Sir Isaac Newton has well remarked "The horn of a beast always signifies a new kingdom; and the kingdom of Antiochus was an old one. Antiochus reigned over one of the four horns, and the little horn was a fifth under its proper kings. This horn was at first a little one, and waxed exceeding great. So did NOT Antiochus. His kingdom was weak and tributary to the Romans and he DID NOT enlarge it. The horn was a king of fierce countenance, and destroyed wonderfully, and prospered and practiced; but Antiochus was frightened out of Egypt by a mere message of the Romans and afterwards routed and baffled by the Jews. The horn was mighty by another's power; Antiochus acted by his own. The horn cast down the sanctuary to the ground, and so did not Antiochus; he left it standing. The sanctuary and host were trampled under foot 2300 days, and in Daniel's prophecy days are put for years; but the profanation of the temple in the reign of Antiochus did not last so many natural days. These were to last to the end of indignation against the Jews; and this indignation is not yet at an end. They were to last till the sanctuary, which has been cast down, should be cleansed; and the sanctuary is not yet cleansed." These are the views of Sir Isaac Newton.

We feel bound to say, in the language of the Watchman, "The same kind and degree of evidence, * * * which compels us to believe that the fourth beast and little horn of chapter 7: are Rome, pagan, and papal," also compels us to believe that the Exceeding Great horn of Dan. 8: is the same power. To make this point more plain we present below the harmony of Dan. 2d, 7th and 8th chapters.

| [The ten kingdoms only, out of which this power arose are here brought to view.] | "And behold, in this horn were eyes like the eyes of a man, and a mouth that spoke very great things, whose look was more stout than his fellows." (ver 8. 20.) | "And through his policy also he shall cause craft to prosper in his hand, and he shall magnify himself in his heart, and by peace he shall destroy many." |
| [The little horn being synonymous with the beast that succeeds the dragon, in Rev. 13, and the dragon being the government that sought the destruction of Christ. See Rev. 12. It cannot, of course, apply to any government that existed before the Roman.] | The same horn made war with the saints, and prevailed against them, until the Ancient of Days came, and judgment was given to the saints of the Most High. And he shall speak great words against the Most High, and shall wear out the saints of the Most High. (ver. 21, 22, 25.) | "It cast down the truth to the ground. It waxed great even against the host of heaven, and cast down some of the host and of the stars to the ground and stamped upon them." (ver. 10, 12) "Magnified himself against the PRINCE of the host" "Shall destroy the mighty and the holy people."—"Stand up against the PRINCE OF PRINCES," (the Lord Jesus Christ) So did the Roman power. The "little horn" here embraces pagan as well as papal Rome. |
| THE END. "A stone was cut out without hands, which smote the image upon his FEET, that were of iron and clay, and broke them to pieces.—Then was the iron and the clay, the brass, the silver, and the gold, broken to pieces together, and became like the chaff of the summer threshing floors. And the wind carried them away that no place was found for them." (v. 24, 25.) | THE END. "The Ancient of Days did sit, whose garment was white as snow and the hair of his head like the pure wool, his throne was like the fiery flame, and his wheels as burning fire. A fiery stream issued and came forth from before him: thousand thousands ministered unto him, and ten thousand times ten thousand stood before him—THE JUDGMENT WAS SET, and the books were opened. The beast was slain, and his body DESTROYED, and given to the burning flame," (v. 9, 10, 11.) | THE END. "He shall be broken without hands," (ver. 24.) "The consummation and that determined shall be poured upon the desolate," or as the margin reads, "upon the desolator," ch. 9, 27. |
| (The earth is now empty.) | (Not a kingdom exists.) | (The desolator is made desolate.) |
| THE FIFTH UNIVERSAL KINGDOM. "And the stone that smote the image became a great mountain, and filled the whole earth," (v 35.) "The God of heaven shall set up a kingdom which shall never be destroyed, and the kingdom shall not be left to other people, but it shall break in pieces and consume all these kingdoms, and it shall stand FOREVER." | THE FIFTH UNIVERSAL KINGDOM. "One like the Son of Man came with the clouds of heaven," &c. (See ver. 13, 14) Matt. 24: 30. 16: 27.—Mark 13: 26. Rev. 1: 7. "The saints of the Most High shall take the kingdom and possess the kingdom forever, even FOREVER AND EVER." Judgment was given to the saints of the Most High, and the time came that the saints possessed the kingdom. (ver. 22, 27.) | THE FIFTH UNIVERSAL KINGDOM. "Then shall the sanctuary be cleansed." (ver. 14.)—"Understand O Son of Man, for at the time of THE END shall be the vision." (ver. 17.) "Behold I will make thee know what shall be in the LAST END of the indignation, for at the time appointed THE END SHALL BE." (v. 19.) |
| "The earth" is now "full of the knowledge of the Lord as the waters cover the sea."—Isa. 11: 9. | "They sung a new song, thou hast made us unto our God kings and priests, and we shall reign ON THE EARTH." Rev. 5: 9, 10. | The Lord has now "washed away the filth of the daughters of Zion, and purged the blood of Jerusalem from the midst thereof, by the spirit of judgment, and by the spirit of BURNING" Isa. 4: 4. |

In closing these remarks, we call also upon the Watchman, if he can to show us an instance in the bible, where an individual Monarch is symbolised by a horn, reigning over a kingdom also symbolised by another horn. Where has he this "philological" "evidence"?

THE RIGHT OF PETITION.

This is a sacred right: and some of the citizens of Ohio are using it for the purpose of finding relief upon the subject that most troubles them. And the intelligent SENATE of this christian State of Ohio, have done what they could to relieve the wants of the petitioners, as may be seen from the following extract from their proceedings, copied from the "Enquirer and Message" of Saturday last.

MILLERISM!

On Wednesday morning Mr. McAnelly presented a petition from Eaton, to the Senate, purporting to come from citizens of Ohio, for a law postponing Millerism until 1860, and assigning as a reason therefor, the wish of the petitioners to die under a whig administration of the general government, which, judging the future by the past, cannot possibly again happen before the year 1860.

Mr. Miller said, as he was a Miller-man, he moved that the petition be referred to a select committee of one.

It was so referred, and Mr. Miller appointed that committee.

The idea of a legislature receiving, and acting upon a petition, for the Lord Jesus Christ to give up, or postpone his rights, would have much startled us a few years ago; while such a transaction would have been frowned down with pious horror by the entire community. But we are surprised at only one thing now: that is, that the judgments of God are delayed. A copy of the next petition these citizens will probably present, may be found in Rev. 6: 16, 17.

COMMUNICATIONS.

INDIANAPOLIS, Feb. 13th, 1844.

LAST END OF THE INDIGNATION.

John, the servant of Jesus Christ, to the dear saints who are looking and waiting for the appearing of Jesus, the deliverance of Israel: Grace, mercy and peace from God the Father, and the Lord Jesus Christ, be with you all, as hitherto, even so, and more abundantly be experienced by you evermore. Amen.

Praise ye the Lord! Rejoice in his salvation and promises, and praise him evermore. The Lord is good. His goodness toward them that love and fear him, endureth forever. Bless the Lord, O my soul, and all that is within me praise his holy name! My soul is exceedingly happy in the Lord. My mind's sky is clear—My faith is strong and unwavering—My hope is firm,—I love the Lord with all my heart, for he is good. Praise ye the Lord.

"When shall I in His image shine,
And lean upon His breast?
Say I am His and He is mine,
And enjoy His glorious rest.

It is nearer than when we first believed. The hour hasteth greatly. God's word is true. The foundation standeth sure. The Lord is at the very door. Praise the Lord! His word is truly a lamp to my feet and a light to my path. A light which shineth in a dark place. A sure word of prophecy. A great treasure house, given to us. It affords me increased evidence daily, of the speedy coming of my Saviour to redeem Israel,—to be admired in all his saints—to cleanse the sanctuary (the world) and establish His everlasting Kingdom. Hallelujah to God and the Lamb!

Of late I have been greatly refreshed, encouraged and strengthened, by reading the 19th verse of the 8th chap. of Daniel, where Gabriel declares to the prophet, "Behold, I will make thee know what shall be in the LAST END of the INDIGNATION: for at the TIME APPOINTED the END SHALL BE." I inquired of the Lord in the first place, what Indignation was referred to? I turned to Isa. x. 5, and there I read as follows: "O Assyria, (or Babylon,) the rod of mine anger, and the STAFF (strength, power; Isa. iii. 1–4; Jer. xlvi. 17; likewise the staff with which Moses smote Egypt with plagues, and that which the prophet used to raise the dead to life, denoted power,) in their hand is mine Indignation; I will send him against a hypocritical nation and against the people of my wrath will I give him a charge, to take the spoil, and to take the prey, and to TREAD them down like the MIRE of the streets: (compare this with Dan. viii. 13,) See 7th verse, yet he (the Assyrian) meaneth not so, neither doth his heart think so; but it is in his heart to destroy, &c. Wherefore, saith the Lord, it shall come to pass that when the Lord hath performed his WHOLE WORK on Mount Zion and on Jerusalem, I will punish the FRUIT of the stout heart of the king of Assyria and the glory of his high looks." I then inquired, has this Indignation terminated? I turned to Micah vii. 9, and found that it had not in his day, for he exclaims "I will bear the indignation of the Lord because I have sinned against him, until he plead my cause and execute judgment for me; He will bring me forth to light, I shall behold his righteousness." Nor in the day of Mordecai for we read (Esth. v. 9,) that "he (Haman) was full of indignation against Mordecai," as well as against the rest of the Jews. Again we find it brought to view in the Lamentations of Jer. ii. 6, where, in describing the mournful condition of Zion and Jerusalem, he exclaimed, "The Lord hath caused the solemn feasts and sabbaths to be forgotten in Zion, and hath despised in the indignation of his anger the King and the Priest." Nor yet in the time of Zechariah, for in his prophecy, Zech. i. 12, he speaks of the same, and of the FOUR HORNS (kingdoms, of which we shall hereafter speak) "which have scattered Judah, Israel, and Jerusalem." Again, we find it in Dan. xi. 36, where the prophet is speaking of Papacy, (as is almost universally acknowledged,) that it "shall prosper till the indignation be accomplished; for that that is determined shall be done." Thus I find it has continued to this very hour. I next inquired, Who is the FRUIT of the stout heart of the King of Assyria (Babylon)? I turned to Dan. v. 30–31, and there found that the Medes took the fruit of Babylon. I next turned to Dan. viii. 5, 6, 7, explained in Dan. viii. 21, 22, and found the fruit given to Grecia. I next found in Dan. xi. 14, as well also in xi. 33, explained in xii. 40; and vii. 7, explained in vii. 23; the fruit given to Pagan Rome; and lastly, I found in Dan. vii. 25, and in Rev. xiii. 2, that the fruit was given to Papacy; which fruit still exists, and will exist, and prevail against the saints until the Ancient of Days come. Dan. vii. 21, 22. I next inquired, why is this indignation against God's people, Mount Zion and Jerusalem? I ascertained

1st. In accordance with the acknowledgment of Micah vii. 9, it is by reason of their sins; because they have broken his covenant, violated his holy commands, and grievously departed from the Lord.

2d. To prove—try—humble—cleanse and prepare them for the new earth wherein dwelleth righteousness.

Read for example the preparation that was necessary for the children of Israel in order to enjoy and duly appreciate the blessings of the land, which was only a type of the glorious inheritance of the saints, as recorded in Deut. viii; And is it not more necessary that they be proved, who are looking for a better inheritance, that they may duly appreciate the rich blessings of it? Or Heaven—glory—immortality—eternal life? Yea, verily! Hence the apostle tells his brethren, Acts xiv. 22, "that we must through much tribulation enter into the kingdom of heaven." And again, 1 Peter i. 3–7, "That the trial of your faith, being much more precious than of gold that perisheth, though it be tried with fire, might be found unto praise, and honor, and glory, at the appearing of Jesus Christ:" "for our light affliction, which is but for a moment, worketh for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory." Therefore the Saviour taught his disciples to "rejoice and be exceeding glad" when they were persecuted for righteousness sake, "for great is your reward in heaven." If more proof be necessary, read Daniel xi. 33–35, and other parallel passages.—I then inquired, what shall be in the LAST END of the INDIGNATION? I turned to Isa. x. 24–5, where it is said, "therefore thus saith the Lord God of Hosts, O my people that dwellest in Zion, be not afraid of the Assyrian: he shall smite thee with the rod, and shall lift up his staff against thee after the manner of Egypt: (hear rule over them:) for yet a very little while and the indignation shall cease and mine anger in their DESTRUCTION." Again, Isa. xxvi. 20, 21, "Come my people, enter thou into thy chamber, and shut thy doors about thee: hide thyself as it were for a little moment until the indignation be overpast: For behold the Lord cometh out of his place to punish the inhabitants of the earth for their iniquity." "And it shall come to pass in that day that the Lord shall punish the host of the high ones that are on high, and the Kings of the earth that are upon the earth" Isa. xxiv. 21.

This brings us to the same time of which the apostle spoke when writing to his brethren of the "Man of Sin" —"the fruit of the stout heart of the king of Assyria," "Whom the Lord shall consume with the spirit of his mouth and shall destroy with the brightness of his coming," 2 Thess. ii. 8, whose coming will be visible—instantaneous. "For as the lightning cometh out of the east and shineth even unto the west, so shall the coming of the Son of Man be." Matt. xxiv. 27.

Having ascertained, freely, without money and without price, these facts, I most devoutly desired to ask one, and only one, question more. My desire was granted. It was, Where shall I find the TIME APPOINTED? My mind was then directed to Dan. viii. 14, "UNTO TWO THOUSAND THREE HUNDRED DAYS." This, to my mind, appeared conclusive, since there is no other time specified in the vision which Gabriel was commanded to make Daniel "understand." But I saw that it could not mean literal days. I therefore turned to Dan. ix. and there found it explained a DAY for a YEAR, and that the time appointed commenced at the going forth of the commandment to build Jerusalem and its walls, which command or decree is recorded in Ezra vii. 11, 26, and went forth 490 years before the crucifixion of Christ, as is acknowledged by all, or almost all Christian commentators, leaving of the "TIME APPOINTED" from the crucifixion, only 1810 years. And that according to the chronology of time which has been kept since that period, (a mistake in which no one to our knowledge in this age has been able to discover) the end of the Indignation will be this Jewish year. Then my soul blessed the God of Heaven for his goodness and tender mercy unto me. Bless ye the Lord, all ye his servants, to whom this may come, for the redemption of Israel draweth near. Lift up your heads,—rejoice in God. Trim your lamps, be girt about with truth, and like servants waiting for the return of their Lord, so be ye ready—waiting. Strive to wake up the slumbering virgins—the careless sinner, that they may not be punished with "the fruit of the stout heart of the King of Assyria," with everlasting destruction from the presence of the Lord and the Glory of his Power.

Yours in the blessed hope,

JOHN H. KENT.

LETTER FROM BRO. STEVENS.

ST. LOUIS, February 16th, 1844.

DEAR BRO. JACOBS,

Inasmuch as my private correspondence must be made public, I shall be under the necessity of incurring the charge of neglect, and referring my friends to the general details of a statement written for the public eye. I have no apology to make for what has appeared from me in your paper, except that it was private correspondence, and I was sorry to see it made public, because telling all the truth, is at times very bad policy.

Since the line written from Quincy, I have lectured in Columbus, Carrolton and Whitehall. The usual effects of presenting the momentous considerations, with which our minds are absorbed, have been cheeringly manifest. The sceptic almost invariably feels ashamed of his absurd infidelity, and publicly renounces his folly. The backslider is startled from his stupor, and rallies for another conflict with sin and temptation. The sinner quails in view of judgment so near and hastes himself for due preparation. I desire not, I attempt not, to measure the extent to which these good fruits prevail. It is sufficient for me to know that I am about my Master's business, that I feel complacent in doing my duty. If good fruits are the result, to God be all the glory, now and forever.

I have now spent two weeks here in St. Louis, endeavoring to strengthen the brethren, and to persuade those who still wished to hear, that the "hour of God's judgment is come." The meetings are still increasing in interest. Inquirers are anxiously seeking salvation, and the faithful pointing them to the Lamb of God.—One formerly an infidel, has publicly confessed the truth, and a few days since committed the whole of his worthless trash of sceptical works to the flames. But I would not speak of our meetings only. "Glorious things are spoken of Zion," throughout the city. Ever since we were first here, the Methodist churches have enjoyed a glorious refreshing. More than two hundred additions have been made. The work still continues, and is extending into other churches also. I am informed that St. Louis never before witnessed such a revival. Let God work by whom and where he may, we will give him glory, and be thankful that Christ is preached.

Permit me to close by giving a caution to my dear friends, far and near, who are looking for the Lord.—I am afraid they will interest themselves too much about "Babylon," "the intermediate state," and fate of the wicked. God will shortly take care of "Babylon"—"intermediate state" there will be none—and the state of the wicked will be unchangeably fixed. Truth should engross the attention and mould the heart, in proportion to its relative value.

Yours in christian fellowship.

A. A. STEVENS.

EXTRACT FROM A LETTER FROM BRO. HIMES.

From the Advent Herald.

BRO. BLISS,—We had a tedious passage to New-York, being detained some time in the Sound by ice. But our time was occupied, while delayed, in conversation on the subject of our hope, with various candid persons who are disposed to look into the matter.—Br. Miller was much respected by all on board.

Mr. Fowler, the Phrenologist was on board and by request gave a lecture on that science. After the lecture he examined a number of heads, while blindfolded, among whom, at the request of the company, Mr. Miller's head was examined. All were eager to hear the opinion of the learned lecturer.—Among other things he said: This man has large benevolence; his object is to do his fellow beings good. He has great firmness—is a modest man—open, frank, no hypocrite—good at figures—a man of great power, might make a noise in the world—has no personal enemies; if he has enemies, it is not because they know him, but on account of his opinions, &c. At the conclusion of the examination, the blindfold was taken off, and the lecturer was introduced to Mr. Miller, to the no small amusement of the company.

BELIEVING THE TIME, A SIN!—Such is the intimation of the Christian Advocate and Journal, the official organ of the Methodist Episcopal Church. After endeavoring to show that the time is past, it says:

"So, then, it was the preaching of the time that did the work, that accomplished the good, that carried with it power and conviction to the heart, that God most signally blessed to the quickening of his people, and the awakening and salvation of souls. But as no preaching can be effectual unless it be believed, it turns out that it was the belief of a falsehood that did the work! For this weakness on the part of those who believed there may be mercy, but let them take heed next time, when any other new thing comes up, lest God should send them strong delusion that they should believe a LIE, and to be damned because they believed not the truth."

There may be mercy for those who have believed the coming of the Lord is at the doors! Who would have supposed such a paragraph would have appeared in an official Wesleyan Journal? It may be then, there is mercy for John Wesley, who believed the Lord would come about 1836; and also for John Fletcher! . These Methodists have for gotten, some of them, "the rock from whence they were hewn." But they must not again believe the Lord will come, lest they believe a lie, and so be damned because they do not deny the coming of the Lord!!! Is it possible that any of the readers of the above Journal are so bound in the bonds of this world, as to see no sophistry in such reasoning?—May the Lord in his mercy enable them to look for and love his appearing, that they may receive that crown, which is promised in that day to only such.—Advent Herald.

A LESSON.

We commend to the consideration of those Christian editors and preachers who trifle with the views of those brethren who look for the Saviour, the following. They may here see the effect of their course upon the infidel:

AN INFIDEL REPROVING A UNIVERSALIST.

THE MIDNIGHT CRY.—We used to hear six months ago, much said about the midnight cry. All the abettors of Miller's follies joined in this cry. But of late, we do not hear any thing about it. All these birds of night have stopped their noise, from which we infer that day has broken, at which time, owls generally cease to hoot.

We copy the above for the purpose of expressing the thought that occurred to us upon reading it. The Millerites, whom this Reverend and Universalist editor sneeringly calls 'owls,' profess, like himself, to believe in the Bible, and in the Christian faith. He thinks them deluded—we will suppose he honestly thinks so. What then, in such a case, ought he to have done, as an honest, candid man? He ought to have said to them: 'My Christian Brethren, I think I have reason to believe that you are laboring in an error; and as I deem it my duty to remove it, I will, with your permission, discuss the subject with you in an open and friendly manner. Possibly, I may impart some new views which may convince you of your mistake; but should I fail, I trust I shall not be so uncandid as, for a difference of opinion, to call in question your sincerity, nor so uncharitable as, for an error in judgment, to withdraw from you my fellowship.'

Such, or similar language, from one Christian opponent toward another, while it would exhibit a spirit of kindness and friendly feeling, would do a great deal to convince the infidel that Christianity might be a better system than he was accustomed to believe it. But so long as he sees, as in the present case, that a mere variance of thought in one Christian Brother, is enough to steep another, and a Reverend Christian Brother, up to the eyelids in bigotry and censoriousness, he will have but little inducement to renounce his infidelity and become a Christian; for though his system may be lacking spiritual faith, as it certainly is, there is yet remaining enough of saving virtue in its practice, to prevent him from quarrelling, at least with his brethren.—Investigator.

SINGULAR SNOW STORM.

On the evening of the 16th Feb. a severe snow storm occurred at New Haven, Conn. raging with great violence—with whirlwinds throwing the snow into heaps. The danger on the coast to vessels must have been great, as objects were so blended that sight was put out. A stage filled with passengers, was lost in a similar night, some years ago, in the extensive meadows of Northampton, and all perished. It is stated that there were a number of vivid flashes of lightning during this last snow storm, presenting the most wonderful and unheard of spectacle possible to imagine.—Cin. Commercial.

ANECDOTE OF MR. MILLER.

About six years since, the family physician of Mr. Miller had remarked at various places, that Esquire Miller (Mr. Miller had been a Justice of the Peace among his neighbors) was a fine man, and a good neighbor; but on the subject of the Advent he was a monomaniac. Mr. Miller heard of this; and, one of his children being sick one day, he sent for the doctor. After he had prescribed for the child, he noticed that Mr. Miller sat very mute in one corner, and asked him what ailed him. "Well, I hardly know, Doctor. I want you to see what does, and prescribe for me." The Doctor felt of his pulse, &c. and could not decide respecting his malady; and inquired what he supposed was his complaint. "Well," says Mr. Miller, "I dont know but I am a monomaniac; and I want you to examine me and see if I am; and if so, cure me. Can you tell when a man is a monomaniac?" The Doctor blushed, and said he thought he could. Mr. Miller wished to know how. "Why," said the Doctor, "a monomaniac is rational on all subjects but one; and when you touch that particular subject, he will become raving." "Well," says Mr. Miller, "I insist upon it, that you see whether I am in reality a monomaniac; and if I am, you shall prescribe for and cure me. You shall therefore sit down with me two hours, while I present the subject of the Advent to you, and if I am a monomaniac, by that time you will discover it." The doctor was somewhat disconcerted, but Mr. Miller insisted, and told him, as it was to present the state of his mind, he might charge for his time as in regular practice.

The Doctor finally consented; and at Mr. Miller's request, opened the Bible and read from the 8th of Daniel. As he read along, Mr. Miller enquired what the ram denoted, with the other symbols presented. The Doctor had read Newton, and applied them to Persia, Greece, and Rome, as Mr. Miller does. Mr. Miller then inquired, how long the vision of those empires was to be. He replied, 2300 days. "What!" said Mr. Miller, "could those great empires cover only 2300 literal days?" "Why," said the Doctor, "those days are years, according to all commentators; and those kingdoms are to continue 2300 years." He then asked him to turn to the 2d of Daniel, and to the 7th; all of which he explained the same as Mr. Miller. He was then asked if he knew when the 2300 days would end. He did not know, as he could not tell when they commenced. Mr. Miller told him to read the ninth of Daniel. He read down till he came to the 21st verse, when Daniel saw "the man Gabriel," whom he had "seen in the vision." "In what vision?" Mr. Miller inquired. "Why" said the Doctor, "in the vision of the 8th of Daniel." "Wherefore understand the matter and consider the vision."—"He had now come, then, to make him understand that vision, had he?" "Yes," said the Doctor. "Well, 'seventy weeks are determined;' what are these seventy weeks a part of?" "Of the 2300 days." "Then do they begin with the 2300?" "Yes," said the Doctor.—"When did they end?" "In A. D. 33." "Then how far would the 2300 extend after 33?" The Doctor subtracted 490 from 2300, and replied 1810; "why" said he "that is past." "But," said Mr. Miller, "there were 1810 from 33; in what year would that come?" The Doctor saw at once that the 33 should be added, and set down 33 and 1810, and, adding them, replied, 1843. At this unexpected result the Doctor settled back in his chair and colored; but immediately took his hat and left the house in a rage.

The next day the Doctor again called on Mr. Miller, and looked as though he had been in the greatest mental agony. "Why, Mr. Miller," said he, "I am going to hell; I have not slept a wink since I was here yesterday; I have looked at the question in every light, and the visions must terminate about A. D. 1843; and I am unprepared, and must go to hell." Mr. Miller calmed him, and pointed him to the ark of safety; and in about a week, calling each day on Mr. Miller, he found peace to his soul, and went on his way rejoicing—as great a monomaniac as Mr. Miller. He afterwards acknowledged that till he made the figures 1843, he had no idea of the result to which he was coming.—Advent Herald.

A horrible circumstance is mentioned in a Chambersburgh, Pa. paper, as a warning to the intemperate. A man, named Adam Poules, was found dead with a jug of whiskey near him, on an unfrequented road in that vicinity, and nearly all of his face eaten off by wild beasts. Deceased was a shoe-maker.

Another man has been shot near Gettysburgh, Pa. by the accidental discharge of a gun.

A man in New-York, after drinking a half pint of rum, laid down and died.

A man named Owen Murray, was suffocated in New-York lately, by leaving a furnace of charcoal burning in his room.

that this battle of the dragon's last power will be in America; and if so, it must be mainly in these United States. It will be a battle on political principles, as we may learn by the passage in Rev. xvi. 13—16, "And I saw three unclean spirits like frogs, come out of the mouth of the dragon, and out of the mouth of the beast, and out of the mouth of the false prophet;" —the "unclean spirits" show that it is political principles; and, like the frogs in Egypt, it will pervade all the departments of life—the social, civil, and religious. By "dragon," we must understand the kings of the earth; by the "beast," Papal principles, or the church of Rome; by the "false prophet," Mahometan power;—"for they are the spirit of devils, working miracles,"—that is, spirit of deceit, separating friends, dividing kingdoms, states, societies, churches, and families, and crumbling every man-made institution, and levelling to the dust, all law, order, and bond of union, which the wisdom of man may have invented,—"which go forth unto the kings of the earth and of the whole world." This shows the universal spread of this fanatical spirit of disorganization, and it will finally lead to "gather them to the battle of that great day of God Almighty." "Behold, I come as a thief. Blessed is he that watcheth and keepeth his garments, lest he walk naked and they see his shame." We are here notified that his coming will be like a thief to those who are engaged in this political warfare, and in those popular and man-made societies of the day; and we are told that those will be blessed who watch, that is, for his coming, and the signs of the times, and that keep their garments unspotted from these worldly institutions, which engender strife and animosity among brethren. Be warned, dear Christians; "enter into thy chamber, and hide thyself for a little moment, until the indignation be over and past, that ye need not be ashamed before him at his coming." It will also be a battle of religious principles, as is evident by the following scripture, Rev. xix. 11—10, "And I saw heaven opened, and behold, a white horse; and he that sat upon him was called Faithful and True, and in righteousness he doth judge and make war. His eyes were as a flame of fire, and on his head were many crowns; and he had a name written that no man knew but he himself; and he was clothed with a vesture dipped in blood; and his name is called, The Word of God. And the armies which were in heaven followed him upon white horses, clothed in fine linen, white and clean. And out of his mouth goeth a sharp sword, that with it he should smite the nations; and he shall rule them with a rod of iron; and he treadeth the wine-press of the fierceness and wrath of Almighty God." This passage proves that there will be at the close of this dispensation, immediately preceding the marriage of the Lamb to his bride, a great and last struggle between error and truth, between infidelity and the word of God. And you may inquire, perhaps, and with propriety too, How shall we know on which side we are engaged in this great war of principle? I answer, "In righteousness" he doth make war. But, say you, we are so prone to follow tradition or preposessed notions, and think we are right, that, like Paul, we may be found at last fighting against God. You must see to it, that you are "faithful and true," have faith in his name; "and his name is The Word of God;" this is your only rule—The Word of God. Be careful; lay yourselves on this word. Try yourselves by this standard. If your life, faith, experience, and hope, are built on this foundation, you can never fail; for he, that is The Word of God, is "KING OF KINGS, AND LORD OF LORDS." Again—it is to be a literal battle with the sword, for Christ says, "He that taketh the sword shall die by the sword." And kings, Papal Rome, and the Mahometans, have ruled the world by the sword; and their swords, during all the days of their power, have been red with the blood of their subjects, and the innocent victims of their hate. And in Rev. xix. 17—20, it is evident, by the "fowls" spoken of in the 17th verse, is meant, warriors in favor of liberty, who are to "eat (destroy) the flesh (strength or power) of kings, and the flesh of captains, and the flesh of mighty men, and the flesh of horses, and them that sat on them, (armies are undoubtedly meant in this passage,) and the flesh of all men," who are engaged in favor of kings, papal Rome, or false prophet, "both free and bond, both small and great." "And I saw the beast and the kings of the earth, and their armies, gathered together to make war against him that sat on the horse, and against his army." "And he gathered them together into a place called in the Hebrew tongue Armageddon," (awake to the spoil,) Rev. xvi. 16—21.

These will be the means the dragon will use, in his last great struggle, to gain ascendency over the minds, consciences, and bodies of men. He will fan up their political animosities; he will stir up strife and division among religious communities; and, last of all, and not least, he will encourage an intolerable thirst for blood. In which battle, Christ will come, chain the dragon, give his body to the burning flame, confine the spirits of all who worship the dragon, beast or false prophet, in the pit of woe; raise the saints, purify, cleanse, and glorify them with his own glory.

IV. We are to speak of the time the saints, or church, were to be in the wilderness, "one thousand two hundred and threescore days." I believe all commentators agree that these days are to be understood years; and, as I have proved this point in a former lecture, I need not stop to argue this given principle at this time, but will proceed to give some proof when this time began and when it ended. The time given in our text is the same length of time as given by Daniel for the reign of the little horn. See Daniel vii. 25. It is, also, the same time John has given for the image beast to have power "to continue forty and two months." Thirty days to a month is 1260 days, Rev. xiii. 5. It is, also, the same length of time that was given to the Gentiles to tread the holy city under foot. See Rev. xi. 2. Also, for the witnesses to prophesy, clothed in sackcloth, Rev. xi. 3. And there can hardly be a shadow of a doubt but that all these times had their beginning and ending at one and the same time. If so, then the arguments used heretofore may have their proper bearing in this place.

But let us consider a few things in addition to our former reasons. 1st. What may we understand by the woman "fleeing into the wilderness," and "from the face of the serpent." We must consider it in a state of obscurity; this was true in the time we have stated, A. D. 538. Historians tell us but little about any regular church but the Roman church, and this has never been in an obscure state; of course the Roman is not the church in the wilderness. But they do tell us that, in the days of Justinian, emperor of Constantinople, there were many schismatics, as they were called, who opposed the power of the bishop or pope of Rome, and doings of councils in the east and west; and a large share of the latter part of Justinian's life was spent in religious broils and expelling from his kingdom these schismatics; and the code of laws which he published about A. D. 533, forbade any Christians any rights or privileges as citizens in his empire who would not acknowledge the bishop of Rome as head. And in these laws he gave the bishop power to hold courts and try all matters of faith within his kingdom. These, and other things of like import, drove all true followers of the word of God to seek a rest out of the jurisdiction of the city of nations, and, of course, became outlaws to the Roman government. Then, if we fix the beginning of the exile of the church at the same time of setting up anti-Christ, A. D. 538, then the church was in its exiled state until A. D. 1798, which would be the 1260 years. It is here worthy of remark, that the code of laws passed by Justinian were in full force in the kingdoms belonging to, or under the control of, the pope of Rome, respecting the rights and privileges of those who might differ from the Catholic faith, until the French took Rome, in 1798, and declared Italy a republic; when free toleration was given for any religious opinion or privilege whatsoever. Here, then, the church, in whatever form she might appear, was permitted to enjoy the rights and privileges of citizens, and to worship God as their conscience might dictate. This is the first time, during the 1260 years, that free toleration of religion was granted in any kingdom where the Catholic church had power; and, although Catholic princes and popes have since had rule in Italy and France, yet they have never dared, as yet, to pursue their former intolerant course of conduct towards Protestants. And it is very evident, my dear friends, that the church is now out of the wilderness; that is, if she ever was; for there never has been a time since the days of the apostles, no, nor even then, that the church, in all its several branches, has enjoyed greater privileges than for nearly forty years past. She has spread her wings over every land, and carried the news of salvation into every language in the known world. Her reapers have followed the sowers of seed, and there are handsfull of corn in the tops of all the mountains; but the harvest is short. The church has had rest as long as she has ever had since Christ left her and ascended to his Father. The dragon begins to show his anger; the trumpet begins to sound to the onset; the armies of the beast begin to muster for the battle, they are furbishing their swords for the slaughter; the kings of the earth are combining against the freedom of their subjects; the great men and nobles are riveting closer the chains of their vassals; tyrants are braiding in firmer knots their scorpion whips for their slaves; despotism has taken the room of mere law, and anarchy has crowded order from his seat; mobs have taken the place of judges, and law is popular will; the liberty of the press is but the nod of demagogues, and the freedom of speech is called fanaticism. Division seems to be the order of the day, and our valuable institutions are tottering to their base. Be warned, then, O my friends, to seek safety under the banner of the gospel before the armies are filled up. "And the dragon was wroth with the woman, and went to make war with the remnant of her seed which keep the commandments of God, and have the testimony of Jesus Christ,"—"The spirit of prophecy."

LECTURE XII.

THE PARABLE OF THE TEN VIRGINS.

MATT. xxv. 1.

"Then shall the kingdom of heaven be likened unto ten virgins, which took their lamps and went forth to meet the bridegroom."

PARABLES are always given to illustrate some doctrine or subject which the speaker wishes to communicate, and in an easy or familiar manner of making his hearers or readers understand the subject, and receive a lasting impression. Nothing has so good an effect on the mind as to teach by parables moral precepts or spiritual truths. In this way we are taught, by visible things or familiar objects, to realize, in some measure, the truths and subjects presented. This was the manner Christ taught his disciples and followers, that their memories might the more easily retain, and be often refreshed, when they beheld any scene like the representation of the parable; and, in this way, they might always keep in view the important truth that is likened to the parable. A parable, rightly applied and clearly understood, gives good instruction, and is a lasting illustration of the truth. But if we apply the parable wrong, if we put on a false construction, it will serve to lead us into an error and blind us, instead of producing light,—as Christ said of the Pharisees, he spake to them in parables, that, "seeing, they might see and not perceive, and hearing, they might hear and not understand." Men often explain parables by fancy, to suit their own notions, without any evidence but their own ingenuity; and by this means there will be as many different explanations as there are ingenious men. But I dare not trifle thus with the word of God. If we cannot, by the word of God, explain, we had better leave the same as we find it, and not attempt what must only result in guesswork at last; but follow Scripture rule, and we cannot get far from the truth. Christ has given us rules by which to explain parables, by explaining some himself. The explanation given by Christ of the parable of the tares and the wheat, is a rule that will bear in about all cases. That he has given rules, is very evident in his answer to his disciples, when they asked him concerning his parables. Mark iv. 13, "And he said unto them, Know ye not this parable? How, then, will ye know all parables?" That is, if ye understand how I explain this parable, you will know how to explain all others; but if you do not understand how I explain this, you cannot explain all others. This is the rule. Christ made all the prominent parts of a parable, figures; such as the sower, Son of man; good seed, children of the kingdom; tares, children of the wicked one; harvest, end of the world; reapers, the angels; "As, therefore, the tares are gathered and burned, so shall it be in the end of the world," &c. Here is a sample; good seed, tares, harvest, and reapers, are figures representing other things, as we have shown. "But how," say you, "shall we always know what these figures represent?" I answer, By the explanation given in other parts of the Bible. For the word of God is its own expositor, or it can be of no manner of use to us; for if we have to apply to any other rule, to explain the Bible, then the other rule would be tantamount, and have a precedence, and the Bible must fall of course. But it is not so. Then, to explain our subject, I shall,

I. Show what is meant by the figures used in the parable.

II. The time to which this parable is applicable; and,

III. Make an application of our subject.

I. I will explain the figures in the parable; and, 1st, "kingdom of heaven" means the gospel day, or church of God's government under the gospel dispensation. This I shall prove by the word of God. Matt. iii. 1, 2, "In those days came John the Baptist, preaching in the wilderness of Judea, and saying, Repent ye, for the kingdom of heaven is at hand;" that is, the gospel day is come." Again: "Jesus came into Galilee preaching the gospel of the kingdom of God, saying, The time is fulfilled, and the kingdom of God is at hand." Luke xvi. 16, "The law and the prophets were until John; since that time the kingdom of God is preached." That is, the gospel day commenced with John, since which time the gospel is preached.

"Ten virgins" means mankind in general, in a probationary state, liable to be wooed and betrothed to the Lord, under the gospel, and during the gospel day. See Isaiah lxii. 1—5, "For as a young man marrieth a virgin, so shall thy sons marry thee; and as the bridegroom rejoiceth over the bride, so shall thy God rejoice over thee." It is evident, by the second verse, that Gentiles and Jews are both included in this prophecy.

"Five wise virgins" is a figure of believers in God, or the children of the kingdom. Psalms xlv. 13, 14, "The king's daughter is all glorious within; her clothing is of wrought gold. She shall be brought unto the king in raiment of needle-work; the virgins, her companions that follow her, shall be brought unto thee." "That I might comfort thee, O virgin daughter of Zion." Lam. ii. 13.

"Five foolish" represents the unbelieving class of mankind, while in this probationary state, under the means of grace. This will be sufficiently proved by the following passages—Isa. xlvii. 1, "Come down, and sit in the dust, O virgin daughter of Babylon; sit on the ground; there is no throne, O daughter of the Chaldeans." Jer. xlvi. 11, "O virgin, the daughter of Egypt: in vain shalt thou use many medicines; for thou shalt not be cured." These texts prove, beyond a doubt, that the wicked class of men are called virgins by the Scriptures.

"Lamps" is a figure of the word of God; for that only can tell us about the New Jerusalem; that only can inform us when Christ will come again to the marriage supper of the Lamb. The word of God is the means of moral light, to light our steps through moral darkness, up to the coming of the bridegroom to receive the bride unto himself. This I shall prove by the cxix. Psalm, 105, "Thy word is a lamp to my feet, and a light to my path." Also, Prov. vi. 23, "For the commandment is a lamp, and the law is light; and reproofs of instruction are the way of life."

"Oil" is a representation or emblem of faith; as oil produces light by burning, so does faith, in exercise by the fire of love, produce more light, and gives comfort in adversity, hope in darkness, love for the coming bridegroom; and the light of faith assists us to watch for his coming, and to know the time of night, and to go out to meet him: such are called the children of light, because they are believers, children of faith, "sons of oil." "Because of the savor of thy good ointments, thy name is as ointment poured forth; therefore do the virgins love thee," Sol. Song, i. 2. "Faith works by love." See 1 John ii. 27, "But the anointing which ye have received of him, abideth in you; and ye need not that any man teach you; but as the same anointing teacheth you of all things, and is truth, and is no lie, and even as it hath taught you, ye shall abide in him." It is evident that the anointing, here and elsewhere spoken of, means faith, faith in his name, &c.

"Vessels" represent the persons or mind that believes or disbelieves in the word of God, as in 1 Thess. iv. 4, "That every one of you should know how to possess his vessel in sanctification and honor." Also, 2 Tim. ii. 21, "If any man, therefore, purge himself from these, he shall be a vessel unto honor."

"Bridegroom" is the figurative name for Christ; as the prophet Isaiah says, "And as a bridegroom rejoiceth over the bride, so shall thy God rejoice over thee." And Christ says, "How can the children of the bride-chamber mourn, while the bridegroom is with them?" alluding to himself. This proves that Christ means himself, in person, by the bridegroom in the parable.

"The door was shut," implies the closing up of the mediatorial kingdom, and finishing the gospel period. I shall prove this by Luke xiii. 25—28, "When once the master of the house is risen up, and hath shut to the door, and ye begin to stand without, and to knock at the door, saying, Lord, Lord, open unto us; and he shall answer and say unto you, I know ye not whence ye are. Then shall ye begin to say, We have eaten and drunken in thy presence, and thou hast taught in our streets. But he shall say, I tell you I know you not whence ye are; depart from me, all ye workers of iniquity; there shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth."

"Marriage" is the time when Christ shall come the second time without sin unto salvation; gather his elect from the four winds of heaven, where they have been scattered during the dark and cloudy day; when he comes to be glorified in his saints, and to be admired in all them that believe; when the bride hath made herself ready, and the marriage of the Lamb is come, then he will present her to his Father without spot or wrinkle, and there marry the bride before his Father and the holy angels; remove her into the New Jerusalem state, seat her upon the throne of his glory, where she will ever be with the Lord. When this takes place, the whole body will be present; the whole church must be there, not a member missing, not a finger out of joint. She will be perfect in beauty, all over glorious. See Rev. xix. 7—9, "Let us rejoice and be glad, and give honor to him, for the marriage of the Lamb is come, and his wife hath made herself ready. And to her was granted that she should be arrayed in fine linen, clean and white, for the fine linen is the righteousness of saints. And he said unto me, Write, Blessed are they which are called to the marriage supper of the Lamb." Daniel says, "Blessed is he that waiteth and cometh to the 1335 days." John says, "Blessed and holy is he that hath part in the first resurrection." All these are at one and the same time; and how can we expect to be free from sorrow, mourning and tears, until the bridegroom comes and moves us into the beloved city? Rev. xxi. 2—4, "And I John saw the holy city, New Jerusalem, coming down from God out of heaven, prepared as a bride adorned for her husband. And I heard a great voice out of heaven, saying, Behold, the tabernacle of God is with men, and he will dwell with them," &c.

"Midnight cry" is the watchmen, or some of them, who by the word of God discover the time as revealed, and immediately give the warning voice, "Behold, the bridegroom cometh; go ye out to meet him." This has been fulfilled in a most remarkable manner. One or two on every quarter of the globe have proclaimed the news, and agree in the time—Wolf, of Asia; Irwin, late of England; Mason, of Scotland; Davis, of South Carolina; and quite a number in this region are, or have been, giving the cry. And will not you all, my brethren, examine and see if these things are so, and trim your lamps and be found ready?

"Trimming the lamps." You will recollect, my friends, that the word of God is the lamp. To trim a lamp is to make it give light, more light, and clearer light. In the first place, to translate the Bible would make it give light, in all languages into which it should be translated. Then, to send to or give every family in the known world a Bible, would make the Bible give more light. And thirdly, to send out the true servants of God, who have made the Bible their study, and true teachers, who would teach the holy precepts and doctrines contained therein, and to employ many Sabbath school teachers, would in the hands of God be the means of its giving clearer light. This would be trimming the lamp; and so far as the foolish virgins assisted in translating the Scriptures, in sending them among all nations, and employing missionaries and teachers to teach mankind its principles, so far would they trim their lamp; but if they had no faith in it, their light would be darkness, and the lamp to them would go out. If the friend of the bridegroom should proclaim the approach of him whom they all expected, and should prove it ever so plain by the lamp, but having no faith, the lamp would go out; they would not be ready to enter into the marriage supper, and the door would be shut. This is undoubtedly the meaning which Christ intends to convey in this parable. I shall therefore show,

II. The time this parable is applicable to.

In the chapter previous our Savior had answered three questions which his disciples had put to him on the Mount of Olives, when they came to him privately, saying, "Tell us when shall these things be?" That is, when Jerusalem should be levelled with the ground. "And what shall be the sign of thy coming?" That is, his second coming in the clouds of heaven, with power and great glory, as he had before informed them, which is yet future. "And of the end of the world," or, as some translate it, "end of the age," to which I am perfectly willing to agree; but what age? is the question. I answer, The gospel age, or the kingdom of heaven. See 14th verse, "This gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world for a witness unto all nations; and then shall the end come." "The law and the prophets were until John, since which time the kingdom of heaven is preached." The Jewish economy is nowhere called the kingdom of heaven; but this expression belongs exclusively to the gospel; and of course any age in which the gospel or kingdom of heaven is preached, can never be applied to the Jewish age. Any novice in Scripture interpretation must readily admit this. These were the questions proposed by the disciples to their divine Master, and were answered in the following manner: From the 4th to the 14th verse, inclusive, of the 24th chapter of Matthew, Christ informs his disciples of the troubles, trials, persecutions, and distress which they and his followers should suffer down to the end of the gospel age. He also informs them by what means they must suffer—by false brethren, by deceit, by wars, rumors of wars, clashing of nations, earthquakes, afflictions, death, hatred, offences, betrayals, false prophets, coldness, iniquity, famines, and pestilence, and these to the end of the gospel age. From the 15th to the 22d, inclusive, he alludes to the destruction of Jerusalem, and particularly gives his followers warning of what they shall suffer, and informs them what to do at that time; he tells them what to pray for, and how to escape from the siege, and how to avoid certain consequences which must follow this great tribulation.

From the 23d to the 28th, inclusive, he warns his disciples against the error that false teachers would promulgate, that Christ did or would come at the destruction of Jerusalem. He told them plainly to "believe it not," for his second coming would be as visible as the lightning, and then every man would be gathered to his own company; so there would be no room for deceit.

In the 29th verse he prophesies of the rise of anti-Christ, the darkness and fall of many into superstition and error, and the persecution of the true church. 30th and 31st verses, He gives a sign of his coming, the mourning of the tribes of the earth, and then speaks of his coming and what he will do. 32, Is the parable of the fig tree. 33, He enforces it by saying, "So likewise ye, when ye shall see all these things, know that it is near, even at the door." 34th and 35th verses, He gives his disciples a comfortable promise, which was to this amount, that his children should not be all destroyed from the earth. But "this generation shall not pass till all these things be fulfilled." To prove the word generation is so used, I will refer you to Psalm xxii. 30, "A seed shall serve him; it shall be accounted to the Lord for a generation." 1 Peter ii. 9, "A chosen generation, a royal priesthood, a holy nation." The word generation, in the Scriptures, when used in the singular, I believe almost invariably means the children of one parent; as the generation of Adam, children of Adam; chosen generation, children of God; generation of vipers, children of the devil. So Christ, talking to his children, and instructing them only, says, "This generation shall not pass till all these things be fulfilled. Heaven and earth shall pass away, but my words shall not pass away." His kingdom shall not be destroyed nor given to another people.

36th verse, He informs his disciples that the day and hour of his coming is known only to God, has never been revealed, meaning day and hour only, whether at midnight, at cock-crowing, or in the morning.

Verses 37—44, inclusive, He informs them that his coming will be like the deluge; unexpected to the wicked, as then. He tells them the manner; that he will separate the righteous from the wicked; one shall be taken and another left. He then gives them a charge to watch, and repeats, "they know not the hour." Christ illustrates his warning by the figure of the good man of the house, and then charges them to be also ready, as the good man would, if he knew in what watch the thief would come; showing us plainly that all true believers will know near the time, as Paul says, "But ye brethren, are not in darkness, that that day should overtake you as a thief."

From 45—47, he tells us of the faithful and wise servant, who watches and gives warning of his coming, and speaks of the blessings that servant shall inherit when he comes and finds him so doing,

48—51, Christ gives us the marks of an evil servant: 1st mark, he will "say in his heart, My Lord delayeth his coming." He may not preach or speak against Christ's coming; no, he will only say it to himself. But he will not say he will never come; no, he will only think in his heart, "My Lord delayeth his coming." When he hears the voice of the faithful servant saying, "Behold, the bridegroom cometh," he

THE JEWS.

ARE THE LITERAL DESCENDANTS OF ABRAHAM EVER AS A PEOPLE, TO BE RETURNED TO THE LAND OF PALESTINE?

Believers in the Advent near, stand accused of sustaining their theory, by wresting from "God's chosen people, the Jews," an inheritance guaranteed to them by a decree of heaven. This is a serious charge, and one that we are disposed to deny. We claim, that the inheritance was promised to all the Saints, and that as such, they, and not the Jews, are the rightful claimants of Palestine.

In order to settle this question, we appeal to the original Title. The only way in which our claim to earthly possessions can be legally settled, is by an examination of the documents that purport to contain our claim. When there are existing doubts as to the true meaning of words or sentences, the best acknowledged authorities are appealed to, in order to settle such difficulties. This is the course we design to pursue, in contesting with the Jew our claim to Palestine.

The original document under which the Jew claims his right to that land, is recorded in Gen. xvii. 1—8, and reads as follows:

"And when Abram was ninety years old and nine, the Lord appeared to Abram, and said unto him, I am the Almighty God; walk before me, and be thou perfect.

"And I will make my covenant between me and thee, and will multiply thee exceedingly.

"And Abram fell on his face; and God talked with him saying, as for me, behold, my covenant is with THEE, and thou shalt be a father of many nations. Neither shall thy name any more be called Abram; but thy name shall be Abraham, for a father of many nations have I made thee.

"And I will make thee exceeding fruitful, and I will make nations of thee; and kings shall come out of thee.

"And I will establish my covenant between me and thee, and thy seed after thee, in their generations, for an everlasting covenant; to be a God unto thee, and to thy seed after thee.

"And I will give unto thee, and to thy seed after thee, the land wherein thou art a stranger, all the land of Canaan, for an EVERLASTING POSSESSION; and I will be their God."

The above is the title. It rests in Abraham and his seed, and no man or body of men can take it from them, for it is God's covenant. Where then, says one, is your claim for the Saints? It is here; the term "seed" used in the singular number, does not embrace all the descendants of Abraham. Some may call this a mere quibble, but all will admit that it is a point which affords ground for controversy. I shall then bring the best acknowledged authority on this point, and leave the Jews to look for theirs; for unless they can prove themselves the true seed, their claim is null and void.

