265 (5th Cir.1992) ; El Chico Corp. v. Poole, 732 S.W.2d 306, 311 (Tex.1987). In an action for professional negligence, the question whether a defendant owed a duty to the plaintiff is a question of law, Greater Houston Transportation Co. v. Phillips, 801 S.W.2d 523, 525 (Tex.1990), but whether the duty was breached is a question of fact. Rudolph v. ABC Pest Control, Inc., 763 S.W.2d 930, 933 (Tex.App.--San Antonio 1989, error denied); Fed'l Sav. and Loan Insurance Corp., 955 F.2d at 265. "While all individuals owe a duty to exercise reasonable care to avoid foreseeable injury to others, professionals, by virtue of their special skill and expertise, are held to a higher standard of reasonable care." Fed'l Sav. and Loan Insurance Corp., 955 F.2d at 265.

[11] A professional owes his client a duty to use the skill and care in the performance of his duties commensurate with the requirements of his profession. Id. Liability attaches only for failure to exercise reasonable care and skill in accordance with those requirements. Id. The Court is of the opinion that these same general standards for professional negligence should apply in this case.

Plaintiffs allege that Baucum held himself out as a skilled and experienced marital counselor with a psychology degree, and undertook to provide such counseling. Mullanix Aff., ¶¶ 3-5, 8-10; Sanders Aff., ¶¶ 5-7, 9, 12. Moreover, Plaintiffs assert that Baucum engaged in a romantic and sexual relationship with them, designed to solicit their affection and emotional dependence for Baucum's benefit rather than for Plaintiffs' benefit during the course of the counselor-counselee relationship. 2nd Amended Comp., pp. 28- 29. Plaintiffs contend that they suffered damages as a result of Baucum's actions during the counselor-counselee relationship.

[12][13] The Court finds that Plaintiffs' cause of action for professional negligence with respect to marital counseling against Baucum is actionable in Texas. Moreover, the Court finds that genuine issues of material fact exist with respect to such claim. Accordingly, *1176 the Court will deny Baucum's Motion For Summary Judgment with respect to Plaintiffs' negligence claim.

Breach Of Fiduciary Duties

Plaintiffs assert that Baucum breached his fiduciary duties to Plaintiffs because by virtue of their relationship, they placed a special confidence and trust in him. Baucum argues that Texas does not recognize a fiduciary relationship between a minister and a member of a congregation. Baucum cites to Dausch v. Rykse, 52 F.3d 1425 (7th Cir.1994), in alleging that the position of spiritual and religious advisor does not impose a fiduciary duty or establish a fiduciary relationship.

In finding no fiduciary duty, the Dausch Court stated that "because it would require the Court to define the scope of a fiduciary duty owed persons by their clergy, a matter clearly rooted in the tenets and internal organization of a religion, it raises the same constitutional difficulties encountered when defining the standard of care under negligence." Dausch, 52 F.3d at 1438. Alleging a breach of fiduciary duty under these circumstances is simply an elliptical way of alleging clergy malpractice. Id., See also Schmidt v. Bishop, 779 F.Supp. 321 (S.D.N.Y.1991).

However, the Texas Supreme Court has recognized that certain informal relationships may give rise to a fiduciary duty. Crim Truck & Tractor Co. v. Navistar International Transportation Corp., 823 S.W.2d 591 (Tex.1992). The Texas Supreme Court stated that such "informal fiduciary relationships have also been termed 'confidential relationships' and may arise 'where one person trusts in and relies upon another, whether the relation is a moral, social, domestic or merely personal one." Id. at 594, (citing Fitz-Gerald v. Hull, 237 S.W.2d 256, 261 (1951)). The Texas Supreme Court noted that because not every relationship involving a high degree of trust and confidence rises to the stature of a formal fiduciary relationship, "the law recognizes the existence of confidential relationships in those cases 'in which influence has been acquired and abused, in which confidence has been reposed and betrayed.' " Id.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

[14] Additionally, the existence of a confidential relationship is usually a question of fact. Id. Furthermore, the nature of the marriage counseling relationship between Baucum and Plaintiffs is an issue of fact to be determined at trial. See Destefano v. Grabrian, 763 P.2d 275, 283 (Colo.1988). The Court is of the opinion that genuine issues of material fact are present in this case regarding whether confidential relationships existed between Baucum and Plaintiffs "in which influence had been acquired and abused, in which confidence had been reposed and betrayed." Plaintiffs assert that they entered into a counselor-counselee relationship with Baucum based, in part, on Baucum's representations made with respect to his expertise in marriage counseling. Mullanix Aff., ¶¶ 3, 8-10; Sanders Aff., ¶¶ 5, 9-10, 12. Plaintiffs state that Baucum solicited their trust and confidence with his purported ability to help them out with their respective marital situations. 2nd Amended Comp., pp. 6, 10; Mullanix Aff., ¶¶ 4-5, 8, 18; Sanders Aff., ¶¶ 5-7, 9, 16. Moreover, Plaintiffs allege that Baucum made misrepresentations of fact to Plaintiffs for the purpose of seducing the affections and emotional dependence of Plaintiffs for Baucum's benefit rather than for the benefit of Plaintiffs. 2nd Amended Comp., pp. 19-25. In addition, Plaintiffs contend that Baucum breached his fiduciary duty in disclosing their respective confidential information to others. 2nd Amended Comp., pp. 25-27.

[15] As discussed above, if Plaintiffs' allegations are true, the Court would have little difficulty finding that Baucum owed Plaintiffs a fiduciary duty as a marriage counselor to Plaintiffs. See Destefano v. Grabrian, 763 P.2d 275, 284 (Colo.1988). His duty would be created by his undertaking to counsel them. Id. Moreover, Baucum's alleged undertaking would create a duty to engage in conduct designed to improve Plaintiffs' respective marital relationships. Thus, entering into the sexual relationships would be clear evidence of a breach of Baucum's fiduciary duties. Accordingly, the Court will deny Baucum's Motion with respect to all of Plaintiffs' breach of duty claims because genuine issues of material fact exist as to whether 1177 Baucum owed fiduciary duties to Plaintiffs pursuant to a confidential relationship as a result of marital counseling.

Title VII-Sexual Harassment

[16] In order to establish an actionable claim of sexual harassment in the work place, a plaintiff must show that:

1) she belongs to a protected class;
2) she was subject to unwelcome sexual harassment;
3) the harassment was based on sex;
4) the harassment affected a term, condition, or privilege of employment; and
5) the employer knew or should have known of the harassment and failed to take prompt remedial action.

Nash v. Electrospace Sys. Inc., 9 F.3d 401 (5th Cir.1993).

Baucum argues that Plaintiffs' assertions do not rise to the level of severity necessary for supporting a claim for sexual harassment. Moreover, Baucum alleges that no evidence has been presented to show that a change in the terms, conditions, or privileges of Plaintiffs' employment occurred because of Baucum's actions during the pertinent time periods.

[17] The Court is of the opinion that Plaintiffs have presented insufficient summary judgment evidence to support a claim of sexual harassment against Baucum. Mullanix consented to the sexual contact with Baucum at least until September 8, 1991, the day she informed him that she wanted to end their sexual relationship. [FN2] Sanders consented to the sexual contact with Baucum at least until September 16, 1991, the day that she informed him that she wanted to end their sexual relationship. Plaintiffs allege that Baucum subjected Plaintiffs to sexual harassment until September 25, 1991.

> FN2. Plaintiffs' argument that they were incapable of giving psychological consent is without merit. The Court finds that Plaintiffs freely consented to their respective adulterous affairs with Baucum.

However, Mullanix claims that the only contact of a sexual nature that occurred after September 8, 1991 constituted Baucum's alleged kissing of Mullanix on the neck. This incident occurred shortly after an extensive sexual relationship between Mullanix and Baucum. Likewise, Sanders claims that Baucum made only one sexual comment to her after September 16, 1991. [FN3]

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

FN3. Sanders also claims that Baucum telephoned Sanders at her home stating that he wanted to continue their sexual relationship. This personal call is no evidence of sexual harassment at work.

Furthermore, although Baucum allegedly criticized Plaintiffs' work performance after the sexual relationships ended, Baucum never acted on any of his alleged threats to terminate Plaintiffs. Rather, within a few weeks from the time that Mullanix first informed Baucum that she wanted to end their sexual relationship, Plaintiffs informed Casa View of the surrounding circumstances, and Casa View promptly requested for Baucum's resignation. Casa View, independent of Baucum, subsequently terminated Plaintiffs because Plaintiffs violated church policy by engaging in the adulterous activity with Baucum. Thus, the Court finds that Plaintiffs have produced insufficient evidence to support a claim for sexual harassment against Baucum. Accordingly, the Court will grant Baucum's Motion For Summary Judgment regarding Plaintiffs' Title VII sexual harassment claim.

Intentional Infliction Of Emotional Distress ("IIED")

[18][19] Plaintiffs must prove the following to recover damages for their IIED claim:

1) Defendants acted intentionally or recklessly;
2) Defendants' conduct was extreme or outrageous;
3) Defendants' actions caused Plaintiff emotional distress; and
4) the resulting emotional distress was severe.

Danawala v. Houston Lighting & Power Co., 14 F.3d 251, 256 (5th Cir.1993). In this case, Plaintiffs have supplied enough evidence to raise genuine issues of material fact relating to each element of IIED. Plaintiffs' allegations that Baucum sexually harassed Plaintiffs at work, made graphic sexual comments and gestures, and engaged in a sexual relationship, 1178 at relatively the same time, with two employees who worked within a few feet of each other, could rise to the level of extreme or outrageous conduct under certain circumstances. Thus, the Court is of the opinion that Baucum's Motion For Summary Judgment should be denied with respect to Plaintiffs' IIED claim.

2) CASA VIEW'S MOTION FOR SUMMARY JUDGMENT:

Plaintiffs allege the following claims against Casa View: Title VII--sex discrimination in employment; breach of fiduciary duties; negligence- malpractice in pastoral counseling, Title VII--sex discrimination in terminations, Title VII--retaliation; negligent hiring; negligent supervision; and intentional infliction of emotional distress.

Breach Of Fiduciary Duties, Negligence, and IIED

[20] The same analysis as discussed above applies with respect to the viability of Plaintiffs' claims for breach of fiduciary duties, negligence, and IIED. However, Plaintiffs claim that Casa View should be vicariously liable for Baucum's intentional torts. Therefore, the Court must determine whether genuine issues of material fact exist in order to hold Casa View vicariously liable for these alleged intentional torts of Baucum. Casa View is not vicariously liable unless Plaintiffs can show that Baucum was acting within the course and scope of his employment. Country Roads, Inc. v. Witt, 737 S.W.2d 362, 364 (Tex.App.--Houston [14th Dist.] 1987, no writ).

[21] Initially, Plaintiffs argue that Casa View granted Baucum actual authority to conduct counseling. Actual authority is that which a principal intentionally confers upon an agent, intentionally allows the agent to believe that he possesses, or allows the agent to believe that he possesses by want of care. Currey v. Lone Star Steel Co., 676 S.W.2d 205, 209-10 (Tex.App.--Ft. Worth 1984, no writ).

[22] Alternatively, Plaintiffs allege that Baucum had apparent authority to counsel them. Apparent authority is that which binds a principal who has acted in such a way that a reasonably prudent person would believe that the agent had the authority to act as he did in the circumstances. Biggs v. U.S. Fire Ins. Co., 611 S.W.2d 624, 629 (Tex.1981).

Plaintiffs assert that Baucum had actual authority because an August 28, 1989 Casa View directive stated that "the pastoral/ministerial staff of the church has primary responsibility for the spiritual counseling of the church." Furthermore, Plaintiffs argue that Baucum had actual authority because

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

Casa View either intentionally, or through want of care, allowed Baucum to believe that he was authorized to provide counseling.

However, Pastor Smith testified that Baucum was a member of the ministerial staff, not the pastoral/ministerial staff. Smith Depos., pp. 492-93. Thus, the August 28, 1989 directive did not include Baucum as a person with authority to conduct counseling. Moreover, Plaintiffs have not provided sufficient evidence to show that Casa View either knew or should have known that Baucum was providing counseling to Plaintiffs.

For example, Plaintiffs allege that Casa View knew Baucum was counseling Plaintiffs because in the Summer of 1991, Jim Walters, Casa View's Minister of Missions, walked into Baucum's office on one occasion when Baucum was alone with Mullanix. Shortly thereafter, Walters told Mullanix that Baucum was not supposed to be counseling. Mullanix Aff., ¶ 13. However, Walters asked Mullanix directly if Baucum was counseling her, and Mullanix responded, "no." At that point, Walters informed Mullanix that Baucum was not supposed to be counseling. Mullanix Depos., pp. 1702-04. In fact, Mullanix testified that she told Walters that she was not going to Baucum for counseling because Baucum had told her not to tell anyone that she was seeing him for counseling. Id. at 1550. Plaintiffs have not presented any evidence to show that Casa View either knew, or should have known, that Baucum was providing marital counseling.

[23] Counseling was not a part of Baucum's job description or within his job authority. Pastor Smith informed Baucum that he was never to counsel. Baucum Depos., pp. 749-55; Smith Depos., pp. 40-41, 396-97. *1179 Mullanix told Walters that Baucum was not counseling her. Therefore, the Court finds that Baucum did not have actual or apparent authority to counsel Plaintiffs.

[24][25] Additionally, Plaintiffs assert that Casa View ratified the tortious conduct of Baucum. An employer who ratifies the tortious conduct of an agent may be vicariously liable for such tortious conduct. Prunty v. Arkansas Freightways, Inc., 16 F.3d 649, 652-53 (5th Cir.1994). Ratification occurs when the employer fails to repudiate the known acts of an employee. Id. However, the Court finds that Casa View did not ratify the tortious acts because Plaintiffs have failed to show that Casa View knew or should have known about such conduct.

In an attempt to show that Casa View should have known of Baucum's actions, Plaintiffs supply several examples of other women who "felt uncomfortable" around Baucum. Moreover, Pastor Smith told Baucum that his car was seen parked outside of Mullanix's home. However, this evidence does not show that Casa View knew that Baucum was counseling Plaintiffs, or that he was engaged in a sexual relationship with them. Rather, when Plaintiffs informed Casa View of Baucum's conduct, Casa View promptly requested for Baucum's resignation.

[26] In addition, the Court notes that sexual misconduct by a member of the clergy is, by the weight of the authority, beyond the scope of employment of the cleric. See Dausch v. Rykse, 52 F.3d 1425, 1436 (7th Cir.1994). Furthermore, Casa View's policy provided that adultery by any member of the clergy is immediate grounds for dismissal. Steed Aff., ¶ 7. Thus, the Court finds that Casa View should not be held vicariously liable for any intentional torts attributed to Baucum. Accordingly, the Court will grant Casa View's Motion For Summary Judgment with respect to Plaintiffs' claims for breach of fiduciary duties, malpractice, and IIED.

Negligent Hiring/Retention/Supervision

[27][28] In Texas, employers have a duty to inquire as to the competence and qualifications of those the employer considers for employment. Akins v. Estes, 888 S.W.2d 35, 42 (Tex.App.--Amarillo 1994, application for writ pending). To prevail on a claim for negligent hiring or supervision, a plaintiff must show that the employer retained in its employment an individual who was incompetent or unfit for the job as a result of a failure to make a reasonable inquiry into the individual's competence and qualifications. Id.

The Court finds that Casa View made a reasonable inquiry into Baucum's competence and qualifications. First, Rhea Cathey, a member of the search committee of Casa View, was informed from a friend that Baucum had a good reputation. Cathey Depos., p. 39. Cathey then contacted three references for Baucum from his previous employer,

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

First Baptist Church of Plainview ("First Baptist"). All three references had favorable comments regarding Baucum. Id. at 18-19. Cathey met with Baucum on one occasion, and Pastor Smith and two other Casa View members met with Baucum on another occasion. Id.; Smith Depos., pp. 48-49. Afterwards, Casa View arranged for Baucum and his wife to visit Dallas to meet with all of the members of the search committee. Smith Depos., pp. 56-58.

Carlos Mcleod, the former Pastor at First Baptist, and leader of the Evangelism Division of the Texas Baptist Convention, told Pastor Smith that "I want you to know that if I were to leave denominational work and go back into the pastorate today, that I would do whatever I had to do and pay whatever I had to pay to get Shelby Baucum on my staff as education minister. He's the best there is." Smith Depos., p. 61. Mcleod was Baucum's supervisor for more than ten years at First Baptist.

Moreover, Pastor Smith received a very favorable recommendation from Bernie Spooner, another member of the Texas Baptist Convention. Smith Depos., pp. 63-64. Casa View was only required to conduct a reasonable search, not an exhaustive investigation. Therefore, the Court finds that Casa View did conduct a reasonable search into Baucum's competence and qualifications before it hired him.

1180 [29] Furthermore, as explained above, Casa View did not know, nor should it have known, that Baucum was counseling Plaintiffs and engaging in a sexual relationship with them. The Court notes that Plaintiffs themselves worked within a few feet of each other without knowing of each other's relationship with Baucum. Thus, the Court will grant Casa View's Motion For Summary Judgment regarding Plaintiffs' negligent hiring/retention/supervision claims.

Title VII-Sex Discrimination

[30][31] In a Title VII case, the plaintiff must first prove by a preponderance of the evidence a prima facie case of discrimination. The plaintiff may prove her case by direct or circumstantial evidence. U.S. Postal Service Bd. of Govs. v. Aikens, 460 U.S. 711, 714, 103 S.Ct. 1478, 1481, 75 L.Ed.2d 403 (1983). A plaintiff makes out a prima facie case of sex discrimination by proving: 1) she was discharged; 2) she was qualified for the position; 3) she was within the protected class at the time of discharge; and 4) she was replaced by someone outside the protected class, or otherwise discharged because of her sex. Bodenheimer v. PPG Indus., Inc., 5 F.3d 955, 957 (5th Cir.1993).

[32] If the Plaintiff is successful in making out a prima facie case of discrimination, the burden shifts to the defendant to show a legitimate, nondiscriminatory reason for the adverse employment decision. If the defendant articulates a nondiscriminatory reason of its adverse employment action, then the presumption is rebutted and the Plaintiff must prove that the nondiscriminatory reason was a pretext for discrimination. St. Mary's Honor Ctr. v. Hicks, 509 U.S. 502, ---- - ----, ---- - 113, & n. 4, 113 S.Ct. 2742, 2747-49, 2751-53, & n. 4, 125 L.Ed.2d 407 (1993).

[33][34] Plaintiffs have offered no evidence to show that they were replaced by someone outside the protective class, or that they were discharged because of their sex. Thus, Plaintiffs have failed to make out a prima facie case of discrimination. In addition, even if Plaintiffs did make out a prima facie case of discrimination, Plaintiffs have produced no evidence to show that Casa View's reasons for terminating them were a mere pretext for discrimination.

Rather, after Casa View learned that Plaintiffs and Baucum had entered into adulterous relationships, Casa View placed Plaintiffs on administrative leave with pay pending an investigation and advice from the insurance carrier regarding potential church liability. Steed Depos., pp. 393, 313-314, 429, 441, 448, 491-93, 740-43. Furthermore, Casa View promptly requested to Baucum that he resign. Smith Depos., pp. 423-24, 427-30, 451, 462-63. After Plaintiffs' were placed on leave, Casa View assigned their former duties to incumbent female employees. Williams Aff., ¶ 18.

Casa View's personnel policies provide that any moral conduct that is inconsistent with the Lord's standards is just cause for discharge. Steed Aff., ¶ 7. Plaintiffs do not dispute that entering into an adulterous relationship with Baucum is inconsistent with the Lord's standards. After the investigation was completed, Casa View offered Plaintiffs the opportunity to resign. Steed Depos., pp. 495-505, 538. When Plaintiffs refused to resign, Casa View terminated them for violating the personnel policy prohibiting conduct inconsistent with the Lord's standards. Steed Depos., pp. 543-44. Plaintiffs have failed to offer any evidence to show that Casa View's reasons for terminating them were a mere pretext for discrimination. [FN4]

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

> FN4. Plaintiffs also argue under the mixed motives doctrine as set forth in Price Waterhouse v. Hopkins, 490 U.S. 228, 109 S.Ct. 1775, 104 L.Ed.2d 268 (1989). However, under either theory, Plaintiffs still fail to offer any evidence that Casa View discriminated against them because of their sex.

As discussed above, Plaintiffs' assertion that they could not consent to the adulterous relations because Baucum seduced them is without merit. The fact remains that they violated Casa View policy and were terminated because of it.

[35] Likewise, Plaintiffs' argument that Baucum received a more favorable termination package is unsupported by the record. Casa View asked Baucum to resign immediately, 1181 and the church gave him one month severance pay. Casa View placed Plaintiffs on involuntary leave with pay for two months, and paid them for two months of psychiatric counseling. Any difference in the termination package between Plaintiffs and Baucum is immaterial to a proper determination of Plaintiff's sex discrimination claim. Accordingly, because Plaintiffs have offered no evidence to show that Casa View discriminated against them because of their sex, or to show that Casa View's reasons for terminating them were a mere pretext for discrimination, the Court will grant Casa View's Motion For Summary Judgment regarding Plaintiffs' Title VII sex discrimination claim.

Title VII-Sexual Harassment

[36] As discussed above, Plaintiffs have produced insufficient evidence to support a sexual harassment claim. Moreover, even if Plaintiffs could establish sexual harassment against Baucum, Plaintiffs cannot recover from Casa View for Baucum's alleged sexual harassment unless they can establish vicarious liability under respondeat superior. Nash v. Electrospace Sys., Inc., 9 F.3d 401, 404 (5th Cir.1993). To establish such liability, Plaintiffs must prove that Casa View either knew or should have known of the harassment and failed to take prompt remedial action. Id. However, as discussed above, the Court has determined that Casa View did not know, nor should it have known of Baucum's conduct. Accordingly, the Court grants Casa View's Motion For Summary Judgment with respect to Plaintiffs' Title VII sexual harassment claim.

Title VII-Retaliation

[37][38] To construct a prima facie case of retaliation, Plaintiffs must establish that: 1) they engaged in conduct protected under Title VII; 2) an adverse employment action followed; and 3) a causal connection existed between the activity and the adverse action. Collins v. Baptist Memorial Geriatric Ctr., 937 F.2d 190, 193 (5th Cir.1991), cert. denied, 502 U.S. 1072, 112 S.Ct. 968, 117 L.Ed.2d 133 (1992). Plaintiffs cannot show a causal connection between the activity and the adverse action. As discussed above, Plaintiffs have not produced any evidence to show that Casa View's stated reasons were a mere pretext for discrimination. The Court finds that Plaintiff has not met its burden with respect to their retaliation claim, just as they failed regarding their sex discrimination claim. Accordingly, the Court will grant Casa View's Motion For Summary Judgment with respect to Plaintiffs' Title VII retaliation claim.

Intentional Infliction Of Emotional Distress

[39] Plaintiffs also allege a separate claim of IIED against Casa View for its actions toward Plaintiffs. As discussed above, Plaintiffs must prove the following to recover damages for their IIED claim:

1) Defendants acted intentionally or recklessly;
2) Defendants' conduct was extreme or outrageous;
3) Defendants' actions caused Plaintiff emotional distress; and
4) the resulting emotional distress was severe.

Danawala v. Houston Lighting & Power Co., 14 F.3d 251, 256 (5th Cir.1993). However, after considering all the facts and circumstances in this case, the Court is of the opinion that Casa View's conduct by itself, without taking into consideration Baucum's actions, falls far short of "extreme or outrageous." When Plaintiffs approached Casa View and informed it of the relationships, Casa View promptly requested for Baucum's resignation.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

After conducting an investigation into the matter, Casa View requested Plaintiffs' resignations because they violated Casa View policy. Thus, the Court finds such conduct far short of extreme or outrageous. Accordingly, the Court will grant Casa View's Motion For Summary Judgment regarding Plaintiffs' separate IIED claim against Casa View only.

3) CASA VIEW'S SUMMARY JUDGMENT MOTION ON BAUCUM'S CROSS-CLAIMS:

Baucum has filed cross-claims against Casa View alleging that he was entitled to recover damages from Casa View under legal 1182 theories of breach of contract and wrongful discharge. Baucum alleges that Pastor Smith and church deacon Steed made unkept promises to Baucum that induced Baucum into signing his letter of resignation and letter of repentance. Casa View argues that the First Amendment bars Baucum from bringing his cross-claims.

[40][41][42] The First Amendment to the United States Constitution provides in part that "Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof...." The First Amendment protects the act of a decision rather than a motivation behind it. Young v. N. Ill. Conf. Of United Methodist Church, 21 F.3d 184, 186 (7th Cir.1994). Civil court review of ecclesiastical decisions of church tribunals, "particularly those pertaining to the hiring or firing of clergy, are in themselves an 'extensive inquiry' into religious law and practice, and hence forbidden by the First Amendment." Id. at 187. See also Serbian Eastern Orthodox Diocese v. Milivojevich, 426 U.S. 696, 717, 96 S.Ct. 2372, 2384, 49 L.Ed.2d 151 (1976). Courts have concluded that "matters touching the relationship between a church and its minister, determination of salary, and assignment of duties and location, are matters of church administration and government and thus purely of ecclesiastical cognizance." Young, 21 F.3d at 185; Natal v. Christian And Missionary Alliance, 878 F.2d 1575, 1577 (1st Cir.1989). Religious bodies "may make apparently arbitrary decisions affecting the employment status of their clergy members and be free from civil review having done so." Id. at 187.

By its very nature, the inquiry which Baucum would have us undertake into the circumstances of his discharge "plunges an inquisitor into a maelstrom of Church policy, administration, and governance. It is an inquiry barred by the Free Exercise Clause." Natal v. Christian And Missionary Alliance, 878 F.2d 1575, 1578 (1st Cir.1989).

[43] Baucum argues that this Court can decide this case based on neutral principles because it involves a general contractual dispute. The Sixth Circuit denied a Methodist minister's breach of contract claim against his church after he was forced into retirement. Hutchison v. Thomas, 789 F.2d 392 (6th Cir.1986). The Sixth Circuit stated that "the neutral principles" doctrine "has never been extended to religious controversies in the areas of church government, order and discipline, nor should it be." Id. at 396. Baucum's claim relates to his employment as a minister of Casa View. Therefore, his claim "concerns internal church discipline, faith, and organization, all of which are governed by ecclesiastical rule, custom, and law." Id. Therefore, the Court finds that the First Amendment bars Baucum's cross-claims against Casa View.

[44][45] Alternatively, the Court finds that Baucum has presented insufficient evidence to support a breach of contract claim. Baucum asserts that he suffered damages as a result of Casa View's failure to honor its oral promise to secure him reemployment without breaching confidences. Cross- Claim, ¶ 102. However, Baucum admits that he did not give Casa View any confidences to disclose, and that Pastor Smith did not promise to secure reemployment for Baucum. Baucum Depos., pp. 1306-7, 1313-14. Rather, Pastor Smith stated that he merely would help Baucum find a job. Id. This naked assertion does not constitute a binding contract because it lacks consideration. McCulley Fine Arts Gallery, Inc. v. "X" Partners, 860 S.W.2d 473, 477 (Tex.App.--El Paso 1993, no writ). Instead, Casa View requested Baucum's resignation upon being informed of the adulterous activity. If he denied the church's request, Casa View would have rightfully terminated Baucum for violating Casa View's policy. Baucum has presented insufficient evidence to support a claim for breach of contract or wrongful discharge.

For the above reasons, the Court grants Casa View's Motion For Summary Judgment regarding Baucum's cross-claims.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

It is hereby Ordered that Shelby Baucum's Motion For Summary Judgment is denied.

It is further Ordered that Casa View Baptist Church's Motion For Summary Judgment On The Claims Of Plaintiffs Robyn Sanders And Cynthia Mullanix is granted.

1183 It is further Ordered that Casa View Baptist Church's Motion For Summary Judgment On Shelby Baucum's Cross-Claims is granted.

SO ORDERED.

898 F.Supp. 1169

END OF DOCUMENT

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

BLUEBIRD OFFICE SUPPLIES (888) 477-0700 www.bluebirdonline.com

EXHIBIT 46

▷

United States District Court,
S.D. New York.

Christine SCHMIDT, Plaintiff,
v.
Joseph P. BISHOP, Rye Presbyterian Church,
Presbytery of Hudson River,
Presbyterian Church (USA), Defendants.

No. 91 Civ. 4125 (CLB).

Dec. 6, 1991.

Plaintiff brought action against church pastor and ecclesiastical authorities, alleging that pastor had initiated sexual contact during a counselling relationship. The defendants brought motions to dismiss. The District Court, Brieant, Chief Judge, held that: (1) plaintiff failed to establish claim of breach of fiduciary duty against pastor; (2) plaintiff failed to establish claim of fraud against pastor; (3) claim of malpractice was not actionable under New York law; (4) statute of limitations was not tolled; and (5) action could not be maintained against ecclesiastical authorities.

Motions granted.

West Headnotes

[1] Negligence ⇐201
272k201 Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 272k1)

Under New York law, it is not possible to claim that alleged perpetrator of deliberate sexual abuse injured plaintiff negligently.

[2] Religious Societies ⇐30
332k30 Most Cited Cases

Claim that a church pastor mishandled a counselling relationship with a 12- year-old, including engaging in sexual contact, was properly treated as a claim for malpractice under New York law, rather than as a claim for negligence; conduct involved purported breach of professional standards by ordained minister.

[3] Fraud ⇐7
184k7 Most Cited Cases

While "fiduciary" relationship has been expansively characterized under New York law, not every confidential relationship or joint venture involves "fiduciary" relationship.

[4] Fraud ⇐7
184k7 Most Cited Cases

While term "fiduciary" generally implies existence of professional or commercial relationship under New York law, term also comprehends "informal relations."

[5] Religious Societies ⇐30
332k30 Most Cited Cases

Breach of fiduciary duty claim against church pastor in connection with his alleged sexual contact with 12-year-old during counselling relationship was not actionable under New York law; duty allegedly violated by the pastor was general duty to refrain from violating penal laws, claim of breach of fiduciary duty was merely another way of alleging that pastor grossly abused his pastoral role, that is, that he engaged in malpractice, which was not actionable, and court would be confronted with constitutional difficulties in defining scope of fiduciary duty owed persons by their clergy. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 1.

[6] Fraud ⇐41
184k41 Most Cited Cases

In analyzing fraud claims under New York law, courts are instructed to examine closely sufficiency of plaintiff's complaint because statute of limitations for fraud is significantly longer than for other civil claims.

[7] Fraud ⇐58(1)
184k58(1) Most Cited Cases

Evidence failed to establish fraud claim under New York law against church pastor in connection with his alleged sexual contact with 12-year-old during counselling relationship, notwithstanding pastor's misrepresentation that their "relationship was special and acceptable in the eyes of the lord"; injury 12-year-old suffered flowed mostly from alleged criminal sexual abuse perpetrated by the pastor.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

[8] Constitutional Law ⇐84.5(10)
92k84.5(10) Most Cited Cases

[8] Religious Societies ⇐30
332k30 Most Cited Cases

Tort claims can be maintained against clergy, for such behavior as negligent operation of Sunday school van, and other misconduct not within purview of First Amendment, because unrelated to religious efforts of cleric. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 1 .

[9] Constitutional Law ⇐84.5(10)
92k84.5(10) Most Cited Cases

[9] Religious Societies ⇐30
332k30 Most Cited Cases

Malpractice claim against church pastor in connection with his alleged sexual contact with plaintiff beginning when she was 12 alleged malpractice of clergymen, which was not actionable under New York law; any effort to instruct jury as to duty of care which clergymen should exercise would require court and jury to consider perspective and approach to counselling inherent in denomination's beliefs and practices, which would foster unconstitutionally excessive entanglement with religion. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 1.

[10] Limitation of Actions ⇐95(4.1)
241k95(4.1) Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 241k95(4))

A "delayed discovery rule," providing that claim accrues only when plaintiff knows or should have known of injury, did not apply under New York law to cause of action brought against church pastor in connection with his alleged sexual contact with plaintiff beginning when she was 12, despite fact that case involved child sexual abuse.

[11] Limitation of Actions ⇐13
241k13 Most Cited Cases

Church pastor would not be equitably estopped from pleading statute of limitations in case brought by plaintiff in which she alleged sexual contact with the church pastor beginning when she was 12, despite plaintiff's contention that she relied to her detriment on pastor's misrepresentation that his behavior was appropriate; plaintiff was affected by and during consequences of alleged abuse, and brought suit 31 years after commencement of relationship and two years after termination of relationship. N.Y.McKinney's General Obligations Law § 17-103, subd. 4, par. b.

[12] Limitation of Actions ⇐97
241k97 Most Cited Cases

Limitations period for bringing of claim against church pastor in connection with his alleged sexual contact with plaintiff beginning when she was 12 would not be tolled under New York law on basis that plaintiff was under duress; duress was apparently not an element of the plaintiff's claim, and even if it were, it was doubtful whether any reasonable juror could find that the plaintiff was under constant legal duress for the entire 31-year period of the relationship.

[13] Religious Societies ⇐30
332k30 Most Cited Cases

Ecclesiastical authorities could not be found liable on respondeat superior claims asserted against them arising out of alleged sexual contact of church pastor with 12-year-old under New York law; the pastor was entitled to dismissal of action brought against him.

[14] Religious Societies ⇐30
332k30 Most Cited Cases

Church could not be regarded as supervising or retaining clergyman who came under discipline of different and competing denomination, despite fact that the clergyman continued to serve the church as "pastor emeritus," receiving proceeds of trust fund established by church's parishioners.

[15] Constitutional Law ⇐84.5(10)
92k84.5(10) Most Cited Cases

[15] Religious Societies ⇐30
332k30 Most Cited Cases

Claim against ecclesiastical authorities arising out of church pastor's alleged sexual contact with plaintiff beginning when she was 12 was not actionable under New York law; it would be inappropriate and unconstitutional for court to determine after fact that the authorities negligently supervised or retained the pastor. U.S.C.A.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

Const.Amend. 1.
*323 Jeffrey R. Anderson, Reinhart & Anderson, St. Paul, Minn., for Christine Schmidt.

Barry Strutt, Keegan, Keegan & Associates, White Plains, N.Y., for Joseph P. Bishop.

Henry Weisburg, Shearman & Sterling, New York City, for Rye Presbyterian Church.

Lawrence T. D'Aloise, Jr., Clark, Gagliardi & Miller, White Plains, N.Y., for Presbytery of Hudson River.

Mark Seisel, David E. Worby, P.C., White Plains, N.Y., for Presbyterian Church (USA).

MEMORANDUM AND ORDER

BRIEANT, Chief Judge.

In this diversity case controlled by New York law, defendants moved to dismiss the complaint pursuant to Fed.R.Civ.P. 12(b)(6), on various grounds. Because affidavits and other information were received and considered, the Court on October 9, 1991 converted the motion into a motion for summary judgment pursuant to Fed.R.Civ.P. 56, and opened the record to further submissions from the parties.

The complaint pleads four separate claims against the individual defendant, Joseph P. Bishop, framed as claims for negligence (count I), malpractice (count II), breach of fiduciary duty (count III) and fraud (count IV).

The complaint also charges the remaining defendants (the "Church Defendants") with (Count V) responsibility for the wrongful conduct of Bishop under the doctrine of respondeat superior, with (Count VI) negligent placement, retention or supervision of Bishop and (Count VII) with simple negligence.

FACTUAL BACKGROUND

Our analysis must be based on the facts well pleaded as amplified by the affidavits, without regard to the legal theories or labels attached by the pleader. The facts, denied by defendants, but assumed to be true for purposes of the motion, are found *324 in the plaintiff's complaint and in her affidavit docketed October 1, 1991.

Ms. Schmidt was born in 1948 and became a member of the Rye Presbyterian Church in 1957. Complaint at ¶¶ 8-9. Three years later, when she was twelve years old, her parents brought her to the defendant Bishop for "emotional, spiritual and familial counseling". Schmidt Affidavit at ¶ 2. At that time Rev. Bishop was the pastor of the Rye Presbyterian Church. Thereafter, Schmidt alleges, she became emotionally dependent on Bishop, since he gave her the "emotional support and guidance" which she believed she needed. Schmidt Affidavit at ¶ 3.

Shortly after the counseling relationship began, she asserts that Joseph Bishop initiated "sexual contact". The contact, described in some detail, did not involve rape or sexual intercourse, but essentially reflects the crime of sexual abuse in the second degree, in violation of New York Penal Law § 130.60 as presently in effect. This statute, adopted as part of a comprehensive revision by the legislature in 1965, was derived from former §§ 483-a and 483-b of the Penal Law of 1909.

According to Ms. Schmidt's affidavit, Bishop invoked God as supporting the conduct in which he allegedly engaged, and informed her that "the relationship was special and acceptable in the eyes of the Lord" and that "it was not something [she could] share with others...." Schmidt Affidavit at ¶ 5. Although plaintiff left Rye in 1977, the counseling relationship between plaintiff and defendant Bishop continued until June 17, 1989, because plaintiff "continued to believe that the relationship with Joseph Bishop was a special relationship and that there was nothing wrong with it...." Schmidt Affidavit at ¶ 6.

The reason that the relationship was ultimately terminated was that Ms. Schmidt had entered psychotherapy in January 1988. According to her affidavit, it was in the fall of 1989 that, as a result of her therapy, she "began to understand that the contact with Joseph Bishop was wrong, that he sexually abused me and that I suffered severe damage as a result of that abuse." Schmidt Affidavit at ¶ 6.

The nature of the relationship between Ms. Schmidt and defendant Bishop, as well as her failure to perceive the wrongfulness of Bishop's actions until she was forty-one years old, is addressed in the affidavit of Dorothy Miller. Ms. Miller, a licensed clinical social worker and Ms. Schmidt's primary treating therapist, avers that Ms. Schmidt "believed [Bishop] to be her sole confidant", that she therefore "was incapable of pulling away from Joseph Bishop" and "was necessarily forced to succumb to Joseph Bishop's wishes." Miller Affidavit at ¶¶ 5-6.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

Ms. Schmidt filed this action on June 17, 1991, and defendant Bishop answered the complaint on July 17, 1991.

Analysis of the Complaint against Bishop

The facts alleged in this complaint support clearly an action for a battery or some similar intentional tort, for which the statute of limitations is one year, N.Y.Civ.Prac.L. & R. § 215(3) (McKinney 1990); it is equally clear that had the plaintiff or her family notified the authorities in a timely fashion--specifically, within two years of the initial incident--the defendant Bishop might well have been prosecuted for criminal sexual abuse. N.Y.Penal Law § 130.60 (McKinney 1987); N.Y.Crim.Proc.Law § 30.10(2)(c) (McKinney 1981)

Count I of the complaint, however, pleads a negligence claim against defendant Bishop, alleging specifically that he breached a duty owed her by entering into the relationship at all, knowing of his propensities, and that he breached that duty further by engaging in sexual exploitation of her and failing to reveal the wrongful nature of that conduct. Complaint at ¶ 20.

[1] Even if the Court were to invite a trial jury to engage in the Constitutionally dubious task of setting a standard of reasonable care for clergymen engaged in counseling, the obstacle remains that New York courts have rejected uniformly such attempts to transmogrify intentional torts into "negligence". *See, e.g., 325Rafferty v. Arnot Ogden Memorial Hospital, 140 A.D.2d 911, 913, 528 N.Y.S.2d 729, 730 (3d Dep't 1988) (rejecting claim of negligent assault in sexual molestation case); Mazzaferro v. Albany Motel Enterprises, Inc., 127 A.D.2d 374, 375, 515 N.Y.S.2d 631, 632 (3d Dep't 1987) ("New York has adopted the prevailing modern view that, once intentional offensive contact has been established, the actor is liable for assault and not negligence ..."); Trott v. Merit Department Store, 106 A.D.2d 158, 160, 484 N.Y.S.2d 827, 829 (1st Dep't 1985) (same). It is thus legally impossible to claim that the alleged perpetrator of deliberate sexual abuse injured the plaintiff negligently.

[2] Similarly, to the extent that the plaintiff's negligence claim is founded on Bishop's mishandling of the counseling relationship generally, that claim is properly treated as one for malpractice, see infra at 326-328. This particular aspect of defendant's conduct involves a purported breach of professional standards by an ordained minister, and as such is cognizable only as a malpractice claim. Papa v. Brunswick General Hospital, 132 A.D.2d 601, 517 N.Y.S.2d 762 (2d Dep't 1987) (discussing distinctions between simple negligence and malpractice actions against physicians).

Count III of the complaint charges Bishop with a breach of fiduciary duty. In perhaps the most widely quoted and far-reaching New York case on the definition of a "fiduciary" relationship, the court held:

> "Broadly stated, a fiduciary relationship is one founded upon trust or confidence reposed by one person in the integrity and fidelity of another. It is said that the relationship exists in all cases in which influence has been acquired and betrayed. The rule embraces both technical fiduciary relations and those informal relations which exist whenever one man trusts in, and relies upon, another.... Such a relationship might be found to exist, in appropriate circumstances, between close friends ... or even where confidence is based on prior business dealings...."

Penato v. George, 52 A.D.2d 939, 942, 383 N.Y.S.2d 900, 902 (2d Dep't 1976), appeal dismissed, 42 N.Y.2d 908, 366 N.E.2d 1358, 397 N.Y.S.2d 1004 (1977). See also Restatement (Second) of Torts § 874 comment a.

[3] Despite this expansive characterization of the term, it is clear that not every confidential relationship or joint venture involves as a "fiduciary" relationship. See, e.g., Don King Productions, Inc. v. Douglas, 742 F.Supp. 741, 769 (S.D.N.Y.1990) (generally no fiduciary relationship between boxer and promoter); Kirkland v.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

American Title Insurance Co., 692 F.Supp. 153, 157 (E.D.N.Y.1988) (no fiduciary relationship between property owners and title insurance company); Sobol v. E.P. Dutton, Inc., 112 F.R.D. 99, 104 (S.D.N.Y.1986) (Weinfeld, J.) (no fiduciary relationship between author and publisher).

[4] On the other hand, although the term generally implies the existence of a professional or commercial relationship, [FN1] the term as defined in New York also comprehends "informal relations". Compare MacDonald v. Clinger, 84 A.D.2d 482, 446 N.Y.S.2d 801 (4th Dep't 1982) (psychiatrist owed patient fiduciary duty) with DiMaio v. State, 135 Misc.2d 1021, 517 N.Y.S.2d 675 (Ct.Cl.1987) (State Division of Veterans Affairs counselor owed no fiduciary duty to Vietnam veteran being counseled) and Hector M. v. Commissioner of Social Services, 102 Misc.2d 676, 425 N.Y.S.2d 199 (Fam.Ct.1980) (social worker owed no fiduciary duty to client on facts presented).

> FN1. Such an assumption would also seem to inhere in then Judge Cardozo's famous holding that a fiduciary "is held to something stricter than the morals of the marketplace. Not honesty alone, but the punctilio of an honor the most sensitive, is the standard of behavior." Meinhard v. Salmon, 249 N.Y. 458, 464, 164 N.E. 545, 546 (1928).

[5] Irrespective of whether the pastoral relationship may generally be characterized as a "fiduciary" relationship, the Court is persuaded that defendant Bishop should prevail on this count. First, the duty allegedly violated by the defendant was not so much a special "fiduciary" duty, which may *326 be imposed on an individual as a matter of social policy, Apple Records, Inc. v. Capitol Records, Inc., 137 A.D.2d 50, 55, 529 N.Y.S.2d 279, 282 (1st Dep't 1988), but rather the general duty to refrain from violating the penal laws.

Second, in analyzing and defining the scope of a fiduciary duty owed persons by their clergy, the Court would be confronted by the same constitutional difficulties encountered in articulating the generalized standard of care for a clergyman required by the law of negligence. See infra at pp. 326 et seq. Third, as with her negligence claim, Ms. Schmidt's fiduciary duty claim is merely another way of alleging that the defendant grossly abused his pastoral role, that is, that he engaged in malpractice. MacDonald, supra, 446 N.Y.S.2d at 805-06 (Simons, J., concurring) (plaintiff's claim of unauthorized disclosure of confidences by psychiatrist was claim for malpractice rather than for breach of fiduciary duty).

[6] Plaintiff's fourth claim is for fraud. To state a claim for fraud in New York, a plaintiff must allege:

> "(1) that the defendant made a misrepresentation, (2) as to a material fact, (3) which was false, (4) and known to be false by the defendant, (5) that the representation was made for the purpose of inducing the other party to rely upon it, (6) that the other party rightfully did so rely, (7) in ignorance of its falsity, (8) to his injury."

Computerized Radiological Services v. Syntex Corp., 786 F.2d 72, 76 (2d Cir.1986) (quoting Brown v. Lockwood, 76 A.D.2d 721, 730, 432 N.Y.S.2d 186, 193 (2d Dep't 1980)). In analyzing fraud claims under New York law, courts are instructed to examine closely the sufficiency of plaintiff's complaint, since the statute of limitations for fraud is significantly longer than for other civil claims. Von Bulow ex rel. Auersperg v. Von Bulow, 657 F.Supp. 1134, 1140 (S.D.N.Y.1987).

[7] Even assuming that the plaintiff has pleaded fraud with the requisite particularity, her claim under this count suffers from deficiencies similar to those of her fiduciary duty claim. A claim for fraud most often contemplates both a commercial relationship and a pecuniary loss flowing from a misrepresentation made in the course of that relationship. E.g., Stich v. Oakdale Dental Center, P.C., 120 A.D.2d 794, 795, 501 N.Y.S.2d 529, 531 (3d Dep't 1986) ("actual pecuniary injury" was "sole compensable form of damages in a fraud action") (citations omitted). Furthermore, the injury plaintiff has suffered in this case flows not so much from Bishop's misrepresentation that their "relationship was special and acceptable in the eyes of the Lord", Schmidt Affidavit at ¶ 5, as from the independently tortious, indeed criminal, sexual abuse allegedly perpetrated by the defendant. It should also be noted that where, as here, there is also a claim of malpractice:

> "It is only when the alleged fraud occurs separately from and subsequent to the malpractice that a plaintiff is entitled to allege and prove a a cause of action for intentional tort ... and then only where the fraud claim gives rise to damages separate and distinct from those flowing from the malpractice."

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

Spinosa v. Weinstein, 168 A.D.2d 32, 42, 571 N.Y.S.2d 747, 753 (2d Dep't 1991) (quoting Coopersmith, infra). See also Bassile v. Covenant House, 152 Misc.2d 88, 575 N.Y.S.2d 233 (Sup.Ct.) (dismissing fraud claim of plaintiff who had allegedly been sexually abused by defendant priest); Coopersmith v. Gold, 172 A.D.2d 982, 983, 568 N.Y.S.2d 250, 252 (3d Dep't 1991) (dismissing fraud claim of plaintiff who allegedly had sexual relations with defendant psychiatrist during counseling relationship). Plaintiff's fraud claim, therefore, also fails.

Count II of the complaint charges "malpractice". Plaintiff has deliberately avoided asserting that the case involves clergy malpractice, but rather styles this claim artfully as one for malpractice by a "youth worker and counselor". Complaint at ¶ 23. By this standard, a medical malpractice action against a surgeon might well be characterized as one for "counseling malpractice", since surgeons often engage in pre- and post-operative "counseling". It is a fact conceded in the complaint that plaintiff's *327 parents brought her to defendant Bishop because he was their clergyman. That the complaint is founded on this relationship is confirmed by the pleading of a respondeat superior claim against the Rye Presbyterian Church, of which Rev. Bishop was then pastor. Respondeat superior is founded on agency, and the agency relationship, if there were any, was that of pastor, or clergy.

The Court must address the real issue here--clergy malpractice--rather than plaintiff's rather fanciful characterization of the claim as "counseling malpractice". Whether an independant tort denominated "clergy malpractice" exists has become a frequently litigated issue in the courts of this Nation. See, e.g., Byrd v. Faber, 57 Ohio St.3d 56, 565 N.E.2d 584 (1991); Nally v. Grace Community Church of the Valley, 47 Cal.3d 278, 253 Cal.Rptr. 97, 763 P.2d 948 (1988), cert. denied, 490 U.S. 1007, 109 S.Ct. 1644, 104 L.Ed.2d 159 (1989); Destefano v. Grabrian, 763 P.2d 275 (Colo.1988) (en banc); Hester v. Barnett, 723 S.W.2d 544 (Mo.App.1987). The issue has generated a growing body of scholarly commentary. See, e.g., Nally v. Grace Community Church of the Valley: Clergy Malpractice--A Threat to Both Liberty and Life, 11 Pace L.Rev. 137 (1990); Clergy Malpractice: Should Pennsylvania Recognize a Cause of Action for Improper Counseling by a Clergyman? 192 Dick.L.Rev. 223 (1987); Ericsson, Clergyman Malpractice: Ramifications of a New Theory, 16 Val.U.L.Rev. 163 (1981).

Although the Court has reviewed these authorities, this Court must respect and apply the law of New York as it exists now. And the fact is that neither the legislature nor the courts of New York have upheld or authorized a claim for clergy malpractice. New York Public Interest Research Group v. The Insurance Information Institute, 140 Misc.2d 920, 927, 531 N.Y.S.2d 1002, 1007 (Sup.Ct.N.Y.County 1988) ("Petitioners contend, and defendants do not dispute that, in fact, no member of the clergy has ever been held liable for clerical malpractice"), aff'd, 161 A.D.2d 204, 554 N.Y.S.2d 590 (1st Dep't 1990). Nor is this likely in New York.

[8][9] Defendants concede, as they must, that tort claims can be maintained against clergy, for such behavior as negligent operation of the Sunday School van, and other misconduct not within the purview of the First Amendment, because unrelated to the religious efforts of a cleric. Cantwell v. Connecticut, 310 U.S. 296, 303-04, 60 S.Ct. 900, 903, 84 L.Ed. 1213 (1940). Claims of malpractice stand on a different footing. While the clergy of most denominations do provide counseling to youths and other members of their congregations, when they do so it is normally part of their religious activities; in so doing, they do not thereby become subject to the same standards of liability for professional malpractice which would apply, for example, to a state-licensed psychiatrist or a social worker, Coopersmith v. Gold, 172 A.D.2d 982, 568 N.Y.S.2d 250 (3d Dep't 1991). That there is no recorded instance of a New York court upholding an action for clergy malpractice, in this most litigious of states, speaks to this point, and loudly.

It would be impossible for a court or jury to adjudicate a typical case of clergy malpractice, without first ascertaining whether the cleric, in this case a Presbyterian pastor, performed within the level of expertise expected of a similar professional (the hypothetical "reasonably prudent Presbyterian pastor"), following his calling, or practicing his profession within the community. See Restatement (Second) of Torts § 299A. As the California Supreme Court has held in Nally v. Grace Community Church of the Valley:

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

> "Because of the differing theological views espoused by the myriad of religions in our state and practiced by church members, it would certainly be impractical, and quite possibly unconstitutional to impose a duty of care on pastoral counselors. Such a duty would necessarily be intertwined with the religious philosophy of a particular denomination or ecclesiastical teachings of the religious entity."

Nally, 253 Cal.Rptr. at 109, 763 P.2d at 960.

328 This Court agrees with Nally, and regards the unconstitutionality as more than possible. It is real. The Supreme Court, in the much maligned case of Lemon v. Kurtzman, 403 U.S. 602, 91 S.Ct. 2105, 29 L.Ed.2d 745 (1971), forbade the state to "foster excessive government entanglement with religion", Id. at 614-15, 91 S.Ct. at 2112, as violative of the First Amendment. This is the so-called "third prong" of Lemon, which does not appear to be the subject of apparent reconsideration by the Supreme Court in Weisman v. Lee, 908 F.2d 1090 (1st Cir.1990), cert. granted, 499 U.S. 918, 111 S.Ct. 1305, 113 L.Ed.2d 240 (1991), argued November 6, 1991, and awaiting decision. Any effort by this Court to instruct the trial jury as to the duty of care which a clergyman should exercise, would of necessity require the Court or jury to define and express the standard of care to be followed by other reasonable Presbyterian clergy of the community. This in turn would require the Court and the jury to consider the fundamental perspective and approach to counseling inherent in the beliefs and practices of that denomination. This is as unconstitutional as it is impossible. It fosters excessive entanglement with religion.

It may be argued that it requires no excessive entanglement with religion to decide that reasonably prudent clergy of any sect do not molest children. The difficulty is that this Court, and the New York courts whose authority we exercise here, must consider not only this case, but the next case to follow, and the ones after that, before we embrace the newly invented tort of clergy malpractice. This places us clearly on the slippery slope and is an unnecessary venture, since existing laws against battery, and the criminal statute against sexual abuse if timely invoked, provide adequate protection for society's interests. Where could we stop? Assume a severely depressed person consults a storefront preacher, unaffiliated with any of the mainstream denominations, but with them, equally protected by the First Amendment. The cleric consults with our hypothetical citizen, reminds him of his slothful life, and that he is a miserable sinner; recommends prayer and fasting and warns of the Day of Judgment. Our depressed person becomes more so, and kills himself and a few more people. These deaths are followed by lawsuits. As to a licensed psychiatrist or social worker, our lay courts should have no trouble adjudicating a claim of professional malpractice on these facts. As to a clergyman, it would be both impossible and unconstitutional to attempt to do so. See Destefano v. Grabrian, 763 P.2d 275 (Colo.1988) (en banc) (dismissing "negligent marital counseling" count in action against defendant priest).

Since the malpractice alleged in support of count II is the malpractice of a clergyman and not actionable in New York, the defendants are entitled to summary judgment in their favor on that count.