Paul to the Gallatians, 3d ch. 15th v.: "Though it be but a man's covenant, yet if it be confirmed, no man disannulleth or addeth thereto." Here is laid down a rule of civil jurisprudence, that has universally obtained in all ages of the world. If a man legally conveys to another that which was his own, no moral act can revoke or change the force of the obligation. "No man disannulleth or addeth thereto." Whatever, then, be the true design of the covenant here alluded to, it is unchangeable.

Ver. 16. "Now to Abraham and his SEED were the promises made. [All other promises are embraced.] He saith not, and to seeds, as of many; but as of one, and to thy seed, WHICH IS CHRIST."

With those who claim to give better authority than Paul, as to the true meaning of the term "seed" in that covenant, we have no controversy. According to this, Christ alone is the rightful heir.

This argument of the apostle, having driven the Jew from his position as a claimant on the ground of promise to "Abraham and his seed," he sets up another claim upon the ground of possession; God having brought them into that land, they claim a title to it under the law. This is answered by Paul in verse 17.

"And this I say, that the covenant that was confirmed before of God in Christ, the law, which was four hundred and thirty years after, cannot disannul, that it should make the promise of none effect."

God's covenant could not be treated with less respect than man's, and that none could "disannul or add thereto." The law could not take away a title which had been confirmed in Christ more than four hundred years, and give it to the Jew.

Ver. 18. "For if the inheritance be of the law, it is no more of promise: but God gave it to Abraham by promise."

Their only ground for a claim, is by virtue of the promise to Abraham, and that, Paul has already settled as hopeless. They have no title, unless they procure it from Christ. Under such circumstances, the Jew very naturally inquires, ver. 9: "Wherefore then serveth the law?" If it does not give me a claim to Canaan, what is it good for? Paul answers in the same verse, "It was added because of transgressions, till the seed should come to whom the promise was made."

Ver. 24, "Wherefore the law was our schoolmaster to bring us unto Christ, that we might be justified by faith."

What can be more plain than that the Jews were placed under a law which pointed them to Christ? And to him, the only one now able to give them a permanent title to "the promised land," they were directed; and that while they reject him, they reject their only claim to Palestine.

They were placed in possession of that land until the true heir should come. If they acknowledged, and rendered unto him his own, they would enjoy all the privileges, and immunities in common with those that are Christ's: if not, the kingdom was to be taken from them.

How did they treat the true Heir when he came? See Matt. xxi. 33—43:

"Hear another parable; There was a certain householder, which planted a vineyard, and hedged it round about, and digged a wine press in it, and built a tower, and let it out to husbandmen, [Canaan belonged to Christ, but was let out to the Jews,] and went into a far country. And when the time of the fruit drew near, he sent his servants to the husbandmen, that they might receive the fruits of it. [God sent his prophets that the Jews might obey him.] And the husbandmen took his servants, and beat one, and killed another, and stoned another. (See Matt. xxiii. 37.)

"Again he sent other servants more than the first: and they did unto them likewise. But last of all, he sent unto them HIS SON, saying, They will reverence my son.

"But when the husbandmen saw the son, they said among themselves, 'THIS IS THE HEIR; come, let us kill him, and let us seize on HIS INHERITANCE. And they caught him and cast him out of the vineyard and slew him."

Here ends their national privileges, for Jesus says to them, "When the Lord therefore of the vineyard cometh, what will he do unto those husbandmen? They say unto him, He will miserably destroy those wicked men, and let out his vineyard to other husbandmen, which shall render him their fruits in their seasons."

Thus they are condemned out of their own mouths. Here also is the sentence Jesus pronounces upon them. "The kingdom of God shall be TAKEN FROM YOU, and given to a nation bringing forth the fruits thereof."

What nation is this? See Rev. xxi. 24, "The nations of them that are saved shall walk in the light of it," &c.

If we are asked how we know the above to refer to the Jews, the answer is found at the end of the parable, ver. 45, "And when the chief priests and pharisees had heard his parables, they perceived that he spake of them."

The next question that arises is

DID THE JEWS EVER INHERIT THE LAND OF PALESTINE, IN ACCORDANCE WITH ANY PROMISE FOUND IN THE BIBLE?

See Acts vii. 2—5: "And he (Stephen) said, men, brethren and fathers, hearken; The God of glory appeared unto our father Abraham when he was in Mesopotamia, before he dwelt in Charran, and said unto him, Get thee out of thy country, and from thy kindred, and come into the land which I shall show thee.

"Then came he out of the land of the Chaldeans, and dwelt in Charran. And from thence, when his father was dead, he removed him into this land wherein ye now dwell.

"And he gave him NONE INHERITANCE IN IT, no, not so much as to set his foot on: yet he PROMISED that he would give it to him for a possession and to his seed after him."

Abraham, then, never inherited it.

See also Heb. xi. 8—16.

"By faith Abraham, when he was called to go out into a place which he should after receive for an inheritance, obeyed; and he went out not knowing whither he went.

BY FAITH he sojourned in the land of promise, as in a strange country, dwelling in tabernacles with Isaac and Jacob, heirs with him of the same promise.

For he looked for a city which hath foundations, whose builder and maker is God.

Through faith, also, Sarah herself received strength to conceive seed, and was delivered of a child when she was past age, because she judged him faithful who had promised.

Therefore sprang there even of one, and him as good as dead, so many as the stars of the sky in multitude, and as the sand which is by the sea shore innumerable.

"These all died in faith, NOT HAVING RECEIVED THE PROMISES, but having seen them AFAR OFF, and were persuaded of them, and embraced them, and confessed that they were strangers and pilgrims on the earth.

For they that say such things declare plainly that they seek a country.

And truly, if they had been mindful of that country from whence they came out, they might have had opportunity to have returned.

But now they desire a better country, that is, an heavenly: wherefore God is not ashamed to be called their God: for he hath prepared for them a city."

From this testimony we learn that when Abraham was called into the land of Canaan, it was not to inherit it according to the promise: this was not to be till "after," (ver. 8.)

He dwelt in the land of promise by faith, (ver 9.) We do not inherit by faith, that which we are placed in actual possession of.

He looked for something more substantial, under the promise he had received from God, than Cities built by human skill. (ver. 10.)

The patriarchs and prophets down to Jacob, and after him an innumerable company of the real descendants of Abraham, (ver. 12) all died in the faith of inheriting the land promised, yet "afar off," for the promise was not fulfilled to one of the whole number, (ver. 13.) This led them to act like pilgrims on the earth, as all true believers ever have done, and ever will do.

They that conduct thus; refusing earthly possessions, (for they purchased no lands only for burying places,) prove their heavenly mindedness, (ver. 14.

If the land of Palestine, had been all the land and the only land embraced in the promise, they might have possessed it. (ver. 14.)

It was not the rods and acres of Palestine, that was either promised or sought for; but "a heavenly country." And for this nobleness of mind, in discovering and looking for, the true inheritance, "God is not ashamed to be called their God, for HE hath prepared for them a city." But he is ashamed to be called the God of those that would make him altogether such an one as themselves; by supposing HE would make one promise to those he loved, that did not reach beyond a world cursed by sin, (v. 16.)

None of the true seed of Abraham have ever been satisfied with the land of Palestine, nor can they while "death and darkness reigns."

We have seen that the land was promised to Christ, the legal heir of Abraham; but has he yet inherited it according to the promise? While in that land, "a certain scribe" recognised him as the heir, and probably for this reason offered his service by saying, "I will follow thee whithersoever thou goest." But Jesus said Matt. viii: 20,

"The foxes have holes, and the birds of the air have nests; but the Son of Man hath not where to lay his head."

He certainly did not at that time, possess the land according to the promise.

It is a question that will require some ingenuity to solve, how the Jews are to RETURN, to Palestine, when they never inherited it by virtue of any promise, only by faith.

WAS THE REAL INHERITANCE PROMISED, THE PRESENT LAND OF PALESTINE, ONLY?

Before the covenant by promise, with Abraham, the Lord gave him an intimation of the extent of the territory contained in the promised land. [Gen. xiii. 14, 15.]

"And the Lord said unto Abram, after that Lot was separated from him, Lift up now thine eyes, and look from the place where thou art, northward, and southward, and eastward, and westward: For ALL THE LAND WHICH THOU SEEST, to thee will I give it, and to thy seed FOREVER."

All that he could see, was promised; and he could see all that was bounded by the horizon, which, according to the views of the ancients, comprised the whole world. But to prove that the whole world, and not Palestine merely, was promised to Abraham and his seed, I have only to refer to the best commentator extant. [Rom. iv. 13.]

"For the promise that he should be the HEIR OF THE WORLD, was not to Abraham, or to his seed, through the law, but through the righteousness of faith."

In an explanation of the parable of the "tares," in Matt. xiii. 38, our Lord says, The field is the world, the GOOD SEED are the children of the kingdom; but the tares are the children of the wicked one.

When the tares are bound, or the wicked destroyed out of the world; then, shall the righteous (the good seed, or the seed of Abraham) shine forth as the Sun in the Kingdom of their father. (verse 42, 43.) Then shall the time come that the saints possess the Kingdom. Dan. vii: 22. The meek inherit the earth; Matt. v: 5. Psa. xxxvii: 3, 9, 11, 18, 22, 29, 34, See, also 2 Peter, iii; 10—13.

"But the day of the Lord will come as a thief in the night; in the which the heavens shall pass away with a great noise, and the elements shall melt with fervent heat, the earth also; and the works that are therein shall be burned up.

Seeing then, that all these things shall be dissolved, what manner of persons ought ye to be in all holy conversation and godliness,

Looking for, and hasting unto the coming of the day of God, wherein the heavens being on fire shall be dissolved, and the elements shall melt with fervent heat!

Nevertheless, we, according to his promise, look for a New Heavens and a New Earth wherein dwelleth righteousness."

We here have the declaration that the earth shall be melted, and when that takes place, the promise of God to Abraham, of an everlasting possession, comes in force; for "according to his promise we look for new heavens and a new earth; This promise is in Isa. lxv: 17—19.

"For behold, I create a new heavens and a new earth: and the former shall not be remembered nor come into mind.

But be ye glad and rejoice forever in that which I create: for behold, I CREATE JERUSALEM a rejoicing, and her people a joy.

And I will rejoice in Jerusalem, and joy in my people: and the voice of weeping shall no more be heard in her, nor the voice of crying."

Jerusalem, the Jews portion, always has been, and always will be filled with sorrow untill she is created a rejoicing. Then the true seed, will

"Look upon Zion the city of our solemnities: [for] Thine eyes shall see Jerusalem a quiet habitation, A tabernacle that shall not be taken down; not one of the stakes thereof shall ever be removed." (Isa. xxxii. 20.)

Then she will be an everlasting possession. For a further description of the land of promise, see Rev. xxi: 1—5.

"And I saw a new heaven and a new earth: for the first heaven and the first earth were passed away; and there was no more sea.

And I John saw the Holy City, new Jerusalem coming down from God out of heaven, prepared as a bride adorned for her husband.

And I heard a great voice out of heaven, saying, Behold, the tabernacle of God is with men, and he will dwell with them, and they shall be his people, and God himself shall be with them, and be their God.

And God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes; and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow, nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain: for the former things are passed away.

And he that sat upon the throne said, Behold I make all things new. And he said unto me, write: for these words are true and faithful."

"True and faithful!" Yes, they are no parable or similee, but a "true" prediction of what God will "shortly" bring to pass. Then the promise made in Zech. xiv: 11. will be fulfilled.

"And men shall dwell in it, and there shall be no more utter destruction; but Jerusalem shall be SAFELY INHABITED."

John gives as a reason for this, that there shall be "no more death, neither sorrow," &c. Abrahams seed will then live to die no more. See Ezek. xxxiv: 23—31.

"And I will set up one shepherd over them, and he shall feed them, even my servant David; he shall feed them, and he shall be their shepherd.

And I the Lord will be their God, and my servant David a prince among them; I the Lord have spoken it.

And I will make with them a covenant of peace, and will cause the evil beasts to cease out of the land: and they shall DWELL SAFELY in the wilderness, and sleep in the woods.

And I will make them and the places round about my hill a blessing; and I will cause the shower to come down in his season; there shall be showers of blessing.

And the tree of the field shall yield her fruit, and the earth shall yield her increase, and they shall be safe in their land, and shall know that I am the Lord, when I have broken the bands of their yoke, and delivered them out of the hands of those that served themselves of them.

And they shall no more be a prey to the heathen, neither shall the beasts of the land devour them; but they shall dwell safely, and none shall make them afraid.

And I will raise up for them a plant of renown, and they shall no more be consumed with hunger in the land, neither bear the shame of the heathen any more.

Thus shall they know that I the Lord their God am with them, and that they, even the house of Israel, are my people, saith the Lord God.

And ye my flock, the flock of my pasture, are men, and I am your God, saith the Lord God."

While sin is in the world—evil men and seducers, waxing worse and worse, deceiving and being deceived,—While there is a devil to tempt men, and death to destroy the righteous and the wicked, Gods people can not "dwell safely." Therefore when these promises are fulfilled, there will be "no more death."

When storms have ceased to beat, and tempests rise no more,—When Volcanoes have spent their force, and the bowels of the earth are no more agitated with internal fires,—When the dense forest no longer affords shelter for prowling beasts of prey, and dark caverns a lurking place for poisonous reptiles,—When midnight darkness no longer spreads its mantle over deeds of rapine, fraud, and licentiousness,—When the widows tear has ceased to fall, and the orphans cries are hushed,—When contention, strife, divisions, cruelty, oppression, and heart-burnings, have sunk in the Pit, with "the beast and false prophet,"—When the earth has been "melted"—"all things made new"—The new Jerusalem descends—The Son of God appears with all his saints and Eden blooms on earth again; Then, Israel will dwell safely, and not before.

We long for that blessed day! We groan with Paul, "for the adoption, to-wit: the redemption of our bodies." With what full emphasis do such glorious hopes lead us to pray, "Thy kingdom come, THY WILL BE DONE ON EARTH AS IT IS IN HEAVEN."

THE SEED TO WHOM THE INHERITANCE BELONGS.

The title to the inheritance described, we have already proved to be made over to Abraham and Christ. We will now see whether any other persons are embraced in it, and if so, who they are. See John i. 12, 13:

"He came unto his own, and his own received him not.

"But as many as receive him, to THEM gave he power to become the SONS OF GOD, even to them that believe on his name:

"Which were born, NOT of BLOOD, nor of the will of the flesh, nor of the will of man, but of God."

Here is the way, and the only way taught in the book of God, in which we can become his children: not because we are related to Abraham in the flesh, for

"They which are the children of the flesh, these ARE NOT THE CHILDREN OF GOD." Rom. ix. 8.

Again: "Because the minding of the flesh [see margin] is enmity against God." Rom. viii. 7.

It is a work of enmity to God to give one precious promise of the Almighty to any man, or body of men, merely on account of blood relation to Abraham, or even to Christ himself. See 2d Cor. v. 16.

"Though we have known Christ after the flesh, yet now henceforth know we him no more." See Gal. iii. 26—29.

"For ye are ALL the children of God by faith in Christ Jesus.

"For as many of you as have been baptized into Christ, have put on Christ.

"There is neither JEW NOR GREEK, there is neither bond nor free, there is neither male nor female: for ye are ALL ONE in Christ Jesus.

"And if ye be Christ's, then are ye ABRAHAM'S SEED, and heirs ACCORDING to the PROMISE."

Let who will, prefer the comments of eminent men of modern date; give us the comments of Paul, an apostle, whose hand is safely guided by God's inspiring Spirit. The decision is made. If we are Christ's, we are not only heirs with him, but heirs according to the promise. Again, in Eph. ii. 11—13.

"Wherefore remember, that ye being in time past Gentiles in the flesh who are called uncircumcision by that which is called the circumcision [by the Jews] in the flesh made by hands;

"That at that time ye were without Christ, being aliens from the commonwealth of Israel, and strangers from the covenants of promise, having no hope, and without God in the world. But now, in Christ Jesus, ye who sometimes were far off, are made nigh by the blood of Christ.

"For he is our peace, who hath made both one and hath BROKEN DOWN THE MIDDLE WALL of partition between us."

The partition wall had been built by the Jews—the husbandmen to whom the vineyard was only "let;" They claimed the title,—built up the wall of separation, and excluded the Gentiles. When the true heir came, he did not alter or amend his own work, but undid what the wicked Jews had done wrong.

Being of the lineage of Abraham avails nothing. See Matt. iii. 9, 10.

"And think not to say within yourselves, We have Abraham to our father: for I say unto you, that God is able of these stones to raise up children to Abraham.

"And now also the axe is laid unto the root of the trees: therefore every tree that bringeth not forth good fruit is hewn down and cast into the fire."

If the Jews no longer produced the required evidences of obedience, they, with all other evil doers, were to perish. For, (ver. 11,)

"I," says John, "indeed baptise you with water unto repentance: but he that cometh after me is mightier than I, whose shoes I am not worthy to bear: he shall baptise you [that believe] with the Holy Ghost, and [you that do not believe] with fire."

According to the testimony of Christ, who cannot err, the Jews are not the children of Abraham. See John, viii. 39.

"They answered and said unto him, Abraham is our father. Jesus saith unto them, if ye were Abraham's children, ye would do the works of Abraham."

Doing the works of Abraham is requisite to constitute one a child of Abraham. What was the work of Abraham through which he was justified before God? His faith. (See Gal., iii. 6, 7.)

"Abraham believed God, and IT was accounted to him for righteousness.

Know ye therefore, that they which are of faith, THE SAME ARE THE CHILDREN OF ABRAHAM."

But, says one, was not Abraham justified before God by his works? (See Rom., iv. 2.)

"For IF Abraham were justified by works, he hath whereof to glory, BUT NOT BEFORE GOD."

If the Jews were not the children of Abraham, whose children were they? Christ answers: (John, viii. 44.:)

"Ye are of YOUR FATHER THE DEVIL, and the lusts of your father ye will do."

What a sad mistake was this! And what a pity, that religious teachers of the present day will not let it stand as Christ has corrected it. The DEVIL, and not ABRAHAM, is the father of those that reject Christ.

See also Revelation, ii. 9, and iii. 9.

"I know the blasphemy of them which say they are Jews, and are not, but are the synagogue of Satan."

"Behold I will make them of the synagogue of Satan which say they are Jews and are not, but do lie."

Harmonising with the declaration of Christ, that they were the children of the Devil.

Again, Romans, ii. 28, 29:

"For he is not a Jew, which is one outwardly; neither is that circumcision, which is outward in the flesh:

But he is a Jew which is one inwardly; and circumcision is that of the heart, in the spirit, and not in the letter; whose praise is not of men, but of God."

That God will treat the carnal Jew the same as any other sinner, may easily be shown from the Old. as well as the New Testament. (See Isaiah, lxv. 11—15.)

"But ye are they that forsake the Lord, that forget my holy mountain, that prepare a table for that troop, and that furnish a drink offering for that number.

Therefore will I number you to the sword, and ye shall all bow down to the slaughter: because when I called, ye did not answer; when I spake, ye did not hear; but did evil before mine eyes, and did choose that wherein I delighted not.

Therefore thus saith the Lord God, behold, my servants shall eat, but ye shall be hungry: behold, my servants shall drink, but ye shall be thirsty: behold, my servants shall rejoice, but ye shall be ashamed:

Behold, my servants shall sing for joy of heart, but ye shall cry for sorrow of heart, and shall howl for vexation of spirit.

And ye shall leave your name for a curse unto my chosen: for the Lord God shall SLAY THEE and call his servants by ANOTHER NAME."

The time was, when the Jews, as a nation, were acknowledged as God's servants, and their name was called "Israel," "Judah," "Jacob," &c. God has always had a name for his people, and the name "Christian" was not known until "the disciples were called Christians first in Antioch." (Acts, xi. 26.)

The forms and institutions of Judaism being dispensed with, (Col., ii. 10—15,) the name "CHRISTIAN," or "follower of Christ," is the "other name" by which "his servants" are now called. We here have a reason why all the promises under the old dispensation were so pointedly made to "Israel," "Judah," &c., because that was the name of God's people; not that all the literal seed would benefit by those promises, for they "are not all Israel who are of Israel;" or, in other words, they are not all God's people that carry the name. Furthermore, proselytes were received among the Jews by Divine authority, (Ex., xii. 48,) and entitled to all the privileges of Abraham's literal seed. This ought to be satisfactory proof, that faith and obedience, and not Abraham's blood, was what settled the claim to the promise.

The rejection of the Jews, as a nation, from being the people of God, as predicted by Isaiah and Jeremiah, was to last till the earth was desolated, or until the end of time. (See Isa., vi. 9—12.)

"And he said, go, and tell this people, hear ye indeed, but understand not; and see ye indeed, but perceive not.

Make the heart of this people fat, and make their ears heavy, and shut their eyes; lest they see with their eyes, and hear with their ears, and understand with their heart, and convert, and be healed.

Then said I, Lord, how long? And he answered, until the cities be wasted WITHOUT INHABITANT, and the houses WITHOUT MAN, and the land be UTTERLY DESOLATE;

And the Lord have removed men far away, and there be a GREAT FORSAKING in the midst of the land."

Yet a tithe was to be left, so that this national scattering, or "desolation," was not to cut off the privileges of those that "returned from their evil ways. (See also Jer., xxiii. 39, 40.)

"Therefore behold, I, even I, will utterly forget you, and I will forsake you, AND THE CITY THAT I GAVE YOU AND YOUR FATHERS, and cast you out of my presence:

And I will bring an EVERLASTING reproach upon you, and a PERPETUAL shame that SHALL NOT be forgotten."

If we are still questioned, as to what is to become of all the promises made to the Jewish nation as such, "Restoring" them to their "own land," &c., we reply, God's Word can best settle that matter. (See Jer., xviii. 9, 10.)

"And at what instant I shall speak concerning a nation, and concerning a kingdom, to build and to plant it;

If it DO EVIL in my sight, that it obey not my voice, then I will repent of the good, [change my purpose,] wherewith I said I would benefit them."

Did they do this evil? They did, as we have already seen from the prophecy of Isai.; but you may read it again in the same chapter from which the last quotation was made. (Ver. 15—17.)

"Because my people hath forgotten me, they have burned incense to vanity, and they have caused them to stumble in their ways from the ancient paths, to walk in paths, a way not cast up;

To make their land desolate, and a PERPETUAL hissing; every one that passeth thereby shall be astonished, and wag his head.

I will scatter them as an east wind before the enemy; I will show them the back, and not the face, in the day of their calamity."

When did they do the evil that caused God to "repent of the good" promised to them, and that led him to pronounce their final doom.

We answer, when they rejected the Lord Jesus Christ, the true heir, as we have already proved from Matt., xxi. 33—41, 45. Jesus says to them, in the 43d verse, for this rejection,

"Therefore say I unto you, the kingdom of God shall be TAKEN FROM YOU, and given to a nation bringing forth the fruits thereof."

They did the evil, and God repented of the good, as he had declared. But what nation now, shall the kingdom of God be given to? (See 1 Peter, ii. 7. 9.)

"Unto you therefore WHICH BELIEVE, he is precious:" (ver. 9.) "But ye are a chosen generation, a royal priesthood, an HOLY NATION, a peculiar people; that ye should show forth the

WESTERN MIDNIGHT CRY.

CINCINNATI, MARCH 9, 1844.

CHRONOLOGICAL PROPHECIES.

LETTER TO L. L. HAMLINE,
Editor of the Ladies' Repository.

DEAR SIR,

In the editor's table of the last number of the "Ladies' Repository" is an article under the head of "Chronological Prophecies," containing, as I conceive, errors that ought not to be passed by unnoticed. In remarking upon them, I am fully aware of the multiplied difficulties with which I must contend, in endeavoring to fix the same impression upon the public mind, that they have made upon my own. Go which way I will in this city, or in the surrounding country, and ask for the individual upon whose word I can place unlimited confidence in all matters of theology, as far as human wisdom and research goes; and the one, almost universal response will be, that man is Mr. Hamline. His fame is in all the churches: His piety, is unquestioned. But is this a sufficient reason, why those sentiments of yours which have been made public should not be scanned; and if erroneous, exposed? Your liberality, dear sir, I am fully persuaded, will lead you to answer, No. Good men are not always free from error: And their errors are the more dangerous and destructive, from the fact that they are good men. A bad man may advance false principles, and but few will be contaminated by them; But when the man, whose upright course has secured for himself unlimited public confidence, becomes contaminated with such principles, how wide spread and incurable is the contagion! You may say, I have only carried out the principle you have here laid down, in making my restrictions upon the principles of Second Advent believers; To which, in behalf of such believers, I will say, we are bound to bring arguments, reasonable and satisfactory to candid minds, to meet all objections brought against the doctrine of the Lord's Soon Coming, or like honest men, abandon our position in favor of superior argument.

With your definition of the word "Chronology," as also the different eras upon which nations have fixed as starting points, I have nothing to do. You have introduced a list of popular names, in connexion with their opinions as to the year of the world in which the birth of our Saviour took place. These opinions show a difference of more than THREE THOUSAND YEARS. Might you not with equal propriety have brought evidence from the recent discoveries of Geologists and Naturalists, to show, that in the room of this small difference of three thousand years, the chronology of the Bible was in fault by more than EIGHTEEN THOUSAND YEARS? I am at a loss to know why all this discrepancy as to the age of the world is brought forward. Why not have told your readers, what you must have known, that the Bible furnishes us a chronology by which we may arrive within a Century of the true age of the world. Indeed, have you not told us this in the following expression?

☞ "It is true, that to ascertain within a century the time of Christ's birth, is a tolerably assured task."

Class this with the following expression of yours, relative to the great differences of opinion upon the chronology of the world, and see if you have not given your readers fair ground to suppose those discrepancies have been introduced for the purpose of throwing an unnecessary obscurity around prophetic dates?

☞ "These variations, great as they may seem to persons unacquainted with the theme, are most of them not far beyond the limits of probability."

You had also previously told us, if there was not "infallible certainty, or acknowledged accuracy," still there was "a satisfactory approximation toward the true year of our Lord." Can you reconcile these, apparently contradictory sentences?

Supposing you had shown that the true age of the world varied more than a century from 6000 years, What would it prove? Second Advent believers have never attempted to prove that the world was about 6000 years old, only for the purpose of doing away an objection founded in tradition, that when it had arrived at that age it would be destroyed. In such attempts they have relied upon the Bible as their only authority; and it has furnished a chronology which has stood a closer test than any other yet presented to the world: Still, we do not rest upon that as proof of the Advent in this, or any other year,—we have better evidence. However, as a kind of offset to men's opinions which you have given, I will introduce one man's opinion.

Geo. R. Gliddon, late United States' Consul at Cairo, in a recent work on Egyptian literature, shows the various periods which have been given by different chronologists as the length of time from the creation to the birth of Christ. Among one hundred and twenty different opinions, he admits that the Hebrew text gives us 4161 years; differing only four years from the chronology of Mr. Miller.

It strikes me that one part of your argument will have a tendency to "make infidels"—that is, a difference among theologians, of nearly 200 years in the birth of Christ, "not being far beyond the limits of probability," will be likely to leave upon some minds, a doubt whether he ever came at all. The next clause I shall notice is the following:

"What matters it," the reader may ask, "whether we mistake or not?" We answer, in these days of calculation, when so many persons are diverted from devotion, to study the mysterious numbers of Daniel and John, engrossing all duty into a search for "the time of the end," we ought to be aware that none can know that time."

Before intimating, that a study of any portion of the Holy Scriptures, (all of which is declared by an inspired penman to be profitable for "instruction in righteousness," &c. 2 Tim. 3: 16) had a tendency to destroy or impair devotion, some such evil fruits should have been pointed to. Who that has discovered from prophetic numbers, the Coming of the Lord to be near, has prayed less, or been less heavenly minded than they were before? The facts are directly the reverse; for among the thousands who have really believed that these numbers terminate about the present time, not one can be found that has not prayed more, and given more of his time and talents to aid in promoting the eternal welfare of his fellow men. Again, before it is proved that those numbers are "mysterious" it should first be shown that a part of the revelation which God has given us, is no revelation. Some proof from Scripture should have also been adduced, that they can not be understood. Again, why ought we "to be aware that none can know the time?" Certainly not because our Saviour said (Mat. 24: 33) "So likewise ye, when ye shall see all these things, [the signs previously enumerated] KNOW that it is near at the doors. Again, (Dan. 2: 44) "In the days of these kings [the divided state of the fourth kingdom] shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom."—Again, at the time God is to make the "effect of every vision" cease, and make an end of "prolonging" his words; there is to be a proverb in the land, "Saying, the days are prolonged and every vision faileth." (Ezek. 12: 22.)

Again, when the Lord comes to award the hypocrite his portion; the evil servant is to be saying in his heart, "my Lord delayeth his coming," and shall be "smiting his fellow servants, and eating and drinking with the drunken," or furnishing such doctrines as suit the appetite of the ungodly. Mat. 24: 48—51. Again, (1 Pet. 1: 8—12) we are told of a salvation that was to come at the end of our faith; of which "the prophets enquired and searched diligently. * * * Searching what, (time) or what manner of time the spirit of Christ which was in them did signify, when it testified beforehand the sufferings of Christ, and the glory that should follow. Unto whom it WAS REVEALED that not unto themselves but UNTO US they did minister, &c. * * * wherefore * * * * * hope to the end for the grace that is to be brought unto you at the revelation of Jesus Christ." Compare this with Dan. 12: 4, "But thou, O Daniel, shut up the words, and seal the book, to the time of the end: many shall run to and fro, and knowledge shall be increased." Some of the most eminent men for learning and talent, among whom are Dr. Clark, and Dr. Gill, have given us as the sense of this passage, that, though the visions were shut up—not understood; Yet, the time would come, just before the end, when there would be such a searching as to discover the true meaning.

Again, Peter informs us, (2 Pet. 3: 2—4) that he had written for the benefit of those that should live in the last days, and that there would arise scoffers walking after their own lusts, "and saying, where is the promise of his Coming?" &c. So we are taught by signs, Political, Physical, and Moral, something about the time; so that there is, to say the least, "a satisfactory approximation towards" it. Again, you say,

"It may be asked if the 2300 days did not begin with the decree to rebuild Jerusalem? We have read over and over again the alleged demonstration of it; but never did we know a thing less proven. They say it is evident from the fact that seventy weeks are "cut off?"—We doubt if this is said at all, for the verb has COGNATE MEANINGS. But if it means "cut off," there is as much evidence that they were cut off from all time past or future, as that they were cut off from the 2300 days."

'Never did we know a thing less proven," are your words, and words of fearful responsibility; for they may convey the idea, that the claims of "Simon," the "Sorcerer," or the Pope of Rome, to Divine honors are better established.

We will look again at the prophecy, to see whether your statement rests upon a sure foundation. In the vision of Daniel viii. we have the following symbols:—1st, A Ram with two horns; 2d, A He Goat with a notable horn between his eyes; 3d, Four horns upon this Goat, which came up towards the four winds of heaven; 5th, A little horn that waxed exceeding great; 6th, The Two Thousand Three Hundred Days, which was the length of the vision. These are all the symbols contained in the vision. (Ver. 16.) "And I heard a man's voice between the banks of Ulai which called and said, Gabriel, MAKE this man to understand the vision." Will the angel Gabriel disobey the command of the Highest? Oh, no. If he does, he will be "reserved in everlasting chains," like other "angels who kept not their first estate."

He proceeds to make Daniel understand the vision; yet, Daniel tells us in the last verse of that chapter, "I was astonished at the vision, but NONE understood it." Has Gabriel then obeyed the command to make him understand? We will follow after him and see how he has done his work. (Ver. 20.) "The Ram which thou sawest having two horns are the kings of Media and Persia." This is certainly understood. (Verse 21.)—"The rough goat is the king of Grecia, and the great horn is the first king." This is made very plain.—(Verse 23.) The four horns are the four divisions of the Grecian power. All is plain thus far. (Verse 23–25.) The EXCEEDING GREAT HORN is a power that sprang up during the existence of the four divisions of the Grecian kingdom, more mighty than either of the powers that preceded it—was to stand up against the Prince of Princes, but be broken without hand.—If the language of Gabriel, thus far, did not MAKE Daniel understand, then it was not in the power of language to do it. But here Gabriel's explanation stops, while there is one symbol remaining, (the 2300 days.) He has not yet obeyed the command, and is bound to pay Daniel another visit, or be charged with disobedience. Where shall we look for him to conclude his mission? We will read along into the next chapter,—not into the next subject, for this division of the prophecy into chapters is but the work of man. Daniel with his astonishment, and lack of understanding the vision, begins to pray; and he prays for the cleansing of the sanctuary, which had been promised in the vision, (chap. ix. 17, 18, and chap. viii, 13, 14.) While he was praying, (verse 21,) Gabriel, the same angel that was commanded to make him understand, comes again: What for? Let him answer. (Verse 22.) "O Daniel, I am now come forth to give the skill and UNDERSTANDING"—not a new vision. (Verse 23.) "I am come to show thee; for thou art greatly beloved: therefore understand the matter, and consider the vision"—not the prayer, for this chapter is made up of Daniel's prayer; but the vision in chapter viii., that he, nor none else understood.—(Verse 27.)

He had explained all the symbols but the 2300 days, and we should naturally expect him to begin with his explanation where he left off; nor are we disappointed, for his first words are, (ver. 24,) "Seventy weeks," &c. He left off at the time, and now begins with it. It is an explanation—making him know about the vision;—therefore the seventy weeks cannot be other than a part of the time of the (2300) day vision, appropriated for several purposes which he names.

This is a clear case, whether the verb means "cut off," or "determined:" although we have the combined testimony of Professors Stuart, Whiting, and the best Hebrew scholars generally, that the verb only means "cut off," or "cut out." So if it has "cognate meanings," it becomes your duty to enlighten the mind, at least, of the learned Professor of Andover College.

With this clear evidence before you, that the ninth chapter of Daniel is an explanation of the eighth, how could you say, "There is as much evidence that they (the 70 weeks) were cut off from all time past or future, as that they were cut off from the period of 2300 days"? The casual reader can but observe a want of caution in this statement.

But by way of reference again to the expression,—"Never did we know a thing less proven," &c., you will mark the angel's explanation, while making Daniel understand. "Seventy weeks" of the vision were appropriated: (verse 24.) But "understand" further.—(Verse 25.) "From the going forth of the commandment to restore and to build Jerusalem, unto Messiah the Prince shall be seven weeks and threescore and two weeks"—(69 weeks)—the other week, in ver. 27, making up the seventy in verse 24, is occupied for the same purposes, named in the last verse. "Never a thing less proven." "Tell it not in Gath, publish it not in the streets of Askelon, lest the daughters of the Philistines rejoice, lest the daughters of the uncircumcised triumph"—that one of the most vigilant watchmen on Zion's walls, gravely calls in question the ability of Gabriel to fulfil his promise, in making Daniel understand. Again you remark:—

"Yet if cut off from 2300 days, it is doubtful if the decree of Artaxerxes is the commencement of the seventy weeks: The language of Daniel is 'Seventy weeks are determined upon thy people and thy holy city,' (ix. 24.) Then in the 26th verse it is added, 'The people of the prince that shall come shall destroy the city,' &c. We see no reason why the destruction of the city should be excluded from the period of seventy weeks. Nothing in the language of the prophecy warrants its exclusion, which shows how uncertain are all castings up, to determine the year of this or that event, even if (as is far from truth,) it were agreed what the events shall be when they come."

In saying "It is doubtful if the decree of Artaxerxes is the commencement of the 70 weeks," you manifest a willingness to abandon one of the strongest positions that has been relied upon for centuries, to prove the Divine authenticity of the Scriptures. But saying nothing of this, can you admit that the prophet might have been pointed into a cloud of thick darkness, for light, by one who came to make him understand? Where else can we find such decree, but in the reign of Artaxerxes?—The vision commenced with the "Ram pushing"—the height of the prosperity of the Medo-Persian kingdom: and when Daniel was made to understand the time of the commencement of that vision, he was pointed to a decree that was issued by the reigning monarch of that kingdom, and at just such a time in the history of its affairs, as is represented by the "Ram pushing," &c.—But if there is still a doubt as to this being the decree whence the vision began, take the testimony of Jesus, (Mark i. 15,) "The time is FULFILLED," &c. No time had been given to be fulfilled reaching TO the Messiah, but the 69 weeks, (Dan. ix. 25.) According to the best chronology, this was about 483 years from the aforesaid decree, or as many years as there are days in 69 weeks.

Here is a good "reason why the destruction of the city should be excluded from the period." Jesus said the time was fulfilled 47 years before that event took place. Again, the destruction of the city is not named in verse 24, among the events for which the 70 weeks were "determined" or "cut off." "To finish the transgression" was the first event, which the Jews did, by their rejection and crucifixion of the Savior. The doom of the city was sealed among the events of the seventy weeks, as may be seen from Matt. xxiii. 38: "Behold your house is left unto you desolate," &c. Its destruction is then spoken of in Daniel ix. 26, as an event that should follow: "The people of the Prince that shall come shall destroy the city," which language would have been a useless repetition, had that destruction of the city been brought to view in verse 24.

Whatever difference of opinion there may be about the events that mark the termination of the vision, you will, no doubt, grant, that the "sanctuary" will then "be cleansed," and that it will bring the LAST END of indignation against God's people. This is sufficient authority for you and I to be engaged in the work of "comforting" God's people, in view of their eternal deliverance.

I pass to notice the following:—

"But is it not said, the reader may ask, that the wise shall understand? Yes, and the wise have always understood. Daniel was wise. But what did he understand? That he should 'stand in his lot at the end of the days.' To understand this is true wisdom, and it is wisdom enough. The martyrs were wise. But as to these dates of the prophecies, in the sense now imposed upon them, it is certain that they understood them not. Nor is it any part of wisdom thus to understand them."

If the position you have here assumed were true, then Daniel should have been told, "The wise shall understand" all that is here written, except the answers to the question, "How long the vision?" and "How long shall it be to the end of these wonders?" With this view, as to the matter of edifying Daniel, he might as well have been told he should "stand in his lot" at the end of a steamboat, as at the "end of the days." An understanding of what Daniel's lot is, or any other part of the subject here brought to view, can be quite as easily obscured as the periods. If they were not among the things to be understood, as to the time of their commencement and end, it will be difficult to discover what the wise were to understand. Let the fact be admitted that the periods were included, and all is plain. A question is asked, and repeated, "How long," &c. An answer is given in time—a plain statement made, that at the time of the end "many shall run to and fro and knowledge shall be increased." Supposing you, my brother, had been the kind angel, sent to "inform" Daniel, and make him understand; and while engaged in the discharge of your duty, a question is proposed by some one of the shining hosts, which you are called upon to answer for Daniel's benefit. It is as follows:—"How long shall it be to the end of these wonders?"—Daniel waits in solemn silence to know when he is to share a better resurrection; and you proceed to answer Daniel, IT IS no PART OF WISDOM [for you] THUS TO UNDERSTAND." Think you that Daniel would feel as though he could obey the command to "rest," under such circumstances? Again, you say:—

"If a man would lose what wisdom he has, be it much or little, let him turn from the practical or devotional books of Scripture, and begin to pry into those reserved mysteries."

We have seen a manifest difference between yourself and Daniel's instructor; we here again observe a difference between you and Paul. He says all Scripture is profitable, &c. You tell us a part of it is not only unprofitable, but absolutely destructive to true wisdom.—Where has Paul or Peter, James or John, or even Jesus, thus cautioned us? "Reserved mysteries" the Revelator tells us (Rev. x. 4,) were not written. "Seal up the things which the seven thunders uttered, and write them not," while he tells us (ch. xxii. 10,) "Seal not the sayings of the prophecy of this book." John was doubtless right, and my dear brother Hamlin is doubtless wrong. I almost tremble when I quote the following:

"Was not Jesus wise; and did he not understand the the prophecy of Daniel as well as we can hope to understand it? If so, remember that with the prophet's numbers all before him, he could say of "that day and hour knoweth no man, not even the Son, but the Father."—He who can presume to have ascertained from the prophecies of Daniel, what Jesus could not learn from them, is a bold interpreter of Scripture."

Yes, I tremble for the fate of any man, who can coolly charge the Lord of heaven and earth with any degree of ignorance. Jesus says (Matt. xxiv. 15,) "When ye therefore shall see the abomination of desolation spoken of by Daniel the prophet, (whoso readeth LET him understand:" "The abomination of desolation," as such, is only spoken of by Daniel in xi. 31 and xii. 11, in which last place the TIME of its duration is given, and Daniel is told "the wise shall understand." Jesus points to the same text and gives a broad commission, not only to the learned, but "Whoso readeth LET him understand." He then follows down through the history of the days (years) to their end, and adds, But of that day and hour knoweth (maketh known, Gr.) no man.—He gives a general commission for all that read, to understand those numbers, and furthermore, adds the SIGNS by which we might know the event at the door. In your fears that others may be chargeable with assuming too much knowledge, you seem to have forgotten that there is a danger in being "ever learning, yet never coming to the knowledge of the truth." Again, you remark:

"'But does not the apostle say, You are not in darkness that the day should overtake you as a thief.' Yes, and why shall it not overtake them as a thief? Because they know the time? No. But because not knowing the time, they were ALWAYS watching. 'Watch therefore,' says the Savior, 'for (because) ye know not the hour wherein the Son of Man cometh.'"

Your remarks have already conveyed the idea that within a certain (large) circle of time, we may tell when some future events will take place; and the day and hour is the largest circle of time in God's book, within which the event of the Lord's coming is so hidden as to preclude our searching for it. So we are commanded to watch! Watch for what? His coming, of course, for it is that, the hour of which, is hidden from us. Will you inform us how a person can WATCH for a thing he does not expect? Here stands a person by the railroad with his valise in his hand watching.—What for? For the arrival of the cars? Yes. Does he expect them? Oh, no, he sees no more signs of their arrival now, than there was a hundred years ago, yet he watches, not because he expects, but simply because he was commanded to. Can the term "watch" mean what is expressed by it, in such case?

I copy the following extract for the purpose of making a remark upon its unfairness:

"The reader may say, "none profess to know the day nor the hour." We answer, they PROFESS TO KNOW that the Son of man will come between the 21st of March, 1843 and 21st of March, 1844. Now if he does not come until the 20th of March, 1844, will they not then know the day? And if he should not come till twenty-three hours of the 21st of March, 1844, are passed, would they not know the hour?"

When you say "they profess to know the Son of man will come between the 21st of March, 1843 and the 21st of March, 1844," you say what we do not profess to KNOW, but to BELIEVE. You do us injustice by setting "knowledge" in the place of "faith." Thousands have done, and still do, hold it as a matter of faith that the prophetic periods expire within the aforesaid time. The clearest evidence of things in the future, leaves all such things as matters of faith, and such they will remain until they become matters of fact.

We have always been apprised that there might be an error of days, weeks, and perhaps months, in the chronology of the last 2300 years; but that there is an error of a year, or even a month, has not yet been shown. It has never been the design of Second Advent believers to fix upon days or weeks.

The first published lectures of Mr. Miller have this title page: "Evidences from Scripture and History, of the Second personal appearing of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ upon the earth about the year 1843." Our hopes of seeing Jesus soon are not built upon so precarious a tenure as to be affected by a day. Still we believe that the year, or about the year of the Second Advent, is taught in the Bible. This has been clearly proved, and the position stands triumphant as far as Scripture argument is concerned. If opposers triumph, it will be because time will furnish an argument that they have frequently attempted, and as frequently failed to give. Not knowing the DAY or HOUR, we shall strive through grace to WATCH until the Lord comes; and IF indeed we should pass the last of the prophetic periods without hearing the joyful notes of the last trump, (which as yet, we have no reasons for believing) we shall still find it a pleasant duty, although reproached for giving credence to ALL that the prophets have spoken, still to "watch," believing we have nothing marked in the prophecy to look for, but "the coming of the Son of Man, and the deliverance of the saints." Who in these days thinks of calling in question the ability of a good navigator, by the aid of a good chart, to tell about the distance across the Atlantic? Yet, who would not denounce such navigator after he had run out his reckoning, if he should put about, saying there is no land? A candid public, with the evidences we have given them, as to the termination of prophetic periods, should be ready to condemn us, if in such case we did not look even more earnestly than we now do, for our coming Lord. The closing part of your article I consider contradictory to one of the most important positions you have laid down, and lest I might, through a misunderstanding, do it serious injustice, I will here give the two last paragraphs entire:

"But do you not think we should study the 'time of the end?'" We think the true Christian is deeply convinced that there is a coming general judgment. But we do not consider it any part of faith to believe that the judgment will be this year, next year, or any given year. Faith looks at Christ on the cross. The apostle says, "We preach Christ crucified," (not Christ's Advent.) He says, "God forbid that I should glory save in the cross," (not in the Advent.) Jesus says, "As Moses lifted up the serpent in the wilderness, even so must the Son of Man be lifted up, that whosoever believeth on him," (lifted up, not coming down.) Satan cares not what else we do, if he can divert us from the cross. He knows it is by the cross, not by the advent, that "we are crucified to the world and the world unto us." Did we wish to make sure of a preparation to meet the Saviour at his coming, we would never once look at the figures of Daniel or of John; but we would make it our sole business, day and night, to gaze at the cross. And we are satisfied from what we have seen and felt, that when our Lord does come, they will be best prepared to meet him, who studied the history of the crucifixion more and the prophetic numbers less.

"But," says the reader, "would you not wish at the moment of Christ's advent, to be looking for him in the heavens?" No. Others may find it edifying to be gazing into the heavens. We do not. The cross, not the clouds, attracts our gaze. The death of Jesus not his advent, melts our heart. And if in our day the Saviour should come to judgment, may we, like Paul, "be glorying in nothing but the cross!"

In contrast with this singular language of yours, I shall give some of the words of the apostle, who, by you, stands charged with preaching "not Christ's Advent."

1 Thess. 5: 23. "And the very God of peace sanctify you wholly; and I pray God your whole spirit, and soul, and body, be preserved blameless unto [not the cross] the Coming of our Lord Jesus Christ."

1 Cor. 1: 7, 8. "So that ye come behind in no gift; waiting for [not the cross] the Coming of our Lord Jesus Christ:"

"Who shall also confirm you unto the end, blameless in the day of our Lord Jesus Christ."

Phil. 3: 20. "For our conversation is in heaven; [there is no cross there] from whence we look for the Saviour, the Lord Jesus Christ, who shall change our vile bodies," &c.

Col. 3: 2—4. "Set your affections on things above, not [on the cross] on things on the earth.

"For ye are dead, [crucified by the cross] and your life is hid with Christ in God.

"When Christ who is our life shall appear, [not before] then shall ye also appear with him in glory."

1 Thess. 1: 10. "And to wait for his Son from heaven, whom he raised from the dead, even Jesus, which delivered us from the wrath to come."

1 Thess. 2: 19. "For what is our hope or joy, or crown of rejoicing? Are not even ye in the presence of our Lord Jesus Christ at his Coming?"

1 Thess. 3: 12, 13. "And the Lord make you to increase and abound in love one toward another, and toward all men even as we do toward you:

"To the end [not that you should gaze at the cross forever] he may establish your hearts unblameable in holiness before God, even our father, at the Coming of the Lord Jesus Christ with all his saints,"

1 Thess. 4: 15—18. "For this we say unto you by the word of the Lord, that we which are alive and remain unto the Coming of the Lord shall not prevent them which are asleep.

"For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the arch-angel, and with the trump of God. And the dead in Christ shall rise first: Then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air: And so shall we ever be with the Lord.

Wherefore, comfort one another with these words." Paul preached not only "the Advent," but preached it as a comforting doctrine. He never preached "the cross" as a comforting, but as a crucifying doctrine—yet it was necessary, because, by it, a death to the world and sin was affected.

2 Thess. 1: 10. "Who shall be punished. * * * When he shall come to be glorified in his saints, and to be admired in all them that believe (because our testimony among you was believed) in that day."

2 Thess. 2: 10. "Now we beseech you, brethren by the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ, and by our gathering together unto him, that ye be not soon shaken in mind," &c.

1 Tim. 6: 14. "That thou keep this commandment without spot, unrebukable, until the appearing of our Lord Jesus Christ."

2 Tim. 4: 8. "Henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous Judge, shall give me at that day: and not to me only, but unto all them also that love his appearing." [nothing said of loving the cross.]

How then, Paul, shall we spend the time of our sojourning here, for our brother Hamline has told us we must not do it looking for the Advent, but at the cross? Let Paul answer.

Titus. 2: 11—13. "For the grace of God that bringeth salvation, hath appeared to all men, teaching us, that denying ungodliness and worldly lusts, we should live soberly, righteously and Godly, in this present world; LOOKING for that blessed hope, and the GLORIOUS APPEARING of the Great God, and our Saviour Jesus Christ."

So far from Paul not preaching the Advent, it was the prominent doctrine of his whole course of suffering, while engaged in the work of the ministry. Mark his language when arraigned before the Council:

Acts. 23: 6. "Of the hope and resurrection of the dead am I called in question." Again, when brought before the Governor. Acts. 24: 14—16. He tells them his "heresy" was "believing all things which are written in the law and the prophets"—that he had hope of the resurrection which they allowed,—and therein he exercised himself, &c.

Heb. 11: 35, "And others were tortured, not accepting deliverance; that they might obtain a better resurrection."

Rom. 8: 23, "We groan waiting for the adoption, to wit: the redemption of our bodies"

Jesus said "Whosoever will be my disciple let him deny himself and take up, not 'gaze at' the cross."