The Statute of Limitations

Since the conduct alleged against Bishop is obviously actionable as an intentional tort, our reader may wonder why the pleading has been cast in the forms described. The answer is simple. The intentional tort claims are clearly time barred. Even assuming that a battery occurred at plaintiff's last encounter with defendant Bishop on June 17, 1989, [FN2] the statute of limitations has long since run. The same is true, of course, with respect to any battery claims that might have been based on the earlier incidents alleged, as plaintiff's toll for infancy expired in 1972.

> FN2. At the oral argument of this motion, plaintiff's counsel elliptically described this encounter as involving "an attempted seduction".

Even as actually framed, the complaint is vulnerable to a statute of limitations defense. For example, the limitations period for negligence and most professional malpractice claims in New York is three years, or less for physicians, with the cause of action ordinarily accruing at the time of the injury. Although, the breach of fiduciary duty claim is possibly subject to a longer limitations period, *329 Frank Management, Inc. v. Weber, 145 Misc.2d 995, 997-1000, 549 N.Y.S.2d 317, 319-321 (Sup.Ct.N.Y.County 1989), it is readily apparent that such claims, too, would ordinarily be time-barred on the facts of this case.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

Plaintiff, recognizing that even as pleaded, her claims are subject to a statute of limitations defense, argues both that a different accrual rule should be used in this class of cases, and that various equitable doctrines should be applied to toll the statute.

Delayed Discovery

[10] Plaintiff first urges the Court to apply the "delayed discovery" doctrine, which essentially provides that a claim accrues only when the "plaintiff knows or should have known of the injury and the defendant's role in causing that injury." [FN3] Plaintiff's Memorandum at 330. Although New York courts have adhered fairly strictly to traditional accrual rules, see infra at 329, the legislature has on occasion enacted "discovery" rules with respect to certain specific tort claims. See, e.g., N.Y.Civ.Prac.L. & R. § 214-c (McKinney 1987) (toxic tort cases). The rationale for such enactments is that it is unfair to deny a day in court to persons who, due to the lengthy latent period of their injuries, may be unaware of those injuries until long after the limitations period has expired. Enright v. Eli Lilly & Co., 77 N.Y.2d 377, 382-383, 570 N.E.2d 198, 200-201, 568 N.Y.S.2d 550, 552-53 (1991); Johnson v. Johnson, 701 F.Supp. 1363, 1368 (N.D.Ill.1988) (quoting Lincoln-Way Community v. Village of Frankfort, 51 Ill.App.3d 602, 606, 9 Ill.Dec. 884, 889, 367 N.E.2d 318, 323 (3d Dist.1977)).

> FN3. As noted above, plaintiff has sought to take advantage of the lengthy statute of limitations for fraud, arguing that since she only discovered the wrongfulness of defendant Bishop's conduct in the fall of 1989, her claim is timely pursuant to the alternative "two years of discovery" limitations period for that tort. See N.Y.Civ.Prac.L. & R. §§ 203(f), 213(8) (McKinney 1987). As the Court has already determined that the defendants are entitled to judgment as a matter of law on this count, we need not address this argument.

It is precisely this concern that has led some courts and legislatures to adopt a discovery rule in child sex abuse cases. See, e.g., Simmons v. United States, 805 F.2d 1363 (9th Cir.1986); Osland v. Osland, 442 N.W.2d 907 (N.D.1989). See also Cal.Civ.Proc.Code § 340.1[a] (West 1989); Wash.Rev.Code § 4.16. (1988). The argument for a discovery rule in this context, simply stated, is that victims of child sexual abuse often do not realize until years later either that they have been abused at all or the scope of their injuries. Johnson, 701 F.Supp. at 1369-70.

Persuasive though this argument may be, there is no authority for the adoption of such a rule in child sex abuse cases in New York. As a leading commentator has stated:

> "... the New York Court of Appeals has steadfastly declined to alter the traditional New York rule that the statute of limitations commences to run when the cause of action accrues, even though the plaintiff is unaware that he has a cause of action."

N.Y.Civ.Prac.L. & R. § 203 Practice Commentary at 140 (McKinney 1987). See also Rizk v. Cohen, 73 N.Y.2d 98, 104 n. 3, 535 N.E.2d 282, 285 n. 3, 538 N.Y.S.2d 229, 232 n. 3 (1989) ("... this court has consistently refused to judicially adopt the so-called 'discovery' rule ...").

In Bassile v. Covenant House, 152 Misc.2d 88, 575 N.Y.S.2d 233 (Sup.Ct.N.Y.County), a case which also involved the alleged sexual abuse of a minor by a member of the clergy, Justice Baer conducted a thorough review of the policies underlying the statute of limitations, as well as the reluctance of New York courts towards varying its literal terms. Id. Although sensitive to the obstacles to filing a timely complaint in child sex abuse cases, he concluded that there was no discovery rule in this class of cases, and also observed aptly that "... where the courts of this state, especially the highest, have declared with consistency what the law is, it is not the province of the trial judge to opt for something different." Id. Cf. N.Y.Civ.Prac.L. & R.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

§ 201 (McKinney 1987) ("No court shall extend the time limited by law *330 for the commencement of an action"). Believing it unwise and unjustified to do so, this Court declines to work a total revision of the state's policy in this area, and accordingly declines to invent a delayed discovery doctrine for this case.

Equitable Estoppel

[11] Plaintiff also urges that defendant Bishop be equitably estopped from pleading the statute of limitations. See N.Y.Gen.Oblig.L. 17- 103(4)(b) (McKinney 1989 & Supp.1991). New York law provides that "a defendant may be estopped from pleading the statute of limitations where plaintiff was induced by fraud, misrepresentations or deception from filing a timely action." Simcuski v. Saeli, 44 N.Y.2d 442, 448-49, 377 N.E.2d 713, 716, 406 N.Y.S.2d 259, 262 (1978). Plaintiff alleges that she relied to her detriment on defendant Bishop's misrepresentation that his behavior was appropriate, and was therefore "unable to appreciate the improper, exploitative and harmful nature of her relationship with defendant Bishop...." Complaint at ¶ 16.

Just such an argument, however, was recently rejected by Justice Baer in Bassile, supra:

> "... what really stopped plaintiff from suit in this case was his alleged failure to comprehend the reality and meaning of what had happened. Plaintiff, in other words, was affected by the enduring consequences of the alleged abuse.... this is better viewed as a basis for the invocation of a discovery rule rather than equitable estoppel or fraudulent concealment."

Id. See also Gallas v. Greek Orthodox Archdiocese of North and South America, N.Y.L.J. July 19, 1991 at 21 (Sup.Ct.N.Y.County) (rejecting plaintiff's equitable estoppel claim in child sexual abuse case); Smith v. Smith, 830 F.2d 11, 13 (2d Cir.1987) (doctrine applies only "when some conduct by a defendant after his initial wrongdoing has prevented the plaintiff from discovering or suing upon the initial wrong").

Plaintiff relies on Coopersmith v. Gold, 172 A.D.2d 982, 568 N.Y.S.2d 250 (3d Dep't 1991). In that case, the plaintiff patient brought an action for fraud, malpractice and battery against her former psychiatrist, alleging that the psychiatrist had abused the physician/patient relationship by having sexual relations with her. 568 N.Y.S.2d at 251. The court found that though the plaintiff's action would ordinarily have been time-barred, the plaintiff had raised fact issues regarding her defense of equitable estoppel which precluded summary judgment on the malpractice claim. In particular, the court recognized that abuse of the "transference" phenomenon--whereby a patient transfers feelings about matters and persons being discussed to the counselor-- could justify an estoppel. Id.

Coopersmith, though, is distinguishable from the instant case, in that it involved medical malpractice, a recognized cause of action to which the doctrine of equitable estoppel has been applied. Furthermore, the plaintiff in that case brought suit six years after the commencement of treatment and six months from the termination of the parties' relationship; the comparable time periods in this case are thirty-one years and two years.

In a related aspect of her estoppel claim, plaintiff argues that defendant Bishop should also be estopped due to his fraudulent concealment of the nature of his acts. Once again, however, the cases establish that there must be some active concealment which is distinct from the initial wrong, an element lacking in this case. E.g., Rizk v. Cohen, 73 N.Y.2d 98, 535 N.E.2d 282, 538 N.Y.S.2d 229, 233 (1989) (fraudulent concealment claim fails when "plaintiff relies on the same act which forms the basis of his negligence claim"). Accordingly, defendant Bishop is not estopped from pleading the statute of limitations.

Duress

[12] Lastly, plaintiff contends that the statute is tolled because she was under duress. Plaintiff's Memorandum at 16-19. See also Miller Affidavit at ¶ 7 (explaining coercion inherent in sexual abuse). For this doctrine to apply, duress must be "an element of the cause of action asserted", *331 Cullen v. Margiotta, 811 F.2d 698, 722 (2d Cir.), cert. denied, 483 U.S. 1021, 107 S.Ct. 3266, 97 L.Ed.2d 764 (1987).

This requirement has been applied strictly; courts confronted by facts which might suggest to the layman that "duress" is present have routinely refused to apply the doctrine. See, e.g., Baratta v.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

Kozlowski, 94 A.D.2d 454, 464 N.Y.S.2d 803 (2d Dep't 1983) (death threat does not toll statute); Stadtman v. Cambere, 73 A.D.2d 501, 422 N.Y.S.2d 102 (1st Dep't 1979) (threat of discharge does not toll statute). But see Cullen, supra, 811 F.2d at 722- 24 (duress toll potentially available since plaintiffs' underlying claim was extortion). Indeed, the cases are replete with statements like that in Baratta, supra, to the effect that "[t]he statute begins to run irrespective of ... whether [the party seeking to avoid it] has enough of courage and independence to resist a hostile influence and assert his rights or not." Baratta, 94 A.D.2d at 459, 464 N.Y.S.2d at 807 (quoting Piper v. Hoard, 107 N.Y. 67, 71, 13 N.E. 632 (1887)).

Furthermore, similar claims of duress extending the statute of limitations were recently rejected in three New York Supreme Court cases in which a victim of child sex abuse brought untimely actions against the alleged perpetrator. See Bassile, supra; Gallas, supra, at col. 5; Burpee v. Burpee, 152 Misc.2d 466, 578 N.Y.S.2d 359 (Sup.Ct.Nassau County). In light of these authorities, it appears that duress is not an element of Ms. Schmidt's claim. Even if it were, it is extremely doubtful whether any reasonable juror could find that Ms. Schmidt was under constant legal duress for a thirty-one year period, during most of which she lived half a continent away from the defendant Bishop. Thus, the doctrine of tolling by duress will not prevent summary judgment in this case.

For all the foregoing reasons, summary judgment is granted defendant Bishop.

The Church Defendants

Plaintiff has also named the Rye Presbyterian Church, the Presbytery of the Hudson River and the Presbyterian Church USA as defendants (the "Church Defendants"), on theories of respondeat superior (Count V), negligent placement, retention and supervision (Count VI) and negligence (Count VII).

[13] These parties also seek summary judgment in their favor on various theories. To the extent that their liability is essentially vicarious, dismissal in favor of Bishop must of necessity end the case as to the Church Defendants. As summary judgment is being granted defendant Bishop, the Church Defendants are entitled to judgment as a matter of law on the respondeat superior claim. N.Y.Jur.2d Employment Relations § 337 at 447 (1986). See also Turcotte v. Fell, 68 N.Y.2d 432, 442, 502 N.E.2d 964, 970, 510 N.Y.S.2d 49, 55 (1986) ("... the dismissal of the complaint against Fell, [the defendant's] employee, mandates dismissal of the complaint against the employer") (citations omitted).

The affidavits submitted on behalf of these defendants--and Plaintiff's complaint itself--all confirm that defendant Bishop resigned as pastor of the Rye Presbyterian Church in the summer of 1982, and subsequently left both the Presbytery of the Hudson River (March 1983) and withdrew from the Presbyterian Church itself in 1984 when he joined another denomination, again as a clergyman.

[14] However, in an affidavit submitted after argument on the motion, plaintiff shows that defendant Bishop continued to serve the Rye Church as "pastor emeritus", receiving the proceeds of a trust fund established by the Church's parishioners. Hawkins Affidavit at ¶¶ 4-6. In support of this allegation, they append to their affidavit a copy of a Rye Church Bulletin which they received in March 1991, in which defendant Bishop is listed among the officials as "pastor emeritus".

The Court regards this as a mere honorific. As a matter of law, these Church Defendants cannot be regarded as in fact supervising, or retaining, after 1984, a clergyman who in that year came under the discipline of a different and competing denomination. There being no such supervision after 1984, any claims based on negligent *332 hiring, supervision or retention of Bishop are of necessity time-barred.

[15] Furthermore, any inquiry into the policies and practices of the Church Defendants in hiring or supervising their clergy raises the same kind of First Amendment problems of entanglement discussed above, which might involve the Court in making sensitive judgments about the propriety of the Church Defendants' supervision in light of their religious beliefs. Insofar as concerns retention or supervision, the pastor of a Presbyterian Church is not analogous to a common law employee. He may not demit his charge nor be removed by the session, without the consent of the presbytery, functioning essentially as an ecclesiastical court. The traditional denominations each have their own intricate principles of governance, as to which the state has no rights of visitation. Church governance is founded in scripture, modified by reformers over almost two millenia. As the Supreme Court stated long before the Lemon formulation was developed:

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

> It is not to be supposed that the judges of the civil courts can be as competent in the ecclesiastical law and religious faith of all these bodies as the ablest men in each are in reference to their own. It would therefore be an appeal from the more learned tribunal in the law which should decide the case, to one which is less so.

Watson v. Jones, 13 Wall. 679, 729, 20 L.Ed. 666 (1871). See also St. Nicholas Cathedral of Russian Orthodox Church of North America v. Kedroff, 302 N.Y. 1, 13, 96 N.E.2d 56 (1950) rev'd on other grounds, 344 U.S. 94, 73 S.Ct. 143, 97 L.Ed. 120 (1952). It would therefore also be inappropriate and unconstitutional for this Court to determine after the fact that the ecclesiastical authorities negligently supervised or retained the defendant Bishop. Any award of damages would have a chilling effect leading indirectly to state control over the future conduct of affairs of a religious denomination, a result violative of the text and history of the establishment clause. U.S. Const. amend. I.

Accordingly, summary judgment is granted the Church Defendants as well.

The Clerk of the Court shall enter final judgment for the defendants.

SO ORDERED.

779 F.Supp. 321

END OF DOCUMENT

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

BLUEBIRD
OFFICE SUPPLIES
(888) 477-0700
www.bluebirdonline.com

EXHIBIT 47

96 S.Ct. 2372
49 L.Ed.2d 151
(Cite as: 426 U.S. 696, 96 S.Ct. 2372)

Supreme Court of the United States

The SERBIAN EASTERN ORTHODOX DIOCESE FOR the UNITED STATES OF AMERICA AND CANADA et al., Petitioners,
v.
Dionisije MILIVOJEVICH et al.

No. 75-292.

Argued March 22, 1976.
Decided June 21, 1976.
Rehearing Denied Oct. 4, 1976.

See 429 U.S. 873, 97 S.Ct. 191.

A Circuit Court in Illinois entered judgment determining that a bishop's defrockment was proper, that division of the American-Canadian diocese of a hierarchical church into three new dioceses was illegal and unenforceable, and that amendments to the constitution of the dioceses were without force or effect. The Illinois Supreme Court, 60 Ill.2d 477, 328 N.E.2d 268, affirmed in part and reversed in part and remanded, holding that the proceedings of the mother church respecting the bishop were procedurally and substantively defective under the internal regulations of the mother church and were therefore arbitrary and invalid. The Illinois Supreme Court also invalidated the diocesan reorganization. On grant of certiorari, the Supreme Court, Mr. Justice Brennan, held that the state court's "detailed review" of the evidence was impermissible under the First and Fourteenth Amendments, and the court's error was compounded by error in evaluating evidence, error in delving into various church constitutional provisions and error in sanctioning circumvention of tribunals set up to resolve internal church disputes. Although the defrocked diocesan bishop controlled a monastery and was the principal officer of property-holding corporations, the civil courts were required to accept that consequence as the incidental effect of an ecclesiastical determination which was not subject to judicial abrogation, having been reached by the final church judicatory in which authority to make the decision resided.

Opinion on remand, 6 Ill.Dec. 792, 363 N.E.2d 606.

Reversed.

Mr. Chief Justice Burger concurred in the judgment.

Mr. Justice White filed a concurring opinion.

Mr. Justice Rehnquist dissented and filed opinion in which Mr. Justice Stevens joined.

West Headnotes

[1] Constitutional Law ⇐84.5(7.1)
92k84.5(7.1) Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 92k84.5(7), 92k84)

[1] Constitutional Law ⇐274(3.1)
92k274(3.1) Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 92k274(3))

Consistently with First and Fourteenth Amendments, civil courts do not inquire whether relevant hierarchical church governing body has power under religious law to decide religious disputes; to permit civil courts to probe deeply enough into allocation of power within hierarchical church so as to decide religious law governing church polity would violate First Amendment in much same manner as civil determination of religious doctrine. U.S.C.A.Const. Amends. 1, 14.

[2] Constitutional Law ⇐84.5(7.1)
92k84.5(7.1) Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 92k84.5(7), 92k84)

[2] Constitutional Law ⇐274(3.1)
92k274(3.1) Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 92k274(3))

Where resolution of religious disputes cannot be made without extensive inquiry by civil courts into religious law and polity, First and Fourteenth Amendments mandate that civil courts not disturb decisions of highest ecclesiastical tribunal within church of hierarchical polity but, rather, accept such decisions as binding on them, in their application to religious issues of doctrine or polity before them. U.S.C.A.Const. Amends. 1, 14.

[3] Constitutional Law ⇐84.5(9)
92k84.5(9) Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 92k84)

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

Even when rival church factions seek resolution of church property dispute in civil courts there is substantial danger that state will become entangled in essentially religious controversies or intervene on behalf of groups espousing particular doctrinal beliefs, and First Amendment therefore severely circumscribes role that civil courts may play in resolving church property disputes. U.S.C.A.Const. Amend. 1.

[4] Constitutional Law ⇦84.5(9)
92k84.5(9) Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 92k84)

Principle that First Amendment commands civil courts to decide church property disputes without resolving underlying controversies over religious doctrine applies with equal force to church disputes over church polity and church administration. U.S.C.A.Const. Amend. 1.

[5] Constitutional Law ⇦84.5(7.1)
92k84.5(7.1) Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 92k84.5(7), 92k84)

Whether or not there is room for "marginal civil court review" under narrow rubrics of "fraud" or "collusion" when church tribunals act in bad faith for secular purposes, no "arbitrariness" exception, in sense of inquiry whether decisions of highest ecclesiastical tribunal of hierarchical church complied with church laws and regulations is consistent with constitutional mandate that civil courts are bound to accept decisions of highest judicatory of religious organization of hierarchical polity on matters of discipline, faith, internal organization or ecclesiastical custom or law. U.S.C.A.Const. Amends. 1, 14.

[6] Religious Societies ⇦14
332k14 Most Cited Cases

General rule is that religious controversies are not proper subject of civil court inquiry, and that civil court must accept ecclesiastical decisions of church tribunals as it finds them. U.S.C.A.Const. Amends. 1, 14.

[7] Constitutional Law ⇦84.5(10)
92k84.5(10) Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 92k84)

[7] Constitutional Law ⇦274(3.1)
92k274(3.1) Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 92k274(3))

State court's "detailed review" of evidence in challenge to proceedings resulting in removal and defrockment of bishop of hierarchical church by religious bodies in whose sole discretion the authority to make such ecclesiastical decisions was vested was impermissible under First and Fourteenth Amendments, and court's error was compounded by error in evaluating evidence, error in delving into various church constitutional provisions and error in sanctioning circumvention of tribunals set up to resolve internal church disputes; in summary, state court unconstitutionally undertook resolution of quintessentially religious controversies committed by First Amendment exclusively to highest ecclesiastical tribunals of the hierarchical church. U.S.C.A.Const. Amends. 1, 14.

[8] Religious Societies ⇦14
332k14 Most Cited Cases

Although diocesan bishop controlled monastery and was principal officer of property-holding corporations, civil courts were required to accept that consequence as incidental effect of ecclesiastical determination which resulted in defrocking of diocesan bishop but which was not subject to judicial abrogation, having been reached by final judicatory in which authority to make the decision resided. U.S.C.A.Const. Amends. 1, 14.

[9] Constitutional Law ⇦84.5(7.1)
92k84.5(7.1) Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 92k84.5(7), 92k84)

[9] Constitutional Law ⇦274(3.1)
92k274(3.1) Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 92k274(3))

First and Fourteenth Amendments forbade action of state court, asked to pass upon validity of action of mother church in hierarchical organization in separating one diocese into three, in substituting court's own interpretation of diocesan and mother church constitutions for that of highest ecclesiastical tribunals in which church law vested authority to make such interpretation. U.S.C.A.Const. Amends. 1, 14.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

[10] Religious Societies ⇐14
332k14 Most Cited Cases

Constitutional provisions of American-Canadian diocese of hierarchical church were not so express that civil courts could enforce them, even on purported "neutral principles" for resolving property disputes, without engaging in searching, and therefore impermissible, inquiry into church polity. U.S.C.A.Const. Amends. 1, 14.

[11] Constitutional Law ⇐84.5(7.1)
92k84.5(7.1) Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 92k84.5(7), 92k84)

[11] Constitutional Law ⇐274(3.1)
92k274(3.1) Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 92k274(3))

First and Fourteenth Amendments permit hierarchical religious organizations to establish their own rules and regulations for internal discipline and government, and to create tribunals for adjudicating disputes over these matters; when this choice is exercised and ecclesiastical tribunals are created to decide disputes over government and direction of subordinate bodies, Constitution requires that civil courts accept their decisions as binding upon them. U.S.C.A.Const. Amends. 1, 14.

2374 Syllabus [FN*]

FN* The syllabus constitutes no part of the opinion of the Court but has been prepared by the Reporter of Decisions for the convenience of the reader. See United States v. Detroit Timber & Lumber Co., 200 U.S. 321, 337, 26 S.Ct. 282, 287, 50 L.Ed. 499.

*696 During the course of a protracted dispute over the control of the Serbian Eastern Orthodox Diocese for the United States and Canada, the Holy Assembly of Bishops and the Holy Synod of the Serbian Orthodox Church (Mother Church) suspended and ultimately removed and defrocked the Bishop, respondent Dionisije, and appointed petitioner Firmilian as Administrator of the Diocese, which the Mother Church then reorganized into three Dioceses. The Serbian Orthodox Church is a hierarchical church, and the sole power to appoint and remove its Bishops rests in the Holy Assembly and Holy Synod. Dionisije filed suit in the Illinois courts seeking to enjoin petitioners from interfering with Diocesan assets of respondent not-for-profit Illinois corporations and to have himself declared the true Diocesan Bishop. After a lengthy trial, the trial court resolved most of the disputed issues in favor of petitioners. The Supreme Court of Illinois affirmed in part and reversed in part, holding that Dionisije's removal and defrockment had to be set aside as "arbitrary" because the proceedings against him had not in its view been conducted in accordance with the Church's constitution and penal code, and that the Diocesan reorganization was invalid because it exceeded the scope of the Mother Church's authority to effectuate such changes without Diocesan approval. Held :

1. The holding of the Illinois Supreme Court constituted improper judicial interference with the decisions of a hierarchical church and in thus interposing its judgment into matters of ecclesiastical cognizance and polity, the court contravened the First and Fourteenth Amendments. Pp. 2380-2387.

(a) "(W)henever the questions of discipline, or of faith, or ecclesiastical rule, custom, or law have been decided by the highest of (the) church judicatories to which the 2375 matter has been carried, the legal tribunals must accept such decisions as final, and as binding . . .." Watson v. Jones, 13 Wall. 679, 727, 20 L.Ed. 666. Pp. 2380-2381.

(b) Under the guise of "minimal" review of the Mother *697 Church's decisions that the Illinois Supreme Court deemed "aitrary" that court has unconstitutionally undertaken the adjudication of quintessentially religious controversies whose resolution the First Amendment commits exclusively to the highest ecclesiastical tribunals of this hierarchical church. Pp. 2382-2385.

2. Though it did not rely on the "fraud, collusion, or arbitrariness" exception to the rule requiring recognition by civil courts of decisions by hierarchical tribunals, but rather on purported "neutral principles" for resolving property disputes in reaching its conclusion that the Mother Church's reorganization of the American-Canadian Diocese into three Dioceses was invalid, that conclusion also contravened the First and Fourteenth Amendments. The reorganization of the Diocese involves solely a matter of internal church government, an issue at the core of ecclesiastical affairs. Religious freedom encompasses the "power (of religious bodies) to decide for themselves, free from state interference, matters of church government as well as those of faith and doctrine." Kedroff v. St. Nicholas Cathedral, 344 U.S. 94, 116, 73 S.Ct. 143, 154, 97 L.Ed. 120. Pp. 2385-2387.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

60 Ill.2d 477, 328 N.E.2d 268, reversed.

Albert E. Jenner, Jr., Chicago, Ill., for petitioners.

Leo J. Sullivan, III, Waukegan, Ill., for respondents.

Mr. Justice BRENNAN delivered the opinion of the Court.

In 1963, the Holy Assembly of Bishops and the Holy Synod of the Serbian Orthodox Church (Mother Church) 698 suspended and ultimately removed respondent Dionisije Milivojevich (Dionisije) as Bishop of the American- Canadian Diocese of that Church, and appointed petitioner Bishop Firmilian Ocokoljich (Firmilian) as Administrator of the Diocese, which the Mother Church then reorganized into three Dioceses. In 1964 the Holy Assembly and Holy Synod defrocked Dionisije as a Bishop and cleric of the Mother Church. In this civil action brought by Dionisije and the other respondents in Illinois Circuit Court, the Supreme Court of Illinois held that the proceedings of the Mother Church respecting Dionisije were procedurally and substantively defective under the internal regulations of the Mother Church and were therefore arbitrary and invalid. The State Supreme Court also invalidated the Diocesan reorganization into three Dioceses. 60 Ill.2d 477, 328 N.E.2d 268 (1975). [FN1] We granted certiorari to determine whether the actions of the Illinois Supreme Court constituted improper judicial interference with decisions of the highest authorities of a hierarchical church in violation of the First and Fourteenth Amendments. 423 U.S. 911, 96 S.Ct. 770, 46 L.Ed.2d 634 (1975). We hold that the inquiries made by the Illinois Supreme Court into matters of ecclesiastical cognizance and polity and the court's actions pursuant thereto contravened the First and Fourteenth Amendments. We therefore reverse.

FN1. The opinion of the Illinois Appellate Court in an earlier appeal is reported sub nom. Serbian Orthodox Diocese v. Ocokoljich, 72 Ill.App.2d 444, 219 N.E.2d 343 (1966).

I

The basic dispute is over control of the Serbian Eastern Orthodox Diocese for the United States of America and Canada (American-Canadian Diocese), its property and assets. Petitioners are Bishops Firmilian, Gregory Udicki, and Sava Vukovich, and the Serbian Eastern 699 Orthodox Diocese for the United States of America and Canada (the religious body in this country). Respondents are Bishop Dionisije, the Serbian Orthodox Monastery of St. Sava, and the Serbian Eastern Orthodox Diocese for the United States of America and Canada, an *2376 Illinois religious corporation. A proper perspective on the relationship of these parties and the nature of this dispute requires some background discussion.

The Serbian Orthodox Church, one of the 14 autocephalous, hierarchical churches which came into existence following the schism of the universal Christian church in 1054, is an episcopal church whose seat is the Patriarchate in Belgrade, Yugoslavia. Its highest legislative, judicial, ecclesiastical, and administrative authority resides in the Holy Assembly of Bishops, a body composed of all Diocesan Bishops presided over by a Bishop designated by the Assembly to be Patriarch. The Church's highest executive body, the Holy Synod of Bishops, is composed of the Patriarch and four Diocesan Bishops selected by the Holy Assembly. The Holy Synod and the Holy Assembly have the exclusive power to remove, suspend, defrock, or appoint Diocesan Bishops. The Mother Church is governed according to the Holy Scriptures, Holy Tradition, Rules of the Ecumenical Councils, the Holy Apostles, the Holy Faiths of the Church, the Mother Church Constitution adopted in 1931, and a "penal code" adopted in 1961. These sources of law are sometimes ambiguous and seemingly inconsistent. Pertinent provisions of the Mother Church Constitution provide that the Church's

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

"main administrative division is composed of dioceses, both in regard to church hierarchical and church administrative aspect," Art. 12, and that "(d)ecisions of establishing, naming, liquidating, reorganizing, and the seat of the dioceses, and establishing or eliminating of position of vicar bishops, *700 is decided upon by the (Holy Assembly), in agreement with the Patriarchal Council," Art. 16.

During the late 19th century, migrants to North America of Serbian descent formed autonomous religious congregations throughout this country and Canada. These congregations were then under the jurisdiction of the Russian Orthodox Church, but that Church was unable to care for their needs and the congregations sought permission to bring themselves under the jurisdiction of the Serbian Orthodox Church.

In 1913 and 1916, Serbian priests and laymen organized a Serbian Orthodox Church in North America. The 32 Serbian Orthodox congregations were divided into 4 presbyteries, each presided over by a Bishop's Aide, and constitutions were adopted. In 1917, the Russian Orthodox Church commissioned a Serbian priest, Father Mardary, to organize an independent Serbian Diocese in America. Four years later, as a result of Father Mardary's efforts, the Holy Assembly of Bishops of the Mother Church created the Eastern Orthodox Diocese for the United States of America and Canada and designated a Serbian Bishop to complete the formal organization of a Diocese. From that time until 1963, each bishop who governed the American-Canadian Diocese was a Yugoslav citizen appointed by the Mother Church without consultation with Diocesan officials.

In 1927, Father Mardary called a Church National Assembly embracing all of the known Serbian Orthodox congregations in the United States and Canada. The Assembly drafted and adopted the constitution of the Serbian Orthodox Diocese for the United States of America and Canada, and submitted the constitution to the Mother Church for approval. The Holy Assembly made changes to provide for appointment of the Diocesan Bishop by the Holy Assembly and to require Holy Assembly *701 approval for any amendments to the constitution, and with these changes approved the constitution. The American-Canadian Diocese was the only diocese of the Mother Church with its own constitution.

Article 1 of the constitution provides that the American-Canadian Diocese "is considered ecclesiastically-judicially as an organic part of the Serbian Patriarchate in the Kingdom of Yugoslavia," and Art. 2 provides that all "statutes and rules which regulate the ecclesiastical-canonical authority and position of the Serbian Orthodox Church in the Kingdom of Yugoslavia are also compulsory for" the American-Canadian 2377 Diocese. Article 3 states that the "jurisdiction of the . . . Diocese . . . includes the entire political territory of the United States of America and Canada, which as such by its geographical location enjoys full administrative freedom and accordingly, it can independently regulate and rule the activities of its church, school and other diocesan institutions and all funds and beneficiencies, through its organs . . . ." Article 9 provides that the Bishop of the Diocese "is appointed by the Holy Assembly of Bishops of the Serbian Patriarchate"; various provisions of the constitution accord that Bishop extensive powers with respect to both religious matters and control of Diocesan property. The constitution also provides for such Diocesan organs as a Diocesan National Assembly, which exercises considerable legislative and administrative authority within the Diocese.

In 1927, Father Mardary also organized a not-for-profit corporation, the Serbian Eastern Orthodox Council for the United States and Canada, under the laws of Illinois. The corporation was to hold title to 30 acres of land in Libertyville, Ill., that Father Mardary had personally purchased in 1924. The charter of that corporation was allowed to lapse, and Father Mardary organized *702 another Illinois not-for-profit corporation, respondent Serbian Eastern Orthodox Diocese for the United States and Canada, under Illinois laws governing incorporation of hierarchical religious organizations. In 1945, respondent not-for-profit monastery corporation, the Monastery of St. Sava, was organized under these same Illinois laws, and title to the Libertyville property was transrred to it. Similar secular property-holding corporations were subsequently organized in New York, California, and Pennsylvania.

Respondent Bishop Dionisije was elected Bishop of the American-Canadian Diocese by the Holy

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

Assembly of Bishops in 1939. He became a controversial figure; during the years before 1963, the Holy Assembly received numerous complaints challenging his fitness to serve as Bishop and his administration of the Diocese.

During his tenure, however, the Diocese grew so substantially that Dionisije requested that the Patriarch and Holy Assembly appoint bishops to assist him but to serve under his supervision. Eventually, the Diocese sought its elevation by the Holy Assembly to the rank of Metropolia, that South America be added to the Diocese, and that several assistant bishops be appointed under Dionisije. Dionisije specifically recommended that petitioners Firmilian and Gregory Udicki, and one Stefan Lastavica be named assistant bishops. A delegation from the Diocese was sent to the May 1962 meeting of the Holy Assembly in Belgrade to urge adoption of these reorganization proposals, and on June 12, 1962, the Holy Synod appointed a delegation to visit the United States and study the proposals. The delegation was also directed to confer with Dionisije concerning the complaints made against him and his administration over the years.

The delegation remained in the United States for three *703 months, visiting parishes throughout the Diocese and discusng both the reorganization proposals and the complaints against Dionisije. After completion of its survey, the delegation suggested to the Holy Synod the assignment of vicar bishops to the Diocese and recommended that a commission be appointed to conduct a thorough investigation into the complaints against Dionisije. However, the Holy Assembly on May 10, 1963, instead recommended that the Holy Synod institute disciplinary proceedings against Dionisije. The Holy Synod thereupon met immediately and suspended Dionisije pending investigation and disposition of the complaints. The Holy Synod appointed petitioner Firmilian, Dionisije's chief episcopal deputy since 1955 and one of Dionisije's candidates for assistant bishop, as Administrator of the Diocese pending completion of the proceedings.

The Holy Assembly thereafter reconvened and, acting under Art. 16 of the constitution of the Mother Church, reorganized 2378 the American-Canadian Diocese into three new dioceses the Middle Western, the Western and the Eastern whose boundaries were roughly those of the episcopal districts previously created by Dionisije. [FN2] The final fixing of boundaries for the new dioceses and all other organizational and administrative matters were left to be determined by the officials of the old American-Canadian Diocese. Dionisije was appointed Bishop of the Middle Western Diocese and, seven days later, petitioners Archimandrites Firmilian, Gregory, and Stefan [FN3] were appointed temporary administrators for the new Dioceses.

FN2. The Mother Church decided against creation of a "Metropolia" because it had not employed that organizational system and had not required one Bishop to serve under another.

FN3. Stefan has since died, and the Holy Assembly appointed petitioner Sava Vukovich in his place.

*704 Dionisije's immediate reaction to these decisions of the Mother Church was to refuse to accept the reorganization on the ground that it contravened the administrative autonomy of the Diocese guaranteed by the Diocesan constitution, and to refuse to accept his suspension on the ground that it was not effectuated in compliance with the constitution and laws of the Mother Church. On May 25, 1963, he prepared and mailed a circular to all American- Canadian parishes stating his refusal to recognize these actions, and on May 27 he issued a press release stating his refusal to recognize his suspension and his intent to litigate it in the civil courts. This refusal to recognize the Diocesan reorganization and his suspension as Bishop was again stated by Dionisije in a circular issued on June 3 and addressed to the Patriarch, the Holy Assembly, the Holy Synod, all clergy, congregations, Diocesan committees, and all Serbians in North America. He also continued to officiate as Bishop, refusing to turn administration of the Diocese over to Firmilian; in a May 30 letter to Firmilian, Dionisije repeated this refusal, asserted that he no longer recognized the decisions of the Holy Assembly and Holy Synod, and charged those bodies with being "communistic."

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

The Diocesan Council met on June 6, and Dionisije reaffirmed his refusal to turn over administration of the Diocese to Firmilian; he also announced that he had discharged two of his vicars general because of their loyalty to the Mother Church. The Council resolved at the meeting to advise the Holy Synod that the proposal to reorganize the Diocese into three dioceses would be submitted to the Diocesan National Assembly in August for acceptance or rejection. The Council also requested that the Holy Assembly promptly send a committee to investigate the complaints against Dionisije.

On June 13, the Holy Synod appointed such a commission, *705 composed of two Bishops and the Secretary of the ly Synod. On July 5, the commission met with Dionisije, who reiterated his refusal to recognize his suspension or the Diocesan reorganization, and who demanded all accusations in writing. The commission refused to give Dionisije the written accusations on the ground that defiance of decisions of higher church authorities itself established wrongful conduct, and advised him that the Holy Synod would appoint a Bishop as court prosecutor to prepare an indictment against him.

On the basis of the commission's report and recommendations, which recited Dionisije's refusal to accept the decisions of the Holy Synod and Holy Assembly and his refusal to recognize the court of the Holy Synod or its competence to try him, the Holy Assembly met on July 27, 1963, and voted to remove Dionisije as Bishop. The minutes of the Holy Assembly meeting and the Patriarch's letter to Dionisije informing him of the Holy Assembly's actions made clear that the removal was based solely on his acts of defiance subsequent to his May 10, 1963, suspension, and his violation of his oath and loss of certain qualifications for Bishop under Art. 104 of the constitution of the Mother Church.

2379 The Diocesan National Assembly, with Dionisije presiding despite his removal, met in August 1963 and issued a resolution repudiating the division of the Diocese into three Dioceses and demanding a revocation by the Mother Church of the decisions concerning that division. When the Holy Assembly refused to reconsider, the Diocesan National Assembly in November 1963 declared the Diocese completely autonomous and reinstated the provisions of the Diocesan constitution that provided for election of the Bishop of the Diocese itself and for amendments without the approval of the Holy Assembly.

Meanwhile, the Holy Synod in October 1963 forwarded *706 to Dionisije a formal written indictment bad on the charges of canonical misconduct. In November 1963, Dionisije responded with a demand for the verified reports and complaints referred to in the indictment and for a six-month extension to answer the indictment. The Holy Assembly granted a 30-day extension in which to answer, but declined to furnish verified charges on the grounds that they were described in the indictment, that additional details would be evidentiary in nature, and that there was no legal or canonical basis for forwarding such material to an accused Bishop.

Dionisije returned the indictment in January, refusing to answer without the verified charges, denouncing the Holy Assembly and Holy Synod as schismatic and pro-Communist, and asserting that the Mother Church was proceeding in violation of its penal code and constitution.

The Holy Synod, on February 25, 1964, declared that it could not proceed further without Dionisije and referred the matter to the Holy Assembly, which tried Dionisije as a default case on March 5, 1964, because of his refusal to participate. The indictment was also amended at that time to include charges based on Dionisije's acts of rebellion such as those committed at the November meeting of the National Assembly which had declared the Diocese separate from the Mother Church. Considering the original and amended indictments, the Holy Assembly unanimously found Dionisije guilty of all charges and divested him of his episcopal and monastic ranks.

Even before the Holy Assembly had removed Dionisije as Bishop, he had commenced what eventually became this protracted litigation, now carried on for almost 13 years. Acting upon the threat contained in his May 27, 1963, press release, Dionisije filed suit in *707 the Circuit Court of Lake County, Ill., on July 26, 1963, seeking to enjoin petitioners from interfering with the assets of respondent corporations and to have himself declared the true Diocesan Bishop. Petitioners countered with a separate complaint, which was coolidated with the original action, seeking declaratory relief that Dionisije had been removed as Bishop of the Diocese and that the Diocese had been properly reorganized into three Dioceses, and injunctive relief granting petitioner Bishops control of the reorganized Dioceses and their property. After the trial court granted summary judgment for respondents and dismissed petitioners' countercomplaint, the Illinois Appellate Court reversed and remanded for a hearing on the merits. Serbian Orthodox Diocese v. Ocokoljich, 72 Ill.App.2d 444, 219 N.E.2d 343, appeal denied, 34 Ill.2d 631 (1966). [FN4]

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

> FN4. The Appellate Court initially held that the suspension, removal, and defrockment of Dionisije were valid and binding upon the civil courts but on rehearing directed that Dionisije should be afforded the opportunity at trial to prove that these were the result of fraud, collusion, or arbitrariness.

Following a lengthy trial, the trial court filed an unreported memorandum opinion and entered a final decree which concluded that "no substantial evidence was produced . . . that fraud, collusion or arbitrariness existed in any of the actions or decisions preliminary to or during the final proceedings of the decision to defrock Bishop Dionisije made by the highest Hierarchical bodies of the Mother Church," Pet. for Cert., App. 44; that the property held by *2380 respondent corporations is held in trust for all members of the American-Canadian Diocese; that it was "improper and beyond the power of the Mother Church to take its action in dividing the whole American Diocese into three new Dioceses, changing its boundaries, and in appointing new bishops for 708 said so-called new Dioceses," id., at 46; and that "Firmilian was validly appointed by the Holy Episcopal Synod as temporary Administrator of the whole American Diocese in place of the defrocked Bishop Dionisije," ibid.

On appeal, the Supreme Court of Illinois affirmed in part and reversed in part, essentially holding that Dionisije's removal and defrockment had to be set aside as "arbitrary" because the proceedings resulting in those actions were not conducted according to the Illinois Supreme Court's interpretation of the Church's constitution and penal code, and that the Diocesan reorganization was invalid because it was beyond the scope of the Mother Church's authority to effectuate such changes without Diocesan approval. 60 Ill.2d 477, 328 N.E.2d 268 (1975). Although the court denied rehearing, it amended its original opinion to hold that, although Dionisije had been properly suspended, that suspension terminated by operation of church law when he was not validly tried within one year of his indictment. Thus, the court purported in effect to reinstate Dionisije as Diocesan Bishop.

II

[1][2] The fallacy fatal to the judgment of the Illinois Supreme Court is that it rests upon an impermissible rejection of the decisions of the highest ecclesiastical tribunals of this hierarchical church upon the issues in dispute, and impermissibly substitutes its own inquiry into church polity and resolutions based thereon of those disputes. Consistently with the First and Fourteenth Amendments "civil courts do not inquire whether the relevant (hierarchical) church governing body has power under religious law (to decide such disputes). . . . Such a determination . . . frequently necessitates the interpretation of ambiguous religious law and usage. 709 To permit civil courts to probe deeply enough into the allocation of power within ahierarchical) church so as to decide . . . religious law (governing church polity) . . . would violate the First Amendment in much the same manner as civil determination of religious doctrine." Md. & Va. Churches v. Sharpsburg Church, 396 U.S. 367, 369, 90 S.Ct. 499, 500, 24 L.Ed.2d 582 (1970) (Brennan, J., concurring). For where resolution of the disputes cannot be made without extensive inquiry by civil courts into religious law and polity, the First and Fourteenth Amendments mandate that civil courts shall not disturb the decisions of the highest ecclesiastical tribunal within a church of hierarchical polity, but must accept such decisions as binding on them, in their application to the religious issues of doctrine or polity before them. Ibid.

[3][4] Resolution of the religious disputes at issue here affects the control of church property in addition to the structure and administration of the

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

American-Canadian Diocese. This is because the Diocesan Bishop controls respondent Monastery of St. Sava and is the principal officer of respondent property-holding corporations. Resolution of the religious dispute over Dionisije's defrockment therefore determines control of the property. Thus, this case essentially involves not a church property dispute, but a religious dispute the resolution of which under our cases is for ecclesiastical and not civil tribunals. Even when rival church factions seek resolution of a church property dispute in the civil courts there is substantial danger that the State will become entangled in essentially religious controversies or intervene on behalf of groups espousing particular doctrinal beliefs. Because of this danger, "the First Amendment severely circumscribes the role that civil courts may play in resolving church property disputes." Presbyterian Church v. Hull Church, 393 U.S. 440, 449, 89 S.Ct. 601, 606, 21 L.Ed.2d 658 (1969). "First 2381 Amendment *710 values are plainly jeopardized when church property litigation is made turn on the resolution by civil courts of controversies over religious doctrine and practice. If civil courts undertake to resolve such controversies in order to adjudicate the property dispute, the hazards are ever present of inhibiting the free development of religious doctrine and of implicating secular interests in matters of purely ecclesiastical concern. . . . (T)he (First) Amendment therefore commands civil courts to decide church property disputes without resolving underlying controversies over religious doctrine." Ibid. This principle applies with equal force to church disputes over church polity and church administration.

The principles limiting the role of civil courts in the resolution of religious controversies that incidentally affect civil rights were initially fashioned in Watson v. Jones, 13 Wall. 679, 20 L.Ed. 666 (1872), a diversity case decided before the First Amendment had been rendered applicable to the States through the Fourteenth Amendment. [FN5] With respect to hierarchical churches, Watson held:

> FN5. Since Watson predated Erie R. Co. v. Tompkins, 304 U.S. 64, 58 S.Ct. 817, 82 L.Ed. 1188 (1938), it was based on general federal law rather than the state law of the forum in which it was brought.

> "(T)he rule of action which should govern the civil courts . . . is, that, whenever the questions of discipline, or of faith, or ecclesiastical rule, custom, or law have been decided by the highest of these church judicatories to which the matter has been carried, the legal tribunals must accept such decisions as final, and as binding on them, in their application to the case before them." Id., at 727, 20 L.Ed. 666.

In language having "a clear constitutional ring," Presbyterian Church v. Hull Church, supra, 393 U.S. at 446, 89 S.Ct. 601, Watson reasoned:

> "The law knows no heresy, and is committed to the *711 support of no dogma, the establishment of no sect. he right to organize voluntary religious associations to assist in the expression and dissemination of any religious doctrine, and to create tribunals for the decision of controverted questions of faith within the association, and for the ecclesiastical government of all the individual members, congregations, and officers within the general association, is unquestioned. All who unite themselves to such a body do so with an implied consent to this government, and are bound to submit to it. But it would be a vain consent and would lead to the total subversion of such religious bodies, if any one aggrieved by one of their decisions could appeal to the secular courts and have them reversed. It is of the essence of these religious unions, and of their right to establish tribunals for the decision of questions arising among themselves, that those decisions should be binding in all cases of ecclesiastical cognizance, subject only to such appeals as the organism itself provides for." 13 Wall., at 728-729, 20 L.Ed. 666 (emphasis supplied).

Gonzalez v. Archbishop, 280 U.S. 1, 50 S.Ct. 5, 74 L.Ed. 131 (1929), applied this principle in a case involving dispute over entitlement to certain income under a will that turned upon an ecclesiastical determination as to whether an individual would be appointed to a chaplaincy in the Roman Catholic Church. The Court, speaking through Mr. Justice Brandeis, observed:

> "Because the appointment (to the chaplaincy) is a canonical act, it is the function of the church authorities to determine what the essential qualifications of a chaplain are and whether the candidate possesses them. In the absence of fraud, collusion, or arbitrariness, the decisions of the proper church *712 tribunals on matters purely ecclesiastical, although affecting civil rights, are accepted in litigation before the secular courts as conclusive, because the parties in interest made them so by contract or otherwise." Id., at 16, 50 S.Ct. at 7.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

2382 Thus, although Watson had left civil courts no role to play in reviewing ecclesiastical decisions during the course of resolving church property disputes, Gonzalez first adverted to the possibility of "marginal civil court review," Presbyterian Churgh v. Hull Church, supra, 393 U.S. at 447, 89 S.Ct. at 605, in cases challenging decisions of ecclesiastical tribunals as products of "fraud, collusion, or arbitrariness." However, since there was "not even a suggestion that (the Archbishop) exercised his authority (in making the chaplaincy decision) arbitrarily," 280 U.S., at 18, 50 S.Ct., at 8, the suggested "fraud, collusion, or arbitrariness" exception to the Watson rule was dictum only. And although references to the suggested exceptions appear in opinions in cases decided since the Watson rule has been held to be mandated by the First Amendment, [FN6] no decision of this Court has given concrete content to or applied the "exception." However, it was the predicate for the Illinois Supreme Court's decision in this case, and we therefore turn to the question whether reliance upon it in the circumstances of this case was consistent with the prohibition of the First and Fourteenth Amendments against rejection of the decisions of the Mother Church upon the religious disputes in issue.

FN6. See Kedroff v. St. Nicholas Cathedral, 344 U.S. 94, 115-116, 73 S.Ct. 143, 154, 97 L.Ed. 120, and n. 23 (1952); Presbyterian Church v. Hull Church, 393 U.S. 440, 447, 450-451, 89 S.Ct. 601, 605, 606-607, 21 L.Ed.2d 658, and n. 7 (1969); Md. & Va. Churches v. Sharpsburg Church, 396 U.S. 367, 369 n. 3, 90 S.Ct. 499, 501, 24 L.Ed.2d 582 (1970) (Brennan, J., concurring).

[5][6] The conclusion of the Illinois Supreme Court that the decisions of the Mother Church were "arbitrary" was grounded upon an inquiry that persuaded the Illinois Supreme *713 Court that the Mother Church had not followed its own laws and procedures in arriving at those decisions. We have concluded that whether or not there is room for "marginal civil court review " under the narrow rubrics of "fraud" or "collusion" when church tribunals act in bad faith for secular purposes, [FN7] no "arbitrariness" exception in the sense of an inquiry whether the decisions of the highest ecclesiastical tribunal of a hierarchical church complied with church laws and regulations is consistent with the constitutional mandate that civil courts are bound to accept the decisions of the highest judicatories of a religious organization of hierarchical polity on matters of discipline, faith, internal organization, or ecclesiastical rule, custom, or law. For civil courts to analyze whether the ecclesiastical actions of a church judicatory are in that sense "arbitrary " must inherently entail inquiry into the procedures that canon or ecclesiastical law supposedly requires the church judicatory to follow, or else in to the substantive criteria by which they are supposedly to decide the ecclesiastical question. But this is exactly the inquiry that the First Amendment prohibits; recognition of such an exception would undermine the general rule that religious controversies are not the proper subject of civil court inquiry, and that a civil court must accept the ecclesiastical decisions of church tribunals as it finds them. Watson itself requires our conclusion in its rejection of the analogous argument that ecclesiastical decisions of the highest church judicatories need only be accepted if the subject matter of the dispute is within their "jurisdiction."

FN7. No issue of "fraud" or "collusion" is involved in this case.

"But it is a very different thing where a subject-matter of dispute, strictly and purely ecclesiastical in its character, a matter over which the civil courts *714 exercise no jurisdiction, in a matter which concerns theological controversy, church discipline, ecclesiastical government, or the conformity of the members of the church to the standard of morals required of them, becomes the subject of its action. It may be said here, also, that no jurisdiction has been conferred on the tribunal to try the particular case before it, or that, in its judgment, it exceeds the powers conferred upon it, or that the laws of the church do not authorize the particular form of proceeding adopted; and, in a 2383 sense often used in the courts, all of those may be said to be questions of jurisdiction. But it is easy to see that If the civil courts are to inquire into all these matters, the whole subject of the doctrinal theology, the usages and customs, the written laws, and fundamental organization of every religious denomination may, and must, be examined into with minuteness and care, for they would become, in almost every case, the criteria by which the validity of the ecclesiastical decree would be determined in the civil court. This principle would deprive these bodies of the right of construing their own church laws, would open the way to all the evils which we have depicted as attendant upon the doctrine of Lord Eldon, And would, in effect, transfer to the civil courts where property rights were concerned the decision of all ecclesiastical questions." 13 Wall., at 733-734, 20 L.Ed. 666. (Emphasis supplied.)

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

Indeed, it is the essence of religious faith that ecclesiastical decisions are reached and are to be accepted as matters of faith [FN8] whether or not rational or measurable by *715 objective criteria. Constitutional conces of due process, involving secular notions of "fundamental fairness" or impermissible objectives, are therefore hardly relevant to such matters of ecclesiastical cognizance.

FN8. Civil judges obviously do not have the competence of ecclesiastical tribunals in applying the "law" that governs ecclesiastical disputes, as Watson cogently remarked, 13 Wall., at 729, 20 L.Ed. 666:
"Nor do we see that justice would be likely to be promoted by submitting those decisions to review in the ordinary judicial tribunals. Each of these large and influential bodies (to mention no others, let reference be had to the Protestant Episcopal, the Methodist Episcopal, and the Presbyterian churches), has a body of constitutional and ecclesiastical law of its own, to be found in their written organic laws, their books of discipline, in their collections of precedents, in their usage and customs, which as to each constitute a system of ecclesiastical law and religious faith that tasks the ablest minds to become familiar with. It is not to be supposed that the judges of the civil courts can be as competent in the ecclesiastical law and religious faith of all these bodies as the ablest men in each are in reference to their own. It would therefore be an appeal from the more learned tribunal in the law which should decide the case, to one which is less so."

The constitutional evils that attend upon any "arbitrariness" exception in the sense applied by the Illinois Supreme Court to justify civil court review of ecclesiastical decisions of final church tribunals are manifest in the instant case. The Supreme Court of Illinois recognized that all parties agree that the Serbian Orthodox Church is a hierarchical church, and that the sole power to appoint and remove Bishops of the Church resides in its highest ranking organs, the Holy Assembly and the Holy Synod. [FN9] Indeed, final authority with respect to 2384 the *716 promulgation and interpretation of all maers of church discipline and internal organization rests with the Holy Assembly, and even the written constitution of the Mother Church expressly provides:

FN9. "Plaintiffs argue and defendant Bishop Dionisije does not dispute that the Serbian Orthodox Church is a hierarchical and episcopal church. Moreover, the parties agree that in cases involving hierarchical churches the decisions of the proper church tribunals on questions of discipline, faith or ecclesiastical rule, though affecting civil rights, are accepted as conclusive in disputes before the civil courts. . . . All parties maintain that the sole limitation on this rule, when civil courts may entertain the 'narrowest kind of review,' occurs when the decision of the church tribunal is claimed to have resulted from fraud, collusion or arbitrariness." 60 Ill.2d 477, 501, 328 N.E.2d 268, 280 (1975).
Respondents conceded as much at oral argument. Tr. of Oral Arg. 24-25, 39- 40. The hierarchical nature of the relationship between the American- Canadian Diocese and the Mother Church is confirmed by the fact that respondent corporations were > organized under the provisions of the Illinois Religious Corporations Act governing the incorporation of religious societies that are subordinate parts of larger church organizations. Similarly, the Diocese's subordinate nature was manifested in resolutions of the Diocese which Dionisije supported, and by Dionisije's submission of corporate bylaws, proposed constitutional changes, and final judgments of the Diocesan Ecclesiastical Court to the Holy Synod or Holy Assembly for approval. Moreover, when Dionisije was originally elevated to Bishop, he signed an Episcopal-Hierarchical Oath by which he swore that he would "always be obedient to the Most Holy Assembly" and:

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

>
> "Should I transgress against whatever I promised here, or should I be disobedient to the Divine Ordinances and Order of the Eastern Orthodox Church, or to the Most Holy Assembly (of Bishops) I, personally, will become a schismatic and should I make the Diocese entrusted to me in any manner to become disobedient to the most Holy Assembly (of Bishops), may I, in that case, be defrocked of my rank and divested of the (episcopal) authority without any excuse or gainsay, and (may I) become an alien to the heavenly gift which is being given unto me by the Holy Spirit through the Consecration of the Laying of Hands." App. 1088.
>
> Finally, the hierarchical relationship was confirmed by provisions in the constitutions of both the Diocese and the Mother Church.