None can appreciate the cross more highly than those who are looking for the Lord; for by it their blessed hope has been procured. The cross is suited to a state of infirmity, in which infirmaties Paul gloried, as well as in the cross; not that he desired nothing but infirmaties, but that through these he might be a partaker of the "glory that should follow." I have searched in vain for a scripture warrant that we should "make it our sole business day and night, to gaze at the cross."—To say the least, the doctrine of the Advent was more peculiar to the Apostle Paul than this. His testimony alone, is here placed by the side of yours, for many eyes to look upon, that will soon gaze upon our descending Lord. Let me add one testimony more. It is the testimony of Jesus. He gathers his disciples together—instructs them upon the points of danger, peril and suffering, through which they, and their successors were to pass before reaching their eternal rest—points them to signs that would foretell their "great deliverer nigh," and adds, (Luke 21: 28,) "And when these things begin to come to pass, then LOOK UP, and lift up your heads: for your redemption draweth nigh." Time rolls on its resistless course—the signs appear—the saints lift up their heads rejoicing. The command "look up" is repeated—thousands cheerfully obey. But hark! a jarring voice is heard. It is the voice of L. L. Hamline, sounding loud and strong, from an elevated post on Zion's walls, in fearless, stern reply, "Others may find it edifying to be gazing into the heavens. WE DO NOT." At that voice, which once, so oft proclaimed the Bridegroom nigh, multitudes of the dear saints hang their heads in mournful sadness. O my brother! turn again to the simple testimony of God's word, and you will be met with reproaches from an ungodly world, but can but meet heaven's choicest blessing. In your prayers for guidance and direction, pray, that if I have dealt upon you severer blows than has the blessed Saviour, and the Apostle Paul, I may be forgiven.

"PREPARE TO MEET THY GOD"!!

☞ Standing on the crumbling verge of 1843, and in the very last moments of probation, we implore your prayerful and critical perusal of these two pages. We are the more earnest in this, because in them is contained a scriptural clue to the time when this earth, and all its inhabitants, will pass from their temporal to their eternal state; which we most certainly believe cannot pass the end of next March. You may inquire, why we extend it beyond this year. We answer, because Moses, Daniel, Jesus, and John, through whom the prophetic numbers come to us, were all Hebrews; and it is well known their year ended about the time of the vernal equinox. We invite your attention by all that is blessed and glorious in the thought of everlasting happiness with God, and all that is doleful in the view of endless banishment from him. Think not, because we say we believe the end will not come before April, therefore you may go on in sin a little longer. No, no. We entreat you to prostrate yourself immediately before God, even before you finish reading this, and give your heart to him before the sound of the last trumpet shall declare, "Time shall be no longer;" for the day and hour of his coming is not revealed to mortals.

2 TIM. 3; 16, 17.—"All scripture is given by inspiration of God, and is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness; that the man of God may be perfect, thoroughly furnished unto all good works." Here is our warrant for looking into any part of the Holy Book in search of truth.

DANIEL informs us, ii. 19, 20, 29, that the great God revealed and made known secrets to the king and prophet, which were to take place hereafter, in the LATTER days. This ought to close every mouth which is disposed to say that we can know nothing of the future, after the great God hath made it known.

In looking further at this chapter, we see that the gold, silver, brass, and iron of the image, symbolise four kingdoms, each in turn exercising universal dominion; the stone cut out of the mountain without hands for the fifth, or the kingdom of heaven, before which all the preceding empires disappear by a catastrophe that grinds them to powder, so that the wind takes them away like chaff, that no place is found for them. How can complete destruction be set forth more perfectly than this? Has any such thing come upon the world since the days of Daniel? No. Then the stone has not smitten the image! it is yet future! Look out!! "Whosoever shall fall on this stone shall be broken; but on whomsoever it shall fall, it shall grind him to powder." Need the end of this world be set forth more clearly? And yet it is, in

THE VIIth CHAP. But because the fourth empire was to be disruptured, and exist for a season in the form of ten,—in which form it was to give birth to an eleventh, the most extraordinary politico-ecclesiastical power the world ever saw, which was to have the saints in its hands 1260 years, but was to make war and prevail against them, until the final catastrophe,—Therefore the same great events are introduced in this chapter under a different series of symbols, viz. four beasts, instead of four metals: a lion for Babylon, a bear for Persia, a leopard for Grecia, and a monster for the Roman. But now, lest the art and cunning of wicked men should succeed in explaining away the final catastrophe of the king's dream to mean something short of the end of this world, the stupendous and sublime scenes of the last JUDGMENT are delineated with a minuteness equalled only by the grandeur of the occasion. Daniel saw the earthly thrones cast down, the Ancient of Days sitting on His throne of fiery flame, with wheels of burning fire, preceded by a fiery stream; thousand thousands ministering unto him, and ten thousand times ten thousand standing before him, the JUDGMENT sat, and the books opened. Then he beheld, because of the voice of the great words which the horn spake; he beheld even till the beast was slain, and his body destroyed and given to the burning flame. A more complete parallel to the action of the stone upon the metallic image could not be given. Now, what is the immediate and obvious cause of this destruction? The great words of the horn, most certainly. Whose voice but that old Romanism's is now heard far above all the din and clatter of the nations or the sects? Reader, do you hear it? if you do, then you may be sure that this world will soon be given to the burning flame. As the next rising scene in this sublime drama, far in the back-ground, Daniel beholds the Son of Man coming on the clouds of heaven, who was brought near, and before the Ancient of Days, who gave him dominion, and glory, and a kingdom, that all nations, and languages, should serve him; whose dominion is an everlasting dominion, which shall not pass away, as all the preceding ones had, and his kingdom that which shall not be destroyed. But do you ask what people these are, and from whence they came, that constitute this universal, endless kingdom, after all the nations are given to the burning flame? Themselves shall answer. Rev. v: "For thou wast slain, and hast redeemed us to God, by thy blood, out of every kindred, and tongue, and people, and nation; and hast made us unto our God kings and priests; and we shall reign on the earth." There can be no mistake in the identity, for John has precisely the same numbers as Daniel. But as the length of these two visions, which we have gone over, is not given, so we have the

VIIIth AND IXth CHAPTERS, in which the first empire is omitted, the symbols again changed, the second and third empires expressly named and set forth by two domestic animals, and the fourth by a little horn, which waxed exceeding great, and which was finally broken without hand. Here we wish to say, that we need not go out of the Bible for a single item of the history needed to establish the succession of kingdoms in these visions. Daniel expressly tells the king of Babylon that he is the head of gold. Babylon (v. 28) was given to the Medes and Persians; and we are told (viii. 21) that the rough goat is the king of Grecia. The three first kingdoms are thus positively named; so we have only to see if the Bible tells us of one more, and if so, that must be the fourth. Luke (ii. 1) speaks of a power, which taxed the world. Aye, that is it! ROME! Now, Daniel is told that this vision, which encircles the Medo-Persian, Grecian, and fourth empires, is 2300 days long; that it extends to the time of the end; that it reaches to the last end of indignation; and that, at the time appointed, (2300 days,) the end shall be. But, after all Gabriel's explanations, Daniel says, none understood it. No wonder that he did not; for, after hearing the order given to Gabriel to make him understand it, and pondering over the idea how three such mighty empires could flourish, each one his season, and all to take place in a period of 2300 days, his astonishment is easily accounted for. But, like all true saints, he betakes himself to his knees and his holy books. O, how many of the true children have found light and comfort in these two ways! Flying swiftly, Gabriel is again at his side, talking with him, informing him, giving him skill and understanding of the matter, and shewing him the VISION. He proceeds to inform him that 490 of those days are determined (or cut off, as our learned opponents admit) for certain purposes, and to seal up the vision; then he gives him a starting point, the only one mentioned in the book, and without which "unto 2300 days" is of no force whatever; then he tells him that, in 69 weeks, the Messiah will make his appearance. Luke (iii. 23) informs us that Jesus began to be about 30 years of age when he began preaching. Mark (i. 15) informs us that the first of that preaching was, "The time is fulfilled." Now, as there is no other time given in the Bible but the 69 weeks for the Messiah to come, so they must have expired at this very time. Now, I find that both of these events are set down under A. D. 26. Here, on this solid rock, we can set our feet, and look back 483 years, to B. C. 457, and know for a certainty, that then the decree was issued to rebuild old Jerusalem. We can also know with the same degree of certainty, that, in 1817 years after the same point, Daniel's visions will end, and the New Jerusalem come in all its glory. This any one can see, by adding 26 and 1817 together, which make 1843. Or add 1817 to 483, and we have 2300, which is the whole vision. Then the stone will smite the image to powder, the fourth beast be given to the flames, the Son of Man come in the clouds, the exceeding great horn be broken without hands, the Judgment be set, and the books be opened, within four months of this date!!!! Reader, are you prepared to meet it? Thus we see that it is entirely immaterial at what point of time in the 70th week the crucifixion took place, whether in the middle or the very last day of it. How true it is, that God has given line upon line, precept upon precept! for, after going over the ground three times, he again sends to Daniel, but not in a vision; and his heavenly instructor says to him,

IN THE XIth CHAPTER, "I will show thee the truth." In the remainder of the book, he shows him all the important events of the whole vision, down to the time that the great prince Michael stands up to reign, when many of them that sleep in the dust of the earth shall awake, and the wise shall shine as the brightness of the firmament. Now, for the first time, it is made known to Daniel how Adam, Noah, Abraham, Moses, and David, could come into this endless kingdom, which was to be set up on earth; namely, by their rising from the dead. The 4th and 9th verses of the last chapter informs us, that the words, the book, are closed, shut up, and sealed, "till the time of the end." Can any candid man want any thing more than this, as a reason why it was not known, till the last fifty years, that Daniel's visions would end in 1843? Verses 4 and 10 inform us that, at the time of the end, many shall run to and fro; [what immense travelling in these days!] knowledge shall be increased; [think of the improvements in our day!] many shall be purified and made white, [how many have joined themselves to the churches since 1798!] and tried; [preaching the coming of Christ this year has most thoroughly tried this work, of what sort it is;] the wicked shall do wickedly, [no dispute on this!] and none of the wicked shall understand; [has any person seen any of the wicked, who understand that the Judgment would set this year, who continued to live in sin?] the wise shall understand; [if true second advent believers are not the truly poor in spirit that mourn, the meek that hunger and thirst after righteousness, are merciful, pure in heart, peace-makers, and those which are reviled and persecuted, and all manner of evil said against them falsely, who are?] The three last verses now demand our prayerful attention. Read them over and over, then fall upon your knees in prayer, and look at them again. If the papal church, which has shed the blood of more than fifty millions of men, women, and children, because they differed from her in matters of faith, is not "the abomination that maketh desolate," then you may search the world over for it in vain. If it is, then the "daily" must be Paganism; for that alone stood in the way of Papacy, and as soon as that was taken out of the way Papacy took its place.—A. D. 508 is the best authenticated date for this event that I can find; indeed, historical facts are very clear, that the last of the barbarian kings that had conquered Rome was converted to the Catholic faith, and the first papal war commenced this year. The first of these numbers covers the whole ground, from the taking away of the power of Paganism, in the city of Rome, to the taking away of the dominion of Papacy in the same place; this marks the commencement of the time of the end to be in 1798. The first of these numbers must mark the time to begin the last; if not, there is none given, and it is of course a dead letter, which we cannot admit for a moment. Beginning the two numbers together, and the first ending in 1798, the last must be about ended!! But what is this blessing upon those who wait, and come to the end of these days? and who are they? Paul shall answer: "We [saints] shall not all sleep, [die,] but we shall all be changed in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trump. Then we [saints] which are alive, and remain, shall be caught up together with them [risen saints] in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air." But do you say that many wicked will wait, and come to this same time? They will indeed come to it, to their everlasting sorrow; but it is only true saints who "wait for his Son from heaven."—Daniel is now told to go his way till the end be, for he should rest, ["Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord, for they rest from their labors,"] and stand in his lot at the end of the days. Entering upon his inheritance in the new earth, with all the saints, can alone be the meaning.

THE VII. TIMES OF LEV. XXVI. 18, 21, 24, 27. We see, in these verses, that God promised by Moses, that, if his people would not hearken to him, and do all his commandments, he would punish them seven times, which he repeats in these four verses. As a time, times, and half a time, are proved to be 1260 years by the fulfilment of three important prophecies, therefore, seven times must be 2520 years. Now take your dividers, and place one point on 1843; open them 2520 years, and the other point rests on B. C. 677. What took place this year, that would seem to mark this the right time to commence it? Manasseh, the king of Israel, was carried in chains a prisoner to Babylon. If making a prisoner of that king was not "breaking the pride of their power," what would? The professed people of God have been in subjection to their enemies ever since; but, bless God, the seven times punishment of his people is nearly out, when "——thy foes shall oppress thee no more"

THE SEVEN TRUMPETS OF REV. At the time God gave this revelation to Jesus Christ, and signified it to John by his angel, the fourth or Roman empire was in the zenith of its glory; it had "devoured, broke in pieces, and stamped upon, the whole earth:" but its cup of iniquity was fast filling up. In the sounding of the four first is pointed out to us, in dreadful imagery, the gradual fall of the Western empire. The angel is here seen flying through the midst of heaven, saying, "Woe, woe, woe, to the inhabiters of the earth, by reason of the other trumpets which are yet to sound." The fifth and sixth proved to be woes indeed to the Eastern world; and, if the last should bring about the conversion of the world, it would be strange indeed, passing strange, that the last woe should be turned into one of the greatest blessings "to the inhabitants of the earth" that ever took place.

The first began to sound A. D. 395, and its effects were seen in the ravages of the Goths, under Alaric and Rhodogast, the first of which burned Rome in 410.

The second in 429, and its effects were seen in the terrible Vandal, Genseric, becoming master of the sea, and destroying the maritime power of Rome.

The third in 441, and its effects were seen in the ravages of Attila, surnamed the "Scourge of God."

The fourth in 493, and its effects were seen in Theodoric, the Ostrogoth, conquering Italy, and overturning the throne of the Cæsars.

The fifth, or first woe, in 629, brought up from the bottomless pit Mahomet, that scourge of the Eastern world, with its "smoke and locusts;" but they were "to hurt only those men who have not the seal of God in their foreheads," which they were to "torment five months," beginning July 27, 1299, when they had a king over them.

The sixth, or second woe, let the "two hundred thousand thousand" Turkish horsemen loose, which were permitted "to slay the third part of men, an hour, a day, a month, and a year," making in all, for these two specific periods, five hundred and forty-one years and fifteen days, which was completely fulfilled the 11th of August, 1840.

Here we ought to inquire the reason why the time is given for these two last trumpets, and none else. Can it be for anything else, than that God intended his people should know, by its fulfilment, about the period "that time should be no longer, the mystery of God finished, and the time of the dead, that they should be judged?" I think not. The regular gradation in the three woes should not be overlooked. The first was to torment and hurt men five months; the second was to slay and kill the third part of men for an hour, a day, a month, and a year; the third was to make the nations angry, bring in the wrath of God, and destroy them which destroy the earth.

THE ANNOUNCEMENT OF THE SEVENTH, CHAP. X. Imagination could hardly picture a more glorious personage. Who can help identifying him with the man that Daniel saw and described, in his 12th chapter, who was clothed in linen, upon the running waters of the river? Then the stream of time was flowing towards the ocean of ETERNITY; but now he is standing upon the still sea, and the firm earth; time is now to be no longer. Could he be any other than Michael, the great Prince? I think not. Important truth he then communicated to Daniel; but, after a lapse of six hundred years, and at the closing up of God's revelation to man, he appears to John, to inform him what shall take place when the seventh trumpet begins to sound. Why such a glorious person?—why clothed in such a glorious dress? why such commanding attitude? why such an awful oath? The tremendous importance of the theme and the occasion demanded it; and what is it? The cessation of time and the finishing of the mystery of God.

THE SOUNDING, CHAP. XI. "The kingdoms are become——" Here I wish to ask if the words "are become" can be construed to mean something that is TO BE?

"He shall reign forever and ever." This looks like some words of Daniel: "There was given him dominion, and glory, and a kingdom; his dominion is an everlasting dominion, and his kingdom that which shall not be destroyed." This cannot apply to a millennial church; for its advocates believe, that, at the end of 1000 years, the devil again gets the mastery.

"Has taken to himself his great power." God has now forsaken his covert, like the lion, and come out of his place, bound the strong man, and is now going to spoil his goods.

"The nations were angry." How this sets forth the state of things after the saints were caught up! When the salt is all gone; when every kind of stain is taken off; husbands and wives tearing one another to pieces; children beating their parents; men and women striping their unfaithful pastor; subscribers cutting in pieces their doughfaced editor; a menagerie of the most ferocious beasts let loose upon one another;—will but faintly set forth the awful scenes which will occur between the time that Isaiah 26: 20 is fulfilled, and the violent death of the last wicked man and woman.

"Thy wrath is come." How dare men contradict the twenty-four elders on their faces before God, and say the seventh trumpet is a signal for the conversion of the world?

"The time of the dead, that they should be judged!" Who can doubt that this is the DAY OF JUDGMENT?

"Reward the prophets, the saints, and them that fear thy name." Yes, Job shall see his Redeemer in his flesh; Daniel shall stand in his lot; Abraham shall enter the city which hath foundations; Moses shall not be cut short of Canaan; Eli's neck shall be restored; David's sin shall be forgotten; Paul's thorn is exchanged for a crown; Stephen's wounds are all healed; John has entered upon what he saw in vision.

"Destroy them which destroy or corrupt the earth." Now, oh my soul, what a change is come on the scene of thy contemplation! Instead of the glory and inexpressible joy we last considered, here "all the beasts and birds are gathered to eat the flesh of all men, both free and bond, both small and great." [Rev. 19: and Ezek. 30.] Now, "the Lord will call for a sword upon all the inhabitants of the earth;" "he will plead with all flesh;" "evil shall go forth from nation to nation, and a great whirlwind shall be raised up from the coasts of the earth, and the slain of the Lord shall be from one end of the earth to the other; they shall not be lamented, neither gathered nor buried; they shall be dung upon the ground." [Jer. 25.] Now, "the Lord maketh the earth empty, and waste;" it is "clean dissolved," and "utterly spoiled," and turned "upside down;" and the inhabitants are burned;" now "he will punish the host of high ones, and kings of the earth upon the earth."—[Isa. 24.] Now is "the day of the Lord's vengeance;" "The streams of the earth are turned into pitch, and the dust thereof into brimstone, and the land burning pitch." [Is. 34.] Now "the Lord will bring this plague upon all people;" viz., "their flesh shall consume away while they stand upon their feet; their eyes shall consume away in their holes, and their tongues shall consume away in their mouth." [Zech. 14.] The day has now come, "that shall burn as an oven, when all the proud, yea, all that do wickedly," "shall be burned up, root and branch," and shall be "ashes under the soles" of the feet of those that fear my name, saith the Lord of hosts. [Mal. 4.]

SIGNS OF THIS DAY. In Joel 2: 30, 31, God says, "he will show wonders in the heavens, and in the earth, blood and fire, and pillars of smoke; the sun shall be turned into darkness, and the moon into blood, before the great and terrible day of the Lord come." Matthew, Mark and Luke speak of about the same things as Joel; John says nothing about them in his gospel, but is permitted to see the same things, in vision, at the opening of the sixth seal. All these things have taken place within the memory of many now living: a great earthquake was felt nearly all over the globe, just before the dark day and night of May, 1780, which I need not speak of, as we have all heard old people say so much about it. Blood, and fire, and pillars of smoke, I myself witnessed six or eight winters ago, when standing on the Western Avenue; suddenly a splendid centre-piece was formed in the zenith, from which radiated in all directions the most splendid colors, ranging from the purest light to the deepest crimson. In London it was so brilliant that it drew out the fire department, who horsed their engines, and galloped off towards the supposed scene of conflagration. In November, 1833, I stood in the middle of the Common, and in every direction, emanating apparently from the same point in the heavens, I beheld with profound amazement, the "stars of heaven falling to the earth!" Why will not men believe this is what Joel and Jesus foretold, and which John in vision saw? No sane man could suppose that the prophecy meant that the great planets would come tumbling on to our little globe, like mountains falling on a mole-hill. And certainly, no one would think for a moment that the fixed stars, which are suns to other systems, would come rushing down upon this speck of matter. It could be fulfilled in no other way than this. In addition to these signs, Luke adds others, which are, upon the earth distress of nations and perplexity; the sea also, in great commotion, and men also, anxiously looking for some great event coming upon the earth: these have been all strikingly fulfilled within a few years past. The next thing all three of the Evangelists agree in; which is, the powers of the heavens shaken. What this is, I suppose remains to be seen. Matthew here says that the sign of the Son of man will appear, and all the tribes of the earth mourn. Now as this mourning takes place as soon as this sign appears, so we are pretty sure that all are convinced that Christ is coming, some space of time before he is actually seen. Now again, all three unite and say, "then shall they see the Son of man coming in the clouds, with power and great glory." Amen, even so come Lord Jesus. And now, dear reader,

IN CONCLUSION, let me ask, are you prepared for this momentous scene? If not, delay not a moment in making your peace with God; for no man can tell how soon the door of mercy will close. What an awful moment this!! enveloped in the "quickly" between the second and third woes!! four months must finish Daniel's vision, and the fifth kingdom come in all its glory; the very last sands of the 2300 days running out; iniquity is abounding; the love of many has waxed cold; knowledge has increased; the power of the holy people is scattered: many have been purified and made white; the gospel has been published in all the world; the church is in her Laodicean state; Ottoman supremacy is gone; and, of course, the seventh trumpet must be near sounding; perilous times have come; professors are lovers of themselves more than lovers of God. Again, I ask, Are you ready? Are you living for God or for yourself, for heaven or for earth? Will you risk endless torments for a few month's earthly pleasure? How can you endure everlasting burnings? How can you forego everlasting glory? Are you gratifying appetite, pride, vanity, temper, or lust? Are you envious, covetous, avaricious, or ambitious? If you are, then you are in a fair way to be very soon "ashes, under the soles of the feet of the saints," and your soul shut up in the bottomless pit.—Oh, delay not a moment, but give up your soul into the hands of Christ! Repent of, and forsake all your sins; believe in him; love him; obey him; delight in him and his people; pray without ceasing, in the closet, and in the family; deny self; seek the company of saints; shun the company of the scornful, and very soon you will join in the grand shout of victory, with all the redeemed, "Lo, this is our God; we have waited for him, and he will save us: this is the LORD." Amen and Amen.

LEWIS HERSEY.

Boston, December 20, 1843.

NOTE.—The 2300 days begin IN the year 457, that is, 456 years and a fraction before the Christian era. Of course, they do not end till 1843 years and a fraction of that era have expired. The same principle should apply to the 2520 years. The JEWISH YEAR does not end till March or April. On this point, see a tract on the Time of the End, which will soon be issued.

THE "LITTLE HORN" OF DAN. 8TH, NOT ANTIOCHUS, BUT ROME.

1. Sir Isaac Newton says that a "horn of a beast is never taken for a single person: it always signifies a new kingdom; and the kingdom of Antiochus was an old one."

2. Antiochus reigned over one of the four horns. But the little horn was a fifth under its proper kings. This horn was at first a little horn, but it waxed exceeding great towards the south, and toward the east, and toward the pleasant land. This was true of ROME. But so did NOT Antiochus. His kingdom, on the contrary, was weak, and tributary to the Romans; and he did NOT enlarge it.

3. The little horn was to arise in the latter time of the kingdom of the four horns.—But Antiochus was the eighth in the Syrian line of kings, which numbered twenty-five, and he therefore could not be in the latter time of that kingdom.

4. The little horn was to arise when the transgressors had come to the FULL. But the transgressions of the Jews had not come to the full in the time of Antiochus, nor till they had crucified the "PRINCE of princes," 197 years after the death of Antiochus.

5. The little horn was to be "a king of fierce countenance and understanding dark sentences." This was what Moses predicted of the Romans, (Deut. 28: 49, 50) "a nation whose tongue thou shalt not understand, a nation of fierce countenance." But this was not characteristic of Antiochus.—On the contrary, Rollin describes him as silly, stupid and foolish in the extreme. We are told that he was very much given to drinking; that he squandered away a great part of his revenues in excess and debauch; and that, when intoxicated with liquor, he would frequently scour up and down the city; he used to go and bathe himself in the public baths with the common people, and committed such extravagances as made every body despise him. [See An. His. B. 19. C. 2. S. 2.

6. The power of this "HORN" was to be MIGHTY, but not by his own power. This was true of Rome, whose generals derived all their power from the people. But Antiochus was only mighty in iniquity and folly, and acted independently of any restraint, or external aid.

7. It is said of this HORN, "and he shall destroy wonderfully." Antiochus destroyed about 80,000 Jews. But ROME, in a single siege, destroyed ONE MILLION ONE HUNDRED THOUSAND of that nation, and scattered the remnant into all countries.

8. It is said of this HORN, "He shall PROSPER and practise." Thus did ROME. But Antiochus was frightened out of Egypt by a mere message of the Romans, and afterwards routed and baffled by the Jews.

9. This HORN was to DESTROY the mighty and holy people,—the Jews. That nation was destroyed by the ROMANS, A. D. 70, after Antiochus had been dead 234 years.

10. This HORN magnified himself even to the host, and stood up against the PRINCE of princes; but Antiochus died 164 years before the PRINCE of princes was born; while the Romans did fulfil this prediction, in crucifying the LORD OF GLORY.

11. This HORN was to cast down the place of the sanctuary, which Antiochus did NOT, as he left it standing. But this was done by the ROMANS.

12. To give both the sanctuary and the host to be trodden under foot by this HORN, the vision was to continue 2300 days. According to Faber, Prideaux, Mede, Scott, Bishop Newton, Sir Isaac Newton, and the universal opinion of our standard Protestant commentators, Daniel's prophetic days are years. But the profanation of the temple by Antiochus did not continue so many natural days. These days were to extend to the last end of the indignation, and the indignation is not yet at an end. They were to continue till the sanctuary should be cleansed; and Gabriel informs Daniel, (ix. 27,) that for the overspreading of abominations, he shall make it desolate even until the consummation, and that determined shall be poured upon the desolate. The sanctuary is not yet cleansed; nor can it be till the consummation.

13. Of the ram, he-goat, and this horn, there is a regular gradation. Persia, which extended from India to Ethiopia, over ONE HUNDRED AND TWENTY-SEVEN PROVINCES, is simply called great. Grecia, of which it is said, "the third kingdom shall bear rule OVER ALL THE EARTH," is called VERY GREAT. But the HORN, which represents the succeeding power, is said to have waxed EXCEEDING GREAT, even greater than the preceding powers. The natural gradation would therefore be,

| GREAT. | VERY GREAT. | EXCEEDING GREAT. |
| PERSIA. | GRECIA. | ROME. |

How absurd and ludicrous would be

| GREAT. | VERY GREAT. | EXCEEDING GREAT. |
| PERSIA. | GRECIA. | ANTIOCHUS. |

The above considerations render it morally certain that not Antiochus, who was once an hostage in Rome, and paid tribute to the Romans all his days, but ROME, that EXACTED tribute of him, is the POWER symbolized by the HORN of Dan. 8th, that waxed EXCEEDING GREAT.

Many of our opponents rest their eternal all upon the application of this horn to Antiochus; and how clearly is it misapplied!—Reader, be not deceived.

To show still further, that the power of Papacy, which is to last till "broken without hand," is included in the symbol of this "horn" we again introduce the harmony of Dan. 2: 7: and 8.

| [The ten kingdoms only, out of which this power arose are here brought to view.] | "And behold, in this horn were eyes like the eyes of a man, and a mouth that spoke very great things, whose look was more stout than his fellows." (ver. 8. 20.) | "And through his policy also he shall cause craft to prosper in his hand, and he shall magnify himself in his heart, and by peace he shall destroy many." |
| [The little horn being synonymous with the beast that succeeds the dragon, in Rev. 13, and the dragon being the government that sought the destruction of Christ. See Rev. 12. It cannot, of course, apply to any government that existed before the Roman.] | The same horn made war with the saints, and prevailed against them, until the Ancient of Days came, and judgment was given to the saints of the Most High. And the time came that the saints possessed the kingdom. (ver. 22.) | "It cast down the truth to the ground. It waxed great even against the host of heaven, and cast down some of the host and of the stars to the ground and stamped upon them." (ver. 10, 12) "Magnified himself against the PRINCE of the host" "Shall destroy the mighty and the holy people."—"Stand up against the PRINCE OF PRINCES," (the Lord Jesus Christ) So did the Roman power. The "little horn" here embraces pagan as well as papal Rome. |
| THE END. "A stone was cut out without hands, which smote the image upon his FEET, that were of iron and clay, and broke them to pieces.—Then was the iron and the clay, the brass, the silver, and the gold, broken to pieces together, and became like the chaff of the summer threshing floors. And the wind carried them away that no place was found for them." (v. 24, 25.) | THE END. "The Ancient of Days did sit, whose garment was white as snow and the hair of his head like the pure wool, his throne was like the fiery flame, and his wheels as burning fire. A fiery stream issued and came forth from before him: thousand thousands ministered unto him, and ten thousand times ten thousand stood before him: THE JUDGMENT WAS SET, and the books were opened. The beast was slain, and his body DESTROYED, and given to the burning flame," (v. 9, 10, 11.) | THE END. "He shall be broken without hands," (ver. 24.) "The consummation and that determined shall be poured upon the desolate," or as the margin reads, "upon the desolator," ch. 9, 27. |
| THE FIFTH UNIVERSAL KINGDOM. "And the stone that smote the image became a great mountain, and filled the whole earth," (v. 35.) "The God of heaven shall set up a kingdom which shall never be destroyed, and the kingdom shall not be left to other people, but it shall break in pieces and consume all these kingdoms, and it shall stand FOREVER." | THE FIFTH UNIVERSAL KINGDOM. "The saints of the Most High shall take the kingdom and possess the kingdom forever, even FOREVER AND EVER." Judgment was given to the saints of the Most High, and the time came that the saints possessed the kingdom. (ver. 22, 27.) | THE FIFTH UNIVERSAL KINGDOM. "Then shall the sanctuary be cleansed." (ver. 14.)—"Understand O Son of Man, for at the time of THE END shall be the vision." (ver. 17.) ## A MOMENTARY RECOVERY FROM INSANITY.

Announcing the sudden death of Governor Gilmer, Judge Upshur, Hon. Virgil Maxcy, Com. Kennon and Col. Gardener, a voice comes by express from the head quarters of our National Government, which rationally says—"Great God!! what shadows we are, and what shadows we pursue."

SIGNS OF THE TIMES.

Luke xxi. 28.—And when these things begin to come to pass, then look up, and lift up your heads, for your redemption draweth nigh.

Reader, your attention is invited to a few thoughts on a momentous and thrilling event, viz: the Second Advent of Jesus Christ.—That he is soon to come as a Judge and a King, there is the clearest evidence in the word of God. Examine it for yourself, without delay, and be ready to have part in the first resurrection. You "can discern the face of the sky;" why not then, with equal clearness, "discern the signs of the times?" as both are equally marked by their appropriate characteristics, and both are equally intelligible. Why pretend ignorance of the lessons of instruction imparted by the one, any more than by the other? Remember that when an "adulterous generation" was addressed upon the general truths of the gospel, they demanded as a condition of their belief, "a sign from heaven," or that "one arise from the dead." On the same ground thousands now stand when addressed on the subject of those events which are soon to transpire, and ask, How can these things be? or, Where is the promise of his coming? When the truths on the subject of Christ's near approach are presented, as we believe they are taught in the word of God, even professors of religion, almost en masse accuse us of bringing "strange things to their ears," yea, virtually charge the Savior with an unmeaning message to his disciples, when he declared that they might know when their "redemption draweth nigh." But I pray you heed not the syren song of peace and safety. I ask why the arrangement of "signs," as the precursors of future events, with the predictions which announce them? Are they to be looked upon as an unmeaning ordinance of heaven? If so, then God is trifling with his creatures. We believe they have a meaning, and those which have already occurred, and those which are now transpiring, are solemnly and loudly proclaiming, "Behold the Bridegroom cometh, go ye out to meet him." There were signs which preceded the first advent of Christ, as well as prophecies fulfilled by the event, and to a reflecting mind, guided by the light of revelation, they were calculated to inspire fresh hopes of the near approach of the infant Savior. And while the King of Judea was disturbed at the fulfilment of those prophecies which he conceived portended his ruin and the loss of his power, and even sent emissaries to inquire whether such a child were really born, in order to destroy him; there was one of the remnant band of Jewish worthies in Jerusalem, Simeon, a "just man and devout," who had long been waiting for the consolation of Israel, and rejoiced in anticipating the promised Messias.—The termination of the seventy weeks of years was marked by the most significant signs. Heaven and earth united in filling the moral hemisphere with forerunners of the incarnation of the Son of God, and awakened throughout the whole civilized world expectations of an approaching crisis. At the appointed time, a virgin daughter of Judea gave birth to the Prince of Peace, and the predicted star appeared and piloted the magi of the east to the place of his birth.

There are also signs which God has appointed as the harbingers of Christ's second coming, and the Bible chronometer God has given us in mercy, for the measurement of times and seasons. A double warning is given, that you may not be in darkness, that that day shall come upon you as a thief. The signs which are predicted to precede the second advent of Christ, are:

1. The prevalent unbelief of Christian professors respecting the doctrine of Christ's near approach. Listen to the fearful interrogation of Christ—When the Son of man cometh, shall he find faith on the earth?—Luke xviii. 8.

2. A melancholy and general decay of vital piety. A prominent characteristic of the early Christians was, they "loved his appearing." 2 Tim. iv. 8. They loved to hear of it, to talk about it, to pray for it, and the world hated them. It was the "offence of the cross." In the last times "the love of many shall wax cold." Matt. xiv. 12. Does not the love of mammon, the spirit of worldliness, conformity to its maxims and fashions, pervade the professed churches? Judge ye. Which is the most apparent, the power or the form of religion?

3. Unprecedented prevalence of iniquity is another characteristic of the last times. "Iniquity shall abound." Matt. xxiv. 12. In no period of the world's history have the floodgates let out from its exhaustless reservoir such streams of guilt. Read the dark and awful descriptions in the public journals, under the heads of Perfidy, Fraud, Rapine, Murder, Sedition, and universal misrule.—See the description in 2 Tim. iii. 1–5.

4. Scoffers in the last days, at the coming of Christ, is another sign indicative of his near approach. 2 Pet. iii. 1–4. Beware, reader, lest you be found among this class. A professor of religion may be a scoffer.

5. The universal spread of the gospel among all nations is a sign of Christ's speedy Advent. Matt. xxiv. 14. The gospel is to be preached as a Witness, and not as the instrument of the conversion of all nations. This sign is fulfilled.

6. Division among professing Christians, (Matt. xiv. 10,) and opposition to sound doctrine shall distinguish the last days.

7. A practical rejection of the Lord's word. This is evident in the great prevalence of German Neology, the Transcendentalism and Rationalism of America.

8. Signs or wonders in heaven above, and signs in the earth beneath; blood, and fire, and vapor of smoke. The sun shall be turned into darkness, and the moon into blood, before that great and notable day of the Lord come.

Other prophetical signs might be noticed, which are fulfilling before your eyes, by which you may know that Christ standeth at the door. Reader, if you would you cannot evade the truth on this subject. The present signs of the times, considered in the light of evidences of the fulfilment of prophecy, both past and present, may be viewed as the last call, the last act, the last voice of God's long-sighted and abused mercy to man.—Will you heed the call, or sleep on till, amid the darkening of the heavens and the clashing artillery of heaven, the voice of mercy ceases, and you are lost eternally?

PROPHETIC TIME.

I. The Great Jubilee. This is a period of 7 times 7 jubilees, 49 jubilees of 50 years each, or 2450 years, which include the time of all the Jewish Sabbaths, during which the land was to enjoy her rest. This period we commence when the Jews, with Jehoiakim, were carried to Babylon, in the fourth year of his reign; since which, the Jews have never kept their jubilees. According to the best chronologists, this event was B. C. 607. From 2450, deduct B. C. 607, and there can remain but about A. D. 1843.

II. The 2300 Prophetic Days, (years.) This prophetic period, of the viii. of Daniel, was to commence with the meridian glory of the Medo-Persian empire, to mark the continuance of the vision, and reach to the cleansing of the sanctuary, when the horn that waxed exceeding great is to be broken without hand. According to the best chronologists, that kingdom did not reach its greatest height until the 7th year of Artaxerxes Longimanus, B. C. 457. 457 from 2300, must end near 1843.

III. The Seventy Weeks. This was given to Daniel, as recorded in Daniel ix., as an explanation of the 2300 days, from which they were cut off. Sixty-nine of these weeks, 7 multiplied by 69, equal to 483 years, were to reach to the Messiah, and to begin with the going forth of the decree to rebuild Jerusalem. This decree, according to Ezra vii., was given in the 7th year of Artaxerxes Longimanus, B. C. 457. From 483, deduct B. C. 457, and there remains A. D. 26. This brings us down to the time our Savior was baptized, and acknowledged from Heaven as the Messiah. The one week, or 7 years, to complete the 70 weeks, carry us to A. D. 33. Deduct 490 years, in 70 weeks, from 2300, and there remain 1810. Add 1810 to A. D. 33, and it brings us to A. D. 1843.

IV. The 1260 Days. This period was to mark the supremacy of Papacy. In Dan. vii. 25, it is called "a time, times, and dividing of time = 3½ times, that the saints were to be given into the hands of the little horn; also in xii. 7. In Rev. xi. 2, 3, it is called 42 months that the Gentiles were to tread the court of the temple under foot; and a thousand two hundred and threescore days that the two witnesses were to be clothed in sackcloth. In Rev. xii. 6 and 14, it is called a thousand two hundred and threescore days, and a time, and times and half a time, that the woman was to be nourished in the wilderness. In Rev. xiii. 5, it is called forty-two months, that power was given unto the beast to continue. These periods are all of the same length, and evidently mark the same period of time. According to the most authentic histories, the events predicted to mark the commencement of these periods, were all fulfilled by A. D. 538; and those which are to mark the termination in A. D. 1798, just 1260 years from the commencement. Since 1798, the saints have been out of the hands of Papacy, which has continued to make war with them, and prevail against them, as it was predicted it should, till the Ancient of Days should come.

V. THE 1290 DAYS of Daniel xii.—This period was to commence with the taking away of the daily, and the setting up of the abomination that maketh desolate. According to the best historical evidence, the daily pagan rites ceased to be sustained by law in Rome, about A. D. 508, when the papal horn was also revealed in the first ecclesiastical war. These days were to continue till the time of the end, when the king of the south (Egypt) was to push against the Roman power. 1290 years, commencing in A. D. 508, would expire in 1798; and in this year we find the fulfilment of the events which were to mark the termination of this period.

VI. THE 1335 DAYS of Daniel xii.—This period was to commence at the same time with the 1290, and to continue to the time Daniel should stand in his lot: at which time, all who waited and came to the end of the days would be blessed. 1335 days, beginning in A. D. 508, carry us down to about 1843.

VII. THE FIVE MONTHS of Rev. ix. 10. This was to be the time that those like locusts were to have power to hurt men during the sounding of the fifth trumpet. We suppose that this trumpet began to sound on the 27th day of July, 1299, when, according to Gibbon, the Turks made their first attack upon the Greek empire. Five months, 5 multiplied by 30, equal 150 prophetic days (years.) 150 years, commencing with July 27th, 1299, carry us down to 1449, when the Greek monarch made a voluntary surrender of his power into the hands of the Turks; but continued on the throne by permission till 1453, when Constantinople was besieged and taken.

VIII. THE HOUR, DAY, MONTH AND YEAR of Rev. ix. 15. This period was to mark the time that the same power was to be permitted to kill men. 1-24th of a day, 1 day, 30 days, and 360 days, equal to 391 1-24th prophetic days, or 391 years and 15 days. Commencing this period in 1449, when Decaozes asked the consent of Amureth to reign, at the end of 150 years from July 27th, 1299, and it would terminate August 11th, 1840. And at that time the Sultan of Turkey made a like voluntary surrender of his power into the hands of the four powers of Europe; and now reigns by their permission, the same as did the Greek monarch, at the end of the 150 years. Then ended the SIXTH Trumpet, when the SEVENTH was to sound quickly. See Rev. x. 7, and ix. 15.

THE GREAT DAY.

"Even thus shall it be in THE DAY when the Son of Man is revealed." Thousands and tens of thousands of living men, eating and drinking, buying and selling, planting and building—fluttering, like butterflies in a summer's day, about the perishing flowers of a perishing world,—steeping all their senses in the earthly business of the passing hour,—making everything a business, pleasure, daily avocation, necessary labor, natural appetites, even "eating and drinking," everything made a business of, and the soul absorbed and quenched therein—"whose end is destruction, whose God is their belly, whose glory is in their shame, who mind earthly things!" Phil. iii. 19. The farmer at his market! the planter with his trees! the builder at his house! the tradesman in his shop! the student at his books! the reveller at his feast! the gambler at his cards! the rake at his brothel! the usurer at his gold! the nobleman at his pomp! the king at his court! the soldier at his blood! the idler at his folly! the laborer at his toil! the glutton at his meat! the drunkard at his drink! Each at his sin! Each in his day dream!—Each in his soul's poison! The Lord bears it no longer. His mouth has sent forth the word of all-desolating vengeance. The vengeance-storm obeys, and gathers and thickens, and rolls on, and hangs over. One moment's pause—the world is still merry, and laughing, and busy, and KNOWS NOT. One moment's pause—the preachers are preaching—peradventure the sinners may repent. One moment's pause—hark! believers, the pause is for you—hark! "A great sound of a trumpet."—Angels are sent with it. The Lord can do nothing till you are in refuge, being merciful unto you. See, O see!—they are gathering together the Son's elect, from the four winds, from one end of heaven to the other. Matt. xxiv. 31. The gathering is over—all are in safety—not one is forgotten.—O! dreadful! The storm is bursting—thousands who began to be gathered have fallen back—the last trump sounds louder and louder—the "seventh angel pours out his vial faster and faster." Rev. xvi. 17.—O! dreadful! "Voices, and thunders, and lightnings," Rev. xvi. 18, in the heavens—"weeping and wailing and gnashing of teeth" on the earth.—The storm is burst upon the poor guilty world! Every living soul has drank it! And—O! the omnipotence of MY GOD, the Son of Man!—the heavens are passing away with a great noise, and the elements are melting with fervent heat, and the earth, and all the works that are therein, are burning up! "Seeing then that all these things shall be dissolved, what manner of persons ought ye to be in all holy conversation and godliness, looking for and hasting unto the coming of the day of God, wherein the heavens being on fire shall be dissolved, and the elements shall melt with fervent heat?"

WESTERN MIDNIGHT CRY,

CINCINNATI, MARCH 9, 1844.

☞Not one out of 500 of the reports in the public prints relative to Second Advent Believers, contain a single word of truth.

☞A letter from Bro. Litch, and other valuable communications, will appear in our next number—also the report of our Conference, which may cause a delay of two or three days beyond our usual time.

☞ Between 5 and 6000 copies of this number will be distributed in this city. Two or 3000 German tracts will also be placed in the hands of those that can read them. These efforts will be appreciated by hundreds who will praise God in his kingdom; but, if any slight our message, we shall go to the Bar of God with the consciousness of having strove to do our duty towards them.

TO THE UNCONVERTED READER.

This may be your last warning. Then we beg of you not to throw this sheet carelessly aside, lest the voice of Jehovah should soon cry in your ears, "I called but YE REFUSED."

The salvation, or the loss of thy soul, may turn upon as small a point as the examination, or rejection of these pages. Then be wise to-day, and heed the voice that so loudly calls, "PREPARE TO MEET THY GOD."

SECOND ADVENT CONFERENCE.

At the time our paper goes to press, [Thursday morning,] the Committee had not succeeded in procuring a commodious place for the session of the Conference.—It therefore commences in the Lawrence Street Church, on Thursday A. M., at 11 o'clock. The morning services will be occupied in Bible Class, and other exercises. Lectures will be delivered each P. M. and evening, at 3 and 7 o'clock. In case no larger place can be secured, the College Hall will be occupied for the Lectures on Sabbath next. The following subjects may be expected to be brought before the congregations in the Lectures delivered at the session of this Conference:

The Nature, Object and Time of the Second Advent of our Savior;

The Unscripturality of the Doctrines of a Millennium and of the Jews Return, before the Advent;

The Kingdom of God;

The Two Resurrections;

The Seven Churches;

The Seven Trumpets;

The Seven Last Plagues;

The Fall of Babylon;

The New Jerusalem;

The New Heavens and New Earth;

The subjects contained in Dan. 2, 7, 8, 9, 11 and 12th chapters, and Matt. 24;

The Signs of the Times.

All are invited to come and hear for themselves the reasons of our hope.

PROFESSOR STUART

Is the principal learned opposer, of the doctrines we advocate, relative to the Speedy Coming of our Lord.—That none may be deceived by men who oppose this great truth; it may be well for all to know, the value this learned man attaches to the prophecies recorded in the Bible. In a theological work, recently translated from the German, by Theodore Parker, of Roxbury, Mass. vol. 2, p. 485, the following language may be found relative to the accounts of Daniel.

"Ezekiel mentions Daniel as a model of righteousness and wisdom, xiv. But the Daniel of this book must at that time have been very young—therefore, it is not improbable, that the Author of this book has FALSELY TRANSFERRED another mythical or poetical character, to the times and circumstances of this work, and at the same time has made use of the statements of Nehemiah x. for the same purpose. The false statement in i. 1, renders the HISTORICAL EXISTENCE OF DANIEL EXCEEDINGLY DOUBTFUL.

In the translator's preface it appears that PROFESSOR STUART, of Andover, Sears and Hasket, of Nawton, have aided him in his work with ADVICE and references. The Professor, failing to overthrow a correct exposition of a prophecy from which the Saviour quoted, (Mat. 24: 15) now lends his ADVICE in the spread of a work that calls in question the REAL EXISTENCE of the Prophet DANIEL—and calls his eminent prophecy a "MYTHICAL" FABLE! Dear reader, we again say, "BE NOT DECEIVED."

Of our last number, besides supplying the subscribers, we have distributed gratis about 7,000 numbers. About 2,000 Western Midnight Cry, extra, containing brother Hersey's article, "Prepare to meet thy God," have been published for the same purpose. Also, about 3,000 of brother Starkweather's notices of his work on Daniel 12: 10.

The first number of a Second Advent paper with the above title has been received. It contains some valuable articles. Published and edited by G. W. EASTMAN, at Kingsville, Ohio. Terms: "read and circulate" Friends disposed to aid in publishing the above paper, can send their donations as above.

☞"THE AURORA," published at New-Lisbon, March 2d, has had the fairness to publish the "Points of difference between Adventists and their Opponents," from our columns. We record this fact, because, in these days of scoffing and misrepresentation, we do not get as much justice from one out of five hundred editors.

OUR CONFERENCE.

According to appointment, our conference commenced its session in the Lawrence street Church on Thursday, the 7th instant, at 11 o'clock, A. M. A profitable and interesting Bible class was held upon the subject of the two Resurrections. At 3 o'clock, P. M. brother Eastman, from Indiana, lectured upon the "Seven Trumpets," and was followed with some remarks by brother J. B. Cook. In the evening, at 7 o'clock, brother Cook lectured upon the "Object, manner, and desirableness of the Second Advent of our Saviour."

FRIDAY.

At 10 o'clock, A. M. the Bible class exercises were continued. Subject—The kingdom of God. At 3 o'clock P. M. brother Cook lectured upon the Kingdom of God yet future. In the evening at 7 o'clock, brother Chittenden lectured upon Dan. 8th and 9th chapters.

SATURDAY.

At 10 o'clock, A. M. the Bible class exercises were a continuation of the subject of yesterday morning. At 3 o'clock, P. M. brother Kent lectured on Dan. 8: 14 In the evening, brother Cook lectured from 1 Peter 1: 19, giving some excellent illustrations of prophecy brought to view in the text.

SUNDAY.

At 9 o'clock, A. M. brother Chittenden lectured at the Hay Scales in Fifth street, to a very large and attentive congregation, from the 2d and 7th chapters of the prophecy of Daniel. At 11 o'clock, A. M, brother Cook lectured at the College Hall upon the "Resurrection." At the same hour, brother Kent lectured at the Lawrence street house, from Heb. 10: 23. Brother Eastman lectured the same hour at the Engine house, on Vine, near Front street. These places were all filled.

10 o'clock, A. M. Bible class exercises—the conclusion of the subject of the "Kingdom of God." 3 o'clock P. M. the time was occupied in the narration of experiences; and the same exercises were continued in the evening. Further remarks in our next.

So far the meetings have been marked with excellent order. The lectures have been thronged with thousands who apparently listened as for eternity. Many interesting cases of awakening and conversion, as the result of our gratuitous distribution of papers last week, have already reached us. The confidence of believers in this place, in the immediate coming of our Lord has never been so strong as at the present time. We introduce below, a few out of many editorial notices, which will give the summum bonum of the opinions of a certain class relative to Bible truths, and a Bible course.

MILLERISM.—We feel sincerely grieved to find this arch-heresy waxing instead of waning in "might and majesty." It is not within our province to offer arguments in confutation of the delusion; yet to console those of our subscribers who are believers in it, we simply say, that if sublunary things should be dissolved on or before the 21st inst., our paper will not appear as usual on the 28th of March. In case such a catastrophy should happen, we shall of course not be able to satisfy those of our patrons who have paid us in advance.—Woodward Miscellany.

☞ A Millerite Conference, or Second Advent Jubilee, commenced its session in this city, on Friday last, at their church on Lawrence street. They expect to do a good business at this, their last call, as they are assisted by a number of talented coworkers from the East. This may be the only opportunity our citizens will have of hearing their "howls," as the millennium is near at hand.—People's Paper.

A COMING.—The Second Advent or Millerite Conference commenced yesterday in this city, in the Lawrence street church. A number of the big guns are present, and the Millennium is expected to come off soon. Brother Jacobs, editor of the Midnight Cry, (or Howl,) is over head and ears in business. The public are invited to attend this last call.—Enquirer and Message.

THE EXACT HOUR.—A Millerite the other day ciphered up the last hour, and made it on the 26th April, at 11 o'clock and 10 minutes A. M. A survivor of the Hard Cider promises said he was glad it would come before dinner time, for he had'nt the "beef."—Enquirer.