"The Holy Assembly of Bishops, as the highest hierarchical body, is legislative authority in the matters of faith, officiation, church order (discipline) and internal organization of the Church, as well as the highest church juridical authority within its jurisdiction (Article 69 sec. 28)." Art. 57.

"All the decisions of the Holy Assembly of Bishops *717 and of the Holy Synod of Bishops of canonical d church nature, in regard to faith, officiation, church order and internal organization of the church, are valid and final." Art. 64.

"The Holy Assembly of Bishops, whose purpose is noted in Article 57 of this Constitution:

"9) interprets canonical-ecclesiastical rules, those which are general and obligatory, and particular ones, and publishes their collections;

"12) prescribes the ecclesiastical-judicial procedure for all Ecclesiastical Courts;

"26) settles disputes of jurisdiction between hierarchical and church-self governing organs;

"27) ADJUDGES:

"A) In first and in final instances:

"a) disagreements between bishops and the Holy Synod, and between the bishops and the Patriarch;

"b) canonical offenses of the Patriarch;

"B) In the second and final instance:

"All matters which the Holy Synod of Bishops judged in the first instance." Art. 69.

Nor is there any dispute that questions of church discipline and the composition of the church hierarchy are at the core of ecclesiastical concern; the bishop of a church is clearly one of the central figures in such a hierarchy and the embodiment of the church within his Diocese, and the Mother Church constitution states that "(h)e is, according to the church canonical regulations, chief representative and guiding leader of all church spiritual life and church order in the diocese." Art. 13.

[7][8] Yet having recognized that the Serbian Orthodox Church is hierarchical and that the decisions to suspend and *718 defrock respondent Dionisije were made by the religious bodies in whose sole discretion the authority to make thosecclesiastical decisions was vested, the Supreme Court of Illinois nevertheless invalidated the decision to defrock Dionisije on the ground that it was "arbitrary" because a "detailed review of the evidence discloses that the proceedings resulting in Bishop Dionisije's removal and defrockment were not in accordance with the prescribed procedure of the constitution and the penal code of the Serbian Orthodox Church." 60 Ill.2d, at 503, 328 N.E.2d at 281. Not only was this "detailed review" impermissible under the First and Fourteenth Amendments, but in reaching this conclusion, the court evaluated conflicting testimony concerning internal church procedures and rejected the interpretations of relevant procedural provisions by the Mother Church's highest tribunals. Id., at 492-500, 328 N.E.2d at 276-280. The court also failed to take cognizance of the fact that the church judicatories were also guided by other sources of law, such as canon law, which are admittedly not always consistent, and it rejected the testimony of 2385 petitioners' five expert witnesses [FN10] that church procedures were properly followed, denigrating the testimony of one witness as "contradictory" and discounting that of another on the ground that it was "premised upon an assumption which did not consider the penal code," even though there was some question whether that code even applied to discipline of Bishops. [FN11] The court *719 accepted, on the other hand, the testimony of respondents' sole expert witness that the Church's procedures had been contravened in various specifics. We need not, and under the First Amendment cannot, demonstrate the propriety or impropriety of each of Dionisije's procedural claims, but we can note that the state court even rejected petitioners' contention that Dionisije's failure to participate in the proceedings undermined all procedural contentions because Arts. 66 and 70 of the penal code specify that if a person charged with a violation fails to participate or answer the indictment, the allegations are admitted and due process will be concluded without his participation; the court merely asserted that "application of this provision . . . must be viewed from the perspective that Bishop Dionisije refused to participate because he maintained that the proceedings against him were in violation of the constitution and the penal code of the Serbian Orthodox Church." 60 Ill.2d, at 502, 328 N.E.2d, at 281. The court found no support in any church dogma for this judicial rewriting of church law, and compounded further the error of this intrusion into a religious thicket by declaring that although Dionisije had, even under the court's analysis, been properly suspended and replaced by Firmilian as temporary administrator, he had to be reinstated as Bishop because church law mandated a trial on ecclesiastical charges within one year of the indictment. Yet the only reason more time then that had expired was due to Dionisije's decision to resort to the civil courts for redress without attempting to vindicate himself by pursuing available *720 remedies within the church. Indeed, the Illinois Supreme Court overlooked the clear substantive canonical violations for which the Church disciplined Dionisije, violations based on Dionisije's conceded open defiance and rebellion against the church hierarchy immediately after the Holy Assembly's decision to suspend him (a decision which even the Illinois courts deemed to be proper) and Dionisije's decision to litigate the Mother Church's authority in the civil courts rather than participate in the disciplinary proceedings before the Holy Synod and the Holy Assembly. Instead, the Illinois Supreme Court would sanction this circumvention of the tribunals set up to resolve internal church disputes and has ordered the Mother Church to reinstate as Bishop one who espoused views regarded by the church hierarchy to be schismatic and which the proper church tribunals have already determined merit seversanctions. In short, under the guise of "minimal" review under the umbrella of "arbitrariness," the Illinois Supreme Court has unconstitutionally undertaken the resolution of quintessentially religious controversies whose resolution the First Amendment commits exclusively to the highest ecclesiastical tribunals of this hierarchical church. And although the Diocesan Bishop controls respondent Monastery of St. Sava and is the principal officer of respondent property-holding corporations, the civil courts must accept that consequence as the incidental effect of an ecclesiastical determination that is not subject 2386 to judicial abrogation, having been reached by the final church judicatory in which authority to make the decision resides.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

FN10. Three of these witnesses, including the author of the Church penal code, were members of the Holy Assembly of Bishops, one was the Secretary of the Holy Synod, and one was a recognized expert in the field of ecclesiastical law.

FN11. Indeed Dionisije, who does not dispute the power of the Holy Assembly to discipline him for the substantive charges in his indictment, nevertheless inconsistently insists that the Holy Assembly must be bound by procedures which were not extant when he executed his Episcopal- Hierarchical Oath, see n. 9, Supra, and which were promulgated within a year of the beginning of this controversy, although at the same time he agrees that the Holy Assembly could formalize and promulgate any procedures it desired for the conduct of disciplinary action.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

III

Similar considerations inform our resolution of the second question we must address the constitutionality of the Supreme Court of Illinois' holding that the Mother Church's reorganization of the American-Canadian Dioceseinto*721 three Dioceses was invalid because it was "'in clear and palpable excess of its own jurisdiction.' " Essentially, the court premised this determination on its view that the early history of the Diocese "manested a clear intention to retain independence and autonomy in its administrative affairs while at the same time becoming ecclesiastically and judicially an organic part of the Serbian Orthodox Church," and its interpretation of the constitution of the American-Canadian Diocese as confirming this intention. It also interpreted the constitution of the Serbian Orthodox Church, which was adopted after the Diocesan constitution, in a manner consistent with this conclusion. 60 Ill.2d, at 506-507, 328 N.E.2d, at 283-284.

[9] This conclusion was not, however, explicitly based on the "fraud, collusion, or arbitrariness" exception. Rather, the Illinois Supreme Court relied on purported "neutral principles" for resolving property disputes which would "not in any way entangle this court in the determination of theological or doctrinal matters." Id., at 505, 328 N.E.2d, at 282. Nevertheless the Supreme Court of Illinois substituted its interpretation of the Diocesan and Mother Church constitutions for that of the highest ecclesiastical tribunals in which church law vests authority to make that interpretation. This the First and Fourteenth Amendments forbid.

[10] We will not delve into the various church constitutional provisions relevant to this conclusion, for that would repeat the error of the Illinois Supreme Court. It suffices to note that the reorganization of the Diocese involves a matter of internal church government, an issue at the core of ecclesiastical affairs; Arts. 57 and 64 of the Mother Church constitution commit such questions of church polity to the final province of the Holy Assembly. Kedroff v. St. Nicholas Cathedral, 344 U.S. 94, 116, 73 S.Ct. 143, 154, 97 L.Ed. 120 (1952), stated that religious freedom encompasses the *722 "power (of religious bodies) to decide for themselves, free from state interference, matters of church government as well as those of faith and doctrine." The subordination of the Diocese to the Mother Church in such matters, which are not only "administrative" but also "hierarchical," [FN12] was provided, and the power of the Holy Assembly to reorganize the Diocese is expressed in the Mother Church constitution. [FN13] Contrary to the interpretation of the Illinois court, the church judicatories interpreted the provisions of the Diocesan constitution 2387 not to interdict or govern this action, but only to relate to the day-to-day administration of Diocesan property. [FN14] *723 The constitutional provisions of the American- Canadian Diocese were not so express that the civil courts could enforce them without engaging in a searching and therefore impermissible inquiry into church polity. See Md. & Va. Churches v. Sharpsburg Church, 396 U.S. at 368-370, 90 S.Ct., at 500-501 (Brennan, J., concurring). [FN15]

FN12. See Art. 12, quoted Supra at 2376. Various provisions of the Diocesan constitution reaffirm the subordinate status of the Diocese. E. g., Arts. 1, 2, 10, 12, 23, 53. Moreover, the Mother Church exerts almost complete authority over most Diocesan matters through the Diocesan Bishop, and there is no question that the Diocese has no voice whatever in the appointment of the Bishop.

FN13. See Art. 16, quoted Supra, at 2376. In rejecting the Holy Assembly's interpretation of this provision, the Illinois court treated the creation and reorganization of dioceses as purely administrative, without recognizing the central role of a diocese in the hierarchical structure of the Church. In particular, the Illinois court noted that Art. 14 of the Mother Church constitution states "(t)hese are the Dioceses in the Serbian Orthodox Church," and lists only the Dioceses within Yugoslavia. In Art. 15, on the other hand, were listed Dioceses "under the jurisdiction of the Serbian Orthodox Church in spiritual and hierarchical aspect," including the American-Canadian Diocese. Although nothing in the constitution restricted the Mother Church's power with respect to reorganizing the Dioceses listed in Art. 15, the Illinois courts simply asserted that Art. 16 was only intended to apply to Dioceses named in Art. 14. Yet even the Diocese itself recognized the Holy Assembly's powers when it sought approval for institution of the "Metropolia" system.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

FN14. The Illinois court, in refusing to follow the Holy Assembly's interpretation of these religious documents, relied primarily on Art. 3 of the Diocesan constitution, quoted Supra, at 2376. However, the Holy Assembly's construction of that provision limits its application to administration of property within the Diocese, and as not restricting alterations in the Diocese itself.

FN15. No claim is made that the "formal title" doctrine by which church property disputes may be decided in civil courts is to be applied in this case. See Md. & Va. Churches v. Sharpsburg Church, 396 U.S. at 370, 90 S.Ct., at 501 (Brennan, J., concurring). Indeed, the Mother Church decisions defrocking Dionisije and reorganizing the Diocese in no way change formal title to all Diocesan property, which continues to be in the respondent property-holding corporations in trust for all members of the reorganized Dioceses; only the identity of the trustees is altered by the Mother Church's ecclesiastical determinations.

The control of Diocesan property may be little affected by the changes; respondents' allegation that the reorganization was a fraudulent subterfuge to divert Diocesan property from its intended beneficiaries has been rejected by the Illinois courts. Formal title to the property remains in respondent property-holding corporations, to be held in trust for all members of the new Dioceses. The boundaries of the reorganized Dioceses generally conform to the episcopal districts which the American-Canadian Diocese had already employed for its internal government, and the appointed administrators of the new Dioceses were the same individuals nominated by Dionisije as assistant bishops to govern similar divisions under him. Indeed, even the Illinois courts' rationale that the reorganization would effectuate an abrogation of the Diocesan constitution has no support in the record, which establishes rather that the details of the reorganization and any decisions pertaining to a distribution of *724 the property among the three Dioceses were expressly left for the Diocesan National Assembly to determine. In response to inquiries from the Diocese, the Holy Assembly assured Bishop Firmilian:

"1. That all the rights of the former American-Canadian Diocese, as they relate to the autonomy in the administrative sense, remain unchanged. The only exception is the forming of three dioceses and

"2. That the Constitution of the former American-Canadian Diocese remains the same and that the Dioceses in America and Canada will not, in an administrative sense (the management (Or direction) of the properties) be managed (Or directed) in the same manner as those in Yugoslavia." App. 1446.

As a practical matter the effect of the reorganization is a tripling of the Diocesan representational strength in the Holy Assembly and a decentralization of hierarchical authority to permit closer attention to the needs of individual congregations within each of the new Dioceses, a result which Dionisije and Diocesan representatives had already concluded was necessary. Whether corporate bylaws or other documents governing the individual property-holding corporations may affect any desired disposition of the Diocesan property is a question not before us.

IV

[11] In short, the First and Fourteenth Amendments permit hierarchical religious organizations to establish their own rules and regulations for internal discipline and government, and to create tribunals for adjudicating disputes over these matters. When this choice is exercised and ecclesiastical tribunals are created to decide disputes over *725 the government and direction of subordinate bodies, the Constitution requires 2388 that civil courts accept their decisions as binding upon them.

Reversed.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

THE CHIEF JUSTICE concurs in the judgment.

Mr. Justice WHITE, concurring.

Major predicates for the Court's opinion are that the Serbian Orthodox Church is a hierarchical church and the American-Canadian Diocese, involved here, is part of that Church. These basic issues are for the courts' ultimate decision, and the fact that church authorities may render their opinions on them does not foreclose the courts from coming to their independent judgment. I do not understand the Court's opinion to suggest otherwise and join the views expressed therein.

Mr. Justice REHNQUIST, with whom Mr. Justice STEVENS joins, dissenting.

The Court's opinion, while long on the ecclesiastical history of the Serbian Orthodox Church, is somewhat short on the procedural history of this case. A casual reader of some of the passages in the Court's opinion could easily gain the impression that the State of Illinois had commenced a proceeding designed to brand Bishop Dionisije as a heretic, with appropriate pains and penalties. But the state trial judge in the Circuit Court of Lake County was not the Bishop of Beauvais, trying Joan of Arc for heresy; the jurisdiction of his court was invoked by petitioners themselves, who sought an injunction establishing their control over property of the American-Canadian Diocese of the church located in Lake County.

The jurisdiction of that court having been invoked *726 for such a purpose by both petitioners and respondents,ontesting claimants to Diocesan authority, it was entitled to ask if the real Bishop of the American-Canadian Diocese would please stand up. The protracted proceedings in the Illinois courts were devoted to the ascertainment of who that individual was, a question which the Illinois courts sought to answer by application of the canon law of the church, just as they would have attempted to decide a similar dispute among the members of any other voluntary association. The Illinois courts did not in the remotest sense inject their doctrinal preference into the dispute. They were forced to decide between two competing sets of claimants to church office in order that they might resolve a dispute over real property located within the State. Each of the claimants had requested them to decide the issue. Unless the First Amendment requires control of disputed church property to be awarded solely on the basis of ecclesiastical paper title, I can find no constitutional infirmity in the judgment of the Supreme Court of Illinois.

Unless civil courts are to be wholly divested of authority to resolve conflicting claims to real property owned by a hierarchical church, and such claims are to be resolved by brute force, civil courts must of necessity make some factual inquiry even under the rules the Court purports to apply in this case. We are told that "a civil court must accept the ecclesiastical decisions of church tribunals as it finds them," Ante, at 2382. But even this rule requires that proof be made as to what these decisions are, and if proofs on that issue conflict the civil court will inevitably have to choose one over the other. In so choosing, if the choice is to be a rational one, reasons must be adduced as to why one proffered decision is to prevail over another. Such reasons will *727 obviously be based on the canon law by which the disputants have agreed to bind themselves, but they must also represent a preference for one view of that law over another.

If civil courts, consistently with the First Amendment, may do that much, the question arises why they may not do what the Illinois courts did here regarding the defrockment of Bishop Dionisije, and conclude, on the basis of testimony from experts on the canon law at issue, that the decision of the religious tribunal involved 2389 was rendered in violation of its own stated rules of procedure. Suppose the Holy Assembly in this case had a membership of 100; its rules provided that a bishop could be defrocked by a majority vote of any session at which a quorum was present, and also provided that a quorum was not to be less than 40. Would a decision of the Holy Assembly attended by 30 members, 16 of whom voted to defrock Bishop Dionisije, be binding on civil courts in a dispute such as this? The hypothetical example is a clearer case than the one involved here, but the principle is the same. If the civil courts are to be bound by any sheet of parchment bearing the ecclesiastical seal and purporting to be a decree of a church court, they can easily be converted into handmaidens of arbitrary lawlessness.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

The cases upon which the Court relies are not a uniform line of authorities leading inexorably to reversal of the Illinois judgment. On the contrary, they embody two distinct doctrines which have quite separate origins. The first is a common-law doctrine regarding the appropriate roles for civil courts called upon to adjudicate church property disputes a doctrine which found general application in federal courts prior to Erie R. Co. v. Tompkins, 304 U.S. 64, 58 S.Ct. 817, 82 L.Ed. 1188 (1938), but which has never had any application to our review of a state-court *728 decision. The other is derived from the First Amendment to the Federal Constitution, and is of course applicable to thisase; it, however, lends no more support to the Court's decision than does the common-law doctrine.

The first decision of this Court regarding the role of civil courts in adjudicating church property disputes was Watson v. Jones, 13 Wall. 679, 20 L.Ed. 666 (1872). There the Court canvassed the American authorities and concluded that where people had chosen to organize themselves into voluntary religious associations, and had agreed to be bound by the decisions of the hierarchy created to govern such associations, the civil courts could not be availed of to hear appeals from otherwise final decisions of such hierarchical authorities. The bases from which this principle was derived clearly had no constitutional dimension; there was not the slightest suggestion that the First Amendment or any other provision of the Constitution was relevant to the decision in that case. Instead the Court was merely recognizing and applying general rules as to the limited role which civil courts must have in settling private intraorganizational disputes. While those rules, and the reasons behind them, may seem especially relevant to intrachurch disputes, adherence or nonadherence to such principles was certainly not thought to present any First Amendment issues. For as the Court in Watson observed:

> "Religious organizations come before us in the same attitude as other voluntary associations for benevolent or charitable purposes, and their rights of property, or of contract, are equally under the protection of the law, and the actions of their members subject to its restraints." Id., at 714, 20 L.Ed. 666.

The Court's equation of religious bodies with other private voluntary associations makes it clear that the principles *729 discussed in that case were not dependent upon those embodied in the First Amendment.

Less than a year later Watson's observations about the roles of civil courts were followed in Bouldin v. Alexander, 15 Wall. 131, 21 L.Ed. 69 (1872), where the Court held that the appointed trustees of the property of a congregational church > "cannot be removed from their trusteeship by a minority of the church society or meeting, without warning, and acting without charges, without citation or trial, and in direct contravention of the church rules." Id., at 140, 21 L.Ed. 69.

Again, there was nothing to suggest that this was based upon anything but commonsense rules for deciding an intraorganizational dispute: in an organization which has provided for majority rule through certain procedures, a minority's attempt to usurp that rule and those procedures need be given no effect by civil courts.

2390 In Gonzalez v. Archbishop, 280 U.S. 1, 50 S.Ct. 5, 74 L.Ed. 131 (1929), the Court again recognized the principles underlying Watson in upholding a decision of the Supreme Court of the Philippine Islands that the petitioner was not entitled to the chaplaincy which he claimed because the decision as to whether he possessed the necessary qualifications for that post was one committed to the appropriate church authorities. In dicta which the Court today conveniently truncates, Mr. Justice Brandeis observed:

> "In the absence of fraud, collusion, or arbitrariness, the decisions of the proper church tribunals on matters purely ecclesiastical, although affecting civil rights, are accepted in litigation before the secular courts as conclusive, Because the parties in interest made them so by contract or otherwise. Under like circumstances, effect is given in the courts to the determinations of the judicatory bodies established *730 by clubs and civil associations." Id., at 16-17, 50 S.Ct., at 7-8 (emphasis supplied; footnotes omitted).

Gonzalez clearly has no more relevance to the meaning of the First Amendment than do its two predecessors.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

The year 1952 was the first occasion on which this Court examined what limits the First and Fourteenth Amendments might place upon the ability of the States to entertain and resolve disputes over church property. In Kedroff v. St. Nicholas Cathedral, 344 U.S. 94, 73 S.Ct. 143, 97 L.Ed. 120 (1952), the Court reversed a decision of the New York Court of Appeals which had upheld a statute awarding control of the New York property of the Russian Orthodox Church to an American group seeking to terminate its relationships with the hierarchical Mother Church in Russia. The New York Legislature had concluded that the Communist government of Russia was actually in control of the Mother Church and that " 'the Moscow Patriarchate was no longer capable of functioning as a true religious body, but had become a tool of the Soviet Government primarily designed to implement its foreign policy,' " Id., at 107 n. 10, 73 S.Ct., at 150, quoting from 302 N.Y. 1, 32-33, 96 N.E.2d 56, 73-74 (1950), and the New York Court of Appeals sustained the statute against the constitutional attack. This Court, however, held the statute was a violation of the Free Exercise Clause, noting:

> "By fiat it displaces one church administrator with another. It passes the control of matters strictly ecclesiastical from one church authority to another. It thus intrudes for the benefit of one segment of a church the power of the state into the forbidden area of religious freedom contrary to the principles of the First Amendment." 344 U.S., at 119, 73 S.Ct., at 156.

On remand from the decision in Kedroff, the New York Court of Appeals again held that the American *731 group was entitled to the church property at issue. This ti relying upon the common law of the State, the Court of Appeals ruled that the Patriarch of Moscow was so dominated by the secular government of Russia that his appointee could not validly occupy the Church's property. On appeal, this Court reversed summarily, Kreshik v. St. Nicholas Cathedral, 363 U.S. 190, 80 S.Ct. 1037, 4 L.Ed.2d 1140 (1960), noting in its Per curiam opinion that > "the decision now under review rests on the same premises which were found to have underlain the enactment of the statute struck down in Kedroff." Id., at 191, 80 S.Ct., at 1038.

Nine years later, in Presbyterian Church v. Hull Church, 393 U.S. 440, 89 S.Ct. 601, 21 L.Ed.2d 658 (1969), the Court held that Georgia's common law, which implied a trust upon local church property for the benefit of the general church only on the condition that the general church adhere to its tenets of faith and practice existing at the time of affiliation by the local churches, was inconsistent with the First and Fourteenth Amendments and therefore could not be utilized to resolve church property disputes. The Georgia law was held impermissible because > 2391 "(u)nder (the Georgia) approach, property rights do not turn on a church decision as to church doctrine. The standard of departure-from-doctrine, though it calls for resolution of ecclesiastical questions, is a creation of state, not church, law." Id., at 451, 89 S.Ct., at 607.

Finally, in Md. & Va. Church v. Sharpsburg Church, 396 U.S. 367, 90 S.Ct. 499, 24 L.Ed.2d 582 (1970), the Court considered an appeal from a judgment of the Court of Appeals of Maryland upholding the dismissal of two actions brought by the Eldership seeking to prevent two of its local churches from withdrawing from that general religious association. The Eldership had also claimed the rights to select the *732 clergy and to control the property of the two local churches, but the Maryland courts, relying "upon provisions of state statutory law governing the holding of property by religious corporations, upon language in the deeds conveying the properties in question to the local church corporations, upon the terms of the charters of the corporations, and upon pvisions in the constitution of the General Eldership pertinent to the ownership and control of church property," Ibid. (emphasis supplied; footnote omitted), concluded that the Eldership had no right to invoke the State's authority to compel their local churches to remain within the fold or to succeed to control of their property. This Court dismissed the Eldership's contention that this judgment violated the First Amendment for want of a substantial federal question.

Despite the Court's failure to do so, it does not seem very difficult to derive the operative constitutional principle from this line of decisions. As should be clear from even this cursory study, Watson, Bouldin, and Gonzalez have no direct relevance [FN*] to the question before us today: *733 whether the First Amendment, as me applicable to the States by the Fourteenth, prohibits Illinois from permitting its civil courts to settle religious property disputes in the manner presented to us on this record. I think it equally clear that the only cases which Are relevant to that question Kedroff, Kreshik, Hull, and Md. & Va. Churches require that this question be answered in the negative. The rule of those cases, one which seems fairly implicit in the history of our First Amendment, is that the government may not displace the free religious choices of its citizens by placing its weight behind a particular religious belief, tenet, or sect. That is what New York attempted to do in Kedroff and Kreshik, albeit perhaps for nonreligious reasons, and the Court refused to permit it. In Hull, the State transgressed the line drawn by the First Amendment when it applied a state-created rule of law based upon "departure from doctrine" to prevent the national hierarchy of the Presbyterian Church in the United States from seeking to reclaim possession and use of two local churches. When the Georgia courts themselves required an examination into whether there had been a departure from the doctrine of the church in order to apply this state-created rule, they went beyond mere application of neutral principles of law to such a dispute.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

> FN* I am far from persuaded, moreover, that these decisions would require the result reached today even if we were reviewing a federal decision rather than that of a state court. As demonstrated in the text, Supra, these cases were applications of the general principle that persons who have contractually bound themselves to adhere to the decisions of the ruling hierarchy in a private association may not obtain relief from those decisions in a civil court. Here the underlying question addressed by the Illinois courts is the one assumed in Watson et al.: whether the members of the American-Canadian Diocese Had bound themselves to abide by the decisions of the Mother Church in the matters at issue here. The Illinois courts concluded that in regard to some of these matters they had agreed to be bound only if certain procedures were followed and that as to others there had been no agreement to submit to the authority of the Belgrade Patriarchate at all. If these conclusions are correct, and there is little to indicate they are not, then the "Watson rule" which the Court brandishes so freely today properly would have no application to these facts even if this case had arisen in federal court.

There is nothing in this record to indicate that the Illinois courts have been instruments 2392 of any such impermissible intrusion by the State on one side or the other of a religious dispute. There is nothing in the Supreme Court of Illinois' opinion indicating that it placed its thumb on the scale in favor of the respondents. Instead that opinion appears to be precisely what it purports *734 to be: an application of neutral principles of law consistent with the decisions of this Court. Indeed, petitioners make absolutely no claim to the contrary. They agree that the Illinois courts should have decided the issues which they presented; but they contend that in doing so those courts should have deferred entirely to the representations of the announced represeatives of the Mother Church. Such blind deference, however, is counseled neither by logic nor by the First Amendment. To make available the coercive powers of civil courts to rubber-stamp ecclesiastical decisions of hierarchical religious associations, when such deference is not accorded similar acts of secular voluntary associations, would, in avoiding the free exercise problems petitioners envision, itself create far more serious problems under the Establishment Clause.

In any event the Court's decision in Md. & Va. Churches demonstrates that petitioners' position in this regard is untenable. And as I read that decision, it seems to me to compel affirmance of at least that portion of the Illinois court's decision which denied petitioners' request for the aid of the civil courts in enforcing its desire to divide the American-Canadian Diocese. See Ante, at 2385-2387 (Part III). I see no distinction between the Illinois courts' refusal to place their weight behind the representatives of the Serbian Mother Church who sought to prevent portions of their American congregation from splitting off from that body and the Maryland courts' refusal to do the same thing for the Eldership of the Church of God. The Court today expressly eschews any explanation for its failure to follow Md. & Va. Churches, see

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

Ante, at 2386, contenting itself with this conclusory statement:

> "The constitutional provisions of the American-Canadian Diocese were not so express that the civil *735 courts could enforce them without engaging in a searching and therefore impermissible inquiry into crch polity." Ante, at 2386.

But comparison of the relevant discussions by the state tribunals regarding their consideration of church documents makes this claimed distinction seem quite specious. Compare Md. & Va. Churches v. Sharpsburg Church, 254 Md. 162, 170, 254 A.2d 162, 168 (1969), with Serbian Orthodox Diocese v. Ocokoljich, 72 Ill.App.2d 444, 458-462, 219 N.E.2d 343, 350-353 (1966).

In conclusion, while there may be a number of good arguments that civil courts of a State should, as a matter of the wisest use of their authority, avoid adjudicating religious disputes to the maximum extent possible, they obviously cannot avoid all such adjudications. And while common-law principles like those discussed in Watson, Bouldin, and Gonzalez may offer some sound principles for those occasions when such adjudications are required, they are certainly not rules to which state courts are required to adhere by virtue of the Fourteenth Amendment. The principles which that Amendment, through its incorporation of the First, Does enjoin upon the state courts that they remain neutral on matters of religious doctrine have not been transgressed by the Supreme Court of Illinois.

96 S.Ct. 2372, 426 U.S. 696, 49 L.Ed.2d 151

END OF DOCUMENT

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

BLUEBIRD (888) 477-0700 www.bluebirdonline.com
OFFICE SUPPLIES

EXHIBIT 4/8

83 S.Ct. 1790
10 L.Ed.2d 965, 9 Fair Empl.Prac.Cas. (BNA) 1152
(Cite as: 374 U.S. 398, 83 S.Ct. 1790)

Supreme Court of the United States

Adell H. SHERBERT, Appellant,
v.
Charlie V. VERNER et al., as members of South Carolina Employment Security Commission, and Spartan Mills.

No. 526.

Argued April 24, 1963.
Decided June 17, 1963.

Proceeding on claim for unemployment compensation benefits. From a judgment of the Common Pleas Court, Spartanburg County, South Carolina, the claimant appealed. The Supreme Court of South Carolina, 240 S.C. 286, 125 S.E.2d 737, affirmed, and certiorari was granted. The Supreme Court, Mr. Justice Brennan, held that South Carolina could not constitutionally apply eligibility provisions of unemployment compensation statute so as to deny benefits to claimant who had refused employment, because of her religious beliefs, which would require her to work on Saturday.

Reversed and remanded.

Mr. Justice Harlan and Mr. Justice White dissented.

West Headnotes

[1] Constitutional Law ⇐274(3.1)
92k274(3.1) Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 92k274(3), 92k274)

Door of Free Exercise Clause of the First Amendment stands tightly closed against any governmental regulation of religious beliefs as such. U.S.C.A.Const. Amends. 1, 14.

[2] Constitutional Law ⇐274(3.1)
92k274(3.1) Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 92k274(3), 92k4)

Government may neither compel affirmation of repugnant religious belief, nor penalize or discriminate against individuals or groups because they hold religious views abhorrent to authorities, nor employ taxing power to inhibit dissemination of particular religious views. U.S.C.A.Const. Amends. 1, 14.

[3] Constitutional Law ⇐274(3.1)
92k274(3.1) Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 92k274(3), 92k274)

Even when overt action is in accord with one's religious convictions, it is not totally free from legislative restrictions, but actions so regulated have invariably posed some substantial threat to public safety, peace or order. U.S.C.A.Const. Amends. 1, 14.

[4] Constitutional Law ⇐274(3.1)
92k274(3.1) Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 92k274(3), 92k274)

Conscientious objection, on grounds of religious belief, by unemployment compensation claimant to Saturday work constituted no conduct prompted by religious principles of kind within reach of state legislature. Code S.C. 1962, §§ 68-1 to 68-404, 68-113(3), 68-114(2), (3)(a, b); U.S.C.A.Const. Amends. 1, 14.

[5] Constitutional Law ⇐274(3.1)
92k274(3.1) Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 92k274(3))

Disqualification of unemployment compensation claimant from benefits because of her refusal, based on religious beliefs, to accept employment which would require her to work on Saturday, imposed a burden on the free exercise of her religion. Code S.C.1962, §§ 68-1 to 68-404, 68-113(3), 68-114(2), (3) (a, b); U.S.C.A.Const. Amends. 1, 14.

[6] Constitutional Law ⇐274(3.1)
92k274(3.1) Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 92k274(3), 92k274)

If purpose or effect of law is to impede observance of one or all religions or is to discriminate invidiously between religions, that law is constitutionally invalid even though burden may be characterized as being only indirect. U.S.C.A.Const. Amends. 1, 14.

[7] Constitutional Law ⇐274(3.1)

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

92k274(3.1) Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 92k274(3))

Liberties of religion and expression may be infringed by denial of or by placing conditions on benefit or privilege. U.S.C.A.Const. Amends. 1, 14.

[8] Constitutional Law ⇐274(3.1)
92k274(3.1) Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 92k274(3))

To condition availability of unemployment compensation benefits on claimant's willingness to violate cardinal principle of her religious faith by accepting Saturday work effectively penalizes free exercise of her constitutional liberties. U.S.C.A.Const. Amends. 1, 14.

[9] Constitutional Law ⇐274(3.1)
92k274(3.1) Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 92k274(3), 92k274)

No showing of mere rational relationship to some colorable state interest would justify substantial infringement of party's constitutional right to free exercise of religion. U.S.C.A.Const. Amends. 1, 14.

[10] Constitutional Law ⇐274(3.1)
92k274(3.1) Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 92k274(3), 92k274)

There was no showing of a compelling state interest enforced in the eligibility provisions of South Carolina unemployment compensation statutes which would justify denial of benefits to claimant who refused, because of religious beliefs to accept employment that would require her to work on Saturday. U.S.C.A.Const. Amends. 1, 14; Code S.C.1962, §§ 68-1 to 68-404, 68-113(3), 68-114(2), (3)(a, b).

[11] Constitutional Law ⇐274(3.1)
92k274(3.1) Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 92k274(3))

South Carolina could not constitutionally apply eligibility provisions of its unemployment compensation statutes so as to deny benefits to claimant who refused Saturday employment because of her religious beliefs. U.S.C.A.Const. Amends. 1, 14; Code S.C.1962, §§ 68-1 to 68-404, 68-113(3), 68-114(2), (3)(a, b).

[12] Constitutional Law ⇐274(3.1)
92k274(3.1) Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 92k274(3))

No state may exclude individual Catholics, Lutherans, Mohammedans, Baptists, Jews, Methodists, Non-believers, Presbyterians, or the members of any other faith, because of their faith, or lack of it, from receiving benefits of public welfare legislation. U.S.C.A.Const. Amends. 1, 14.
*1791 *398 William D. Donnelly, Bethesda, Md., for appellant.

399 Daniel R. McLeod, Columbia, S.C., for appellees.

Mr. Justice BRENNAN delivered the opinion of the Court.

Appellant, a member of the Seventh-day Adventist Church was discharged by her South Carolina employer because she would not work on Saturday, the Sabbath Day of her faith. [FN1] When she was unable to obtain other employment because from conscientious scruples she would not take Saturday work, [FN2] she filed a claim for 400 unemployment compensation benefits under the South Carolina Unemployment Compensation Act. [FN3] That *1792 law provides that, to be eligible for benefits, a claimant must be 'able to work and * * * is available for work'; and, further, 401 that a claimant is ineligible for benefits '(i)f * * * he has failed, without good cause * * * to accept available suitable work when offered him by the employment office or the employer * * *.' The appellee Employment Security Commission, in administrative proceedings under the statute, found that appellant's restriction upon her availability for Saturday work brought her within the provision disqualifying for benefits insured workers who fail, without good cause, to accept 'suitable work when offered * * * by the employment office or the employer * * *.' The Commission's finding was sustained by the Court of Common Pleas for Spartanburg County. That court's judgment was in turn affirmed by the South Carolina Supreme Court, which rejected appellant's contention that, as applied to her, the disqualifying provisions of the South Carolina statute abridged her right to the free exercise of her religion secured under the Free

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

Exercise Clause of the First Amendment through the Fourteenth Amendment. The State Supreme Court held specifically that appellant's ineligibility infringed no constitutional liberties because such a construction of the statute 'places no restriction upon the appellant's freedom of religion nor does it in any way prevent her in the exercise of her right and freedom to observe her religious beliefs in accordance with the dictates of her conscience.' 240 U.S. 286, 303--304, 125 S.E.2d 737, 746. [FN4] We noted probable 402 jurisdiction of appellant's appeal.371 *1793 U.S. 938, 83 S.Ct. 321, 9 L.Ed.2d 273. We reverse the judgment of the South Carolina Supreme Court and remand for further proceedings not inconsistent with this opinion.

FN1. Appellant became a member of the Seventh-day Adventist Church in 1957, at a time when her employer, a textile-mill operator, permitted her to work a five-day week. It was not until 1959 that the work week was changed to six days, including Saturday, for all three shifts in the employer's mill. No question has been raised in this case concerning the sincerity of appellant's religious beliefs. Nor is there any doubt that the prohibition against Saturday labor is a basic tenet of the Seventh-day Adventist creed, based upon that religion's interpretation of the Holy Bible.

FN2. After her discharge, appellant sought employment with three other mills in the Spartanburg area, but found no suitable five-day work available at any of the mills. In filing her claim with the Commission, she expressed a willingness to accept employment at other mills, or even in another industry, so long as Saturday work was not required. The record indicates that of the 150 or more Seventh-day Adventists in the Spartanburg area, only appellant and one other have been unable to find suitable non- Saturday employment.

FN3. The pertinent sections of the South Carolina Unemployment Compensation Act (S.C.Code, Tit. 68, ss 68--1 to 68--404) are as follows:
's 68--113. Conditions of eligibility for benefits.--An unemployed insured worker shall be eligible to receive benefits with respect to any week only if the Commission finds that: * * *
'(3) He is able to work and is available for work, but no claimant shall be considered available for work if engaged in self-employment of such nature as to return or promise remuneration in excess of the weekly benefit amounts he would have received if otherwise unemployed over such period of time. * * *
's 68--114. Disqualification for benefits.--Any insured worker shall be ineligible for benefits: * * *
'(2) Discharge for misconduct.--If the Commission finds that he has been discharged for misconduct connected with his most recent work prior to filing a request for determination of insured status or a request for initiation of a claim series within an established benefit year, with such ineligibility beginning with the effective date of such request, and continuing not less than five nor more than the next twenty-two consecutive weeks (in addition to the waiting period), as determined by the Commission in each case according to the seriousness of the misconduct * * * '(3) Failure to accept work.--(a) If the Commission finds that he has failed, without good cause, (i) either to apply for available suitable work, when so directed by the employment office or the Commission, (ii) to accept available suitable work when offered him by the employment office or the employer or (iii) to return to his customary self-employment (if any) when so directed by the Commission, such ineligibility shall continue for a period of five weeks (the week in which such failure occurred and the next four weeks in addition to the waiting period) as determined by the Commission according to the circumstances in each case * * *.
'(b) In determining whether or not any work is suitable for an individual, the Commission shall consider the degree of risk involved to his health, safety and morals, his physical fitness and prior training, his experience and prior earnings, his length of unemployment and prospects for securing local work in his customary occupation and the distance of the available work from his residence.'

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

FN4. It has been suggested that appellant is not within the class entitled to benefits under the South Carolina statute because her unemployment did not result from discharge or layoff due to lack of work. It is true that unavailability for work for some personal reasons not having to do with matters of conscience or religion has been held to be a basis of disqualification for benefits. See, e.g., Judson Mills v. South Carolina Unemployment Compensation Comm., 204 S.C. 37, 28 S.E.2d 535; Stone Mfg. Co. v. South Carolina Employment Security Comm., 219 S.C. 239, 64 S.E.2d 644. But appellant claims that the Free Exercise Clause prevents the State from basing the denial of benefits upon the 'personal reason' she gives for not working on Saturday. Where the consequence of disqualification so directly affects First Amendment rights, surely we should not conclude that every 'personal reason' is a basis for disqualification in the absence of explicit language to that effect in the statute or decisions of the South Carolina Supreme Court. Nothing we have found in the statute or in the cited decisions, cf. Lee v. Spartan Mills, 7 CCH Unemployment Ins.Rep.S.C. 8156 (C.P. 1944), and certainly nothing in the South Carolina Court's opinion in this case so construes the statute. Indeed, the contrary seems to have been that court's basic assumption, for if the eligibility provisions were thus limited, it would have been unnecessary for the court to have decided appellant's constitutional challenge to the application of the statute under the Free Exercise Clause.
Likewise, the decision of the State Supreme Court does not rest upon a finding that appellant was disqualified for benefits because she had been 'discharged for misconduct'--by reason of her Saturday absences--within the meaning of s 68--114(2). That ground was not adopted by the South Carolina Supreme Court, and the appellees do not urge in this Court that the disqualification rests upon that ground.

I.

[1][2][3] The door of the Free Exercise Clause stands tightly closed against any governmental regulation of religious beliefs as such, Cantwell v. Connecticut, 310 U.S. 296, 303, 60 S.Ct. 900, 903, 84 L.Ed. 1213. Government may neither compel affirmation of a repugnant belief, Torcaso v. Watkins, 367 U.S. 488, 81 S.Ct. 1680, 6 L.Ed.2d 982; nor penalize or discriminate against individuals or groups because they hold religious views abhorrent to the authorities, Fowler v. Rhode Island, 345 U.S. 67, 73 S.Ct. 526, 97 L.Ed. 828; nor employ the taxing power to inhibit the dissemination of particular religious views, Murdock v. Pennsylvania, 319 U.S. 105, 63 S.Ct. 870, 87 L.Ed. 1292; Follett v. McCormick, 321 U.S. 573, 64 S.Ct. 717, 88 L.Ed. 938; cf. Grosjean v. American Press Co., 297 U.S. 233, 56 S.Ct. 444, 80 L.Ed. 660. On the other hand, 403 the Court has rejected challenges under the Free Exercise Clause to governmental regulation of certain overt acts prompted by religious beliefs or principles, for 'even when the action is in accord with one's religious convictions, (it) is not totally free from legislative restrictions.' Braunfeld v. Brown, 366 U.S. 599, 603, 81 S.Ct. 1144, 1146, 6 L.Ed.2d 563. The conduct or actions so regulated have invariably posed some substantial threat to public safety, peace or order. See, e.g., Reynolds v. United States, 98 U.S. 145, 25 L.Ed. 244; Jacobson v. Massachusetts, 197 U.S. 11, 25 S.Ct. 358, 49 L.Ed. 643; Prince v. Massachusetts, 321 U.S. 158, 64 S.Ct. 438, 88 L.Ed. 645; Cleveland v. United States, 329 U.S. 14, 67 S.Ct. 13, 91 L.Ed. 12.

[4] Plainly enough, appellant's conscientious objection to Saturday work constitutes no conduct prompted by religious principles of a kind within the reach of state legislation. If, therefore. the decision of the South Carolina Supreme Court is to withstand appellant's constitutional challenge, it must be either because her disqualification as a beneficiary represents no infringement by the State of her constitutional rights of free exercise, or because any incidental burden on the free exercise of appellant's religion may be justified by a 'compelling state interest in the regulation of a subject within the State's constitutional power to regulate * * *.' NAACP v. Button, 371 U.S. 415, 438, 83 S.Ct. 328, 341, 9 L.Ed.2d 405.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

II.

[5][6] We turn first to the question whether the disqualification for benefits 1794 imposes any burden on the free exercise of appellant's religion. We think it is clear that it does. In a sense the consequences of such a disqualification to religious principles and practices may be only an indirect result of welfare legislation within the State's general competence to enact; it is true that no criminal sanctions directly compel appellant to work a six-day week. But this is only the beginning, not the end, of our *404 inquiry. [FN5] For '(i)f the purpose or effect of a law is to impede the observance of one or all religions or is to discriminate invidiously between religions, that law is constitutionally invalid even though the burden may be characterized as being only indirect.' Braunfeld v. Brown, supra, 366 U.S., at 607, 81 S.Ct., at 1148. Here not only is it apparent that appellant's declared ineligibility for benefits derives solely from the practice of her religion, but the pressure upon her to forego that practice is unmistakable. The ruling forces her to choose between following the precepts of her religion and forfeiting benefits, on the one hand, and abandoning one of the precepts of her religion in order to accept work, on the other hand. Governmental imposition of such a choice puts the same kind of burden upon the free exercise of religion as would a fine imposed against appellant for her Saturday worship.

FN5. In a closely analogous context, this Court said:
'* * * the fact that no direct restraint or punishment is imposed upon speech or assembly does not determine the free speech question. Under some circumstances, indirect 'discouragements' undoubtedly have the same coercive effect upon the exercise of First Amendment rights as imprisonment, fines, injunctions or taxes. A requirement that adherents of particular religious faiths or political parties wear identifying armbands, for example, is obviously of this nature.' American Communications Ass'n v. Douds, 339 U.S. 382, 402, 70 S.Ct. 674, 686, 94 L.Ed. 925. Cf. Smith v. California, 361 U.S. 147, 153--155, 80 S.Ct. 215, 218--219, 4 L.Ed.2d 205.

[7][8] Nor may the South Carolina court's construction of the statute be saved from constitutional infirmity on the ground that unemployment compensation benefits are not appellant's 'right' but merely a 'privilege.' It is too late in the day to doubt that the liberties of religion and expression may be infringed by the denial of or placing of conditions upon a benefit or privilege. [FN6] *405American Communications Ass'n v. Douds, 339 U.S. 382, 390, 70 S.Ct. 674, 679, 94 L.Ed. 925; Wieman v. Updegraff, 344 U.S. 183, 191--192, 73 S.Ct. 215, 218--219, 97 L.Ed. 216; Hannegan v. Esquire, Inc., 327 U.S. 146, 155--156, 66 S.Ct. 456, 461, 90 L.Ed. 586. For example, in Flemming v. Nestor, 363 U.S. 603, 611, 80 S.Ct. 1367, 1373, 4 L.Ed.2d 1435, the Court recognized with respect to Federal Social Security benefits that '(t)he interest of a covered employee under the Act is of sufficient substance to fall within the protection from arbitrary governmental 1795 action afforded by the Due Process Clause.' In Speiser v. Randall, 357 U.S. 513, 78 S.Ct. 1332, 2 L.Ed.2d 1460, we emphasized that conditions upon public benefits cannot be sustained if they so operate, whatever their purpose, as to inhibit or deter the exercise of First Amendment freedoms. We there struck down a condition which limited the availability of a tax exemption to those members of the exempted class who affirmed their loyalty to the state government granting the exemption. While the State was surely under no obligation to afford such an exemption, we held that the imposition of such a condition upon even a gratuitous benefit inevitably deterred or discouraged the exercise of First Amendment rights of expression and thereby threatened to 'produce a result which the State could not command directly.' *406357 U.S., at 526, 78 S.Ct., at 1342. 'To deny an exemption to claimants who engage in certain forms of speech is in effect to penalize them for such speech.' Id., 357 U.S., at 518, 78 S.Ct., at 1338. Likewise, to condition the availability of benefits upon this appellant's willingness to violate a cardinal principle of her religious faith effectively penalizes the free exercise of her constitutional liberties.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

FN6. See for examples of conditions and qualifications upon governmental privileges and benefits which have been invalidated because of their tendency to inhibit constitutionally protected activity, Steinberg v. United States, 163 F.Supp. 590, 143 Ct.Cl. 1; Syrek v. California Unemployment Ins. Board, 54 Cal.2d 519, 7 Cal.Rptr. 97, 354 P.2d 625; Fino v. Maryland Employment Security Board, 218 Md. 504, 147 A.2d 738; Chicago Housing Authority v. Blackman, 4 Ill.2d 319, 122 N.E.2d 522; Housing Authority of Los Angeles v. Cordova, 130 Cal.App.2d Supp. 883, 279 P.2d 215; Lawson v. Housing Authority of Milwaukee, 270 Wis. 269, 70 N.W.2d 605; Danskin v. San Diego Unified School District, 28 Cal.2d 536, 171 P.2d 885; American Civil Liberties Union v. Board of Education, 55 Cal.2d 167, 10 Cal.Rptr. 647, 359 P.2d 45; cf. City of Baltimore v. A. S. Abell Co., 218 Md. 273, 145 A.2d 111. See also Willcox, Invasions of the First Amendment Through Conditioned Public Spending, 41 Cornell L.Q. 12 (1955); Emerson, Toward a General Theory of the First Amendment, 72 Yale L.J. 877, 942--943 (1963); 36 N.Y.U.L.Rev. 1052 (1961); 9 Kan.L.Rev. 346 (1961); Note, Unconstitutional Conditions, 73 Harv.L.Rev. 1595, 1599--1602 (1960).

Significantly South Carolina expressly saves the Sunday worshipper from having to make the kind of choice which we here hold infringes the Sabbatarian's religious liberty. When in times of 'national emergency' the textile plants are authorized by the State Commissioner of Labor to operate on Sunday, 'no employee shall be required to work on Sunday * * * who is conscientiously opposed to Sunday work; and if any employee should refuse to work on Sunday on account of conscientious * * * objections he or she shall not jeopardize his or her seniority by such refusal or be discriminated against in any other manner.' S.C.Code, s 64--4. No question of the disqualification of a Sunday worshipper for benefits is likely to arise, since we cannot suppose that an employer will discharge him in violation of this statute. The unconstitutionality of the disqualification of the Sabbatarian is thus compounded by the religious discrimination which South Carolina's general statutory scheme necessarily effects.

III.

[9][10] We must next consider whether some compelling state interest enforced in the eligibility provisions of the South Carolina statute justifies the substantial infringement of appellant's First Amendment right. It is basic that no showing merely of a rational relationship to some colorable state interest would suffice; in this highly sensitive constitutional area, '(o)nly the gravest abuses, endangering paramount interest, give occasion for permissible limitation,' Thomas v. Collins, 323 U.S. 516, 530, 65 S.Ct. 315, 323, 89 L.Ed. 430. 407 No such abuse or danger has been advanced in the present case. The appellees suggest no more than a possibility that the filing of fraudulent claims by unscrupulous claimants feigning religious objections to Saturday work might not only dilute the unemployment compensation fund but also hinder the scheduling by employers of necessary Saturday work. But that possibility is not apposite here because no such objection appears to have been made before the South Carolina Supreme Court, and we are unwilling to assess the importance of an asserted state interest without the views of the state court. Nor, if the contention had been made below, would the record appear to sustain it; there is no proof whatever to warrant such fears of malingering or deceit as those which the respondents now advance. Even if consideration of such evidence is not foreclosed by the prohibition against judicial inquiry into the truth or falsity of religious beliefs, United States v. Ballard, 322 U.S. 78, 64 S.Ct. 882, 88 L.Ed. 1148 --a question as to which we intimate no view since it is not before us--it is highly *1796 doubtful whether such evidence would be sufficient to warrant a substantial infringement of religious liberties. For even if the possibility of spurious claims did threaten to dilute the fund and disrupt the scheduling of work, it would plainly be incumbent upon the appellees to demonstrate that no alternative forms of regulation would combat such abuses without infringing First Amendment rights. [FN7] Cf. *408Shelton v. Tucker, 364 U.S. 479, 487--490, 81 S.Ct. 247, 251--253, 5 L.Ed.2d 231; Talley v. California, 362 U.S. 60, 64, 80 S.Ct. 536, 538, 4 L.Ed.2d 559; Schneider v. State of New Jersey, 308 U.S. 147, 161, 60 S.Ct. 146, 150, 84 L.Ed. 155; Martin v. Struthers, 319 U.S. 141, 144--149, 63 S.Ct. 862, 863--866, 87 L.Ed. 1313.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

FN7. We note that before the instant decision, state supreme courts had, without exception, granted benefits to persons who were physically available for work but unable to find suitable employment solely because of a religious prohibition against Saturday work. E.g., In re Miller, 243 N.C. 509, 91 S.E.2d 241; Swenson v. Michigan Employment Security Comm., 340 Mich. 430, 65 N.W.2d 709; Tary v. Board of Review, 161 Ohio St. 251, 119 N.E.2d 56. Cf. Kut v. Albers Super Markets, Inc., 146 Ohio St. 522, 66 N.E.2d 643, appeal dismissed sub nom. Kut v. Bureau of Unemployment Compensation, 329 U.S. 669, 67 S.Ct. 86, 91 L.Ed. 590. One author has observed, 'the law was settled that conscientious objections to work on the Sabbath made such work unsuitable and that such objectors were nevertheless available for work. * * * A contrary opinion would make the unemployment compensation law unconstitutional, as a violation of freedom of religion. Religious convictions, strongly held, are so impelling as to constitute good cause for refusal. Since availability refers to suitable work, religious observers were not unavailable because they excluded Sabbath work.' Altman, Availability for Work: A Study in Unemployment Compensation (1950), 187. See also Sanders, Disqualification for Unemployment Insurance, 8 Vand.L.Rev. 307, 327--328 (1955); 34 N.C.L.Rev. 591 (1956); cf. Freeman, Able To Work and Available for Work, 55 Yale L.J. 123, 131 (1945). Of the 47 States which have eligibility provisions similar to those of the South Carolina statute, only 28 appear to have given administrative rulings concerning the eligibility of persons whose religious convictions prevented them from accepting available work. Twenty-two of those States have held such persons entitled to benefits, although apparently only one such decision rests exclusively upon the federal constitutional ground which constitutes the basis of our decision. See 111 U. of Pa.L.Rev. 253, and n. 3 (1962); 34 N.C.L.Rev. 591, 602, n. 60 (1956).