COMMUNICATIONS.

LETTER FROM BRO. J. LITCH.

DEAR BROTHER JACOBS:—I take up my pen, first, to apologize for not sooner fulfilling my engagement to write you, and then to proceed in fulfilment of that pledge, to give an article for the "Western Midnight Cry."

My apology is, a press of duties, and my article for the "Cry,"

THE GARDEN OF EDEN OF THE ORIGINAL EARTH, THE NEW JERUSALEM OF THE NEW EARTH.

When the Saviour describes the reward of his Saints, Matt. xxv. 34, he says, "Come ye blessed of my Father and inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world." That the kingdom will be the earth restored, I believe all Adventists admit. But to make the kingdom complete, will it not be necessary for the garden to be restored? So it seems to me. Then look again at the garden:—It had in the midst of it "the tree of life." So also the city,—"In the midst of the street of it, and on either side of the river was there the tree of life." Then, also, "a river went out of Eden to water it, and from thence, (when it had gone through the garden,) it was parted and became into four heads.—The name of the first is Pison: that is it which compasseth the whole land of Havilah, where there is gold; And the gold of that land is good: there is bdellium and the onyx-stone. And the name of the second river is Gihon: the same is it that compasseth the whole land of Ethiopia. And the name of the third river is Hiddekel: that is it which goeth toward the east of Assyria. And the fourth river is Euphrates."—Gen. ii, 10–14. So also, when God made promise to Abraham, as to the extent of territory his seed should inherit, he said, "From the river of Egypt (Ethiopia) to the great river, the river Euphrates." Gen. xv. 18. But Abraham is to have it in the "heavenly country" and in "a city which hath foundations whose builder is God." Heb. xi. Then the New Jerusalem is to lie, as the garden did, between the Nile in Egypt and the Euphrates in Chaldea. The measure of it is 12,000 furlongs or 1,500 miles in circumference, or 175 miles square. Then there were precious stones there, such as bdellium and the onyx-stone; besides gold of the first quality. Likewise, there is to be a river proceeding out of the throne of God, in the city.

But the great argument, that the New Jerusalem has been on earth and is to come again, is found Isa. liv.—"Sing, O barren," &c. "for more are the children of the desolate than the children of the married wife." Who is the desolate, and who the married wife? Paul answers, Gal. iv. By applying this text to the New Jerusalem, shewing that her children will be the true seed of Israel and Abraham, and will be more numerous than the children of the Old Jerusalem. The natural Jews were her children, and are in bondage. The children of Abraham's faith are the children of the free woman, or Jerusalem, which is above. To this woman, or city, the Lord says, "Enlarge the place of thy tent, and let them stretch forth the curtains of thine habitations: Spare not, lengthen thy cords and strengthen thy stakes, for thou shalt break forth on the right hand and on the left; and THY SEED shall inherit the Gentiles (the land the Gentiles occupy) and make the desolate cities to be inhabited. Fear not; for thou shalt not be ashamed: neither be thou confounded: for thou shalt not be put to shame: for thou shalt forget the shame of thy youth, and shalt not remember the reproach of thy widowhood any more. For thy Maker is thy husband; The Lord of Hosts is his name; and thy Redeemer the Holy One of Israel; The God of the whole earth shall he be called. For the Lord hath called thee as a woman forsaken and grieved in spirit, and a wife of youth, when thou wast refused, saith thy God. For a small moment have I forsaken thee; but with great mercies will I gather thee. In a little wrath I hid my face from thee for a little moment; but with everlasting kindness will I have mercy on thee, saith the Lord thy Redeemer. For this is as the waters of Noah unto me: for as I have sworn that the waters of Noah should no more go over the earth; so have I sworn that I would not be wroth with thee, nor rebuke thee." Isa. liv. 2–9.

From this it seems the New Jerusalem was once the mother of the saints, but has been "put away" as "a wife of youth"; She has been "forsaken," "refused," "reproached," "grieved in spirit," in a state of "widowhood"; God has hid his face from her "for a moment"; has been "wroth with her," &c. &c. If she is not the Garden of Eden, then how is all this true of her? If it is the Garden of Eden, then all is plain.

But the present is the only time of her affliction. God has sworn he will no more be wroth with her, nor rebuke her, any more than the waters of Noah shall go over the earth again.

When restored as the bride, the Lamb's wife, "for her Maker is her husband," he will lay her stones with fair colors and her foundations with saphires. In short, all the glory ascribed by John, in Revelation, to the New Jerusalem, will be here. It is our Father's house or dwelling place, where Christ is now preparing mansions. When completed, he will come and restore the earth, bring it down and gather his people into it. "Blessed are they then, that do his commandments, that they may have right to the tree of life, and enter in through the gates into the city." I do not know any other local heaven, described in God's word, but this; hence when it comes to the earth, God will dwell with men on the earth in very deed.

Yours in hope, J. LITCH.

LETTER FROM BRO. BARTHOLOMEW.

Aurora, In. March 12, 1844.

DEAR BRO. JACOBS:

I would just remark that we have a loving little band of Advent believers here. We hold prayer and conference meetings three times each week. Our friends call them Millerite meetings, and try to dissuade others from attending, for fear of encouraging the Millerites; but we think some few have a little more piety than prejudice, and intend to use their liberty, not for a cloak of maliciousness, but to see whether these things are so. But notwithstanding all the opposition, false accusation and bitter prejudice of worldly, lukewarm professors and an unholy world, we still think, yea we know, we have much encouragement. We feel able to say, and think we can say in truth, the best of all is, God is with us, and appears by the comforter to be drawing our hearts closer together, as with a three-fold cord of faith, hope, and charity. At our meeting last Sabbath, a good pious brother arose and said, he had not believed in the doctrine of the Second Advent, as some of his brethren and sisters had done, till of late, and an open confession, he said, was good for the soul. He said that the opposition of professors to the doctrine was a proof to him of its near approach. He then mentioned the appointment of our Elder, on the 22d instant, to preach the funeral sermon of Millerism. The reflection that an old preacher should presume to preach the funeral sermon of the Bible doctrine of the Second Advent of the blessed Saviour, so filled the heart with grief and the eyes with tears, that utterance was checked, the tongue quivered and became silent before the Lord. Subsequently the proposition was made that none who believed in the doctrine of the Second Advent at hand, attend on that occasion; and as we could have but little expectation of receiving either instruction or edification, we have generally agreed not to attend, but purpose to observe the day as a day of fasting and prayer, hoping, should time continue, that this bold effort will turn to the furtherance of the gospel of the everlasting kingdom, which, to the entire destruction of all the opposition of the kingdoms of this world, will soon be established in the new earth. Yours in the blessed hope,

D. BARTHOLOMEW.

P. S. The above appointment is for Friday, the 22d, at 11 o'clock, A. M. The meeting on the occasion is intended to commence the evening previous and continue over the Sabbath. We would like to have some person to take down the sermon; if you think it proper, please send some one. We hope you will be able to pay us a visit at the time, or immediately after, as you think best. Please inform us and we will give out the appointment.

THE TRUE INHERITANCE AND FUTURE ABODE OF THE SAINTS.

In order to obtain a rational and correct view of this delightful and heart-cheering subject, we have not to refer to blind reason, or to the confused and visionary views of the great and reputed wise men of the present or past ages. For it seems that on no scripture doctrine, which appears so plain and simple, has there originated such wild and speculative ideas, as on this one subject. And this appears to be the case in a greater or less degree, in reference to all the doctrines of the Bible, when-ever we leave the pure uncorrupted word of truth, and roam at large in the wide fields of fancy, although we may chance occasionally to pluck a sweet flower, yet in the end we are lost in the wild maze of ignorance, conjecture, confusion, and dismay. So it appears to have been with the poet, when the muse took flight on fancy's gilded wings, passing through trackless ether, swifter than fiery comets fly, upward through immensity of space above all planetary systems, and increasing velocity, as may be supposed, as she approaches the centre of attraction, and still rushing amain its wild, airy, visionary flight; and where is she going?

> Beyond the bounds of time and space.
> Look forward to that happy place,
> The saints' secure abode.

I will not at this time attempt to theorise on the sentiment expressed by the poet in these sublime aspirations, for I must confess that my intellect is too weak, (and I am thankful for it,) to take me even in imagination beyond the bounds of space, or the immensity of the works of nature and nature's God. I will content myself with the plain, simple account of heaven, given by inspiration, and recorded in the book of God. Then to the law and to the testimony, and here we have an unerring guide, which, if we follow by the light of the spirit, we shall not walk in darkness, but shall have the light of life; and this spirit leadeth into all truth, but if we have not this spirit of Christ, we are none of His, but are in darkness, even until now. And while I attempt in much weakness to answer, in a brief and imperfect manner, the above query, I pray that I may be directed by the spirit of truth, without which all efforts are vain. The first scriptural account we have on this subject is found in Gen. i. 8, "And God called the firmament heaven," &c. 14th verse, "And God said, let there be lights in the firmament of the heavens, (not in the heavens, nor between heaven and earth,) but in the firmament of the heavens, (or above the heavens, is the idea naturally conveyed to the mind, this is proved by the 20th verse,) to divide the day from the night," &c. 15th verse, "And let them be for lights in the firmament of the heavens, to give light upon the earth, and it was so." 16th and 17th verses, "He made the stars also. And God set them in the firmament of the heaven to give light upon the earth." Thus it appears that the sun, moon, and stars are far above the heaven, in the firmament thereof. 20th verse, "And God said, Let the waters bring forth abundantly the moving creature that hath life, and fowl that may fly above the earth in the open firmament of heaven." Now it does appear to me that there is no necessity for a person of ordinary intelligence to roam through the wide fields of fancy, for wild speculative ideas in reference to the location of heaven, or the future and eternal inheritance of the saints. It is just as easy and simple to determine this point, as it is to comprehend where the birds and fowls of heaven fly, and build their nests for their young—Is it not the atmosphere that surrounds our earth? The poet, I think, had a proper view of this, when he penned the following, "The all-surrounding heavens, the vital air, is big with death." The Psalmist says (cxiii. 4,) "The Lord is high above all nations, and his glory above the heavens. His glory is visible in the sun, moon, and planetary systems, the starry firmament, above the heavens." Again, the heavens declare the glory of God, and the firmament (above the heavens) sheweth his handy work. If heaven is in some undefinable, invisible place, beyond sun, moon, and stars, or beyond the bounds of space, I cannot comprehend how, and in what possible manner they can be said to declare the glory of God. I must confess that my vision is not sufficient to enable me to discover the beauty and exceeding glory of an imaginary, invisible, interminable heaven. But in the visible heavens, and firmament of the heavens, there is grandeur, beauty, and glory, majesty, might, and dominion, manifested sufficient to fill an angel's mind with amazement and create new and increasing themes of wonder and adoration in the highest seraph around the burning throne. There is sufficient evidence it might be supposed, to convince the most skeptical, that the hand that formed, organized, and put in motion—in regular continued order, all these vast bodies of light and beauty, must surely be divine. But, says the objector, does not the Bible speak of three heavens? Was not Paul, in his visions or revelations, caught up to the third heavens; surely that must be a vast distance above? Yes verily, Paul was undoubtedly, in vision or by revelation, by the spirit, caught up (or taken forward into futurity) to the third heavens. What do we understand by a revelation, but a preconception or a divine impression on the mind by the Holy Spirit, of future events. So Paul, like John on the isle of Patmos, was in the spirit, and by it taken forward beyond or above the scenes of the present heavens and earth, to contemplate and view the resplendant beauties, sublimity and grandeur of the new and third heavens.—It is no wonder that Paul was so far captivated and caught up above the world, by the excellent glory, as he elsewhere describes it to be, a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory presented to his view, in the third heaven, or paradise restored, that he knew not whether he was in the body or out of the body. But, says the objector, I can never believe that doctrine; I believe that Paul was caught away up into heaven, above the stars, either soul or body, and perhaps both together, and I believe, as soon as the soul of the saint leaves the body, it will go directly there. An old professor not 100 miles from here, lately said he had ascertained how long it took the soul, after it left the body, to get to heaven; it would take just five minutes, from the fact that it took ten minutes for a prayer to ascend to heaven and get an answer. This man is one of the most bitter and inconsistent opposers of the doctrine of the Second Advent. And if I were to give a reason for this opposition, by this person and some others with whom I am acquainted, for similar reasons I should be constrained to say, I fear they are not ready.

I will relate a circumstance in reference to this person, and leave it to the candid to judge. A poor brother in the church, unfortunately through the pressure of the times, was reduced to very straitened circumstances; so much so, that his house and home was taken on execution, and sold at sheriff's sale; the time of redemption came round, which was one year, this old brother was called upon for a little assistance to make out the required sum, as he had promised before to do so; he furnished $125 by receiving a deed for the premises in security, which was worth about $300. His money was paid in about four months, and the title reclaimed, but not without his claim being paid, which was about 250 per cent. Are such persons ready for the judgment? An old preacher took occasion in a sermon, lately, to speak of the intermediate state, said, some persons think it will take three hours for a soul to get to heaven, some three days, from the fact that our Saviour was three hours on the cross and three days in the sepulchre; but for his part he thought it would hardly take that long. This man also, in preaching a funeral sermon from Dan. xii. 13, made the bold and almost blasphemous assertion in plain contradiction to the express declaration of the angel Gabriel, that Daniel was a wicked man, and the Lord reproved him, and told him to go his way, as he was prying into things that did not concern him. Who could be surprised that such a man should publicly, at a quarterly meeting, at which he presided, give out an appointment to preach at Aurora, the funeral sermon of the Second Advent of the blessed Saviour, on the 22d day of March. Will a holy God accept the sacrifice of the ungodly; then may such proud and heaven-daring presumption receive countenance from the Almighty. Would not the spirit that moved with pity and compassion, the bleeding heart of our blessed dying Saviour on the cross, for his most bitter enemies be quite appropriate? If so, let every Christian heart say, "Father, forgive them, for they know not what they do."

D. BARTHOLOMEW.

The above is but a part of Bro. B.'s letter. We have omitted the rest for two reasons: 1st, The remaining part of the subject was connected with other matters that would naturally tend to a religious discussion. 2d, It was so long we had not room.—Ed.

LETTER FROM BRO. HICKLIN.

February 9th, 1844.

Dear Brother Jacobs,

I am still giving the Midnight Cry, or "Howl," if that will feast the fancy of scoffers any better. I am looking and waiting for the glorious appearing of the great God our Saviour. I am not willing, although the last day scoffers rise up on every side, in the church and out of the church, to cast away my confidence which has great recompense of reward, even if we are mistaken, our opposers are worse mistaken in making a jest of so vast a subject.

There is nothing I pray the Lord more fervently for, than that he may grant me the spirit of humility and patience. I am now in the vicinity of Fort Wayne, Ind. The people are generally occupied in building up parties, and sects—debating politics, universalism, &c. while the great mass reject the hope of a Coming Saviour. Mr. Chaplin, of Kosciusko, like a faithful watchman, is giving the alarm in good earnest. To show the influence of a dead, faithless church, I will submit the following facts. A class leader, professing great holiness, says he does not love the Coming of the Lord, and boasts that he is one of our infidels. Another dear sister says she wants to be covered up in the ground a thousand years before the Lord comes. One sister, not far from where I write, was in trouble about the Lord's Coming: her minister called on her—preached 'Christ can't come yet,' the world to be converted, Jews return, &c. went away and said her mind was easy. A presiding elder out here discourages the Lord's coming so decidedly, I am told, that he ordered his members not to sing that beautiful invitation song, "We are travelling home to heaven above, will you go," &c.

When we meet with such opposition, how blessed is it to read, "For ye have need of patience that after ye have done the will of God ye might receive the promise. For yet a little while and he that shall come, will come and will not tarry." Heb. 10: 36. This quotation is from Hab. and shows that the time appointed, for which the prophet set him upon the tower to watch, to see what the Lord would say unto him, was the Coming of the Son of man to give the promised inheritance to Abraham and his seed, which is Christ. To him was the promise made; "And if ye are Christ's, then are ye Abraham's seed and heirs, according to the promise." Gal. 3. So Paul, after enumerating a host, a "cloud of witnesses," that were giants in faith, who through faith subdued kingdoms, wrought righteousness, obtained promises, stopped the mouths of lions, quenched the violence of fire, escaped the edge of the sword, out of weakness were made strong, waxed valiant in fight, turned to flight the armies of the aliens, women received their dead raised to life again, and others were tortured not accepting deliverance, that they might obtain a better resurrection. And these all having obtained a good report through faith, received not the promise: God having provided some better thing for us, that they without us should not be made perfect. They are not to get the blessing without us. Paul, and all those who love Christ's appearing will be crowned when the Lord comes; and we wait for the Coming of the Lord (not death) to receive a crown which the righteous Judge shall give at "that day," for "unto them that look for him shall he appear the second time without sin, unto salvation."

The apostle James says, ch. 5: 7, 8, Be patient therefore brethren unto the Coming of the Lord. Behold the husbandman waiteth for the precious fruit of the earth, and hath long patience for it, until he receive the early and the latter rain. Be ye also patient: establish your hearts; for the Coming of the Lord draweth nigh!

So Peter, 1 chap. 7, That the trial of your faith, being much more precious than of gold that perisheth, though it be tried in the fire, might be found unto praise, and honor, and glory, at the appearing of Jesus Christ. 13th. But rejoice inasmuch as ye are partakers of Christ's sufferings, that when his glory shall be revealed, ye may be glad also with exceeding joy. 5. And when the chief Shepherd shall appear, ye shall receive a crown of glory that fadeth not away. Paul says, 2 Thess. 1: 7, &c. We glory in you * * for your patience and faith in all your persecutions and tribulations that ye endure * * * "And to you who are troubled rest with us, when the Lord Jesus shall be revealed from heaven with his mighty angels, in flaming fire." If Paul and these holy men had known, the terror and fear, "hearts failing them for fear," that the blessed hope of a Coming Lord would produce in the minds of the modern disciples of Jesus, would they have dared to comfort the brethren with the terrible "appearing" and "revelation" of the Son of God in flaming fire. Can we with patience wait for an event that our imagination has clothed with terror and consternation, and we never want to see! Can we hope for a thing we do not expect for a thousand years; or desire a thing that we never want to see? To the enemies of Christ this subject presents nothing but dread and appalling. But all true christians should lift up their heads and rejoice, for their redemption draweth nigh. Zion's warfare is nearly accomplished, the bright morning of eternal ransom and deliverance is dawning, a day that will not close. The Lord in great mercy help us to hope, to look for, and ardently desire the Coming of the Lord. "Roll on! roll on sweet moments! roll on! and bring the joyful day!"

There are many here ready to embrace the truth, and we have a goodly band of believers in the Lord's speedy Coming. May we all be ready with oil in our vessels and enter into the marriage supper of the Lamb—and reign in his everlasting kingdom.

Yours, expecting Christ soon to appear,

LEWIS HICKLIN.

LETTER FROM BROTHER COOK.

FOR THE WESTERN MIDNIGHT CRY.

Dear Brother Jacobs—

It gives me pleasure to inform your readers that the interest taken in "the blessed hope" of the "Glorious Appearing" is increasing in most parts of this State, and in Pennsylvania, where I have been since autumn. As letters have been written from several points at the north and east of the State, I will only notice very briefly my visit to Maryville, Union Co. There are probably from one to two hundred intelligent believers in that region. Judge Strong was the first, except, perhaps, a good Brother Brown, whose father has believed for thirty years past. Bro. Strong held up his light, and in process of time Bro. Cherry and others took hold with him. At Richwood they have "a cheerful band of brethren dear," with whom I took sweet counsel. The experiences of several were quite interesting and encouraging to me. So also at Pleasant Valley. It was with no little regret that I could not go to Granville, Zanesville, and Beverly to see our dear Brother Weethe. Yours in hope,

B. Cook.

THE JEWS.

ROMANS NINTH, TENTH, AND ELEVENTH CHAPTERS.

If the doctrine of the conversion and restoration of the Jews is not taught in these chapters, it is not found in the Bible.

CHAPTER IX:

Verses 1—5. The apostle manifests deep sorrow at the rejection of the descendants of Abraham—the relatives of Christ, the very people, who had in their keeping, the Law and promises through Christ.

Verse 6. Not as though they were so completely cut off but that those who believed might be saved, for though Israel is rejected, all of them are not unbelievers.

Verses 7, 8. Neither are those Abrahams children that have not his faith, but the child of promise is the true one.

Verses 8—28. God has a perfect right to choose his instruments of wrath and mercy which he always has done. He chose the families of Isaac and Jacob, through which, to transmit the Law and ordinances and rejected Ishmael and Esau.

He chose wicked Pharaoh and "raised him up" King of Egypt, to show his power in the deliverance of his people.

The potter has power over the clay; and when it will not form into the vessel designed, he forms it into another. So the Jews, by being incorigible in the Potter's hands, were formed into vessels of wrath fitted for destruction. But he will "make known the riches of his glory, on the vessels of mercy,—all believers, both Jew and Gentile, (verse 23, 24.) The Apostle shows that in this case, the almighty has exercised the same prerogative he always has done, viz: To choose whatever nation he pleased, in whose archives to deposit the ordinances of his church.

As the Jews had rejected this high favor, he conferred it upon the Gentiles; but still shows (Gal. iii: 26—28.) how the Jews as individuals may escape the national curse.

Verses 27—29. God never promised salvation to only a remnant of the Jews, and that remnant as we have seen, embraced all the righteous.

Verses 30—33. Here, again, is enforced the reason of the Jews rejection. They would not receive Christ, but still cleaved to their old "School Master," (Gal. iii: 24.)

CHAPTER 10:

Verses 1—12. He again expresses his anxiety for the Jews, and simplifies the exercise of faith in Christ—presents him as the end of the Law; and to induce them to let go their claim to peculiar privileges, tells them there is NO DIFFERENCE between the Jew and the Greek, for the same Lord over all is rich unto all that CALL UPON HIM.

Verses 12—18. The institution and extent of the proclamation of the Gospel, is brought to view—so they could not arise in the Judgment and say, The faith of Christ had not been preached to them.

Verses 19—21. Moses had given them a sign by which they might know, that Christ was the Saviour. "I will provoke you to jealousy by no people, and by a foolish nation will I anger you." This was now fulfilled. By adopting the Gentiles as the favored nation. The Jews, through jealousy, were led to hear—They might have been saved but they stumbled at Christ, and that, after they had the knowledge of the fact, of his being the Saviour.

CHAPTER 11:

Verse 1. Hath God cast away the literal seed entirely? No. Where is the proof? I also, am an Israelite, and have found pardon through Christ, and they can find it in the same way.

Verses 2—5. It is now, as it was in the days of the prophet who supposed the Jews were all rejected. There is a remnant left that have not so idolised their system of opposition to Christ, but that they are yet within the reach of mercy; and though they can not be saved by the law, yet by grace in Christ they can.

Verse 6. If they are saved by Grace, it is not more of works, therefore drop the covenant of works, and seek salvation by Grace through faith.

Verse 7. What then? To what conclusions are we then to come? It is this. Israel hath not obtained salvation in their system of worship, nor never can while they reject Christ: but the election, or believers, have obtained it, and the rest, or unbelievers, are blinded.

Verses 8, 10. As it is written in Isa. xxix: 10. and Psa. lxix: 22, 23. Here the reasons of that blindness is given. They wilfully reject the truth. Such have always been blinded, while the humble penitent is saved; no matter what nation he is of.

Verse 11. Have they stumbled in such a manner that their fall is irrecoverable? God forbid. For in their rejection of Christ, and loss of national privileges, the way of truth was more clearly opened to the Gentiles.—They have received it; and, as called of God for this purpose, are now urging faith in Christ, upon the Jews.

Verse 12. If their crucifixion of Christ, or casting the true heir out of the vineyard, furnished a sacrifice by which pardon is offered to a world,—and the loss of their name as God's people, brought that distinguished privilege to the Gentiles, how much more rich the trophies of Grace, if the Jews would all come to Christ and embrace salvation.

Verses 13, 14. I, says Paul, am laboring for the salvation of the Gentiles; and am not ashamed of my calling. Still I shall toil to save some of you. Such is the Jews determined opposition to Christ, that to save some is all that can be expected.

Verses 15, 16. The Jewish religious system must stand or fall; If it stood according to their views, a world was lost—all that were not Abrahams seed must perish. They fell: and in that fall the notes of salvation fall upon the ears of a guilty world. If they will now quit the wreck of Judaism, and fly to Christ as a Saviour, it will be like life from the dead. For if the first fruit, Christ, be holy, (1 Cor. xv: 20.) and if Christ, the "root" be holy, so must the branches.

If he lives by a new principle of life, (the Holy Ghost,) you must be a partaker of it, and thus become a branch, in order to secure your salvation.

Verses 17, 21. And if some of the Jews be broken off from the covenant of promise made with Abraham, by their rejection of Christ; and thou (Gentile) being a wild olive tree, were grafted in among them that acknowledged the heir when he came, and with them partakest of the root (Christ and fatness of the tree, do not boast, for it is Abrahams family that has received you, and not you that have received them.

Verses 16—21. If you (Gentile) say that the Jew was broken off, or rejected, on purpose that you might be grafted in; remember how that was done, viz; through his unbelief; and thou standest, not because of any national peculiarity, but only by faith. If God rejected them solely for their unbelief, take heed to thyself.

Verses 22—24. Behold the Goodness of God in providing a salvation for the Gentiles! Goodness if ye CONTINUE in that goodness; if not, ye shall be cut off. Behold, also, his severity, in cutting off those that had long borne his name, as soon as they rejected Christ! Mark his goodness, again, in receiving the Jews, when they forsake their unbelief.

Verses 25, Blindness has hapened to the unbelieving part of Israel. How long is that blindness to last? Till the end of time; or in the words of Isa. 6:11-13. "Until the cities be wasted without inhabitant, and the houses without MAN; and the land be utterly desolate, and the Lord have removed men far away," the earth entirely swept—But their shall be a tenth—a remnant, and it shall return Having been "caught up" with the Lord during the desolation—forsaking etc. it now returns to the inheritance. It is the "Holy seed." Till that time their blindness shall last; but then, when the final judgment sits. their eyes will be opened to see Abraham afar off, and Lazarus in his boosom. This blindness is to last till the fullness of the Gentiles be come in, or "times of the Gentiles" Luke 22-24. The time appointed for Gentile Governments to bear rule, reaching to Gods everlasting kingdom. See Dan. 2d 7th 8th and 9th chapters. Or to the day of judgment and perdition (not probation) of ungodly men.

Verses 26-27. And so all Israel—the true, or holy seed, shall be saved, when the fullness of the Gentiles be come in—the perdition of ungodly men taken place. Then the seed of Abraham shall be saved forever: For as it is writen in Isa. 59-20. (True reading of the Heb.) "And the Redeemer shall come to Zion, and unto them that turn from transgression in Jacob saith the Lord" harmonising with all that class of texts that bring to view the second coming of Christ to gather together his elect, —all his saints—them that fear his name &c. For this is the covenant that I will make with them (the holy seed) when I destroy death, the last work of sin.

Verses 28-29. As concerning the Gospel, the Jews as a nation, are enemies on account of the Gentiles being made partakers in the covenant with Abraham; but touching the election, (the believing part of them) they are beloved for the fathers sakes —for the sake of the covenant God made with the fathers, the real spirit of which, they appreciate and love to obey. The gifts and calling of God are without repentance. God has not made it necessary that you should repent without hope of pardon. These gifts contained in the covenant with Abraham, and these callings into gospel privileges, have all been brought to you, and urged home upon you before you repented of the sin which caused their loss.

Verses 30-32. For as ye Gentiles before the present dispensation have not believed God, yet now have obtained mercy,—and the medium through which ye have received it is the unbelief of the Jews, and their rejection and crucifixion of the Lord Jesus Christ.—So now, they are unbelievers as ye were; and it now becomes your work, as an act of mercy, to carry the tidings of salvation by faith in Christ to them; if by "any means" some of them may be saved. "For God hath concluded them all in unbelief that he might have mercy upon all" whether Jews or Gentiles.—Only one way of salvation is provided.

Who, that is not equally blinded with the Jew, can read this thirty-second verse, and maintain the doctrine of especial privileges for the Jews? or the twentieth and twenty-third verses, and not see, clear as a sunbeam, "unbelief" to be the only cause of their rejection, and casting off that unbelief, and exercising faith in Christ in common with the Gentile, their only hope of salvation?

Verses 33-36. O the depth of the riches, both of the wisdom and knowledge of God! Who can teach him, or alter his plans? What he has revealed to thee, that learn and be content; for what thou knowest not now, thou shalt know hereafter.

For the explanation here given, I have been compelled to be short for the want of space.

Much important evidence of the correctness of these views is necessarily omitted. I candidly believe that the truth upon this difficult portion of Gods word, is here presented. Whoever will prayerfully search the scriptures, with no other desire than to obtain, and do the truth, will most assuredly and very clearly, discover that God places "no difference" between the Jew and Gentile only upon the grounds of their reception, or rejection of Christ.

LETTER FROM BRO. HALL.

HOMER, Licking co. O. March 3d, 1844.

DEAR BROTHER JACOBS,

It has rejoiced me much to hear that God has so greatly blessed you in Cincinnati; and that so many are preparing for the Coming of our Saviour. Go on my dear brother, in the strength of the Lord of Hosts. For the last eleven months I have been engaged in the Advent cause, and during this time I do not know as I have had the slightest doubt that I shall soon see the King in his beauty.

I left Cincinnati last fall and have been continually engaged in proclaiming the Coming of the Bridegroom: And although my health has been exceedingly poor, yet "knowing the terrors of the Lord," I have sometimes walked five, ten, eighteen, and fifty miles to "persuade men" to get ready for his appearing: And for this I have frequently received their slander and contempt.—Yet notwithstanding all these things, I am not at all discouraged, for I know that the Lord is with me, and that I am doing his will.

I have generally had very large and attentive audiences, and have had many melting seasons. I have frequently had the pleasure of seeing God's people returning from their wanderings and consecrating themselves again to Him,—also of seeing sinners awakened and giving their hearts to God.

Last sabbath evening I finished a course of lectures in Utica, a village four miles from this. About a dozen professed to have consecrated themselves to God, and did as I trust, to be his forever. May the Lord preserve their whole spirit, and soul, and body, blameless unto his Coming. Last Tuesday I commenced a course of lectures in this place. Crowded houses—deep interest and I trust good done.

I wish to be affectionately remembered to all the Advent friends in Cincinnati: Tell them to "Cast NOT away their confidence which hath great recompense of reward," for yet a little while, and he that shall come will Come and will not tarry. This I most firmly believe: and I intend to keep proclaiming his Coming until he does Come: well assured that he will Come in a few short months at most. Even so Come Lord Jesus.

Yours affectionately,

J. B. HALL.

FOR THE WESTERN MIDNIGHT CRY.

Amos, 9: 9. "I will sift the house of Israel among all nations, like as corn is sifted in a seive. Yet shall not the least grain fall upon the earth." Luke, 22, 31. "Simon, satan hath desired to——sift you as wheat."

It is painful to witness the evident departures from the simple truth as it is in Jesus. God's truth detects hypocrites, and shoves them off. We see many who have perceived the revealed hope of the christian,—the name of Jesus, as the Coming one, and the strong probability that the Second Advent is just at hand, who yet turn aside from a public avowal of the truth. Judging from the number of those within the circle of our acquaintance who have been so fully convinced, that they have been constrained to consent to the truth of our Lord's Speedy Coming, and who, notwithstanding, shrink back from the consequences of being decided and persevering in support of what appears to them to be truth, I conclude that tens of thousands have passed through God's great seive. They have fallen with the chaff and thistares. They once appeared well, but in them is fulfilled the language of Messiah, "By and by when persecution ariseth because of the word, they are offended." The tests of character which are applied to God's professing people, and the trials which attend an honest expression of their convictions, are his chosen method to shake the seive. All 'the tares' and 'the chaff,' he will sift out 'to be burned.' None but those who will 'forsake all,' who 'seek first the kingdom of God'—who 'lose their lives' for Christ's sake, can expect, on scriptural principles, to be gathered 'into the garner' of God.

"Think not," saith the Son of God, "that I am come to send peace on earth; I came not to send peace, but a sword." Therefore the man who cannot bear the sword sooner than renounce the truth, will be sifted through. Those only who 'endure to the end, shall be saved."—Those who cannot (through fear of man, or love to their salary, or desire to be popular) endure to the end, will be found among the chaff that is sifted out. Thus it is written, 'ye have need of patience that after ye have done the will of God, ye might receive the promise: for yet a little while, and the Coming one will come, and will not tarry. Now the just shall live by faith; but if any man draw back, my soul shall have no pleasure in him.' Those who draw, i. e. shrink back from truth, because of any mere wordly considerations, may know that they are already sifted out, and their impending doom is 'perdition.' Heb. 10: 36, 39.

'To serve the living and true God, and to wait for his Son from heaven,' is to maintain the christian's calling. To renounce the world and live, 'looking for that blessed hope, and the glorious appearing of the great God, and our Saviour,' is to cherish the christian's hope,—to proclaim 'behold he cometh with clouds and every eye shall see him—all the kindreds of the earth shall wail, because of him; even so, Amen!' is to preach as did the apostles; but those who shrink back from these truths, lest they should be called Millerites, or the like, do 'draw back'—down they fall among the chaff, to be speedily damned.

To 'know' that 'the Coming of the Son of man is nigh even at the doors,' because his own words have been verified in 'the signs'—to 'look up, and lift up our heads' assured that our 'redemption draweth nigh'—to 'understand' when we read the prophecy of Daniel, is to obey Jesus, our approaching judge: therefore those who are too 'fearful and unbelieving' to 'understand,' 'look up,' or 'know' ought to see their character and coming doom; they are sifted out.

To put death, the triumph of the devil, in place of our blessed Saviour's return to judgment; to make death the source of motive to repent, confess Jesus, and be faithful as christians, (Acts, 3: 19, 21—17: 30. Mat. 10: 32. Heb. 10: 25, 27); to set aside the christian's hope, or the redeemer's name, by any human theory relative to the conversion of the world, is both to make and 'love a lie.' Rev. 22: 15. Surely those make a lie, in the sense of this passage, who devise an error, or a gloss, to get around God's naked truth, on any subject. Those who use such gloss or mystical interpretation to escape 'the reproach of Christ,' do certainly love the 'lie' which the other made. Their doom is written with 'whoremongers' and hypocrites. Such are certainly sifted out.

Those who profess to believe in the Lord's return should beware lest they be 'removed away from the hope of the gospel.' Should any become weary of 'waiting;' if when the vision seems to 'tarry' they do not 'wait' as required, they also shall be sifted out. 'Blessed is he that waiteth and Cometh to the 1335 days.'—Salvation and a crown awaits those who 'look for' and 'love' his appearing. Heb. 9: 28. 2 Tim. 4: 8. We should as soon be turned from the atonement as the Coming of Christ.

God sifted mankind before the deluge—he found only a 'few, that is eight souls,' who were not with the chaff blown away. The inhabitants of the cities of the plain were sifted, and only three grains of wheat, (and those not pure) were left in the seive. The Israelites in the wilderness were sifted, and out of those myriads two who left Egypt were counted worthy of preservation: 'Caleb and Joshua who followed the Lord fully."

During the personal ministry of Jesus, who had his fan in his hand for years, 'thoroughly' purging his floor, there were but few not fanned away; the largest number named is 'above five hundred brethren at once.'—Those who were first detected and sifted out, were the Doctors, the rulers of the synagogue, the distinguished among professors. The mass followed, and were found among the chaff, which he will 'burn up' with 'fire unquenchable.' O thou searcher of hearts, who shall be saved? The 'wheat' he will gather into his 'garner.' Those who will lose their lives for his sake 'shall find' them. Those who do not flinch from truth or duty, will be 'counted worthy' of the kingdom of God.

The Jewish nation has been generally regarded a type of the church. We should not wonder, therefore, if the leaders in the church shall be sifted out; as it is written 'when the Son of man cometh shall he find faith on the the earth.' All who have not faith, which 'giveth us the victory' over the world, will be sifted out. We know from the highest authority that 'as it was in the days of Noah, so shall the coming of the Son of man be.' Here we see the character of the saved. 'By faith Noah, moved with fear, prepared an ark.' Saving faith will move us to fear, and separate from the doom of an ungodly world. Those whose sympathies forbid their separation; those who will not justify God, as did Noah, should know that they have no saving faith. Their faith is merely conventional, like that of the Jews at the first Advent. 'He that believeth not,' is to be sifted out to be 'damned.'

These remarks have been suggested by the searching inquiry, 'Who may abide the day of his Coming? who shall stand when he appeareth?' The Jews had their own plans formed, from which they would not be diverted, either for Jehovah or their Messiah. They could not abide the trial of their faith; so they were sifted out as chaff. Thus it was in the days of Luther. The mass of professors had lost sight of the gospel plan of justification by faith, and had formed one of their own. When it was made clear from scripture as a sunbeam, the leaders could not receive it. It would have broken up their plans for self-aggrandizement, and prostrated them in the dust, in penitence and prayer before God. It would have required a confession to the world for having united with others to deceive them. They could not abide this trial of their faith. Thus their hypocrisy was discovered; they were sifted out.

It is as plainly proved from God's word, as justification by faith can be, that the religious editors and ministers of our day, have to an alarming degree, lost sight of the christian's hope and calling; nay of one of our Saviour's names; yet they will not believe. They could believe were it, in their esteem, either for their credit or their comfort. Surely no man's conscience, or common sense, or scripture character, is shocked by the plain language of inspiration. Every one who is willing to listen to God can do so and enjoy the approbation of their conscience. One in this city who had strenuously advocated the fable of a temporal millennium, and the return of the Jews, told me that he had relinquished these notions. He also said repeatedly that he had no reason to give why he should not believe that the Second Advent would take place this year. Yet this distinguished leader in the church is now opposing. I cannot learn that he ever honestly and openly avowed his convictions, nor that he has got new light from scripture to alter his mind; therefore the conclusion is irresistible that he is not 'enduring to the end;' he seems to be shrinking or drawing back. If so, he will be sifted out. The promised salvation to those who 'look for' the Saviour 'the second time,' has, it seems, less power over him, than the church and the world.

The 'Christian Secretary' should bear in mind who it was, that said the 2300 days of the prophecy of Daniel would end this year—who had no faith in a temporal millennium—who said that 'some great event is coming.' Without any public avowal of a reason for believing to the contrary (so far as I am informed) its conductors are writing as if no such ideas were ever suggested to their minds—God holds them accountable for letting their 'light shine.' If they do not, conscience and scripture convict them of a want of that character which they seem to long to fasten, by way of anticipation, on those who, 'if the vision tarry,' would in obedience to God 'WAIT FOR IT.' If we are honest they say, we shall confess after the 21st inst. If they have had such convictions as they have expressed in private, are they honest before God, in suppressing them. They should honestly tell the church that the world is not to be converted—the prophetic period ends and 'something is coming.' If not it is clear that something beside scripture operates on their minds. I have dreadful apprehensions that they are sifted out. They certainly are, in appearance, with the chaff, the world, so far as the hope of the gospel, and the Speedy Coming of Christ is concerned.

Take an example from the ministry—one of a great many. He has professedly studied his Bible forty years; yet he does not, (probably cannot) tell what is the hope of the gospel. When his opposition is strongly expressed, and his feelings become manifest, he is told in an enquiring way, 'then you do not want your Lord to Come?' 'NO, NOT A BIT!' was his reply. Such men are sifted out from all neighborhood with apostles. When the Saviour's coming was announced to the beloved John, he exclaimed, 'Amen! even so; come Lord Jesus.'

Many Bibles have been scattered over the world, and much light shed on this generation; therefore the guilt of rejecting its contents is greater now than ever before. 'Where much is given, much will be required.'

But the way in which the doctors are detected—the manner in which the leaders and their followers in the church, are sifted out by the doctrine of the Advent, stated in scriptural language, is truly wonderful. O how is hell moved to meet them at their coming! Isa. 14: 9. It is difficult to express my convictions just as I desire. The mass of ministers oppose us when quoting the plain language of God's word, relative to our hope, and the Saviour's name; therefore we know that God has detected them, as he did the papists by the reformation; as he did the Jews by the language of their scriptures. Their sympathies are seemingly with this world, 'which is nigh unto cursing, whose end is to BE BURNED.' 'Nevertheless the foundation of God standeth sure, having this seal, the Lord knoweth them that are his.' The devil will get none but the chaff; not one grain of wheat shall perish. The Lord's fan is in his hand, and he will thoroughly purge his floor. He will gather his wheat into the garner; but he will burn up the chaff with unquenchable fire.

THE MARRIAGE OF THE LAMB.

Now let the Church, with one accord,
Prepare to meet their coming Lord;
He has declared the time's at hand,
And bids us pray and watching stand.

Behold the time! the day draws near,
When Christ in judgment shall appear;
On a bright cloud he will descend,
To judge the nation's of the land.

The earth will quake, creation bend,
The Heaven's shake, the rocks will rend;
The tombs will burst, the saints come forth;
The living reign with Christ on earth.

Our Lord will banish from his throne
All that belongs to Babylon:
His presence will all sin destroy,
And saints will sing and shout for joy.

Now is the time! with one accord
Prepare to meet your coming Lord,
Arrayed in garments white and clean,
For soon the Bridegroom will be seen.

FANATICISM.

———, 5th February, 1844.

Dear Brother,—I arrived in safety on Tuesday evening, about 6 o'clock, at Lockport, the 9th of January. Brother Galusha was absent at Buffalo. He left Lockport that morning to convey Mr. Hines, a Millerite of the Christian sect, the editor, I believe, of the Midnight Cry.

Millerism seems to absorb his whole soul; and the means adopted to advance the kingdom of Christ are neglected, or forgotten, or deemed useless. I heard bro. Galusha publicly say, that the devil laughs at all our attempts to convert the heathen! That the world is in a worse condition now than it was fifty years ago!

The Baptist church in Lockport has been rent to pieces by Millerism. Brother Galusha has entered into this system of delusion with his whole heart, and it has become with him the all-absorbing subject; every thing else with him seems to appear of minor importance. Though he possesses many amiable and excelent qualities, he does not possess a well-balanced mind. In its composition, the sanguine and the erratic appear to be the prevailing qualities. For many years his mind has been absorbed with some topic or other aside from the ministry of reconciliation, which in a great measure has unfitted him for pastoral duty. Anti-masonry for a time was the all-absorbing theme; then Abolition in its most ultra form, engaged his attention; and now, every thing else, compared to Millerism, seems, with him, less than nothing, and wholly vanity. It appears to me, that the tendency of the Millerite system, is fast verging towards the formation of a new sect. Among the elements of its composition are found Perfectionists, Destructionists, Arminians, Arians, Socinians, excluded Baptists, Presbyterians, Methodists, &c. &c. No doubt there are some very good men, of diffent denominations, who possess, in their temperature of mind, an union of the sanguine and erratical, who have been induced to embrace this strong delusion. But I apprehend when their expectations are disappointed, on the 21st of next month they will still endeavor, by some contrivance or another, to keep together as a party. Such is the heterogeneousness of the mass of materials of which the party is composed, that it seems to contain within itself the elements of self destruction. It appears to be a dangerous experiment for good men to unite with; men who hold many destructive heresies, because they agree in a single point, in sustaining Millerism. Our lovely and amiable brother Cook is already ensnared by these evil communications and associations; and brother Galusha, whom we have all respected and loved, is now associating with men who deny the supreme divinity of Jesus Christ, and who embrace other destructive errors. His situation appears not less dangerous than that of brother Cook.

Let us be admonished by events like these, not to be high minded, but fear; lest a promise being left us of entering into his rest, any of us should seem to come short of it.

Brother Galusha, I am informed, has resigned his pastoral care of the church in Lockport, and brother Winchell is now supplying his place.—Baptist Advo.

The above article carries with it, its own explanation. Brother Galusha has been the great Champion of the Baptist Church in Western New York for many years. Any Babtist man, woman, or child, that could have been presumptuous enough to say aught against brother Galusha, would have been considered unworthy the name of Baptist. But now, "a VENERABLE minister" of that church has made the discoverery that he "has not a well-balanced mind. The reason is obvious. Bible truth, has gained the ascendency over sectarianism.

THE MILLENIUM.

It has been estimated that near fifty thousand have been hopefully converted from heathenism within the last thirty years.—It is also estimated that, during that time, fifteen hundred thousand slaves have been born in the southern section of our country. Now, allowing that five hundred thousand of them become Christians, or have the opportunity of becoming such, then there are ten hundred thousand who are left, in the language of southern ministers themselves, to all the degredation of heathenism. What proportion does the fifty thousand converts from heathenism bear to the ten hundred thousand which have been raised as stock, for the purposes of gain, in this professedly Christain land? It is one to twenty: one heathen converted by those who made twenty, or have pleasure in them that do!! O! horrible! This is the damnable farce that the Devil and his willing agents, the pro-slavery ministry, is playing to divert Christians from their proper calling, [Thess. i. 9–10,] and their blessed hope. [Titus ii. 11–13.

Those who "love" and "look for" the Redeemer's return, though encouraged with the promise of a "crown of righteousness," are deemed crazy; but really, the charge might be returned, and in any ordinary event would be. There is a man vastly in debt—yet is he more vastly proud, so that he will not confess his poverty and ask a release. He blusters about to pay off, and trils to make the world think that he will soon be able to do it; yet he is running in debt twenty dollars in one department of his business for every one he is paying to all his creditors in every department. What would be thought of such a man! Few, but would deem such a man as crazy, as wicked, especially should he refuse a reckoning and a release from his chief creditor. This is a good representation of the professing church. O! my heart sickens, my tears flow, when I contemplate the suffering missionary, in contrast with the comparatively well paid agent or secretary. The mass of them oppose their Lord's return, and yet would not labor a year except they were better paid than they could be in any other sphere they are willing to fill. O! it is a greivous crime to deny the hope and calling of the Christian, with such shallow pretences of converting the world. It is sin such as few pharisees of old ever perpetrated.

J. B. C.

The following is a brief published narative by an aged man—a soldier of the Revolution—and who has for many years been a member of a Baptist Church. So far as we know, his piety has never been questioned.

Its simplicity will be scoffed at by many opposers of the Advent near; yet, it will not be uninteresting to the humble follower of Jesus.

All you who fear God, believe in the Lord Jesus Christ, and tremble at his word, take warning, and take good heed to the solemn truths I now declare unto you.

In the silent watches of the night of September 23, 1823, the angel of the Lord appeared to me in a vision, to show me the end of the world. Then he lifted up his hand towards heaven, and cried with a loud voice, and said, time shall be no longer, for the great and last day is come. Then said I, may I ask you some questions about spiritual and heavenly things? He answered me, with pleasure, and said, You may. I asked him a good many questions; he answered me, and was glad to see me seeking after spiritual things. Then he said, I must be about my business that I came to do.—Then he said to me, You have been in trouble about the last day a long time, and I come to show you how it will take place. Then he blew the great trumpet, which sounded like heavy thunder; the earth was shaken with such violence that the rocks and mountains were rent with the sound, and all the foundations of wickedness, and all the works of men, were destroyed together. When the trumpet sounded long all the saints in heaven gave a shout like a thousand thunders; then the graves opened and the saints arose from their graves; their earthly bodies were changed into spiritual bodies: but the wicked did not raise out of their graves, but all the wicked on earth fell dead in their places. Two were in one place, one was taken to glory and one left; when the saints in heaven and those on earth met—parents meeting their children, friends meeting friends—Oh! the joy, the love, the friendly conversation cannot be told! Now the glory of the Millennium begins; the world is full of the glory of God. Then he showed me the food of the saints; the trees and bushes were loaded with fruit, beautiful to behold, like apples of gold clear as crystal, a bright yellow, of a reddish cast on one side, being soft and tender; they would melt in the mouth like wafers of honey: this is the food of saints. When they partook of it, they were so filled with the glory of God that they could not help shouting his his praise. When one apple was pulled off another immediately sprung forth in its place. The fullness was inexhaustible. O! the beauty and glory of that day; it is full of God and the beauty of holiness. Then the angel said to me, Yet a few days the world shall stand, for the great whore of Babylon, or the wicked world, has come in remembrance before God, to give them their reward. Then the angel of the Lord cried with a loud voice, and said, Come forth!—Then all the wicked arose from their graves, and came forth in full view; the earth was covered with the wicked from one end to the other. Then the angel disappeared, and I saw him no more. Then all was silent again. Now I am satisfied how the world will come to its end.

On December 22d, 1837, an awful distress rested upon me throughout the night: it had been shown to me that that awful day was near, even at the door; that distress was soon coming upon the world, and I was ordered to warn the Church of that awful day; but I did not warn them as I was commanded; therefore the Lord was angry with me for my disobedience, and sought to take my life. But, strange as it may seem, through fear and weakness, I neglected to obey the Lord at that time, until the impression, so powerful then on my mind, gradually wore away, and the dreadful warning was not given—the fearful message was never delivered.

This morning, March 21, 1841, I read a portion of the word of God, and as I retired to bow upon my knees before God, the awful presence of God came in anger against me, to kill me because I did not publish his word as he commanded me to do. Oh! the dreadful shock of horror and anguish that seizedupon me; I cried for mercy, that he would spare me this time and I would obey him, and would publish his word as I was commanded to do. This last visitation so powerfully affected me that I fell sick, which continued for some days. ABIJAH PHELPS.

DUTY OF THE TIMES.

The signs of the times demand that we should be "looking for and hastening unto the coming of the Son of man." We are not to sit down careless and unconcerned, but, like diligent and faithful servants, who, having received intimation of their master's speedy return, make everything ready for his reception, wait daily at the posts of his doors, and listen to hear the sound of the wheels of his chariot, "that when he cometh and knocketh, they may open to him immediately." So let Christians act in this eventful period. "Let your loins be girded about and your lights burning, and ye yourselves like unto them that wait for their Lord."—The cry is given, "Behold, the Bridegroom cometh!" What, then, is our duty but to arise and trim our lamps, and to go forth in faith, and in joyful expectation to meet him? Blessed be God, there are many that are so doing, whose lamps are trimmed, whose lights are burning, and who have the Oil of God's grace in their hearts, and are going forth in faith and profession to meet their Lord! When he comes, they who are READY, will go in with him to the marriage supper of the Lamb, and the door will be shut! O! what an interesting and solemn period? What separations will take place in families, and among some of his professed friends! "Then shall two be in one bed, the one taken and the other left: two in the field, the one taken, and the other left." Reader, let me call upon thee to examine thine own heart. How do matters stand between God and thine own soul? Hast thou the grace of God in thine heart? Dost thou know the truth as it is in Jesus? Art thou clothed with the spotless robe of the Redeemer's righteousness, influenced by his Spirit, and looking for his second glorious coming? If not, neglect no longer, "so great salvation." It will be too late to provide oil when the Bridegroom is come. It will be useless to say, "Lord! Lord!" when the door is shut. "Afterwards came the foolish virgins, saying, Lord! Lord! open unto us!" Foolish, indeed, to come after the door was closed: they should have come before; but, alas, they deceived themselves; they never entertained a doubt respecting their safety; they held the lamp of profession, went to church, received the sacrament, and did many things; but they considered not the time and manner of Christ's coming; they attended not to the "signs of the times," and, therefore, neither looked for nor expected his coming: and now they learn, to their shame and confusion, that, not being ready, they go not in with him to the marriage-supper of the Lamb. O, awful thought. Oh! that in these last days, God would give the mighty power of his Spirit to warn the sinner with effect: that some might yet escape for their life, and take refuge from the coming calamity, in the hitherto despised, but still outstretched arms of their Saviour.

LIARS DEPARTMENT.

FATHER MILLER.—Some of the followers of this gentleman are now lecturing in this city, on the coming destruction of the world, which they have fixed to take place, as we understand, on the 23d of the present month. In all ages of the world ignorant people have been deluded by those who have undertaken to expound the councils of the Almighty, and to foretell coming events; but it is somewhat extraordinary, that in an age so enlightened as the present, when almost every one can read and examine for himself, there should exist so much credulity as to receive as truth the preaching of professed prophets on subjects which are inscrutable by the human mind. We do not doubt the sincerity of Mr. Miller—but his sincerity does not diminish the evil effects of his preaching upon weak minds; for weak they must be that can give credit to his prophecies. The chronology adopted by Mr. Miller has been proved false by able ministers of the Gospel, and will not bear examination—and, yet from erroneous premises he has drawn deductions which amaze and bewilder those who are inclined to receive the marvelous, and have not the capacity or dilligence to examine for themselves. We do not know that he has made converts in this city; but he has sadly deranged persons in other sections of the country, and has done great mischief. His prophetic knowledge seems to be very accommodating, for it varies the period for the accomplishment of his prediction at will. The world was to have been destroyed during the past year; but that period having elapsed without the occurence of that calamitous event, Mr. Miller has, after a "sober second thought," discovered, that, according to the Jewish computation of time, the year does not terminate until the 23d of this month, which day he has fixed on for the final catastrophe. There has been a little too much of this nonsense, and we hope that Mr. Miller will desist from further disturbing people's minds, and quietly await the fulfilling of his prophecy—and that, should it again fail, he will not attempt to have another postponement, but at once acknowledge his error.—People's Paper.

CHURCHES FEASTING—BABYLONIAN REVELS, &c.

Isa. 13. "And behold, joy and gladness, slaying oxen, and killing sheep, eating flesh and drinking wine: let us eat and drink, [they will say,] for to-morrow we shall die, [i. e. we shall not live to see the coming of the Lord.]

Isa. 14. But says the prophet, "it was revealed in mine ear by the Lord of Hosts, surely this iniquity shall not be purged from you till ye die, [i. e. they will pursue the same course till destruction comes upthem.]

Speaking of the last times, and of the conduct of the evil servants of those times our Lord says,

Matt. 24: 49, "And shall begin to smite his fellow servants, and to eat and drink with the drunken."

Brethren and Sisters, who are looking for the speedy coming of the Lord, "My heart's desire and prayer to God for Israel is that they might be saved." Ever since the Lord opened my understanding to apprehend the truth pertaining to the kingdom of heaven at hand, until now, I have had not a wavering doubt that probationary time will close with the present Jewish year. While I have uniformly had great peace in believing this revealed truth, and joy unspeakable in prospect of the glory so soon to be revealed, my heart has been, and still is deeply pained when I contemplate the condition and prospects of the multitudes of unbelieving professors and ministers of religion.—Oh, what a howling there is to be among the shepherds very soon! and with what fearfulness will hypocrites be surprised when Jesus is revealed within a few short weeks? Can nothing more be done to arouse them from their guilty slumbers? While contemplating their state and their coming doom, I have, of late, had inexpressibly longing desires to gain access to them with the truth contained in Daniel 12: 10, "None of the wicked shall understand, but the wise shall understand." All Advent believers seem to have a correct idea of the import of this text, and yet I have never known it to be distinctly illustrated and enforced by any Advent lecturer or writer; while it seems to me to be the truth particularly appropriate and important to be pressed home upon all classes of professors of religion, at this last hour of "the time of the end." I have therefore sought, and, as I think, obtained help of the Lord in preparing a tract on this subject, of about 34 pages, suited to the case of all classes of unbelievers, embodying what I have occasionally presented from the pulpit, in various places, on this subject during the last six months, and, as many can testify, with signal tokens of the divine approbation. This tract I have entitled "A Scriptural Test of Saving Faith." Before I had completed it, Bro. Hawley's article came out, and I had also an interview with him, respecting the ending of the prophetic periods in A. D. 1847. I was so afflicted with this development of unbelief, and with what I knew must be its influence on many minds, and the subject was so inseparably connected with what I was then writing, that I was led directly on, to write about 18 pages more, which I have entitled "The Reasonings of True Faith respecting the 2300 Days in Daniel viii. 14." In regard to the phrase "in the midst of the week," I have had access to a Hebrew Concordance, which has enabled me to make it perfectly plain to every reader of the English Bible, that Br. Hawley's views respecting it, have no foundation in truth.

What I have thus written is now published, according to a mutual and harmonious arrangement with Br. Himes, and can be had at the depot of Advent publications in this city and in New York, in quantities of a dozen or more, at the rate of $4 per hundred. That part of it which pertains to the 2300 days, can also be had in a separate tract, at the rate of $1 per hundred. This is as low as they can be afforded for defraying all the expense of publishing and sending them abroad, which is all I wish or expect. And now, beloved, I commit to you the work of conveying this my last note of warning from the word of the Lord, to unbelieving professors and ministers of religion, as God shall enable and dispose you; with unceasing prayer that it may be the means of speedily awakening and saving some of them.

Yours in the blessed hope,

John Starkweather.

FUNDAMENTAL PRINCIPLES

ON WHICH

THE SECOND ADVENT CAUSE IS BASED.

I.—The Word of God teaches that this earth is to be regenerated, in the restitution of all things, and restored to its Eden state, as it came from the hand of its Maker before the fall, and is to be the eternal abode of the righteous in their resurrection state.

II.—The only Millennium found in the word of God, is the thousand years which are to intervene between the first and second resurrections, as brought to view in the 20th of Revelation. And the various portions of Scripture which are adduced as evidence of such a period in time, are to have their fulfilment only in the New Earth, wherein dwelleth righteousness.

III.—The only restoration of Israel yet future, is the restoration of the Saints to the New Earth, when "the Lord my God shall come, and all his saints with him.

IV.—The signs which were to precede the Coming of our Saviour, have all been given; and the prophecies have all been fulfilled but those which relate to the coming of Christ, the end of this world, and the restitution of all things.

V.—There are none of the prophetic periods, as we understand them, extending beyond the [Jewish] year 1843.

☞ The above we shall ever maintain as the immutable truths of the word of God, and therefore, till our Lord come, we shall ever look for his return as the next event in historical prophecy.

SCRIPTURAL TEST OF SAVING FAITH.

"None of the wicked shall understand, but the wise shall understand."

UNDERSTAND WHAT? Why manifestly "the words" which were to be "closed up and sealed," till the time here specified. "And I heard," says Daniel, 5: 8–19, "but I understood not; then said I, O my Lord, what shall be the end of these things? And he said, Go thy way Daniel, for the words are closed up and sealed till the time of the end. Many shall be purified and made white, and tried: but the wicked shall do wickedly; and none of the wicked shall understand but the wise shall understand." The same as to say 'Give thyself no uneasiness, Daniel, respecting these things which I have just been speaking of, for the words, or the language which they express, is not to be fully understood till the time of the end; then, when many shall be purified and made white and tried, and when the wicked shall do wickedly, then, at the time of the end, none of the wicked shall understand, but the wise shall understand these words, and these things.

But what things and what words are here referred to? Why manifestly those which had just been expressed in the 7th verse, in answer to the question, "How long shall it be to the end of these wonders"? And the wonders here spoken of are specified in the preceding verses of the chapter 5. "At that time,"—i. e. at that time when the Roman power "shall come to his end, and none shall help him," as specified in the last verse of the 11th chapter, or when he shall be broken without hands, as stated in chap. 8: 25, "At that time shall Michael stand up, the great prince which standeth for the children of thy people;" i. e. Jesus Christ shall appear as king, (compare Dan. 11: 2, 3, 4,) "and [then] there shall be a time of trouble, such as never was since there was a nation even to that same time: (compare Jer. 25: 15-33; Ezek. 38: 14-22; Joel 3: 1-17; Zeph. 3: 8; Rev. 11: 18; 16: 1-21;) and at that time thy people shall be delivered every one that shall be found written in the book," (compare Rev. 13: 8; 21: 27.) "And many of them," or the multitudes of them, "that sleep in the dust of the earth shall awake, some to everlasting life, and some to shame and everlasting contempt. And they that be wise shall shine as the brightness of the firmament, and they that turn many to righteousness as the stars for ever and ever." These passages as clearly relate to the end of probationary time, and to the commencement of the eternal rewards of the righteous, as any passages that can be found in the Bible. We may say further, that any method of interpreting Scripture which will explain away these passages as referring to the end of probationary time, will as easily and with equal propriety, explain away every passage relating to it in the Bible.

Now with reference to this closing period of time, in connection with the events just preceding it, as spoken of in the latter part of the 11th chapter, the question is asked, "How long shall it be to the end of these wonders." And the words which were to be closed up and sealed till the time of the end, and which "the wise," and "none of the wicked" were to understand, are those which are the answer to this question at verse 7. "And I heard the man clothed in linen which was upon the waters of the river, when he held up his right hand unto heaven, and sware by him that liveth forever, that it shall be for a time, times, and an half; and when he shall have accomplished to scatter the power of the holy people, all these things shall be finished." "And I heard, (says Daniel, verse 8,) but I understood not;" i. e. he understood not the words of this answer, stating how long it should be to the end of these wonders, the end of probationary time. And by a careful examination of this chapter, it will be seen, that in the last three verses, "the wonderful numberer," (see Dan. 8: 13, margin) is proceeding to answer, in another method, the same momentous question. Hence these are to be included with "the words" of the 7th verse, which at the time of the end the wise and none of the wicked shall understand. So, also, since the 11th and 12th chapters are designed to give a more particular prophetic account of what is predicted in the 8th chapter, the prophetic period found in the 14th verse of that chapter, showing the time when "the consummation" (see Dan. 9: 27,) and "the last end of indignation" (Dan. 8: 19,) will take place, may also be regarded as belonging to "the words" here referred to.

It being manifest that "the end," to which these prophetic periods relate, is the end of probationary time, it is plain that "the time of the end" when the wise shall understand, must designate a period very near the eventful crisis of this world's history.

But who are the wise, who, at the time of the end, shall understand these prophetic periods? Why, clearly, those who are not the wicked, viz. the righteous. Mankind are generally represented in the Scriptures, as they are regarded by their omniscient Judge, as divided into two classes, the righteous, who are often called the "wise," and the wicked, who are often called "the foolish," (see Prov. 3: 35, compare Matt. 7: 24-27; 25: 1-12.) So here, none of the wicked shall understand, but the wise, i. e. the truly righteous, shall understand. And the language is such as unequivocally to exclude all the wicked, and include all the righteous. If in an assembly of Christians, I should say, 'Now none of the sisters will understand what I am about to say,' I should of course be understood to affirm that all the brethren would understand me, for that is the legitimate and obvious import of such language. So here, the Revelator evidently intends to be understood to say, that, at the time of the end, all the truly righteous will understand the import of these prophetic periods, which are designed to teach us when probationary time will close.

And here we learn what he means when he says they "shall understand." Not mere intellectual knowledge and conviction, however clear, and however satisfactory,—for this the wicked may have as well as the righteous. Whenever the righteous shall come to understand the import of these passages, be it sooner or later, some of them will of course be able so to explain it to others, that any individual who will candidly listen, can be convinced that the explanation given is correct. So now, many of the most candid and considerate persons who make no pretensions to experimental religion, having heard these passages explained, with others pertaining to the same subject, have frankly avowed their full conviction that if the Bible is true, probationary time will close with the present Jewish year. To "understand," then must imply here something more than mere intellectual knowledge and conviction. Of course it must imply an understanding of the heart, i. e. true evangelical faith,—that faith which "is the substance of things hoped for, and the evidence of things not seen," such as none but the truly righteous ever did or ever will have. And such faith will always be evidenced by appropriate fruits.

A single fact may help to illustrate the true import of this expression. While lecturing in a certain place several months ago, I became acquainted with a sister in Christ who had long professed to enjoy, and undoubtedly had enjoyed, the blessing of perfect love, and for about six months had been fully convinced, and professed to believe that probationary time would close this year. After a little conversation with her, in which she expressed herself relative to believing and proclaiming the truth on this subject, and respecting the importance of being ready, much as unbelievers generally do, and as no true believer in the doctrine ever does express himself, I became satisfied of course, and frankly and faithfully told her that, however fully she might be convinced of the truth of Christ's coming this year, she certainly did not, in her heart, believe it.—At this she felt very indignant, and was about determined in her own mind not to hear me lecture again. But as I had given notice that my next lecture would be on the "importance of knowing the time" of Christ's coming, she concluded that she would hear on that subject; and while listening to what was said on that occasion, the Spirit of God led her to see that what I had previously told her of her own case was true. She went away deeply convicted of the guilt she had contracted in professing to believe such a momentous truth, when neither her heart or her life had been properly affected by it.—

She went before the Lord with deep contrition and confession, and betook herself prayerfully to a re-examination of the Scriptures respecting the truth of the doctrine, and while thus "taking heed to the sure word of prophecy," "the day dawned, and the day-star arose in her heart." The Spirit of God took of the things of Christ as exhibited in this glorious truth, and so showed them unto her, that they became, from that moment a living reality to her soul, swaying all her conduct and conversation; just as Noah's conduct was swayed by his faith respecting the destruction of the world by a flood at a specified time, and imparting such a degree of peace and joy as she had never experienced before. She now in heart, believed the doctrine. God had fulfilled his promise.—"When he, the Spirit of Truth is come, he shall guide you into all truth." And when God guides one into the truth, he so "understands" that there remains no more doubt or uncertainty in his mind on the subject.*

Thus, at the time of the end, all the truly righteous, all who have the righteousness of true faith, will "understand," or in their hearts believe, what God has revealed respecting the time when this probationary state will close: and this faith will bring into their souls so much of the glory of the Lord, and will have such a sanctifying, transforming, actuating power, as to make them, in distinction from all unbelievers, and from all mere intellectual believers, a peculiar people; praising God for the working of his mighty power within, the earnest of their inheritance; rejoicing in the prospect of speedy, eternal redemption; glorying in the cross of Christ, in suffering reproach for the truth's sake; dead to the world; and making it manifest by their prayers and labors for the immediate salvation of men from sin, and by all their secular arrangements, and concerns, that they have not a wavering doubt that the end will come at the time specified in the written word.

Such being the plain import of the text, it implies of course, that all those who do not, before the Lord is revealed in the clouds of heaven, thus understand the truth respecting the time of his coming, as revealed in the Scriptures, will prove themselves to be destitute of that faith which is necessary to salvation. "None of the wicked shall understand, but the wise shall understand."

Not that every true believer will be able connectedly and logically, to exhibit to others the Scriptural reasons of his faith pertaining to this subject. Persons may, and sometimes do, rationally and clearly understand the truth respecting it, as revealed in the Bible, without being able to state to others, in any way, the reasons which have satisfied their own minds; just as many persons who could not even read their Bibles, have been led rationally and truly to obtain pardon and salvation, and to become devoted and faithful witnesses for Christ, by believing the truth, through the Spirit, as conveyed to their minds by those who have preached and exemplified it. Any one who is capable of becoming a true Christian, is capable of understanding this subject in the sense of this text: and if a case could be supposed where a true believer is incapable, or has not the means of understanding it intellectually, he will ask, and God will grant him, to have such an understanding of it, in his heart, as to make all his conduct and conversation to accord with the truth as revealed in the Scriptures, and as understood by those who, capable of investigating it for themselves, afford evidence of having been taught of the Lord to understand it.

Nor is it implied that an evangelical understanding of the truth on the subject is a condition of salvation. By no means. Faith and repentance are the only prescribed, indispensable conditions of salvation. But it is plainly the import of this text that their understanding, or not understanding what God has revealed, as already explained, respecting the time of Christ's coming, will, in every case, decide the question whether an individual is already in possession of that faith which is necessary to salvation. It may also be observed that to persist in closing one's eyes upon the light pertaining to this subject, may, and doubtless will in many cases, prove the occasion of their being perpetually abandoned of God to destruction.

Nor is it implied in this text that none are, or have been, true believers in Christ except those who now understand the truth as revealed in the Scriptures on this subject. It says, indeed, that "at the time of the end the wise and none of the wicked shall understand;" but it does not say that they shall all understand at once, nor are we authorised to say, at any hour of time before the last, that all the truly righteous do now understand. And as to those who have already died, since it may be supposed the time of the end commenced; we can only say of them what may be said of all that have gone before them, 'If they were truly righteous here, they sleep in Jesus, and will have part in the first resurrection.'

It is to be hoped, and we will believe, that many will yet prove themselves to have true saving faith, by so crying after knowledge and lifting up their voice for understanding, that they will be guided into the truth on this subject. But at all events, the text plainly teaches that the character and state of every individual in the sight of God will hereby be actually tested by the time the Lord is revealed; and in most cases, probably, some time before. Nor should any one be greatly surprised, if nine tenths of all professors and teachers of religion should thus prove themselves to be wanting in true faith, considering what developments have already been made among them. Who does not know, that many who once stood as high in profession, in apparent piety, and in the confidence of the community, as any of those who are yet ignorant of the truth on this subject, and whose labors have been much blest to the good of souls have made it manifest that they had only —"stolen the livery of the court of heaven

To serve the devil in."

And very many more apparently of the most devoted among them, have, during the few past years, been led to see and acknowledge that their hopes of heaven had never before been built on Christ, through living, overcoming faith. Says the blessed Savior, "When the Son of Man cometh shall he find faith on the earth?" clearly intimating that, although many might profess and appear to have it, very few would then be found in actual possession of it. And again, "As in the days that were before the flood, they knew not until the flood came and took them all away; so shall also the coming of the Son of Man be.' And alas! how few among the multitudes who then professed to be the "sons of God," (Gen. 6: 2,) were found to be truly righteous!

Here let it be observed, that the characters of the antedeluvians were tested in the very same way in which ours are to be tested on this subject, as here specified. When God announced his determination to destroy the world by a flood, he stated that it would take place at the end of one hundred and twenty years. (See Gen. 6: 3.) Yes, the time was revealed, that it might be understood and believed; and Noah, a preacher of righteousness, both by precept and example, continued to warn, rebuke; and exhort them during this whole period of time. But although it was revealed with sufficient clearness, as appears from the fact that Noah and his family had no doubt in respect to the coming event, or the time of its occurence; and though multitudes of them were, doubtless, intellectually convinced that it was God's determination to deluge the world at the time specified, and some so far believed it, as to be willing, from selfish motives, to assist Noah in building the ark, notwithstanding the reproach it subjected them to; yet they did not in their hearts understand, or believe it; and thus they were proved to be destitute of that faith which is necessary to salvation. "They knew not," says the Savior, "till the flood came and took them all away." Although, seven days before hand, they were told the very day on which the fountains of the great deep would be broken up, and the windows of heaven would be opened, yet they knew not "the time."

In the same way were the characters of the professed people of God tested, at the time of our Savior's first advent to our world. The Jews at that period had access to all that God had revealed respecting the Messiah which was to come. They were familiar with the prophecies which foretold that he should be of the family of David;—that he should be born of a virgin, in Bethlehem;—that he should be called out of Egypt and called a Nazarine;—that he should be despised and rejected of men, a man of sorrow and acquainted with grief;—that he should bear our griefs and carry our sorrows; and that he should begin to exhibit his claims to be the Messiah at the end of sixty nine weeks, or four hundred and eighty-three days, Dan. 9: 25, from the time of the going forth of the commandment to restore and built Jerusalem, as recorded in Ezra, 7: 9.

*There is a wide difference between a tempted and a doubting state of mind. A true believer may be often strongly tempted to doubt, and this tempted state of mind he may mistake for real doubting; but there can no more be true faith where there is any real doubt, than there can be light where there is total darkness. "Faith is the substance of things hoped for, and the evidence [demonstration] of the things not seen."

In consequence of the preaching of a few obscure individuals, like Simeon, who in their hearts understood this prophetic period, and were waiting for the consolation of Israel, there was a general expectation awakened among them that the Messiah was then to appear. And according to these expectations he did appear, fulfilling, with minute exactness, all that had been foretold of him, at the time expected; for precisely at the end of the predicted four hundred and eighty-three days, he "came into Galilee preaching the gospel of the kingdom of God, and saying, The time is fulfilled," Mark 1: 15.—Some few like Simeon, and Anna, and John the Baptist, could readily perceive that all these predictions were fulfilled in Christ, and of course they hailed him, and treated him as the predicted and long expected Messiah. But the great majority of them, though they afforded as clear and satisfactory evidence of being the true children of God, as nine tenths of the ministers and professors of religion of the present day, did not understand, or if they were intellectually convinced, they did not, in their hearts, believe that the time which was to elapse unto Messiah the Prince had expired, and that these other prophecies had been, and were being accomplished in Christ. Many of them, like Nicodemus and the young ruler, were in the common acceptation of the terms, sincere and honest inquirers after truth, but being destitute of that principle of true faith which makes us like little children, distrustful of any opinions which our Father has not taught or directly sanctioned, and which keeps us continnually looking to him with teachable confidence, knowing that he is able and willing to make us know what is truth,—they failed to understand in their hearts that the prophecies relating to the Messiah in his humiliation, and to the time of his appearing, were being fulfilled in Christ. Hence, under the influence of their worldliness, their pride, and their love of popularity, they were led on, first to despise him as the carpenter's son of Nazareth, and then to hate and oppose him; and at length were proceeding with a concerted plot to crucify the Lord of glory, when Jesus with weeping solicitude exclaimed, "O that thou hadst known even thou in this thy day, the things which belong to thy peace, but now they are hid from thine eyes:" "Behold your house is left unto you desolate:" "because thou knowest not the time of thy visitation." "Ye can discern the face of the sky, but how is it that ye cannot discern this time." Had they understood the time when Messiah the Prince was to be manifested as revealed by the prophet Daniel, they would easily have perceived the accomplishment of other prophecies relating to him. But not knowing the time tested their characters, and proved the occasion of their final and perpetual abandonment of God as a people.

Such being the fact in regard to the antediluvians, and the professed people of God at the time of the Savior's first advent, can it be surprising that the characters of those who live in "the time of the end," should be tested in the same way? The passages of Scripture pertaining to the pre-millennium advent of Christ are far more numerous and intelligible than those that were fulfilled in him in his state of humiliation; while it is stated in several places, that certain specified signs will appear visible to the natural eye, by which we may know when his coming "is near even at the doors." It is also a peculiarly noticeable fact, that the prophetic period now understood by all, which revealed the time of Messiah's first appearing, but which the Jews did not understand, constitutes a part of, and a perfect key to, those prophetic periods which relate to his Second Coming, and the end of probationary time. Hence, although the Savior said "Of that day and hour knoweth [in the time then present] no man," (and no one now pretends to know the day and the hour) yet he adds, "But know this, that if the good man of the house had known in what watch the thief would come, he would have watched." And since God has, in the prophetic periods, made known in what watch our Lord will come, and since "the wise" who live in the time of the end are required to "know when it is near, even at the doors," in order that the cry may be seasonably made, "Behold the bridegroom cometh, go ye out to meet him,"—who would not reasonably expect, that the understanding or not understanding of these Scriptures at the same time specified, would become a test of christian character? Why, it is not only reasonable to expect it, but it must be so, from the very nature of the case.

The church is represented as the "Bride, the Lamb's wife." "I have espoused you to one husband," says the Apostle to the Corinthians, "that I may present you as a chaste virgin to Christ," 2 Cor. 11: 2. And in Rev. 19: 7, read "The marriage of the Lamb is come, and his wife hath made herself ready." The true church, then, or true christians are represented in the Scriptures as sustaining the same relation to Christ, that an espoused virgin sustains to one whom she has chosen to be her husband, and who has chosen her to be his wife. And among the declarations of God's word by which we are to be judged at the last day, is the following, "If any man come to me and hate not, (e. i. prefer not me before) his father, and mother, and wife, and children, and brethren and sisters, yea and his own life also, he cannot be my disciple.

The coming of Christ, then, is to the true church, the coming of her espoused husband whom every member loves more than he loves father, mother, wife or children; coming to take them into blissful and eternal union with himself, away from among his enemies and their tempters and tormentors.

Now suppose that a woman whose espoused husband, the object of her warmest love, had been several years absent, should receive a letter from him, containing among other comforting and encouraging things, a designation, couched in language somewhat peculiar, of the time when he intended to be at home for the purpose of taking her to himself as his beloved bride: and suppose that in reading the letter, she had in some unaccountable manner, not expecting him very soon, overlooked or failed to understand this important part of it. Suppose further, that having after reading it, lent it to some of her neighbors, she should hear it noised abroad from them, that this letter of her espoused husband contained a statement of his determination to be at home at a certain time, which time was particularly specified in the flying report. Now who does not know that that woman's heart would leap for joy at the very report, especially if the time spoken of was very near; and that she would, probably, neither eat nor sleep till she had gained access to the letter again, for the purpose of satisfying herself in respect to this deeply interesting point. And suppose that, on re-perusing the letter, she should see clearly that a time was indeed specified when her absent lover would be at home, but that the language was as difficult to understand as the prophetic periods found in the Bible; yet she knew of some friend in the neighborhood who could correctly interpret it; how long would it be before she would be at that friend's house with joyful anxiety for help to understand it? Why, if such were not her feelings and her desire to know the time when her espoused husband would return, it would prove to the satisfaction of every unprejudiced mind, that she had no proper regard for him as sustaining such a relation.

So when, at the time of the end, it is proclaimed abroad as being revealed in the word God, that the blessed Bridegroom of the church will come at a specified time, and that very soon, to take his loving, longing, weary bride to himself, every one that truly sustains that relation will of course rejoice exceedingly at the very proclamation: and so desirous will they be to know the time of his coming, that they will give themselves no rest till they have diligently searched the Scriptures for themselves to see whether these things are so; knowing that the things which are revealed are for them to understand. So, also, every individual who has the spirit of Christ, without which we are none of his,—that spirit of benevolence which led him from heaven to earth, and from the manger to the cross, to rescue sinners doomed to hell—will earnestly desire to know if the Lord is so soon coming to destroy all the wicked from the earth, that they may present it as a motive, in connection with others, to induce their friends and neighbors to flee immediately to Christ for salvation.

It is then certain that all who have the spirit of Christ, all who compose the true church,—the bride, the Lamb's wife, will earnestly desire and diligently search to know the truth pertaining to this delightfully interesting subject; for, at the time of the end, all will hear the proclamation "Behold the Bridegroom cometh." But what if they find themselves unable to determine, with undoubting certainty, what is the precise import of these prophetic periods—when they begin and when they will end? Why, then they will remember the declaration of the blessed Savior, "When the spirit of truth is come, he shall guide you into all truth," and their faith—that faith by which they are characterized as truly righteous—will not fail to secure its fulfilment; for it will be unto them according to their faith. Yes, "the wise will understand," "but none of the wicked shall understand." Here let it be observed, that those who are taught of God are not left in doubt or uncertainty in respect to the point in question; and if an individual has not faith enough to secure the fulfillment of this promise, he will find that he has not the faith which is necessary to salvation.

In accordance with this view of the subject, the question as to the true import of these prophetic periods, is actually proving a test of character at the present time, all over the world where the Bible is read.

It is very generally admitted by reflecting and candid minds, that we must now be living somewhere within the period properly denominated "the time of the end."—It is seen and admitted that what is prophecied of this period in Dan. 12: 4, 10, is fulfilled to the very letter. For several years past "many have been running to and fro" in an unprecedented manner, disseminating information on all subjects; and knowledge has been increasing with wonderful rapidity, especially knowledge of the Scriptures and particularly of the prophecies."

Many, in the scriptural and proper sense of the terms, have been 'purified and made white' in the blood of the Lamb; and their faith has been 'tried' more severely, even, than it could have been by either the sword or the faggot. The wicked too are doing wickedly, to an astonishing and alarming degree.

What was prophecied by our Savior, of the period immediately preceding his second coming, at the end of the world; as recorded in Matt. 24: 29; and in Luke 21: 25, 26; has also been fulfilled to the very letter. That his coming there spoken of, could not have meant his coming to destroy Jerusalem, is manifest, in the first place, from the fact that the 'tribulation of those days' prophecied of in Matt. 24: 21, 22, was to be such as never was and never shall be again—which could not have been true of any tribulation since these predictions were uttered, except that which came upon the church during the 1260 days of Papal domination: for according to Dan. 12: 1, when Christ shall have come and delivered his people there will be, on earth, to all his enemies, "to the Jew first and also to the Gentile," such a time of trouble "as never was since there was a nation to that time." And then, the Savior says he will come "after the tribulation of those days," which could not be true, if the tribulation spoken of was that brought upon the Jews by his coming to destroy Jerusalem. Besides it is a simple, plain matter of fact that Christ did not come, in the manner here specified, at the destruction of Jerusalem. But considering this tribulation according to its obvious import, as that which the church has already suffered under Papal persecution, and all is plain and intelligible, and his coming here spoken of will then be seen to mean his final coming at the end of the world, which is described in other parts of the Bible in simple language. In respect to this his Second Coming he says, "Immediately after the tribulation of those days," and Mark (13: 24,) has recorded it, "in those days, [after that tribulation,] shall the sun be darkened, and the moon shall not give her light;" which was literally fulfilled with in the memory of many now living, "in those days," i. e., in A. D. 1780, before the 1260 days of Papal rule had ended, and "after that tribulation" had subsided: for it had in a great measure subsided by that time:—"the stars shall fall from heaven;" which has also been literally fulfilled, as almost every reader will recollect,; for the proper definition of a star is, "a small luminous body in the heavens." There have been, also, within a few years, and especially during the past year, the most remarkable "signs in the sun and in the moon and in the stars, and men's hearts failing them for fear and for looking after those things which are coming upon the earth," in exact accordance with the prediction of our Savior as recorded in Luke 21: 26. "And then, v. 27, shall they see the Son of Man coming in a cloud with power and great glory." "Verily I say unto you," v. 32, "This generation," i. e., the generation which is upon earth when these signs appear, and just before he appears in the clouds of heaven, for he is speaking expressly here for their benefit, just as the Apostle did in 1 Thess. 4: 15. "We [of this generation,] which are alive and remain unto the coming of the Lord, &c. "This generation shall not pass away, till all be fulfilled."

We, then, of the present generation, are unquestionably living "in the time of the end," when "the words" which the wise and none of the wicked were to understand, are no longer "closed up and sealed." Accordingly, many have, as they believe and profess, been led, intellectually and in their hearts, to understand the true import of these prophetic periods. It is, also, a noticeable fact, that all without a single exception, who profess clearly to understand them, and who afford evidence of having been taught of the Lord to understand his word, do believe without a doubt, that probationary time will end with the present Jewish year. And while acting in accordance with their belief, they have, as we have reason to think, caused the cry, "Behold the Bridegroom cometh," to reach, in some way, the ears or the eyes of every professed disciple of Jesus now living on the globe.

And now, what has been, and what is, the result? Why, to say nothing of the ungodly world in general, who, we expect, will of course disregard the proclamation; a large portion of those who profess to be the bride, the "Lamb's wife," ministers of religion not excepted, instead of appearing glad to think that it may be true, and eagerly setting themselves, with humble and teachable minds, to search the Scriptures for themselves, to see whether these things are so, have persisted in treating the subject with contemptuous indifference; and others have pertinaciously and sneeringly refused, when asked, to examine the subject, or to have it discussed in their places of worship, or even spoken of in their religious meetings; and those who, like Simeon and Anna, are joyfully waiting for the consolation of Israel, or like John the Baptist and the fishermen of Galilee, are proclaiming the kingdom of God now nigh at hand, have been treated and spoken of by them, just as Christ and his disciples were spoken of and treated by the professors of religion—the scribes and pharisees of their day. "Can any thing good come out of Nazareth?" "Have any of the scribes or the rulers of the people believe him?" "This people who knoweth not the law are cursed." "Thou art his disciple! we are Moses' disciples." "Are ye also deceived?" Who has not heard their sneering remarks about the "Millerites"—their "going up," their "ascension robes," their "dreams and visions," their "setting April fool day" for the coming of Christ, &c. &c. &c. Oh! methinks if our coming Lord and King were here now to speak to them, he would say to them, and to all who feel as they do on this subject, as as he once said to their prototypes of old: "Ye hypocrites! ye generation of vipers! how can ye escape the damnation of hell?" for whether the Lord comes this year or not, they have proved it out conclusively that, with all their high professions, they are not the espoused bride of the coming bridegroom. Oh that they had known in this their day, the things which belong to their peace! These professors are all ignorant, of course, of the true import of the prophetic periods, and for the very good reason, they have no wish to understand them.

But another portion of professors and ministers of religion have been willing to look at the subject, and some of them have investigated it with considerable care, and yet they are not satisfied that they understand the import of these prophetic periods. Some of them have not even abandoned their preconceived opinions respecting a temporal millenium of a thousand years or more.—Others have become convinced that the end must be near, and think it may be this year, but they do not "understand" what the Bible says about the time. Now from careful and extensive inquiry, I have reason to believe, that ninety-nine hundredths of all this class of professors and ministers are conscious that they have yet some preparations to make, before they shall be all ready, as they wish to be, for the coming of the Lord. Of course, they feel in a measure under condemnation, for they know they ought to be at all times ready for their departure hence to a world of retribution. It is, therefore, by no means certain as yet, that they are the true disciples of Jesus. God has told us by his inspired Apostles, that "there is no condemnation to those that are in Christ Jesus;" (Rom. 8: 1) and that "whatsoever is born of God overcometh the world; and this is the victory that overcometh the world, even our faith;" (1 John, 5: 4,) and then verse 10, "He that believeth [has true faith] in the Son of God hath the witness in himself, that God hath given him eternal life." Hence the exhortation "Be diligent, that ye may found of him in peace without spot and blameless." For, "without holiness no man shall see the Lord." Whatever professions one may make, or however devotedly pious he may appear to be, if he has not that faith in Christ which frees from condemnation, and overcomes the world, and brings into his bosom the precious witness that God has given to him eternal life, it is no matter of wonder that he does not "understand." "If thine eye be evil," says the Saviour, "thy whole body shall be full of darkness." "If any man will do his will he shall know of the doctrine." "Without faith it is impossible to please God."

But the true state of many of these hearts has already been tested, and others of them are now being tested very rapidly by means of these "words" which they do not understand, but which the wise shall "understand." Those of them who cannot abandon their preconceived opinions respecting a temporal millennium, are fast making it manifest that they have not the child-like, humble, teachable mind which is implied in true saving faith. In the first place, they are preaching and acting directly in the face of the unquestionable fact, that nearly the whole Christian Church, from the apostles downward, believed and rejoiced in the personal coming of Christ before the millennium; until a little more than one hundred years ago Daniel Whitby conjured up and published to the world the soothing theory which they are now advocating. And then, in this tradition against the doctrine of Christ's pre-millennial advent as now preached, they are obliged to suppose, (for they know it never has been and never can be proved, nor can it be made to appear like common sense,) that all the prophetic periods in Daniel and John have already been fulfilled in literal days; and that too in opposition to the opinion of all the most learned and pious commentators in all past time! In maintaining this tradition also, they utterly disregard the plain instructions in Dan. 7: 21, 22; 2 Thess. 2: 8; Matt. 13: 24–30, 36–42; Luke 21: 24–28, which teach that the man of sin, with all his deceivableness of unrighteousness, with other persecuting enemies of Christ, will continue on earth prevailing against, and oppressing the saints, until Christ comes in the clouds of heaven to set up his everlasting kingdom. It has also been mathematically demonstrated, that should the population of the earth increase no faster than it has in this country for the last fifty years, not a square yard could be found on the surface of the globe at the end of 500 years on which would not be found at least two living human beings, to say nothing of the brute creation! How can a man have the honest teachableness of true faith, who, with all this light in his mind, can persist in interpreting the Scriptures to favor a thousand years temporal millennium, when God has promised his Spirit to guide him into all truth? The time of ignorance has been, when such a course of conduct would be winked at. But now, in the flood of light which is pervading the land on this subject, God is calling upon all men every where to repent of such perverting of the truth. "If I had not come and spoken unto them," says the Savior, "they had not had sin, but now they have no cloak for their sin."

But look at some other developments which they have made in laboring to defend this scriptural tradition. Of one of them, a distinguished theological Professor, a prominent Universalist editor has said, "In his 'Hints on the Interpretation of Prophecy,' he confutes Miller's views of the second coming of Christ, by taking Universalist ground, limiting the fulfillment of the predictions of the Revelator, to a time not far distant from that in which they were made. It tends, as we are told by a Presbyterian paper of repute, fearfully to universalism."

Another one of them of similar standing has taken upon him to affirm, in direct contradiction to the obvious import of several well known declarations of God's word, that we have no reason to expect the guidance of the Holy Spirit in understanding the Scriptures, except on those points which are absolutely necessary to salvation! and then charges with fanaticism all those who profess to have had such guidance on any other points.

Another has had the presumption to affirm, "If God had seen any good reasons for destroying the world this year, he would, in some way, have made it known to us." Hence, because he can see no good reason why it should be done, he infers that it would be inconsistent with the benevolence of God to do it, the Bible out of the question! So the Universalist says he can see no good reason why God should punish the wicked forever, and therefore infers that it must be inconsistent with his benevolence to do it! Moreover every advocate of a temporal millennium, in explaining the Scriptures to favor his views, is obliged to disregard entirely, the plain, obvious, common sense principle of interpretation, that "every word and sentence is to be construed literally, unless it involves a palpable absurdity, or a plain contradiction." and in disregarding this principle, they lend their whole influence to encourage the infidel in saying, that the Bible is just like an old fiddle, any one can play just such a tune upon it as he pleases.

But let us notice some developments which are being made by the other class of professors referred to who think the end may be near; but yet do not "understand" what God has revealed respecting the time. They have attended lectures on the subject, and read their Bibles enough to be satisfied that those are not right who are advocating a temporal millennium; and in regard to the time, they have had before their minds all the evidence, in view of which many have been led to believe, without a doubt, that probationary time will end with the present Jewish year; but although they can see no reason to doubt that it will be so, yet they do not "understand," i. e. they do doubt! Now in addition to the fact already stated, that the most of this class of persons are conscious that all is not just right with them, as to a preparation for the coming of the Lord; it will be found that, with a few exceptions, which are diminishing in number daily, they feel no joyful interest in the speedy coming of the Bridegroom, except it be for some considerations, manifestly selfish in their character; nor are they exhibiting the spirit,—the benevolence of Christ in respect to those who acknowledge themselves unprepared to meet the Lord. And then, let them be pressed up to the duty of believing without a doubt what they see reason to believe, and no reason to doubt, and you find lurking in the bosoms of some of them,—"What if he should'nt come?" or "What will my friends and acquaintances think or say of me should I believe it?" or, "What influences shall I have for doing good next year, should I now profess to believe it!"—showing conclusively that they have not yet given up all for Christ, or learned by faith to commit all their interests, all the consequences of obeying God into his hands. If we would be true heirs with Abraham, we must have the faith of Abraham; the faith which trusts God with all consequences, and with all apparent inconsistencies and impossibilities. Others of them when thus pressed, will be heard to say that "they think it enough to be ready!', 'If we are only ready, what matter is it if we don't know the time!' thus virtually charging God with folly in revealing the time, and developing the fearful probability that their religion is all selfishness. Such professors will find, when the Lord comes—God grant that they may be convinced of it before!—that the religion of true faith is something more than seeking to get and keep ourselves in readiness for those mansions which are being prepared for those who love God. Such was not the spirit of Christ, when he gave himself for us; and 'if any man have not the Spirit of Christ he is none of his." God has revealed the time when Christ will come to take vengeance on them that obey not the gospel, and has promised the Spirit to guide into all truth, in order that those who have true faith and true benevolence, at the time of the end, having understood this most deeply interesting and important part of divine Revelation, may go forth, under the thrilling influence of undoubting faith in the time there appointed, and do what they can to get others ready to meet the coming Bridegroom. It must therefore prove, and is proving, a true test of saving faith. 'None of the wicked shall understand, but the wise shall understand.'

And now, dear reader, I am aware that the picture here presented of the state of the church and of the world, is an appalling one. My own heart alternately sickens and shudders in contemplating it. But to me it appears to be the true image of things as exhibited in the perfect mirror of God's unerring word. Moreover, it accords precisely with what the Savior has given us to understand it will be, when he shall be revealed in the clouds of heaven. "When the Son of man cometh, shall he find faith on the earth?" Great professions of religion there may be;—much of the form of godliness there may be;—much zeal in defence of the truth there may be;—much preaching about the importance of being ready there may be;—much intellectual orthodoxy as to what constitutes a preparation there may be;—much striving to be ready there may be. But where will be the faith which makes us heirs with Abraham and with Christ to the promised inheritance!—that faith which makes us, as the espoused bride of the coming Bridegroom, with the promise of the Spirit to guide us, to know when he is near even at the doors, and to "understand" what God has in mercy revealed respecting the definite time of his appearing? that faith which is the substance of things hoped for, and the evidence of things not seen, and which makes us, by our conduct, to condemn the world, as Noah did, for their infidelity in regard to what God had spoken? Where, I say, will be found this saving faith? Where is it found? If you possess it, dear reader, you need not an exhortation from me to rejoice, and to praise the Lord for his distinguishing work of grace on your heart, and in the view of the glory so soon to be brought unto us at the revelation of Jesus Christ. I know you want an angel's powers with which to express the gratitude you feel for that influence of the Spirit which has removed pride, prejudice, and unbelief from your heart in relation to this subject, and given you the gracious sealing witness, excluding all doubt, that you understand when "the sanctuary will be cleansed," when "Michael shall stand up," and when "Daniel shall stand in his lot," as God has revealed it. Thanks be unto God, that some do "understand," and can lift up their heads with joy, knowing that their redemption is soon to be completed. Stand fast, beloved, a few days longer, in the faith and in the power of God; "in nothing terrified by your adversaries, which to them is an evident token of perdition, but to you of salvation, and that of God." Be followers unto the end of those who through faith and patience condemned the world, and inherit the promises. Though the vision tarry, wait for it; because it will surely come, it will not tarry.

"Yes, soon the blissful day will come,
When our dear Lord will bring us home,
And we shall see his face;
Then with our Savior, and our Friend,
A bless'd eternity we'll spend,
Triumphant in his grace."

But perhaps the reader is one who does not "understand," in the sense of our text; and it may be you are a professed disciple, and possibly a professed minister of Jesus! professing to be the light of the world, a living epistle of the truth, the espoused bride of the coming Bridegroom, and yet ignorant, or in doubt about the the import of those passages of his word which reveal a truth, the most deeply interesting to the true bride, and the most momentous to all, over whom you are exercising an influence, of any which the Bible contains! You know that the things which are revealed belong to us and to our children,—and yet you do not understand!—that all Scripture is given by inspiration of God for our profit, and yet you do not understand!—that the Spirit is promised to guide you into all truth, and yet you do not understand!!—a watchman on the walls of Zion, and yet you do not understand!!—living, manifestly, in "the time of the end," when God has said the wise and none of the wicked shall understand, and yet you do not understand!! Oh! my friend, what is the difficulty? "Where art thou?" Why are you in ignorance or in doubt on such a subject, till this last hour of time? What will you answer, when Jesus shall be revealed by the close of the present Jewish year, if not before, and shall ask you why you have not, for months or years past, been lifting up your head with joy, and warning the people to be ready for his appearing, with the blissful confidence of undoubting faith in what God has revealed respecting it in these prophetic periods? If you think to say that you could not understand this part of his revelation, when he has promised his Spirit to guide you into all truth; you will find this a serious charge to bring against your Maker, while many will be prepared to testify to the falsehood of such an assertion. If you think to say that you considered it enough to be ready to meet the Lord, your own words will condemn you; for your are appointed to be the light of the world, a living epistle of the truth, known and read of all men; and if a watchman on the walls of Zion, to see the sword coming and to warn the people, lest their blood should be required at your hand.

In a word, you will find that nothing will be accepted there without true faith, such as Abraham and Noah had, that faith which, with the promise of the Spirit to guide, will at the time of the end, "understand" what God has revealed on such a subject as this, and which will make us to act in regard to it, as to condemn all who have not such faith.

I beseech you then, by all that is glorious and dreadful in the coming of Christ, now just upon us, to get down before the Lord, immediately, with deep contrition on account of the manner in which you have hitherto regarded and treated this subject; make an unreserved and an eternal consecration of all you have and are to him; and then, in view of his own sure word of promise to give the Holy Spirit to those that ask him to guide them into all truth, prove yourself to be of those who have true faith, and are the espoused bride of the coming Bridegroom, by holding him to his word, till you are sure that he has made you to understand what he has revealed respecting the time of his coming; remembering that when God guides into the truth, he leaves you not in doubt or uncertainty respecting it. "The wise shall understand."

FROM THE MIDNIGHT CRY.

"COME OUT OF HER, MY PEOPLE."

CLEVELAND, O. Feb. 24, 1844.

Dear Brethren of the Midnight Cry:

Our dear brother Storrs says that the Great Head of the Church designed that we should come out of Babylon, and not wait for Babylon to thrust us out. I believe he is right, and I am therefore determined to come out. Subsequently to my being separated from the Newark Presbytery, I was induced, at the solicitation of several clergymen, to unite with the New York Congregational Association, and was received by that body, and became a subscriber to its creed: having also been received by the General Association of the Western Reserve. This is now nearly three years since. I have never met with them since that time, and do not know whether they retain my name among their list of members or not. But I now wish to say through your paper to the world that I do from this time regard myself, and hereby proclaim myself to all men, as free and independent of all ecclesiastical domination, as a member of no sect, and a subscriber to no creed. At the same time, I receive the Bible as the word of the living and true God, and am looking for the immediate coming of the Lord Jesus Christ, to whom I must give account. "Grace, mercy, and peace from God the Father, and our Lord Jesus Christ," to all who love Him in sincerity; and love to all who love His appearing. Yours, in the blessed hope,

CHARLES FITCH.

Bro. Fitch, is earnestly requested to pay us a visit in this place, and give a course of lectures, should time continue. His expenses will be met, and any other pecuniary assistance rendered that he may need. We hope he will not disappoint us.

ED. WESTERN MID. CRY.

ONE OF MR. MILLER'S FIRST AUDIENCES.—About the time Mr. Miller began to write on the advent near, as he was passing down the Hudson river to New York in a steamboat, he was standing near a company of gentlemen who were conversing respecting the wonderful improvements of the day, when one of them remarked that it was impossible for things to progress for thirty years to come in the ratio they had done: for man would attain to something more than human. Mr. Miller told him that it reminded him of Daniel 12: 4; "Many shall run to and fro, and knowledge shall be increased." A pause ensued, when Mr. M. continued, and observed that the improvements of the present day were just what we should expect at this time, as a fulfilment of Dan.'s prophecy. He then commenced with the 11th chap. and comparing the prophecy with history, showed its fulfilment thus far, while all listened with the most close attention.

He then told them he did not intend to trespass so long on their patience, and leaving them, walked to the other end of the boat. He had no sooner arrived there, than the entire company followed him, and wished to hear more on the subject. He accordingly went through the 2d. chap. of Dan., in the same manner, and fearing he should be tedious, broke away from them, and went down into the cabin. The entire company followed, and continued the conversation. He then went through the 7th, 8th and 9th of Dan. They then wanted to know if he had ever written on the prophecies. He told them he had; and distributed among them what copies he had of the first pamphlet he wrote on the subject. This was one of his first audiences, and men of the highest standing were astonished listeners to his discourse; but the result of that interview can only be known in that great day.—Advent Herald.

WESTERN MIDNIGHT CRY.

CINCINNATI, MARCH 23, 1844.

FUNDAMENTAL PRINCIPLES
ON WHICH
THE SECOND ADVENT CAUSE IS BASED.

I.—The Word of God teaches that this earth is to be regenerated, in the restitution of all things, and restored to its Eden state, as it came from the hand of its Maker before the fall, and is to be the eternal abode of the righteous in their resurrection state.

II.—The only Millennium found in the word of God, is the thousand years which are to intervene between the first and second resurrections, as brought to view in the 20th of Revelation. And the various portions of Scripture which are adduced as evidence of such a period in time, are to have their fulfilment only in the New Earth, wherein dwelleth righteousness.