In these respects, then, the state interest asserted in the present case is wholly dissimilar to the interests which were found to justify the less direct burden upon religious practices in Braunfeld v. Brown, supra. The Court recognized that the Sunday closing law which that decision sustained undoubtedly served 'to make the practice of (the Orthodox Jewish merchants') religious beliefs more expensive,' 366 U.S., at 605, 81 S.Ct., at 1147. But the statute was nevertheless saved by a countervailing factor which finds no equivalent in the instant case--a strong state interest in providing one uniform day of rest for all workers. That secular objective could be achieved, the Court found, only by declaring Sunday to be that day of rest. Requiring exemptions for Sabbatarians, while theoretically possible, appeared to present an administrative *409 problem of such magnitude, or to afford the exempted class so great a competitive advantage, that such a requirement would have rendered the entire statutory scheme unworkable. [FN8] In the present case no such justifications underlie the determination of the state court that appellant's religion makes her ineligible to receive benefits. [FN9]

FN8. See Note, State Sunday Laws and the Religious Guarantees of the Federal Constitution, 73 Harv.L.Rev. 729, 741--745 (1960).

FN9. These considerations also distinguish the quite different case of Flemming v. Nestor, supra, upon which appellees rely. In that case the Court found that the compelling federal interests which underlay the decision of Congress to impose such a disqualification justified whatever effect the denial of social security benefits may have had upon the disqualified class. See 363 U.S., at 612, 80 S.Ct., at 1373. And compare Torcaso v. Watkins, supra, in which an undoubted state interest in ensuring the veracity and trustworthiness of Notaries Public was held insufficient to justify the substantial infringement upon the religious freedom of applicants for that position which resulted from a required oath of belief of God. See 74 Harv.L.Rev. 611, 612--613 (1961); 109 U. of Pa.L.Rev. 611, 614--616 (1961).

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

1797 IV.

[11][12] In holding as we do, plainly we are not fostering the 'establishment' of the Seventh-day Adventist religion in South Carolina, for the extension of unemployment benefits to Sabbatarians in common with Sunday worshippers reflects nothing more than the governmental obligation of neutrality in the face of religious differences, and does not represent that involvement of religious with secular institutions which it is the object of the Establishment Clause to forestall. See School District of Abington Township v. Schempp, 374 U.S. 203, 83 S.Ct. 1560. Nor does the recognition of the appellant's right to unemployment benefits under the state statute serve to abridge any other person's religious liberties. Nor do we, by our decision today, declare the existence of a constitutional right to unemployment benefits on the part *410 of all persons whose religious convictions are the cause of their unemployment. This is not a case in which an employee's religious convictions serve to make him a nonproductive member of society. See note 2, supra. Finally, nothing we say today constrains the States to adopt any particular form or scheme of unemployment compensation. Our holding today is only that South Carolina may not constitutionally apply the eligibility provisions so as to constrain a worker to abandon his religious convictions respecting the day of rest. This holding but reaffirms a principle that we announced a decade and a half ago, namely that no State may 'exclude individual Catholics, Lutherans, Mohammedans, Baptists, Jews, Methodists, Non-believers, Presbyterians, or the members of any other faith, because of their faith, or lack of it, from receiving the benefits of public welfare legislation.' Everson v. Board of Education, 330 U.S. 1, 16, 67 S.Ct. 504, 512, 91 L.Ed. 711.

In view of the result we have reached under the First and Fourteenth Amendments' guarantee of free exercise of religion, we have no occasion to consider appellant's claim that the denial of benefits also deprived her of the equal protection of the laws in violation of the Fourteenth Amendment.

The judgment of the South Carolina Supreme Court is reversed and the case is remanded for further proceedings not inconsistent with this opinion. It is so ordered.

Reversed and remanded.

Mr. Justice DOUGLAS, concurring.

The case we have for decision seems to me to be of small dimensions, though profoundly important. The question is whether the South Carolina law which denies unemployment compensation to a Seventh-day Adventist, who, because of her religion, has declined to work on her Sabbath, is a law 'prohibiting the free exercise' of religion as those words are used in the First Amendment. *411 It seems obvious to me that this law does run afoul of that clause.

Religious scruples of Moslems require them to attend a mosque on Friday and to pray five times daily. [FN1] Religious scruples of a Sikh require him to carry a regular or a symbolic sword. Rex v. Singh, 39 A.I.R. 53 (Allahabad, 1952). Religious scruples of a Jehovah's Witness teach him to be a colporteur, going from 1798 door to door, from town to town, distributing his religious pamphlets. See Murdock v. Pennsylvania, 319 U.S. 105, 63 S.Ct. 870, 87 L.Ed. 1292. Religious scruples of a Quaker compel him to refrain from swearing and to affirm instead. See King v. Fearson, Fed.Cas. No. 7,790, 14 Fed.Cas. 520; 1 U.S.C. s 1; Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, Rule 43(d); United States v. Schwimmer, 279 U.S. 644, 655, 49 S.Ct. 448, 451, 73 L.Ed. 889 (dissenting opinion). Religious scruples of a Buddhist may require him to refrain from partaking of any flesh, even of fish. [FN2]

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

FN1. See Shorter Encyclopaedia of Islam (Cornell Press, 1953), 336, 493.

FN2. See Narasu, The Essence of Buddhism (3d ed. 1948), 52--55; 6 Encyclopaedia of Religion and Ethics (1913), 63--65.

The examples could be multiplied, including those of the Seventh-day Adventist whose Sabbath is Saturday and who is advised not to eat some meats. [FN3]

FN3. See Seventh-day Adventists Answer Questions on Doctrine (1957), 149--153, 622--624; Mitchell, Seventh-Day Adventists (1st ed. 1958), 127, 176--178.

These suffice, however, to show that many people hold beliefs alien to the majority of our society--beliefs that are protected by the First Amendment but which could easily be trod upon under the guise of 'police' or 'health' regulations reflecting the majority's views.

Some have thought that a majority of a community can, through state action, compel a minority to observe their particular religious scruples so long as the majority's rule can be said to perform some valid secular function. 412 That was the essence of the Court's decision in the Sunday Blue Law Cases (Gallagher v. Crown Kosher Market, 366 U.S. 617, 81 S.Ct. 1122, 6 L.Ed.2d 536; Braunfeld v. Brown, 366 U.S. 599, 81 S.Ct. 1144, 6 L.Ed.2d 563; McGowan v. Maryland, 366 U.S. 420, 81 S.Ct. 1101, 6 L.Ed.2d 393), a ruling from which I then dissented (McGowan v. Maryland, supra, 366 U.S. pp. 575--576, 81 S.Ct. pp. 1225--1226) and still dissent. See Arlan's Dept. Store v. Kentucky, 371 U.S. 218, 83 S.Ct. 277, 9 L.Ed.2d 264.

That ruling of the Court travels part of the distance that South Carolina asks us to go now. She asks us to hold that when it comes to a day of rest a Sabbatarian must conform with the scruples of the majority in order to obtain unemployment benefits.

The result turns not on the degree of injury, which may indeed be nonexistent by ordinary standards. The harm is the interference with the individual's scruples or conscience--an important area of privacy which the First Amendment fences off from government. The interference here is as plain as it is in Soviet Russia, where a churchgoer is given a second-class citizenship, resulting in harm though perhaps not in measurable damages.

This case is resolvable not in terms of what an individual can demand of government, but solely in terms of what government may not do to an individual in violation of his religious scruples. The fact that government cannot exact from me a surrender of one iota of my religious scruples does not, of course, mean that I can demand of government a sum of money, the better to exercise them. For the Free Exercise Clause is written in terms of what the government cannot do to the individual, not in terms of what the individual can exact from the government.

Those considerations, however, are not relevant here. If appellant is otherwise qualified for unemployment benefits, payments will be made to her not as a Seventh-day Adventist, but as an unemployed worker. Conceivably these payments will indirectly benefit her church, 413 but no more so than does the salary of any public employee. Thus, this case does not involve the problems of direct or indirect state assistance to a religious *1799 organization--matters relevant to the Establishment Clause, not in issue here.

Mr. Justice STEWART, concurring in the result.

Although fully agreeing with the result which the Court reaches in this case, I cannot join the Court's opinion. This case presents a double-barreled dilemma, which in all candor I think the Court's opinion has not succeeded in papering over. The dilemma ought to be resolved.

I.

Twenty-three years ago in Cantwell v. Connecticut, 310 U.S. 296, 303, 60 S.Ct. 900, 903, 84 L.Ed. 1213, the Court said that both the Establishment Clause and the Free Exercise Clause of the First Amendment were made wholly applicable to the States by the Fourteenth Amendment. In the intervening years several cases involving claims of state abridgment of individual religious freedom have been decided here--most recently Braunfeld v. Brown, 366 U.S. 599, 81 S.Ct. 1144, 6 L.Ed.2d 563, and Torcaso v. Watkins, 367 U.S. 488, 81 S.Ct. 1680, 6 L.Ed.2d 982. During the same period 'cases dealing with the specific problems arising under the 'Establishment' Clause which have reached this Court are few in number.' [FN1] The most recent are last Term's Engel v. Vitale, 370 U.S. 421, 82 S.Ct. 1261, 8 L.Ed.2d 601, and this Term's Schempp and Murray cases, 374 U.S. 203, 83 S.Ct. 1560.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

FN1. McGowan v. Maryland, 366 U.S. 420, 442, 81 S.Ct. 1101, 1114, 6 L.Ed.2d 393.

I am convinced that no liberty is more essential to the continued vitality of the free society which our Constitution guarantees than is the religious liberty protected by the Free Exercise Clause explicit in the First Amendment and imbedded in the Fourteenth. And I regret that on 414 occasion, and specifically in Braunfeld v. Brown, supra, the Court has shown what has seemed to me a distressing insensitivity to the appropriate demands of this constitutional guarantee. By contrast I think that the Court's approach to the Establishment Clause has on occasion, and specifically in Engel, Schempp and Murray, been not only insensitive, but positively wooden, and that the Court has accorded to the Establishment Clause a meaning which neither the words, the history, nor the intention of the authors of that specific constitutional provision even remotely suggests.

But my views as to the correctness of the Court's decisions in these cases are beside the point here. The point is that the decisions are on the books. And the result is that there are many situations where legitimate claims under the Free Exercise Clause will run into head-on collision with the Court's insensitive and sterile construction of the Establishment Clause. [FN2] The controversy now before us is clearly such a case.

FN2. The obvious potentiality of such collision has been studiously ignored by the Court, but has not escaped the perception of commentators. See, e.g., Katz, Freedom of Religion and State Neutrality, 20 U. of Chi.L.Rev. 426, 428 (1953); Kauper, Prayer, Public Schools and the Supreme Court, 61 Mich.L.Rev. 1031, 1053 (1963).

Because the appellant refuses to accept available jobs which would require her to work on Saturdays, South Carolina has declined to pay unemployment compensation benefits to her. Her refusal to work on Saturdays is based on the tenets of her religious faith. The Court says that South Carolina cannot under these circumstances declare her to be not 'available for work' within the meaning of its statute because to do so would violate her constitutional right to the free exercise of her religion.

Yet what this Court has said about the Establishment Clause must inevitably lead to a diametrically opposite result. If the appellant's refusal to work on Saturdays 415 were based on indolence, or on a compulsive desire to watch the Saturday television programs, no one would say *1800 that South Carolina could not hold that she was not 'available for work' within the meaning of its statute. That being so, the Establishment Clause as construed by this Court not only permits but affirmatively requires South Carolina equally to deny the appellant's claim for unemployment compensation when her refusal to work on Saturdays is based upon her religious creed. For, as said in Everson v. Board of Education, 330 U.S. 1, 11, 67 S.Ct. 504, 509, 91 L.Ed. 711, the Establishment Clause bespeaks 'a government * * * stripped of all power * * * to support, or otherwise to assist any or all religions * * *,' and no State 'can pass laws which aid one religion * * *.' Id., 330 U.S., at 15, 67 S.Ct., at 511. In Mr. Justice Rutledge's words, adopted by the Court today in Schempp, 374 U.S., p. 217, 83 S.Ct., p. 1568, the Establishment Clause forbids 'every form of public aid or support for religion.' 330 U.S., at 32, 67 S.Ct., at 519. In the words of the Court in Engel v. Vitale, 370 U.S., at 431, 82 S.Ct., at 1267, reaffirmed today in the Schempp case, 374 U.S., p. 221, 83 S.Ct., p. 1571, the Establishment Clause forbids the 'financial support of government' to be 'placed behind a particular religious belief.'

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

To require South Carolina to so administer its laws as to pay public money to the appellant under the circumstances of this case is thus clearly to require the State to violate the Establishment Clause as construed by this Court. This poses no problem for me, because I think the Court's mechanistic concept of the Establishment Clause is historically unsound and constitutionally wrong. I think the process of constitutional decision in the area of the relationships between government and religion demands considerably more than the invocation of broad-brushed rhetoric of the kind I have quoted. And I think that the guarantee of religious liberty embodied in the Free Exercise Clause affirmatively requires government to create an atmosphere of hospitality and accommodation 416 to individual belief or disbelief. In short, I think our Constitution commands the positive protection by government of religious freedom--not only for a minority, however small--not only for the majority, however large--but for each of us.

South Carolina would deny unemployment benefits to a mother unavailable for work on Saturdays because she was unable to get a babysitter. [FN3] Thus, we do not have before us a situation where a State provides unemployment compensation generally, and singles out for disqualification only those persons who are unavailable for work on religious grounds. This is not, in short, a scheme which operates so as to discriminate against religion as such. But the Court nevertheless holds that the State must prefer a religious over a secular ground for being unavailable for work--that state financial support of the appellant's religion is constitutionally required to carry out 'the governmental obligation of neutrality in the face of religious differences * * *.'

> FN3. See Judson Mills v. South Carolina Unemployment Compensation Comm., 204 S.C. 37, 28 S.E.2d 535; Hartsville Cotton Mill v. South Carolina Employment Security Comm., 224 S.C. 407, 79 S.E.2d 381.

Yet in cases decided under the Establishment Clause the Court has decreed otherwise. It has decreed that government must blind itself to the differing religious beliefs and traditions of the people. With all respect, I think it is the Court's duty to face up to the dilemma posed by the conflict between the Free Exercise Clause of the Constitution and the Establishment Clause as interpreted by the Court. It is a duty, I submit, which we owe to the people, the States, and the Nation, and a duty which we owe to ourselves. For so long as the resounding but fallacious fundamentalist rhetoric of some of our Establishment Clause opinions remains on our books, to be disregarded at will as in the present *1801 case, 417 or to be undiscriminatingly invoked as in the Schempp case, 374 U.S. 203, 83 S.Ct. 1560, so long will the possibility of consistent and perceptive decision in this most difficult and delicate area of constitutional law be impeded and impaired. And so long, I fear, will the guarantee of true religious freedom in our pluralistic society be uncertain and insecure.

II.

My second difference with the Court's opinion is that I cannot agree that to day's decision can stand consistently with Braunfeld v. Brown, supra. The Court says that there was a 'less direct burden upon religious practices' in that case than in this. With all respect, I think the Court is mistaken, simply as a matter of fact. The Braunfeld case involved a state criminal statute. The undisputed effect of that statute, as pointed out by Mr. Justice BRENNAN in his dissenting opinion in that case, was that "Plaintiff, Abraham Braunfeld, will be unable to continue in his business if he may not stay open on Sunday and he will thereby lose his capital investment.' In other words, the issue in this case--and we do not understand either appellees or the Court to contend otherwise--is whether a State may put an individual to a choice between his business and his religion.' 366 U.S., at 611, 81 S.Ct., at 1150.

The impact upon the appellant's religious freedom in the present case is considerably less onerous. We deal here not with a criminal statute, but with the particularized administration of South Carolina's Unemployment Compensation Act. Even upon the unlikely assumption that the appellant could not find suitable non-Saturday employment, [FN4] the appellant at the worst would be denied 418 a maximum of 22 weeks of compensation payments. I agree with the Court that the possibility of that denial is enough to infringe upon the appellant's constitutional right to the free exercise of her religion. But it is clear to me that in order to reach this conclusion the court must explicitly reject the reasoning of Braunfeld v. Brown. I think the Braunfeld case was wrongly decided and should be overruled, and accordingly I concur in the result reached by the Court in the case before us.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

> FN4. As noted by the Court, 'The record indicates that of the 150 or more Seventh-day Adventists in the Spartanburg area, only appellant and one other have been unable to find suitable non-Saturday employment.' Ante, p. 1791, n. 2.

Mr. Justice HARLAN, whom Mr. Justice WHITE joins, dissenting.

Today's decision is disturbing both in its rejection of existing precedent and in its implications for the future. The significance of the decision can best be understood after an examination of the state law applied in this case.

South Carolina's Unemployment Compensation Law was enacted in 1936 in response to the grave social and economic problems that arose during the depression of that period. As stated in the statute itself:

> 'Economic insecurity due to unemployment is a serious menace to health, morals and welfare of the people of this State; involuntary unemployment is therefore a subject of general interest and concern * * *; the achievement of social security requires protection against this greatest hazard of our economic life; this can be provided by encouraging the employers to provide more stable employment and by the systematic accumulation of funds during periods of employment to provide benefits for periods of unemployment, thus maintaining purchasing power and limiting the serious social consequences of poor relief assistance.' s 68--38. (Emphasis added.)

*419 Thus the purpose of the legislature was to tide people over, and to avoid social and economic chaos, during periods when work was unavailable. But at the same 1802 time there was clearly no intent to provide relief for those who for purely personal reasons were or became unavailable for work. In accordance with this design, the legislature provided, in s 68--113, that '(a)n unemployed insured worker shall be eligible to receive benefits with respect to any week only if the Commission finds that * * * (h)e is able to work and is available for work * * *.' (Emphasis added.)

The South Carolina Supreme Court has uniformly applied this law in conformity with its clearly expressed purpose. It has consistently held that one is not 'available for work' if his unemployment has resulted not from the inability of industry to provide a job but rather from personal circumstances, no matter how compelling. The reference to 'involuntary unemployment' in the legislative statement of policy, whatever a sociologist, philosopher, or theologian might say, has been interpreted not to embrace such personal circumstances. See, e.g., Judson Mills v. South Carolina Unemployment Compensation Comm., 204 S.C. 37, 28 S.E.2d 535 (claimant was 'unavailable for work' when she became unable to work the third shift, and limited her availability to the other two, because of the need to care for her four children); Stone Mfg. Co. v. South Carolina Employment Security Comm., 219 S.C. 239, 64 S.E.2d 644; Hartsville Cotton Mill v. South Carolina Employment Security Comm., 224 S.C. 407, 79 S.E.2d 381.

In the present case all that the state court has done is to apply these accepted principles. Since virtually all of the mills in the Spartanburg area were operating on a six-day week, the appellant was 'unavailable for work,' and thus ineligible for benefits, when personal considerations *420 prevented her from accepting employment on a full-time basis in the industry and locality in which she had worked. The fact that these personal considerations sprang from her religious convictions was wholly without relevance to the state court's application of the law. Thus in no proper sense can it be said that the State discriminated against the appellant on the basis of her religious beliefs or that she was denied benefits because she was a Seventh-day Adventist. She was denied benefits just as any other claimant would be denied benefits who was not 'available for work' for personal reasons. [FN1]

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

FN1. I am completely at a loss to understand note 4 of the Court's opinion. Certainly the Court is not basing today's decision on the unsupported supposition that some day, the South Carolina Supreme Court may conclude that there is some personal reason for unemployment that may not disqualify a claimant for relief. In any event, I submit it is perfectly clear that South Carolina would not compensate persons who became unemployed for any personal reason, as distinguished from layoffs or lack of work, since the State Supreme Court's decisions make it plain that such persons would not be regarded as 'available for work' within the manifest meaning of the eligibility requirements. Not can I understand what this Court means when it says that 'if the eligibility provisions were thus limited, it would have been unnecessary for the (South Carolina) court to have decided appellant's constitutional challenge * * *.'

With this background, this Court's decision comes into clearer focus. What the Court is holding is that if the State chooses to condition unemployment compensation on the applicant's availability for work, it is constitutionally compelled to carve out an exception--and to provide benefits--for those whose unavailability is due to their religious convictions. [FN2] Such a holding has particular significance in two respects.

FN2. The Court does suggest, in a rather startling disclaimer, ante, p. 1797, that its holding is limited in applicability to those whose religious convictions do not make them 'nonproductive' members of society, noting that most of the Seventh-day Adventists in the Spartanburg area are employed. But surely this disclaimer cannot be taken seriously, for the Court cannot mean that the case would have come out differently if none of the Seventh-day Adventists in Spartanburg had been gainfully employed, or if the appellant's religion had prevented her from working on Tuesdays instead of Saturdays. Nor can the Court be suggesting that it will make a value judgment in each case as to whether a particular individual's religious convictions prevent him from being 'productive.' I can think of no more inappropriate function for this Court to perform.

1803 *421 First, despite the Court's protestations to the contrary, the decision necessarily overrules Braunfeld v. Brown, 366 U.S. 599, 81 S.Ct. 1144, 6 L.Ed.2d 563, which held that it did not offend the 'Free Exercise' Clause of the Constitution for a State to forbid a Sabbatarian to do business on Sunday. The secular purpose of the statute before us today is even clearer than that involved in Braunfeld. And just as in Braunfeld--where exceptions to the Sunday closing laws for Sabbatarians would have been inconsistent with the purpose to achieve a uniform day of rest and would have required case-by-case inquiry into religious beliefs--so here, an exception to the rules of eligibility based on religious convictions would necessitate judicial examination of those convictions and would be at odds with the limited purpose of the statute to smooth out the economy during periods of industrial instability. Finally, the indirect financial burden of the present law is far less than that involved in Braunfeld. Forcing a store owner to close his business on Sunday may well have the effect of depriving him of a satisfactory livelihood if his religious convictions require him to close on Saturday as well. Here we are dealing only with temporary benefits, amounting to a fraction of regular weekly wages and running for not more than 22 weeks. See ss 68--104, 68--105. Clearly, any differences between this case and Braunfeld cut against the present appellant. [FN3]

FN3. The Court's reliance on South Carolina Code, s 64--4, ante, p. 1795, to support its conclusion with respect to free exercise, is misplaced. Section 64--4, which is not a part of the Unemployment Compensation Law, is an extremely narrow provision that becomes operative only during periods of national emergency and thus has no bearing in the circumstances of the present case. And plainly under our decisions in the 'Sunday law' cases, appellant can derive no support for her position from the State's general statutory provisions setting aside Sunday as a uniform day of rest.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

*422 Second, the implications of the present decision are far more troublesome than its apparently narrow dimensions would indicate at first glance. The meaning of today's holding, as already noted, is that the State must furnish unemployment benefits to one who is unavailable for work if the unavailability stems from the exercise of religious convictions. The State, in other words, must single out for financial assistance those whose behavior is religiously motivated, even though it denies such assistance to others whose identical behavior (in this case, inability to work no Saturdays) is not religiously motivated.

It has been suggested that such singling out of religious conduct for special treatment may violate the constitutional limitations on state action. See Kurland. Of Church and State and The Supreme Court, 29 U. of Chi.L.Rev. 1; cf. Cammarano v. United States, 358 U.S. 498, 515, 79 S.Ct. 524, 534, 3 L.Ed.2d 462 (concurring opinion). My own view, however, is that at least under the circumstances of this case it would be a permissible accommodation of religion for the State, if it chose to do so, to create an exception to its eligibility requirements for persons like the appellant. The constitutional obligation of 'neutrality,' see School District of Abington Township v. Schempp, 372 U.S., p. 222, 83 S.Ct., p. 1571, is not so narrow a channel that the slightest deviation from an absolutely straight course leads to condemnation. There are too many instances in which no such course can be charted, too many areas in which the pervasive activities of the State justify 1804 some special provision for religion to prevent it from being submerged by an all-embracing secularism. The State violates its obligation of neutrality *423 when, for example, it mandates a daily religious exercise in its public schools, with all the attendant pressures on the school children that such an exercise entails. See Engel v. Vitale, 370 U.S. 421, 82 S.Ct. 1261, 8 L.Ed.2d 601; School District of Abington Township v. Schempp, supra. But there is, I believe, enough flexibility in the Constitution to permit a legislative judgment accommodating an unemployment compensation law to the exercise of religious beliefs such as appellant's.

For very much the same reasons, however, I cannot subscribe to the conclusion that the State is constitutionally compelled to carve out an exception to its general rule of eligibility in the present case. Those situations in which the Constitution may require special treatment on account of religion are, in my view, few and far between, and this view is amply supported by the course of constitutional litigation in this area. See, e.g., Braunfeld v. Brown, supra; Cleveland v. United States, 329 U.S. 14, 67 S.Ct. 13, 91 L.Ed. 12; Prince v. Massachusetts, 321 U.S. 158, 64 S.Ct. 438, 88 L.Ed. 645; Jacobson v. Massachusetts, 197 U.S. 11, 25 S.Ct. 358, 49 L.Ed. 643; Reynolds v. United States, 98 U.S. 145, 25 L.Ed. 244. Such compulsion in the present case is particularly inappropriate in light of the indirect, remote, and insubstantial effect of the decision below on the exercise of appellant's religion and in light of the direct financial assistance to religion that today's decision requires.

For these reasons I respectfully dissent from the opinion and judgment of the Court. [FN4]

FN4. Since the Court states, ante, p. 1797, that it does not reach the appellant's 'equal protection' argument, based upon South Carolina's emergency Sunday-work provisions, ss 64--4, 64--6, I do not consider it appropriate for me to do so.

83 S.Ct. 1790, 374 U.S. 398, 10 L.Ed.2d 965, 9 Fair Empl.Prac.Cas. (BNA) 1152

END OF DOCUMENT

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

Recycled Paper

EA ENGINEERING
(510) 671-0700

EXHIBIT 49

▷

United States District Court,
D. Rhode Island.

Kenneth SMITH
v.
Rev. William C. O'CONNELL, et al.
Michael KELLY
v.
Robert MARCANTONIO, et al.
Stephen KELLY
v.
Robert MARCANTONIO, et al.

Nos. 93-615-T, 93-660-T, 93-661-T.

Nov. 25, 1997.

Actions were brought against priests, diocesan officials, and churches to recover damages for sexual assaults allegedly committed by priests against minors. Diocesan officials and churches moved to dismiss claims against them for lack of subject matter jurisdiction. The District Court, Torres, J., held that: (1) district court had jurisdiction, at least over negligent supervision claim, as claim could be decided based on neutral tort law principles of general application without the need to interpret religious doctrine; (2) subjecting diocesan officials to liability would not interfere with their religious activities so as to violate Free Exercise Clause; and (3) such liability could constitutionally be imposed, even if it burdened exercise of religious beliefs, as it was derived from neutral tort law principles of general application.

Motion denied.

West Headnotes

[1] Constitutional Law ⇐84.5(7.1)
92k84.5(7.1) Most Cited Cases

First Amendment prohibits secular courts from intervening in internal affairs of hierarchical churches by deciding what, essentially, are religious matters. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 1.

[2] Constitutional Law ⇐84.5(10)
92k84.5(10) Most Cited Cases

[2] Religious Societies ⇐30
332k30 Most Cited Cases

First Amendment principle prohibiting secular courts from interfering in internal affairs of hierarchical courts by deciding religious matters did not divest federal district court of jurisdiction over claims against church and church officials for negligently failing to prevent sexual abuse of minors by priests; claims did not involve an internal dispute within church and did not require interpretations of religious doctrine or ecclesiastical law. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 1.

[3] Constitutional Law ⇐84.5(10)
92k84.5(10) Most Cited Cases

[3] Religious Societies ⇐30
332k30 Most Cited Cases

Subjecting church officials to potential tort liability for failing to prevent sexual abuse of minors by priests did not interfere with religious activities so as to violate Free Exercise Clause of First Amendment; while officials were limited by canon law in actions they could take to punish priests who had sexually abused children, there was nothing in canon law to prevent officials from taking appropriate action to prevent such abuse. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 1.

[4] Constitutional Law ⇐84.1
92k84.1 Most Cited Cases

Law establishing standards of conduct does not implicate Free Exercise Clause of First Amendment unless adherence to those standards interferes with some religious activity. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 1.

[5] Constitutional Law ⇐84.5(10)
92k84.5(10) Most Cited Cases

[5] Religious Societies ⇐30
332k30 Most Cited Cases

Holding church officials liable for negligently failing to prevent sexual abuse of minors by priests would not impermissibly burden those officials' right to free exercise of religion, even if their failure to prevent abuse was in accordance with church doctrine, as tort principles being applied were both neutral and generally applicable and any burden on particular religious practices was incidental.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 1.

[6] Constitutional Law ⇐84.2
92k84.2 Most Cited Cases

First Amendment protects both the freedom to hold a religious belief and the freedom to act in accordance with that belief; however, freedom to believe is absolute while freedom to act upon those beliefs is not. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 1.

[7] Constitutional Law ⇐84.1
92k84.1 Most Cited Cases

Neutral laws of general application do not violate First Amendment simply because they have incidental effect of burdening particular religious practice. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 1.

[8] Constitutional Law ⇐84.1
92k84.1 Most Cited Cases

If a law is not religiously neutral and of general application, it must be shown to serve a compelling governmental interest and to be narrowly tailored to advance that interest. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 1.

[9] Constitutional Law ⇐84.5(10)
92k84.5(10) Most Cited Cases

[9] Religious Societies ⇐30
332k30 Most Cited Cases

Federal district court's exercise of jurisdiction over negligent supervision claims against church officials in connection with alleged sexual abuse of minors by priests did not constitute excessive entanglement in affairs of church so as to be prohibited under First Amendment. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 1.

[10] Master and Servant ⇐303
255k303 Most Cited Cases

Under Rhode Island law, employer may be liable for misconduct of an employee attributable to employer's negligent failure to supervise employee.
74 Richard Daniel Prentiss, McGovern, Noel & Benik, Providence, RI, Carl P. DeLuca, DeLuca & DeLuca, Providence, RI, Richard A. Cappalli, Woonsocket, RI, Timothy J. Conlon, Providence, RI, for Kenneth Smith.

Thomas R. Bender, William A. Curran, James T. Murphy, Hanson, Curran, Parks & Whitman, Providence, RI, William T. Murphy, Providence, RI, for William C. O'Connell, St. Mary's Church Corp.

Thomas R. Bender, James T. Murphy, Hanson, Curran, Parks & Whitman, Providence, RI, William T. Murphy, Providence, RI, R. Christopher Barden, R.C. Barden & Associates, Plymouth, MN, Charles H. Wilson, Washington, DC, for Kenneth Angell, Daniel P. Reilly.

Thomas R. Bender, William A. Curran, James T. Murphy, Mark W. Dana, Hanson, Curran, Parks & Whitman, Providence, RI, William T. Murphy, Providence, RI, R. Christopher Barden, R.C. Barden & Associates, Plymouth, MN, Charles H. Wilson, Washington, DC, for Louis A. Gelineau.

Thomas R. Bender, Hanson, Curran, Parks & Whitman, Providence, RI, R. Christopher Barden, R.C. Barden & Associates, Plymouth, MN, Charles H. Wilson, Washington, DC, for Church of the Holy Ghost North Tiverton.

Thomas R. Bender, James T. Murphy, Mark W, Dana, Hanson, Curran, Parks & Whitman, Providence, RI, William T. Murphy, Providence, RI, R. Christopher Barden, R.C. Barden & Associates, Plymouth, MN, Charles H. Wilson, Washington, DC, for Roman Catholic Bishop of Providence.

75 Susan E. McGuirl, Richard C. Bicki, Cerilli, McGuirl & Bicki, Providence, RI, Lise M. Iwon, Laurence and Iwon, Wakefield, RI, for Michael Kelly, Stephen Kelly.

Gerald C. DeMaria, Paul S. Callaghan, Higgins, Cavanaugh & Cooney, Providence, RI, for Robert Marcantonio.

James T. Murphy, Mark W, Dana, Hanson, Curran, Parks & Whitman, Providence, RI, R. Christopher Barden, R.C. Barden & Associates, Plymouth, MN, Charles H. Wilson, Washington, DC, for Louis E. Gelineau.

William T. Murphy, Providence, RI, R. Christopher Barden, R.C. Barden & Associates, Plymouth, MN, Charles H. Wilson, Washington, DC, for Daniel P. Reilly, St. John Vianney Church, Raymond A. Beaulieu.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

MEMORANDUM AND ORDER

TORRES, District Judge.

The plaintiffs in these consolidated cases seek to recover damages for sexual assaults allegedly committed by two Roman Catholic priests serving in the Diocese of Providence. The defendants are the priests, various diocesan officials and the churches where the alleged assaults occurred. The diocesan officials and the churches (collectively referred to as the "hierarchy defendants") have moved, under Fed.R.Civ.P. 12(b)(1) to dismiss the claims against them for lack of subject matter jurisdiction.

The issue presented is whether the First Amendment divests secular courts of jurisdiction over claims against officials of hierarchial churches where liability is predicated upon the officials' alleged failure to take appropriate action to prevent sexual assaults by clergy subject to their authority. Under the circumstances presented in this case, I answer that question in the negative. Accordingly, the motion to dismiss is denied.

Background

It is neither necessary nor useful to provide a detailed account of the allegations set forth in the complaints or the multitude of legal theories upon which the plaintiffs' claims are based. Each complaint exceeds 100 pages, in length, and contains nineteen counts asserting causes of action that run the gamut from breach of fiduciary duty to premises liability. Some of the claims may raise legitimate First Amendment concerns and other claims may not be viable under negligence law. However, because the motions to dismiss are not directed specifically at individual counts, the Court will focus on what appear to be the plaintiffs' core claims.

At the heart of these cases are allegations that, during the 1970's and early 1980's, when the plaintiffs were minors, they were sexually molested by the defendant priests. It is further alleged, inter alia, that prior to such molestation, the hierarchy defendants knew that the priests were pedophiles and not only failed to take appropriate preventative action, but also actively concealed the priests' sexual misconduct.

The hierarchy defendants argue that the First Amendment bars adjudication of these claims for several reasons. First, they contend that entertaining these suits would constitute the kind of interference with the internal affairs of a hierarchical church that is prohibited by what the hierarchy defendants call the "religious autonomy doctrine". In addition, the hierarchy defendants assert that holding them liable for failing to conform to tort law standards of conduct would infringe upon their First Amendment rights because those standards conflict with the standards established by Roman Catholic doctrine and practices. Finally, the hierarchy defendants suggest that litigating these claims would require the Court to become "excessively entangled" in religious matters.

Rule 12(b)(1) Standard

When subject matter jurisdiction is challenged, the plaintiff has the burden of establishing that jurisdiction exists. Bank One, Texas, N.A. v. Montle, 964 F.2d 48, 50 (1st Cir.1992). In determining whether that burden has been met, the Court, initially, must treat all of the well-pleaded facts alleged in the complaint as true and must draw all reasonable inferences favorable to the plaintiff. Murphy v. United States, 45 F.3d 520, 522 (1st Cir.) , cert. denied, 515 U.S. 1144, 115 S.Ct. 2581, 132 L.Ed.2d 831 (1995). However, in contrast to a Rule 12(b)(6) motion to *76 dismiss for failure to state a claim, the Court, in deciding a Rule 12(b)(1) motion, is not limited to the allegations in the complaint. Evidence challenging and/or supplementing the jurisdictional allegations also may be considered. Aversa v. United States, 99 F.3d 1200, 1210 (1st Cir.1996); see 2 James Wm. Moore et al., Moore's Federal Practice ¶ 12.30[3] (3d ed.1997).

In these cases, the complaints allege sufficient facts to establish subject matter jurisdiction. The hierarchy defendants' jurisdictional challenge is based upon several affidavits describing religious doctrines and practices of the Roman Catholic Church. The plaintiffs have been afforded an opportunity to conduct discovery with respect to those doctrines and practices but have not challenged the statements contained in the affidavits.

Discussion

I. The "Religious Autonomy Doctrine"

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

[1] It is well established that the First Amendment prohibits secular courts from intervening in the internal affairs of hierarchical churches by deciding what, essentially, are religious matters. See, e.g., Serbian E. Orthodox Diocese for the United States and Canada v. Milivojevich, 426 U.S. 696, 708-10, 96 S.Ct. 2372, 2380-81, 49 L.Ed.2d 151 (1976); Presbyterian Church in the United States v. Mary Elizabeth Blue Hull Mem'l Presbyterian Church, 393 U.S. 440, 449, 89 S.Ct. 601, 606, 21 L.Ed.2d 658 (1969). The hierarchy defendants refer to this principle as the "religious autonomy doctrine."

This prohibition derives from cases arising out of disputes between parties within a church in which an interpretation of ecclesiastical law or church doctrine was required. For example, in Milivojevich it was held that the First Amendment barred a state court from invalidating, as arbitrary, the removal of a Serbian Orthodox Bishop by an ecclesiastical court. The court stated:

> [C]ivil courts are bound to accept the decisions of the highest judiciaries of a religious organization of hierarchical polity on matters of discipline, faith, internal organization, or ecclesiastical rule, custom, or law. For civil courts to analyze whether the ecclesiastical actions of a church judicatory are in that sense "arbitrary" must inherently entail inquiry into the procedures that canon or ecclesiastical law supposedly requires the church judicatory to follow, or else in to the substantive criteria by which they are supposedly to decide the ecclesiastical question. But this is exactly the inquiry that the First Amendment prohibits; recognition of such an exception would undermine the general rule that religious controversies are not the proper subject of civil court inquiry, and that a civil court must accept the ecclesiastical decisions of church tribunals as it finds them.

Milivojevich, 426 U.S. at 713, 96 S.Ct. at 2382.

Similarly, in Presbyterian Church, it was held that a civil court had no authority to decide whether local churches that withdrew from a hierarchical church organization were entitled to property previously used by the local churches because resolution of the dispute turned upon whether the hierarchical church had abandoned or departed from its tenets of faith and practice. The Court explained that:

> First Amendment values are plainly jeopardized when church property litigation is made to turn on the resolution by civil courts of controversies over religious doctrine and practice.... [T]he [First] Amendment therefore commands civil courts to decide church property disputes without resolving underlying controversies over religious doctrine. Hence, States, religious organizations, and individuals must structure relationships involving church property so as not to require the civil courts to resolve ecclesiastical questions.

Presbyterian Church, 393 U.S. at 449, 89 S.Ct. at 606.

Most, if not all, of the other cases citing the so-called "religious autonomy doctrine" as a bar to jurisdiction also have dealt either with challenges by clergy to disciplinary action taken against them, see Natal v. Christian and Missionary Alliance, 878 F.2d 1575 (1st Cir.1989); Hutchison v. Thomas, 789 F.2d 392 (6th Cir.), cert. denied, *77479 U.S. 885, 107 S.Ct. 277, 93 L.Ed.2d 253 (1986), or with disagreements among factions within a church regarding the ownership or possession of church property, see Presbyterian Church, 393 U.S. 440, 89 S.Ct. 601; Kedroff v. St. Nicholas Cathedral of Russ. Orthodox Church in N. Am., 344 U.S. 94, 73 S.Ct. 143, 97 L.Ed. 120 (1952). Moreover, in each case, resolution of the dispute would have required the Court to interpret what, essentially, was a religious doctrine or ecclesiastical law.

These cases do not stand for the proposition that a secular court lacks jurisdiction over a case simply because it involves a dispute over church property or because it calls into question the conduct of someone who is a church official. They hold only that the First Amendment prohibits judicial interference with internal church matters that require an interpretation of religious doctrine. In the words of the Presbyterian Church Court:

> [N]ot every civil court decision as to property claimed by a religious organization jeopardizes values protected by the First Amendment. Civil courts do not inhibit free exercise of religion merely by opening their doors to disputes involving church property. And there are neutral principles of law, developed for use in all property disputes, which can be applied without "establishing" churches to which property is awarded.

Presbyterian Church, 393 U.S. at 449, 89 S.Ct. at

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

606.

[2] In this case, the matter at issue is not an internal church matter. What is alleged is that church officials conducted themselves in a manner that allowed several minors to be sexually abused. The dispute is not one between factions within the church or between the church and its clergy or employees. Rather, it is a dispute between church officials and third persons who allege that they were seriously injured by the negligence of the church officials. Such a dispute hardly can be characterized as a dispute involving an internal church matter.

Nor does this dispute turn on interpretations of religious doctrine or ecclesiastical law. Determining whether the hierarchy defendants negligently failed to take appropriate preventative action is a matter governed by tort law. Making that determination will not require the Court to resolve any "controversies over religious doctrine and practice." Id.

In short, the so-called "religious autonomy doctrine" does not divest the Court of jurisdiction over this case, at least insofar as the plaintiffs' core claims are concerned. That brings the Court to the next question which is whether the application of tort law principles would interfere with the hierarchy defendants' free exercise rights.

II. The Free Exercise Clause

[3] The First Amendment prohibits Congress from making any "law respecting an establishment of religion or prohibiting the free exercise thereof...." Const. Amend. I. The Fourteenth Amendment makes that prohibition equally applicable to the states. Church of the Lukumi Babalu Aye, Inc. v. City of Hialeah, 508 U.S. 520, 531, 113, S.Ct. 2217, 2225, 124 L.Ed.2d 472 (1993) (citing Cantwell v. Connecticut, 310 U.S. 296, 303, 60 S.Ct. 900, 903, 84 L.Ed. 1213 (1940)); Employment Div., Dep't of Human Resources of Or. v. Smith, 494 U.S. 872, 876-77, 110 S.Ct. 1595, 1599, 108 L.Ed.2d 876 (1990). Moreover, the prohibition extends to common law provisions as well as statutory enactments. See, e.g., Natal, 878 F.2d at 1576-77 (free exercise clause prohibits clergy member from maintaining wrongful termination action against church).

In this case, the hierarchy defendants argue, in essence, that subjecting them to potential tort liability would infringe on their free exercise rights because conforming to the standard of conduct that tort law demands of employers would require them to deviate from "church doctrine." That argument rests on two premises. The first is that the standards to which an employer must adhere in order to avoid tort liability for the acts of an employee conflict with the duties imposed on the hierarchy defendants by Roman Catholic doctrine. The second premise is that, to the extent that the hierarchy defendants' conduct was religiously motivated, *78 the free exercise clause insulates them from civil liability. Neither of these premises withstands scrutiny.

A. Re the Alleged Conflict Between Tort Law and Church Doctrine

[4] A law establishing standards of conduct does not implicate the free exercise clause unless adherence to those standards interferes with some religious activity. Lukumi Babalu Aye, 508 U.S. at 532, 113 S.Ct. at 2226. Accordingly, the threshold inquiry is whether there is a conflict between conduct that is required by the law and conduct that is prescribed or prohibited by religious principles.

Here, there is no indication that the reasonably prudent person standard established by tort law and the requirements of Roman Catholic doctrine are incompatible. The hierarchy defendants do not claim that the Roman Catholic Church either condones or tolerates sexual abuse of children. On the contrary, they have made it clear that the Catholic Church considers such conduct to be opprobrious. Rather, the hierarchy defendants argue that the two standards of conduct conflict because church doctrine restricts their ability to take the kind of preventative action required by tort law.

In support of that argument, the hierarchy defendants have submitted several affidavits describing the limitations that canon law places upon their authority to discipline priests. However, nothing in those affidavits suggests that canon law precludes hierarchical officials from taking appropriate action to prevent priests, who are known pedophiles, from sexually abusing children. The affidavits make no reference to any limitation on the Bishop's power to determine a priest's assignment or to closely monitor and supervise the priest's activities. On the contrary, the affidavit of

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

Father Morrisey states that, when appropriate proof of sexual abuse is obtained, "the bishop may ... [temporarily] restrict [a priest's] right to function as a priest so as to protect the common good.... "(Morrisey Aff. ¶ 31.) In addition, the affidavit states that the Bishop is empowered to "issue a specific directive to the cleric suspected of misconduct to avoid particularly described circumstances, such as participating in group activities with children." (Id. ¶ 33.)

The affidavits also refer to the belief in redemption and the forgiveness of sin as fundamental precepts of the Catholic faith that prohibit church officials from summarily taking action to punish priests who sexually abuse children. However, once again, there is nothing to indicate that these principles preclude action that would prevent such abuse.

Finally, the affidavits describe the restrictions that canon law places on disclosure of "confidential" information revealed during "confession"; "internal forum" (i.e., discussions regarding matters upon which moral or spiritual guidance is sought) or investigations with respect to clerical misconduct. However, the affidavits fail to explain how that prohibition would have prevented the hierarchy defendants from exercising reasonable care to prevent priests under their jurisdiction from sexually abusing children.

The affidavits do not assert that the hierarchy defendants, in fact, receive any "confidential" information relevant to these cases. Even if it was assumed that such information was received, the affidavits do not establish that the prohibition against disclosure barred the hierarchy defendants from considering it for the limited purpose of determining whether preventative measures were warranted.

The hierarchy defendants appear to suggest that the obligation of confidentiality impairs their ability to defend against the plaintiffs' claims; but, once again, they do not explain how. Indeed, with the possible exception of the failure to warn claim, it is difficult to see any way that tort liability could be predicated upon the hierarchy defendants' past failure to reveal any "confidential" information that they may have received. Moreover, the priest penitent privilege makes it doubtful that any "confidential" information received by the hierarchy defendants could be obtained through discovery or presented at trial. See Fed.R.Evid. 501; R.I. Gen. Laws § 9-17-23.

*79 It is equally difficult to see how the hierarchy defendants would be prejudiced by any present inability to disclose "confidential" information previously imparted to them. Since any such information presumably would relate to alleged misconduct by the priests, it is unlikely that the information would be helpful in defending against the plaintiffs' claims.

Briefly stated, there is no indication that, by taking the kind of preventative action required by tort law, the hierarchy defendants would have violated any "doctrine, practice or law" of the Roman Catholic Church. In the absence of such a conflict, subjecting the hierarchy defendants to potential tort liability does not violate their right to the free exercise of their religion.

B. Re Neutral Laws of General Application

[5] Even if it is assumed, arguendo, that tort law and canon law prescribe incompatible standards of conduct for preventing priests from sexually abusing minors, this Court would not necessarily be deprived of subject matter jurisdiction. The hierarchy defendants argue, in essence, that holding them civilly liable for their alleged failure to adhere to common law negligence standards would violate their free exercise rights because it would punish them for acting in accordance with church doctrine.

[6] That argument overlooks the distinction between the freedom to hold a religious belief and the freedom to act in accordance with that belief. Both freedoms are protected by the free exercise clause. However, the freedom to believe is absolute but the freedom to act upon those beliefs is not. Smith, '494 U.S. at 877-79, 110 S.Ct. at 1599-1600; Moses v. Diocese of Colo., 863 P.2d 310, 319 (Colo.1993) (citing Cantwell, 310 U.S. at 303-04, 60 S.Ct. at 903), cert. denied, 511 U.S. 1137, 114 S.Ct. 2153, 128 L.Ed.2d 880 (1994).

[7][8] This distinction is reflected in the well-established principle that neutral laws of general application do not violate the First Amendment simply because they have the incidental effect of burdening a particular religious practice. City of Boerne v. Flores, 521 U.S. 507, ---, 117 S.Ct. 2157, 2161, 138 L.Ed.2d 624 (1997);

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

Lukumi Babalu Aye, 508 U.S. at 531, 113 S.Ct. at 2226; Smith, 494 U.S. at 882, 110 S.Ct. at 1602. Indeed, such laws have been upheld even in the absence of any showing that they serve some compelling governmental interest. [FN1] Smith, 494 U.S. at 885, 110 S.Ct. at 1603.

> FN1. If a law is not religiously neutral and of general application, it must be shown to serve a compelling governmental interest and to be narrowly tailored to advance that interest. Lukumi Babalu Aye, 508 U.S. at 531-32, 113 S.Ct. at 2226.

In Smith, the Supreme Court expressly rejected the argument that the First Amendment protects all conduct prompted by religious beliefs. Id. at 882, 110 S.Ct. at 1602. The Smith Court held that the free exercise clause does not prevent a state from applying criminal laws prohibiting drug use to smoking peyote during a religious rite. The Court stated:

> Respondents urge us to hold, quite simply, that when otherwise prohibitable conduct is accompanied by religious convictions, not only the convictions but the conduct itself must be free from governmental regulation. We have never held that, and decline to do so now.

Id.

Smith recognized that the free exercise clause prohibits a state from regulating conduct because of the religious beliefs that it represents. However, the Court declined to extend that prohibition to neutral laws of general application merely because they establish standards of conduct that conflict with a particular religious belief.

> Respondents in the present case, however, seek to carry the meaning of "prohibiting the free exercise [of religion]" one large step further. They contend that their religious motivation for using peyote places them beyond the reach of a criminal law that is not specifically directed at their religious practice, and that is concededly constitutional as applied to those who use the drug for other reasons. They assert, in other words, that "prohibiting the free exercise [of religion]" includes requiring *80 any individual to observe a generally applicable law that requires (or forbids) the performance of an act that his religious belief forbids (or requires). As a textual matter, we do not think the words must be given that meaning.

Id. at 878, 110 S.Ct. at 1599.

As explained in Jones v. Wolf, 443 U.S. 595, 99 S.Ct. 3020, 61 L.Ed.2d 775 (1979), "[t]he neutral-principles approach cannot be said to 'inhibit' the free exercise of religion, any more than do other neutral provisions of state law governing the manner in which churches own property, hire employees or purchase goods." Id. at 606, 99 S.Ct. at 3027.

If, as the hierarchy defendants urge, conduct is put beyond the reach of secular laws merely because it is based upon a religious doctrine or practice, the result would be what has been termed an unacceptable "anomaly in the law, a constitutional right to ignore neutral laws of general applicability." Boerne, 521 U.S. at ----, 117 S.Ct. at 2161 (citing Smith, 494 U.S. at 887, 110 S.Ct. at 1604).

It is easy to envision the kinds of "anomalies" that could result from such an absolutist interpretation of the free exercise clause. For example, laws prohibiting murder would have no application to human sacrifices performed pursuant to some religious practice.

Clearly, the framers of our Constitution did not intend religious liberty to extend that far. Indeed, permitting some individuals to engage in conduct proscribed by neutral laws that must be observed by everyone else simply because that conduct emanates from a religious belief might be viewed as the kind of official recognition of a religion that is prohibited by the establishment clause. See Boerne, 521 U.S. at ----, 117 S.Ct. at 2172 (Stevens, J., concurring).

In this case, there is no question that the principles of tort law, at issue, are both neutral and generally applicable. It is not even alleged that they are directed at or were designed to suppress the religious practices of the Roman Catholic Church or that they selectively burden religiously-inspired conduct. Cf. Lukumi Babalu Aye, 508 U.S. at 545-46, 113 S.Ct. at 2233 (holding ordinance prohibiting animal sacrifice unconstitutional because it was motivated by a desire to suppress the practices of a particular religion and did not apply equally to the killing of animals for non-religious purposes). On the contrary, it is clear that these principles have evolved without regard to the practices of any religion and that they are uniformly applicable whether the conduct in question is religiously inspired or not. Consequently, judging the hierarchy defendants' liability in accordance with these principles does not violate their free exercise rights.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

III. Excessive Entanglement

[9] The hierarchy defendants cite a number of decisions holding that the First Amendment divests a court of jurisdiction over claims against church officials arising out of sexual misconduct by their clergy. See, e.g., Schmidt v. Bishop, 779 F.Supp. 321, 332 (S.D.N.Y.1991); Swanson v. Roman Catholic Bishop of Portland, 692 A.2d 441, 445 (Me.1997); Pritzlaff v. Archdiocese of Milwaukee, 194 Wis.2d 302, 533 N.W.2d 780, 790 (1995), cert. denied, 516 U.S. 1116, 116 S.Ct. 920, 133 L.Ed.2d 849 (1996). However, there is a split of authority on this issue.

Some courts have found jurisdiction lacking on the ground that adjudication of the claims would require interpretation of church doctrine. See, e.g., Schmidt, 779 F.Supp. at 332 (First Amendment prevents courts from adjudicating claims of negligent hiring/supervision because courts may be required to make "sensitive judgments" about supervision of clergy in light of religious beliefs); Pritzlaff, 533 N.W.2d at 790 (First Amendment bars negligent hiring claim because determining what makes one competent to serve as priest requires interpretation of church doctrine and practices); H.R.B. v. J.L.G., 913 S.W.2d 92, 99 (Mo.Ct.App.1995) (First Amendment bars breach of fiduciary duty claim against church because Court must inquire into religious aspects of relationship between church authorities and parishioner); see also Swanson, 692 A.2d at 445 (First Amendment bars negligent supervision claim because use of civil standard conflicts *81 with standard established by ecclesiastical authorities).

Some of these courts have employed what appears to be an establishment clause analysis. Thus, they express concern that adjudicating such claims would result in "excessive entanglement" between church and state. See, e.g., Schmidt, 779 F.Supp. at 332; L.L.N. v. Clauder, 209 Wis.2d 674, 563 N.W.2d 434, 440 (1997). Others have applied the "religious autonomy" cases' admonition against deciding "religious matters." See, e.g., Isely v. Capuchin Province, 880 F.Supp. 1138, 1150 (E.D.Mich.1995); Swanson, 692 A.2d at 444-45; Pritzlaff, 533 N.W.2d at 791. In either event, the implicit assumption of these cases is that the interpretation of church doctrine is necessary to determine liability.