III.—The only restoration of Israel yet future, is the restoration of the Saints to the New Earth, when "the Lord my God shall come, and all his saints with him.

IV.—The signs which were to precede the Coming of our Saviour, have all been given; and the prophecies have all been fulfilled but those which relate to the coming of Christ, the end of this world, and the restitution of all things.

V.—There are none of the prophetic periods, as we understand them, extending beyond the [Jewish] year 1843.

☞The above we shall ever maintain as the immutable truths of the word of God, and therefore, till our Lord come, we shall ever look for his return as the next event in historical prophecy.

LECTURE.

Bro. Cook will lecture at the College Hall next Sabbath at the usual hours.

Lectures are continued at the Lawrence street Church each evening, except Saturdays and Sabbath.

THE MEETINGS.

On Sabbath last, lectures were delivered at College Hall, and at the Lawrence street house through the day. Both places were well filled, and good attention was paid. Bro. Cook was with us.

A Lecture was delivered at the Hay Scales, in Fifth street, in the morning at 9 o'clock. A respectable congregation were collected, who patiently heard us through notwithstanding it rained most of the time.

Bro. Chittenden spent the Sabbath in Hamilton, and lectured twice. Contention, sectarianism, and the "Little Horn" prevailing, he returned on Monday.

Bro. Cook talks of soon leaving for St. Louis, provided he can make arrangements to satisfy a claim upon his labors at Liberty, Ia. Bro. Chittenden will probably go to Lexington, Ky. soon, should time continue. Bro. Cook attended to the ordinance of baptism on Monday, P. M., at the foot of Pike street. Two were baptised.

The prayer meetings are interesting—souls are converted almost every evening. The ordinance of baptism was again administered on Wednesday, P. M., at the same place, to six male and eight female candidates. A very large congregation were assembled, and a general solemnity prevailed as they witnessed the ordinance. A prayer meeting was held at the church at the close of these exercises. Bro. Cook lectured at the Disciples' church on Sycamore street, Wednesday evening, upon the "penalty of the Divine Law."

We have no place sufficiently large to hold our Sabbath congregations, and there is some talk of again erecting the "Great Tent."

SCRIPTURAL TEST OF SAVING FAITH.

We hope no excuse will prevent any person into whose hand this sheet may fall, from perusing prayerfully, the article under the above head, found in another column. 3000 copies of it have been published in pamphlet form, which will be furnished to those who wish them for distribution at the rate of $4,00 per hundred. Single copies will be furnished gratis to all such as are willing to read, and are unable to pay for them.

L. L. HAMLINE.

The last Western Christian Advocate labors hard to prove that Bro. Hamline has never been a "Millerite." This is all superfluous, as we never had the satisfaction of bringing any such charge against him. But the following will prove how near Bro. Hamline has verged upon this awful heresy.

"This is to certify that while on the way from this city to the Muddy Creek Camp-meeting last autumn, in company with Bro. Hamline, he stated to me that he believed the time, as calculated by Mr. Miller, would pass by, to give unbelievers an opportunity to cry more loudly, "Where is the promise of his coming?" and at that time, when the cry should become general, he believed the Lord would come; futhermore that he had given up the doctrine of the Millennium, &c.

ISAAC C. JONES.

Bro. Hamline also told Bro. Cook that he saw no reason why Mr. Miller's calculations were not correct. This was said after he had prayerfully examined the subject. He has also stated in a public congregation within a year past, that he had evidence satisfactory to his own mind that the Lord would come within a brief period.

Bro. Campbell, of New York, has sent us the following lines, which he says were copied from an 'old book.' We do not recognize the author, but whoever he was, the Bible was not a strange book to him.

Lo! in the last days, behold
A faithless race arise!
Their lawless lust their only rule,
And thus the scoffer cries:
"Where is the promise deem'd so true,
That spoke the Saviour near?
E'er since our fathers slept in dust,
No change has reached our ear.

Years rolled on—years successive glide,
Since first the world began;
And on the tide of time, still floats
Secure the bark of man."
Thus speaks the scoffer; but his words
Conceal the truth. He knows
That from the water's dark abyss,
The earth at first arose.

But when the sons of men began
With one consent, to stray;
At heaven's command, a deluge swept
The godless race away.
A different fate is now prepared
For nature's tremuling frame;
Soon shall her orbs be all enwrapt
In one devouring flame.

Reserved are sinners for the hour
When to the gulph below,—
Armed with the hand of sov'reign power,
The Judge consigns his foe:
The contrite race he counts his friends—
Forbids the suppliant's fall,
Condemns reluctant, but extends
The hope of grace to all.

Since all this frame of things must end;
As heaven has so decreed:
How wise our inmost thoughts to guard,
And watch our every deed!
Expecting calm, the appointed hour,
When nature's conflict o'er:
A new and better world shall rise,
Where sin is known no more.

LETTER FROM BRO. CAMPBELL.

New York, March 7, 1844.

DEAR BRO. JACOBS:

I again write to let you know that my faith is still unwavering in the belief that my blessed Jesus will come the present Jewish year. My brother, I cannot, neither do I wish to see any time beyond it, unless I am obliged to. The coming of the Saviour, to me is more desirable than all the riches and honors of the earth. I desire to see Him who was stricken for our transgressions—who was, and still is, despised and rejected of men—who was bruised for our iniquities, and by whose stripes we are healed. I expect HE will soon see the travail of his soul and be satisfied. This will be when he gathers his elect from the four winds, and takes the kingdom from the wicked, and gives it to the saints of the Most High.

This, indeed, is a trying time for those who are childlike enough to believe what the mouth of the Lord hath spoken, and to act accordingly. Every eye is upon us. The eyes of the devil and wicked men—scoffing professors of religion, both ministers and people, are watching over us for evil: but greater is he that is for us, than all that are against us. Consoling is the thought, that the eye of God is over us for good both by day and night. You occupy an important post, surrounded as you are, by those who not only do not love the Lord's appearing, but contend against the doctrine. You have my prayers and sympathies, and shall have them till the Master appears, and we rise to meet him in the air, never to part again.

O my brother, I cannot tell you how much I long to see the Saviour! Of late I have felt an increasing desire for the salvation of souls. * * * * * * * * * * * * The Lord has opened a new door of usefulness for those brethren who desire to labor in his vineyard. We have hired the Congregational Church, on the corner of Christie and Delancy streets, where the Lord has blessed us abundantly. We have had souls converted in every prayer meeting that we have held.—Bro. D[illegible]'s two little daughters professed to find the Lord one evening this week.

There are no jarring strings among us. We all labor together, and the Lord abundantly blesses us. To him be all the glory.

Your brother in the Lord,

H. CAMPBELL.

LETTER FROM BRO. MAULL.

BELLEBROOK, O., March 18, 1844.

DEAR BRO. JACOBS:—God has been with us since we left Cincinnati, but our preaching takes but little effect. The indifference to this subject is awful indeed. We found a few Advent believers along the way as we came, and but a very few indeed; but they appear to be the salt of the earth. We have been able to well improve the time. The Lord has opened our way to the people wherever we have stopped; and we have so far delivered 13 lectures, and expect to keep on till about the first of April, if time should continue. We were much astonished at the scarcity of reading matter on the subject of Christ's Second Coming. There appear to be a willingness to read, but little disposition to pay for publications. We have disposed of about half of what we took with us. * * * * *

Brethren, please scatter the fruit of the labors of the "holy people" as far as possible, as from all we can learn from the present signs of the times, there will be silence in Heaven for at least half an hour after the 21st day of March, 1844. Wherever we have been, the most unwilling to hear us, have been the orthodoxy of the day. They try every means to pour contempt upon us, and make us offensive to the people. They have opposed the Chart being hung up in the Church, lest it should desecrate their temple. One minister stated, that if he had been at home, we should not have preached in the Church. I can but think the sealing time is almost over, as the people are beginning to cry, humbug, new denomination, and such like, louder and stronger.

Our hopes of deliverance grow stronger and stronger. When wearied with labor, cast down by disappointment, and afflicted with the thought that to all appearances, we are but ministers of vengeance, we "groan within ourselves" for the time of "the restitution of all things," and with Bro. John of Old cry "Come, Lord Jesus, come quickly!"

Yours, in love, W. H. MAULL.

Bro. John Butt accompanies Bro. Maull in his tour, and takes part in his labors. ED.

LETTER FROM BRO. GLASCOCK.

HILLSBORO, O., MARCH 18, 1844.

DEAR BRO. JACOBS:—I have been looking and longing to see some one of the Lord's servants come this way, to give us a course of lectures on the Second Advent of the dear Saviour, but have looked in vain. Cannot you, or Bro. Maul, or some other lecturer, come and give us a course of lectures in this place? I know not one Advent believer in all this part of the country that comes out fully on the time, except myself and wife. No wonder, when we have nothing but peace and safety preaching! O! do come, or send some one, if possible. We will do all we can in helping to pay expenses. Please continue sending the paper while time lasts.

Yours, in the blessed hope,

FREDERICK GLASCOCK.

LETTER FROM BRO. EVANS.

GREENSBURGH, DECATUR CO. IA.

DEAR BRO. JACOBS:—Yesterday your "Thousand years Millennium and Return of the Jews," &c. fell into my hands, with which I was pleased and edified. It certainly will stop the stupid cry of 1000 years Millennium and return of the Jews where ever it is read. It appears to me to be just what the people needed. With such facts and documents before the people, the time-serving priesthood cannot long keep them in the dark.

Mr. Jas. Freeman brought a few copies here, but such is the indifference on the part of all except the Adventists, that they are unwilling to pay anything for light on the subject. There are some that will read when they have nothing to pay for it. The shortness of time and the indigent circumstances of the Advent men, especially the preachers, imposes an insuperable difficulty in the way of circulating this work of yours, or indeed any other, unless through the living Ministry.

The brethren here, who understand this subject and have courage to proclaim it to the world, are looked upon as outcasts by the world, and consequently have to do what they do at their own charge, and are calumniated as fanatics besides. As long as men measure the Bible by creeds, confessions of faith, standard works (so called,) and D. D.s, just so long will they be ignorant of, and indifferent to, the teachings of the sacred Volume of Inspiration.

The subject of our blessed hope arrested my attention some 12 or 15 month ago, since which time I have been prayerfully studying the Bible, with this subject before me, and am satisfied that the advent is nigh, even at the door: and, believing thus, I have thus taught, But my circumstances are such as to prevent me from obtaining the publications. * * * I own none of the books or papers, and have seen but few of them. I should be much pleased to see Mr. Miller's works.

I am able, with the Bible in my hand, (having obtained some help from history and Advent men,) to make out every thing at least to my own satisfaction, except the discrepancy there appears to be about the age of the world. Please give me some information on this subject. * * * *

Looking at these subjects, I am astonished at myself and have concluded to know what the Bible teaches for be time to come; and (God being my helper,) to know for myself, "that my faith may not stand in the wisdom of men, but in the power of God."

Yours, in the hope of being caught up with the righteous at the first resurrection,

DAVID EVANS.

A little assortment of books and papers are sent as desired. ED.

LETTER FROM BRO. BARNES.

TROY, MARCH 12, 1844.

DEAR BRO. JACOBS:—The general theory of the Second Advent, as presented by Mr. Miller, and others, I regard as the best system to a perfect comprehension of Bible truth, that has ever been presented to the world. But alas! how has that system been received by those who are placed as spiritual guides in the path which leadeth to life? When every argument is wrested from them, by which they attempt to overthrow the "glaring inconsistencies" of Millerism, they then abandon the ground, so long occupied by the Christian church, as a true exposition of prophecy—ground on which the master spirits of antiquity have met the pretensions of infidelity, with such unparalleled success. Still, such tampering with the word of God, does not prevent the stream of time from rolling on, or the filling up of the last link in the chain of prophecy. That truth, which constituted the beacon light to the primitive Christians, was the doctrine of the Second Advent. And though they have slept in their graves for ages that are passed, and those who live in these last days deny the fact, or turn their eyes away from the light, still their faith fixes for its object that inheritance promised to Abraham and his children in the new earth. That promise, I believe, is about to be consummated, and the old Hebrew prophet, who with such exactness sketched the history of those four great Empires, that have filled up the time from his day to us, shall stand in his lot, with all those who are looking for him in truth, at the present time. These are facts which give me great satisfaction. It is a truth of sufficient magnitude to inspire the heart and tongue of an angel. Then again, on the other hand, if there should prove any defect in chronology, and the time of his coming be extended a little, how timely does the advice of the prophet come to my assistance: "I will stand upon my watch, and set me upon the tower, and will watch to see what he will say unto me, and what I shall answer when I am reproved." "Though it tarry, wait for it; because it will surely come, it will not tarry."

Yours, in good hope of soon seeing our glorious Lord, A. C. BARNES.

WATCH MEETINGS.—These meetings were originated by Mr. Wesley, in accordance with the admonition of our Saviour, to watch for his coming. Mr. Wesley was an adventist, and expected the Lord about this time; and so taught. These meetings are still continued by the Methodist, but the great body of them have ceased to be followers of John Wesley, in looking for the Lord. And they now present the strange anomaly of watching, but expecting nothing.

WESTERN MIDNIGHT CRY.

CINCINNATI, APRIL 6, 1844.

LECTURES.

A lecture will be delivered at the Hay Scales in Fifth street, on Sabbath morning next, at 9 o'clock. Also, at the College Hall, at the usual hours throughout the day and evening.

Lectures are continued at the Lawrence st. Church each evening, except Saturday, including Sabbath evenings, hereafter till further notice.

THE PAPER.

Our apology for issuing no paper last week, is absence, an account of which may be seen in other columns. We are not, however, behind with our weekly issues, as our subscribers will recollect that at the close of the last volume we issued two numbers in one week.

Brother Kent has returned from Liberty, Ind. and in company with Bro. Chittenden, started for Lexington Ky. on Tuesday morning last. We doubt not that God's blessing will crown their labors in that place, as there is a great anxiety on the part of the common people to hear: We hope they will write often.

Brother Cook left for St. Louis on Wednesday of last week. May the Lord bless his labors in that place.

THE CAUSE IN THIS PLACE.

The interest among the brethren and sisters still continues, though there are not as many conversions as there has been in time past. Seven or eight have desired prayers during the week. The College Hall was filled last Sabbath throughout the day. The congregations at the Lawrence street church were also good. Brother Jones had a large congregation at the Hay Scales, in Fifth street, in the morning at 9 o'clock. The brethren uniformly manifest the firm belief that God will take care of the cause that he has hitherto blessed as his own.

We are constantly met with the inquiry, Your time has passed by, has it not? To which we reply, Not for when our time comes, the time of the inquirer will also come.

We have, however, neither the shame nor the iniquity to deny that many of us have expected our Lord before the present time: And in all that has been presented to us by way of opposition to our views, we have not seen one reason why we should not have done just as we have, in looking for, and expecting the return of the Bridegroom. One thing is sure. The end of the days marked in the prophecy of Daniel has not yet come, for if they had, the event would have been here. Another thing is equally sure. The end of those days is very near, as is demonstrated by the confident declarations all around us, that "every vision faileth." "Where is the promise of his coming?" &c. For these reasons, we feel more than ever bound to watch unto prayer and be sober.

WOODWARD MISCELLANY.

The editor of this sheet asks us for an exposition of the following texts:—"But of that day and hour knoweth no man." "In such an hour as ye think not, the Son of Man cometh." It is rather questionable whether that editor knows that such texts as the above are in the Bible. He has probably heard some one say so, for if he had read it himself, he would have found in their immediate connection the following: "When ye shall see all these things, know that it is near, even at the doors."

Yet these inquiries come to us, not from an inmate of a lunatic asylum, but of a literary institution. What an age of wisdom!

WESTERN CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE.

In the last number of this paper, the editor has copied the low billingsgate slang of the Methodist Protestant, relative to the editor of the Western Midnight Cry, and W. H. Maull; to which he has prefixed a commendatory note. If he is willing to go to the judgment seat of Christ, sanctioning such language as is contained in that article, even though applied to the meanest human being that treads God's footstool, he has sadly mistaken the principles of God's word, which he professes to make the man of his counsel, and the guide of his steps. But when a man will publish half a dozen positive falsehoods in one article, as he has about us, without ever afterward making a retraction, we cannot say what such a man will not do.

EDITORIAL CORRESPONDENCE.

LEXINGTON, KY., March 24, 1844.

DEAR FRIENDS—

After leaving you at the Lawrence street Church on Thursday, P. M., I took passage on the steamboat "Western Belle" for Louisville, and arrived at that place on the following day. There being no opportunity of lecturing on board the boat, I spent my time in private conversations upon the soon expected Advent of our Lord, and distributed some publications. There were many who felt anxious to learn upon the subject; one of them, a young man who resided at Petra, 300 miles up the Missouri river, and had never seen one of the publications. I gave him such as I had. I called upon the sister at the Jefferson House, who formerly kept the Depot of Second Advent Books. Herself, with a few others, are strong in the faith of soon seeing the Saviour. I had not time to visit Dr. Field at Jeffersonville, but left in the packet for Frankfort at 4 o'clock, P. M. I here found things much more orderly—more general respectability—less profanity, and rum drinking, than on the Ohio river boats. By request of a few of the gentlemen passengers I lectured on Saturday morning, and gave away some publications.

After the lecture a number of questions were asked relative to the time of the Advent, &c. all of which I endeavored to answer as well as I could. I never received better attention from any congregation than from the passengers of this boat. The Advent was the topic of conversation till we arrived at Frankfort, 60 miles up the Kentucky river.

A gentleman from Harrodsburgh urged me to go to that place and lecture, but having purposed to go to Estill county, I could not comply. He informed me that Mr. Shannon, the President of a literary institution in that place, was considered a believer in the Second Advent doctrine.

I made no stop at Frankfort, but came by rail-road direct to this place, a distance of 28 miles, where I arrived about 5 o'clock, P. M., on Saturday. I soon found it labor lost in trying to procure a church in which to publish the Christian's glorious hope. I made application for the Court House, but as it had just been put in order for holding Court on Monday, it was refused. I then applied for the Medical Hall, but it never having been opened for meetings on the Sabbath, the gentleman having charge of it dare not make a beginning. The disciples have a very large house here, and I was directed to them, by several gentlemen who told me they were so liberal, especially to all who confine themselves closely to the Bible, that they thought it would be hardly possible for them to refuse to open their house. I accordingly applied to Mr. Poindexter, one of the elders, but he was opposed in toto to having any thing to do with it, because Dr. Field of Jeffersonville believed that God would destroy the wicked. I endeavored to remove his objections, but he soon raised another, which was, that God had never sent us to preach the Second Advent, but to obey the Gospel, the sum total of which, with many, seems to be to be baptised, no matter what they believe or practice. Paul's exhortation to comfort one another with the Second Advent doctine (1 Thess: iv. 14–18.) was of little avail with him, at which I wondered, seeing he claimed to be a disciple of Jesus. But when I looked out and saw the steeple of the house in which they worship, higher than all the rest, I wondered no longer. I then went to my room at "Brennan's Hotel," fell upon my knees, and prayed earnestly to God for direction, realizing how great a responsibility rested upon me, while in a place where the first Second Advent lecture has not yet been delivered. I then opened my Bible, and the first words that met my eye were the following:

"Then answered Haggai, and said, So is this people, and so is the nation that is before me, saith the Lord; and so is every work of their hands; and that which they offer there is unclean. And now I pray you consider from this day and upward, from before a stone was laid upon a stone in the temple of the Lord. Since those days were, when one came to an heap of twenty measures, there were but ten; when one came to the pressfat for to draw out fifty vessels out of the press, there were but twenty. I smote you with blasting, and with mildew, and with hail, in all the labours of your hands; yet they turned not to me, saith the Lord. Consider now from this day and upward, from the four and twentieth day of the ninth month, even from the day that the foundation of the Lord's temple was laid, consider it. Is the seed yet in the barn? yea, as yet the vine, and the fig-tree, and the pomegranate, and the olive-tree, hath not brought forth: from this day will I bless you. And again the word of the Lord came unto Haggai in the four and twentieth day of the month, saying, Speak to Zerubbabel, governor of Judah, saying, I will shake the heavens and the earth; And I will overthrow the throne of kingdoms; and I will destroy the strength of the kingdoms of the heathen; and I will overthrow the chariots, and those that ride in them; and the horses and their riders shall come down, every one by the sword of his brother. In that day, saith the Lord of hosts, will I take thee, O Zerubbabel my servant, the son of Shealtiel, saith the Lord, and I will make thee as a signet: for I have chosen thee, saith the Lord of hosts.—Haggai 2: 14-23.

This morning I went to the Disciples church, and heard their preacher, Mr. Fishback, very zealously engaged in urging upon his audience the strict observance of every Christian duty; and, finally, to look for that blessed hope—the appearing of the Great God, and our Saviour Jesus Christ. But in the room of giving one evidence of that "appearing" being near, at the door, he went on to caution them against the deceptions of certain agitators, who were crying, Lo, here! and Lo, there!—persons who were wise above what was written. He did not tell us who they were, but while his congregation were left to infer, I could arrive at no other conclusion, than that they were those who taught other "comings" of Christ, besides his personal, visible coming, "like the lightning" in the clouds of heaven, immediately after certain foretold signs, (Mat. 24: 23–30;) and also, that they were those who said, he could not come yet, for 1000 years, or for some time to come, and many other such things, not written.

In passing through one of the streets towards the close of the day, I discovered an aged man of color, leaning upon his staff, and as his countenance had a worn, and lonely appearance, the thought struck me that he was a proper subject to receive joyfully the whole truth of God. I asked him if he loved the Saviour? He looked at me suspiciously, as colored people in this section generally do; but seeming to conclude that my inquiry was an honest one, he replied that he did, and that in his service he found all the real comfort he possessed in this world. He went on to state that he was a member of the colored Baptist church in this place, which church had a membership of upwards of 400, and that they were nearly all slaves. I remarked to him that I supposed the whites gave them money to build their meeting-house; "No," said he, "they never gave us the first cent towards it. We paid for it ourselves, and earned the money by odd jobs; and besides this we have more than 200 dollars in the treasury." I asked him if he had heard anything about the Saviour's soon expected Advent? He said he had not, only by way of derision, and was anxious that I should tell him about it. I gave him some brief outlines of the doctine, and stated to him my full belief in what the prophets had spoken.—Every feature of his countenance seemed to kindle with joy as he said, "Oh how glad I shall be to have it true."

To-morrow morning I purpose to go farther south.

VISIT TO KENTUCKY.

Having returned from our journey since the article under the head of "editorial correspondence" was written, we append a few remarks embracing, a brief history of the remnant of our tour. On Monday morning, the 25th ult., we took the stage for Richmond, 25 miles south east from Lexington. This is a pleasant village, surrounded with a rich farming country. I was urged to remain and lecture in the evening, and was told by a few gentlemen that if I would do so, they would raise the town, as they had heard of "Millerism" and were anxious to know something about it for themselves. In this journey I have seen how God has overruled the newspaper falsehoods about us, so as to make them a blessing in opening a way for the truth. I was under the painful necessity of refusing to comply with the invitation to lecture, having allotted myself only time to visit a brother in Ousley county, and return before Sabbath. As my brother lived forty-five miles beyond Richmond, which distance could only be traveled on horse back, or on foot, in consequence of the bad roads, I made application for a horse of a free colored man, who kept the only livery stable in the village. His horses were all gone, but when he learned my errand, he went to procure one for me, but failed. I accordingly started on foot, and travelled six miles to Mr. Green's; he lent me a horse to ride four miles to Mr. Thorp's, where I remained over night. He had a house full of Kentucky river raftmen, who all but one seemed to be fond of Whisky, but Mr. Thorp kept none, so I improved the time in talking to them upon the curse of intemperance, and also upon the soon expected Advent of the Saviour. They all without exception, treated my remarks with becoming respect. In the morning, Mr. Thorp sent his son with me on horseback to the town of Irvin, a distance of ten miles, refusing any compensation for the accommodations he had afforded me. At Irvin a son-in-law of my brother furnished me a horse with which I traveled to the town of Proctor, Ousley county, a distance of about 25 miles; 16 of which lay through the wild forest, where there is not a single house.—Some of the distance affords the most wild and romantic scenery that ever presented itself to human sight.—Sometimes upon the verge of an elevation of hundreds of feet, overlooking the river, at other times descending in "hollows" upon an angle of nearly forty-five degrees occasionally animated by the cooing of turtle pigeons or the chirping of wild turkeys, which are abundant. The products of the country, (coal and lumber,) are all taken out by way of the river in boats, rafts, &c., and the imports are principally brought by the same channel with canoes. I found my brother, whom I had not seen for more than ten years, a firm, consistent believer in the Second Advent doctrine, through the influence of publications sent to his office, he being the Post Master in the place. His wife is also a believer. On the following day, (Wednesday,) an appointment for a lecture at his house in the evening was circulated. Although the notice was short, the people turned out en masse, and listened with the most profound attention while I talked to them two and a half hours from the twenty-fourth chapter of Matthew, proving that Christ did in reality give to his disciples a true and faithful answer to their question as to the time when, [verse 15,] and the signs of, [verse 29,] his coming and the end of the world. Not one of these hardy mountaineers had ever before listened to a Second Advent lecture. They manifested much anxiety for me to remain and talk more to them on the subject, notwithstanding I had not been backward in warning them against the sins of slavery and intemperance. One thing should here be said of Kentuckians: No people exceed them in acts of "hospitality without grudging," and uniform kind treatment of strangers that visit among them. I returned on Thursday by the way I came, and on Friday arrived at Lexington, from where I took the stage to Maysville, Ky., a distance of 60 miles, and on the Ohio river, sixty miles above Cincinnati. I arrived home on Saturday, P. M., and found our friends still looking for Jesus. Notwithstanding the 21st of March had passed by, I did not hear, nor have I yet heard, of one of them either burning or throwing away their Bibles.

THE CHURCH AT THE FIRST ADVENT.

When the Lord Jesus Christ first visited our world upon his errand of mercy to rebellious man, How was he received by the Church?

It was not enough that Herod, in seeking his life, should cause lamentation and great mourning in Bethlehem, by tearing from the arms of every mother the child of her affection, and committing it to a cruel death; But the church—those that professed to be the sons of the living God, strange as it may seem, gave their almost unanimous voice against him.

They first find fault with him for eating with publicans and sinners. (Matt. 9: 10.) This fault-finding on the part of professors of religion, drew forth from Jesus those comforting words, I am not come to call the righteous, but sinners to repentance. (v. 13.) They next charge him with casting out devils by Beelzebub, the prince of devils. While the multitude marveled at the greatness of his work, such charge was brought by professors of religion. (Matt. 9: 34.) But this did not prevent his soul from being moved with compassion, when he saw the multitudes scattered abroad as sheep having no shepherd. Christ forewarns his disciples, from this circumstance, of their fate in all coming time, from the source. If, says he, they have called the master of the house Beelzebub, how much more shall they call them of his household? (Matt. 10: 25.) He, however, tells his disciples to fear them not, but to bring these things to light upon the house-tops. The inconsistency of these characters is brought to view by the Saviour. (Matt. 11: 16-19.) "John came neither eating nor drinking, and they say he hath a devil. The Son of Man came eating and drinking, and they say, Behold, a man gluttonous, and a wine-bibber, a friend of publicans and sinners." The fact that the things pertaining to the kingdom were "hid from the wise and prudent, and revealed unto babes," was displeasing to the church.

There seems to have been no lack in the externals of religion in the church at the first advent. They might have had their societies for promoting the observance of the Sabbath: At least they complained to the Saviour (Matt. 12: 2,) because his disciples had put forth their hand to satisfy their hunger on the Sabbath day. From his answer we also learn that they were entirely ignorant of the nature of his mission. "If ye had known what this meaneth, I will have mercy and not sacrifice, ye would not have condemned the guiltless." They had seen his power over the diseases of the human frame, and sought occasion to condemn him before hand, lest on the Sabbath day he should bring back to its wonted office, the hand that had been withered. So fixed and determined was their opposition to all that he did, that they stood ready to enter their sentence against him for doing to a man, what they would not have refused to perform for a brute, under the same circumstances. Acts like this, of his almighty power in behalf of the suffering portion of our race, led them to seek his destruction. (Matt. 12: 10-14.) It was the church that committed the sin against the Holy Ghost, in charging to the influence of Satan, the miracles which Christ performed by the finger of God." (Matt. 12: 22-32; Mark 3: 28-30.) It was the church that were set down by the Saviour as evil, and incapable of speaking good things—"A generation of vipers," &c.

It is not a new thing for the church to suffer important signs to pass by unnoticed; for while the wise men discovered "his star in the east," these professors said, "We would see a sign from thee," but were told they should have none but the sign of the prophet Jonas—who (as the Son of man was to be) was delivered after being three days and three nights under the dominion of death. This was to be a sufficient sign, for them to observe all that he had taught. It was the church that were charged with associating with seven other spirits more wicked than themselves; whose last end was to be worse than the first. (Matt. 12: 45.) It was the church that sneeringly enquired, "Is not this the carpenter's son?—Whence then hath this man all these things? And they were offended in him. (Matt. 13: 55-57.

It was the church that enquired, "Why do thy disciples transgress the tradition of the elders?" Why these new things? Why this departure from ancient customs and usages? They did not, however complain of a departure from God's word. Such charge would have been groundless. They were the ones that were charged by the Saviour, as having transgressed the law of God by their traditions. (Matt. 15: 1-3.)

It was the church that honored God with their lips while their hearts were far from him,—and that taught for doctrines, the commandments of men—whose worship was vain, and who were charged with hypocrisy by him, who never spoke aught but eternal truth. They were the blind leaders of the blind, (Matt. 15: 7-14) the wicked and adulterous generation that could not discern the signs of the times. (Matt. 16: 1-4.) Against their doctrines, the disciples of Jesus were cautioned. (v. 24.) Laborers in the Lord's vineyard found fault with the Master for conferring the same honor, and granting the same reward, to those that commenced their toil at the eleventh hour. (Matt. 20: 12.)

The church, diverted from its hallowed purpose the House of Prayer, and made it a den of thieves. (Matt. 21: 13.) It was chief priests, and not expelled members, that were sore displeased because children shouted hosannah! in the Temple. (v. 15.) Preachers and elders in the church tauntingly enquired after the Saviour's authority for performing his mighty works. (v. 13.) The church was governed by popular opinion; for when they manifested a disposition good enough to lay violent hands on him, they feared the multitude; (v. 46,) but when the popular current turned against the Saviour, they slew him. (v. 39.) The church, in point of true piety were an age behind publicans and harlots; (v. 32) and from them the kingdom of God was taken away. (v. 43.) The church, for the purpose of entangling the Saviour in his talk, were ready to acknowledge the rectitude of his principles, and the fearlessness of his upright course. Regarding, as you do, the person of none, Is it even lawful to pay tribute to Cæsar? Ye hypocrites, says the Saviour! Whose image is marked upon that penny? Is it God's? No. Whose is it? Cæsar's. Away with it then, and give it to Cæsar; but render to God the things that are his. This they did not do, but marveled, and went away. It was the Sadducees, a popular branch of the so called church, that erred, not knowing the Scriptures nor the power of God. (Matt. 22: 15–29.) A popular church member who was a lawyer, was put to silence by the wisdom of Christ, so that they afterward feared to ask him questions. (v. 34, 35.)

The church, with all her corruptions, taught many good things. They were not condemned by the Saviour so much for what they taught, as for what they neglected to teach. The multitude, in fact, were commanded to "observe and do" all that these Scribes and Pharisees taught them, but to avoid their example, for they say and do not. (Matt. 23: 3.) For instance, they might have said, they were looking for the Messiah every day, and at the same time acknowledged that they did not expect him for some time to come. The preachers laid heavy burdens upon the people, burdens they would not bear themselves. They settled the amount of their several salaries, but would pay none of it. They preached self-denial, and lived at their ease,—preached meekness and modesty; but done all their works to be seen of men,—preached against pride and outward show, but made broad their phylacteries and enlarged the borders of their garments,—preached humility, but loved the uppermost rooms at feasts, and publicly to be greeted with some such title as Doctor or Reverend. They were in the habit of accosting one another as Dr. A,—or Father B—; but Christ told his disciples not to do so. (Matt. 32: 4–10.) Christ denounced the leading men in the church, as hypocrites; because they would not go into the kingdom of heaven themselves, nor suffer those that were entering, to go in. Because they devoured widow's houses, by taking from the poor widow, while they gave them nothing; while their long prayers helped on the matter. Hypocrites! Because they made every exertion to add a member to their church, while they cared but very little about his religious career, even though he acted more like the devil than they did themselves. He denounced them as blind guides as fools, because of the nonsensical, and unintelligible character of their teachings. As hypocrites, while they rigorously attended to all the externals, including tithes, class money, &c. because at the same time they neglected the weightier matters of the law, as judgment, mercy, and FAITH. They made clean the outside, while within they were full of extortion, and excess, and likened to beautiful sepulchres, full of dead men's bones, and all uncleanness. They appeared very good and righteous unto men, but not so to God, for they were full of hypocricy and iniquity. The church had much respect for the pious fathers, and delighted to do them honor; but were charged by the Saviour with pursuing the very course that those did who killed the pious fathers. This appears, to say the least, to be something like doing honor to John Wesley, Martin Luther, George Whitfield, and others, because of the purity of their doctrines, and holiness of their lives; and at the same time, say all manner of evil against those who sacrifice their all to proclaim the same doctrines those men taught. The patience of Jesus with those preachers seems to have been almost exhausted when he cried out, Ye serpents, ye generation of vipers, how can ye escape the damnation of hell? (Matt. 23: 23–33.)

It was not expelled members, nor the least influential members of the church, but chief priests, scribes and elders, that first held a meeting at the parsonage of Caiphas, to consult how they might kill Jesus. (Matt. 26: 34.) These same official members bargained with Judas to betray his Lord. (v. 14, 15.) The officiary of the church were too respectable to head a mob to take Jesus, but just mean enough to authorize one. (v. 47.) The parsonage was the house where Christ had his trial, and leaders, and official members used to the work, stood ready to hunt up false witnesses to condemn Jesus. (v. 57, 59.) They however could find nothing against him till he preached the Second Advent doctrine to them, (v. 64,) when the preacher in charge flew into a rage—tore his clothes, and declared that he had spoken blasphemy; upon which they all agreed that he was guilty of death. To preserve the honor and dignity of the church, some of them spit in his face, others struck him to show their pious horror at such heresy; and that too when he was blindfolded, and afterwards told him to prophecy who had done it, for if he could tell so much about the prophecies, he could tell that. Judas, the betrayer of the Saviour went and confessed to these leaders of the church his wickedness, and frankly acknowledged that he had betrayed innocent blood, and threw at their feet the price for which he had sold his Lord; but the church having so far succeeded in their design, cried out, What is that to us! See thou to that. (Matt. 27: 3, 4.) The church preferred a murderer to the Lord Jesus Christ; even when the sympathies of a heathen ruler were awakened in his behalf, they cried out, release Barabbas, and crucify Jesus. The voice of heathenism cries out, Why? What evil hath he done? The reply and argument of the church is, Away with him! Crucify him! Fanaticism! Delusion, &c. Reason and argumentative appeals from the frozen heart of heathenism, in behalf of Jesus, availed nothing, for the church raised a tumult, and thus the Son of God was delivered into the hands of wicked men to be crucified. When they had accomplished their ends and seen him nailed to the cross, these leading preachers, secretaries, and deacons, exultingly pass by, exclaiming, He saved others, himself he cannot save. He is condemned by his own doctrine, for if what he taught was true—If God was the one in whom he trusted, he would come and deliver him at this time. Remembering, however, that he had spoken of his resurrection after three days, the church go to the ruling authorities, so to arrange matters as to make a final end of this advent doctrine. It is down: Now let us put a veto upon it that will keep it down. Accordingly they sealed the stone and set the watch; But all their efforts availed nothing, for it was destined to have a resurrection, tho' devils, priests and deacons; thick as ants in autumn, covered the garden of Joseph of Arimathea. The real, true time, soon came, and Jesus rose. But that did not better the condition of the church; for they coined up one of the most foolish lies relative to the circumstance of the resurrection, that was ever told by mortal man, "Take this money," say they to the soldiers, and when enquired of, say ye that his disciples came and stole him away while we slept. By the wise instructions of the church, these soldiers were to swear to a circumstance that took place while they were asleep. And if this breach of trust on their part should come to the Governor's ears, why, they had influence with the government, many of their members being officers, and they would clear them, guilty or not guilty.

Marvel not brethren! This opposition of the church to Christ's Advent is no new thing.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM BRO. NELSON.

Dear Brother:—I have not heard from any of the Second Advent brethren since I left. I long to meet with my brethren in Cincinnati, but do not expect to while the day of probation lasts; for the reason that I feel it my duty to go every where, preaching the good tidings of the kingdom—especially where it has not been proclaimed. I expect in a few days to be with the Red man of the forest, preaching the doctrine of the "coming One." Pray for God's blessing to attend my labors. I have travelled over some of the ground that I traveled with Bro. Atwell in Kentucky last season, and find that our labors were not lost. Many, by reading the publications, have fully embraced the doctrine of the speedy coming of Christ. Others were brought into the truth by hearing the lectures. At Harrodsburgh, I found a number of advent believers, among whom are Professor Hatch and President Shannon, of Bacon College. I went to Nashville, Tenn. where I found no believers: I however lectured in the public prison, where my message was gladly received. From there I went to St. Louis, where I found Bro. Stevens, with a lovely band of Second Advent believers, lifting up their heads and rejoicing that their redemption now draweth nigh. The work is rapidly progressing in the surrounding country, as the result of the labors of brethren Stevens and Chittenden. At Jerseyville, Ill. I gave six lectures—had an interesting season—a number embraced the truth, and among them a Baptist preacher. At Rushville, I gave a number of lectures. Bro. Bayley, a minister of the Christian order in that place, has become much interested and is giving the subject a candid investigation.

LETTER FROM R. GEDDES.

Martinsville, March 16, 1844.

Dear Bro. Jacobs:

I have lately understood that there is a paper entitled the "Western midnight cry" published in Cincinnati, edited, I suppose from what I can learn from a January number of the New York Midnight Cry, by yourself. There is but little known about our blessed Saviour's Second Advent, here. A few partly believe it. A great many false reports are circulated concerning those who are teaching it in the east. I have seen a few numbers of the Cry, printed in New York, which I have been much pleased with. I have had a great anxiety for some months, to hear a Second Advent lecture. I think if a good lecturer could be sent through this section, if time lasts, good might be done. Martinsville is on the National road, twenty-six miles west of Terre Haute.

Yours in hopes of soon meeting the great Redeemer.

R. GEDDES.

LETTER FROM J. WEIR.

Brother Jacobs:

Your discourse at the College Hall last Sabbath evening, suggested to my mind the following thoughts:

Jesus Christ told the early Church in a parable which they well understood, that they were tenants of God for a well planted vineyard, and that justice required they should pay the rent; but that instead of doing this, they wounded and shamefully treated the servants of their Lord who were sent to demand it; and at last he sent his Son on the same errand, and they murdered him, to which part of the parable he added this question:—What therefore shall the Lord of the vineyard do unto them?—and as they made no answer, he assured them the Lord of the Vineyard shall come and destroy these husbandmen, and shall give the vineyard to others.—When they heard this they cried, God forbid! Forbid what? Would you scribes read, and write over the contract between the Lord and his tenants, and know the profits of the vineyard to be immense, and the rent to be small and easy? Would you abuse the produce and pay no rent? And you grey-headed elders, where is your gravity, and wisdom, and justice? Where are all the laws and rules of Court by which you judge your fellow creatures? Would you be above law and set the Law-giver of the world at defiance? What! God forbid justice to be done! God forbid there should be no difference between him that sweareth and him that feareth an oath? No, do not say God forbid: But rather say, "Thy kingdom come; come Lord Jesus, come quickly!" And when he comes he will call for the Book he left behind, in order to know what use you have made of it.—May it be the man of our council; may we read, mark, scan, and inwardly digest, those truths that make for our everlasting life.

The plainest truths of the Bible have been wrapped in darkness by pretending that the language of the Scriptures has mystical, secret, or occult qualities. Do not consider me as explaining them. Nobody ever understood them, and the words were only used for a cloak to conceal the ignorance of learned men: for instance, in regard to the Lord's Supper,—we see nothing but bread in the Catholic church; we smell nothing, we taste nothing, but bread. No matter, it is the flesh and blood and bones of a man; and there is no bread there. We see nothing but bread and wine in that ordinance in the Lutheran church; yet they say the flesh and blood is there, just as fire is in red hot iron. These learned men talk a deal of the danger of the Gospel in the hands of the poor and illiterate; but have the unlearned ever done any thing like this? So much for departing from the true and literal meaning of the Scriptures. Beware lest any man spoil you through philosophy and vain deceit.

There are two ways of spoiling men, a long way and a short. The long way is by taking a child before he is able to reason or judge for himself, by prejudicing him against the Gospel, by learning him to shake his head over it as a deep, dark, difficult book, which cannot be understood without a vast stock of human learning; by expending all you are worth in the world with a child, neither lame nor blind, to be brought up to understand the Gospel by getting him taught the follies and the trifles of old heathen writers, by giving him to understand as he grows up, that he is a youth of extraordinary wisdom and of a higher order than the rest of mankind, by learning him to dress fine, by habituating him to consider christianity under sentence of death, unless such as he condescend to maintain its reputation. Do not say I speak parables; indeed I do not; I tell you a true history. Did you never see a farmer's son made a minister of the Gospel without any religion?

EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM NEW YORK.

When we left New York Bro. Timson, the writer, was superintendent of the Sabbath School at Franklin Hall.—Ed.

New York, March 19th, 1844.

Dear Bro. Jacobs—

On Sabbath next, if the Lord spares us, we purpose to open another Sabbath School at the church in Delancy street. In this place, some souls have professed to find peace every night since we commenced worshiping in it. The brethren and sisters are strong in faith—filled with love and the Holy Ghost.

* * * * * * *

Many of our dear brethren have been earnestly searching for more light upon the commandment or decree for restoring and rebuilding Jerusalem. In the 7th chapter of Ezra, I find brought to view a complete business transaction. Ezra received from the King a decree with the consent of his counsellors and mighty Princes, (verse 14–28) to restore to the Jews their rights in Jerusalem—to empower them to appoint Judges, &c. (verse 25,) and to enforce the fulfilment of the laws even by the penalty of death. (verse 25, 26.) Ezra went from Babylon the first day of the first month: I believe the same day the King signed the decree, as we shall find. Ezra did not go to Jerusalem at that time, but to a short distance from the capital of Chaldea—to the river Ahava, (ch. 8: 15.) Where he had gathered the people and abode in tents three days, preparing to start for Jerusalem. He then proclaimed a fast which according to custom lasted seven days. God heard their prayers, and on the twelveth day of the first month they all started for Jerusalem. (ch. 8: 31.) They arrived on the first day of the fifth month, (ch. 7: 9.) On their arrival they were delivered from their enemies, (ch. 8: 31,) for on their journey their enemies laid wait for them in the way, (verse 31.) On the fourth day after their arrival, they that had charge of the gold, &c., did as they were commanded. Ezra then obeyed the King's commandment, (chap. 7: 21, 8: 36,) "delivered the King's commissions unto the King's Lieutenants, and to the Governors on this side of the river: and they furthered the people, and the house of God." Still Ezra found that the people of Israel were given to strange wives, &c. (ch. 9: 1–3.) Ezra confessed that God had given them mercy in the sight of the King of Persia, (notwithstanding they were bondmen) to set up the House of the Lord and give them a wall in Jerusalem. The people repent (ch. 10: 1–3,) and gathered themselves together the 20th day of the ninth month, (verse 9,) examined the matter on the first day of the tenth month, (verse 16,) and on the first day of the first month they made an end with all the men that had taken strange wives, (verse 17.)

Pardon me for being thus tedious, &c. * * *

Yours in the blessed hope, Wm Timson.

We would gladly have inserted the rest of the letter, but it was not convenient this week. Ed.

LETTER FROM S. LEAVITT.

Moriah, Essex Co. N. Y. March 20, 1844.

Dear Sir:—I received a paper printed at Cincinnati, Ohio, called the "Western Midnight Cry," from some unknown friend, I think sometime in the month of January last. I had business on hand that prevented me from perusing it at that time as I wished to do; so I lent it to a friend to read, and it finally got out of my reach. Since the present month came in, I have received another, which, upon perusing, I find to contain sentiments in agreement with my own views and feelings. I was taught to believe, when a child, that there would be a Millennium on this present earth; but about forty years ago, I was made to believe that this earth was cursed for man's sake, and produced thorns, briers, and thistles, whose end was to be burned with fire: And that the Lord Jesus Christ would come in the clouds of heaven, attended with thousands of saints and angels, and gather his children from the four quarters of the earth: Those of them that are alive at that time will be changed from mortal to immortality in the twinkling of an eye, and ascend up to meet the Lord in the air, and those of his children that are in their graves will rise and join them; but the wicked will be left here in the greatest horror and confusion. They will call on the rocks and mountains to fall on them, and hide them from the presence of God and the Lamb.

I have a son in western Pennsylvania, town of Randolph, Crawford co., by the name of Zebina A. Leavitt, who is an ordained preacher of a Baptist church, that is of the same belief with myself; and I think he would be glad of a few copies of the "Western Midnight Cry."

I have recently learned that there is a paper of the same kind published in New York, that comes into this vicinity. Please send me a few more copies of your paper, and accept my thanks for past favors.

Your unworthy friend,

SETH LEAVITT.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM BRO. JOHN H. THOMAS.

Akron, Summit Co., O., March 23d, 1844.

Dear Bro. Jacobs,—

I have taken the liberty to address you this sheet, although personally a stranger, and to ask you to do me the favor of forwarding it without delay to Bro. Cook, as it may be of some benefit to him as well as to myself. I perceive by the "Cry" that he was with you at your conference, and conclude that he is still in your vicinity. Bro. Cook has doubtless given you an account of the Advent cause in this place and vicinity, at the time he left us. Since that time, God has been testing the faith of his children in Akron, in the glorious truth of the speedy coming of our Lord. On hearing the Spirit say, "Come out of her my people," our minister, J. D. Pickand who has been the pastor of the Congregational Church here for nearly five years, felt it his duty to ask for a dissolution of the pastoral connection, which was granted. At the same time many of the members, (about one hundred,) hearing the same voice calling on us, and wishing to absolve ourselves from all creeds, and confessions, and church organization and take the Bible for our rule of faith and practice, obeyed the call, leaving the house and all pertaining to it with the minority, who have for a long time opposed and scorned the truth on this momentous subject. Advent believers in the different denominations in the place have come out of their respective churches. Consequently finding our numbers so large, and not being able to obtain a place sufficiently large to hold our meetings in, the brethren concluded to erect a temporary building, 34 by 60 feet, and in about twelve days from the time the trees for the timber of which was standing in the forest, our Tabernacle was completed. In the mean time Bro. Pickands was laboring with Bro. Fitch in Cleveland. The Lord abundantly blessed his truth. Bro. P. returned yesterday; last evening spoke to us in the Tabernacle from 1 Tim. vi. 13 to 17 verse. The opposition of the wicked in the churches and out, increase as the time draws near, just fulfilling the prophecies. The brethren and sisters are strong and unwavering in their faith of soon seeing the King in his beauty.

A WORD OF WARNING.

Stop, unbeliever, stop and think a moment! Where are you? Hark! What sound is that salutes your ear? Hark!—'tis the Midnight Cry. Behold the bridegroom cometh, go ye out to meet him. Have you trimmed your lamp? Have you oil in your vessels with your lamps? Remember this Jewish year, 1843, has been proved by the word of God to be the great Sabbatic year. Are you prepared for that awful day in which you will have to give an account of every thought, word or deed? Are you prepared for the bridal feast? Do you love the appearing of the blessed Saviour? It is an awful thought, am I prepared when he comes to meet him with joy? If you are not, fly!—oh fly!—quickly to the outstretched arms of bleeding mercy, before it is everlastingly too late. You have but a few weeks at most to prepare for an eternity. Perhaps a whole lifetime has been spent in sin and wickedness, and but a few days left for God. I know not but before this can reach you, it may be too late; the door of mercy may be closed forever. Your prospects gone—your hopes blasted—and you in endless torments. Oh! remember, when that day comes if you have not the wedding garment on, you will have to part with parent, children, husband, wife, and all that is near and dear to you. You have an influence by which you may not only damn your own soul, but many others; which will add to your torments, if possible, a hundred fold.

The Lord prepare you for that awful day of account.

J. A. C.

PREPARE TO MEET THY GOD.

Oh sinner, harken to the voice of warning before it is too late! What an awful day Christ's coming will be to the sinner? Parents and children then shall part, shall part to meet no more. Some of you will have to see a father, mother, brother, or perhaps a beloved sister, taken from you, and you left behind to endure the eternal wrath of a just God. Oh think of it!—lost!—damned!—forever! Every candid and thinking mind must come to the conclusion, that the day of grace is almost past. The prophesies have all been fulfilled—scoffers are saying, where is the promise of his coming; and what have we to look for but the Son of Man in the clouds of heaven, coming with power and great glory, taking vengeance on those that know not God?

Turn and flee from the wrath to come. J. A. C.

EXAMINATION OF ISAIAH, CHAP. 2, AND MICAH 4.

BY GEO. STORRS.

We are told—"The end of the world cannot come yet, for that glorious prophecy has not been accomplished which says—'They shall beat their swords into plough-shares; and their spears into pruning hooks;' " &c.

Some suppose that the words referred to relate to the new heavens and the new earth; but for the sake of the argument I shall admit they are spoken with reference to this world, prior to its "restitution."

I take the ground, then, that neither God nor any of his prophets have given us such a prophecy. We will examine those portions of Scripture that are supposed to teach that doctrine; they are Isa. 2, and Micah 4.

And first, Isaiah, 2d chap. The 1st and 2d verses are what the Lord says by the mouth of the prophet. "The word that Isaiah the son of Amoz saw concerning Judah and Jerusalem. And it shall come to pass in the last days, that the mountain of the Lord's house shall be established in the top of the mountains and shall be exalted above the hills; and all nations shall flow unto it."