On the other hand, a number of courts have upheld jurisdiction on the ground that such claims can be adjudicated by applying neutral principles of law and do not require any interpretation of church doctrine. See, e.g., Doe v. Hartz, 970 F.Supp. 1375, 1431-32 (N.D.Iowa 1997) (First Amendment does not bar negligent supervision claim against church defendants because claim can be assessed applying neutral principles of law); Isely, 880 F.Supp. at 1151 (court has jurisdiction to decide negligent supervision claim because " 'neutral' principles of law can be applied without determining underlying questions of church law and policies"); Moses, 863 P.2d at 320-21 (First Amendment does not bar suit against hierarchy defendants for negligent hiring/supervision and breach of fiduciary duty because deciding claims does "not require interpreting or weighing church doctrine and neutral principles of law can be applied."); see also Jones v. Trane, 153 Misc.2d 822, 591 N.Y.S.2d 927, 931 (N.Y.Sup.Ct.1992) (because it is "conduct, and not creed, that underlies plaintiffs' actions," First Amendment does not bar negligent hiring/supervision action against church officials where it is alleged that officials knew or should have known that priest was likely to commit sexual abuse and yet placed him in position where he could commit such acts).

In general, this Court finds the cases upholding jurisdiction to be more persuasive. Arguably, there might be some circumstances under which it could be difficult to determine the tort liability of church officials for the sexual misconduct of clergy without first deciding questions of religious doctrine. For example, when such a claim rests on a breach of fiduciary duty theory, an examination of church doctrine might be required in order to ascertain the nature of any fiduciary relationship between the church officials and the victim. In fact, there is a split of authority on this precise question. Compare H.R.B., 913 S.W.2d at 98-99 (First Amendment bars fiduciary duty claims because their adjudication inevitably requires inquiry into the religious aspects of the relationship between priests, parishes, dioceses and parishioners), with Moses, 863 P.2d at 321 (First Amendment does not bar plaintiff's claims, including breach of fiduciary duty claim, because court is not required to interpret or weigh church doctrine).

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

[10] In this case, although breach of fiduciary duty is one of a multitude of claims made by the plaintiffs, there is no need to analyze every one of those claims for the purpose of determining whether they require an interpretation of church doctrine. As already noted, the motion to dismiss amounts to a general challenge to the Court's subject matter jurisdiction and is not directed at particular claims. Moreover, the plaintiffs' core claim, namely, that the hierarchy defendants failed to take appropriate action to prevent the alleged sexual assaults, is governed by neutral tort law principles of general application. More specifically, Rhode Island law recognizes that an employer may be liable for the misconduct of an employee attributable to the employer's negligent failure to supervise the employee. See Welsh Mfg., Div. of Textron, Inc. v. Pinkerton's, Inc., 474 A.2d 436, 441 (R.I.1984).

Here, adjudication of, at least, the negligent supervision claim does not require any interpretation of religious doctrine. A determination with respect to whether the hierarchy defendants exercised reasonable care in supervising the priests subject to their authority can be made solely in accordance with well established tort law principles. Unlike some breach of fiduciary duty claims, there is no need to interpret church doctrine in order to establish the nature of the duty owed to the plaintiffs. Consequently, it is unlikely 82 that exercising jurisdiction over this case will result in any "excessive entanglement" between church and state.

Conclusion

For all of the foregoing reasons, the hierarchy defendants' motion to dismiss for' lack of subject matter jurisdiction is denied.

IT IS SO ORDERED,

986 F.Supp. 73

END OF DOCUMENT

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

BLUEBIRD OFFICE SUPPLIES (888) 477-0700 www.bluebirdonline.com

EXHIBIT 50

495 S.E.2d 395
72 Empl. Prac. Dec. P 45,165, 13 IER Cases 1228
(Cite as: 128 N.C.App. 490, 495 S.E.2d 395)

Court of Appeals of North Carolina.

Debbie F. SMITH, Cathy Cahall and Tracy Newman, Plaintiffs,
v.
William Edward PRIVETTE, individually; White Plains United Methodist Church; the Raleigh District of the North Carolina Conference of the United Methodist Church, and the North Carolina Conference of the United Methodist Church, Defendants.

No. COA97-199.

Feb. 3, 1998.

Former church employees brought action alleging negligent retention and supervision claims against church and church organizations arising out of alleged sexual misconduct by church minister. The Superior Court, Wake County, Henry V. Barnette, Jr., J., granted defendants' motion to dismiss for lack of subject matter jurisdiction. Employees appealed. The Court of Appeals, Greene, J., held that resolution of employees' claims for negligent retention and supervision did not require court to interpret or weigh church or religious doctrine, and, thus, did not implicate establishment clause of First Amendment.

Reversed and remanded.

West Headnotes

[1] Constitutional Law ⇐84.5(10)
92k84.5(10) Most Cited Cases

[1] Religious Societies ⇐30
332k30 Most Cited Cases

Resolution of former church employees' claims for negligent retention and supervision against church and church organizations based on sexual misconduct of cleric towards employees did not require court to interpret or weigh church or religious doctrine, and, thus, did not implicate establishment clause of First Amendment, as claims merely raised issue of whether church officials knew or had reason to know of cleric's propensity to engage in sexual misconduct. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 1.

[2] Constitutional Law ⇐84.5(7.1)
92k84.5(7.1) Most Cited Cases

Establishment clause of First Amendment does not grant religious organizations absolute immunity from tort liability. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 1.

[3] Constitutional Law ⇐84.5(7.1)
92k84.5(7.1) Most Cited Cases

Establishment clause of First Amendment does not prohibit application of secular standard to secular conduct by religious organization that is tortious.

[4] Master and Servant ⇐303
255k303 Most Cited Cases

To support claim of negligent retention and supervision against employer, plaintiff must prove that incompetent employee committed tortious act resulting in injury to plaintiff and that prior to act, employer knew or had reason to know of employee's incompetency.

[5] Constitutional Law ⇐84.5(10)
92k84.5(10) Most Cited Cases

Decision to hire or discharge religious clergy is inextricable from religious doctrine and protected by establishment clause of First Amendment from judicial inquiry. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 1.
*395 *491 Appeal by plaintiffs from order and judgment filed 31 October 1996 by Judge Henry V. Barnette, Jr. in Wake County Superior Court. Heard in the Court of Appeals 17 November 1997.

Joyce L. Davis and Associates by Joyce L. Davis, Zoe G. Mahood, and Dorothy Powers, Raleigh, for plaintiffs-appellants.

Nicholls & Crampton, P.A. by Robin Adams Anderson, Raleigh, for defendant- appellee White Plains United Methodist Church.

Elrod Lawing & Sharpless, P.A. by Frederick K. Sharpless, Greensboro, for defendants-appellees the Raleigh District of the North Carolina Conference of the United *396 Methodist Church and the

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

North Carolina Conference of the United Methodist Church.

GREENE, Judge.

Debbie F. Smith (Plaintiff Smith), Cathy Cahall (Plaintiff Cahall), and Tracy Newman (Plaintiff Newman) (collectively referred to herein as Plaintiffs) appeal from an order and judgment dismissing their negligent retention and supervision claim because of lack of subject matter jurisdiction against the White Plains United Methodist Church of Cary (Defendant White Plains), the Raleigh District of the North Carolina Conference of the United Methodist Church (Defendant District), and the North Carolina Conference of the United Methodist Church (Defendant Conference) (Defendant White Plains, Defendant District, and Defendant Conference being collectively referred to herein as the "Church Defendants").

William E. Privette (Privette) and the Church Defendants filed a motion under Rule 12(b)(1) of the North Carolina Rules of Civil Procedure seeking to have the complaint dismissed for lack of subject matter jurisdiction, contending that the claims stated in the complaint are barred by the First Amendment of the United States Constitution, which prohibits any "law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof...." U.S. Const. amend. I. At the hearing on the motions to dismiss, the trial court considered the pleadings and the affidavit of Kermit Braswell.

492 The complaint contains allegations that the Plaintiffs were employed in clerical positions at the Defendant White Plains, where Privette was the Senior Pastor; that Privette was ordained by the Defendant Conference; that the Defendant Conference and the Defendant District were responsible for the placement and oversight of Privette, and that they assigned him to the Defendant White Plains and the Defendant White Plains paid his salary; that Privette committed inappropriate, unwelcome, offensive and nonconsensual acts of a sexual nature against the Plaintiffs, variously hugging, kissing and touching them, and made inappropriate, unwelcome, offensive and nonconsensual statements of a sexually suggestive nature to them; that Privette's acts and statements toward the Plaintiffs amount to sexual harassment and assault and battery, causing the Plaintiffs emotional distress, embarrassment, humiliation, and damage to their reputations, professional standing, and career potential. The complaint further states that the Church Defendants knew or should have known of Privette's propensity for sexual harassment of and assault and battery upon female employees and that they failed to take any actions to warn or protect the Plaintiffs from Privette's tortious activity.

Kermit Braswell, District Superintendent of the Raleigh District of the Church Defendants, affirmed in his affidavit that the episcopacy and principle of itinerant general superintendency prescribed by the Constitution of the United Methodist Church are fundamental to the faith of the church; that the appointment and assignment of ordained ministers to local churches by the bishop of the Defendant Conference is part of the principle of itinerant general superintendency; and that the Book of Discipline, prescribed by the United Methodist Church Constitution, governs the internal affairs of the United Methodist Church, the procedure for the assignment of ministers to local churches and their supervision, and the procedure for filing grievances against ministers and the disciplining thereof.

The trial court entered an order dismissing Plaintiffs' claims against the Church Defendants for lack of subject matter jurisdiction. The trial court's Memorandum of Decision stated that because the Plaintiffs contend that the Church Defendants were negligent in supervising Privette and not providing a safe working environment, "[i]t follows then that the only effective means of achieving both objectives was for the Conference when first notified of his alleged wrongful acts to have removed Reverend Privette as senior pastor of White Plains"; that the power to discipline and assign or unassign a Methodist minister is within the principle of itinerant general superintendency493 and the exclusive power of episcopacy; and that the power of a secular court to "second guess that power to assign or unassign clergy or to second guess the discipline of clergy is an intrusion into *397 matters of church governance and discipline ... [and] would constitute an excessive entanglement between church and state thereby violating 'the free exercise of religion' clause of the First Amendment of the United States Constitution." The trial court denied Privette's motion to dismiss.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

[1] The dispositive issue is whether the First Amendment precludes the filing of a negligent retention and supervision claim against a religious organization, when that claim is based on the conduct of a cleric of that organization.

Lack of subject matter jurisdiction challenges the court's statutory or constitutional power to adjudicate a claim and can be raised at any level of the proceeding. N.C.G.S. § 1A-1, Rule 12(h)(3) (1990); see Burgess v. Gibbs, 262 N.C. 462, 465, 137 S.E.2d 806, 808 (1964). "[U]nlike a Rule 12(b)(6) dismissal, the court need not confine its evaluation [of a Rule 12(b)(1) motion] to the face of the pleadings, but may review or accept any evidence, such as affidavits, or it may hold an evidentiary hearing." 2 James W. Moore et al., Moore's Federal Practice, § 12.30[3] (3rd ed.1997) [hereinafter 2 Moore's Federal Practice]; see Cline v. Teich, 92 N.C.App. 257, 264, 374 S.E.2d 462, 466 (1988). If the evaluation is confined to the pleadings, the court must "accept the plaintiff's allegations as true, construing them most favorably to the plaintiff." 2 Moore's Federal Practice, § 12.30[4]. Unlike a Rule 12(b)(6) motion, consideration of matters outside the pleadings "does not convert the Rule 12(b)(1) motion to one for summary judgment...." Id. An appellate court's review of an order of the trial court denying or allowing a Rule 12(b)(1) motion is de novo, except to the extent the trial court resolves issues of fact and those findings are binding on the appellate court if supported by competent evidence in the record. 2 Moore's Federal Practice, § 12.30[5].

In this case the Church Defendants argue that the trial court is without subject matter jurisdiction to adjudicate the Plaintiffs' claims against them because the trial court's resolution of these claims necessarily requires inquiry into their religious doctrine and that such an inquiry is not permitted under the First Amendment to the United States Constitution. We disagree.

The First Amendment to the United States Constitution prohibits any "law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the *494 free exercise thereof...." U.S. Const. amend. I. The United States Supreme Court has interpreted this clause to mean that the civil courts cannot decide disputes involving religious organizations where the religious organizations would be deprived of interpreting and determining their own laws and doctrine. See Watson v. Jones, 80 U.S. (13 Wall.) 679, 20 L.Ed. 666 (1871) (establishing doctrine of judicial abstention in matters which involved interpretation of religious law and doctrine); Kedroff v. Saint Nicholas Cathedral, 344 U.S. 94, 73 S.Ct. 143, 97 L.Ed. 120 (1952) (state law which placed ownership of church property in one faction of the Russian Orthodox Church was unconstitutional as it impeded on the authority of the church leaders to decide the issue themselves); Presbyterian Church v. Mary Elizabeth Blue Hull Memorial Presbyterian Church, 393 U.S. 440, 89 S.Ct. 601, 21 L.Ed.2d 658 (1969) (civil courts may intervene in internal church property dispute when neutral principles of law could be applied without interpreting and determining religious doctrine).

[2][3] The First Amendment, however, does not grant religious organizations absolute immunity from liability. For example, claims against religious organizations have long been recognized for premises liability, breach of a fiduciary duty, and negligent use of motor vehicles. Carl H. Esbeck, Tort Claims Against Churches and Ecclesiastical Officers: The First Amendment Considerations, 89 W.Va. L.Rev. 1, 76 (1986); Moses v. Diocese of Colorado, 863 P.2d 310, 319 (Colo.Sup.Ct.1993), cert. denied 511 U.S. 1137, 114 S.Ct. 2153, 128 L.Ed.2d 880 (1994). Indeed, the "[a]pplication of a secular standard to secular conduct that is tortious is not prohibited by the Constitution." Moses, 863 P.2d at 320; see also Employment Div., Dept. of Human Res. v. Smith, 494 U.S. 872, 110 S.Ct. 1595, 108 L.Ed.2d 876 (1990) (finding that even religiously motivated conduct does not have complete immunity from neutral 398 laws which are generally applied). The dispositive question is whether resolution of the legal claim requires the court to interpret or weigh church doctrine. If not, the First Amendment is not implicated and neutral principles of law are properly applied to adjudicate the claim. See Serbian Eastern Orthodox Diocese for United States of America and Canada v. Milivojevich, 426 U.S. 696, 710, 96 S.Ct. 2372, 2381, 49 L.Ed.2d 151, 163 (1976).

[4] North Carolina recognizes a cause of action for negligent supervision and retention as an independent tort based on the employer's liability to third parties. Braswell v. Braswell, 330 N.C. 363, 373, 410 S.E.2d 897, 903 (1991). To support a claim of negligent retention and supervision against an employer, the plaintiff must prove that "the incompetent employee committed a tortious act resulting in injury to 495 plaintiff and that prior to the act, the employer knew or had reason to know of the employee's incompetency." Graham v. Hardee's Food Systems, 121 N.C.App. 382, 385, 465 S.E.2d 558, 560 (1996) (quoting Hogan v. Forsyth Country Club Co., 79 N.C.App. 483, 495, 340 S.E.2d 116, 124, disc. review denied, 317 N.C. 334, 346 S.E.2d 140 (1986)).

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

[5] We acknowledge that the decision to hire or discharge a minister is inextricable from religious doctrine and protected by the First Amendment from judicial inquiry. We do not accept, however, that resolution of the Plaintiffs' negligent retention and supervision claim requires the trial court to inquire into the Church Defendants' reasons for choosing Privette to serve as a minister. The Plaintiffs' claim, construed in the light most favorable to them, instead presents the issue of whether the Church Defendants knew or had reason to know of Privette's propensity to engage in sexual misconduct, see Bear Valley Church of Christ v. DeBose, 928 P.2d 1315, 1323 (Colo.Sup.Ct.1996), cert. denied, 520 U.S. 1241, 117 S.Ct. 1846, 137 L.Ed.2d 1049 (1997), conduct that the Church Defendants do not claim is part of the tenets or practices of the Methodist Church. Thus, there is no necessity for the court to interpret or weigh church doctrine in its adjudication of the Plaintiffs' claim for negligent retention and supervision. It follows that the First Amendment is not implicated and does not bar the Plaintiffs' claim against the Church Defendants. Certainly, > a contrary holding--that a religious body must be held free from any responsibility for wholly predictable and foreseeable injurious consequences of personnel decisions, although such decisions incorporate no theological or dogmatic tenets--would go beyond First Amendment protection and cloak such bodies with an exclusive immunity greater than that required for the preservation of the principles constitutionally safeguarded.

Jones v. Trane, 153 Misc.2d 822, 591 N.Y.S.2d 927, 932 (1992).

The trial court thus erred in granting the Rule 12(b)(1) dismissal and this case must be remanded to the trial court.

Reversed and remanded.

ARNOLD, C.J., and McGEE, J., concur.

495 S.E.2d 395, 128 N.C.App. 490, 72 Empl. Prac. Dec. P 45,165, 13 IER Cases 1228

END OF DOCUMENT

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

BLUEBIRD OFFICE SUPPLIES (888) 477-0700 www.bluebirdonline.com

EXHIBIT 51

101 S.Ct. 1425
67 L.Ed.2d 624, 25 Fair Empl.Prac.Cas. (BNA) 629, 25 Empl. Prac. Dec. P 31,662
(Cite as: 450 U.S. 707, 101 S.Ct. 1425)

Briefs and Other Related Documents

Supreme Court of the United States

Eddie C. THOMAS, Petitioner,
v.
REVIEW BOARD OF the INDIANA EMPLOYMENT SECURITY DIVISION et al.

No. 79-952.

Argued Oct. 7, 1980.
Decided April 6, 1981.

The Indiana Employment Security Review Board denied claim for unemployment compensation, and claimant appealed. The Indiana Court of Appeals, 381 N.E.2d 888, ordered Board to extend benefits to claimant. The Indiana Supreme Court, 391 N.E.2d 1127, vacated decision of Court of Appeals and denied claimant benefits, and claimant petitioned for certiorari. The Supreme Court, Chief Justice Burger, held that Indiana's denial of unemployment compensation benefits to claimant, who terminated his job because his religious beliefs forbade participation in production of armaments, violated his First Amendment right to free exercise of religion.

Reversed.

Justice Blackmun concurred in part and concurred in the result.

Justice Rehnquist filed a dissenting opinion.

Opinion on remand, 421 N.E.2d 642.

West Headnotes

[1] Constitutional Law ⇐84.2
92k84.2 Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 92k84(2), 92k84)

Only beliefs rooted in religion are protected by the free exercise clause, which, by its terms, gives special protection to the exercise of religion. U.S.C.A.Const. Amend. 1.

[2] Constitutional Law ⇐84.2
92k84.2 Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 92k84(2), 92k84)

Resolution of question of what is a religious belief or practice protected by the free exercise clause does not turn upon judicial perception of particular belief or practice in question; religious beliefs need not be acceptable, logical, consistent or comprehensible to others in order to merit First Amendment protection. U.S.C.A.Const. Amend. 1.

[3] Social Security and Public Welfare ⇐403
356Ak403 Most Cited Cases

Claimant, who terminated his employment when he was transferred from roll foundry to department that produced turrets for military tanks, who claimed that his religious beliefs prevented him from participating in production of war materials, and whose statements concerning his previous work revealed no more than that he found work in roll foundry sufficiently insulated from producing weapons of war, terminated his employment for religious reasons and his beliefs should not have been dissected to determine his eligibility for unemployment compensation because he was "struggling" with his position or because his beliefs were not articulated precisely. IC 22-4-15-1 (1976 Ed.); U.S.C.A.Const. Amend. 1.

[4] Constitutional Law ⇐82(3)
92k82(3) Most Cited Cases

A person may not be compelled to choose between the exercise of a First Amendment right and participation in an otherwise available public program. U.S.C.A.Const. Amend. 1.

[5] Constitutional Law ⇐84.2
92k84.2 Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 92k84(2), 92k84)

When state conditions receipt of important benefit upon conduct proscribed by religious faith, or when it denies such a benefit because of conduct mandated by religious belief, thereby putting substantial pressure on adherent to modify his behavior and to violate his beliefs, a burden upon religion exists; while the compulsion may be indirect, the infringement upon free exercise is nonetheless substantial. U.S.C.A.Const. Amend. 1.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

[6] Constitutional Law ⇐84.1
92k84.1 Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 92k84(1), 92k84)

Mere fact that a person's religious practice is burdened by governmental program does not mean that exemption accommodating his practice must be granted but, rather, state may justify an inroad on religious liberty by showing that it is least restrictive means of achieving some compelling state interest; however, only those interests of highest order can overbalance legitimate claims to free exercise of religion. U.S.C.A.Const. Amend. 1.

[7] Constitutional Law ⇐84.5(12)
92k84.5(12) Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 92k84)

In absence of evidence indicating that number of people who find themselves in predicament of choosing between unemployment benefits and religious beliefs creates widespread unemployment or even seriously affects unemployment, and in absence of any evidence indicating detailed inquiry by employers into applicants' religious beliefs, Indiana's alleged interests in support of unemployment compensation disqualifying provision for individuals who have voluntarily left employment without good cause were not sufficiently compelling to justify burden upon religious liberty of claimant, who was denied unemployment compensation benefits after he terminated his job because his religious beliefs forbade his participation in production of armaments. U.S.C.A.Const. Amend. 1; IC 22-4-15-1 (1976 Ed.).

[8] Constitutional Law ⇐84.5(12)
92k84.5(12) Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 92k84)

Compelling payment of unemployment benefits to claimant, who terminated his job because of his religious beliefs after he was transferred from roll foundry to department that produced turrets for military tanks, would not involve state in fostering religious belief in violation of the establishment clause. U.S.C.A.Const. Amend. 1; IC 22-4-15-1 (1976 Ed.).

[9] Constitutional Law ⇐84.5(12)
92k84.5(12) Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 92k84)

Indiana's denial of unemployment compensation benefits to claimant, who terminated his job because of his religious beliefs after he was transferred from roll foundry to department that produced military tanks, under statutory provision disqualifying individuals who voluntarily leave their employment without good cause violated claimant's First Amendment right to free exercise of religion. IC 22-4-15-1 (1976 Ed.); U.S.C.A.Const. Amend. 1.

1426 Syllabus [FN*]

FN* The syllabus constitutes no part of the opinion of the Court but has been prepared by the Reporter of Decisions for the convenience of the reader. See United States v. Detroit Lumber Co., 200 U.S. 321, 337, 26 S.Ct. 282, 287, 50 L.Ed. 499.

707 Petitioner, a Jehovah's Witness, was initially hired to work in his employer's roll foundry, which fabricated sheet steel for a variety of industrial uses, but when the foundry was closed he was transferred to a department that fabricated turrets for military tanks. Since all of the employer's remaining departments to which transfer might have been sought were engaged directly in the production of weapons, petitioner asked to be laid off. When that request was denied, he quit, asserting that his religious beliefs prevented him from participating in the production of weapons. He applied for unemployment compensation benefits under the Indiana Employment Security Act, and testified at an administrative hearing that he believed that contributing to the production of arms violated his religion, although he could, in good conscience, engage indirectly in the production of materials that might be used ultimately to fabricate arms. The hearing referee found that petitioner had terminated his employment because of his religious convictions, but held that petitioner was not entitled to benefits because his voluntary termination was not based upon a "good cause [arising] in connection with [his] work," as required by the Indiana statute. Respondent Review Board affirmed, but the Indiana Court of Appeals reversed, holding that the Indiana statute, as applied, improperly burdened petitioner's right to the free exercise of his religion. The Indiana Supreme Court vacated the Court of Appeals' decision and denied petitioner benefits, holding that he had quit voluntarily for personal reasons, his belief being more "personal philosophical choice" than religious belief. The court also concluded that in any event a termination motivated by religion is not for "good cause" objectively related to the work, as required by the Indiana statute, and that denying benefits created only an 1427 indirect burden on petitioner's free exercise right, which burden was justified by legitimate state interests.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

Held: The State's denial of unemployment compensation benefits to petitioner violated his First Amendment right to free exercise of religion under Sherbert v. Verner, 374 U.S. 398, 83 S.Ct. 1790, 10 L.Ed.2d 965. Pp. 1430- 1433.

(a) The Indiana Supreme Court improperly relied on the facts that petitioner was "struggling" with his beliefs and that he was not able *708 to "articulate" his belief precisely. Courts should not undertake to dissect religious beliefs on such grounds. The Indiana court also erred in apparently giving significant weight to the fact that another Jehovah's Witness with whom petitioner consulted had no scruples about working on tank turrets. The guarantee of free exercise is not limited to beliefs which are shared by all of the members of a religious sect. The narrow function of a reviewing court in this context is to determine whether there was an appropriate finding that petitioner terminated his work because such work was forbidden by his religion. The record shows that petitioner terminated his employment for religious reasons. Pp. 1430-1431.

(b) A person may not be compelled to choose between the exercise of a First Amendment right and participation in an otherwise available public program. It is true that the Indiana law does not compel a violation of conscience, but where the state conditions receipt of an important benefit upon conduct prescribed by a religious faith, or where it denies such a benefit because of conduct mandated by religious belief, thereby putting substantial pressure on an adherent to modify his behavior and to violate his beliefs, a burden upon religion exists. While the compulsion may be indirect, the infringement upon free exercise is nonetheless substantial. Pp. 1431-1432.

(c) The state may justify an inroad on religious liberty by showing that it is the least restrictive means of achieving some compelling state interest. However, when the inquiry is properly narrowed to focus only on the threat to state interests, neither of the purposes urged to sustain the disqualifying provision of the Indiana statute--to avoid the widespread unemployment and consequent burden on the fund resulting if people were permitted to leave jobs for "personal" reasons, and to avoid a detailed probing by employers into job applicants' religious beliefs--is sufficiently compelling to justify the burden upon petitioner's religious liberty. Pp. 1432-1433.

(d) Payment of benefits to petitioner would not involve the State in fostering a religious faith in violation of the Establishment Clause. The extension of benefits reflects no more than the governmental obligation of neutrality, and does not represent that involvement of religious with secular institutions which it is the object of the Establishment Clause to forestall. P. 1433.

Ind., 391 N.E.2d 1127, reversed.

*709 Blanca Bianchi de la Torre, Gary, Ind., for petitioner.

William E. Daily, Indianapolis, Ind., for respondents.

Chief Justice BURGER delivered the opinion of the Court.

We granted certiorari to consider whether the State's denial of unemployment compensation benefits to the petitioner, a Jehovah's Witness who terminated his job because his religious beliefs forbade participation in the production of armaments, constituted a violation of his First Amendment right to free exercise of religion. 444 U.S. 1070, 100 S.Ct. 1012, 62 L.Ed.2d 751 (1980).

I

Thomas terminated his employment in the Blaw-Knox Foundry & Machinery Co. when he was transferred from the roll foundry to a department that produced turrets for military tanks. He claimed his religious beliefs prevented him from participating in the production of war materials.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

1428 The respondent Review Board denied him unemployment compensation benefits by applying disqualifying provisions of the Indiana Employment Security Act. [FN1]

FN1. Indiana Code § 22-4-15-1 (Supp.1978) provides:
"With respect to benefit periods including extended benefit periods established subsequent to July 6, 1974, and before July 3, 1977, an individual who has voluntarily left his employment without good cause in connection with the work or who was discharged from his employment for just cause shall be ineligible for waiting period or benefit rights for the week in which the disqualifying separation occurred and until he has subsequently earned remuneration in employment equal to or exceeding the weekly benefit amount of his claim in each of ten (10) weeks. The weeks of a disqualification period remaining at the expiration of an individual's benefit period will be carried forward to an extended benefit period or to the benefit period of a subsequent claim only if the first week of such extended benefit period or subsequent benefit period falls within ten (10) consecutive weeks from the beginning of the disqualification period imposed on the prior claim."

*710 Thomas, a Jehovah's Witness, was hired initially to work in the roll foundry at Blaw-Knox. The function of that department was to fabricate sheet steel for a variety of industrial uses. On his application form, he listed his membership in the Jehovah's Witnesses, and noted that his hobbies were Bible study and Bible reading. However, he placed no conditions on his employment; and he did not describe his religious tenets in any detail on the form.

Approximately a year later, the roll foundry closed, and Blaw-Knox transferred Thomas to a department that fabricated turrets for military tanks. On his first day at this new job, Thomas realized that the work he was doing was weapons related. He checked the bulletin board where in-plant openings were listed, and discovered that all of the remaining departments at Blaw-Knox were engaged directly in the production of weapons. Since no transfer to another department would resolve his problem, he asked for a layoff. When that request was denied, he quit, asserting that he could not work on weapons without violating the principles of his religion. The record does not show that he was offered any nonweapons work by his employer, or that any such work was available.

Upon leaving Blaw-Knox, Thomas applied for unemployment compensation benefits under the Indiana Employment Security Act. [FN2] At an administrative hearing where he was *711 not represented by counsel, he testified that he believed that contributing to the production of arms violated his religion. He said that when he realized that his work on the tank turret line involved producing weapons for war, he consulted another Blaw-Knox employee--a friend and fellow Jehovah's Witness. The friend advised him that working on weapons parts at Blaw-Knox was not "unscriptural." Thomas was not able to "rest with" this view, however. He concluded that his friend's view was based upon a less strict reading of Witnesses' principles than his own.

FN2. Ind. Code § 22-4-1-1 et seq. (1976 and Supp.1978).

When asked at the hearing to explain what kind of work his religious convictions would permit, Thomas said that he would have no difficulty doing the type of work that he had done at the roll foundry. He testified that he could, in good conscience, engage indirectly in the production of materials that might be used ultimately to fabricate arms--for example, as an employee of a raw material supplier or of a roll foundry. [FN3]

FN3. It is reasonable to assume that some of the sheet steel processed in the roll foundry may have found its way into tanks or other weapons; the record, however, contains no evidence or finding on this point.

The hearing referee found that Thomas' religious beliefs specifically precluded him from producing or directly aiding in the manufacture of items used in warfare. [FN4] He 1429 also found that Thomas had terminated his employment because of these religious convictions. The referee reported:

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

> FN4. The referee indicated, App. to Pet. for Cert. 2a:
> "The evidence reveals that approximate [sic] two to three weeks prior to claimant's date of leaving, the 'Roll Foundry' was closed permanently and claimant was transferred to the terret [sic] line. [He], at this time, real [sic] realized that all of the other functions at the Blaw-Knox Company were engaged in producing arms for the Armament Industry. Claimant's religious beliefs specifically exempts [sic] claimant from producing or aiding in the manufacture of items used in the advancement of war."

"Claimant continually searched for a transfer to another department which would not be so armament related; *712 however, this did not materialize, and prior to the date of his leaving, claimant requested a layoff, which was denied; and on November 6, 1975, claimant did quit due to his religious convictions." [FN5]

> FN5. Id., at 2a-3a (emphasis added by petitioner).

The referee concluded nonetheless that Thomas' termination was not based upon a "good cause [arising] in connection with [his] work," as required by the Indiana unemployment compensation statute. Accordingly, he was held not entitled to benefits. The Review Board adopted the referee's findings and conclusions, and affirmed the denial of benefits. [FN6]

> FN6. The Review Board, like the referee, found that Thomas had left his job for religious reasons, id., at 5a:
> "The evidence of record indicates that claimant ... left his employment voluntarily because his religious beliefs ... would not allow him to continue to work producing arms...."

The Indiana Court of Appeals, accepting the finding that Thomas terminated his employment "due to his religious convictions," reversed the decision of the Review Board, and held that § 22-4-15-1, as applied, improperly burdened Thomas' right to the free exercise of his religion. Accordingly, it ordered the Board to extend benefits to Thomas. Thomas v. Review Board, Ind.App., 65 Ind.Dec. 238, 381 N.E.2d 888 (1978).

The Supreme Court of Indiana, dividing 3-2, vacated the decision of the Court of Appeals, and denied Thomas benefits. Ind., 391 N.E.2d 1127 (1979). With reference to the Indiana unemployment compensation statute, the court said:

> "It is not intended to facilitate changing employment or to provide relief for those who quit work voluntarily for personal reasons. Voluntary unemployment is not compensable under the purpose of the Act, which is to provide benefits for persons unemployed through no fault of their own.
> "Good cause which justifies voluntary termination must *713 be job-related and objective in character." Ind., 391 N.E.2d, at 1129 (footnotes omitted).

The court held that Thomas had quit voluntarily for personal reasons, and therefore did not qualify for benefits. Ind., 391 N.E.2d, at 1130.

In discussing the petitioner's free exercise claim, the court stated: "A personal philosophical choice rather than a religious choice, does not rise to the level of a first amendment claim." Ind., 391 N.E.2d, at 1131. The court found the basis and the precise nature of Thomas' belief unclear--but it concluded that the belief was more "personal philosophical choice" than religious belief. Nonetheless, it held that, even assuming that Thomas quit for religious reasons, he would not be entitled to benefits: under Indiana law, a termination motivated by religion is not for "good cause" objectively related to the work.

The Indiana court concluded that denying Thomas benefits would create only an indirect burden on his free exercise right and that the burden was justified by the legitimate state interest in preserving the integrity of the insurance fund and maintaining a stable work force by encouraging workers not to leave their jobs for personal reasons.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

Finally, the court held that awarding unemployment compensation benefits to a person who terminates employment voluntarily for religious reasons, while denying such benefits to persons who terminate for other personal but nonreligious reasons, would violate the Establishment Clause of the First Amendment.

1430 The judgment under review must be examined in light of our prior decisions, particularly Sherbert v. Verner, 374 U.S. 398, 83 S.Ct. 1790, 10 L.Ed.2d 965 (1963).

II

[1][2] Only beliefs rooted in religion are protected by the Free Exercise Clause, which, by its terms, gives special protection to the exercise of religion. *Sherbert v. Verner, supra; 714Wisconsin v. Yoder, 406 U.S. 205, 215-216, 92 S.Ct. 1526, 1533, 32 L.Ed.2d 15 (1972). The determination of what is a "religious" belief or practice is more often than not a difficult and delicate task, as the division in the Indiana Supreme Court attests. [FN7] However, the resolution of that question is not to turn upon a judicial perception of the particular belief or practice in question; religious beliefs need not be acceptable, logical, consistent, or comprehensible to others in order to merit First Amendment protection.

FN7. See, e. g., Torcaso v. Watkins, 367 U.S. 488, 495, 81 S.Ct. 1680, 1683, 6 L.Ed.2d 982 (1961); United States v. Ballard, 322 U.S. 78, 64 S.Ct. 882, 88 L.Ed. 1148 (1944).

In support of his claim for benefits, Thomas testified:

"Q. And then when it comes to actually producing the tank itself, hammering it out; that you will not do....

"A. That's right, that's right when ... I'm daily faced with the knowledge that these are tanks....

* * *

"A. I really could not, you know, conscientiously continue to work with armaments. It would be against all of the ... religious principles that ... I have come to learn...." Ind., 391 N.E.2d, at 1132.

Based upon this and other testimony, the referee held that Thomas "quit due to his religious convictions." [FN8] The Review Board adopted that finding, [FN9] and the finding is not challenged in this Court.

FN8. See n. 4, and text at n. 5, supra.

FN9. See n. 6, supra.

The Indiana Supreme Court apparently took a different view of the record. It concluded that "although the claimant's reasons for quitting were described as religious, it was unclear what his belief was, and what the religious basis of his belief was." [FN10] In that court's view, Thomas had made a merely "personal philosophical choice rather than a religious choice." [FN11]

FN10. Ind., 391 N.E.2d, at 1133.

FN11. Id., 391 N.E.2d, at 1131.

[3] *715 In reaching its conclusion, the Indiana court seems to have placed considerable reliance on the facts that Thomas was "struggling" with his beliefs and that he was not able to "articulate" his belief precisely. It noted, for example, that Thomas admitted before the referee that he would not object to

"working for United States Steel or Inland Steel ... produc[ing] the raw product necessary for the production of any kind of tank ... [because I] would not be a direct party to whoever they shipped it to [and] would not be ... chargeable in ... conscience...." Ind., 391 N.E.2d, at 1131.

The court found this position inconsistent with Thomas' stated opposition to participation in the production of armaments. But Thomas' statements reveal no more than that he found work in the roll foundry sufficiently insulated from producing weapons of war. We see, therefore, that Thomas drew a line, and it is not for us to say that the line he drew was an unreasonable one. Courts should not undertake to dissect religious beliefs because the believer admits that he is "struggling" with his position or because his beliefs are not articulated with the clarity and precision that a more sophisticated person might employ.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

The Indiana court also appears to have given significant weight to the fact that another Jehovah's Witness had no scruples about working on tank turrets; for that other Witness, at least, such work was "scripturally" acceptable. Intrafaith differences 1431 of that kind are not uncommon among followers of a particular creed, and the judicial process is singularly ill equipped to resolve such differences in relation to the Religion Clauses. One can, of course, imagine an asserted claim so bizarre, so clearly nonreligious in motivation, as not to be entitled to protection under the Free Exercise Clause; but that is not the case here, and the guarantee of free exercise is not limited to beliefs which are shared by all of the members *716 of a religious sect. Particularly in this sensitive area, it is not within the judicial function and judicial competence to inquire whether the petitioner or his fellow worker more correctly perceived the commands of their common faith. Courts are not arbiters of scriptural interpretation.

The narrow function of a reviewing court in this context is to determine whether there was an appropriate finding that petitioner terminated his work because of an honest conviction that such work was forbidden by his religion. Not surprisingly, the record before the referee and the Review Board was not made with an eye to the microscopic examination often exercised in appellate judicial review. However, judicial review is confined to the facts as found and conclusions drawn. On this record, it is clear that Thomas terminated his employment for religious reasons.

III
A

[4] More that 30 years ago, the Court held that a person may not be compelled to choose between the exercise of a First Amendment right and participation in an otherwise available public program. A state may not

> "exclude individual Catholics, Lutherans, Mohammedans, Baptists, Jews, Methodists, Non-believers, Presbyterians, or the members of any other faith, because of their faith, or lack of it, from receiving the benefits of public welfare legislation." Everson v. Board of Education, 330 U.S. 1, 16, 67 S.Ct. 504, 511, 91 L.Ed. 711 (1947) (emphasis deleted).

Later, in Sherbert, the Court examined South Carolina's attempt to deny unemployment compensation benefits to a Sabbatarian who declined to work on Saturday. In sustaining her right to receive benefits, the Court held:

> "The ruling [disqualifying Mrs. Sherbert from benefits because of her refusal to work on Saturday in violation of her faith] forces her to choose between following the *717 precepts of her religion and forfeiting benefits, on the one hand, and abandoning one of the precepts of her religion in order to accept work, on the other hand. Governmental imposition of such a choice puts the same kind of burden upon the free exercise of religion as would a fine imposed against [her] for her Saturday worship." 374 U.S., at 404, 83 S.Ct., at 1794.

The respondent Review Board argues, and the Indiana Supreme Court held, that the burden upon religion here is only the indirect consequence of public welfare legislation that the State clearly has authority to enact. "Neutral objective standards must be met to qualify for compensation." Ind., 391 N.E.2d, at 1130. Indiana requires applicants for unemployment compensation to show that they left work for "good cause in connection with the work." Ibid.

A similar argument was made and rejected in Sherbert, however. It is true that, as in Sherbert, the Indiana law does not compel a violation of conscience. But, "this is only the beginning, not the end, of our inquiry." 374 U.S., at 403-404, 83 S.Ct., at 1794. In a variety of ways we have said that "[a] regulation neutral on its face may, in its application, nonetheless offend the constitutional requirement for governmental neutrality if it unduly burdens the free exercise of religion." Wisconsin v. Yoder, 406 U.S., at 220, 92 S.Ct., at 1535. Cf. Walz v. Tax Comm'n, 397 U.S. 664, 90 S.Ct. 1409, 25 L.Ed.2d 697 (1970).

[5] Here, as in Sherbert, the employee was put to a choice between fidelity to 1432 religious belief or cessation of work; the coercive impact on

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

Thomas is indistinguishable from Sherbert, where the Court held:

> "[N]ot only is it apparent that appellant's declared ineligibility for benefits derives solely from the practice of her religion, but the pressure upon her to forego, that practice is unmistakable." 374 U.S., at 404, 83 S.Ct., at 1794.

Where the state conditions receipt of an important benefit upon conduct proscribed by a religious faith, or where it denies *718 such a benefit because of conduct mandated by religious belief, thereby putting substantial pressure on an adherent to modify his behavior and to violate his beliefs, a burden upon religion exists. While the compulsion may be indirect, the infringement upon free exercise is nonetheless substantial.

The respondents also contend that Sherbert is inapposite because, in that case, the employee was dismissed by the employer's action. But we see that Mrs. Sherbert was dismissed because she refused to work on Saturdays after the plant went to a 6-day workweek. Had Thomas simply presented himself at the Blaw-Knox plant turret line but refused to perform any assigned work, it must be assumed that he, like Sherbert, would have been terminated by the employer's action, if no other work was available. In both cases, the termination flowed from the fact that the employment, once acceptable, became religiously objectionable because of changed conditions.

B

[6] The mere fact that the petitioner's religious practice is burdened by a governmental program does not mean that an exemption accommodating his practice must be granted. The state may justify an inroad on religious liberty by showing that it is the least restrictive means of achieving some compelling state interest. However, it is still true that "[t]he essence of all that has been said and written on the subject is that only those interests of the highest order . . . can overbalance legitimate claims to the free exercise of religion." Wisconsin v. Yoder, supra, 406 U.S., at 215, 92 S.Ct., at 1533.

[7] The purposes urged to sustain the disqualifying provision of the Indiana unemployment compensation scheme are twofold: (1) to avoid the widespread unemployment and the consequent burden on the fund resulting if people were permitted to leave jobs for "personal" reasons; [FN12] and (2) to *719 avoid a detailed probing by employers into job applicants' religious beliefs. These are by no means unimportant considerations. When the focus of the inquiry is properly narrowed, however, we must conclude that the interests advanced by the State do not justify the burden placed on free exercise of religion.

> FN12. A similar interest--the integrity of the insurance fund--was advanced and rejected in Sherbert v. Verner, 374 U.S. 398, 407, 83 S.Ct. 1790, 1795, 10 L.Ed.2d 965 (1963).

There is no evidence in the record to indicate that the number of people who find themselves in the predicament of choosing between benefits and religious beliefs is large enough to create "widespread unemployment," or even to seriously affect unemployment--and no such claim was advanced by the Review Board. Similarly, although detailed inquiry by employers into applicants' religious beliefs is undesirable, there is no evidence in the record to indicate that such inquiries will occur in Indiana, or that they have occurred in any of the states that extend benefits to people in the petitioner's position. Nor is there any reason to believe that the number of people terminating employment for religious reasons will be so great as to motivate employers to make such inquiries.

Neither of the interests advanced is sufficiently compelling to justify the burden upon Thomas' religious liberty. Accordingly, Thomas is entitled to receive benefits unless, as the respondents contend and the Indiana court held, such payment would violate the Establishment Clause.

1433 IV

[8] The respondents contend that to compel benefit payments to Thomas involves the State in fostering a religious faith. There is, in a sense, a "benefit" to Thomas deriving from his religious beliefs, but this manifests no more than the tension between the two Religious Clauses which the Court resolved in Sherbert:

> "In holding as we do, plainly we are not fostering > the 'establishment' of the Seventh-day Adventist religion *720 in South Carolina, for the extension of unemployment benefits to Sabbatarians in common with Sunday worshippers reflects nothing more than the governmental obligation of neutrality in the face of religious differences, and does not represent that involvement of religious with secular institutions which it is the object of the Establishment Clause to forestall." Sherbert v. Verner, 374 U.S., at 409, 83 S.Ct., at 1796.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

See also Wisconsin v. Yoder, 406 U.S., at 220-221, 92 S.Ct., at 1535- 1536; Walz v. Tax Comm'n, 397 U.S., at 668-669, 90 S.Ct., at 1411; O'Hair v. Andrus, 198 U.S.App.D.C. 198, 201-204, 613 F.2d 931, 934-937 (1979) (Leventhal, J.).

[9] Unless we are prepared to overrule Sherbert, supra, Thomas cannot be denied the benefits due him on the basis of the findings of the referee, the Review Board, and the Indiana Court of Appeals that he terminated his employment because of his religious convictions.

Reversed.

Justice BLACKMUN joins Parts I, II, and III of the Court's opinion. As to Part IV thereof, he concurs in the result.

Justice REHNQUIST, dissenting.

The Court today holds that the State of Indiana is constitutionally required to provide direct financial assistance to a person solely on the basis of his religious beliefs. Because I believe that the decision today adds mud to the already muddied waters of First Amendment jurisprudence, I dissent.

I

The Court correctly acknowledges that there is a "tension" between the Free Exercise and Establishment Clauses of the First Amendment of the United States Constitution. Although the relationship of the two Clauses has been the subject of much commentary, the "tension" is a fairly recent *721 vintage, unknown at the time of the framing and adoption of the First Amendment. The causes of the tension, it seems to me, are threefold. First, the growth of social welfare legislation during the latter part of the 20th century has greatly magnified the potential for conflict between the two Clauses, since such legislation touches the individual at so many points in his life. Second, the decision by this Court that the First Amendment was "incorporated" into the Fourteenth Amendment and thereby made applicable against the States, Stromberg v. California, 283 U.S. 359, 51 S.Ct. 532, 75 L.Ed. 1117 (1931); Cantwell v. Connecticut, 310 U.S. 296, 60 S.Ct. 900, 84 L.Ed. 1213 (1940), similarly multiplied the number of instances in which the "tension" might arise. The third, and perhaps most important, cause of the tension is our overly expansive interpretation of both Clauses. By broadly construing both Clauses, the Court has constantly narrowed the channel between the Scylla and Charybdis through which any state or federal action must pass in order to survive constitutional scrutiny.

None of these developments could have been foreseen by those who framed and adopted the First Amendment. The First Amendment was adopted well before the growth of much social welfare legislation and at a time when the Federal Government was in a real sense considered a government of limited delegated powers. Indeed, the principal argument against adopting the Constitution without a "Bill of Rights" was not that such an enactment would be undesirable but that it was unnecessary because of the limited nature of the Federal Government. So long as the Government enacts little social welfare legislation, 1434 as was the case in 1791, there are few occasions in which the two Clauses may conflict. Moreover, as originally enacted, the First Amendment applied only to the Federal Government, not the government of the States. Barron v. Baltimore, 7 Pet. 243, 8 L.Ed. 672 (1833). The Framers could hardly anticipate Barron being superseded by the "selective incorporation" doctrine adopted by the Court, a decision which greatly expanded the number of statutes *722 which would be subject to challenge under the First Amendment. Because those who drafted and adopted the First Amendment could not have foreseen either the growth of social welfare legislation or the incorporation of the First Amendment into the Fourteenth Amendment, we simply do not know how they would view the scope of the two Clauses.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

II

The decision today illustrates how far astray the Court has gone in interpreting the Free Exercise and Establishment Clauses of the First Amendment. Although the Court holds that a State is constitutionally required to provide direct financial assistance to persons solely on the basis of their religious beliefs and recognizes the "tension" between the two Clauses, it does little to help resolve that tension or to offer meaningful guidance to other courts which must decide cases like this on a day-by-day basis. Instead, it simply asserts that there is no Establishment Clause violation here and leaves the tension between the two Religion Clauses to be resolved on a case-by-case basis. As suggested above, however, I believe that the "tension" is largely of this Court's own making, and would diminish almost to the vanishing point if the Clauses were properly interpreted.

Just as it did in Sherbert v. Verner, 374 U.S. 398, 83 S.Ct. 1790, 10 L.Ed.2d 965 (1963), the Court today reads the Free Exercise Clause more broadly than is warranted. As to the proper interpretation of the Free Exercise Clause, I would accept the decision of Braunfeld v. Brown, 366 U.S. 599, 81 S.Ct. 1144, 6 L.Ed.2d 563 (1961), and the dissent in Sherbert. In Braunfeld, we held that Sunday closing laws do not violate the First Amendment rights of Sabbatarians. Chief Justice Warren explained that the statute did not make unlawful any religious practices of appellants; it simply made the practice of their religious beliefs more expensive. We concluded that "[t]o strike down, without the most critical scrutiny, legislation which imposes only an indirect burden on the exercise of religion, i. e. legislation which does not*723 make unlawful the religious practice itself, would radically restrict the operating latitude of the legislature." 366 U.S., at 606, 81 S.Ct., at 1147. Likewise in this case, it cannot be said that the State discriminated against Thomas on the basis of his religious beliefs or that he was denied benefits because he was a Jehovah's Witness. Where, as here, a State has enacted a general statute, the purpose and effect of which is to advance the State's secular goals, the Free Exercise Clause does not in my view require the State to conform that statute to the dictates of religious conscience of any group. As Justice Harlan recognized in his dissent in Sherbert v. Verner, supra: "Those situations in which the Constitution may require special treatment on account of religion are ... few and far between." Id., at 423, 83 S.Ct., at 1804. Like him I believe that although a State could choose to grant exemptions to religious persons from state unemployment regulations, [FN1] a State is not constitutionally 1435 compelled to do so. Id., at 422-423, 83 S.Ct., at 1803-1804. [FN2]

FN1. Even if I were to agree that Sherbert was correctly decided, I still would dissent on the grounds that today's decision unjustifiably extends Sherbert. The Indiana Employment Security Act, Ind.Code § 22-4-15-1 (Supp.1978), provides that an "individual who has voluntarily left his employment without good cause in connection with his employment" is disqualified from receiving benefits. In this case, the Supreme Court of Indiana "found the basis and the precise nature of Thomas' belief unclear" and concluded that the belief was more "personal philosophical choice" than religious belief. Ante, at 1429. The Court's failure to make clear whether it accepts or rejects this finding by the Indiana Supreme Court, the highest court of the State, suggests that a person who leaves his job for purely "personal philosophical choices" will be constitutionally entitled to unemployment benefits. If that is true, the implications of today's decision are enormous. Persons will then be able to quit their jobs, assert they did so for personal reasons, and collect unemployment insurance. We could surely expect the State's limited funds allotted for unemployment insurance to be quickly depleted.
In addition, the Court's opinion in Sherbert, 374 U.S., at 401, n.4, 83 S.Ct., at 1792, n.4, seems to suggest by negative implication that where a State makes every "personal reason" for leaving a job a basis for disqualification from unemployment benefits, the State need not grant an exemption to persons such as Sherbert who do quit for "personal reasons." In this case, the Indiana Supreme Court has construed the State's unemployment statute to make every personal subjective reason for leaving a job a basis for disqualification. E. g., Geckler v. Review Bd. of the Indiana Employment Security Div., 244 Ind. 473, 193 N.E.2d 357 (1963). This case is thus distinguishable from Sherbert. Because Thomas left his job for a personal reason, the State of Indiana should not be prohibited from disqualifying him from receiving benefits.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

FN2. To the extent Sherbert was correctly decided, it might be argued that cases such as McCollum v. Board of Education, 333 U.S. 203, 68 S.Ct. 461, 92 L.Ed. 649 (1948); Engel v. Vitale, 370 U.S. 421, 82 S.Ct. 1261, 8 L.Ed.2d 601 (1962); Abington School District v. Schempp, 374 U.S. 203, 83 S.Ct. 1560, 10 L.Ed.2d 844 (1963); Lemon v. Kurtzman, 403 U.S. 602, 91 S.Ct. 2105, 29 L.Ed.2d 745 (1971); and Committee for Public Education v. Nyquist, 413 U.S. 756, 93 S.Ct. 2955, 37 L.Ed.2d 948 (1973), were wrongly decided. The "aid" rendered to religion in these latter cases may not be significantly different, in kind or degree, than the "aid" afforded Mrs. Sherbert or Thomas. For example, if the State in Sherbert could not deny compensation to one refusing work for religious reasons, it might be argued that a State may not deny reimbursement to students who choose for religious reasons to attend parochial schools. The argument would be that although a State need not allocate any funds to education, once it has done so, it may not require any person to sacrifice his religious beliefs in order to obtain an equal education. See Lemon, supra, 403 U.S., at 665, 91 S.Ct., at 2137 (opinion of WHITE, J.); Nyquist, supra, 413 U.S., at 798-805, 93 S.Ct., at 2978-2992 (opinion of BURGER, C. J.). There can be little doubt that to the extent secular education provides answers to important moral questions without reference to religion or teaches that there are no answers, a person in one sense sacrifices his religious belief by attending secular schools. And even if such "aid" were not constitutionally compelled by the Free Exercise Clause, Justice Harlan may well have been right in Sherbert when he found sufficient flexibility in the Establishment Clause to permit the States to voluntarily choose to grant such benefits to individuals.

*724 The Court's treatment of the Establishment Clause issue is equally unsatisfying. Although today's decision requires a State to provide direct financial assistance to persons solely on the basis of their religious beliefs, the Court nonetheless blandly assures us, just as it did in Sherbert, that its decision "plainly" does not foster the "establishment" of religion. Ante, at 1433. I would agree that the Establishment Clause, properly interpreted, would not be violated if Indiana voluntarily *725 chose to grant unemployment benefits to those persons who left their jobs for religious reasons. But I also believe that the decision below is inconsistent with many of our prior Establishment Clause cases. Those cases, if faithfully applied, would require us to hold that such voluntary action by a State did violate the Establishment Clause.