"Judah and Jerusalem," or the nominal people of God. "Mountain of the Lord's house" is a phrase that occurs in no other connection in the Bible: it seems to signify the same as the nominal church, which the prophet here foretells will have a state of great exaltation in the "last days": not in the "latter days" merely—which last phrase is used in the Scriptures to denote the last, or Gospel Dispensation—but, "in the last days," or at the end of the world.

This prophecy is the more remarkable if we consider the humble beginning of the gospel dispensation. Let us take a view of Christianity at its commencement. Who is its author? The reputed son of Joseph and Mary—brought up at Nazareth, a place of such disrepute that Nathaniel, an "Israelite in whom" was "no guile," inquired—"Can any good thing come out of Nazareth?"—Brought up a carpenter. How unlike the wisdom of this world! No wonder—"He is despised and rejected of men." But where did he go to obtain the first preachers of his gospel? Not to the learned Rabbis and Doctors of the Law, where the wisdom of these times would have pointed him. No, they are passed by as unfit for his work, and he goes to the fishing boats of Galilee! From thence he selects, mainly, the propagators of his religion. Did he select a more noble class to constitute the body of his Church? Let an apostle answer, 1 Cor. 1: 26–29.—"For ye see your calling, brethren, how that not many wise men after the flesh, not many mighty, not many noble, are called: But God hath chosen the foolish things of the world to confound the wise; and God hath chosen the weak things of the world to confound the things which are mighty; and base things of the world, and things which are despised, hath God chosen, yea, and things which are not, to bring to nought things that are; that no flesh should glory in his presence." And again,—Chap. 4: 9–13. "For I think that God hath set forth us the apostles last, as it were appointed to death: for we are made a spectacle unto the world, and to angels, and to men. We are fools for Christ's sake, but ye are wise in Christ: we are weak, but ye are strong: ye are honorable, but we are despised. Even unto this present hour we both hunger and thirst, and are naked, and are buffeted, and have no certain dwelling place; and labor, working with our own hands: being reviled, we bless; being persecuted, we suffer it: being defamed, we entreat: WE ARE MADE AS THE FILTH OF THE WORLD, AND ARE THE OFF-SCOURING OF ALL THINGS UNTO THIS DAY."

Such was the primitive church: but the prophets Isaiah and Micah saw, that in the last days the nominal, or the so called, "visible church" would attain to a state of great exaltation. The first thing to which I wish to call attention is—Has that state of exaltation been attained in these days? Let us take a view of the present state of the nominal church, and see how it compares with its primitive condition. Are the leaders in religion, in these days, considered the off-scouring of all things?" So far from that being the case, they are men of the highest respectability in community. A man can hardly attain to a higher reputation than to be a minister; especially if he is understood to have a tolerable share of talents; and a homage is paid to ministers that is denied to God himself. In proof of this I need only refer to two facts:—1st. Show from the clear and full testimony of God's word any position is true, and your opponents refuse to give it any credit until they know what their minister thinks; and if he thinks differently they are perfectly satisfied without further investigation. 2d. Let the admirers of these ministers hear the name of God blasphemed ever so often and they will be likely to let it pass unrebuked: but let the same persons be talking against their minister and they feel themselves most highly insulted, and they cannot hold their peace. Can there be any doubt which they most highly esteem—their Creator or their minister?

These ministers, also, instead of being satisfied with the plain names of Peter, Paul, John, James, &c., must have titles given them, such as "Reverend"—"Right Reverend"—Doctor of Divinity," &c. These titles are not only given to, but sought after by the ministers themselves. To see the contrast then, and the present exalted state of the ministry of this age, above that of the primitive church, we must bring forward the first promulgators of Christianity and attach to them these titles; for example—Rt. Rev. Jesus Christ, D. D.—Rev. Dr. Peter—Rev. Mr. Paul, D. D. and LL. D.—Right Rev. Dr. John—President James, D. D. and F. R. S.

Now if these persons had lived in this age, and the ministry of this age is the true ministry of our Lord Jesus Christ, then it follows they must have received these titles, as none dare openly affirm that any ministers now are more worthy. Then, that the ministry have attained the exaltation indicated in the prophecy is a self-evident truth.

That the nominal church has attained to the exalted state marked by the prophecy is further evident, from its expensive, costly and highly adorned places of public worship; into the details of which I need not enter. Thousands, and hundreds of thousands of dollars are lavished on these places, while the poor suffer for bread around them. One of these churches in Providence, R. I. not long since, expended $14,000, simply in repairs. Nor is this done to make the worshippers more spiritual, but to make "our church" more "respectable," and attract to our assemblies men of respectability and wealth.

This leads me to remark, that the prophecy is fulfilled, that "all nations [or people of all nations] flow unto it." Or, as Micah has it—"People shall flow unto it." Denoting that multitudes will unite with the nominal church in the "last days." This also is now true. Such is the exalted position that the professed church now occupies that hardly any man expects to enjoy respectability unless he unites with some of these churches; or, at least, is a constant attendant on some of them, and helps liberally to sustain their operations. If he wishes success as a politician, he courts the churches—if he desires to succeed as a merchant, a lawyer, or mechanic, he pays his homage to some of the churches. Without this he may toil in vain for eminence in any thing; for the nominal church is exalted and "established in the top of the mountains, and exalted above the hills."

It is unnecessary, perhaps, to multiply proofs of the exalted state of the church of the present age. The prophet next proceeds to tell us what "many people" will "say" when the church is thus exalted. Verses 3 to 5.—"And many people shall go and say, Come ye, let us go up to the mountain of the Lord, to the house of the God of Jacob; and he will teach us of his ways, and we will walk in his paths; for out of Zion shall go forth the law, and the word of the Lord from Jerusalem. And he shall judge the nations, and rebuke many people; and they shall beat their swords into ploughshares, and their spears into pruning hooks: nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more. O house of Jacob, come ye, and let us walk in the light of the Lord."

Many persons have mistaken this language as I think. It is not a prophecy of what shall be, but of what "many people" will do and say. When the church, in the last days has attained the exaltation spoken of in the second verse, then—"Many people shall go and SAY," &c. This then, that follows, is what the people will say, and not what God says. And what is it the people will do and say? First. "Come" let us unite with the church. "We have a fine church—fine singing—a fine organ—a respectable congregation, and a fine man for our minister—Come let us go up to the house of God—he will teach us of his ways and we will walk in his paths." That is what they profess they will do. An additional reason why they should unite with the church is—"For out of Zion shall go forth the law," &c. That is—the church is to become so respectable, and powerful, that it will control not only ecclesiastical, but civil matters; and such a revolution is to be produced that war will cease, and men will learn war no more:—"Come," therefore, "and let us walk in the light of the Lord"—Let us unite with the church. Micah, who wrote after Isaiah, adds another item that the people say,—viz. chap. 4: 4, "But they shall sit every man under his vine, and under his fig-tree; and none shall make them afraid: for the mouth of the Lord of hosts hath spoken it."

This prophecy of what the people would say, is exactly fulfilled before our eyes. It is the very language of "many people" in these days; which shows that we are "in the last days." The prophecy of a "temporal millennium," or thousand years spiritual, peaceful and universal reign of Christ, or rather of the church, on earth, previous to the personal appearing of Christ in the clouds of heaven, exactly agrees with the boasts of an exalted church at this time.

Let us now inquire—Did the many people speak the truth? or did they prophecy out of their own hearts? I think the latter.—And to this state of an exalted church, and to what they would say about peace and security, for a thousand years, I think Paul clearly refers in 1 Thess. 5: 3, "When they shall say PEACE and SAFETY; [the very thing that Isaiah and Micah tell us the "many people" will "say" in the "last days"] then SUDDEN DESTRUCTION cometh upon them—and they shall not escape." An awful warning this, to those who are saying nations are going to beat their swords into plough shares, and their spears into pruning hooks, and not lift up sword against each other any more, but all are to set under their own vine—having none to molest them or make them afraid.

But let us see what God says of these false prophets of Peace and Safety. Because the "last days" church is thus exalted, and the many prophecy of peace and safety, Isaiah says, 2: 6, "Therefore thou hast forsaken thy people, the house of Jacob [the nominal church] because they be replenished from the east, [or as Lowth translates it, "Because they are filled with diviners from the east"—German Neology, &c. corrupting all the theology of this country] and are soothsayers like the Philistines, [promising peace when there is no peace] and they please themselves with the children of strangers:—Or, as Lowth translates it—"They multiply a spurious brood of strange children."

Look at the so called church of the present day. Who is she most pleased with? the humble, self-denying, cross-bearing members, who are crucified to this world; or the rich, the "respectable" in the sight of the world, and those that can make a show?—Which do they most regard? Is it not a fact, that the latter are more pleasing to an exalted church than the former? And are not the churches "multiplying a spurious brood of strange children?" Where is their deadness to the world—its praises and its frowns? They dare not speak out against a popular sin, nor defend an unpopular truth. Reputation is at stake, and every other principle must give place to that. Said an old pilgrim, not long since, "When our church was small and poor, we were spiritual—lively in religion, and a happy band: but now we are numerous, fashionable, and like the world, and I do not feel at home."

The church had multiplied a spurious brood of strange children; and such is the case almost universally. Yet she is saying, like the Laodicean church, "I am rich and increased in goods, and have need of nothing." Yes, she boasts of her schools, her colleges, her theological seminaries, her talented ministry, her richly endowed institutions. In her eyes she sits "as a queen," and is "no widow and shall see no sorrow." So has the world fallen in love with the church that even the soldiers, with their guns, cannons, drums, fifes, will all join with it in celebrating the birth of the Prince of Peace; and ministers are to be educated at the Military Academy to be Chaplains in the army and navy! Truly, how much that looks like "learning war no more."

Not only that, but our churches at Christmas, and other holidays, can have exhibitions in their meeting houses that please the children of strangers about as well as the theatre! No wonder the church of this age is talking of conquoring the world, when she herself has gone over to the world, and has become like the intoxicated man who thinks the ground rises up to him when he has fallen down to that. No wonder such a church is in convulsions on hearing the dreadful sound, "Behold the Bridegroom cometh." She wish to see him! No—she is pleasing herself with the children of strangers."

But let us inquire, what else does the prophet say of this "peace and safety" crying church? He says, verse 7, "their land also is full of silver and gold, neither is there any end of their treasures." See the thousands and millions that these churches have laid up in one form or another; either in the hands of individual members, or corporate bodies; if possible to show their contempt of him "who though he was rich, for our sakes became poor;" acting as if their greatest desire was to be independent of God himself, and showing that they have no confidence in him.

Again, saith the prophet—"Their land is full of horses, neither is there any end of their chariots." Never could this prophecy be more strikingly fulfilled than at this moment. Within my own recollection, a pleasure carriage, especially in the country, was exceedingly rare, and was used only by some great man; now the prophecy is literally fulfilled.

Again, says the prophet, verse 8 and 9, "Their land is also full of idols, they worship the work of their own hands, that their own fingers have made: And the mean man boweth down, and the great man humbleth himself: therefore forgive them not."

This is also true at the present moment. Any thing that a man makes to occupy the place that God should occupy, is his idol, whether it be a minister, a meeting-house, creeds, disciplines, organizations, apparel, or any thing whatever. All such trusts shows a departure from God. This kind of idolatry is seen in all classes at this time. "Therefore," saith the prophet, "forgive them not."

The prophet next proceeds to show what is coming on such an exalted church, at the very time of her cry, of "learn war no more," alias, "peace and safety." This he describes in bold and strong language; verse 10 to 21: "Enter into the rock, and hide thee in the dust, for fear of the Lord, and for the glory of his majesty. The lofty looks of man shall be humbled, and the haughtiness of men shall be bowed down; and the Lord alone shall be exalted in that day. For the day of the Lord of Hosts shall be upon every one that is proud and lofty, and upon every one that is lifted up, and he shall be brought low; And upon all the cedars of Lebanon, that are high and lifted up, and upon all the oaks of Bashan; and upon all the high mountains, and upon all the hills that are lifted up; and upon every high tower, and upon every fenced wall; and upon all the ships of Tarshish, and upon all pleasant pictures. And the loftiness of man shall be bowed down, and the hautiness of men shall be made low; and the Lord alone shall be exalted in that day. And the idols he shall utterly abolish. And they shall go into the holes of the rocks, and into the caves of the earth, for fear of the Lord, and for the glory of his majesty, when he arises to shake terribly the earth. In that day a man shall cast his idols of silver, and his idols of gold, which they have made each one for himself to worship, to the moles and to the bats; (to do what? To be converted? No—but) to go into the clefts in the rocks, and into the tops of the ragged rocks, for fear of the Lord, and for the glory of his majesty, WHEN HE ARISETH TO SHAKE TERRIBLY THE EARTH."

Thus, at the very time an exalted church is dreaming of great prosperity, Christ will "spue" it "out of his mouth" and God will "arise to shake terribly the earth." Therefore, adds the prophet, verse 22, "Cease ye from man, whose breath is in his nostrils; for wherein is he to be accounted of?—Learn not to trust in man, which is the sin of the present age, in matters of religion. The people trust in ministers instead of trusting in God. "What does our minister think?" is the inquiry: not, what does the Bible teach? The word is that by which they are to be judged, and not by their minister's interpretation of it. Our Lord commands all to "search the Scriptures." This they must do for themselves, or reap the bitter consequences.

By an examination of this subject, we find, if I mistake not, additional evidence that we are in the "last days;" instead of a prophecy unfulfilled, it is fulfilling before our eyes, and shows that the Lord is "at the door. We shall be further satisfied of this, if we turn again to Micah, 4th chapter. At the very time they are preaching this "peace and safety" doctrine, the prophet says, verse 5, "All the people will walk every one in the name of his God," (walking in their sins, while thus professing to believe that "the mouth of the Lord" hath promised them a state of peace unparalleled: but notwithstanding this general state of imaginary security, there will be some whose full purpose is) "we will walk in the name of the Lord our God forever and ever; and adds the prophet, verse 6, IN THAT DAY, saith the Lord, will I assemble her that halteth, and I will gather her that is driven out, and her that I have afflicted; and I will make her that halted a remnant, and her that was cast far off a strong nation: and the Lord shall reign over them in Mount Zion, from henceforth, EVEN FOR EVER."

In the "halting," reference is had to Jacob, whose sinew shrank, after he had wrestled with the angel all night, and the angel touched the hollow of his thigh. The real church is considered by an exalted church, and the world, as but a poor lame concern; but God will take care to gather her in "that day" when a proud worldling church will be crying, "peace and safety."

The prophet adds, verse 8, "And thou, O tower of the flock, the stronghold of the daughter of Zion, unto thee shall it come, even the first dominion; the kingdom shall come to the daughter of Jerusalem." Compare this with Ezekiel 21: 27, "I will overturn, overturn, overturn it; and it shall be no more, until he come whose right it is; and I will give it him."

At Christ's coming, then, the first dominion shall be restored, and the kingdom shall come to the daughter of Jerusalem, the true church;* and Christ takes possession of that kingdom, which is an everlasting kingdom, and shall never pass away. See Dan. 7: 13, 14.

* See Gal. 4: 25, "But Jerusalem which is above is free, which is the mother of us all"—all true believers.

THE HEAVENLY VISION.

FUNDAMENTAL PRINCIPLES
ON WHICH
THE SECOND ADVENT CAUSE IS BASED.

I.—The Word of God teaches that this earth is to be regenerated, in the restitution of all things, and restored to its Eden state, as it came from the hand of its Maker before the fall, and is to be the eternal abode of the righteous in their resurrection state.

II.—The only Millennium found in the word of God, is the thousand years which are to intervene between the first and second resurrections, as brought to view in the 20th of Revelation. And the various portions of Scripture which are adduced as evidence of such a period in time, are to have their fulfilment only in the New Earth, wherein dwelleth righteousness.

III.—The only restoration of Israel yet future, is the restoration of the Saints to the New Earth, when "the Lord my God shall come, and all his saints with him.

IV.—The signs which were to precede the Coming of our Saviour, have all been given; and the prophecies have all been fulfilled but those which relate to the coming of Christ, the end of this world, and the restitution of all things.

V.—There are none of the prophetic periods, as we understand them, extending beyond the [Jewish] year 1843.

☞ The above we shall ever maintain as the immutable truths of the word of God, and therefore, till our Lord come, we shall ever look for his return as the next event in historical prophecy.

WESTERN MIDNIGHT CRY.

CINCINNATI, APRIL 13, 1844.

LECTURES.

A lecture will be delivered at the Hay Scales in Fifth street, on Sabbath morning next, at 9 o'clock. Also, at the College Hall, at the usual hours throughout the day and evening.

Lectures are continued at the Lawrence st. Church each evening, except Saturday, including Sabbath evenings, hereafter till further notice.

THE MEETINGS.

The interest still holds good. The congregations are still large and attentive: The anxiety to hear does not at all decrease. The calls for lecturers in the surrounding country are as numerous as usual.

LABORERS.

It seems very strange and singular to brethren in this section, when they take up the "Midnight Cry," and "Advent Herald," and read the accounts of scores of lecturers at the east, lingering about the places where the people have had line upon line, and precept upon precept; while the "far west" has cried again and again, "Come over and help us," but have hitherto cried in vain. Where are the "Wise men from the East?" Again we say, come.

BRO. STEVENS.

A private letter from Bro. Stevens, dated Ottawa, Ill. March 22d, says, "I have now been lecturing in this place every evening for two weeks, with comparatively little success. * * * Last evening, however, we were favored with more encouraging prospects. Four young men and three young ladies came forward for prayers. The last place in which I lectured previously, was Dayton, four miles from this. I trust there were a few bright and genuine conversions." Brother Stevens speaks of the probability of his visiting Ohio, soon, should time continue, but only promises to continue his labors where Providence may seem to direct.

Extracts from a letter, from Bro. A. G. Jennings, of Fairfield, Conn., in consequence of our numerous engagements, is omitted this week.

Should any omissions, or errors, occur in the present number of our paper, it may be attributed to the absence of the editor. He is spending a few days with the brethren in Aurora, Ind., for which place he left on Wednesday last.

IF THE VISION TARRY, WAIT FOR IT.

"For the vision is yet for an appointed time, but at the end it shall speak, and not lie: though it tarry, wait for it; because IT WILL SURELY COME, it will not tarry." Hab. 2: 3.

What vision is here spoken of? Ans. It is a vision of the future, as may be seen from its connexion. (ch. 1: 5,) "Behold ye among the heathen, and regard, and wonder marvellously: for I will work a work in your days, which ye will not believe though it be told you." This text is quoted by Paul, Acts 13: 41, as a caution to a degenerate church; lest its events, which were predicted of a still later age, should come upon them. (v. 40.) As another proof of this prophecy reaching to a remote period, the Papal power is clearly brought to view. Hab. 1: 6–11, "For, lo, I raise up the Chaldeans, that bitter and hasty nation, which shall march through the breadth of the land, to possess the dwelling-places that are not their's. They are terrible and dreadful: their judgment and their dignity shall proceed of themselves. Their horses also are swifter than the leopards, and are more fierce than the evening wolves: and their horsemen shall spread themselves, and their horsemen shall come from far; they shall fly as the eagle that hasteth to eat. They shall come all for violence: their faces shall sup up the east wind, and they shall gather the captivity as the sand. And they shall scoff at the kings, and the princes shall be a scorn unto them; they shall deride every strong hold; for they shall heap dust, and take it. Then shall his mind change, and he shall pass over, and offend, imputing this his power unto his god." The term "Chaldeans" (v. 6,) is probably used the same as "the fruit of the Assyrian," Isa. 10: 12, and "Mystery Babylon," Rev. 17: 5. Besides this, that monarchy had, at the time of this prophecy, passed the meridian of its glory. "Scoffing at kings" and "imputing their power to their god" has had its literal fulfilment in the Papal power. In ch. 2: 5–13, the prophet continues his description of the same power, and in verse 14, decribes the glory of Christ's kingdom. In verses 15-17 is a prediction of another great destroying power. viz. Intemperance, upon which the last judgments are to fall. (v. 17.) The species of "drunkenness" mentioned in verse 15, has only been peculiar to the present, and two or three of the past generations. No longer ago than queen Elizabeth's time, alcohol was only kept by druggists,—labeled "vegetable poison," and sold by the ounce: But now it is carried in "bottles," and people "made drunken" with it.

In verses 18–20, the idolatrous worship and false teachings of the last days, is brought to view. Who does not know, that one of the methods used to enlarge sectarian organizations, is first to build, and decorate a meeting house? We have no society, say they, in such a town, city, or village; let us go and build a church—carve out the stone and wood—lay it over with gold, &c. We shall then raise a society in keeping with the expense or cost of our church. The more money we spend in the outset, the better society we shall have. "Woe unto him that saith unto the wood, awake; to the dumb stone, arise; IT shall teach." "The Lord is in his holy temple: be silent all the earth before him." Verse 20. When God is in his holy habitation (Zion;—Ps. 132: 13–18) he will then judge and reward his servants. Ps. 68: 5.

THE VISION.

There is no vision in this book but the one recorded in chap. 3: 3—

"God came from Teman, [South, or perfect,] and the Holy One from Mount Paran. [Glory.] Selah. His glory covered the heavens, and the earth was full of his praise."

When the earth is full of his praise, all things will be made new, (Rev. 21: 5,) there will be no more curse, (Rev. 22: 3,) and the saints will inherit the earth. Ps. 37.

Verse 4, "And his brightness was as the light; he had horns [bright beams] coming out of his hand; and there was the hiding of his power."

There can be no doubt as to the person here described. He is the same that comes from glory. Verse 3.

Verse 5. "Before him went the pestilence, and burning coals [burning diseases] went forth at his feet."

See verse 12; Rev. 16: The seven last plagues, and Jer. 51: 33.

Verse 6. "He stood and measured the earth: he beheld, and drove asunder the nations; and the everlasting mountains were scattered, the perpetual hills did bow: his ways are everlasting."

As an illustration of this verse, see Rev. 6: 14–17; Jer. 3: [21–23; and Isa. 2: 20, 21; where the 'shaking terribly the earth,' and 'the great day of God's wrath,' are described in parallel language.

Verse 7. 'I saw the tents of Cushan [Ethiopia] in affliction; and the curtains of the land of Midian [Judgment] did tremble.'

He saw the inhabitants of Africa in slavery, as another reason for judgment coming on the land.

Verse 8. 'Was the Lord displeased against the rivers? Was thine anger against the rivers? Was thy wrath against the sea, that thou didst ride upon thine horses, and thy chariots of salvation?'

The earth was cursed for man's sake, and when this vision terminates, it is to undergo a physical change by fire, and that curse is to be removed.

Verse 9. 'Thy bow was made quite naked, according to the oaths of the tribes, even thy word. Selah. Thou didst cleave the earth with rivers.' [Thou didst cleave the rivers of the earth—margin.]

His word was made naked—plain; divested of its mysticisms—the sackcloth in which it had been clothed: According to the oaths of the tribes—the churches; who had always claimed that it was to be understood, until it began to be understood different from what they wished.

Verse 10. 'The mountains saw thee, and they trembled: the overflowing of the water passed by: the deep uttered his voice, and lifted up his hands on high.'

See Rev. 20: 11.

Verse 11. 'The sun and moon stood still in their habitation: at the light of thine arrows they went, and at the shining of thy glittering spear.' Isa. 13: 10, 11.

Verse 12. 'Thou didst march through the land in indignation; thou didst thresh the heathen in anger.'

Pss. 69: 24, 25, and 78: 49. This is not indignation against his people, but against the wicked. The first comes by the power vested in the Assyrian, and his offspring. Isa. 10: 5, 12. The other is when the Lord comes from Glory, v. 3, see Isa. 26: 20, and 30; 27–33, and 34: 2–9, and 66; 14–16, Ezek. 22: 24–27, which is also a sign of these days. Nahum 1: 5, 6; Rom. 2: 6-9. The wicked look for it. Heb. 10: 26, 27.

Verse 13. 'Thou wentest forth for the SALVATION OF THY PEOPLE, even for salvation with thine anointed; thou woundedst the head out of the house of the wicked, by discovering the foundation unto the neck. Selah.'

This language unquestionably settles the character of the vision, to be identical with that of Daniel 7: 9–11, 26, 27, who also gives the 'appointed time' referred to in the text. Dan. 8: 13, 14. For a further understanding of the salvation for which the Almighty is to go forth, see verse 8; Rom. 13: 11; Heb. 9: 28; 1 Peter 1: 5–9; Rev. 12: 9, 10.

Having proved the point to which the vision reaches, by its events, we will examine the expression in the text, 'Though it tarry, wait for it.'

The same events named by this prophet, were to be understood far in the future, as to the time of their termination. Dan. 12: 4, 8–10.

The expression, 'Though it tarry,' supposes time beyond the period when it would be expected to terminate. It however supposes nothing more than a slight error on the part of the expectants, when taken in connexion with the declaration, 'IT WILL NOT TARRY.'

The prophet seems to be solving the doubts that would naturally rise with those who should see 'the appointed time.' What if, after all the clearness with which the time of the termination of the vision presents itself to my mind, the expected period should finally pass by? The answer is, WRITE IT, and make it plain. But, Lord, I am a frail erring mortal, and I only came upon this watchtower to get instruction relative to the plain practical duties of religion. I pray thee let me be content with these; for after all, the vision may be involved in mystery. Still, the answer is, write it, for it 'is for an appointed time,'—he can get no other answer. But, Lord, if thy word show 'the time of the end,' it will be wrong for me to encourage any one that it will last a moment longer. If there should be any error in consequence of my misapprehension, 'what shall I answer when reproved' for the definiteness with which I must have proclaimed the 'appointed time?' Continue to write it, and if it tarry, wait for it. The error can be but small, as it is to be unsealed by divine appointment. (Dan. 12: 4.) Furthermore, the vision shall speak; and if any considerable time should pass, beyond the expected period; and then the event should come, it would not be the vision speaking. Fear not! it will not lie.

The question now arises, Is there any thing in scripture that looks like the vision lasting beyond the expected time for its termination?

There are such evidences. They are of two kinds:

1st. Scriptural testimony.

2d. Examples.

We will first produce the scripture testimony. Ezek. 12; 22, 'Son of man, what is that proverb ye have in the land of Israel, saying, the days are prolonged, and EVERY vision faileth?'

There is no history of the existence of any such proverb in the land of Israel, or among the professed people of God. The end of time has been proclaimed, and the vision has been pointed to as our authority. The time generally looked to, for its termination has but recently passed by, and never, till within the few past weeks, has this scripture been fulfilled. ALL your times have now gone by. EVERY vision faileth.

2 Pet. 3: 3, 4, 'Knowing this first, that there shall come [not in the latter days, but] in the last days, scoffers, walking after their own lusts, and saying, Where is the promise of his coming?' &c. There was a promise that all our arguments failed to refute, but, where is it now? Your times have passed—there is no promise, &c. From the admonition given to the "Stout-hearted that are far from righteousness," Isa. 46: 12, 13, it is clearly inferred that they are saying, the revelation of Jesus Christ in the clouds of heaven, is yet far off, and that his salvation will tarry yet for a long time, while God says

"I bring near my righteousness; it shall not be far off, and my salvation shal not tarry: and I will place salvation in Zion for Israel my glory."

Heb. 20: 37. "For yet a LITTLE WHILE, and he that shall come will come, and will not tarry."

If he came within the limits of the time generally expected, by those that looked for him, Where would be the tarrying? There is to be a little while of tarrying, but at the same time, no tarrying beyond the true time "appointed," for he "shall come." "At the time appointed the end shall be."

Matt. 25: 5. 'While the Bridegroom tarried, they all slumbered and slept.'

Many might have trimmed their lamps (examined the Scriptures) at the time of the first general agitation upon the subject of the Lord's Coming, (v. 1) but none, except those that firmly believed he most assuredly would soon come, went forth to meet him. He tarried—did not come at the expected time; and it was the wisdom of God, that it should be so: for if he had come at that time, he would have found many looking and watching, that had no oil in their vessels; whose souls had not been made white in the blood of the Lamb. During the tarrying, the wise slumbered—the foolish slept—the church were locked up in midnight darkness relative to the advent, as they now are; when a significant sign appears—a cry is made that awakens even the foolish, but it is too late for hope. During this tarrying also, the 'drawing back' spoken of in Heb. 10: 38, takes place, and the 'lifting up,' Hab. 2: 4. It will have been seen that Heb. 10: 36–38, is a quotation, by the apostle, from our text and its connection; there, the 'patience' spoken of, in verse 36, supposes disappointment, relative to the termination of the vision. There is a danger in abandoning the ground occupied, though it might tarry, for it is written, ver. 38, 'if any man draw back, my soul shall have no pleasure in him.'

The believer, in the mean time, is so instructed as not to cling to inconsistencies; for he is told, it is but a little while till he shall come.

We will next adduce some evidence from examples, to show that this tarrying of the vision, beyond the expected time, is recognized in the scriptures.

Had God brought his people into the promised inheritance, with no more severe trial of their faith, than believers in the Advent near, had experienced at the close of the past month, it would have been an unparalleled instance of his dealings. Violence would have been done to the declaration, 'Through much tribulation we must enter the kingdom of God.'

In order that 'patience' may be wrought, we must have 'tribulation,' and to secure a blessed 'experience,' we must have 'patience.' In order to possess the 'hope that maketh not ashamed,' we must have the 'experience' that is the offspring of 'patience.' God's people, in all ages of the world, have been a tried people.

While the Ark of the Lord abode long at Kirjath-Jearim, 'All the house of Israel lamented after the Lord.' (1 Sam. 7: 2.) A sore travail beset the people of Israel, while they dwelt a long time in Egypt, and were vexed by strangers; but when they cried unto the Lord, he came and delivered them. (Num. 20; 14 16. With prophetic eye reaching to the end of the vision, the prophet exclaimed, 'O Lord, how long shall I cry, and thou wilt not hear, even cry unto thee of violence, and thou wilt not save!' (Hab. 1: 2.) When the Israelites with Moses at their head, left Egypt, there was not a probable doubt, but that God would deliver them in every emergency; but when hemmed in on every side with mountains—a proud enemy, and fearful waters; because at such time the vision tarried, deliverance did not come quite as soon as they expected, they complained to Moses, and said, 'Because there were no graves in Egypt hast thou taken us away to die in the wilderness?' This is just what we told you in Egypt, saying 'Let us alone that we may serve the Egyptians, for it had been better for us to serve the Egyptians, than that we should die in the wilderness;' we have come to this place with you,—the promise of deliverance has failed, and we cannot get back to Egypt (the church) with honor, and now the time has' gone by, we must die where we are, or go back in disgrace. The tarrying was but short—only for a night, for deliverance came in the morning. (Ex. 14: 10 22.)

Jeremiah's prophetic period of 70 years operated as a check upon the wickedness of Belshazzar, until the time had passed, and even then, he dared not profane the sacred vessels of the temple, until he became heated with wine. In the midst of his revelry—boasted security, and exclamations of 'the time has gone by,' the hand writing on the wall sealed his doom; for the same night he was slain—his proud empire buried in ruins, and his throne, which had bid defiance to surrounding nations for sixteen centuries, that night crumbled into dust.—[Daniel 5.]

When Lot fled from Sodom with his family, the threatened destruction did not fall upon the city as soon as some of them expected, or his wife would not have looked back. During the tarrying, (for the storm of fire did not fall till 'the sun was up' and Lot safe in Zoar,) as in other parallel instances, the 'looking back' or 'drawing back' took place. [Gen. 19.]

Judge, also, of the feelings of Noah, and his family, while shut up in the Ark during seven pleasant days. The vision tarried, and the wicked had their fill of laughter and their height of triumph, while the faith of the man of God, and those around him, was put to the severest test. At the end of seven days, intimations were received that the promise would be fulfilled in its time, yet nearly forty days must have passed before Noah was out of the reach of the taunts of the ungodly, and cries of 'your time has gone by,' and he was 'taken up, or 'caught up' from the earth, [Gen. 7: 10 17.] 'Even thus shall it be in the day when the son of man is revealed.' [Luke 17: 26 30.]

If any begin to doubt the vision, as to its being for an appointed time, that matter is settled by the prophet: 'Wait for it,' (the vision—not death,) 'it will surely come.' The angel gave its length, [Dan. 8: 14,] and in the same chapter explained its symbols; all but the time, and in the ninth chapter explains that. In verse 25 he was given the date. If we turn to the decree that dates the vision, [Ezra 7: 11,] we shall find proof that it does not tarry.

The expression, 'going forth of the commandment,' ther refers t oits starting f= Jerusalem, which was on the 12th day of the first month, (Ezra 8: 31) or to its being placed in the hands of the King's officers for execution, which was not until the fifth month. (chap. 7: 9 and 8: 36.) Two thousand three hundred years, (which was the length of the vision,) has not passed from the earliest of the above named circumstances—This first month is settled, not merely by Jewish custom, or Jewish chronology; but by the word of God. In Exodus, 12th chapter, we have the establishment of the passover on the 14th day of the first month, which was thus to be observed forever. In Leviticus, 23d chapter, we learn that a barley sheaf of the first fruits of the harvest, was to be presented to the priest at the time of the celebration of the passover, and we have never seen it proved that the barley harvest of Judea took place earlier than the month of May. But by a close examination of the 'commandment' and the attendant circumstances of its 'going forth,' we find that a full year was occupied, from the time Ezra started from Babylon till they became settled in Jerusalem, and made an end with all the men that had taken strange wives; (cleansed the sanctuary.) It is questionable whether anything short of the event, can settle the termination of 2300 full years, from the going forth of that commandment, to within five lunar months; and those months are, most undoubtedly, all in the future; yet we have at present no satisfactory reason for believing that the first day of that time will pass, without bringing the object of the Christian's glorious hope.

The thunders of Jehovah's wrath still slumber, but in the room of bringing doubt or obscurity, it only causes the page of eternal truth to shine with a brighter lustre. The chariots of his glory wait, that the Christian's joy may increase when the angel seizes the trump that has fallen from the weary lips of mortal messengers, and and raises anew the glad sound, 'Behold the bridegroom cometh!' till the vale of heaven is rent—the rocks sundered—the islands flee—the mountains fall—the graves open—and the reproaches of God's people are wiped away FOREVER.

Saint Louis, February 5, 1844.

Dear Brother:—

If the following will at all help the cause of truth it is at your service.

Stranger. Watchman, what of the night? This is a long journey—we have passed many dangers—the way has been rough and difficult, and most of it has led through countries [Pagan and Papal Rome] which have been very, very dark. Watchman, what of the night?

Watchman. Where are you going?

S. We seek a city which hath foundations, whose builder and maker is God.

W. How came you to start on a road so dangerous? Why did you not take the other, [Popular Doctrines,] which is far easier; and besides you would have had much better company.

S. The King of the city has given us there an inheritance incorruptible, undefiled, and which fadeth not away.

W. How did you come to hear of it so far off?

S. The King sent one of his servants to tell us it is safely reserved, and that other things are also prepared which "eye hath not seen nor ear heard," neither hath any man thought of such things; and he wrote in a Book a description of the road, and before he left us (for he stayed till his coat was much worn, and the little house he occupied was decaying and leaky and cold; So he longed to go home to get a robe of righteousness from the King's wardrobe,) he often told us, and also wrote in the book, a great many strange things which we should see at certain places, and said the wise shall understand the waymarks written "in the words of the Book of this Prophecy," "whereunto if ye take heed ye shall do well."

W. I have often heard there were strange sights on this road, but dont think any body knows much about them.

S. Why, Sir? They are described so exactly that he who runs may read, and knows when he is near them, and be not taken unawares.

W. Then you have seen some of them?

S. Yes, when we first set out, we began to read our map of the way given us in the Book; and the first thing we found marked was a golden image of a Man's Head, and as we came in sight of it there stood upon it a Lion, which when we passed "was lifted up from the earth, and made stand on his feet as a man, and a man's heart was given to it." [Dan. 2: 31, and 7: 4.]

W. Whoever heard such things?

S. Well, soon after we came to a Bear and a Ram, [Dan. 7: 5 and 8: 4,] which became great and were pushing "so that no beast might stand before them."

W. What! a Bear in company with a Ram? Impossible; he would tear him to pieces in a moment.

S. You seem to doubt, Sir; but the Ram followed hard upon us, until he was met by a "He Goat," who had a "notable horn between his eyes, and he ran to the Ram in the fury of his power, and he was moved with choler against him, and he smote the Ram and broke his two horns, and cast him down to the ground and stamped upon him."

W. And so, at length, you escaped from him!

S. Yes; but we soon came to another great beast, "dreadful and terrible exceedingly;" "it had great iron teeth," nor was it like any other beast we had seen, for "it had ten horns," and one of them had "eyes like the eyes of a man, and a mouth speaking great things,"

W. Why did you not go back? None but madmen would expose themselves to such dangers.

S. Because, Sir, the man who gave us the Book at the beginning of the road showed us, at a little distance, a large monument [Ezra 7:] on which was written, "If any man among you will return let him return, and let all the cost of the Temple and of the city ye build, be bestowed out of the King's treasure house, even to an hundred talents," and he told us, and also wrote it in the Book, that after we had left the stone, we should find certain marks by the way side; and when we had counted seventy-sevens of them, [Dan. 9: 24,] we should come to a Cross, which we found even so as he had said. Now there were two others besides the one at which was the last mark, which have been made for two Thieves who it was said had been hung up there for some great disturbance in a certain city near by, and one of them said to him who was upon the middle cross, "Lord remember me when thou comest into thy kingdom," [Luke 23: 42,] (for it was said in that place that he was a King,) and when he heard it, he replied, to-day shalt thou be with me in Paradise." He then turned and looked on us, (Oh, I shall never, never forget that look,) and said, "Fear not, little flock, it is your Father's good pleasure to give you the kingdom," which so encouraged us that we were determined to go forward even at the great hazard of our lives.

W. I have often heard of the City. There are many in this country who do little else than talk about it, and the wise men, who they say lived there, and are soon going back again. But I have not lately heard much about Him who was hung on the middle Cross; there used to be a tradition among us, that he was a good man.

S. Most true it is, that he "was holy, harmless, undefiled and separate from sinners."

W. How was it, then, that he died in this way?

S. Ah, Sir, the man who gave us the Book told us that he was "cut off but not for himself [Dan. 9. 26,] and the people of the Prince that should come should destroy the city and the sanctuary, and the end thereof should be with a flood."

W. The city, then, was destroyed. What became of its inhabitants?

S. Both the city and her children were in bondage, [Gal. 4: 25,] and have long since gone into captivity, and one of the King's messengers said of her, when her sister, called Samaria, [Ezek. 16: 46-53,] is brought back, then thy children shall come back with them, and when another, called Sodom, which is now suffering the "vengeance of eternal fire," "is brought back, then thou and thy daughters shall come with them."

W. Hath not the King sent to have it rebuilt, and in a much better way?

S. Surely it must be a mistake, for one Paul who was once sent to attend in the King's court, [2d Cor. 12: 2 to 8,] and had great skill in the King's Laws, informed us that this city was built to represent a certain bond woman [Gal. 4: 21 to end,] of great note, who lived a long time ago; and to remind the inhabitants of the city we seek, that the King "hath prepared for them a city," and established it by a "new covenant," [Heb. 8: 8-12. Jer. 31: 31-35,] which being now ready, there is no longer need of the "old covenant," [Heb. 7: 18-19 and 8: 10 and 9 and 10: 9,] or city, which were the figures of the true, [Heb. 8: 2-5 and 9: 9-11 23-24,] which the King "pitched and not man."

W. Have you seen many watchmen on the road since you left the city?

S. For a little way the road was smooth, and there were a good many who were very faithful; but soon it grew quite dark, and only few could be found who would undertake it, exposed as they always are to so many furious beasts; [Persecutions;] but after we had traveled a long distance through many dark places, where we very often came near stumbling over what we saw, by the light of our lamp, to be fragments of the feet and toes of some huge monster, [Dan. 2: 42,] part of iron and part clay, and which we see are still scattered thus far; we came to a place where the road was much easier, then we soon found plenty of watchmen, but they left their watch at night, all but a very few who were despised and almost always kept in poor condition, for they could get but very little of their pay, although they had worked very hard to keep the road clear of the rubbish constantly thrown upon it by the King's enemies; yet, they had the promise of the King that all who would watch and be faithful should be made "Kings and Priests," [Rev. 1: 6 and 5: 10,] when he should return, and they should have a house to live in, "not made with hands eternal in the heavens."

W. They will have yet to watch a long while, if they wait for him to return. [Matt. 24; 48-50.]

S. Our guide at the beginning, told us that after we had passed the cross, we should soon find a wilderness; and said, take ye heed to the number of the waymarks as ye enter it, for it reacheth unto a "thousand two hundred and three score," [Rev 12: 6-14 and Dan. 12: 7.] Now the number of the mark was three score and five, and four hundred and two score; and since we be come up out of the wilderness, so that we could look upon our map, we found written, that from the great monument, our road was unto "twenty-three hundred" way marks, [Dan. 8: 14,] and "at the time appointed the end shall be."

W. Would you presume to say, you understand all these things, when the King's messenger said none understood it?

S. Well, but when we came to the Cross, He who said to us "fear not little flock," also sent a messenger after us to tell us He had "prevailed to open the Book, and to loose the seals thereof" [Rev. 5: 5,] and now whoso readeth let him understand," for "these words are true and faithful." Surely, Sir, we cannot be far from the end; Watchman, what of the night?

W. It is yet for many days, and no man knows the day or the hour.

S. We have passed forty-four waymarks, since we came up out of the wilderness, and now we are so weary; Oh how glad we should feel to get a sight of the city, to be there, to get home, "where the wicked cease from troubling, and the weary are at rest."

W. Very likely you will never get there. I have known many in times past, who thought they were almost there, but they never reached there. Very likely you have got off the road.

S. Oh, Sir, that must be impossible; for a little way back, at the top of the hill, we opened our Book to see if we were right, and as we held it up towards the light we saw the likeness of a beautiful city, [Rev. 21: 10-17, Isa. 60: 11-19,] which had "a wall great and high," and it was "as the sun shineth in his strength," and "there was no Temple therein," and one whose Tabernacle was in the midst of it, who is the "brightness of his Father's glory," did lighten it; "there was no night there," and the name of the city was "the Lord is there." Watchman what of the night?

W. The morning cometh and also the night; if ye will enquire, enquire ye, return, come.

S. What, another night! A long dreary distance yet to pass. Surely this is the place of which it is said both "head and tail shall be cut off" "and the Prophet that speaketh lies he is the tail." [Isa. 9: 15.] If we are not out of our reckoning we are very near the end of our journey. Our map has been thus far true to the road, it has told us correctly, and as the Book told us so we have seen, almost as soon as we came from the wilderness the sun was darkened, the moon did not give her light, the stars fell from heaven, "as a fig tree casteth her untimely figs;" there have been but a little way back great signs in the heavens, strange sights, "men's hearts failing them for fear," wonderful lights, great fires, at one of which thousands of "Her Majesty's" firemen ran with great alarm, supposing their city was set on fire at a thousand points. When, at length, they saw even the very clouds were a vast, awful conflagration, and it seemed as if he that sitteth in the heavens did "laugh at them."

W. Truly it was said, "behold this dreamer cometh," are ye not crazy? have ye not gone mad? you have seen some strange vision.

S. Well, we ask of the watchman how long the vision, he saith, "I cannot read it for it is sealed," "the unlearned saith, "I cannot, for I am unlearned;" "How do you say we are wise and the the law of the Lord is with us;" "Lo, certainly in vain he made it, the pen of the scribes is in vain;" "the wise men are ashamed, they are dismayed and taken;" "Lo, they have rejected the word of the Lord, and what wisdom is in them." [Jer. 8: 8-9.] Therefore let us watch and be sober, for we are not of the night, but we are children of the day. Then let us not sleep as do others, but let us watch unto prayer, for we have but one more waymark to pass, and then we will wait for the "great day of the Lord," "for it hasteth greatly," it is nigh even at the doors, and if it tarry we will wait for it, "for it will come and will not tarry;" "even so come Lord Jesus, come quickly!!" W. K.

TO BELIEVERS.

Believers in Christ's Second Coming, do not be surprised to see a few lines from one so young in the cause, for I love you, and I want to meet you in heaven. I feel that we all have a part to act in these last days. Lift up your heads for your redemption draweth very near. Be firm and steadfast to the end. Trust in the Lord, and you shall be saved. Be not weary of watching, for the time draws very near, when you will be released. Think of what our Saviour once said to his weary disciples, "Can ye not watch with me one hour?" Oh! think of that land of sweet repose, where our Saviour's smiles are continually beaming upon his saints; where we will never part again, and where we shall raise our voices, and tune the lyre, and sing loud Hallelujahs to the Lamb forever and ever. The last sands of time is just running out. We are just about to be changed from corruptible to incorruptible. Oh blessed hope! oh glorious hope! It lifts our thoughts to things above. Pray for each other, and hope to the end; for if faithful we shall have a part in the first resurrection.

Yours, in hope of a speedy deliverance. J. A. C.

FUNERAL OF MILLERISM.

TANNER'S CREEK, Dearborn co. In. April 1, 1844.

DEAR BRO. JACOBS:

God is good, kind, and merciful, or I should not have this opportunity of writing you. My soul doth exceedingly magnify the Lord of Hosts. It has been about one year since I became convinced that the coming of the Lord draweth nigh, and commenced preaching and lecturing upon that subject; and glory to God, I expect to continue to sound the alarm until Christ comes or my voice is hushed in the stillness of death!

There are a few in these parts looking for the speedy coming of Christ; But we are taunted with—"Now where is your time for the earth to be burned up.—I told you 'twas all a humbug," &c. However, the societies of my charge generally, are willing to hear upon the subject. All of our houses of worship, in my charge, are open for the preaching of the Second Advent doctrine; but I am sorry to have it to say, that there is not much spirit of reformation in these parts, at present.—The return of the Jews, and one thousand years prosperity of the church, are the greatest obstacles in the way of the people embracing the Second Advent views; all the evidence adducible to the contrary notwithstanding: So they are taught by their leaders; but the doom of the unfaithful Shepherds, who cry peace and safety, may be found recorded in Jer. 25: 34-38.

I now proceed to give you the synopsis of a discourse I heard in Aurora, Ind. the 22d of March, delivered by James Jones, Presiding Elder of the M. E. Church. But few Adventists were present, having previously resolved to spend the day in fasting and prayer. But to proceed, —after singing "Children of the Heavenly King," &c. James Jones went to prayer, and prayed that God would bring back his erring children again to the old paths. He then proceeded as follows:—"God, I thank thee, that through thy Divine Providence, I, and so large a congregation are permitted to tread upon the heels of the last sands of "Miller's predicted time of thy appearing to burn up the earth"!!! And many said, Amen!—Text—2 Thess. 2: 1, 2. He occupied 45 minutes in giving his reasons for preaching the funeral of Millerism, and read a clause from some paper that the Millerites were to have the sermon taken down, and said, "I suppose Bro. Roberts has been sent here for that purpose." I arose to say I had not: when he ordered me to "sit down sir"!!! Made several assertions, as follows, viz: 1st. Miller's views are fallacious. 2d. His doctrine causes divisions. 3d. They (Second Adventists) unchristianize all who differ from them in opinion. 4. He (Miller) has a wrong understanding of the "seven times" in Lev. 24: 21. 5. The 2520 years did not begin with Manassah's captivity. 6. He said there would be four comings of Christ, first, at his birth; second, at the destruction of Jerusalem; third I did not get; fourth, when he comes to the final judgment. 7. It will make Atheists. 8. The Gospel has not been preached in all the world yet. 9. The Jews must return to the land of Palestine and rebuild Jerusalem. 10. There will be a time when there will be more righteous upon the earth than wicked. 11. The earth was made to be inhabited, but one-third has been inhabited yet. 12. The watchmen have not seen eye to eye yet. 13. It disorganizes and dissolves all church operations and obligation. 14. God will not cut down the harvest in its milky state. 15. I have not the least concern of Christ's coming yet for several hundred years. 16 and lastly. It is all a money making plan!!! As for his arguments, I did not hear any worth taking down! I give you the most of his quotations, as follows:—Matt. 24: 36–44; Isa. 2: 2-4; Isa. 60: 1-15; Jer. 31: 31-34; Jer. 51: 19, 20. With the last quotation he attempted to prove that the Jews would destroy the heathen, if resistance were made to their taking possession of the land of Palestine. Ezek. 36: 25, 26; Amos 6: 11; Rom. 11. He read the remarks of L. L. Hamline upon the chronology and 70 weeks, but did not read your reply. After he had occupied two and a quarter hours, principally in reading from the Christian Advocate, &c. he said, "Now we will sing the "Bondage Hymn," and I will come down in front of the stand, and all who feel determined to travel on in the old paths and meet me in heaven, will give me their hand." And there was music and rejoicing, and for what? Why, Bro. Jones, their presiding elder, had told them that there was no danger of Christ's coming for a great while yet!!!

He gave me no opportunity to reply, nor did he make any apology for ordering me to sit down! I pray that the Lord may forgive the old brother, and give him light upon God's word. Oh, my brother, how many fail to see the great truths of God's word, because of their sectarian creeds. It steals upon their senses as the eastern Moldavian Vampire Bat, the friction of whose soft and velvet wings, placed upon the main arteries of its victim, soothes to slumber until the vital fluid is gone.

Be not dismayed at persecution, but rejoice that your redemption draweth nigh, and the God of all grace make you perfect: establish, strengthen, settle you, and to God, the Father, Son, and Holy Spirit, be all glory and dominion, forever, Amen.

J. F. ROBERTS,
Minister of the M. P. Church.

AURORA, Ind. April 5th, 1844.