Justice STEWART noted this point in his concurring opinion in Sherbert, 374 U.S., at 414-417, 83 S.Ct., at 1799-1801. He observed that decisions like Sherbert, and the one rendered today, squarely conflict with the more extreme language of many of our prior Establishment Clause cases. In Everson v. Board of Education, 330 U.S. 1, 67 S.Ct. 504, 91 L.Ed. 711 (1949), the Court stated that the Establishment Clause bespeaks a "government ... stripped of all power ... to support, or otherwise to assist any or all religions ...," and no State "can pass laws which aid one religion ... [or] all religions." Id., at 11, 15, 67 S.Ct., at 509, 511. In Torcaso v. Watkins, 367 U.S. 488, 495, 81 S.Ct. 1680, 1683, 6 L.Ed.2d 982 (1961), the Court asserted that the government cannot "constitutionally pass laws or impose requirements which aid all religions as against non- believers." And in 1436*Abington School District v. Schempp*, 374 U.S. 203, 217, 83 S.Ct. 1560, 1568, 10 L.Ed.2d 844 (1963), the Court adopted Justice Rutledge's words in Everson that the Establishment Clause forbids " 'every form of public aid or support for religion.' " See also Engel v. Vitale, 370 U.S. 421, 431, 82 S.Ct. 1261, 1267, 8 L.Ed.2d 601 (1962).

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

In recent years the Court has moved away from the mechanistic "no-aid-to- religion" approach to the Establishment Clause and has stated a three-part test to determine the constitutionality of governmental aid to religion. See Lemon v. Kurtzman, 403 U.S. 602, 91 S.Ct. 2105, 29 L.Ed.2d 745 (1971); Committee for Public Education v. Nyquist, 413 U.S. 756, 772-773, 93 S.Ct. 2955, 2965, 37 L.Ed.2d 948 (1973). First, the statute must serve a secular legislative purpose. Second, it must have a "primary effect" that neither advances nor inhibits religion. And third, the State and its administration must avoid excessive entanglement with religion. Walz v. Tax Comm'n, 397 U.S. 664, 90 S.Ct. 1409, 25 L.Ed.2d 697 (1970).

*726 It is not surprising that the Court today makes no attempt to apply those principles to the facts of this case. If Indiana were to legislate what the Court today requires--an unemployment compensation law which permitted benefits to be granted to those persons who quit their jobs for religious reasons--the statute would "plainly" violate the Establishment Clause as interpreted in such cases as Lemon and Nyquist. First, although the unemployment statute as a whole would be enacted to serve a secular legislative purpose, the proviso would clearly serve only a religious purpose. It would grant financial benefits for the sole purpose of accommodating religious beliefs. Second, there can be little doubt that the primary effect of the proviso would be to "advance" religion by facilitating the exercise of religious belief. Third, any statute including such a proviso would surely "entangle" the State in religion far more than the mere grant of tax exemptions, as in Walz, or the award of tuition grants and tax credits, as in Nyquist. By granting financial benefits to persons solely on the basis of their religious beliefs, the State must necessarily inquire whether the claimant's belief is "religious" and whether it is sincerely held. Otherwise any dissatisfied employee may leave his job without cause and claim that he did so because his own particular beliefs required it.

It is unclear from the Court's opinion whether it has temporarily retreated from its expansive view of the Establishment Clause, or wholly abandoned it. I would welcome the latter. Just as I think that Justice Harlan in Sherbert correctly stated the proper approach to free exercise questions, I believe that Justice STEWART, dissenting in Abington School District v. Schempp, supra, accurately stated the reach of the Establishment Clause. He explained that the Establishment Clause is limited to "government support of proselytizing activities of religious sects by throwing the weight of secular authorit[ies] behind the dissemination of religious tenets." Id., at 314, 83 S.Ct., at 1619. See McCollum v. Board of Education, 333 U.S. 203, 248, 68 S.Ct. 461, 483, 92 L.Ed. 649 (1948) (Reed, J., dissenting) *727 (impermissible aid is only "purposeful assistance directly to the church itself or to some religious group ... performing ecclesiastical functions"). Conversely, governmental assistance which does not have the effect of "inducing" religious belief, but instead merely "accommodates" or implements an independent religious choice does not impermissibly involve the government in religious choices and therefore does not violate the Establishment Clause of the First Amendment. I would think that in this case, as in Sherbert, had the State voluntarily chosen to pay unemployment compensation benefits to persons who left their jobs for religious reasons, such aid would be constitutionally permissible because it redounds directly to the benefit of the individual. Accord, Wolman v. Walter, 433 U.S. 229, 97 S.Ct. 2593, 53 L.Ed.2d 714 (1977) (upholding various disbursements made to pupils in parochial schools).

1437 In sum, my difficulty with today's decision is that it reads the Free Exercise Clause too broadly and it fails to squarely acknowledge that such a reading conflicts with many of our Establishment Clause cases. As such, the decision simply exacerbates the "tension" between the two Clauses. If the Court were to construe the Free Exercise Clause as it did in Braunfeld and the Establishment Clause as Justice STEWART did in Schempp, the circumstances in which there would be a conflict between the two Clauses would be few and far between. Although I heartily agree with the Court's tacit abandonment of much of our rhetoric about the Establishment Clause, I regret that the Court cannot see its way clear to restore what was surely intended to have been a greater degree of flexibility to the Federal and State Governments in legislating consistently with the Free Exercise Clause. Accordingly, I would affirm the judgment of the Indiana Supreme Court.

101 S.Ct. 1425, 450 U.S. 707, 67 L.Ed.2d 624, 25

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

Fair Empl.Prac.Cas. (BNA) 629, 25 Empl. Prac. Dec. P 31,662

Briefs and Other Related Documents (Back to top)

- 1980 WL 339245 (Appellate Brief) Reply Brief (Sep. 29, 1980)

- 1980 WL 339244 (Appellate Brief) Brief of Respondent, The Review Board of the Indiana Employment Security Division (May. 05, 1980)

- 1980 WL 339246 (Appellate Brief) Motion of the American Civil Liberties Union for Leave to File and Brief, Amicus Curiae (Apr. 04, 1980)

- 1980 WL 339248 (Appellate Brief) Motion for Leave to File Brief Amicus Curiae and Brief of the American Jewish Congress, Amicus Curiae (Apr. 04, 1980)

- 1980 WL 339250 (Appellate Brief) Motion for Leave to File Amicus Curiae Brief and Brief of Americans United for Separation of Church and State Fund, Inc. as Amicus Curiae (Apr. 04, 1980)

- 1980 WL 339252 (Appellate Brief) Motion for Leave to File Brief Amici Curiae and Brief of Jewish Peace Fellowship and Fellowship of Reconciliation, Amici Curiae (Apr. 04, 1980)

- 1980 WL 339241 (Appellate Brief) Brief for the Petitioner (Apr. 03, 1980)

END OF DOCUMENT

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

BLUEBIRD (888) 477-0700 www.bluebirdonline.com
OFFICE SUPPLIES

EXHIBIT 52

102 S.Ct. 1051
71 L.Ed.2d 127, 49 A.F.T.R.2d 82-802, 82-1 USTC P 9205
(Cite as: 455 U.S. 252, 102 S.Ct. 1051)

Briefs and Other Related Documents

Supreme Court of the United States

UNITED STATES, Appellant
v.
Edwin D. LEE.

No. 80-767.

Argued Nov. 2, 1981.
Decided Feb. 23, 1982.

Employer, a member of the Old Order Amish who employed several other Amish to work on his farm and in his carpentry shop, sued for refund of taxes, claiming that imposition of social security taxes violated his First Amendment free exercise rights and those of his Amish employees. The United States District Court for the Western District of Pennsylvania, 497 F.Supp. 180, held that statutes requiring employer to pay social security and unemployment insurance taxes were unconstitutional as applied, and direct appeal was taken. The Supreme Court, Chief Justice Burger, held that: (1) exemption provided by statute for self-employed members of religious groups who oppose social security taxes is available only to self-employed individuals and does not apply to employers or employees, and thus Amish employer and his employees were not within exemption statute; (2) because payment of taxes or receipt of benefits violated Amish religious beliefs, compulsory participation in social security system interfered with their free exercise rights; but (3) religious belief in conflict with payment of taxes affords no basis for resisting tax imposed on employers to support social security system, which must be applied uniformly to all except as Congress provides explicitly otherwise.

Reversed and remanded.

Justice Stevens filed an opinion concurring in the judgment.

West Headnotes

[1] Internal Revenue ⇐4371
220k4371 Most Cited Cases

Statutory exemption from social security taxes for self-employed Amish and self-employed members of other religious groups with similar beliefs opposing national social security system is available only to self-employed individuals and does not apply to employers or employees, and consequently Amish employer and his employees were not within express provisions of exemption statute. 26 U.S.C.A. § 1402(g).

[2] Constitutional Law ⇐84.5(8)
92k84.5(8) Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 92k84)

[2] Internal Revenue ⇐4352
220k4352 Most Cited Cases

Payment of social security taxes and receipt of social security benefits violated Amish religious belief in obligation to provide for their fellow members because of assistance contemplated by social security system, and thus compulsory participation in social security system interfered with Amish's free exercise rights. 26 U.S.C.A. §§ 3101, 3102(b), 3111, 3301; U.S.C.A.Const.Amend. 1.

[3] Constitutional Law ⇐84.1
92k84.1 Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 92k84(1), 92k84)

Not all burdens on religion are unconstitutional and state may justify limitation on religious liberty by showing that it is essential to accomplish overriding government interests. U.S.C.A.Const.Amend. 1.

[4] Internal Revenue ⇐4352
220k4352 Most Cited Cases

Since government's interest in assuring mandatory and continuous participation in and contribution to social security system is very high, and since tax system could not function if denominations were allowed to challenge tax system because tax payments were spent in manner that violated their religious beliefs, imposition of social security taxes is constitutional as applied to persons who object on religious grounds to receipt of public insurance benefits and to payment of taxes to support public insurance funds. U.S.C.A.Const.Amend. 1; 26 U.S.C.A. §§ 3101, 3102(b), 3111, 3301.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

[5] Constitutional Law ⚖84.5(8)
92k84.5(8) Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 92k84)

[5] Internal Revenue ⚖4352
220k4352 Most Cited Cases

[5] Internal Revenue ⚖4371
220k4371 Most Cited Cases

Although self-employed Amish are exempt from social security taxes, when followers of particular sect enter into commercial activity as matter of choice, limits they accept on their own conduct as matter of conscience and faith are not to be superimposed on statutory scheme binding on others in that activity, and thus, since tax imposed on employers to support social security system must be uniformly applicable to all except as Congress provides explicitly otherwise, Amish employer could not avoid payment of social security taxes on theory that imposition of taxes violated his First Amendment free exercise rights. U.S.C.A.Const.Amend. 1; 26 U.S.C.A. §§ 1402(g), 3101, 3102(b), 3111, 3301.

1052 *252 Syllabus [FN*]

FN* The syllabus constitutes no part of the opinion of the Court but has been prepared by the Reporter of Decisions for the convenience of the reader. See United States v. Detroit Lumber Co., 200 U.S. 321, 337, 26 S.Ct. 282, 287, 50 L.Ed. 499.

Appellee, a farmer and carpenter, is a member of the Old Order Amish, who believe that there is a religiously based obligation to provide for their fellow members the kind of assistance contemplated by the social security system. During certain years when he employed other Amish to work on his farm and in his carpentry shop, appellee failed to withhold social security taxes from his employees or to pay the employer's share of such taxes because he believed that payment of the taxes and receipt of benefits would violate the Amish faith. After the Internal Revenue Service assessed him for the unpaid taxes, appellee paid a certain amount and then sued in Federal District Court for a refund, claiming that imposition of the taxes violated his First Amendment free exercise of religion rights and those of his employees. The District Court held the statutes requiring appellee to pay social security taxes unconstitutional as applied, basing its holding on both 26 U.S.C. § 1402(g), which exempts from social security taxes, on religious grounds, self-employed Amish and others, and the First Amendment.

Held:

1. The exemption provided by § 1402(g), being available only to self- employed individuals, does not apply to employers or employees, and hence appellee 1053 and his employees are not within its provisions. Pp. 1054- 1055.

2. The imposition of social security taxes is not unconstitutional as applied to such persons as appellee who object on religious grounds to receipt of public insurance benefits and to payment of taxes to support public insurance funds. Pp. 1055-1057.

(a) While there is a conflict between the Amish faith and the obligations imposed by the social security system, not all burdens on religion are unconstitutional. The state may justify a limitation on religious liberty by showing that it is essential to accomplish an overriding governmental interest. P. 1055.

(b) Widespread individual voluntary coverage under social security would undermine the soundness of the social security system, and would make such system almost a contradiction in terms and difficult, if not impossible, to administer. Pp. 1055-1056.

*253 c) It would be difficult to accommodate the social security system with myriad exceptions flowing from a wide variety of religious beliefs such as the Amish. Wisconsin v. Yoder, 406 U.S. 205, 92 S.Ct. 1526, 32 L.Ed.2d 15, distinguished. There is no principled way for purposes of this case to distinguish between general taxes and those imposed under the Social Security Act. The tax system could not function if denominations were allowed to challenge it because tax payments were spent in a manner that violates their religious belief. Because the broad public interest in maintaining a sound tax system is of such a high order, religious belief in conflict with the payment of taxes affords no basis for resisting the tax. P. 1056.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

(d) Congress in § 1402(g) has accommodated, to the extent compatible with a comprehensive national program, the practices of those who believe it a violation of their faith to participate in the social security system. When followers of a particular sect enter into commercial activity as a matter of choice, the limits they accept on their own conduct as a matter of conscience and faith are not to be superimposed on the statutory schemes that are binding on others in that activity. Granting an exemption from social security taxes to an employer operates to impose the employer's religious faith on the employees. The tax imposed on employers to support the social security system must be uniformly applicable to all, except as Congress explicitly provides otherwise. Pp. 1056-1057.

497 F.Supp. 180, reversed and remanded.

Lawrence G. Wallace, Washington, D. C., for appellant.

Francis X. Caiazza, New Castle, Pa., for appellee.

254 Chief Justice BURGER delivered the opinion of the Court.

We noted probable jurisdiction to determine whether imposition of social security taxes is unconstitutional as applied to persons who object on religious grounds to receipt of public insurance benefits and to payment of taxes to support public insurance funds. 450 U.S. 993, 101 S.Ct. 1693, 68 L.Ed.2d 192 (1981). The District Court, 497 F.Supp. 180, concluded that the Free Exercise Clause prohibits forced payment of social security taxes when payment of taxes and receipt of benefits violate the taxpayer's religion. We reverse.

I

Appellee, a member of the Old Order Amish, is a farmer and carpenter. From 1970 to 1977, appellee employed several other Amish to work on his farm and in his carpentry shop. He failed to file the quarterly social security tax returns required of employers, withhold social security tax from his employees, or pay the employer's share of social security taxes. [FN1]

FN1. The Social Security Act and its subsequent amendments provide a system of old-age and unemployment benefits. 26 U.S.C. § 3101 et seq. (1976 ed. and Supp.III). These benefits are supported by various taxes, including, relevant to this appeal, the Federal Insurance Contributions Act (FICA) and the Federal Unemployment Tax Act (FUTA) taxes. The FICA tax is a tax paid in part by employees through withholding, 26 U.S.C. § 3101 (1976 ed., Supp.III), and in part by employers through an excise tax. 26 U.S.C. § 3111 (1976 ed., Supp.III). The FUTA tax is an excise tax imposed only on employers. 26 U.S.C. § 3301. Both taxes are based on the wages paid to employees, and the recordkeeping and transmittal of funds are obligations of the employer. Only the FICA tax is collected from self-employed individuals.
In this case appellee failed to pay the employer's portion of the FICA taxes and FUTA taxes and failed to withhold his employee's contributions to the FICA taxes. An employer is liable for payment of the employee's share of FICA taxes whether or not he withholds the required amount of the employee's contribution. 26 U.S.C. § 3102(b).

*1054 In 1978, the Internal Revenue Service assessed appellee in excess of $27,000 for unpaid employment taxes; he paid $91--255 the amount owed for the first quarter of 1973--and then sued in the United States District Court for the Western District of Pennsylvania for a refund, claiming that imposition of the social security taxes violated his First Amendment free exercise rights and those of his Amish employees. [FN2]

FN2. Appellee also requested injunctive relief to prevent the Commissioner of Internal Revenue from attempting to collect the unpaid balance of the assessments. Under the Internal Revenue

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

Code, injunctive relief is to be granted sparingly and only in exceptional circumstances. 26 U.S.C. § 7421(a) (1976 ed., Supp.III). The District Court therefore denied injunctive relief, but noted that should the Government attempt to collect the remaining payments "further Court relief could be requested." 497 F.Supp. 180, 184 (1980).

The District Court held the statutes requiring appellee to pay social security and unemployment insurance taxes unconstitutional as applied. 497 F.Supp. 180 (1980). The court noted that the Amish believe it sinful not to provide for their own elderly and needy and therefore are religiously opposed to the national social security system. [FN3] The court also accepted appellee's contention that the Amish religion not only prohibits the acceptance of social security benefits, but also bars all contributions by Amish to the social security system. The District Court observed that in light of their beliefs, Congress has accommodated self-employed Amish and self-employed members of other religious groups with similar beliefs by providing exemptions from social security taxes. 26 U.S.C. § 1402(g). [FN4] The court's holding was based on both 256 the exemption statute for the self-employed and the First Amendment; appellee and others "who fall within the carefully circumscribed definition provided in 1402(g) are relieved from paying the employer's share of [social security taxes] as it is an unconstitutional infringement upon the free exercise of their religion." [FN5] 497 F.Supp., at 184.

FN3. Appellee indicates that his scriptural basis for this belief was: "But if any provide not ... for those of his own house, he hath denied the faith, and is worse than an infidel." (I Timothy 5: 8.)

FN4. Title 26 U.S.C. § 1402(g) provides, in part:
"(1) Exemption
Any individual may file an application ... for an exemption from the tax imposed by this chapter if he is a member of a recognized religious sect or division thereof and is an adherent of established tenets or teachings of such sect or division by reason of which he is conscientiously opposed to acceptance of the benefits of any private or public insurance which makes payments in the event of death, disability, old-age, or retirement or makes payments toward the cost of, or provides services for, medical care (including the benefits of any insurance system established by the Social Security Act)."
In order to qualify for the exemption, the applicant must waive his right to all social security benefits and the Secretary of Health and Human Services must find that the particular religious group makes sufficient provision for its dependent members.

FN5. The precise basis of the District Court opinion is not clear. The court recognized that on its face § 1402(g) does not apply to appellee because he is not a self-employed individual. The District Court nonetheless used the language of § 1402(g) to provide an exemption for appellee. The court's decision to grant appellee an exemption, however, appears to be based on its view that the statute was unconstitutional as applied. Consequently, this Court has jurisdiction under 28 U.S.C. § 1252 to hear the appeal. See also United States v. American Friends Service Committee, 419 U.S. 7, 9, n. 4, 95 S.Ct. 13, 14, n. 4, 42 L.Ed.2d 7 (1974).

*1055 Direct appeal from the judgment of the District Court was taken pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1252.

II

[1] The exemption provided by § 1402(g) is available only to self- employed individuals and does not apply to employers or employees. Consequently, appellee and his employees are not within the express provisions of § 1402(g). Thus any exemption from payment of the employer's share of social security taxes must come from a constitutionally required exemption.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

A

[2] The preliminary inquiry in determining the existence of a constitutionally required exemption is whether the payment *257 of social security taxes and the receipt of benefits interferes with the free exercise rights of the Amish. The Amish believe that there is a religiously based obligation to provide for their fellow members the kind of assistance contemplated by the social security system. Although the Government does not challenge the sincerity of this belief, the Government does contend that payment of social security taxes will not threaten the integrity of the Amish religious belief or observance. It is not within "the judicial function and judicial competence," however, to determine whether appellee or the Government has the proper interpretation of the Amish faith; "[c]ourts are not arbiters of scriptural interpretation." Thomas v. Review Bd. of Indiana Employment Security Div., 450 U.S. 707, 716, 101 S.Ct. 1425, 1431, 67 L.Ed.2d 624 (1981). [FN6] We therefore accept appellee's contention that both payment and receipt of social security benefits is forbidden by the Amish faith. Because the payment of the taxes or receipt of benefits violates Amish religious beliefs, compulsory participation in the social security system interferes with their free exercise rights.

> FN6. This is not an instance in which the asserted claim is "so bizarre, so clearly nonreligious in motivation, as not to be entitled to protection under the Free Exercise Clause." Thomas v. Review Bd. of Indiana Employment Security Div., 450 U.S., at 715, 101 S.Ct., at 1431. At least one other religious organization has sought an exemption under § 1402(g). See also Henson v. Commissioner, 66 T.C. 835 (1976) (member of Sai Baba denied exemption because although opposed to insurance on religious grounds, the faith did not provide for its dependent members).

[3] The conclusion that there is a conflict between the Amish faith and the obligations imposed by the social security system is only the beginning, however, and not the end of the inquiry. Not all burdens on religion are unconstitutional. See, e.g., Prince v. Massachusetts, 321 U.S. 158, 64 S.Ct. 438, 88 L.Ed. 645 (1944); Reynolds v. United States, 98 U.S. 145, 25 L.Ed. 244 (1879). The state may justify a limitation on religious liberty by showing that it is essential to accomplish an overriding governmental interest. 258 Thomas, supra; Wisconsin v. Yoder*, 406 U.S. 205, 92 S.Ct. 1526, 32 L.Ed.2d 15 (1972); Gillette v. United States, 401 U.S. 437, 91 S.Ct. 828, 28 L.Ed.2d 168 (1971); Sherbert v. Verner, 374 U.S. 398, 83 S.Ct. 1790, 10 L.Ed.2d 965 (1963).

B

[4] Because the social security system is nationwide, the governmental interest is apparent. The social security system in the United States serves the public interest by providing a comprehensive insurance system with a variety of benefits available to all participants, with costs shared by employers and employees. [FN7] The social security 1056 system is by far the largest domestic governmental program in the United States today, distributing approximately $11 billion monthly to 36 million Americans. [FN8] The design of the system requires support by mandatory contributions from covered employers and employees. This mandatory participation is indispensable to the fiscal vitality of the social security system. "[W]idespread individual voluntary coverage under social security ... would undermine the soundness of the social security program." S.Rep.No. 404, 89th Cong., 1st Sess., pt. 1, p. 116 (1965), U.S.Code Cong. & Admin.News (1965), pp. 1943, 2056. Moreover, a comprehensive national social security system providing for voluntary participation would be almost a contradiction in terms and difficult, if not impossible, to administer. Thus, the Government's interest in assuringmandatory *259 and continuous participation in and contribution to the social security system is very high. [FN9]

> FN7. The Social Security Act was enacted in 1935 to provide supplementary retirement benefits. Over the following 45 years coverage has broadened, and the cost of the system has increased dramatically. See A. Abraham & D. Kopelman, Federal

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

Social Security (1979). In 1939 the Act was amended to provide insurance benefits for retired workers, auxiliaries of retired workers and survivors of deceased workers. In 1950 coverage was extended to self-employed workers and to select other employees previously excluded. In 1954 and 1956 disability benefits were added and in 1965 Medicare benefits were made available to participants in the system.

FN8. National Commission on Social Security, Social Security in America's Future 5 (1981).

FN9. The fiscal soundness of the social security system has been the subject of several studies and of congressional concern. See, e.g., Congressional Budget Office, Paying for Social Security: Funding Options for the Near Term (1981).

C

The remaining inquiry is whether accommodating the Amish belief will unduly interfere with fulfillment of the governmental interest. In Braunfeld v. Brown, 366 U.S. 599, 605, 81 S.Ct. 1144, 1146, 6 L.Ed.2d 563 (1961), this Court noted that "to make accommodation between the religious action and an exercise of state authority is a particularly delicate task ... because resolution in favor of the State results in the choice to the individual of either abandoning his religious principle or facing ... prosecution." The difficulty in attempting to accommodate religious beliefs in the area of taxation is that "we are a cosmopolitan nation made up of people of almost every conceivable religious preference." Braunfeld, supra, at 606, 81 S.Ct., at 1147. The Court has long recognized that balance must be struck between the values of the comprehensive social security system, which rests on a complex of actuarial factors, and the consequences of allowing religiously based exemptions. To maintain an organized society that guarantees religious freedom to a great variety of faiths requires that some religious practices yield to the common good. Religious beliefs can be accommodated, see, e.g., Thomas, supra; Sherbert, supra, but there is a point at which accommodation would "radically restrict the operating latitude of the legislature." Braunfeld, supra, at 606, 81 S.Ct., at 1147. [FN10]

FN10. See, e.g., Follett v. Town of McCormick, 321 U.S. 573, 64 S.Ct. 717, 88 L.Ed. 938 (1944) (preacher not entitled to be free from taxes); Murdock v. Pennsylvania, 319 U.S. 105, 112, 63 S.Ct. 870, 874, 87 L.Ed. 1292 (1943) (same).

Unlike the situation presented in Wisconsin v. Yoder, supra, it would be difficult to accommodate the comprehensive 260 social security system with myriad exceptions flowing from a wide variety of religious beliefs. The obligation to pay the social security tax initially is not fundamentally different from the obligation to pay income taxes; the difference--in theory at least--is that the social security tax revenues are segregated for use only in furtherance of the statutory program. There is no principled way, however, for purposes of this case, to distinguish between general taxes and those imposed under the Social Security Act. If, for example, a religious adherent believes war is a sin, and if a certain percentage of the federal budget can be identified as devoted to war-related activities, such individuals would have a similarly valid claim to be exempt from paying that percentage of the income tax. The tax system could not function if denominations were allowed to challenge the tax system because tax payments were spent in a manner that violates their religious belief. See, 1057 e.g., Lull v. Commissioner, 602 F.2d 1166 (CA4 1979), cert. denied, 444 U.S. 1014, 100 S.Ct. 664, 62 L.Ed.2d 643 (1980); Autenrieth v. Cullen, 418 F.2d 586 (CA9 1969), cert. denied, 397 U.S. 1036, 90 S.Ct. 1353, 25 L.Ed.2d 647 (1970). Because the broad public interest in maintaining a sound tax system is of such a high order, religious belief in conflict with the payment of taxes affords no basis for resisting the tax.

III

[5] Congress has accommodated, to the extent compatible with a comprehensive national program, the practices of those who believe it a violation of their faith to participate in the social security system. In § 1402(g) Congress granted an exemption, on religious grounds, to self- employed Amish and others. [FN11] Confining the § 1402(g) exemption to the self-*261 employedprovided for a narrow category which was readily identifiable. Self-employed persons in a religious community having its own "welfare" system are distinguishable from the generality of wage earners employed by others.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

> FN11. The District Court read this as extending to the present claims. We need not decide whether the Free Exercise Clause compelled an exemption as provided by § 1402(g); Congress' grant of the exemption was an effort toward accommodation. Nor do we need to decide whether, if Congress had, as the District Court believed, intended § 1402(g) to reach this case, conflicts with the Establishment Clause would arise.

Congress and the courts have been sensitive to the needs flowing from the Free Exercise Clause, but every person cannot be shielded from all the burdens incident to exercising every aspect of the right to practice religious beliefs. When followers of a particular sect enter into commercial activity as a matter of choice, the limits they accept on their own conduct as a matter of conscience and faith are not to be superimposed on the statutory schemes which are binding on others in that activity. Granting an exemption from social security taxes to an employer operates to impose the employer's religious faith on the employees. Congress drew a line in § 1402(g), exempting the self-employed Amish but not all persons working for an Amish employer. The tax imposed on employers to support the social security system must be uniformly applicable to all, except as Congress provides explicitly otherwise. [FN12]

> FN12. We note that here the statute compels contributions to the system by way of taxes; it does not compel anyone to accept benefits. Indeed, it would be possible for an Amish member, upon qualifying for social security benefits, to receive and pass them along to an Amish fund having parallel objectives. It is not for us to speculate whether this would ease or mitigate the perceived sin of participation.

Accordingly, the judgment of the District Court is reversed, and the case is remanded for proceedings consistent with this opinion.

Reversed and remanded.

Justice STEVENS, concurring in the judgment.

The clash between appellee's religious obligation and his civic obligation is irreconcilable. He must violate either an Amish belief or a federal statute. According to the Court, the religious duty must prevail unless the Government shows 262 that enforcement of the civic duty "is essential to accomplish an overriding governmental interest." Ante, at 1055. That formulation of the constitutional standard suggests that the Government always bears a heavy burden of justifying the application of neutral general laws to individual conscientious objectors. In my opinion, it is the objector who must shoulder the burden of demonstrating that there is a unique reason for allowing him a special exemption from a valid law of general applicability.

Congress already has granted the Amish a limited exemption from social security taxes. See 26 U.S.C. § 1402(g). As a matter of administration, it would be a relatively simple matter to extend the exemption to the taxes involved in this case. As a matter of fiscal policy, an enlarged exemption *1058 probably would benefit the social security system because the nonpayment of these taxes by the Amish would be more than offset by the elimination of their right to collect benefits. In view of the fact that the Amish have demonstrated their capacity to care for their own, the social cost of eliminating this relatively small group of dedicated believers would be minimal. Thus, if we confine the analysis to the Government's interest in rejecting the particular claim to an exemption at stake in this case, the constitutional standard as formulated by the Court has not been met.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

The Court rejects the particular claim of this appellee, not because it presents any special problems, but rather because of the risk that a myriad of other claims would be too difficult to process. The Court overstates the magnitude of this risk because the Amish claim applies only to a small religious community with an established welfare system of its own. [FN1] *263 Nevertheless, I agree with the Court's conclusion that the difficulties associated with processing other claims to tax exemption on religious grounds justify a rejection of this claim. [FN2] I believe, however, that this reasoning supports the adoption of a different constitutional standard than the Court purports to apply.

FN1. The Amish claim is readily distinguishable from the typical claim to an exemption from general tax obligations on the ground that the taxpayer objects to the government's use of his money; in the typical case the taxpayer is not in any position to supply the government with an equivalent substitute for the objectionable use of his money.

FN2. In my opinion, the principal reason for adopting a strong presumption against such claims is not a matter of administrative convenience. It is the overriding interest in keeping the government-- whether it be the legislature or the courts--out of the business of evaluating the relative merits of differing religious claims. The risk that governmental approval of some and disapproval of others will be perceived as favoring one religion over another is an important risk the Establishment Clause was designed to preclude.

The Court's analysis supports a holding that there is virtually no room for a "constitutionally required exemption" on religious grounds from a valid tax law that is entirely neutral in its general application. [FN3] 1059 Because I agree with that holding, I concur in the judgment.

FN3. Today's holding is limited to a claim to a tax exemption. I believe, however, that a standard that places an almost insurmountable burden on any individual who objects to a valid and neutral law of general applicability on the ground that the law proscribes (or prescribes) conduct that his religion prescribes (or proscribes) better explains most of this Court's holdings than does the standard articulated by the Court today. See, e.g., Gillette v. United States, 401 U.S. 437, 91 S.Ct. 828, 28 L.Ed.2d 168 (selective service laws); Braunfeld v. Brown, 366 U.S. 599, 81 S.Ct. 1144, 6 L.Ed.2d 563 (Sunday closing laws); Prince v. Massachusetts, 321 U.S. 158, 64 S.Ct. 438, 88 L.Ed. 645 (child labor laws); Jacobson v. Massachusetts, 197 U.S. 11, 25 S.Ct. 358, 49 L.Ed. 643 (compulsory vaccination laws); Reynolds v. United States, 98 U.S. 145, 25 L.Ed. 244 (polygamy law). The principal exception is Wisconsin v. Yoder, 406 U.S. 205, 92 S.Ct. 1526, 32 L.Ed.2d 15, in which the Court granted the Amish an exemption from Wisconsin's compulsory school-attendance law by actually applying the subjective balancing approach it purports to apply today. The Court's attempt to distinguish Yoder is unconvincing because precisely the same religious interest is implicated in both cases, and Wisconsin's interest in requiring its children to attend school until they reach the age of 16 is surely not inferior to the federal interest in collecting these social security taxes.
There is also tension between this standard and the reasoning in Thomas v. Review Bd. of Indiana Employment Security Div., 101 S.Ct. 1425, 450 U.S. 707, 67 L.Ed.2d 624, and Sherbert v. Verner, 374 U.S. 398, 83 S.Ct. 1790, 10 L.Ed.2d 965. Arguably, however, laws intended to provide a benefit to a limited class of otherwise disadvantaged persons should be judged by a different standard than that appropriate for the enforcement of neutral laws of general applicability. Cf. Harris v. McRae, 448 U.S. 297, 349-357, 100 S.Ct. 2671, 2712-16, 65 L.Ed.2d 784 (STEVENS, J., dissenting). A tax exemption entails no cost to the claimant; > if tax exemptions were dispensed on religious grounds, every citizen would have an economic motivation to join the favored sects. No comparable economic motivation could explain the conduct of the employees in Sherbert and Thomas. In both of those cases changes in work requirements dictated by the employer forced the employees to surrender jobs that they would have preferred to retain rather than accept unemployment compensation. In each case the treatment of the religious objection to the new job requirements as though it were tantamount to a physical impairment that made it impossible for the employee to continue to work under changed circumstances could be viewed as a protection against unequal treatment rather than a grant of favored treatment for the members of the religious sect. In all events, the decision in Thomas was clearly compelled by Sherbert.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

102 S.Ct. 1051, 455 U.S. 252, 71 L.Ed.2d 127, 49 A.F.T.R.2d 82-802, 82-1 USTC P 9205

Briefs and Other Related Documents (Back to top)

- 1981 WL 389832 (Appellate Brief) Reply Brief for the United States (Oct. 21, 1981)

- 1981 WL 389833 (Appellate Brief) Brief Amicus Curiae of National Committee for Amish Religious Freedom (Aug. 13, 1981)

- 1981 WL 389831 (Appellate Brief) Brief for Appellee Edwin D. Lee (Aug. 11, 1981)

- 1981 WL 389829 (Appellate Brief) Brief for the United States (Jun. 05, 1981)

END OF DOCUMENT

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

(858) 477-0706
www.nationwidelegal.com

EXHIBIT 53

80 U.S. 679 (Mem)
20 L.Ed. 666, 13 Wall. 679
(Cite as: 80 U.S. 679)

Supreme Court of the United States.

WATSON
v.
JONES.

December Term, 1871

APPEAL from a decree of the Circuit Court for the District of Kentucky, made May 11th, 1869.*681

This was a litigation which grew out of certain disturbances in what is known as the 'Third or Walnut Street Presbyterian Church,' of Louisville, Kentucky, and which resulted in a division of its members into two distinct bodies, each claiming the exclusive use of the property held and owned by that local church. The case was thus:

The Presbyterian Church in the United States is a voluntary religious organization, which has been in existence for more than three-quarters of a century. It has a written Confession of Faith, Form of Government, Book of Discipline, and Directory for Worship. The government of the church is exercised by and through an ascending series of 'judicatories,' known as Church Sessions, Presbyteries, Synods, and a General Assembly.

The Church Session, consisting of the pastor and ruling elders of a particular congregation, is charged with maintaining the spiritual government of the congregation, for which purpose they have various powers, among which is the power to receive members into the church, and to concert the best measures for promoting the spiritual interests of the congregation. [FN1] This body, which thus controls in each local church, is composed of the pastor and ruling elders. The number of elders is variable, and a majority of the Session governs. It acts, however, but as representing the congregation which elects it. The elders, so far as the church edifice is concerned, have no power to dispose of its use except as members of the Session.

West Headnotes

Abatement and Revival ⇦8(2)
2k8(2) Most Cited Cases

On a plea of the pendency of a prior action, it must appear that the parties, the relief sought, and the case made were identical, so that, if judgment were recovered, it would be a bar to a subsequent action for the same cause.

Abatement and Revival ⇦16
2k16 Most Cited Cases

On a plea of a prior action pending, the proceedings on appeal are to be considered as part of such action, and orders made by the appellate court, to be enforced by the lower court, are also a part of the case in the first suit, which may be relied upon as lis pendens in reference to the second suit.

Religious Societies ⇦12(5)
332k12(5) Most Cited Cases

In the case of a religious congregation which is itself part of a large and general organization of some religious denomination with which it is more or less intimately connected by religious views and ecclesiastical government, questions of discipline, or of faith, or ecclesiastical rule, custom or law which have been decided by the highest of the church judicatories to which the matter has been carried, must be accepted as final and as binding by legal tribunals.

Religious Societies ⇦14
332k14 Most Cited Cases

Where property is dedicated by way of trust for the purpose of sustaining, supporting and propagating definite religious doctrines or principles, it is the duty of the court to see that such property is not diverted from such trust so long as there are persons qualified within the meaning of the original dedication who are willing to teach the doctrines or principles prescribed in the act of dedication, and so long as there is any one so interested in the execution of the trust as to have a standing in court.

Religious Societies ⇦17
332k17 Most Cited Cases

An individual or an association of individuals may dedicate property by way of trust to the purpose of sustaining, supporting and propagating definite religious doctrines or principles, provided that in doing so they violate no law of morality and give to the instrument by which their purpose is evidenced, the formalities which the laws require.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

Religious Societies ⇐23(3)
332k23(3) Most Cited Cases

In the case of schism in an independent congregation, the right to its property claimed by the opposing factions is to be determined by the majority of the society, or by such organization of the society as, by its own rules, constitutes its governing power.

Religious Societies ⇐23(3)
332k23(3) Most Cited Cases

Where there is a schism in a church of a strictly congregational or independent organization governed solely within itself, leading to a separation into distinct and conflicting bodies, the rights of such bodies to the use of such property must be determined by the ordinary principles which govern voluntary associations.

Religious Societies ⇐23(3)
332k23(3) Most Cited Cases

Where property is confided in trust to a religious congregation of the independent or congregational form of church government, it is not in the power of the majority of the congregation, however preponderant, by reason of a change of views on religious subjects, to carry the property so confided to them to the support of new and conflicting doctrine.

Religious Societies ⇐24
332k24 Most Cited Cases

Where a right of property in a civil court is dependent upon a question of ecclesiastical cognizance within an associated religious denomination having an ascending series of judicatories, and it has been decided by the highest tribunal within that organization having jurisdiction of the case, such decision will be accepted as conclusive by the civil court.

Religious Societies ⇐24
332k24 Most Cited Cases

Controversies in the civil courts concerning property rights of religious societies are generally to be decided by inquiring-First, was the property or fund in question devoted by the express terms of the gift, grant, or sale by which it was acquired, to the support of any specific religious doctrine or belief, or was it acquired for the general use of the society for religious purposes with no other limitation? And, second, is the society which owned it of the strictly congregational or independent form of church government, owing no submission to any organization outside the congregation, or is it one of a number of societies united to form a more general body of churches subject to ecclesiastical control, invested in the general association over the members and societies of which it is composed?

Religious Societies ⇐24
332k24 Most Cited Cases

Where property is devoted to a specific doctrine, the court will, when necessary to protect the trust to which the property has been devoted, inquire into the religious faith or practice of the parties claiming its use or control, and will see that it shall not be diverted from that trust.

Religious Societies ⇐24
332k24 Most Cited Cases

If the property was acquired in the ordinary way of purchase or gift, for the use of a religious society, the court will inquire who constitute that society, or its legitimate successors, and award to them the use of the property.

Constitutional Law ⇐84.1
92k84.1 Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 92k84)

In the United States everyone has the full and free right to entertain religious belief, to practice any religious principle, and to teach any religious doctrine which does not violate the laws of morality and property and which does not infringe personal rights, and the law knows no heresy and is committed to the support of no dogma and the establishment of no sect.

Courts ⇐494
106k494 Most Cited Cases

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

When the pendency of a suit in a court of concurrent jurisdiction is set up to defeat a suit, the case must be the same and there must be the same parties, or at least such as represent the same interest, and the same rights must be asserted and the same relief prayed for, and such relief must be founded on the same facts and the title or essential basis of the relief sought must be the same.

Courts ⇐494
106k494 Most Cited Cases
General.

As between courts of concurrent jurisdiction, the court which has first obtained jurisdiction in a given case must retain it exclusively until it disposes of it by a final judgment or a decree.

Courts ⇐508(1)
106k508(1) Most Cited Cases

The circuit court of the United States will not issue an injunction which will in any way interfere with the jurisdiction of a state court having concurrent jurisdiction with the federal court over the subject-matter in litigation, where the state court obtained jurisdiction prior to the federal court.

Injunction ⇐110
212k110 Most Cited Cases

Orders made by the appellate court of a state, to be enforced by a court of primary jurisdiction, are, while unexecuted, a part of the cause in the lower court; and hence, where an unexecuted order of this kind had been made by a state court to restore possession of property to parties who had been deprived thereof by a decree which had been reversed, injunction could not be granted by a federal court, interfering in any way with the execution of such order.

FN1 Form of Government, chap. 9, § 6.

Connected with each local church, and apparently without any functions in essence ecclesiastical, are what are called the 'Trustees;' three persons usually, in whom is vested for form's sake, the legal title to the church edifice and other property; the equitable power of management of the property being with the Session. These Trustees are usually elected biennially; they are subject to the Session, and may be removed by the congregation.

The Presbytery, consisting of all the ministers and one *682 ruling elder from each congregation within a certain district, has various powers, among them the power to visit particular churches for the purpose of inquiring into their state, and redressing the evils which may have arisen in them; to ordain, and install, remove, and judge ministers; and, in general, power to order whatever pertains to the spiritual welfare of the churches under their care. [FN2]

FN2 Form of Government, chap. 10, § 8.

The Synod, consisting of all the ministers and one ruling elder from each congregation in a larger district, has various powers, among them the power to receive and issue all appeals from Presbyteries; to decide on all references made to them; to redress whatever has been done by Presbyteries contrary to order; and generally to take such order with respect to the Presbyteries, Sessions, and people under their care as may be in conformity with the world of God and the established rules, and which tend to promote the edification of the church. [FN3]

FN3 Ib., chap. 11, § 4.

The General Assembly, consisting of ministers and elders commissioned from each Presbytery under its care, is the highest judicatory of the Presbyterian Church, representing in one body all of the particular churches of the denomination. Besides the power of receiving and issuing appeals and references from inferior judiciatories, to review the records of Synods, and to give them advice and instruction in all cases submitted to them in conformity with the constitution of the church, it is declared that it 'shall constitute the bond of union, peace, correspondence, and mutual confidence among all our churches.' [FN4] 'To the General Assembly also belongs the power of deciding in all controversies respecting doctrine and discipline; of reproving, warning, or hearing testimony against any error in doctrine or immorality in practice, in any Church, Presbytery, or Synod; . . . of supperintending the concerns of the whole church; . . . of suppressing schismatical contentions and disputations; and, in general, of recommending and attempting reformation of *683 manners, and the promotion of charity, truth, and holiness through all the churches under their care.' [FN5]

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

FN4 Ib., chap. 12, §§ 1, 2, and 3.

FN5 Form of Government, chap. 12, § 5.

The Walnut Street Presbyterian Church, of which we have spoken, was organized about 1842, under the authority and as a part of the Presbyterian Church in the United States, and, with the assent of all its members, was received into connection with and under the jurisdiction of the Presbytery of Louisville and the Synod of Kentucky. It remained in such connection and under such jurisdiction, without any distribance among its members, until the year 1865, when certain events took place in Kentucky which will be stated presently.

After the organization, to wit, in 1853, the said local church purchased a lot of ground in Louisville, and a conveyance was made to the church's trustees to have and to hold to them, and to their successors, to be chosen by the congregation.

In 1854 the trustees of the church were incorporated with power to hold any real estate then owned by it; the property to pass to them and their successors in office. By the act it was declared that the trustees, to be elected by the members of the congregation, should continue in office two years, and until their successors were elected, 'unless they shall sooner resign, or refuse to act, or cease to be members of the said church.' The trustees were charged by the act with the duty of providing for the comfort and convenience of the congregation, the preservation of the property, and passing such regulations relative to the government and control of the church property as they might think proper, not inconsistent with the Constitution of the United States and the laws of Kentucky.

Though neither the deed nor charter said this in terms, it was admitted that both contemplated the connection of the local church with the general Presbyterian one, and subjected both property and trustees alike to the operation of its fundamental laws.*684

We now pass to some history of the disturbances to which we have referred as matter to be related.

With the outbreak of the war of the insurrection, and the action of it upon the subject of slavery, a very excited condition of things, originating with and influenced by that subject, manifested itself in the Walnut Street Church. One of the earliest exhibitions of the matter was in reference to the re-engagement as minister of a certain Reverend Mr. McElroy. The members of the church were asked by a majority of the Session, at this time composed of three persons, named Watson, Galt, and Avery, [FN6] to make a call upon Mr. McElroy to become the pastor, but at a congregational meeting the majority of the members declined to make the call. The majority of the Session (that is to say, Watson and Galt) renewed, notwithstanding, the engagement of Mr. McElroy for six months. In August, 1865, the majority of the congregation asked the Session that on the expiration of the then current six months of Mr. McElroy's engagement no further renewal thereof should be made. In connection with these efforts of the majority of the Session (Watson and Galt) to maintain Mr. McElroy as preacher, charges were preferred against three members of the congregation, named B. F. Avery, T. J. Hackney, and D. McNaughtan, who had co-operated with the majority of it in the movements to obtain another minister. And about the same time, by way of counteraction, apparently, charges were preferred by some of the majority against Watson and Galt. While these troubles were existing, some of the members of the church appealed to the Synod of Kentucky, which body, on the 20th of October, 1865, appointed a committee to visit the contregation, 'with power to call a congregational meeting for the purpose of electing additional ruling elders, calling a *685 pastor, or choosing a stated supply, and doing any other business competent to a congregational meeting that may appear to them, the said congregation, necessary for their best interests.' The synoldical committee thus appointed called a congregational meeting for the purpose of the election, in January, 1866. Watson and Galt refused to open the church for the meeting, but the majority organizing themselves on the sidewalk, elected a certain J. A.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

Leach, with B. F. Avery and D. McNaughtan (which last two names have already appeared in our history), additional ruling elders, who went through what they deemed a valid process of ordination and instalment. The other admitted elders were Watson, Galt, and Hackney. They trustees of the church were Henry Farley, George Fulton, and B. F. Avery, and they had they actual possession of the church property. Fulton and Farley, uniting with Watson and Galt, denied the validity of the election of Avery, Leach, and McNaughtan, and refused to allow them any participation as elders in the control of the church property. Hackney admitted the validity of such election, and recognized Avery, Leach, and McNaughtan as lawful elders.

> FN6 To assist the reader, as far as possible, in a controversy and case perplexed by a multitude of names, to keep in his mind a distinct conception of who were on one side and who on the other, the Reporter, all through his statement of the case, has put the names of those who were on one side (and which for mere convenience may be distinguished as the pro- slavery or conservative side), in italic letter, and those on the other in Roman.

In this state of things, Avery and his associates filed a bill, on the 1st of Februar, 1866, in the Louisville Chancery Court, against Watson, Galt, Fulton, and Farley, for the purpose of asserting the right of Avery, Leach, and McNaughtan, as elders, to participate with the other elders in the management of the church property for purposes of religious worship.

In the progress of that case the three trustees, Farley, Fulton, and Avery, were appointed, on the 20th of March, 1866, receivers 'to take charge of the church building, and all property belonging to the said church,' during the pendency of the suit, or until the further order of the court; and they were 'ordered to keep and preserve the said property, and keep it in repair to the best of their ability, and to open the various portions of the building ready for worship, and others services of said church, according to the laws and usages of the Presbyterian Church; and not to prevent any 686 part of the congregation from attendance upon the meetings of said church, and enjoying the use thereof according to their rights and privileges as members thereof.'

At a subsequent date--June 15th, 1866--the chancellor delivered an opinion recognizing Avery, Leach, and McNaughtan as elders, and entered an order that the trustees, Farley, Fulton, and Avery, now receivers, open the church for divine worship and congregational meetings whenever ordered to do so by the Session of the church, constituted of the said Avery, Hackney, and McNaughtan, Leach, Watson, and Galt, or a majority thereof.

The execution of this order was, apparently, so far interfered with by Watson, Galt, Fulton, and Farley as practically to prevent religious services in the church edifice. At all events, on the 23d of July, 1866, it was ordered:

'That the MARSHAL OF THIS COURT do take possession of the church property until the further order of the court, and that the same be opened: 1. For Sunday-schools and other like purposes. 2. For the meeting of the Session when notified thereof. 3. For public worship, and such using of the pulpit and the house generally as the Session shall order. And it is ordered that he be respectful to the order of the Session, as this court said on the 15th of June. The Session, according to the decision of the General Assembly, at Peoria, Illinois, has control of the church buildings, &c. The keys of the church, &c., are ordered to be delivered to the marshal.'

The marshal took possession by virtue of this order. Thenceforward Watson, Galt, Fulton, and Farley abandoned connection with the property and participation in its control.

Thus matters stood, so far as the church property was concerned, up to the final decree in Avery et al. v. Watson et al., made May 7th, 1867, when it was decreed that Leach, Avery, and McNaughtan, with Hackney, Watson, and Galt, were ruling elders that constituted the Session of the Walnut Street Church, and the management of the said property for the purpose of worship and other religious service was committed to their care, under the regulations of the Presbyterian Church in the United States of American; and it was ordered 687 that the defendants, Watson and Galt, pay to the plaintiffs their costs.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

It will be observed that the marshal was not, by the terms of the decree, directed to give up his possession; nor was any motion or order afterwards made requiring him to give up or discharging him as receiver. Nor did he, in fact, so far as appeared from the record, ever abandon possession, although the property continued, as it had been since July 23d, 1866, subject to the exclusive control of Avery and his associates.

From this final decree an appeal was taken to the Court of Appeals of Kentucky, but Watson and his friends did not supersede that decree, nor take other step to prevent its immediate execution.

The decree of the chancellor was reversed by the Court of Appeals of Kentucky. [FN7] The language of the order of reversal was thus:

FN7 2 Bush, 363.

'And the judgment of the chancellor, which commits the management and control of said church property to said Avery, McNaughtan, and Leach, in conjunction with said Watson, Galt, and Hackney, is therefore deemed erroneous. Wherefore the judgment is reversed, and the cause remanded for proper corrective proceedings respecting the possession, control, and use of the church property, and for final judgment in conformity to this opinion.'

As to the nature of the issues in this case of Avery v. Watson, the Court of Appeals of Kentucky said: [FN8]

FN8 Ib. 346.

'As suggested in the argument, and apparently conceded on both sides, this is not a case of division or schism in a church, nor is there any question as to which of TWO BODIES should be recognized as the Third or Walnut Street Presbyterian Church; nor is there any controversy as to the authority of Watson and Galt to act as ruling elders; but the sole inquiry to which we are restricted, as we conceive, is whether Avery, McNaughtan, and Leach are ALSO ruling elders, and therefore members of the Session of the church.'688

On the 21st of February, 1868, the opinion and mandate of the Court of Appeals was filed in the Louisville Chancery Court, and the defendants moved the court 'to restore to them, and those entitled under the said opinion, the possession, use, and control of the church building and property, which was taken from them by the marshal of the court, under orders of court, during the pendency of the action, and to dismiss the plaintiffs' petition with costs.'

On the 28th of February, 1868, the complainants in the case of Avery v. Watson filed a petitioner in equity against the defendants, and moved the court for an injunction 'enjoining them from any further prosecution of their said motion made on the 21st of February, 1868, and from all proceeding by motion, suit, or otherwise to obtain possession, control, or use of the property of the Walnut Street Presbyterian Church of Louisville.'

The petition in equity thus presented averred that subsequent to the original decree of the chancellor, Watson, Galt, and the others adhering to them, had voluntarily withdrawn from the Walnut Street Presbyterian Church, and from the Presbyterian Church in the United States of America, and had thereby ceased to be members of the said church, or to have any interest in the property held by that church; that the plaintiffs in that injunction suit, together with those united in interest with them, constituted at that time the only beneficiaries of the trust property; and that therefore the attempt of Watson and his friends, under a mere order of restitution, based upon the reversal by the appellate court of the chancellor's decree, to obtain the possession of the property, as elders and trustees, was a fraud upon the rights of the beneficiaries of the property. And it charged that Watson and his friends intended to use the property as the property exclusively of their party and to deny the rights of all others as members.

On the 20th day of March, 1868, the chancellor granted upon this petition an injunction against the defendants in the action, enjoining them from any further proceeding on their motion made on February 21st, 1868; the former decree 689 being at the same time so far reversed that the original petition was dismissed, and costs awarded to the defendants.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

Watson and his friends now obtained from the Court of Appeals of Kentucky a summons against the chancellor of the Louisville Chancery Court 'to appear and show cause why he has refused to carry into effect the mandate of said court,' and the chancellor having appeared, an opinion upon the rule was delivered. [FN9]

FN9 3 Bush, 646.

In the last-named case it was decided:

1. That the opinion and mandate in the previous decision in the appellate court, [FN10] imported a direction to restore to the defendants such rights of possession, control, and use of the property as the former judgment had erroneously taken or withheld from them.

FN10 2 Id. 348.

2. That 'no undecided question was reserved for further litigation in the court below.'

3. That the Chancery Court must enter the proper order directed by the Court of Appeals; and 'if there be any equitable reason for not coercing the order or decree for restitution, it should be made available as a ground for enjoining, and not for preventing or modifying, the order of restitution.'

4. That the petition in equity of Avery and others, although intended to operate both as a written defence to the action of the court sought by the defendants in the old suit, and at the same time as the initial pleading in a new one, was to be regarded, so far as the action of the chancellor was concerned, as a response of the plaintiffs, interposed to prevent the rendering of a judgment in conformity to the decision and mandate of this court.

5. That if any equitable reasons existed for not enforcing restitution, they should be asserted in a new suit, enjoining the enforcement of the order of restitution after such order had been entered.

Accordingly the Court of Appeals, June 26th, 1868, on this rule against the chancellor, ordered that the latter make an *690 order 'restoring the possession, use, and control of the church building and property to the parties entitled thereto according to the said opinion, and so far as they were deprived thereof by the marshal of the Chancery Court under its orders.'

The parties in whose favor, according to the opinion, the order of restitution was to be made were of course Watson, Galt, and Hackney, ELDERS, and Fulton, Forley, and Avery, TRUSTEES.

After this last decision of the Kentucky Court Appeals, the petition for injunction filed in the Louisville Chancery Court on the 28th of February, 1868, was, on the motion of those who filed it, dismissed without prejudice.

The present suit in the Circuit Court was begun July 17th, 1868.

Subsequently, on the 18th of September, 1868, the chancellor directed the marshal of the Chancery Court 'to restore the possession, use, and control of the church building and property . . . to Farley, Fulton, and Avery, or a majority of them, as trustees, and to Watson, Galt, and Hackney, or a majority of them, as ruling elders of the said church, and to report how he had executed the order;' reserving the case for such further order as might be necessary to enforce full obedience.

Thus far as to the controversy in the Walnut Street Church, involved in the particular case of Watson v. Avery, in the State courts of Kentucky.

We have already adverted to the war of the insurrection, its action on the subject of slavery, and the feeling engendered by this action in the special congregation of the Walnut Street Church.

We now speak of the same subject of the war, of slavery, &c., in its more general relation with the judicatories above that local church, and of the way in which this local church was affected by and identified itself with the action of the more general church. From the beginning of the war to its close, the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church at its annual meetings expressed in Declaratory Statements *691 or Resolutions, its sense of the obligation of all good citizens to support the Federal government in that struggle; and when, by the proclamation of President Lincoln, emancipation of the slaves of the States in insurrection was announced, that body also expressed views favorable to emancipation, and adverse to the institution of slavery. At its meeting in Pittsburg in May, 1865, instructions were given to the Presbyteries, the Board of Missions, and to the Sessions of the churches, that when any person from the Southern States should make application for employment as missionary or for admission as members, or ministers of churches, inquiry should be made as to their sentiments in regard to loyalty to the government and on the subject of slavery; and if it was found that they had been guilty of voluntarily aiding the war of the rebellion, or held the doctrine announced by the large body of the churches in the insurrectionary States which had organized a new General Assembly, that 'the system of negro slavery in the South is a divine institution, and that it is the peculiar mission of the Southern church to conserve that institution,' they should be required to repent and forsake these sins before they could be received.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

In the month of September thereafter the Presbytery of Louisville, under whose immediate jurisdiction was the Walnut Street Church, adopted and published in pamphlet form, what it called 'A Declaration and Testimony against the erroneous and heretical doctrines and practices which have obtained and been propagated in the Presbyterian Church of the United States during the last five years.' This Declaration denounced, in the severest terms, the action of the General Assembly in the matters we have just mentioned, declared an intention to refuse to be governed by that action, and invited the co-operation of all members of the Presbyterian Church who shared the sentiments of the Declaration, in a concerted resistance to what they called 'the usurpation of authority' by the Assembly.

The General Assembly of 1866, denounced in turn the Declaration and Testimony and declared that every Presbytery 692 which refused to obey its order should be ipso facto dissolved, and called to answer before the next General Assembly; giving the Louisville Presbytery an opportunity for repentance and conformity. The Louisville Presbytery divided, and the adherents of the Declaration and Testimony sought and obtained admission, in 1868, into 'the Presbyterian Church of the Confederate States,' a body which had several years previously withdrawn from the General Assembly of the United States and set up a new organization.

In January, 1866, the congregation of the Walnut Street Church became divided in the manner stated above, each asserting that it constituted the church, although the issue as to membership was not distinctly made in the chancery suit of Avery v. Watson already so fully described. Both parties at this time recognized the same superior church judicatories.

On the 19th June, 1866, the Synod of Kentucky became divided, the opposing party in each asserting respectively that it constituted the true Presbytery and the true Synod; each meanwhile recognizing and professing to adhere to the same General Assembly. Of these contesting bodies Watson and his party adhered to one, those whom he opposed to the other. The Presbytery and Synod to which these last, that is to say, Avery or Hackney and his party, adhered, being known respectively as the McMillan Presbytery and the Lapsley Synod.

On the 1st of June, 1867, the Presbytery and Synod recognized by Watson and his party, were declared by the General Assembly to be 'in no sense a true and lawful Synod and Presbytery in connection with and under the care and authority of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in the United States of America;' and were permanently excluded from connection with or representation in the Assembly. By the same resolution the Synod and Presbytery adhered to by those whom Watson and his party opposed were declared to be the true and lawful Presbytery of Louisville, and Synod of Kentucky.693

The Synod of Kentucky thus excluded, by a resolution adopted the 28th June, 1867, declared 'that in its future action it will be governed by this recognized sundering of all its relations to the aforesaid revolutionary body (the General Assembly) by the acts of that body itself.' The Presbytery took substantially the same action.

In this final severance of Presbytery and Synod from the General Assembly, Watson and his friends on the one side, and those whom he opposed on the other, continued to adhere to those bodies at first recognized by them respectively. This latter party now included, among many others, a certain William Jones, with his wife, and one Eleanor Lee, who had been admitted into membership by the Hackney, &c., Session.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

The reader will now readily perceive, if he have not done so before, how in the earliest stages of this controversy it was found that a majority of the members of the Walnut Street Church concurred with the action of the General Assembly, while Watson and Galt as ruling elders, and Fulton and Farley as trustees, constituting in each case a majority of the Session and of the trustees, with Mr. McElroy the pastor, sympathized with the party of the Declaration and Testimony of the Louisville Presbytery. And how this led to efforts by each party to exclude the other from participation in the Session of the church and the use of the church property; as well as to all that followed.

The grounds on which the Court of Appeals reversed the chancellor's decision were, of course, that the General Assembly, Synod, and Presbytery of the Presbyterian Church, were all subject, in the exercise of their functions, to Constitutions (the standards mentioned at the beginning of this report); that when they violated these, their acts were beyond their jurisdiction and void; that whether they had violated them or not, was a matter which the civil courts, on an examination of the Constitutions, could properly pass on; and deciding further and finally as fact, after an examination by the court itself of these standards, that in their Declaratory Statements and Resolutions and other 694 deliverances enforcing loyalty, they had violated them; and that their acts were accordingly void.

Thus things stood in July, 1868; and the term for which the old trustees had, in more peaceful times, been elected having expired, the persons worshipping in the Walnut Street Church and so in possession, elected as new ones three persons whose names now first figure on our report. These persons were named McDougall, McPherson, and Ashcraft.

The newly elected elders and the majority of the congregation adhered to and had been recognized by the General Assembly as the regular and lawful Walnut Street Church and officers. Galt and Watson, Fulton and Farley, and a minority of the members, had cast their fortunes with those who adhered to the party of the Declaration and Testimony.

In this state of things, Jones, his wife, and Lee, on the 21st July, 1868, three months before the mandate of September 18th to the Chancery Court, mentioned at page 690, filed a bill in chancery in the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of Kentucky against Watson and Galt, [FN11] Fulton, Farley, [FN12] and Avery, the church corporation, and McDougall, McPherson, and Ashcraft, as trustees. The complainants alleged that they were citizens of Indiana; and that each of the natural persons already named were residents of Louisville and citizens of Kentucky, and that the church corporation was a corporation created by Kentucky and doing business in that State. They alleged further that they were members in good and regular standing of the said church, attending its religious exercises under the pastorship of the Rev. J. S. Hays, and that the defendants, Fulton and Farley, who pretended without right to be trustees of the church, supported and recognized as such by the defendants, Watson and Galt, who also pretended without right to be ruling elders, were threatening, preparing, and about to take unlawful possession 695 of the house of worship and grounds belonging to the church and to prevent Hays, who was the rightful pastor, from ministering therein, refusing to recognize him as pastor, and to recognize as ruling elder, Hackney, who was the sole lawful ruling elder; and that when they should obtain such possession they would oust Hays and Hackney, and those who attended their ministrations, among whom the complainants represented themselves to be.

FN11 Watson and Galt, the reader will remember, had been declared by the Court of Appeals of Kentucky elders of the church.

FN12 The same court had declared these two persons to be trustees.

They further alleged that Hackney, whose duty it was as elder, and McDougall, McPherson, and

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

Ashcraft, whose duty it was as trustees to protect the rights thus threatened, by such a proceeding in the courts as would prevent the execution of the threats and designs of the other defendants, refused to take any steps to that end.

They further alleged that the Walnut Street Church, of which they were members, now formed and had ever since its organization in the year 1842, formed a part of the Presbyterian Church of the United States of America, known as the Old School, which was governed by a written consfitution that included the Confession of Faith, Form of Government, Book of Discipline, and Directory for Worship; and that the governing bodies of the general church above the Walnut Street Church, were, in successive order, the Presbytery of Louisville, the Synod of Kentucky, and the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church of the United States; that while the complainants and about 115 members who worshipped with them, and Mr. Hays (the pastor), Hackney (the ruling elder), and McDougall, McPherson, and Ashcraft (the trustees), were now in full membership and relation with the lawful General Presbyterian Church aforesaid, Watson and Galt, Fulton and Farley, with about 30 persons formerly members of the said church, worshipping under one Dr. Yandell as pastor, had seceded and withdrawn themselves from the Walnut Street Church, and from the General Presbyterian Church in the United States, and had voluntarily connected themselves with and were now members of another religious society, and that they had repudiated and did now repudiate and renounce the authority 696 and jurisdiction of the various judicatories of the Presbyterian Church of the United States and acknowledge and recognize the authority of other church judicatories which were disconnected from the Presbyterian Church of the United States and from the Walnut Street Church. And they alleged that Watson and Galt had been, by the order of the General Assembly of the said church, dropped from the roll of elders in said church for having so withdrawn and renounced its jurisdiction, and that the Assembly had declared the organization to which the plaintiffs adhered as the true and only Walnut Street Presbyterian Church of Louisville.

The prayer of the bill was that 'Watson, Galt, Fulton , and Farley be restrained by an injunction issuing out of the Circuit Court, from taking, or attempting to take, possession of the house of worship and other property of the Walnut Street Church, and from interfering with REV. J. S. HAYS PREACHING IN SAID HOUSE OF WORSHIP; also that Watson and Galt be restrained in like manner from controlling, or attempting to control or manage, the said property in the capacity of elders of the church; also, that Fulton and Farley be restrained in like manner from controlling, or attempting to control or manage, the said property as trustees of said church; . . . and that the complainants have generally such other and further relief as the nature of their case required.'

The answer having alleged that pending the final process in the Chancery Court two persons, named Heeter and Given, had been elected additional ruling elders, and that one Polk had been elected trustee, in the place of Avery, the complainants amended their bill accordingly, and by agreement the answer of the original defendants was made the answer of the new parties.

The defendants, Hackney, McDougall, McPherson, and Ashcraft, answered, admitting the allegations of the bill, and that though requested they had refused to prosecute legal proceedings in the matter, because as they thought any effort to that end in the courts of the State of Kentucky would prove useless. 697

The defendants Watson and Galt, Fulton and Farley , answered, and after declaring their belief that the complainants were lately citizens of Kentucky and that their citizenship in Indiana was merely for the purpose of filing this bill in the Federal court, denied almost every allegation of the bill. They set up that though they had been deprived of their former actual possession of the church edifice and property by the illegal and now overruled decree of the Louisville Chancery Court, they had nevertheless maintained and kept up a regular and valid organization of the Walnut Street Presbyterian Church--the only regular and valid organization that had been kept up; that they were the lawful officers of that church, and that they and those whom they represented were its true members. They denied having withdrawn from either the local or the general church, and denied that the action of the General Assembly cutting them off was within its constitutional authority. They represented that the plaintiffs were not and never had been lawfully admitted to membership in the Walnut Street

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

Church, and had no such interest in it as would sustain this suit, and they set up and relied upon the suit in the Chancery Court of Louisville, which they represented was still pending, and which they stated involved the same subject-matter, and was between the same parties in interest as the present one. They alleged that in that suit they had been decreed to be the only true and lawful trustees and elders of the Walnut Street Church, and that an order had been made to place them in possession of the church property, which order remained unexecuted, and that the property was still in the possession of the marshal of that court as its receiver. These facts were relied on in bar to the present suit.

The case coming on to be heard, the Circuit Court declared that it seemed to it that the complainants were members of the Third or Walnut Street Presbyterian Church in Louisville, and as such had a beneficial interest in the church building and other property in the pleadings mentioned.

That the Reverend J. S. Hays was pastor; Hackney, Avery, McNaughtan, and Leach, ruling elders; and McDougall, 698 McPherson, and Ashcraft, trustees; and that they were respectively entitled to exercise whatever authority in the said church, or over its members or property, rightfully belonged to pastor, elders, and trustees, respectively, in churches in connection with 'The Presbyterian Church in the United States of America,' Old School, and according to the regulations and usages of that church.

That McDougall, McPherson, and Ashcraft, trustees, were in regular succession from the trustees named in the deed of conveyance of the church property in 1853, and likewise in regular succession from the trustees named in the act of incorporation, and that as such trustees they were entitled to the exclusive control of the church building and other property of said church for the purposes of worship by the members of the said church, in accordance with the regulations and usages of the Presbyterian Church in the United States.

That those only were to be recognized as members of the Walnut Street Church who adhered to and recognized the authority of the Presbyterian Church in the United States of America, and the various church judicatories which submit to its jurisdiction; and in determining what was the true Presbytery of Louisville, and true Synod of Kentucky, having jurisdiction over the said Walnut Street Presbyterian Church, its officers and members, this court and all other civil tribunals were concluded by the action of the General Assembly of said Presbyterian Church in the United States of America.

That those members of the Walnut Street Church who worshipped statedly at the church edifice [position in the city of Louisville described], in said city, who had as their pastor the Reverend J. S. Hays, and who recognized Hackney, Avery, Leach, and McNaughtan as ruling elders, and McDougall and McPherson as trustees, including all those connected with them, who had been received into said church since January 1st, 1866, under Hackney, Avery, Leach, and McNaughtan as elders, or under the ministration of Hays as pastor, constituted the Third or Walnut Street Presbyterian Church in Louisville, and the sole beneficiaries 699 for whose use the property mentioned in the pleadings was dedicated; and that the said persons, together with their pastor, elders, and trustees, had the exclusive right to use the same according to the regulations and usages of the Presbyterian Church of the United States of America.

It seemed further to the court that the Rev. Dr. Yandell was not pastor of the said Third or Walnut Street Presbyterian Church, nor were Galt, Watson, Heeter, and Given, or either of them, elders in the said church. And that Fulton, Farley, and Polk were not trustees.

That all those persons who pretended to be members of the said church, but who did not recognize Hays as paster, or Hackney, Avery, Leach, and McNaughtan as elders, or McDougall, McPherson, and Ashcraft as trustees, and who recognized Watson, Galt, Given, and Heeter as elders, and Fulton, Farley, and Polk as trustees, and worshipped separately and apart from those hereinbefore declared to be the sole beneficiaries of said property, and who denied the authority of Hays as pastor, and also the ecclesiastical authority of the McMillan Presbytery of Louisville, and of the Lapsley Synod of Kentucky, did not have any connection with, nor were they members of, the Third or Walnut Street Presbyterian Church, for whose use the property in question was conveyed and dedicated, nor had the said persons, or any of them, any beneficial interest in it, nor were they entitled to the use of it in any way whatever as members of the said church.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

It was thereupon decreed:

1st. That the defendants, Heeter, Given, and Polk, be enjoined from taking possession of, and from using or controlling the church edifice and other property of the Walnut Street Church, except as they, or any one of them, may choose to attend religious worship, or other religious exercises, in the same manner as other persons not officers or members of said church.

2d. That the defendants Watson, Galt, Fulton, Heeter, Given, Polk, Farley, and all others, be enjoined from so using or controlling the said church edifice, or other property of the 700 church, as in any wise to interfere with the ministrations therein of Hays as pastor, or with the exercise by him and by Hackney, and others, recognized as elders in the said church by those herein declared to be sold beneficiaries of said property, of any authority in the said church or over its property or members which rightfully belongs to the pastors and elders of the churches in connection with and according to the usages of the Presbyterian Church of the United States of America.

3d. That the defendants Watson, Galt, Heeter, Given, Fulton, Farley, and Polk, and all others, be enjoined from using or controlling the church edifice and property in any other manner than as the property exclusively of the persons hereinbefore declared to be the Third or Walnut Street Presbyterian Church of Louisville, and the sole beneficiaries of said property, having Hays as pastor, and recognizing Hackney, Avery, Leach, and McNaughtan as elders, and McDougall, McPherson, and Ashcraft as trustees. And that they, and all others, be enjoined from interfering in any manner with the use of the said property by the members of the said church hereinbefore declared to be such, and by such as might be hereafter admitted into said church according to its forms, and who are or might become connected with and under the care and authority of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in the United States of America, and the several judicatories which submit to the authority of said Assembly; and from hindering or preventing any one from worshipping in said church, or participating in any of its religious exercises according to the usages of said church.

From this decree Watson and the other defendants appealed.

Mr. T. W. Bullitt, for the appellants:

I. The Circuit Court had no jurisdiction, because,

1. The complainants had no such interest in the subject of litigation as would enable them to maintain the suit. Membership in the Walnut Street Church is of course essential to give the requisite interest. But they are not members. 701 By the constitution of the Presbyterian Church the Session admits to membership. In Avery v. Watson the direct issue was whether Avery, Leach, and McNaughtan were elders; and it was decided that they were not. The body which, if they had been elders, would have been a Session, was, from the fact that they were not elders, not a Session.

But the Circuit Court had no jurisdiction, because,

2. The Louisville Chancery Court had exclusive jurisdiction over the property in controversy, and over the present parties. A series of cases involving the relations of State and Federal courts have established this rule, to wit: that where property has been once lawfully taken possession of under process of a court, such court has exclusive jurisdiction over the thing, and that this jurisdiction extends to every question or claim of title, interest or use touching such property, of whatever nature or origin, or in whose hands soever it may subsist. It is not material that such claim be wholly different from or that it is prior or subsequent in date, or even paramount to any or all the claims pending before the court. The jurisdiction is exclusive over the thing itself, and such claim must be asserted, if at all, in the court having such possession and jurisdiction. Conceding that the matters alleged in the present bill constitute a controversy different from and subsequent in date to that made before the chancellor, yet, so long as the chancellor's possession or exclusive jurisdiction of the property or thing in controversy continued, and decree by the Circuit Court touching that property was without authority and void. Any alleged claims touching that property should have been asserted before the chancellor or their assertion delayed, until by execution of final process he had voluntarily and completely yielded up his jurisdiction over it.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

In Hagan v. Lucas, [FN13] the claim asserted by the claimant in the Federal court was wholly different from and independent of the controversy pending in the State court. In Peck v. Jenness, [FN14] the case was similar. In Taylor v. Carryl, [FN15] the 702 plaintiffs claimed under a maritime lien for seamen's wages. The claims were not only asserted by strangers, but were conceded by this court to be paramount to all claims pending before the State court; and yet, in each case, by reason of the possession of the State court through its officers, it was declared to have exclusive jurisdiction of the thing, capable alone of entertaining any question touching its possession, title, or use, and that the process of the Federal court was void. Freeman v. Howe [FN16] is in coincidence with all these cases.

FN13 10 Peters, 402.

FN14 7 Howard, 624.

FN15 20 Id. 594.

FN16 24 Howard, 450.

But independently of this, the delivery to the trustees and elders of the body of which the Avery or Jones party are members, of the possession of the church building cannot be granted in this suit, nor can the other side be enjoined from taking possession as prayed for in the bill, because the property is in the actual possession of the marshal of the Louisville Chancery Court as its receiver, and because there is an unexecuted decree of that court ordering him to deliver the possession to the defendants.

The marshal did never in form or fact abandon his possession. The only argument could be that his possession was that of a receiver, and that his appointment was superseded by the final decree. But it is text-book law that a receiver is never discharged by final decree. [FN17] It is unimportant, however, whether the marshal did or did not either under order of court or otherwise abandon his possession. The just construction of the rule we conceive to be, that property once taken possession of by a court, and disposed of under its order, remains in custody of the law, subject to the exclusive jurisdiction of the court (into whose hands soever it may pass), until by the execution of its final decree, the jurisdiction of the court is completely exhausted.

FN17 Daniel's Chancery Practice, 2003.

II. We come then to the great question of the case; one touching the character and extent of jurisdiction vested by our law in those voluntary associations sometimes called 703 ecclesiastical courts, and how far they are independent of control by the civil,--a question of magnitude every way; one which determines the relations of the church to the state in this country, and whether the church in relation to its civil interests is organized under the authority of law or above it.

The case shows two contesting organizations, each asserting itself to be the true Walnut Street Church mentioned in the deed and charter. The question for decision, therefore, is strictly one of identity and of lawful organic succession.

A number of cases of church litigation are reported in New York and New England; but they are inapplicable to the questions arising herein, because in New England the cases refer to congregational or independent churches, and in New York to incorporated religious societies, wherein the whole body of the congregation, whether members of the church or not, are members of the corporation; and where disputed questions touching property or other rights are determined strictly on the principles applicable to corporations. [FN18]

FN18 See Petty v. Tooker, 21 New York, 267; Burrell v. Associated Ref. Synod, 44 Barbour, 282; Robertson v. Bullions, 9 Id. 64.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

The Pennsylvania cases of Presbyterian Congregation v. Johnston, and Commonwealth v. Green, [FN19] present some points of contrast with the questions in this cause, especially the latter, which relates mainly to questions of property held by the governing body as distinguished from that of a congregation part of a larger organization.

FN19 1 Watts & Sergeant, 37 4 Wharton, 603.

In Kentucky, Gibson v. Armstrong, [FN20] gives a case which assists us. Shannon v. Frost, [FN21] is inapplicable in this cause, by reason of the congregational character of the Baptist Church in which it arose.

FN20 7 B. Monroe, 481.

FN21 3 Id. 256.

The great field for litigation of this nature has undoubtedly been Scotland, the native home of the Presbyterian faith and form of church government.

Prior to about the year 1813 the courts seemed not to 704 have settled upon any definite rule by which church controversies were to be adjudged. Their unwillingness, however, coupled with doubts as to their power to handle ecclesiastical matters inclined them generally to refer every question involving such matters exclusively to the decision of the Church itself. But there were difficulties in the application of the principle, and a confused idea that in case of schism the organic succession necessarily remained with the majority of the local society, counterbalanced by the idea that its identity could not be preserved except in connection with the general body of which it formed a part, caused a singular vacillation in judicial decision. The earlier decisions, accepting as a conclusive test of right the action of a majority of the local congregation, afforded an easy and simple rule, so long as applied to independent churches; but when it came to be applied to societies organized as a part of larger bodies, where the majorities in the local and general organizations might be different, it was found not to be founded on just or practicable principles. For a time the courts vacillated in its application, as their views happened to lean most strongly towards congregational independence or towards ecclesiastical connection and subordination. Finally, about the year 1813, came up the case of Craigdallie v. Aikman, [FN22] a case bearing in some points a striking analogy to the present. In it both of these conceptions were brought out at different times; and an appeal to the House of Lords drew from Lord Eldon an announcement of the principle which was at once recognized and has since been uniformly accepted as the true governing rule in all cases of this nature.

FN22 2 Bligh, 529; 1 Dow., 1.

In the case we speak of, property had been acquired and was held in trust for a congregation forming part of a larger body known as Burgher Seceders, the highest judicatory in the church being the Synod. That body having passed certain resolutions alleged to be a departure from one of the articles of their confession, a minority protested, congregations became divided, and among other cases, the question 705 arose as to which of the two parties in this congregation was entitled to its property. It was made a test case and received the most careful consideration. Upon its first hearing in the Scotch Court of Session, the 'majority (in interest) in the congregation' were held to be entitled. But under the forms of their proceeding the cause came again before the court, and some of the judges being changed, it was now declared that the property was held for a 'society of persons, . . . such persons always . . . continuing in communion with and subject to the ecclesiastical discipline of a body of dissenting Protestants calling themselves the Associate Presbytery and Synod of Burgher Seceders.' The effect of these decisions was to make the question of identity or organic succession, in the one case to attach solely to a majority of the local congregation, in the other to depend upon a continued connection with the general body. On appeal to the House of Lords both of these views were rejected and the following principle, first announced by Lord Eldon, was adopted, viz.: That property conveyed for the use of a society for purposes of religious worship, is a trust, which is to be enforced for the purpose of maintaining that religious worship for which the property was devoted, and in the event of schism (the deed making no provision for such case), its uses are to be enforced, not in behalf of a majority of the congregation, nor yet exclusively in behalf of the party adhering to the general body, but in favor of that part of the society adhering to and maintaining the original principles upon which it was founded.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

This case, followed and recognized by that of Attorney-General v. Pearson, [FN23] has been accepted in all cases of this nature in England, Scotland, and America.

FN23 3 Merivale, 353.

The principle of this case, so simple and just in itself, was yet not so fully or clearly expressed as to remove all difficulty in its application. Several important questions were at once presented; and,

1. To the maintenance of which of the various principles 706 of the society does the implied trust especially refer? Does it relate mainly to the fundamental doctrines of religious truth, the standards of faith, or does it embrace equally all the principles of doctrine, form, and order? Does it bind the society permanently and exclusively to the same principles and to the same connections with and relations to other societies which existed at the date of conveyance, or does it recognize the right of change inherent in the body by general consent, or perhaps incorporated as an original principle in the fundamental law of the organization? Does it recognize that by unforeseen events beyond the control of the society, its original connections may be changed or broken up without its own act or assent? All of these questions under varying forms and circumstances have been presented, and discussed, and adjudged; and this general principle may be considered as settled, viz.: That where property is conveyed 'for the use' or 'benefit' of a designated 'church,' or 'religious society' (the deed containing no special limitations), such property, by operation of the law of trusts, is held for the use of such society, subject to the entire body or system of doctrines, rules, or principles, whether of faith, form, or order, held and recognized by the society at the time of conveyance; that it binds such society to a permanency of religious faith and a continuance of subsisting connections, or recognizes a right of change in doctrine, or a lawful severance of its connections, so far and no farther than it is bound to or released from such permanent or continuing state, by or in accordance with the fundamental laws of the organization; that wherever the use or control of property depends upon adherence to or a change from original doctrines, or upon a continuance or severance of connections with a particular judicatory, or upon an alleged title to office in the church, or upon any act, judgment, or proceeding of an ecclesiastical tribunal, in every case the exclusive standard by which the conflicting claims are to be judged is the CONSTITUTION of the church itself.

These views are recognized and brought out with force in 707 the American cases of Gibson v. Armstrong and Sutter v. The First Reformed Church . [FN24]

FN24 Supra, 703. To the same effect, see Smith v. Nelson, 18 Vermont, 511; Kniskern v. Lutheran Church, 1 Sandford's Chancery, 439; Miller v. Gable, 2 Denio, 492.

2. Another question, more serious and difficult than the last, remained in determining the application of this rule of the law of trusts, viz.: In these matters of religious doctrine, discipline, and church order, who is to be the judge? Who has the right to say conclusively, in case of controversy, that one or the other party has departed from the doctrines of the church? Who shall determine upon the validity of an act or judgment of a church court; upon the status of a member or officer; upon the legality or otherwise of a voluntary or enforced severance of a part from the body of the general organization?

This question was promptly raised upon the earliest application of the principle stated by Lord Eldon, and has been decided with a frequency and uniformity rarely met with upon any important question. Yet the court below assumed that these matters, being of an ecclesiastical nature or arising upon a construction of the law of the church, are subject to exclusive cognizance and jurisdiction by the ecclesiastical courts, whose judgments thereon must be accepted as conclusive by the civil courts.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

The position assumed does not stop with assering that, if the decision of the question in controversy has been committed by the constitution of the church to a particular tribunal, or if the act or judgment in question has been performed by such tribunal in pursuance of a power vested in it by the constitution, in such case the act or judgment is conclusive on the civil court. It asserts an exclusive right in the General Assembly to determine conclusively the extent of its own powers and duties under the constitution; to determine in every case, whether it has itself violated the constitution or abandoned the principles of the faith. It asserts that the announcement of a particular doctrine or the imposition of a duty on the church, or 708 the performance, rendering, or approval of an act or judgment by the General Assembly, is itself a conclusive evidence, probatio probata, that such doctrine or duty, act or judgment, has been imposed, rendered, or performed, in accordance with the constitution of the church; and that the church itself and the civil courts have no power to examine or question what has been so settled by the supreme tribunal of the church.

If the principle of the decree herein is affirmed, it sweeps away all limitations imposed upon church courts by their fundamental laws and renders it impossible that churches can be organized under rules or limitations which shall bind the judicatories of their own creation.

Hitherto the question has received but one solution. It devolves upon this court authoritatively to settle it. Let us examine the history of judicial decision.

In Galbraith v. Smith [FN25] (the first case coming before the Scotch Court of Session after the judgment of the House of Lords in Craigdallie v. Aikman), the position contended for by the appellees was accepted and announced from the bench. Lord Meadowbank, construing that judgment, said that it would have been competent for the party adhering to the Synod to have shown as matter of fact that it having been a fundamental rule of the sect that in the supreme judicatory alone was vested the power of determining all questions of doctrine and discipline, so the judgment of the Synod was to be received as probatio probata of their adherence to their original principles; it being incompetent for the civil court to review the decisions in such matters of the ecclesiastical judicatories. He then stated as a general proposition, that FN25 15 Shaw, 808, decided A. D. 1837.

'It is a legal object of such a trust, that it may profess to be constituted with a view to perpetuity, even by placing in the hands of a recognized body the right of controlling and modifying those rules and regulations in conformity with the fundamental principles of the sect of dissenting Christians to which 709 those constituting the trust may have professed to adhere; and that the civil court will not take cognizance of the proceedings and determinations of those judicatories, as they may be termed, upon matters of doctrine and discipline, but hold them to be probatio probata of the principles of the sect.'

This was manifestly throwing the question back upon the doctrine of the second judgment in the Craigdallie case. Accordingly, on the next occasion calling for a review of the principle by the Court of Session, the view taken in Galbraith v. Smith was overruled. The court say that the principle of the judgment of the House of Lords had been 'wholly misunderstood;' that Lord Meadowbank's view 'takes adherence to the Synod as conclusive and excludes inquiry into the original opinions or doctrines, if opposed to the declaration made by the Synod, as to what those doctrines are, and is precisely the error in the Craigdallie case again brought out and in more absolute terms.' The error, the court say, was 'founded on the assumption that connection with a dissenting Synod was as decisive a criterion by which to determine property and civil rights as adherence to the established church. The mistake consisted in taking as decisive what was only one element, and it might be an element of no importance in the inquiry, what was the original trust and which party maintains the principles;' and in answer to the suggestion that 'submission to the judicatories may be one of the original principles,' the court say 'then you must prove that. It is not probatio probata. It is not even a presumption of law.' [FN26]

FN26 Craigie v. Marshall, 12 Dunlop, 523, A.D. 1850.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

The cases above referred to, relate especially to the power of the civil courts, to examine and decide (as matter of fact) upon questions of doctrinal differences where rights of property depend upon adherence to doctrines. But the great contest for complete ecclesiastical independence and exclusive jurisdiction was made upon another point, viz.: as to the right of the civil court to examine and pass directly upon the title of persons claiming official status in the church, or *710 upon the validity of proceedings in church courts, where civil rights may depend on such status, or may be affected by such proceedings. This contest, beginning about the year 1838, in the Scotch Court of Session, several times brought before the House of Lords, may be considered as terminating in the celebrated Cardross Case. [FN27] Its great importance and the deep interest excited by it, occasioned the most profound investigation into the principles which should regulate civil courts in their relations to the churches; and the results have been valuable to the law. An examination of them will show these general principles to have been settled:

FN27 See McMillan v. General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church, 22 D., 270, decided 23d Dec., 1859.

i. That the church (non-established) stands before the law, in relation to all civil interests acquired or claimed by it, precisely as every other voluntary society for moral or scientific or other purposes, subject in the same manner and extent to the jurisdiction of civil authority.

ii. That in so far as the law can regard them, the powers of the church judicatories are derived solely from the consent of the members of the church, as expressed in their fundamental law; that they are not 'courts' and have no 'jurisdiction' in the strict sense of the terms--these terms necessarily implying the existence of a power conferred by and vested in functionaries of the state. They are not 'courts' except of the parties' own choosing.

iii. That in so far as the fundamental laws of the church confer powers on its tribunals, the civil courts will recognize them, and where civil rights are involved, will give effect to their exercise without inquiring into the motives or grounds of action of the ecclesiastical tribunal; and will enforce with the same respect the action of the inferior tribunal acting within its sphere, as they will that of the supreme court of the church.

iv. That the jurisdiction of civil courts being confined to 'civil actions,' they may not take cognizance of purely spiritual or ecclesiastical questions, as such; just as they may not take cognizance of any moral or scientific questions for the purpose of determining upon their abstract truth; but that in every case *711 of controversy, where a right of property depends upon an adherence to religious doctrine, or is affected by an act or judgment of an ecclesiastical tribunal, the civil court will examine into such doctrine as matter of fact, for the purpose of determining which party maintains the original principles of the society, and will examine into the act or judgment of the ecclesiastical court, for the purpose of determining whether it is in contravention of the fundamental law of the church, or without authority from it; in which latter case, such act or judgment will be esteemed void and be disregarded. In these several cases the exclusive standard of judgment is the CONSTITUTION of the church itself.

These principles, first announced with reference to the high claims of the Established Church of Scotland, were afterwards repeated with equal deliberation in reference to the Free Church, which having withdrawn from the Establishment on account of these decisions, reasserted in its voluntary character its claim to ecclesiastical independence. A reference to the Cardross Case will show how it was presented, and met. A Presbytery having tried a minister for misconduct, adjudged (partially) against him; and the Synod on appeal reversed its action. Upon appeal to the General Assembly, that body took up the case de novo and passed a sentence more extensive than that of the Presbytery. The minister, whose civil rights were affected by this judgment, applied to the civil court for its 'reduction,' on the ground that the Assembly being confined to an appellate power by the constitution of the church, had transcended its authority by passing an original sentence upon him. The General Assembly among others filed the following pleas:

1st. 'That the sentences complained of, being spiritual acts, done in the ordinary course of discipline of a Christian Church tolerated and protected by law, it is not competent for the civil court to reduce them, and the actions should therefore be dismissed.'

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

2d. 'As the actions, so far as they conclude for a reduction of the sentences complained of, do not relate to any question of civil right, they cannot be maintained.'*712

Upon argument and a full review of all the cases, both of these pleas were overruled. The cause did not reach a hearing upon the pleas touching the actual powers of the Assembly under the constitution; but those decided are alone important in this discussion. [FN28]

FN28 For a continuous history of this controversy, see Earl of Kinnoul v. Presbytery of Auchterarder (Feb. 27th, 1838), 16 Shaw, 661; McLean & Robinson, 320; Clark v. Sterling (June 14th, 1839), 1 D. 955; Dunlap, 330; Presbytery of Strathbogie (1839 and 1840), 2 D. 258, 585, 1047, 1380; 15 F. 605, 1478; Dunlap, 64, 330; Edwards v. Cruikshank (December, 1840), 3 Dunlap, 283; Presbytery of Strathbogie (May, 1842), and other cases occurring near the same period in reference to the Established Church. Also Dunbar v. Skinner (March 3d, 1849), 11 D. 945; Long v. Bishop of Capetown, Ecclesiastical Judgments of Privy Council, 310; Murray v. Burger's Ib. (February 6th, 1867); Forbes v. Eden, 38 Jurist, 98.

If then the controlling principles of law touching this matter have been correctly stated, it follows in this Walnut Street Church case, that if it shall appear that the majority have abandoned, while the minority adhere to the original principles of the society, the judgment must go in favor of the minority.

The General Assembly is not excepted from the obligation of the rule. If a doubt upon this point should otherwise exist, it would be removed by a consideration of the commission under which alone its members act and hold their places, and by which they are severally restricted to sit, consult, vote, and determine, on all things that may come before that body 'according to the principles and constitution of this church, and the word of God.' Even those general clauses in the Form of Government touching the powers of Assembly to 'decide controversies,' and to 'suppress schismatical contentions and disputations,' are to be exercised not wantonly, but in accordance with the fixed provisions elsewhere stated. They contemplate controversies, contentions, and disputations, to which there may be parties and proceedings, by which these matters may be constitutionally brought before the Assembly.

The learned counsel then having stated in detail the particulars of the schisms in the Presbyterian Church, set *713 out generally in the Reporter's statement of the case, went into a very interesting examination of the constitution and fundamental principles of that church, and sought to show that those Declaratory Statements or Resolutions 'whereby the church had pledged herself, in her ecclesiastical capacity, to an unabated loyalty to the civil government, and one great section of the church was prejudged as traitors,' were in violation of its fundamental principles; and a departure from those sacred standards which declare that the 'visible church, which is also catholic or universal (and not confined to one nation as before, under the law), consists of all those throughout the world that profess the true religion' whereof 'there is no other head but the Lord Jesus Christ;' [FN29] that the Assembly in making such a departure had imposed upon ministers, members, and judicatories, the duty of resistance to its edicts; and that the Presbytery of Louisville, in its 'Declaration and Testimony'--its Declaration against the principle of these deliverances; its Testimony of refusal to 'sustain or in any manner assist in the execution' of them, stood immovably on the constitution.

FN29 Confession of Faith, chapter 25.

The conclusion to which this court arrived, as to its competence to pass in this case on such questions, renders that able argument, so interesting in some aspects, comparatively without interest here, on which account it is omitted.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

Messrs. B. H. Bristow and J. M. Harlan, contra.

The case having been held under advisement since the last term, when the argument was had,

Mr. Justice MILLER now delivered the opinion of the court.

This case belongs to a class, happily rare in our courts, in which one of the parties to a controversy, essentially ecclesiastical, resorts to the judicial tribunals of the State for the maintenance of rights which the church has refused to acknowledge, or found itself unable to protect. Much as such dissensions among the members of a religious society should *714 be regretted, a regret which is increased when passing from the control of the judicial and legislative bodies of the entire organization to which the society belongs, an appeal is made to the secular authority; the courts when so called on must perform their functions as in other cases.

Religious organizations come before us in the same attitude as other voluntary associations for benevolent or charitable purposes, and their rights of property, or of contract, are equally under the protection of the law, and the actions of their members subject to its restraints. Conscious as we may be of the excited feeling engendered by this controversy, and of the extent to which it has agitated the intelligent and pious body of Christians in whose bosom it originated, we enter upon its consideration with the satisfaction of knowing that the principles on which we are to decide so much of it as is proper for our decision, are those applicable alike to all of its class, and that our duty is the simple one of applying those principles to the facts before us.

The first of the points arising in the case concerns the jurisdiction of the Circuit Court, which is denied; first, on the ground that the plaintiffs have no such interest in the subject of litigation as will enable them to maintain the suit, and, secondly, on matters arising out of the alleged proceedings in the suit in the Chancery Court of Louisville.

The allegation that the plaintiffs are not lawful members of the Walnut Street Church is based upon the assumption that their admission as members was by a pastor and elders who had no lawful authority to act as such. As the claim of those elders to be such is one of the matters which this bill is brought to establish, and the denial of which makes an issue to be tried, it is obvious that the objection to the interest of the plaintiffs must stand or fall with the decision on the merits, and cannot be decided as a preliminary question. Their right to have this question decided, if there is no other objection to the jurisdiction, cannot be doubted. Some attempt is made in the answer to question the good faith of their citizenship, but this seems to have been abandoned in the argument.*715

In regard to the suit in the Chancery Court of Louisville, which the defendants allege to be pending, there can be no doubt but that that court is one competent to entertain jurisdiction of all the matters set up in the present suit. As to those matters, and to the parties, it is a court of concurrent jurisdiction with the Circuit Court of the United States, and as between those courts the rule is applicable that the one which has first obtained jurisdiction in a given case must retain it exclusively until it disposes of it by a final judgment or decree.

But when the pendency of such a suit is set up to defeat another, the case must be the same. There must be the same parties, or at least such as represent the same interest, there must be the same rights asserted, and the same relief prayed for. This relief must be founded on the same facts, and the title or essential basis of the relief sought must be the same. The identity in these particulars should be such that if the pending case had already been disposed of, it could be pleaded in bar as a former adjudication of the same matter between the same parties.

In the case of Barrows v. Kindred, [FN30] which was an action of ejectment, the plaintiff showed a good title to the land, and the defendant relied on a former judgment in his favor, between the same parties for the same land; the statute of Illinois making a judgment in such an action as conclusive as in other personal actions, except by way of new trial. But this court held that as in the second suit the plaintiff introduced and relied upon a new and different title, acquired since the first trial, that judgment could be no bar, because that title had not been passed upon by the court in the first suit.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

FN30 4 Wallace, 399.

But the principles which should govern in regard to the identity of the matters in issue in the two suits to make the pendency of the one defeat the other, are as fully discussed, in the case of Buck v. Colbath, [FN31] where that was the main question, as in any case we have been able to find. It was *716 an action of trespass, brought in a State court, against the marshal of the Circuit Court of the United States for seizing property of the plaintiff, under a writ of attachment from the Circuit Court. And it was brought while the suit in the Federal court was still pending, and while the marshal held the property subject to its judgment. So far as the lis pendens and possession of the property in one court, and a suit brought for the taking by its officer in another, are concerned, the analogy to the present case is very strong. In that case the court said: 'It is not true that a court, having obtained jurisdiction of a subject-matter of suit and of parties before it, thereby excludes all other courts from the right to adjudicate upon other matters having a very close connection with those before the first court, and in some instances requiring the decision of the same question exactly. In examining into the exclusive character of the jurisdiction in such cases, we must have regard to the nature of the remedies, the character of the relief sought, and the identity of the parties in the different suits.' And it might have been added, to the facts on which the claim for relief is founded. 'A party,' says the court by way of example, having notes secured by a mortgage on real estate, may, unless restrained by statute, sue in a court of chancery to foreclose his mortgage, and in a court of law to recover a judgment on his notes, and in another court of law in an action of ejectment for possession of the land. Here, in all the suits, the only question at issue may be the existence of the debt secured by the mortgage. But, as the relief sought is different, and the mode of proceeding different, the jurisdiction of neither court is affected by the proceedings in the other.' This opinion contains a critical review of the cases in this court of Hagan v. Lucas, [FN32] Peck v. Jenness, [FN33] Taylor v. Carryl, [FN34] and Freeman v. Howe, [FN35] cited and relied on by counsel for the appellants; and we are satisfied that it states the doctrine correctly.

FN31 3 Id. 334.

FN32 10 Peters, 402.

FN33 7 Howard, 624.

FN34 20 Id. 594.

FN35 24 Id. 450.

The limits which necessity assigns to this opinion forbid *717 our giving at length, the pleadings in the case in the Louisville Chancery Court. But we cannot better state what is, and what is not, the subject-matter of that suit or controversy, as thus presented and as shown throughout its course, than by adopting the language of the Court of Appeals of Kentucky, in its opinion delivered at the decision of that suit, in favor of the present appellants. 'As suggested in argument,' says the court, 'and apparently conceded on both sides, this is not a case of division or schism in a church; nor is there any question as to which of two bodies should be recognized as the Third or Walnut Street Presbyterian Church. Neither is there any controversy as to the authority of Watson and Galt to act as ruling elders; but the sole inquiry to which we are restricted in our opinion is, whether Avery, McNaughtan, and Leach are also ruling elders, and therefore members of the session of the church.'

The pleadings in the present suit show conclusively a different state of facts, different issues, and a different relief sought. This is a case of a division or schism in the church. It is a question as to which of two bodies shall be recognized as the Third or Walnut Street Presbyterian Church. There is a controversy as to the authority of Watson and Galt to act as ruling elders, that authority being denied in the bill of the complainants; and, so far from the claim of Avery, McNaughtan, and Leach to be ruling elders being the sole inquiry in this case, it is a very subordinate matter, and it depends upon facts and circumstances altogether different from those set up and relied on in the other suit, and which did not exist when it was brought. The issue here is no longer a mere question of eldership, but it is a separation of the original church members and officers into two distinct bodies, with distinct members and officers, each claiming to be the true Walnut Street Presbyterian Church, and denying the right of the other to any such claim. This brief statement of the issues in the two suits leaves no room for argument to show that the pendency of the first cannot be pleaded either in bar or in abatement of the second.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

The supplementary petition filed by the plaintiffs in that *718 case, after the decree of the Chancery Court had been reversed on appeal, and which did contain very much the same matter found in the present bill, was, on motion of the plaintiffs' counsel, and by order of the court, dismissed, without prejudice, before this suit was brought, and of course was not a lis pendens at that time.

It is contended, however, that the delivery to the trustees and elders of the body of which the plaintiffs are members, of the possession of the church building cannot be granted in this suit, nor can the defendants be enjoined from taking possession as prayed in the bill, because the property is in the actual possession of the marshal of the Louisville Chancery Court as its receiver, and because there is an unexecuted decree of that court ordering the marshal to deliver the possession to defendants.

In this the counsel for the appellants are, in our opinion, sustained, both by the law and by the state of the record of the suit in that court.

The court, in the progress of that suit, made several orders concerning the use of the church, and finally placed it in the possession of the marshal as a receiver, and there is no order discharging his receivership; nor does it seem to us that there is any valid order finally disposing of the case, so that it can be said to be no longer in that court. For, though the Chancery Court did, on the 20th March, 1868, after the reversal of the case in the Court of Appeals, enter an order reversing its former decree and dismissing the bill, with costs, in favor of the defendants, the latter, on application to the appellate court, obtained another order dated June 26th. By this order, or mandate to the Chancery Court, it was directed to render a judgment in conformity to the opinion and mandate of the court, restoring possession, use, and control of the church property to the parties entitled thereto, according to said opinion, and so far as they were deprived thereof by the marshal of the Chancery Court under its order.

In obedience to this mandate the Chancery Court, on the 18th September, three months after the commencement of *719 this suit, made an order that the marshal restore the possession, use, and control of the church building to Henry Farley, George Fulton, B. F. Avery, or a majority of them, as trustees, and to John Watson, Joseph Galt, and T. J. Hackney, or a majority of them, as ruling elders, and to report how he had executed the order, and reserving the case for such further order as might be necessary to enforce full obedience.

It is argued here by counsel for the appellees that the case was, in effect, disposed of by the orders of the Chancery Court, and that nothing remained to be done which could have any practical operation on the rights of the parties.

But if the Court of Appeals, in reversing the decree of the chancellor in favor of the plaintiffs, was of opinion that the defendants should be restored to the position they occupied in regard to the possession and control of the property before that suit began, we have no doubt of their right to make such order as was necessary to effect that object; and as the proper mode of doing this was by directing the chancellor to make the necessary order, and have it enforced as chancery decrees are enforced in his court, we are of opinion that the order of the Court of Appeals, above recited, was in essence and effect, a decree in that cause for such restoration, and that the last order of the Chancery Court, made in accordance with it, is a valid subsisting decree, which, though final, is unexecuted.

The decisions of this court in the cases of Taylor v. Carryl, [FN36] and Freeman v. Howe, [FN37] and Buck v. Colbath, [FN38] are conclusive that the marshal of the Chancery Court cannot be displaced as to the mere actual possession of the property, because that might lead to a personal conflict between the officers of the two courts for that possession. And the act of Congress of March 2d, 1793, [FN39] as construed in the cases of Diggs v. Wolcott, [FN40] and Peck v. Jenness, [FN41] are equally conclusive against any injunction from the Circuit Court, forbidding the defendants *720 to take the possession which the unexecuted decree of the Chancery Court requires the marshal to deliver to them.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

FN36 20 Howard, 594.

FN37 24 Id. 450.

FN38 3 Wallace, 334.

FN39 1 Stat. at Large, 334, § 5.

FN40 4 Cranch, 179.

FN41 7 Howard, 625.

But, though the prayer of the bill in this suit does ask for an injunction to restrain Watson, Galt, Fulton, and Farley from taking possession, it also prays such other and further relief as the nature of the case requires, and especially that said defendants be restrained from interfering with Hays, as pastor, and plaintiffs in worshipping in said church. Under this prayer for general relief, if there was any decree which the Circuit Court could render for the protection of the right of the plaintiffs, and which did not enjoin the defendants from taking possession of the church property, and which did not disturb the possession of the marshal of the Louisville chancery, that court had a right to hear the case and grant that relief. This leads us to inquire what is the nature and character of the possession to which those parties are to be restored.

One or two propositions which seem to admit of no controversy are proper to be noticed in this connection. 1. Both by the act of the Kentucky legislature creating the trustees of the church a body corporate, and by the acknowledged rules of the Presbyterian Church, the trustees were the mere nominal title- holders and custodians of the church property, and other trustees were, or could be elected by the congregation, to supply their places once in every two years. 2. That in the use of the property for all religious services or ecclesiastical purposes, the trustees were under the control of the church session. 3. That by the constitution of all Presbyterian churches, the session, which is the governing body in each, is composed of the ruling elders and pastor, and in all business of the session the majority of its members govern, the number of elders for each congregation being variable.

The trustees obviously hold possession for the use of the persons who by the constitution, usages, and laws of the Presbyterian body, are entitled to that use. They are liable to removal by the congregation for whom they hold this trust, and others may be substituted in their places. They *721 have no personal ownership or right beyond this, and are subject in their official relations to the property, to the control of the session of the church.

The possession of the elders, though accompanied with larger and more efficient powers of control, is still a fiduciary possession. It is as a session of the church alone that they could exercise power. Except by an order of the session in regular meeting they have no right to make any order concerning the use of the building; and any action of the session is necessarily in the character of representatives of the church body by whose members it was elected.

If then, this true body of the church, the members of that congregation, having rights of user in the building, have in a mode which is authorized by the canons of the general church in this country elected and installed other elders, it does not seem to us inconsistent or at variance with the nature of the possession which we have described, and which the Chancery Court orders to be restored to the defendants, that they should be compelled to recognize these rights, and permit those who are the real beneficiaries of the trust held by them, to enjoy the uses, to protect which that trust was created. Undoubtedly if the order of the Chancery Court had been executed, and the marshal had delivered the key of the church to the defendants, and placed them in the same position they were in before that suit was commenced, they could in any court having jurisdiction and in a case properly made out, be compelled to respect the rights we have stated, and be controlled in their use of the possession by the court, so far as to secure those rights.

All that we have said in regard to the possession which the marshal is directed to deliver to the defendants, is equally applicable to the possession held by him pending the execution of that order. His possession is a substitute for theirs, and the order under which he received that possession, which we have recited, shows this very clearly.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

The decree which we are now reviewing seems to us to be carefully framed on this view of the matter. Wile the rights of the plaintiffs and those whom they sue for, are admitted *722 and established, the defendants are still recognized as entitled to the possession which we have described; and while they are not enjoined from receiving that possession from the marshal, and he is not restrained from obeying the Chancery Court by delivering it, and while there is no order made on the marshal at all to interfere with his possession, the defendants are required by the decree to respect the rights of the plaintiffs, and to so use the possession and control to which they may be restored as not to hinder or obstruct the true uses of the trust, which that possession is intended to protect.

We are next to inquire whether the decree thus rendered is based upon an equally just view of the law as applied to the facts of this controversy.

The questions which have come before the civil courts concerning the rights to property held by ecclesiastical bodies, may, so far as we have been able to examine them, be profitably classified under three general heads, which of course do not include cases governed by considerations applicable to a church established and supported by law as the religion of the state.

1. The first of these is when the property which is the subject of controversy has been, by the deed or will of the donor, or other instrument by which the property is held, by the express terms of the instrument devoted to the teaching, support, or spread of some specific form of religious doctrine or belief.

2. The second is when the property is held by a religious congregation which, by the nature of its organization, is strictly independent of other ecclesiastical associations, and so far as church government is concerned, owes no fealty or obligation to any higher authority.

3. The third is where the religious congregation or ecclesiastical body holding the property is but a subordinate member of some general church organization in which there are superior ecclesiastical tribunals with a general and ultimate power of control more or less complete, in some supreme *723 judicatory over the whole membership of that general organization.

In regard to the first of these classes it seems hardly to admit of a rational doubt that an individual or an association of individuals may dedicate property by way of trust to the purpose of sustaining, supporting, and propagating definite religious doctrines or principles, provided that in doing so they violate now law of morality, and give to the instrument by which their purpose is evidenced, the formalities which the laws require. And it would seem also to be the obvious duty of the court, in a case properly made, to see that the property so dedicated is not diverted from the trust which is thus attached to its use. So long as there are persons qualified within the meaning of the original dedication, and who are also willing to teach the doctrines or principles prescribed in the act of dedication, and so long as there is any one so interested in the execution of the trust as to have a standing in court, it must be that they can prevent the diversion of the property or fund to other and different uses. This is the general doctrine of courts of equity as to charities, and it seems equally applicable to ecclesiastical matters.

In such case, if the trust is confided to a religious congregation of the independent or congregational form of church government, it is not in the power of the majority of that congregation, however preponderant, by reason of a change of views on religious subjects, to carry the property so confided to them to the support of new and conflicting doctrine. A pious man building and dedicating a house of worship to the sole and exclusive use of those who believe in the doctrine of the Holy Trinity, and placing it under the control of a congregation which at the time holds the same belief, has a right to expect that the law will prevent that property from being used as a means of support and dissemination of the Unitarian doctrine, and as a place of Unitarian worship. Nor is the principle varied when the organization to which the trust is confided is of the second or associated form of church government. The protection which the law *724 throws around the trust is the same. And though the task may be a delicate one and a difficult one, it will be the duty of the court in such cases, when the doctrine to be taught or the form of worship to be used is definitely and clearly laid down, to inquire whether the party accused of violating the trust is holding or teaching a different doctrine, or using a form of worship which is so far variant as to defeat the declared objects of the trust. In the leading case on this subject, in the English courts, of the Attorney-General v. Pearson, [FN42] Lord Eldon said, 'I agree with the defendants that the religious belief of the parties is irrelevant to the matters in dispute, except so far as the King's Court is called upon to execute the trust.' That was a case in which the trust-deed declared the house which was erected under it was for the worship and service of God. And though we may not be satisfied with the very artificial and elaborate argument by which the chancellor arrives at the conclusion, that because any other view of the nature of the Godhead than the Trinitarian view was heresy by the laws of England, and any one giving expression to the Unitarian view was liable to be severely punished for heresy by the secular courts, at the time the deed was made, that the trust was, therefore, for Trinitarian worship, we may still accept the statement that the court has the right to enforce a trust clearly defined on such a subject.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

FN42 3 Merivale, 353.

The case of Miller v. Gable [FN43] appears to have been decided in the Court of Errors of New York on this principle, so far as any ground of decision can be gathered from the opinions of the majority of the court as reported.

FN43 2 Denio, 492.

The second class of cases which we have described has reference to the case of a church of a strictly congregational or independent organization, governed solely within itself, either by a majority of its members or by such other local organism as it may have instituted for the purpose of ecclesiastical government; and to property held by such a church, either by way of purchase or donation, with no other specific 725 trust attached to it in the hands of the church than that it is for the use of that congregation as a religious society.

In such cases where there is a schism which leads to a separation into distinct and conflicting bodies, the rights of such bodies to the use of the property must be determined by the ordinary principles which govern voluntary associations. If the principle of government in such cases is that the majority rules, then the numerical majority of members must control the right to the use of the property. If there be within the congregation officers in whom are vested the powers of such control, then those who adhere to the acknowledged organism by which the body is governed are entitled to the use of the property. The minority in choosing to separate themselves into a distinct body, and refusing to recognize the authority of the governing body, can claim no rights in the property from the fact that they had once been members of the church or congregation. This ruling admits of no inquiry into the existing religious opinions of those who comprise the legal or regular organization; for, if such was permitted, a very small minority, without any officers of the church among them, might be found to be the only faithful supporters of the religious dogmas of the founders of the church. There being no such trust imposed upon the property when purchased or given, the court will not imply one for the purpose of expelling from its use those who by regular succession and order constitute the church, because they may have changed in some respect their views of religious truth.

Of the cases in which this doctrine is applied no better representative can be found than that of Shannon v. Frost, [FN44] where the principle is ably supported by the learned Chief Justice of the Court of Appeals of Kentucky.

FN44 3 B. Monro, 253.

The case of Smith v. Nelson, [FN45] asserts this doctrine in a case where a legacy was left to the Associate Congregation of Ryegate, the interest whereof was to be annually paid to their minister forever. In that case, though the Ryegate 726 congregation was one of a number of Presbyterian churches connected with the general Presbyterian body at large, the court held that the only inquiry was whether the society still exists, and whether they have a minister chosen and appointed by the majority and regularly ordained over the society, agreeably to the usage of that denomination. And though we may be of opinion that the doctrine of that case needs modification, so far as it discusses the relation of the Ryegate congregation to the other judicatories of the body to which it belongs, it certainly lays down the principle correctly if that congregation was to be treated as an independent one.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

FN45 18 Vermont, 511.

But the third of these classes of cases is the one which is oftenest found in the courts, and which, with reference to the number and difficulty of the questions involved, and to other considerations, is every way the most important.

It is the case of property acquired in any of the usual modes for the general use of a religious congregation which is itself part of a large and general organization of some religious denomination, with which it is more or less intimately connected by religious views and ecclesiastical government.

The case before us is one of this class, growing out of a schism which has divided the congregation and its officers, and the presbytery and synod, and which appeals to the courts to determine the right to the use of the property so acquired. Here is no case of property devoted forever by the instrument which conveyed it, or by any specific declaration of its owner, to the support of any special religious dogmas, or any peculiar form of worship, but of property purchased for the use of a religious congregation, and so long as any existing religious congregation can be ascertained to be that congregation, or its regular and legitimate successor, it is entitled to the use of the property. In the case of an independent congregation we have pointed out how this identity, or succession, is to be ascertained, but in cases of this character we are bound to look at the fact that the local congregation is itself but a member of a much *727 larger and more important religious organization, and is under its government and control, and is bound by its orders and judgments. There are in the Presbyterian system of ecclesiastical government, in regular succession, the presbytery over the session or local church, the synod over the presbytery, and the General Assembly over all. These are called, in the language of the church organs, 'judicatories,' and they entertain appeals from the decisions of those below, and prescribe corrective measures in other cases.

In this class of cases we think the rule of action which should govern the civil courts, founded in a broad and sound view of the relations of church and state under our system of laws, and supported by a preponderating weight of judicial authority is, that, whenever the questions of discipline, or of faith, or ecclesiastical rule, custom, or law have been decided by the highest of these church judicatories to which the matter has been carried, the legal tribunals must accept such decisions as final, and as binding on them, in their application to the case before them.

We concede at the outset that the doctrine of the English courts is otherwise. In the case of the Attorney-General v. Pearson, cited before, the proposition is laid down by Lord Eldon, and sustained by the peers, that it is the duty of the court in such cases to inquire and decide for itself, not only what was the nature and power of these church judicatories, but what is the true standard of faith in the church organization, and which of the contending parties before the court holds to this standard. And in the subsequent case of Craigdallie v. Aikman, [FN46] the same learned judge expresses in strong terms his chagrin that the Court of Sessions of Scotland, from which the case had been appealed, had failed to find on this latter subject, so that he could rest the case on religious belief, but had declared that in this matter there was no difference between the parties. And we can very well understand how the Lord Chancellor of England, who is, in his office, in a large sense, the head and representative of *728 the Established Church, who controls very largely the church patronage, and whose judicial decision may be, and not unfrequently is, invoked in cases of heresy and ecclesiastical contumacy, should feel, even in dealing with a dissenting church, but little delicacy in grappling with the most abstruse problems of theological controversy, or in construing the instruments which those churches have adopted as their rules of government, or inquiring into their customs and usages. The dissenting church in England is not a free church in the sense in which we apply the term in this country, and it was much less free in Lord Eldon's time than now. Laws then existed upon the statute- book hampering the free exercise of religious belief and worship in many most oppressive forms, and though Protestant dissenters were less burdened than Catholics and Jews, there did not exist that full, entire, and practical freedom for all forms of religious belief and practice which lies at the foundation of our political principles. And it is quite obvious, from an examination of the series of cases growing out of the organization of the Free Church of Scotland, found in Shaw's Reports of Cases in the Court of Sessions, that it was only under the pressure of Lord Eldon's ruling, established in the House of Lords, to which final appeal lay in such cases, that the doctrine was established in the Court of Sessions after no little struggle and resistance. The full history of the case of Craigdallie v. Aikman, in the Scottish court, which we cannot further pursue, and the able opinion of Lord Meadowbank in Galbraith v. Smith, [FN47] show this conclusively.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

FN46 2 Bligh, 529.

FN47 15 Shaw, 808.

In this country the full and free right to entertain any religious belief, to practice any religious principle, and to teach any religious doctrine which does not violate the laws of morality and property, and which does not infringe personal rights, is conceded to all. The law knows no heresy, and is committed to the support of no dogma, the establishment of no sect. The right to organize voluntary religious associations to assist in the expression and dissemination of 729 any religious doctrine, and to create tribunals for the decision of controverted questions of faith within the association, and for the ecclesiastical government of all the individual members, congregations, and officers within the general association, is unquestioned. All who unite themselves to such a body do so with an implied consent to this government, and are bound to submit to it. But it would be a vain consent and would lead to the total subversion of such religious bodies, if any one aggrieved by one of their decisions could appeal to the secular courts and have them reversed. It is of the essence of these religious unions, and of their right to establish tribunals for the decision of questions arising among themselves, that those decisions should be binding in all cases of ecclesiastical cognizance, subject only to such appeals as the organism itself provides for.

Nor do we see that justice would be likely to be promoted by submitting those decisions to review in the ordinary judicial tribunals. Each of these large and influential bodies (to mention no others, let reference be had to the Protestant Episcopal, the Methodist Episcopal, and the Presbyterian churches), has a body of constitutional and ecclesiastical law of its own, to be found in their written organic laws, their books of discipline, in their collections of precedents, in their usage and customs, which as to each constitute a system of ecclesiastical law and religious faith that tasks the ablest minds to become familiar with. It is not to be supposed that the judges of the civil courts can be as competent in the ecclesiastical law and religious faith of all these bodies as the ablest men in each are in reference to their own. It would therefore be an appeal from the more learned tribunal in the law which should decide the case, to one which is less so.

We have said that these views are supported by the preponderant weight of authority in this country, and for the reasons which we have given, we do not think the doctrines of the English Chancery Court on this subject should have with us the influence which we would cheerfully accord to it on others. 730

We have already cited [FN48] the case of Shannon v. Frost, in which the appellate court of the State where this controversy originated, sustains the proposition clearly and fully. 'This court,' says the Chief Justice, 'having no ecclesiastical jurisdiction, cannot revise or question ordinary acts of church discipline. Our only judicial power in the case arises from the conflicting claims of the parties to the church property and the use of it. We cannot decide who ought to be members of the church, nor whether the excommunicated have been justly or unjustly, regularly or irregularly cut off from the body of the church.'

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

FN48 Supra, p. 725.

In the subsequent case of Gibson v. Armstrong, [FN49] which arose out of the general division of the Methodist Episcopal Church, we understand the same principles to be laid down as governing that case, and in the case of Watson v. Avery, [FN50] the case relied on by the appellants as a bar, and considered in the former part of this opinion, the doctrine of Shannon v. Frost is in general terms conceded, while a distinction is attempted which we shall consider hereafter.

FN49 7 B. Monro, 481.

FN50 2 Bush, 332.

One of the most careful and well-considered judgments on the subject is that of the Court of Appeals of South Carolina, delivered by Chancellor Johnson in the case of Harmon v. Dreher. [FN51] The case turned upon certain rights in the use of the church property claimed by the minister notwithstanding his expulsion from the synod as one of its members. 'He stands,' says the chancellor, 'convicted of the offences alleged against him, by the sentence of the spiritual body of which he was a voluntary member, and whose proceedings he had bound himself to abide. It belongs not to the civil power to enter into or review the proceedings of a spiritual court. The structure of our government has, for the preservation of civil liberty, rescued the temporal institutions from religious interference. On the other hand, it has secured religious liberty from the invasion of the civil authority. The judgments, therefore, of *731 religious associations, bearing on their own members, are not examinable here, and I am not to inquire whether the doctrines attributed to Mr. Dreher were held by him, or whether if held were anti-Lutheran; or whether his conduct was or was not in accordance with the duty he owed to the synod or to his donomination. . . . When a civil right depends upon an ecclesiastical matter, it is the civil court and not the ecclesiastical which is to decide. But the civil tribunal tries the civil right, and no more, taking the ecclesiastical decisions out of which the civil right arises as it finds them.' The principle is reaffirmed by the same court in the John's Island Church Case. [FN52]

FN51 2 Speer's Equity, 87.

FN52 2 Richardson's Equity, 215.

In Den v. Bolton, [FN53] the Supreme Court of New Jersey asserts the same principles, and though founding its decision mainly on a statute, it is said to be true on general principles.

FN53 7 Halstead, 206.

The Supreme Court of Illinois, in the case of Ferraria v. Vasconcelles, [FN54] refers to the case of Shannon v. Frost with approval, and adopts the language of the court that 'the judicial eye cannot penetrate the veil of the church for the forbidden purpose of vindicating the alleged wrongs of excised members; when they became members they did so upon the condition of continuing or not as they and their churches might determine, and they thereby submit to the ecclesiastical power and cannot now invoke the supervisory power of the civil tribunals.'

FN54 23 Illinois, 456.

In the very important case of Chase v. Cheny, recently decided in the same court, Judge Lawrence, who dissented, says, 'We understand the opinion as implying that in the administration of ecclesiastical discipline, and where no other right of property is involved than loss of the clerical office or salary incident to such discipline, a spiritual court is the exclusive judge of its own jurisdiction, and that its decision of that question is binding on the secular courts.' And he dissents with Judge Sheldon from the opinion because it so holds.*732

In the case of Watson v. Farris, [FN55] which was a case growing out of the schism in the Presbyterian Church in Missouri in regard to this same Declaration and Testimony and the action of the General Assembly, that court held that whether a case was regularly or irregularly before the Assembly was a question which the Assembly had the right to determine for itself, and no civil court could reverse, modify, or impair its action in a matter of merely ecclesiastical concern.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

FN55 45 Missouri, 183.

We cannot better close this review of the authorities than in the language of the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania, in the case of the German Reformed Church v. Seibert: [FN56] 'The decisions of ecclesiastical courts, like every other judicial tribunal, are final, as they are the best judges of what constitutes an offence against the word of God and the discipline of the church. Any other than those courts must be incompetent judges of matters of faith, discipline, and doctrine; and civil courts, if they should be so unwise as to attempt to supervise their judgments on matters which come within their jurisdiction, would only involve themselves in a sea of uncertainty and doubt which would do anything but improve either religion or good morals.'

FN56 3 Barr, 291.

In the subsequent case of McGinnis v. Watson, [FN57] this principle is again applied and supported by a more elaborate argument.

FN57 41 Pennsylvania State, 21.

The Court of Appeals of Kentucky, in the case of Watson v. Avery, before referred to, while admitting the general principle here laid down, maintains that when a decision of an ecclesiastical tribunal is set up in the civil courts, it is always open to inquiry whether the tribunal acted within its jurisdiction, and if it did not, its decision could not be conclusive.

There is, perhaps, no word in legal terminology so frequently used as the word jurisdiction, so capable of use in a general and vague sense, and which is used so often by men learned in the law without a due regard to precision in its application. As regards its use in the matters we have *733 been discussing it may very well be conceded that if the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church should undertake to try one of its members for murder, and punish him with death or imprisonment, its sentence would be of no validity in a civil court or anywhere else. Or if it should at the instance of one of its members entertain jurisdiction as between him and another member as to their individual right to property, real or personal, the right in no sense depending on ecclesiastical questions, its decision would be utterly disregarded by any civil court where it might be set up. And it might be said in a certain general sense very justly, that it was because the General Assembly had no jurisdiction of the case. Illustrations of this character could be multiplied in which the proposition of the Kentucky court would be strictly applicable.

But it is a very different thing where a subject-matter of dispute, strictly and purely ecclesiastical in its character,--a matter over which the civil courts exercise no jurisdiction,--a matter which concerns theological controversy, church discipline, ecclesiastical government, or the conformity of the members of the church to the standard of morals required of them,--becomes the subject of its action. It may be said here, also, that no jurisdiction has been conferred on the tribunal to try the particular case before it, or that, in its judgment, it exceeds the powers conferred upon it, or that the laws of the church do not authorize the particular form of proceeding adopted; and, in a sense often used in the courts, all of those may be said to be questions of jurisdiction. But it is easy to see that if the civil courts are to inquire into all these matters, the whole subject of the doctrinal theology, the usages and customs, the written laws, and fundamental organization of every religious denomination may, and must, be examined into with minuteness and care, for they would become, in almost every case, the criteria by which the validity of the ecclesiastical decree would be determined in the civil court. This principle would deprive these bodies of the right of construing their own church laws, would open the way to all the evils which we *734 have depicted as attendant upon the doctrine of Lord Eldon, and would, in effect, transfer to the civil courts where property rights were concerned the decision of all ecclesiastical questions.

And this is precisely what the Court of Appeals of Kentucky did in the case of Watson v. Avery. Under cover of inquiries into the jurisdiction of the synod and presbytery over the congregation, and of the General Assembly over all, it went into an elaborate examination of the principles of Presbyterian church government, and ended by overruling the decision of the highest judicatory of that church in the United States, both on the jurisdiction and the merits; and, substituting its own judgment for that of the ecclesiastical court, decides that ruling elders, declared to be such by that tribunal, are not such, and must not be recognized by the congregation, though four-fifths of its members believe in the judgment of the Assembly and desired to conform to its decree.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

But we need pursue this subject no further. Whatever may have been the case before the Kentucky court, the appellants in the case presented to us have separated themselves wholly from the church organization to which they belonged when this controversy commenced. They now deny its authority, denounce its action, and refuse to abide by its judgments. They have first erected themselves into a new organization, and have since joined themselves to another totally different, if not hostile, to the one to which they belonged when the difficulty first began. Under any of the decisions which we have examined, the appellants, in their present position, have no right to the property, or to the use of it, which is the subject of this suit.

The novelty of the questions presented to this court for the first time, their intrinsic importance and far reaching influence, and the knowledge that the schism in which the case originated has divided the Presbyterian churches throughout Kentucky and Missouri, have seemed to us to justify the careful and laborious examination and discussion which we *735 have made of the principles which should govern the case. For the same reasons we have held it under advisement for a year; not uninfluenced by the hope, that since the civil commotion, which evidently lay at the foundation of the trouble, has passed away, that charity, which is so large an element in the faith of both parties, and which, by one of the apostles of that religion, is said to be the greatest of all the Christian virtues, would have brought about a reconciliation. But we have been disappointed. It is not for us to determine or apportion the moral responsibility which attaches to the parties for this result. We can only pronounce the judgment of the law as applicable to the case presented to us, and that requires us to affirm the decree of the Circuit Court as it stands.

DECREE AFFIRMED.

The CHIEF JUSTICE did not sit on the argument of this case, and took no part in its decision.

Mr. Justice CLIFFORD, with whom concurred Mr. Justice DAVIS, dissenting.

I dissent from the opinion and decree of the court in this case, and inasmuch as the case presents an important question of jurisdiction, I deem it proper to state in a few words the grounds of my dissent.

Before this suit was commenced, a suit in respect to the same subject-matter and substantially between the same parties had been instituted in the Chancery Court of Louisville, by parties representing the same interests as those prosecuted in this case by the appellees, and they obtained a final decree in their favor against the respondents therein, representing the same interests as those defended by the present appellants. Whereupon the respondents in that suit appealed to the Court of Appeals of that State, where the decree of the Chancery Court was in all things reversed and the cause remanded for proper corrective proceedings respecting the possession, control, and use of the property *736 in controversy, and for final judgment in conformity with the opinion of the appellate court. [FN58]

FN58 Watson et al. v. Avery et al., 2 Bush, 332.

On the twenty-first of February, 1868, the present appellants filed in the Chancery Court the mandate of the Court of Appeals, together with a copy of the opinion of the appellate court, and moved that an order issue for the restitution of the property and for judgment in conformity with the opinion of the court. Pending the consideration of that motion the defeated party filed an original bill in equity against the then appellants, praying that they be restrained from all further prosecution of their motion for restitution and from all proceedings, by action, suit, or otherwise, to obtain possession or control of the property in controversy, and the chancellor, instead of executing the mandate of the appellate court, granted the injunction prayed by the losing party in the original case. Feeling aggrieved by that proceeding the then appellants applied to the Court of Appeals for a rule to compel the chancellor to carry the mandate of the appellate court into effect, and upon that hearing the Court of Appeals decided that the chancellor had exceeded his jurisdiction in granting the injunction prior to the entry of their mandate, and rendering a final decree in conformity therewith, and peremptorily required him to render a judgment of restitution of the property to the appellants, in so far as they had been deprived thereof by his previous orders. [FN59]

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

FN59 3 Id. 635.

Those orders of the appellate court were not executed, but the unsuccessful party immediately dismissed their bill of complaint to enjoin the appellants from executing the decree of the Court of Appeals, and on the twenty-first of the same month filed in the Circuit Court of the United States the bill of complaint in this case, before the second mandate of the appellate court commanding the chancellor to execute the first mandate was filed in the subordinate court.

Beyond all question jurisdiction was assumed by the Circuit Court in this case by virtue of the fact that the parties are citizens of different States, in which case the Judiciary Act provides that the Circuit Courts shall have original cognizance *737 concurrent with the several States. Indeed, jurisdiction in the case is claimed solely upon the ground that the Circuit Court of the United States possesses concurrent and co-ordinate jurisdiction with the State court in such a controversy.

In view of these considerations, as more fully set forth in the record and in the opinions given in this case by the Court of Appeals, I am of the opinion that the Circuit Court had no jurisdiction to hear and determine the matter in controversy, as there were two courts of common law exercising the same jurisdiction between the same parties in respect to the same subject-matter, within the same territorial limits, and governed by the same laws.

Neither court had any peculiar jurisdiction over the property in question nor of any peculiar right or lien upon it claimed by either party. Originally the State court had the same power with the Circuit Court to hear and decide any and every question that might arise as to the rights of property of either party in the course of the litigation. State courts and Circuit Courts in such cases are courts of concurrent and co-ordinate jurisdiction, in respect to which the principle is that 'whenever property has been seized by an officer of the court, or put in his custody by the process of the court, the property will be considered as in the custody of the court and under its control for the time being, and that no other court has a right to interfere with that possession, unless it be some court which may have a direct supervisory control over the court whose process has first taken possession, or some superior jurisdiction in the premises.' [FN60] Decided cases asserting that principle and enforcing it are very numerous in the reported decisions of this court, and also in the reported decisions of other courts of the highest respectability. [FN61]

FN60 Buck v. Colbath, 3 Wallace, 341.

FN61 Hagan v. Lucas, 10 Peters, 400; Taylor v. Carryl, 20 Howard, 594; Freeman v. Howe, 24 Id. 450; Payne v. Drewe, 4 East, 523; Peck v. Jenness, 7 Howard, 612; Evelyn v. Lewis, 3 Hare, 472; Noe v. Gibson, 7 Paige, 513; Russell v. East Anglian Railway Co., 3 McNaughton & Gordon, 104.*738

Remarks to show that the suit in the State court was pending and undisposed of when the bill was filed in the Circuit Court are unnecessary, as the fact is admitted, and in view of that fact I am of the opinion that the Circuit Court had no jurisdiction of the case.

Being of the opinion that the case ought to be reversed and dismissed for the want of jurisdiction, I do not think it necessary or proper to express any opinion upon the merits of the case.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

80 U.S. 679 (Mem), 20 L.Ed. 666, 13 Wall. 679

END OF DOCUMENT

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

BLUEBIRD (888) 477-0700 www.bluebirdonline.com
OFFICE SUPPLIES

EXHIBIT 54

63 S.Ct. 1178
87 L.Ed. 1628, 147 A.L.R. 674
(Cite as: 319 U.S. 624, 63 S.Ct. 1178)

Supreme Court of the United States.

WEST VIRGINIA STATE BOARD OF EDUCATION et al.
v.
BARNETTE et al.

No. 591.

Argued March 11, 1943.
Decided June 14, 1943.

Suit by Walter Barnette and others against the West Virginia State Board of Education, etc., and others for an injunction to restrain enforcement of a regulation requiring children in public schools to salute the American flag. From a decree, 47 F.Supp. 251, granting an injunction, the defendants appeal.

Affirmed.

Mr. Justice FRANKFURTER, Mr. Justice ROBERTS, and Mr Justice REED dissenting.

West Headnotes

[1] Schools ⇦164
345k164 Most Cited Cases

A state may require teaching by instruction and study of all in our history and in the structure and organization of our government, including the guaranties of civil liberty, which tend to inspire patriotism and love of country.

[2] Constitutional Law ⇦254(2)
92k254(2) Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 92k254)

The Fourteenth Amendment as applied to the states protects the citizen against the state itself and all of its creatures, including boards of education. U.S.C.A.Const. Amend. 14.

[3] Constitutional Law ⇦82(2)
92k82(2) Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 92k82)

The purpose of the Bill of Rights was to withdraw certain subjects from the vicissitudes of the political controversy, to place them beyond the reach of majorities and officials and to establish them as legal principles to be applied by the courts. U.S.C.A.Const. Amend. 1 et seq.

[4] Constitutional Law ⇦83(1)
92k83(1) Most Cited Cases

[4] Constitutional Law ⇦84.1
92k84.1 Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 92k84(1), 92k84)

[4] Constitutional Law ⇦87
92k87 Most Cited Cases

[4] Constitutional Law ⇦90(1)
92k90(1) Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 92k90)

[4] Constitutional Law ⇦91
92k91 Most Cited Cases

One's right to life, liberty and property, to free speech, a free press, freedom of worship and assembly, and other fundamental rights may not be submitted to vote, and they depend on the outcome of no election. U.S.C.A.Const. Amends. 1 et seq.

[5] Constitutional Law ⇦251
92k251 Most Cited Cases

The test of legislation which collides with the Fourteenth Amendment, because it also collides with the principles of the First Amendment, is much more definite than the test when only the Fourteenth Amendment is involved, and much of the vagueness of the "due process of law" clause disappears when the specific prohibitions of the First Amendment become its standard. U.S.C.A.Const. Amends. 1, 14.

[6] Constitutional Law ⇦84.1
92k84.1 Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 92k84(1), 92k84)

[6] Constitutional Law ⇦90(3)
92k90(3) Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 92k90)

[6] Constitutional Law ⇦91
92k91 Most Cited Cases

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

"Freedom of speech", "freedom of press", "freedom of assembly" and "freedom of worship" are susceptible of restriction only to prevent grave and immediate danger to interests which the state may lawfully protect. U.S.C.A.Const. Amends. 1, 14.

[7] Constitutional Law ⚖67
92k67 Most Cited Cases

The duty of the Supreme Court to apply the Bill of Rights to assertions of official authority does not depend upon the court's possession of marked competence in field where invasion of rights occurs, and court cannot, because of modest estimates of its competence in such specialties as public education, withhold the judgment that history authenticates as the function of the court when liberty is infringed. U.S.C.A.Const. Amend. 1 et seq.

[8] Constitutional Law ⚖82(2)
92k82(2) Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 92k82)

The United States Government was set up by the consent of the governed, and the Bill of Rights denies those in power any legal opportunity to coerce that consent. U.S.C.A.Const. Amend. 1 et seq.

[9] Constitutional Law ⚖274(1)
92k274(1) Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 92k274)

"Freedom" to differ is not limited, under the Constitution, to things that do not matter much, but the test of its substance is the right to differ as to things which touch the heart of the existing order. U.S.C.A.Const. Amends. 1, 14.

[10] Constitutional Law ⚖274(1)
92k274(1) Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 92k274)

No official, high or petty, can prescribe what shall be orthodox in politics, nationalism, religion or other matters of opinion, or force citizens to confess by word or act their faith therein. U.S.C.A.Const. Amends. 1, 14.

[11] Constitutional Law ⚖274(4)
92k274(4) Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 92k274)

Resolution of state board of education requiring children, as prerequisite to continued attendance at public school, to salute American flag and give pledge, is invalid as applied to children of Jehovah Witnesses since it denies "freedom of speech" and "freedom of worship" in that it transcends constitutional limitations on board's power and invades sphere of intellect and spirit which it is the purpose of the Constitution to reserve from official control. Code Supp.W.Va.1941, § 1734; U.S.C.A.Const. Amends. 1, 14.

1179 *625 On Appeal from the District Court of the United States for the Southern District of West Virginia.

Mr. W. Holt Wooddell, of Webster Springs, W. Va., for appellants.

Mr. Hayden C. Covington, of Brooklyn, N.Y., for appellees.

Mr. Justice JACKSON delivered the opinion of the Court.

Following the decision by this Court on June 3, 1940, in Minersville School District v. Gobitis, 310 U.S. 586, 60 S.Ct. 1010, 84 L.Ed. 1375, 127 A.L.R. 1493, the West Virginia legislature amended its statutes to require all schools therein to conduct courses of instruction in history, civics, and in the Constitutions of the United States and of the State 'for the purpose of teaching, fostering and perpetuating the ideals, principles and spirit of Americanism, and increasing the knowledge of the organization and machinery of the government.' Appellant *626 Board of Education was directed, with advice of the State Superintendent of Schools, to 'prescribe the courses of study covering these subjects' for public schools. The Act made it the duty of private, parochial and denominational schools to prescribe courses of study 'similar to those required for the public schools.' [FN1]

FN1 s 1734, West Virginia Code (1941 Supp.):
'In all public, private, parochial and denominational schools located within this state there shall be given regular courses of instruction in history of the United States, > in civics, and in the constitutions of the United States and of the state of West Virginia, for the purpose of teaching, fostering and perpetuating the ideals, principles and spirit of Americanism, and increasing the knowledge of the organization and machinery of the government of the United States and of the state of West Virginia. The state board of education shall, with the advice of the state superintendent of schools, prescribe the courses of study covering these subjects for the public elementary and grammar schools, public high schools and state normal schools. It shall be the duty of the officials or boards having authority over the respective private, parochial and denominational schools to prescribe courses of study for the schools under their control and supervision similar to those required for the public schools.'

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

The Board of Education on January 9, 1942, adopted a resolution containing recitals taken largely from the Court's Gobitis opinion and ordering that the salute to the flag become 'a regular part of the program of activities in the public schools,' that all teachers and pupils 'shall be required to participate in the salute honoring the Nation represented by the Flag; provided, however, that refusal to salute the Flag be regarded as an Act of insubordination, and shall be dealt with accordingly.' [FN2]

> FN2 The text is as follows:
> 'WHEREAS, The West Virginia State Board of Education holds in highest regard those rights and privileges guaranteed by the Bill of Rights in the Constitution of the United States of America and in the Constitution of West Virginia, specifically, the first amendment to the Constitution of the United States as restated in the fourteenth amendment to the same document and in the guarantee of religious freedom in Article III of the Constitution of this States, and
> 'WHEREAS, The West Virginia State Board of Education honors the broad principle that one's convictions about the ultimate mystery of the universe and man's relation to it is placed beyond the reach of law; that the propagation of belief is protected whether in church or chapel, mosque or synagogue, tabernacle or meeting house; that the Constitutions of the United States and of the State of West Virginia assure generous immunity to the individual from imposition of penalty for offending, in the course of his own religious activities, the religious views of others, be they a minority or those who are dominant in the government, but
> 'WHEREAS, The West Virginia State Board of Education recognizes that the manifold character of man's relations may bring his conception of religious duty into conflict with the secular interests of his fellowman; that conscientious scruples have not in the course of the long struggle for religious toleration relieved the individual from obedience to the general law not aimed at the promotion or restriction of the religious beliefs; that the mere possession of convictions which contradict the relevant concerns of political society does not relieve the citizen from the discharge of political responsibility, and
> 'WHEREAS, The West Virginia State Board of Education holds that national unity is the basis of national security; that the flag of our Nation is the symbol of our National Unity transcending all internal differences, however large within the framework of the Constitution; that the Flag is the symbol of the Nation's power; that emblem of freedom in its truest, best sense; that it signifies government resting on the consent of the governed, liberty regulated by law, protection of the weak against the strong, security against the exercise of arbitrary power, and absolute safety for free institutions against foreign aggression, and
> 'WHEREAS, The West Virginia State Board of Education maintains that the public schools, established by the legislature of the State of West Virginia under the authority of the Constitution of the State of West Virginia and supported by taxes imposed by legally constituted > measures, are dealing with the formative period in the development in citizenship that the Flag is an allowable portion of the program of schools thus publicly supported.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

> 'Therefore, be it RESOLVED, That the West Virginia Board of Education does hereby recognize and order that the commonly accepted salute to the Flag of the United States--the right hand is placed upon the breast and the following pledge repeated in unison: 'I pledge allegiance to the Flag of the United States of America and to the Republic for which it stands; one Nation, indivisible, with liberty and justice for all'--now becomes a regular part of the program of activities in the public schools, supported in whole or in part by public funds, and that all teachers as defined by law in West Virginia and pupils in such schools shall be required to participate in the salute honoring the Nation represented by the Flag; provided, however, that refusal to salute the Flag be regarded as an act of insubordination, and shall be dealt with accordingly.'

*627 The resolution originally required the 1180 'commonly accepted salute to the Flag' which it defined. Objections to the salute as 'being too much like Hitler's' were raised by the Parent and Teachers Association, the Boy and Girl *628 Scouts, the Red Cross, and the Federation of Women's Clubs. [FN3] Some modification appears to have been made in deference to these objections, but no concession was made to Jehovah's Witnesses. [FN4] What is now required is the 'stiff-arm' salute, the saluter to keep the right hand raised with palm turned up 1181 while the following is repeated: 'I pledge allegiance to the Flag of the United States of *629 America and to the Republic for which it stands; one Nation, indivisible, with liberty and justice for all.'

> FN3 The National Headquarters of the United States Flag Association takes the position that the extension of the right arm in this salute to the flag is not the Nazi-Fascist salute, 'although quite similar to it. In the Pledge to the Flag the right arm is extended and raised, palm Upward, whereas the Nazis extend the arm practically straight to the front (the finger tips being about even with the eyes), palm Downward, and the Fascists do the same except they raise the arm slightly higher.' James A. Moss, The Flag of the United States: Its History and Symbolism (1914) 108.

> FN4 They have offered in lieu of participating in the flag salute ceremony 'periodically and publicly' to give the following pledge:
> 'I have pledged my unqualified allegiance and devotion to Jehovah, the Almighty God, and to His Kingdom, for which Jesus commands all Christians to pray.
> 'I respect the flag of the United States and acknowledge it as a symbol of freedom and justice to all.
> 'I pledge allegiance and obedience to all the laws of the United States that are consistent with God's law, as set forth in the Bible.'

Failure to conform is 'insubordination' dealt with by expulsion. Readmission is denied by statute until compliance. Meanwhile the expelled child is 'unlawfully absent' [FN5] and may be proceeded against as a delinquent. [FN6] His parents or guardians are liable to prosecution, [FN7] and if convicted are subject to fine not exceeding $50 and jail term not exceeding thirty days. [FN8]

> FN5 s 1851(1), West Virginia Code (1941 Supp.):
> 'If a child be dismissed, suspended, or expelled from school because of refusal of such child to meet the legal and lawful requirements of the school and the established regulations of the county and/or state board of education, further admission of the child to school shall be refused until such requirements and regulations be complied with. Any such child shall be treated as being unlawfully absent from the school during the time he refuses to comply with such requirements and regulations, and any person having legal or actual control of such child shall be liable to prosecution under the provisions of this article for the absence of such child from school.'

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

FN6 s 4904(4), West Virginia Code (1941 Supp.).

FN7 See Note 5, supra.

FN8 ss 1847, 1851, West Virginia Code (1941 Supp.).

Appellees, citizens of the United States and of West Virginia, brought suit in the United States District Court for themselves and others similarly situated asking its injunction to restrain enforcement of these laws and regulations against Jehovah's Witnesses. The Witnesses are an unincorporated body teaching that the obligation imposed by law of God is superiod to that of laws enacted by temporal government. Their religious beliefs include a literal version of Exodus, Chapter 20, verses 4 and 5, which says: 'Thou shalt not make unto thee any graven image, or any likeness of anything that is in heaven above, or that is in the earth beneath, or that is in the water under the earth; thou shalt not bow down thyself to them nor serve them.' They consider that the flag is an 'image' within this command. For this reason they refuse to salute it.

*630 Children of this faith have been expelled from school and are threatened with exclusion for no other cause. Officials threaten to send them to reformatories maintained for criminally inclined juveniles. Parents of such children have been prosecuted and are threatened with prosecutions for causing delinquency.

The Board of Education moved to dismiss the complaint setting forth these facts and alleging that the law and regulations are an unconstitutional denial of religious freedom, and of freedom of speech, and are invalid under the 'due process' and 'equal protection' clauses of the Fourteenth Amendment to the Federal Constitution. The cause was submitted on the pleadings to a District Court of three judges. It restrained enforcement as to the plaintiffs and those of that class. The Board of Education brought the case here by direct appeal. [FN9]

FN9 s 266 of the Judicial Code, 28 U.S.C. s 380, 28 U.S.C.A. s 380.

This case calls upon us to reconsider a precedent decision, as the Court throughout its history often has been required to do. [FN10] Before turning to the Gobitis case, however, it is desirable to notice certain characteristics by which this controversy is distinguished.

FN10 See authorities cited in Helvering v. Griffiths, 318 U.S. 371, 63 S.Ct. 636, at page 652, 87 L.Ed. 843, note 52, decided March 1, 1943.

The freedom asserted by these appellees does not bring them into collision with rights asserted by any other individual. It is such conflicts which most frequently require intervention of the State to determine where the rights of one end and those of another begin. But the refusal of these persons to participate in the ceremony does not interfere with or deny rights of others to do so. Nor is there any question in this case that their behavior is peaceable and orderly. The sole conflict is between authority and rights of the individual. The State asserts power to condition access to public education on making a prescribed sign and profession and at the same time to coerce *631 attendance by punishing both parent and child. The latter stand on a right 1182 of self-determination in matters that touch individual opinion and personal attitude.

[1] As the present Chief Justice said in dissent in the Gobitis case, the State may 'require teaching by instruction and study of all in our history and in the structure and organization of our government, including the guaranties of civil liberty which tend to inspire patriotism and love of country.' 310 U.S. at page 604, 60 S.Ct. at page 1017, 84 L.Ed. 1375, 127 A.L.R. 1493. Here, however, we are dealing with a compulsion of students to declare a belief. They are not merely made acquainted with the flag salute so that they may be informed as to what it is or even what it means. The issue here is whether this slow and easily neglected [FN11] route to aroused loyalties constitutionally may be short-cut by substituting a compulsory salute and slogan. [FN12] This issue is not prejudiced by *632 the Court's previous holding that where a State, without compelling attendance, extends college facilities to pupils who voluntarily enroll, it may prescribe military training as part of the course without offense to the Constitution. It was held that those who take advantage of its opportunities may not on ground of conscience refuse compliance with such conditions. Hamilton v. Regents, 293 U.S. 245, 55 S.Ct. 197, 79 L.Ed. 343. In the present case attendance is not optional. That case is also to be distinguished from the present one because, independently of college privileges or requirements, the State has power to raise militia and impose the duties of service therein upon its citizens.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

FN11 See the nation-wide survey of the study of American history conducted by the New York Times, the results of which are published in the issue of June 21, 1942, and are there summarized on p. 1, col. 1, as follows:
'82 per cent of the institutions of higher learning in the United States do not require the study of United States history for the undergraduate degree. Eighteen per cent of the colleges and universities require such history courses before a degree is awarded. It was found that many students complete their four years in college without taking any history courses dealing with this country.
'Seventy-two per cent of the colleges and universities do not require United States history for admission, while 28 per cent require it. As a result, the survey revealed, many students go through high school, college and then to the professional or graduate institution without having explored courses in the history of their country. 'Less than 10 per cent of the total undergraduate body was enrolled in United States history classes during the Spring semester just ended. Only 8 per cent of the freshman class took courses in United States history, although 30 per cent was enrolled in European or world history courses.'

FN12 The Resolution of the Board of Education did not adopt the flag salute because it was claimed to have educational value. It seems to have been concerned with promotion of national unity (see footnote 2), which justification is considered later in this opinion. No information as to its educational aspect is called to our attention except Olander, Children's Knowledge of the Flag Salute, 35 Journal of Educational Research, 300, 305, which sets forth a study of the ability of a large and representative number of children to remember and state the meaning of the flag salute which they recited each day in school. His conclusion was that it revealed 'a rather pathetic picture of our attempts to teach children not only the words but the meaning of our Flag Salute'.

There is no doubt that, in connection with the pledges, the flag salute is a form of utterance. Symbolism is a primitive but effective way of communicating ideas. The use of an emblem or flag to symbolize some system, idea, institution, or personality, is a short cut from mind to mind. Causes and nations, political parties, lodges and ecclesiastical groups seek to knit the loyalty of their followings to a flag or banner, a color or design. The State announces rank, function, and authority through crowns and maces, uniforms and black robes; the church speaks through the Cross, the Crucifix, the altar and shrine, and clerical reiment. Symbols of State often convey political ideas just as religious symbols come to convey theological ones. Associated with many of these symbols are appropriate gestures of acceptance or respect: a salute, a bowed or bared head, a bended knee. A person gets from a *633 symbol the meaning he puts into it, and 1183 what is one man's comfort and inspiration is another's jest and scorn.

Over a decade ago Chief Justice Hughes led this Court in holding that the display of a red flag as a symbol of opposition by peaceful and legal means to organized government was protected by the free speech guaranties of the Constitution. Stromberg v. California, 283 U.S. 359, 51 S.Ct. 532, 75 L.Ed. 1117, 73 A.L.R. 1484. Here it is the State that employs a flag as a symbol of adherence to government as presently organized. It requires the individual to communicate by word and sign his acceptance of the political ideas it thus bespeaks. Objection to this form of communication when coerced is an old one, well known to the framers of the Bill of Rights. [FN13]

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

> FN13 Early Christians were frequently persecuted for their refusal to participate in ceremonies before the statue of the emperor or other symbol of imperial authority. The story of William Tell's sentence to shoot an apple off his son's head for refusal to salute a bailiff's hat is an ancient one. 21 Encyclopedia Britannica, 14th Ed., 911, 912. The Quakers, William Penn included, suffered punishment rather than uncover their heads in deference to any civil authority. Braithwaite, The Beginnings of Quakerism (1912) 200, 229-230, 232, 233, 447, 451; Fox, Quakers Courageous (1941) 113.

It is also to be noted that the compulsory flag salute and pledge requires affirmation of a belief and an attitude of mind. It is not clear whether the regulation contemplates that pupils forego any contrary convictions of their own and become unwilling converts to the prescribed ceremony or whether it will be acceptable if they simulate assent by words without belief and by a gesture barren of meaning. It is now a commonplace that censorship or suppression of expression of opinion is tolerated by our Constitution only when the expression presents a clear and present danger of action of a kind the State is empowered to prevent and punish. It would seem that involuntary affirmation could be commanded only on even more immediate and urgent grounds than silence. But here the power of compulsion *634 is invoked without any allegation that remaining passive during a flag salute ritual creates a clear and present danger that would justify an effort even to muffle expression. To sustain the compulsory flag salute we are required to say that a Bill of Rights which guards the individual's right to speak his own mind, left it open to public authorities to compel him to utter what is not in his mind.

Whether the First Amendment to the Constitution will permit officials to order observance of ritual of this nature does not depend upon whether as a voluntary exercise we would think it to be good, bad or merely innocuous. Any credo of nationalism is likely to include what some disapprove or to omit what others think essential, and to give off different overtones as it takes on different accents or interpretations. [FN14] If official power exists to coerce acceptance of any patriotic creed, what it shall contain cannot be decided by courts, but must be largely discretionary with the ordaining authority, whose power to prescribe would no doubt include power to amend. Hence validity of the asserted power to force an American citizen publicly to profess any statement of belief or to engage in any ceremony of assent to one presents questions of power that must be considered independently of any idea we may have as to the utility of the ceremony in question.

> FN14 For example: Use of 'Republic,' if rendered to distinguish our government from a 'democracy,' or the words 'one Nation,' if intended to distinguish it from a 'federation,' open up old and bitter controversies in our political history; 'liberty and justice for all,' if it must be accepted as descriptive of the present order rather than an ideal, might to some seem an overstatement.

Nor does the issue as we see it turn on one's possession of particular religious views or the sincerity with which they are held. While religion supplies appellees' motive for enduring the discomforts of making the issue in this case, many citizens who do not share these religious views *635 hold such a compulsory rite to infringe constitutional liberty of the individual. [FN15] It is not necessary to inquire whether non-conformist beliefs will exempt 1184 from the duty to salute unless we first find power to make the salute a legal duty.

FN15 Cushman, Constitutional Law in

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

1939--40, 35 American Political Science Review 250, 271, observes: 'All of the eloquence by which the majority extol the ceremony of flag saluting as a free expression of patriotism turns sour when used to describe the brutal compulsion which requires a sensitive and conscientious child to stultify himself in public.' For further criticism of the opinion in the Gobitis case by persons who do not share the faith of the Witnesses see: Powell, Conscience and the Constitution, in Democracy and National Unity (University of Chicago Press, 1941) 1; Wilkinson, Some Aspects of the Constitutional Guarantees of Civil Liberty, 11 Fordham Law Review 50; Fennell, The 'Reconstructed Court' and Religious Freedom: The Gobitis Case in Retrospect, 19 New York University Law Quarterly Review 31; Green, Liberty under the Fourteenth Amendment, 27 Washington University Law Quarterly 497; 9 International Juridical Association Bulletin 1; 39 Michigan Law Review 149; 15 St. John's Law Review 95.

The Gobitis decision, however, assumed, as did the argument in that case and in this, that power exists in the State to impose the flag salute discipline upon school children in general. The Court only examined and rejected a claim based on religious beliefs of immunity from an unquestioned general rule. [FN16] The question which underlies the *636 flag salute controversy is whether such a ceremony so touching matters of opinion and political attitude may be imposed upon the individual by official authority under powers committed to any political organization under our Constitution. We examine rather than assume existence of this power and, against this broader definition of issues in this case, re-examine specific grounds assigned for the Gobitis decision.

FN16 The opinion says 'The the flagsalute is an allowable portion of a school program for those who do not invoke conscientious scruples is surely not debatable. But for us to insist that, though the ceremony may be required, exceptional immunity must be given to dissidents, is to maintain that there is no basis for a legislative judgment that such an exemption might introduce elements of difficulty into the school discipline, might cast doubts in the minds of the other children which would themselves weaken the effect of the exercise.' (Italics ours.) 310 U.S. at pages 599, 600, 60 S.Ct. at page 1015, 84 L.Ed. 1375, 127 A.L.R. 1493. And elsewhere the question under consideration was stated, 'When does the constitutional guarantee compel exemption from doing what society thinks necessary for the promotion of some great common end, or from a penalty for conduct which appears dangerous to the general good?' (Italics ours.) Id., 310 U.S. at page 593, 60 S.Ct. at page 1012, 84 L.Ed. 1375, 127 A.L.R. 1493. And again, '* * * whether school children, like the Gobitis children, must be excused from conduct required of all the other children in the promotion of national cohesion. * * *' (Italics ours.) Id., 310 U.S. at page 595, 60 S.Ct. at page 1013, 84 L.Ed. 1375, 127 A.L.R. 1493.

1. It was said that the flag-salute controversy confronted the Court with 'the problem which Lincoln cast in memorable dilemma: 'Must a government of necessity be too strong for the liberties of its people, or too weak to maintain its own existence?" and that the answer must be in favor of strength. Minersville School District v. Gobitis, supra, 310 U.S. at page 596, 60 S.Ct. at page 1013, 84 L.Ed. 1375, 127 A.L.R. 1493.

We think these issues may be examined free of pressure or restraint growing out of such considerations.

It may be doubted whether Mr. Lincoln would have thought that the strength of government to maintain itself would be impressively vindicated by our confirming power of the state to expel a handful of children from school. Such oversimplification, so handy in political debate, often lacks the precision necessary to postulates of judicial reasoning. If validly applied to this problem, the utterance cited would resolve every issue of power in favor of those in authority and would require us to override every liberty thought to weaken or delay execution of their policies.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

Government of limited power need not be anemic government. Assurance that rights are secure tends to diminish fear and jealousy of strong government, and by 1185 making us feel safe to live under it makes for its better support. Without promise of a limiting Bill of Rights it is *637 doubtful if our Constitution could have mustered enough strength to enable its ratification. To enforce those rights today is not to choose weak government over strong government. It is only to adhere as a means of strength to individual freedom of mind in preference to officially disciplined uniformity for which history indicates a disappointing and disastrous end.

The subject now before us exemplifies this principle. Free public education, if faithful to the ideal of secular instruction and political neutrality, will not be partisan or enemy of any class, creed, party, or faction. If it is to impose any ideological discipline, however, each party or denomination must seek to control, or failing that, to weaken the influence of the educational system. Observance of the limitations of the Constitution will not weaken government in the field appropriate for its exercise.

2. It was also considered in the Gobitis case that functions of educational officers in states, counties and school districts were such that to interfere with their authority 'would in effect make us the school board for the country.' Id., 310 U.S. at page 598, 60 S.Ct. at page 1015, 84 L.Ed. 1375, 127 A.L.R. 1493.

[2] The Fourteenth Amendment, as now applied to the States, protects the citizen against the State itself and all of its creatures--Boards of Education not excepted. These have, of course, important, delicate, and highly discretionary functions, but none that they may not perform within the limits of the Bill of Rights. That they are educating the young for citizenship is reason for scrupulous protection of Constitutional freedoms of the individual, if we are not to strangle the free mind at its source and teach youth to discount important principles of our government as mere platitudes.

Such Boards are numerous and their territorial jurisdiction often small. But small and local authority may feel less sense of responsibility to the Constitution, and agencies of publicity may be less vigilent in calling it to account. *638 The action of Congress in making flag observance voluntary [FN17] and respecting the conscience of the objector in a matter so vital as raising the Army [FN18] contrasts sharply with these local regulations in matters relatively trivial to the welfare of the nation. There are village tyrants as well as village Hampdens, but none who acts under color of law is beyond reach of the Constitution.

FN17 s 7 of House Joint Resolution 359, approved December 22, 1942, 56 Stat. 1074, 36 U.S.C. (1942 Supp.) s 172, 36 U.S.C.A. s 172, prescribes no penalties for nonconformity but provides:
'That the pledge of allegiance to the flag, 'I pledge allegiance to the flag of the United States of America and to the Republic for which it stands, one Nation indivisible, with liberty and justice for all', is rendered by standing with the right hand over the heart. However, civilians will always show full respect to the flag when the pledge is given by merely standing at attention, men removing the headdress. ' * * *'

FN18 s 5(a) of the Selective Training and Service Act of 1940, 50 U.S.C. (App.) s 305(g), 50 U.S.C.A.Appendix, s 305(g).

3. The Gobitis opinion reasoned that this is a field 'where courts possess no marked and certainly no controlling competence,' that it is committed to the legislatures as well as the courts to guard cherished liberties and that it is constitutionally appropriate to 'fight out the wise use of legislative authority in the forum of public opinion and before legislative assemblies rather than to transfer such a contest to the judicial arena,' since all the 'effective means of inducing political changes are left free.' Id., 310 U.S. at page 597, 598, 600, 60 S.Ct. at pages 1014, 1016, 84 L.Ed. 1375, 127 A.L.R. 1493.

[3][4] The very purpose of a Bill of Rights was to withdraw certain subjects from the vicissitudes of political controversy, to place them beyond the reach of majorities and officials and to establish them as legal principles to be applied by the courts. One's right to life, liberty, and property, to free speech, a free press, freedom of worship and assembly, and other fundamental rights may not be submitted 1186 to vote; they depend on the outcome of no elections.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

*639 [5][6] In weighing arguments of the parties it is important to distinguish between the due process clause of the Fourteenth Amendment as an instrument for transmitting the principles of the First Amendment and those cases in which it is applied for its own sake. The test of legislation which collides with the Fourteenth Amendment, because it also collides with the principles of the First, is much more definite than the test when only the Fourteenth is involved. Much of the vagueness of the due process clause disappears when the specific prohibitions of the First become its standard. The right of a State to regulate, for example, a public utility may well include, so far as the due process test is concerned, power to impose all of the restrictions which a legislature may have a 'rational basis' for adopting. But freedoms of speech and of press, of assembly, and of worship may not be infringed on such slender grounds. They are susceptible of restriction only to prevent grave and immediate danger to interests which the state may lawfully protect. It is important to note that while it is the Fourteenth Amendment which bears directly upon the State it is the more specific limiting principles of the First Amendment that finally govern this case.

[7] Nor does our duty to apply the Bill of Rights to assertions of official authority depend upon our possession of marked competence in the field where the invasion of rights occurs. True, the task of translating the majestic generalities of the Bill of Rights, conceived as part of the pattern of liberal government in the eighteenth century, into concrete restraints on officials dealing with the problems of the twentieth century, is one to disturb self-confidence. These principles grew in soil which also produced a philosophy that the individual was the center of society, that his liberty was attainable through mere absence of governmental restraints, and that government should be entrusted with few controls and only the mildest supervision *640 over men's affairs. We must transplant these rights to a soil in which the laissez-faire concept or principle of non-interference has withered at least as to economic affairs, and social advancements are increasingly sought through closer integration of society and through expanded and strengthened governmental controls. These changed conditions often deprive precedents of reliability and cast us more than we would choose upon our own judgment. But we act in these matters not by authority of our competence but by force of our commissions. We cannot, because of modest estimates of our competence in such specialties as public education, withhold the judgment that history authenticates as the function of this Court when liberty is infringed.

4. Lastly, and this is the very heart of the Gobitis opinion, it reasons that 'National unity is the basis of national security,' that the authorities have 'the right to select appropriate means for its attainment,' and hence reaches the conclusion that such compulsory measures toward 'national unity' are constitutional. Id., 310 U.S. at page 595, 60 S.Ct. at page 1013, 84 L.Ed. 1375, 127 A.L.R. 1493. Upon the verity of this assumption depends our answer in this case.

National unity as an end which officials may foster by persuasion and example is not in question. The problem is whether under our Constitution compulsion as here employed is a permissible means for its achievement.

Struggles to coerce uniformity of sentiment in support of some end thought essential to their time and country have been waged by many good as well as by evil men. Nationalism is a relatively recent phenomenon but at other times and places the ends have been racial or territorial security, support of a dynasty or regime, and particular plans for saving souls. As first and moderate methods to attain unity have failed, those bent on its accomplishment must resort to an ever-increasing severity. *641 As governmental pressure toward unity becomes greater, so strife becomes more bitter as to whose unity it shall be. Probably no deeper division of our people could proceed from any provocation than from finding it necessary to choose what doctrine and whose program public educational officials shall compel youth to unite in embracing. Ultimate futility of such attempts to compel coherence is the lesson 1187 of every such effort from the Roman drive to stamp out Christianity as a disturber of its pagan unity, the Inquisition, as a means to religious and dynastic unity, the Siberian exiles as a means to Russian unity, down to the fast failing efforts of our present totalitarian enemies. Those who begin coercive elimination of dissent soon find themselves exterminating dissenters. Compulsory unification of opinion achieves only the unanimity of the graveyard.

Copr. © West 2003 No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works