DEAR BRO. JACOBS:

I would just remark, that the 22d of March is past, and with it, the feeble effort to preach the funeral sermon of Millerism, mentioned in a previous number of the Cry; I say feeble, for although I did not hear it but by report, I must believe that all human efforts to explain away the plain and literal import of the Bible, by mystical reasoning, and forcing a construction on certain portions that are so plain that he that runneth may read, that the word itself will not warrant; all such efforts, I think, must be feeble indeed. In reference to the course taken, and remarks made, I have nothing to say, as I understand you have received a synopsis of that discourse from one that was present. Let the intention be what it might, we believe it will advance the cause of truth. There was called together on the occasion many of the ministers and laymen of the neighborhood and surrounding country, the meeting continued for nearly one week, and, as we are informed, a great effort made to get up a revival; but as far as we can learn, but little good effected. The pious part of the membership were somewhat revived, and others were joyful, perhaps from the fact that the Nobleman had not returned, and was not likely to return for at least one thousand years, to reward his servants. On the evening of the 21st, before the sermon, or funeral ceremony, alluded to, a class leader handed to the preacher in charge, a list of twenty-six members of said Methodist Episcopal Church, his own at the head, with a request (stating some of the reasons) to be read off, as no longer members of said church. These members were subsequently visited by the preachers and others, and three were induced to return to the fold or bosom of the church. The others proving, as they may suppose, somewhat refractory, and considering their escape somewhat fortunate, having put their hand to the plough, they do not wish to return. Like Lot, in one sense, they wish not to look back, and unlike him in another, they plead not for the little city of Zoar; but are determined to flee to the mountain, which alone will prove like the shadow of a great rock in a weary land. The preacher in charge, as I am credibly informed, at the conclusion of the meeting, knowing that some still in the church believed in the doctrine of the speedy Advent, made, in substance, the following remarks in reference to the Second Advent, viz.—That there was really but little difference in reference to the subject; that they all believed in the doctrine as taught in the Bible, that some believed it would soon take place, others that it would not take place so soon; now this was really not a matter worthy of the least difference or contention.—The main thing was to be ready; and if he was ready, and in the tan-vats up to the elbows, and the Lord found him so, and ready, he would take him home to heaven, Amen. He thought that on this subject we ought to be willing to think and let think. But mark the sequel,—he further stated that none of those who had seceded could be admitted into class-meetings, or love-feasts in the Methodist Episcopal Church. If they come, they would be considered intruders; and he wished it to be distinctly understood, that the door of the M. E. Church must be closed against all lecturers on the Second Advent.—Comments are unnecessary.

I would just remark, that it is not considered that the M. E. Church, as a body, own a house or place of worship in Aurora. They have been, and still are, dependent on the favor of the Trustees, a majority of whom are believers in the doctrine of the speedy Advent. In reference to the privilege of class, we have it; and I am sure we enjoy as great liberty and as much peace of mind as we possibly could under any human organization, and as far as love-feasts are concerned we are not dependent on the M. E. Church for the number or quality of them. We have four in each week; that is, as often as we meet; and we are trying to improve and practice upon the admonition of the beloved disciple, Little children, love one another, for love is the fulfilling of the law. Therefore we grieve not at any restrictions that man may lay upon us, neither do we sigh or long for the privileges or institutions of the church. But having boldness to enter into the holy of holies, by a new and living way, we intend to gird up the loins of our minds, and hope to the end, for the grace that is to be brought unto us, at the revelation of Jesus Christ.

Brethren, pray for us who still enjoy the blessed hope.

FOR THE WESTERN MIDNIGHT CRY.

"COME LORD JESUS."

The Lord from on high,
Will descend through the sky,
And raise from the tomb
The saints that now sleep in glorious hope.
In beauty divine,
Then Daniel shall shine;
His Redeemer adore,
And glorified, glow like a star evermore.

Conformed to the Son,
The Church shall be one:
Transformed from their clay,
At the sound of the trump, in the great rising day.
The sword of the Lord
Will accomplish his word,
Lay waste the vile nations,
And Anti-Christ vanquish, and bury in blood.

Ye foolish, arise,
Take oil, like the wise,
No longer delay,
Improve the blest hour while the Bridegroom doth stay.
The ready shall rise
To the feast in the skies,
The wedding behold
In mansions of pearl, and in temples of gold.

Redeemer, we look
To the pledge in thy book,
And wait for thy coming,
To change our vile bodies, and take us to thee.
We long to unite
With the Elders in light,
With Moses to sing
The honors of God, our Redeemer and King.

ESSAY ON THE JUDGMENT.

J. D. DOW.

The doctrine of the Judgment, considered simply in its bearings on human interests, is inferior in importance to none in the whole system of Bible Theology; and occupies, perhaps, a no less prominent place in reference to the full and final revelation of the glory of God. The almost uniform allusion to the great day of the consummation of human hopes and fears, in all the exhortations, warnings, threatenings and curses, uttered in the sacred pages, is evidently intended to give us some definite ideas of the consequence which God himself attaches to it; and the consequent importance it ought to obtain in the estimation of his fallen creatures, whose eternal weal or wo is suspended upon its decisions.

There is as much of truth as poetry, in that significant expression of Young:

"All men think all men mortal, but themselves."

but without violence to either, we may say:

"All men think all men sinners but themselves;"

On this principle it is, that in the transaction of business relative to the affairs of life, they consider themselves under the necessity of dealing with all men as with rogues, or taking it for granted, that but little reliance is to be placed in human honesty and rectitude. This point is too obvious to be labored.

Nay, we may go further: all men are not only sinners in general terms, in points of fact, but more or less sensible, as individuals, of this great and lamentable truth: and this simple consciousness induces in the mind of every intelligent human being, "a certain fearful looking for of judgments;" a kind of instinctive apprehension—though the time, manner, and consequence, may be involved in darkness—that a day of retribution awaits them, when their deeds shall be made manifest;" and they "rewarded according to their works." The idea of guilt in consequence of a violation of law, contains the very elements of those fearful forebodings of a final dispensation of justice, which has exerted more or less influence in the organization of the various forms of religion, now or formerly extant, in every part of the habitable earth. But more directly: let us consider

I. The Period—Its Definiteness.

1. Then, I observe, the period, the time, the day, is appointed, Because he has appointed a day in which he will judge the world in righteousness, by that man whom he hath ordained; whereof he hath given assurance unto all men, in that he hath raised him from the dead." Acts xvii. 31.

It is asserted by many who deny the doctrine of the future and final retribution, that the judgment is constantly going on: that we are judged as often as we sin, and punished with the remorse of conscience. This however, requires proof. It is unquestionably true that, as a general thing, conscience is a faithful monitor. But is this always the case? The Bible plainly denies it. What, I ask, on this principle, becomes of the judgment of those who have continued to pass their way onward in a course of crime and rebellion against the Almighty, in spite of all the admonitions of conscience, and the strivings of the Holy Spirit, until they are "past feeling?" Eph. iv. 19. What effect can the stings of a "conscience, seared with a hot iron," have upon moral insensibility? 1 Tim. iv. 2. What wound of a moral nature does that hardened wretch feel, whose sins are of so aggravated a character, that God has ceased to reprove or plead with him; nay, to whom he has sent such "strong delusion, that he believes a lie?" 2 Thess. ii. 11. What folly would it be, when the officers of a given earthly court appoint a day for the trial of certain causes within their jurisdiction, for those persons who had suits to be adjudicated on that occasion—those individuals of all were most interested in its proceedings, to take it for granted, that that court would be continually in session while time endured, and yet this idea is no more preposterous than the other.

Take another illustration. Our Lord said to his disciples: "And I appoint unto you a kingdom, as my Father has appointed unto me." Luke xxii. 29. But had they already received, or were they receiving it? See, by the succeeding verse, what was embraced in the appointment: "That ye may eat and drink at my table in my kingdom, and sit on thrones, judging the twelve tribes of Israel." Their kingdom, then, and His kingdom, are represented as synonymous—one and the same. Had Christ received, or was he then receiving his kingdom? No: for he said, John xviii. 36, "My kingdom is not of this world." He, moreover, taught his disciples to pray, saying, "Thy kingdom come."

Again: The definiteness of the period will further appear, from the distinct and significant terms in which it is spoken of. It is called "the day of the Lord;" Zech. xiv 1. "The day of the Lord's vengeance;" Is 34: 8. "The day of judgment;" Matt. x. 15. "The judgment of the great day;" Jude 6. "That great day of God Almighty;" Rev. xvi. 14. These examples might be multiplied almost to any extent; but these are sufficient to convince any but the inconvincible.

This brings us to another point in our arrangement, viz:

II. Time When.

I do not design, here, to enter into an argument to show that the time is near at hand, or how near it is, when the judgment will occur; nor to enter into a critical examination of the objections, which have been drawn from the 24th of Matthew, and other Scriptures, that as the Sadducee said of the resurrection—"it is past already;" for this would lay me under the necessity, even were I competent to the undertaking, of swelling this article to a size which I fear would tire the patience of both printer and reader. Besides, I should be entering into a discussion which, perhaps, may be considered as properly belonging to another subject—the second coming of Christ. But, by referring to some of the leading transactions which are to precede, attend, and follow the tremendous scenes of the great day, I hope to convince every candid and rational mind, 1, that it is yet to take place: and 2, that it will not occur until it follows in regular succession the second coming of Christ, and the resurrection of the dead.

The connection brought to view between these three great and important events—the coming of the Son of Man, the resurrection of the dead, and the transactions of the judgment, in all the Bible, and especially in the New Testament, establishes the fact beyond reasonable controversy, that the judgment day is yet future, or has not yet occurred.

I wish to remark here, that Christ is to act as judge himself. "For the Father judgeth no man, but hath committed all judgment unto the Son" John. v. 22; Acts xvii. 31. "For we must all appear before the judgment seat of Christ." 2 Cor. v. 10. "In the day when God shall judge the secrets of men, by Jesus Christ." Rom. ii. 16. I observe, then, that the judgment is not past, unless the second advent of Christ and the resurrection are past.

For, let it be inquired, what is the object of his coming? This is represented promiscuously, as to raise the dead, and judge the world.

"Our God shall come, He shall call to the heavens from above, and to the earth, that he may judge his people." Ps. 1. 3, 4. "Behold, I show you a mystery: We shall not all sleep, but we shall be changed, in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trump: for the trumpet shall sound, and the dead shall be raised incorruptible, and we shall be changed." 1 Cor. xv. 51, 52.—"For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel; and with the trump of God: and the dead in Christ shall arise first." 1 Thes. iv. 16; see also verses 13, 15, 17. The "trump" here spoken of, must be the last: for, in the passage just cited in Corinthians, we are told, that the dead are to be raised at the last trump; and if that trump attends his coming, as we have seen it does, the resurrection occurs at the same time.

The order of these events appears to be 1. The advent: 2, The resurrection: 3. The judgment. For He is to descend "with the trump of God:" the dead are to be raised "at the last trump;" some, they that have done good, are to come forth unto the resurrection of life; and some, they that have done evil, unto the resurrection of damnation. All the people of God are included in this expression; for Zachariah says (xiv. 5,) "The Lord my God shall come, and all the saints with thee." It includes all the wicked; for John says, (Rev. i. 7,) "Behold he cometh with clouds; and every eye shall see him, and they also which pierced him; and all kindreds of the earth shall wail because of him."

Notwithstanding, however, the truth of these remarks in general, in regard to the time and order of these great and important events, I think it is more than intimated by the revelator in his twentieth chapter, that the judgment of the wicked will not occur until a thousand years after that of the righteous; for, "as it is appointed unto men once to die, but after this the judgment:" and since the dead, as we have already seen, are not to be judged until they are raised from the dead; and since "the rest of the dead," or the wicked, are "not to live again," or experience a resurrection, "until the thousand years are finished," after "the first resurrection," or that of the righteous; it seems to follow as the legitimate consequence, that their judgment will be reserved till the expiration of that time.

This idea argues nothing against our former remarks in reference to the definiteness of the term day; for Peter tell us, in direct allusion to this very time, and these very events, "the day of judgment and perdition of ungodly men;" that one day is with the Lord as a thousand years, and a thousand years as one day." 2 Pet. iii. 7, 8. If the observations are correct, the righteous will be raised and judged in the morning, and the wicked in the evening, of that day.

III. Its Extent.

The day having been appointed, and that day proved to be a definite time, and yet future, after death, (Heb. ix. 27,) we might with safety infer—were nothing more said in regard to the general interest of mankind in its momentous transactions—that the whole human family are then and there to be assembled for full and final trial. But the subject is not left here. God is called "the judge of all the earth." Gen. xviii. 2. It cannot be denied, that the whole human race—to whose relation with the subject I shall confine my remarks—are included in the appellations of "the righteous and the wicked," "the just and the unjust," "him that serveth God and him that serveth him not," and various other expressions describing the same classes of characters. It is said in relation to the righteous; "The Lord shall judge his people." Deut. xxxii. 36. Ps. cxxxv. 14. Heb. x. 30. Again; it is said in relation to the wicked: "The ungodly shall not stand in the judgment:" Ps. i. 5. God will bring them into judgment: Eccl. xi. 9. Rom. ii. 5–16. It is nowhere intimated in the Bible, that only part of the human family are to be judged;—which must have been the fact, if the judgment of the great day took place at the destruction of Jerusalem, and that part exceedingly small in proportion to the whole—but on the other hand, that we shall all stand before the judgment seat of Christ, Rom. xiv. 10. 2 Cor. v. 10. Observe, Paul does not say this merely to the Jews, but to the Romans and Corinthians. Further: "For God shall bring every work into judgment, with every secret thing, whether it be good, or whether it be evil." Eccl. xii. 14.

I remark here, in the first place, that all men must be included in the above quotations, and others of the same import in the Bible—unless a third class can be shown to exist, who are neither righteous nor wicked. But Christ denies the possibility of this, when he says: "He that is not with me is against me." Matt. xii. 30. Secondly: every human soul must be here included, from the fact that every work, with every secret thing, whether good or evil, will be brought into judgment: unless it can be shown that the deeds of men will be held accountable—punishable or rewardable—for their own existence abstractly, without any reference to the agent. And this, in ordinary affairs, we should all consider worse than nonsense: for who blames the act of theft rather than the thief? Why, even allowing the judgment was all fulfilled on ancient Jerusalem and Judea, it was not fulfilled on this principle: and the same difficulty presents itself if we take the other alternative, that it passes daily and hourly on individual conscience.

Lastly, under this head: The quick and dead will be judged: Christ is ordained to be the judge of quick and dead. Acts x. 42. "He shall judge the quick and dead." 1 Tim. iv. 1; 1 Pet. iv. 5. This certainly must include every human being, unless it can be shown that some are, or will be, neither alive nor dead. Was all this performed at the downfall of Jerusalem? Was you there, reader? Was all the race of man there?—Did "the dead small and great" then and there stand before God? Did "the sea give up the dead which were in it?" Did "death and hell give up the dead which were in them?" Were "the books opened;" and were they "judged every man according to their works?" Did "the fearful, and unbelieving, and the abominable, and murderers, and whoremongers, and sorcerers, and idolaters, and all liars," then "have their part in the lake which burneth with fire and brimstone, which is the second death?" Did "the first heaven and the first earth" then "pass away," new ones appear, the holy city, New Jerusalem, come down from God out of heaven, prepared as a bride adorned for her husband?" Did "the tabernacle of God appear with men, He dwell with them and wipe away all tears from their eyes;" banish forever, "death, sorrow, crying and pain," from among his people, throughout the holy realms of the new heavens and earth? "O! the folly of sinners!"

IV. Its Immutability.

1. It will be a righteous judgment: (Ps. xcv. 13; Rev. xix. 11,) consequently, there then will be no necessity for, or propriety in, its repeal. Nay, to abrogate a just decision, would be to "turn judgment away backward, and justice afar off," the very things for which God reproved Israel. Is. lix. 14. Moreover, to reverse any decision would be either to acknowledge injustice in rendering the former award, or argue—rather positively prove, corruption in the judge.

2. The reward of the righteous, and the punishment of the wicked will be eternal. "And these shall go away into everlasting (or eternal) punishment: but the righteous into life eternal." Matt. xxv. 46. See also Dan, xii. 2. John v. 29.

3. The Apostle Paul speaks (Heb. vi. 2.) of the doctrine of "eternal judgment:" and the language of inspiration is never without meaning,—and, with all the inspired writers, leave us no—not the least—intimation of any repeal, or even mitigation of the consequences of the righteous decree; no fear that the glory of the righteous, or hope that the misery of the wicked, will ever come to an end. If the destruction or punishment of the wicked is not endless, neither is the reward of the righteous; for the same terms are used in reference to the duration of both. If "the wickedness of the wicked," is not of so aggravated a character as to deserve endless misery; neither is the righteousness of the righteous" of so meritorious a character as to deserve endless happiness. But on the opposite plan, what a contracted, degraded estimate, is placed upon the efficacy of "THE BLOOD OF THE EVERLASTING COVENANT," and the glorious character of "THE LORD OUR RIGHTEOUSNESS!"

Now, every Bible student knows—without stopping here to show how, why, or wherefore, let me observe it—that heaven is promised to the godly, and hell to the ungodly, as the rewards of their doings. "Verily, there is a reward for the righteous." Ps. lviii. 11. "Rejoice and be exceeding glad; for great is your reward in heaven." Matt. v. 12; Luke vi. 23. "Woe unto the wicked? it shall be ill with him; for the reward of his hands shall be given him." Is. iii. 11. 2 Peter ii. 13. And, behold, I come quickly: and my reward is with me, to give to every man as his work shall be." Rev. xxii. 12. The last passage includes both characters—"every man." And the rewards—blessings and woes—must be awarded after death, and at the judgment, unless we all enjoy our heaven, and suffer our hell, according to character, in this life, and, atheist-like, blot from the entire roll of being every idea of futurity—either of life or death—beyond the grave!

But to return: If the time shall ever arrive, as some suppose—when the inhabitants of perdition shall have fully satisfied the demands of Divine justice, and they consequently released from their dark prison—what will next be their portion? and, on the same principle, will not the reward of the glorified saints, in the same time, have been fully enjoyed? and what is to become of them? Will they not be as likely to exchange situations, as to dwell together? And if they are to dwell together, what good reason can be assigned, why they should not be as likely to be thrust down to hell, as exalted to heaven? for they would stand on equal ground as to character, neither blame, nor praiseworthy; neither rewardable, nor punishable; neither holy, or unholy; but in a medium state betwixt both—merely innocent. I can see, for my life, no way, in which they can be disposed of, on this principle, but to suppose an intermediate place between heaven & hell, for their reception. They cannot go to heaven, or dwell in the presence of God; for "without holiness no man shall see the Lord." Heb. xii. 14. They cannot with propriety be sent to hell; for "only the wicked shall be turned into hell, and all nations that forget God." Ps. ix. 39. But we read of no such place, no such characters, no such transactions. But to avoid prolixity, I close with a few remarks by way of IMPROVEMENT.

If we have taken a correct view of the subject, we see, 1, The propriety of that estimate which God attaches to the doctrine of the judgment, in giving it so prominent a place in all the instructions of his word.—When Christ "began to upbraid the cities wherein most of his mighty works were done, because they repented not," he enforced his fearful denunciations, by reference to the tremendous scenes of "the day of judgment." Matt. ix. 20–24. See also Acts xvii. 30, 31. Again: it is urged as a motive of faith: "And if any man hear my words and believe not, I judge him not: for . . the word that I have spoken, the same shall judge him in the last day." John xii. 47, 48. It is further adverted to, as a motive, To the fear of God, and obedience to his commandments in general; Eccl. xii. 13, 14; Rom. ii. 13–16: To patience: James v. 7–9: To various duties: 2 Pet. iii. 3–4.

Let these examples suffice on this head. And if the Almighty, Omniscient God, thus regards this subject, with what intense, soul-stirring interest, ought human beings to look upon it, whose most momentous prospects of final weal or wo, hang upon its decisions?—For as the heavens are higher than the earth, so are his ways higher than our ways, and his thoughts than our thoughts."

2. What scenes of glory and of joy will the transactions of that day unfold to the Christain! Now he lives in an ungodly world, rife with trial and temptation—mourning over his own sins, his unlikeness and unfaithfulness to his divine Lord and Master—"his righteous soul vexed from day to day, with the filthy conversation, and the unlawful deeds of the wicked:" but then—how changed! it shall be announced: "Come ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world: for I was a hungered, and ye gave me meat: I was thirsty, and ye gave me drink: I was a stranger, and ye took me in: I was sick, and ye visited me: I was in prison, and ye came unto me." And as he utters his own sense of his unworthiness, "When, O when, have I done so much for Thee? I am verily but an unprofitable servant: and often have almost doubted even the power and willingness of a God to save such a sinner;" and the King shall answer and say unto him, "Verily, I say unto you, inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me;" he can only turn with a grateful sense of the melt-

WATCH MEETINGS.—These meetings were originated by Mr. Wesley, in accordance with the admonition of our Saviour, to watch for his coming. Mr. Wesley was an adventist, and expected the Lord about this time; and so taught. These meetings are still continued by the Methodist, but the great body of them have ceased to be followers of John Wesley, in looking for the Lord. And they now present the strange anomaly of watching, but expecting nothing.

HYMN—BY WHITEFIELD.

Glory to Thee, whose pow'rful word,
Bids the tempestuous winds arise;
Glory to thee, the sov'reign Lord
Of air, and earth, and sea, and skies!

Let air, and earth, and skies obey,
And seas thy awful will perform;
From them we learn to own thy sway,
And shout to meet the gath'ring storm.

What tho' the floods lift up their voice,
Thou hearest, Lord, our louder cry;
They cannot damp thy children's joys,
Or shake the soul, when God is nigh.

Headlong we cleave the yawning deep
And back to highest heav'n are borne:
Unmov'd, tho' rapid whirlwinds sweep,
And all the wat'ry world upturn.

Roar on, ye waves! our souls defy
Your roaring to disturb our rest;
In vain t' impair the calm ye try,
The calm in a believer's breast.

Rage, while our faith the Saviour tries,
Thou sea, the servant of his will;
Rise, while our God permits thee, rise;
But fall, when he shall say, 'BE STILL!'

Suggested while watching the unusual brilliancy of the evening Star

There is a star in the far blue sky—
A star that is sweetly gleaming—
Its radiance comes from the throne on high
Where the glory bright is streaming.

It seems a gem from the Saviour's hand,
Just dropt on the verge of heaven,
Which as a pledge of the golden strand,
And the sea of glass is given,

To cheer our hearts in the closing hour,
When the day is growing weary,
As a token of his love and power,
When all beside is dreary.

Then glitter on in thy beauty still,
Sweet star of earth's fading even,
A signet fair of thy Maker's will
To restore the long-lost Eden. C. S. M.

EXTRACT FROM WHITEFIELD'S WILL.

"To all my other christian benefactors, and more intimate acquaintance; I leave my most hearty thanks and blessing, assuring them that I am more and more convinced of the undoubted reality, and infinite importance of the grand gospel truths, which I have from time to time delivered; and am so far from repenting my delivering them in an itinerant way, that had I strength equal to my inclination, I would preach them from pole to pole; not only because I have found them to be the power of God to the salvation of my own soul, but because I am as much assured that the great Head of the church hath called me by his word, providence, and spirit, to act in this way, as that the sun shines at noon-day—As for my enemies, and misjudging friends, I most freely and heartily forgive them, and can only add, that the last tremendous day will only discover what I have been, what I am, and what I shall be, when time itself shall be no more; and therefore from my inmost soul, I close all my crying, come, Lord Jesus, come quickly; even so, Lord Jesus. Amen and Amen. GEORGE WHITEFIELD."

THE KINGDOM.

"Tell my people that I will give them the kingdom of Jerusalem, which I would have given unto Israel; their glory also will I take unto me and give these the everlasting tabernacles, which I had prepared for them. They shall have the tree of life for an ointment of sweet savor, they shall neither labor nor be weary. Go, and ye shall receive; pray for few days unto you, that they may be shortened, the kingdom is already prepared for you, WATCH."

"What is a man profitted if he gain the whole world and lose his own soul?"

"This present life is not the end where much glory doth abide," "for what profit is it unto us if there be promised us an immortal time, whereas we have done the works that bring death, and that there is promised us an everlasting hope, whereas ourselves being most wicked are made in vain, and that there are laid up for us dwellings of health and safety, whereas we have lived wickedly. And that the glory of the Most High is kept to defend them which have led a weary life, whereas we have walked in the most wicked ways of all. And that there should be shewed a paradise, whose fruit endureth forever, wherein is security and medicine, since we shall not enter it." "For while we lived and committed iniquity, we considered not that we should begin to suffer for it after death." ESDRAS.

EXTRACT.

"Let go from the mortal thoughts, cast away the burdens of man, put off now the weak nature, and set aside the thoughts that are most heavy unto thee, and flee from these times; for yet greater evils than those which thou hast seen happen, shall be done hereafter, for look how much the world shall be weaker through age, so much the more shall evils increase upon them that dwell therein, for the truth is fled far away, and learning is hard at hand, for now hasteth the vision to come." ESDRAS.

This does not look much like a temporal millennium.

A GLIMPSE OF PARADISE.

"I have sanctified and prepared for thee twelve trees laden with divers fruits, and as many fountains flowing with milk and honey, and seven mighty mountains whereupon there grow roses and lilies, whereby I will fill thy children with joy." ESDRAS.

EXTRACT FROM ESDRAS.

"Look for your Shepherd, he shall give you everlasting rest, for he is nigh at hand, that shall come in the end of the world. Be ready to the reward of the kingdom, for the everlasting light shall shine upon you for evermore. Flee the shadow of this world, receive the joyfulness of your glory; I testify my Saviour openly. O receive the gift that is given you and be glad, giving thanks unto him that hath called you to the heavenly kingdom. Arise up and stand, behold the number of those that be sealed in the feast of the Lord, which are departed from the shadow of the world, and have received glorious garments of the Lord. Take thy number, O Zion, and shut up those of thine that are clothed in white, which have fulfilled the law of the Lord. The number of thy children whom thou longedst for is fulfilled. Beseech the power of the Lord that thy people which have been called from the beginning may be HALLOWED."

How beautiful and appropriate is this prophetic exhortation to the Advent children, who are now looking in the end of the world for him who shall come. How important that we should flee the shadow of the world, seek of the Lord the glorious garments of holiness, and be of the number of those who are sealed, that we may receive the joyfulness of this hope, and be ready to the reward of the everlasting kingdom.

"Are there Few to be Saved?"

"And he answered me saying, The Most High hath made this world for many, but the world to come for few. I will tell thee a similitude, Esdras, as when thou asketh the earth, it shall say unto thee, that it giveth much mould whereof earthen vessels are made, but little dust that gold cometh of, even so is the course of this present world. There be many created, but few shall be saved." ESDRAS.

EXTRACT.

"Behold the days come when the Most High will begin to deliver them that are upon the earth." "And he shall come to the astonishment of them that dwell upon the earth." "And the time shall be when these things come to pass, and the signs shall happen which I shewed thee before, and then* shall my Son be declared whom thou sawest as a man ascending." "And an innumerable multitude shall be †gathered together as thou sawest them, willing to come, and to overcome by fighting, but he shall stand upon the top of Mount Zion, and ‡Zion shall come, and shall be shewed to all men, being prepared and builded, like as thou sawest the hill graven without hands. And this my Son shall rebuke the wicked inventions of those wicked nations, which, for their wicked life, are fallen into the tempest; and shall lay before them their evil thoughts, and the torments wherewith they shall begin to be tormented, which are like unto a flame, and he shall destroy them, without labor, by the law, which is like unto fire." "Now when he destroyeth the multitude of the nations that are gathered together, he shall defend his people that remain, and then shall he shew them great wonders." ESDRAS.

* Luke 21:25-27. †Read from Rev. 19:11, to 21:2. ‡New Jerusalem.

FUNDAMENTAL PRINCIPLES
ON WHICH
THE SECOND ADVENT CAUSE IS BASED.

I.—The Word of God teaches that this earth is to be regenerated, in the restitution of all things, and restored to its Eden state, as it came from the hand of its Maker before the fall, and is to be the eternal abode of the righteous in their resurrection state.

II.—The only Millennium found in the word of God, is the thousand years which are to intervene between the first and second resurrections, as brought to view in the 20th of Revelation. And the various portions of Scripture which are adduced as evidence of such a period in time, are to have their fulfilment only in the New Earth, wherein dwelleth righteousness.

III.—The only restoration of Israel yet future, is the restoration of the Saints to the New Earth, when "the Lord my God shall come, and all his saints with him.

IV.—The signs which were to precede the Coming of our Saviour, have all been given; and the prophecies have all been fulfilled but those which relate to the coming of Christ, the end of this world, and the restitution of all things.

V.—There are none of the prophetic periods, as we understand them, extending beyond the [Jewish] year 1843.

☞The above we shall ever maintain as the immutable truths of the word of God, and therefore, till our Lord come, we shall ever look for his return as the next event in historical prophecy.

WESTERN MIDNIGHT CRY.

CINCINNATI, APRIL 20, 1844.

OUR PAPER.

The "Western Midnight Cry," from its commencement, has been sustained by a few individuals. It has not been expected that its subscription list would sustain its publication. The few that have kept it in being thus far, have not the means to do so much longer: and we now ask its friends, if the time has come when it can be dispensed with? We anticipate your ready response: While probation lasts, we need it as a medium of communicating words of comfort to the waiting follower of Jesus, and as a "voice of warning" to the unprepared.

But little complaint has hitherto been made on account of finances, and we do not now write by way of censuring any for neglect upon this score. Our object is not, neither has it been, to drive any measure through, at all hazards; but to follow it just so far as we can see the hand of God in it, and no farther. Funds have been received to pay the printer weekly, so that he has never had to go away with his bill unpaid: We have no means on hand to pay for the present number, nor have we the least intimation from whence it is to come. We have been thus situated before, and have seen the hand of God in opening a way.

If there has ever been a time when the friends of the Second Advent cause were loudly called upon for diligent prayerful effort, that time is the present. Let us not be found withholding our hand, or slackening our pace, at the important moment when we are expecting the glad sound to break forth from the heavens—covered with the glories of the immortal state, "Come, ye blessed of my father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world."

LAWRENCE STREET CHURCH.

This house has been recently sold to a society of Welsh people, who now worship at the Engine house in the same street. They are to have possession the first day of May next. We know not where we are to hold our week evening meetings, should time continue beyond that period.

We do not, however, feel any uneasiness upon the subject, for the Lord who has hitherto been with us, will direct in this matter, while we continue to perform our duty.

THE MEETINGS.

Our congregations on Sabbath last were about as large as usual. The meetings on Wednesday evening, and Thursday afternoon and evening of last week, were excelent; the presence of God being powerfully manifest. In our absence, Bro. Maul attended to the ordinance of baptism. Two were baptised. The congregations the present week, have not been so fully attended. What the reasons have been, is not for us to determine, but they will be fully understood very soon, when the Lord comes. We see no falling away among those that have been decided in their belief of the Lord's coming about the Jewish year 1843. It will, to us, be no surprising thing if there should be a falling off among those that have seemed to cling around us for safety, and who never yielded their all for Christ. It is our purpose to keep our readers advised of the state of the cause, whether prosperous or adverse; for to speak of prosperity in point of numbers and influence, and conceal a falling away of interest of such kind, would be to adopt the policy of the sects around us; which we cannot do and be honest before God, and our fellow-men. We ought not to be ashamed to follow the example of the apostles of Jesus, in their honest, open Christian course. They blushed not, to make a record of the fact, that they all forsook their master in the hour of his trial, while one of the most zealous of them cursed and swore profanely. Also to enter down the particulars of a contention between two of them, which became so sharp that they separated the one from the other. At present, the greatest danger we can see among our friends, is that of slumbering while the Bridegroom tarries—imperceptibly falling into an awfully dangerous slumber just before the master appears. The symptoms of this slumbering, which may be more safely discovered in ourselves than in others, ought in itself, to be hailed as the very last sign of the Bridegroom's sure approach.—Are your prayers faint and feeble? Does your confidence begin to fail you? Is your voice tremulous, and lacking in energy? Does your footsteps reluctant mark the way to the place of prayer? Are you slow to catch, and send forth with increased life, the notes of praise falling from others lips? Are you saying, "We trusted that it should have been" Jesus that would have delivered his people ere this? If such are your exercises, and such your feelings, O hear his voice! "O fools, and slow of heart to believe ALL THAT THE PROPHETS HAVE SPOKEN!" These very exercises of yours are recognised by the prophets, and by them, in connection with accompanying evidences, we may know the Bridegroom is near. See! O, see! that you are treading upon the last sands of probation. Arouse thee! See that there is oil in thy vessel—tarry not.

On Wednesday, P. M. at 3 o'clock, we had an interesting and profitable season by the river side, where the ordinance of Baptism was administered to six candidates. The ordinance of the Lord's Supper was administered at the Lawrence street Church, the same evening. At the close of this exercise, some time was spent in the narration of experiences. The house was well filled, and many happy testimonies were given in favor of the blessed effects of the Second Advent doctrine.

Bro. Tullock writes from the Midnight Cry office, N Y., April 8th, that Bro. Southard's health is gradually improving, yet he is not able to resume his labours.—"Bro. I. E. Jones is in the city—Bro. Snow is expected this week. We have now three places of worship in this city—meetings well attended. The brethren are firm and devoted as ever. Our prayer meetings are truly excellent. Many conversions of late. There is an increase of interest as time advances. Bro. Storrs has gone to Portsmouth, N. H."

The communication of Bro. J. Brown, involves this difficulty: It lacks the proof that the "going forth" of the Second Commandment of which he speaks was in the year 456 before Christ.

A bundle of books has been sent to Bro. John Creek, Liberty, Union county, Indiana. They were directed to be left at the stage house in Oxford.

VISIT TO INDIANA.

On Wednesday of last week we left this city for Aurora, Indiana, where we arrived at 3 o'clock, P. M. It is a pleasant village, situated on the bank of the Ohio, 25 miles from this place. It contains two or three thousand inhabitants, and two houses of worship—one of them owned by the Baptists, and the other by a board of trustees, a majority of whom are Second Advent believers. The house is at present occupied by the Methodists. It would have been at our service to lecture in, but had been previously engaged by the Presbyterians for three successive evenings, as they were about organizing a church in the place. We lectured in the Baptist house on Wednesday evening, Thursday afternoon and evening, to attentive audiences, though not large. The people of that village seem to be pretty much decided upon the subject of Christ's Advent, either in favor or against it. The believers number between twenty and thirty, and have to bear up against a bitter spirit of opposition, chiefly raised against them by members of the churches. They however seem nothing daunted, but confidently look for the Master's speedy return. As in other places, they embrace the mass of those that closely study their Bibles, and love its truths. Something of the spirit, of some of the opposition raised against them, may be gathered from the following incident:—While returning from the meeting on Thursday P. M. with a part of our family, and some other friends, a female observing us, remarked, "I wish I had a half bushel of rotten eggs just now." Upon inquiry, we learned that she was a member of the METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH. Just as though a half bushel of rotten eggs, well mashed against the head of a "Millerite" by a Methodist, would blot out the unchanging truths of God's word. However, the rotten egg argument is about as good as any we have yet received, against the duty of expecting the Saviour's return every hour.

We arrived home on Friday evening.

ARGUMENT.

"A NEW WAY TO PAY OLD DEBTS."—A friend of ours having a bill of long standing on a noted Millerite of this city, called on him for a settlement. The Millerite, being strong in the faith, and knowing that public feeling was decidly against paying the debt of nature to the exclusion of his financial accounts, declared, 1st, that he never owed him; 2d, that the bill had been paid; and 3d, that if he did not desist in his importunities, he would bring upon his devoted head the unappeasable wrath of Millerism! Our friend, thinking, perhaps, silence under the circumstances, preferable, and wishing to avoid a punishment so calamitous in its effects, wisely withdrew, and

People's Paper.

If the editor of the People's Paper had given the name of the above character, the community might have understood whether the rest of the article contained any truth. But that would not answer his purpose. It would not then have furnished an argument against Millerism. We understand that a man at the foot of Broadway this week cut his throat. Will the above editor tell us whether he was a Millerite? Of course he ought to be, for arguments are becoming scarce.

What contemptible meanness in any man, to attempt to palm off upon a large, respectable, and useful portion of community, every low-lived affair that may be scraped up from the dregs of community.

For the upright shall dwell in the land, and the perfect shall remain in it. But the wicked shall be cut off from the earth, and the transgressors shall be rooted out of it.—Proverbs, ii. 21, 22.

LETTER FROM SISTER MITCHELL.

Macomb, McDonough Co. Ill., Feb. 25, 1844.

Dear Bro. Jacobs:

Not having seen any account of the Second Advent cause in this section of the country, I would for your encouragement, and at the request of Bro. Nelson, inform you that there are quite a number here who are looking for, and that love the appearing of our blessed Lord,—who have no partiality for name or sect, but find with Peter, that "God is no respecter of persons, but in every nation, he that feareth him and worketh righteousness, is accepted with him." They can adopt the language of our Saviour, and say, "He that doeth the will of my Father which is in heaven, the same is my brother, and sister, and mother. Previous to Feb. 1843, we were ignorant of the views, and doctrines, taught by those that believe in the speedy coming of Christ. At that time there were several copies of the "Midnight Cry" sent gratuitously to the Post Office, of which my father was the postmaster. We examined them—our neighbors examined them—we were surprised, then convinced, that the doctrines taught by Adventists, were founded on the Bible, the "sure word of prophecy."

We have had the privilege of reading most of the Second Advent publications, and have perused them with the greatest pleasure. For a few months past we have been favored with the labors of Bro. Young, the Protestant Methodist Preacher on this circuit. He preaches the Coming of Christ at the door. Elder Barger, the presiding elder of the Methodist Episcopal church, is sounding the midnight cry. We were recently cheered with a visit from Bro. W. W. Nelson, that meek and lowly follower of Jesus. He lectured in this vicinity several times. The effect was, the friends of the Second Advent cause were encouraged, and the prejudice of many individuals was lessened. May the Lord reward him for his labor of love. He has left for Hancock Co. He was the only lecturer that we ever had the pleasure of seeing, although brethren Chittenden, and Stevens, came within eighteen miles of us. We believe the prophetic periods terminate about this time—that the Sixth Trumpet and Second Woe, is past; and that the "third woe cometh quickly," when the Seventh Trumpet shall sound, and the mystery of God shall be finished,—That the falling of the stars, ten years since, was one of the last signs that was to precede the Coming of the Lord. The next event recorded by John, the Revelator, is, the heavens departing as a scroll when it is rolled together. We believe that Christ will soon be seen "coming in the clouds of Heaven with power and great glory," and my willing heart responds, Even so, Lord Jesus, come quickly!!! Words cannot express my gratitude to the Giver of all our mercies, and to the friends and supporters of the Advent cause, that a timely warning has been given—that the midnight cry has found its way to the "far west," and that we are now among that favored few, who are looking for the return of our Lord. Tho' separated far from our native land, far from our eastern friends, and not favored with the privileges that they enjoy; and undergoing privations that they are strangers to, yet, Thank the Lord! we are looking for the same blessed hope, the glorious appearing of the great God and our Saviour Jesus Christ. It is our determination to look until the last enemy is conquered—until faith is lost in sight, and death swallowed up in victory. I would say to you, grow not weary in well-doing,—continue to give the needed alarm, and in due time you shall reap, if you faint not. I trust you will have many stars in the crown of your rejoicing, when the Lord shall come to make up his jewels.

I close in the hope that the Lord will soon come and take away the reproach of his people.

SARAH MITCHELL.

[The above letter, and also the one from A. Little, only reached us last week.—Ed.]

LETTER FROM A. LITTLE.

Dear Bro. Jacobs:

It has now been more than eight years, since I have been attached to any sect or denomination, during all of which time, and a number of years before, I have been striving to make the port of endless rest. The last year of my life has been the most pleasing one that I ever enjoyed. I am daily looking for the Coming of my Lord, and I expect him, and think that I love his appearing. Now, my brother, tell the children of the Lord to let go all names but the new name spoken of by Isa. 62: 2, and Rev. 2: 17. I fear that many will have their affections more on a name or sect, than on Christ or things above. It becomes us in these last days, to set our affections on things above, and not on things of the earth—to be dead to the world, and have our life hid with Christ in God.

I would say to all our Second Advent brethren, do not give up your faith and confidence in the speedy Coming of the Saviour. As the vision now tarries, wait for it, it will surely come: it will not tarry: Be patient, therefore, unto the coming of the Lord.

I wish that some good lecturers would come through this section. Farewell.

Your brother in Christ,

ANSON LITTLE.

FOR THE WESTERN MIDNIGHT CRY.

"Blessed are they that mourn, for they shall be comforted."

When first on life's expansive sea,
I launched with spirits high;
Its crystal surface soon grew rough,
And clouds o'ercast my sky:
I saw suspended on the cross,
'Mid raillery and scorn,
The Lamb of God, who came to seek
And comfort them that mourn.

I viewed the gore upon his brow,—
The crimson from his side—
Astonish'd saw the Sinless bleed,
And marked how meek he died.
Amazed! I learned what him became,
And why his flesh was torn,
Who came to drink the sinner's cup,
And comfort them that mourn.

All nature shook when he expired;
Death wore his darkest mien;
And o'er creation's peopled realms,
A deep eclipse was seen:
But soon he rose,—abolished death,
And succored the forlorn;
Ascended high our cause to plead,
And comfort them that mourn.

Low at thy feet, Incarnate God,
My leprous soul I throw;
O make it clean by touch divine!
And save from endless woe!
This trembling, bleeding heart befriend
Which sorrow's flood has worn,
And let my drooping spirits know
Who comforts them that mourn.

Come all ye sad, ye wretched come!
Where you can manna find,
And taste that sweet immortal bliss
That suits the immortal mind.
With trembling, bow the supplant knee,
And all your sins bemoan;
Then shall ye know, and taste, and feel
He comforts them that mourn.

EXTRACTS

From a Private Letter from Bro. J. B. Cook, dated

St. Louis, April 8th 1844.

Dear Brother—

"A brief account of our tour to this place may be expected. We had a very pleasant interview with Dr. Field, of Jeffersonville. It was, to us, edifying. He believes that the 2300 prophetic days end this spring: yet is prepared to wait, should there be, from any cause a tarrying of the vision. He was not using the Great Chart, [Diagram of the visions of Daniel,] therefore he yielded it to me. Having given away my large one, I needed it. Leaving here, it became known on board the boat that we were Adventists, and I was invited to lecture. The auditory was attentive, and in part, candid. We had some hundreds of deck passengers on board, a portion of whom were professors of Religion. They filled the vessel with sweet notes of praise to God our Saviour. I could but believe I should find them willing to hear of our Redeemer's return; but found as perfect a bedlam as I ever saw in a groggery. The deepest scorn, and most perfect hate to the Advent, was manifested by them. However, one, as I retired from these bedlamite professors, 'clave unto me.' This one told me that these opposers were professors, and got their opposition from the pulpit. We felt it a privilege to be covered all over, and come away dripping with reproach. I knew that I went to them in the spirit of Jesus. I told them the plain truth in inspired language; of course I was "happy," as God hath said. We circulated what publications we had, out of the box. My conscience would not allow me to countenance the open rebellion against heaven, of which the crew and company of the vessel were guilty, therefore we left the boat at Cape Giradeau, a little after midnight Lord's day morning. We had a quiet Sabbath. I lectured to the people on the hill in the open air, and also in the School House. The people had never heard upon the subject of the Advent, and were eager to learn. The Baptist meeting house stood unoccupied through the whole day. Well—"it is enough for the disciple to be as his master:" Jesus was treated just so by many, consequently I cannot complain,—nay, I rejoice to be counted worthy of rejection for the truth's sake.

We came to this city in the steam boat "Alexander Scott," where we arrived on Tuesday last. We had a large company on board, from New Orleans, to whom, by request, I lectured in the evening till near eleven o'clock. There was no little amusement among a few, in advance. They hoped, as I afterwards learned, to have had sport at my expense; but seldom, if ever, have I had a more solemn auditory. It was too serious a subject, and made, to their minds, too obviously true that the Judgment is at hand, to afford merriment; except two, whose business (play actors) makes them hypocrites, or such as "play a part." * * * This I should not notice were it not that such hypocrites, or players of assumed parts, are found in the pulpits of our land, and in the churches. Many assume to be friends and servants of Messiah. They assume to love his appearing, and yet will close their doors against those who honestly read their Bibles, and sincerely believe what is written of his coming. I am more and more persuaded that they are hypocrites. They oppose bitterly, and profanely, what they profess to love. So did the Pharisees of old. The scales which weighed a Pharisee 1800 years ago, will weigh one now. Matt. 16: 14. They could discover the signs of the weather, but not the signs of the Messiah's Advent; because they were "playing a part." They were hypocrites, and would not be detected. So with many now. They trifle with their Lord's coming, covertly, as did my two fellow passengers. Instance also an article in the "Western Christian Advocate," headed "the sitting goose."

We found a very interesting band of believers here—have had meetings daily—yesterday three times, once in the market place, once in the Court house, in the evening in the public school room. The brethren are firm in the faith, though many of their number, since Bros. Chittenden and Stevens left, have fallen away into the world, on the professing church. Had one of these brethren remained, the band would probably have numbered hundreds. We are well and happy in hope. Our time is not out, as many know, till May. Still we are looking up, and trust we shall till the blessed Bridegroom's return.

Yours in hope. J. B. COOK.

FOR THE MIDNIGHT CRY.

TO ADVENTISTS.

Stand fast—maintain your stations,
The Bridegroom's coming show;
And loud to sleeping nations,
The midnight trumpet blow,—
Harmonious proclaiming
To Adam's dying race,
The period fulfilling,
That marks the reign of grace.

With holy zeal are spreading,
Pure inspiration's flame,
With heart's to Jesus burning,
Exulting in His name:
Esaias like, are calling
On souls by error driven,
To turn and hail the Saviour,
Who soon will come from heaven.

Fly swift ye wheels of nature;
The promised era bring;
Then Saints possess the kingdom,
And reign with Christ, their King:
When on the Mount of Olives,
Hosannahs will resound,
And on the throne of David,
The Son of Man be crowned.

LETTER FROM SISTER BROMWELL.

CASEY, Clark Co., Ills., April 5, 1844.

DEAR SIR—Although a stranger and a female, I hope the importance of the subject of this letter will be a sufficient excuse for the intrusion, and prevent its passing unregarded by the friends of the Second Advent. I write to request, or rather to implore, that you would send us a lecturer on this subject. I have found that there is no more sure and successful a way of reaching the mass of community than by lecturing. In fact, with the greatest portion, it is the only way, for they either cannot or will not read. I wrote last summer to Bro. Himes, and he sent a lot of the "Midnight Cry" to this place, but there being very few who can read, the plain honest common class, (the very ones most likely to be benefited, because most willing to receive instruction,) are cut off from the privilege of investigating for themselves. Those who can read, act shamefully. I sent a package of the Cry to a local preacher in a neighboring village, and was informed since, that he had never read a word in it—he was too much engaged. Yet, he would attend a lecture. He never neglects the preaching of any denomination within his reach. He is a candid man, and if convinced under a lecture, would be up and doing. Another, a powerful preacher, of fine talent, will not read—says he is ready if it is true; and it is his duty to preach, and not spend his time about "Millerism"—he has no faith in it. But I am certain he would attend a lecture; and if his attention can only be aroused, will not the solemnity and importance of the subject have its due weight? I am amazed at the existing ignorance of the Bible, with most persons with whom I have conversed on this subject; but they have all one piece of knowledge; the perpetual answer is "Christ said, no man could know, and so Mr. Miller dont know; it dont give me any concern." O how my soul has sickened at the oft repeated sound. And I, what can I do? Nothing as I can see, I am a woman, and a cripple, confined for the last four years entirely to my bed, from which I now write you, on the cover of a book before me. Brethren of the Second Advent cause, can you do nothing for this people? You could not send to a more needy place. It is easy of access. From Terre Haute, on the Wabash, along the National Road to Greenup, about 43 miles, is the portion of country for which I would plead. It is thickly settled on either side of the road all along to St. Louis. But Marshall, and Cumberland, are the places for which I would most earnestly entreat, for I know their wants. Surely you will help us. Among so many believers in the cause, there must be some one to spare, who would rejoice to enlarge his reward by gathering these perishing souls into the Lord's flock. The people here do not seem to have any of the bitter spirit that exists in the East, towards the views of Bro. Miller. It is only ignorance that prevents them from embracing the truth. They want some one to teach them as little children, to make it plain—to gather and present the different proofs in a kind manner. Do not pass by this request, I entreat you. Make some effort. Oh that I could influence you! What shall I say to urge the matter upon you? I can plead great need, and much room for hope. It is with God to influence and aid. His will be done, and to Him be all the glory.

The following is from an old Hymn Book, published by John Wesley, in London, Oct. 20th, 1779.

If John Wesley should now come to Cincinnati, and sing to his followers here, "Hasten, Lord, the general doom," "Shorten these vindictive days," some of them would call him "a wicked, hard hearted man," for wishing to have the wicked destroyed.

HYMN.

ON THE SECOND COMING OF CHRIST.

Come Desire of Nations, come!
Hasten, Lord, the general doom:
Hear the Spirit and the Bride;
Come, and take us to thy side.

Thou, who hast our place prepared,
Make us meet for our reward;
Then with all thy saints descend;
Then our earthly trials end.

Mindful of thy chosen race,
Shorten these vindictive days;
Who for full redemption groan,
Hear us now, and save thine own.

Now destroy the man of sin;
Now thine ancient flock bring in!
Fill'd with righteousness divine,
Claim a ransom'd world for thine.

Plant thy heavenly kingdom here,
Glorious in thy saints appear;
Speak the sacred number seal'd:
Speak the mystery reveal'd.

Take to thee thy royal power;
Reign, when sin shall be no more;
Reign, when death no more shall be;
Reign to all eternity.

LIAR'S DEPARTMENT.

"MILLERISM.

"We do not wish to be considered disrespectful to any class of our fellow-citizens, when we state that it has been reported by Dr. Woodward of the Worcester, Massachusetts, Insane Asylum, that fifteen cases out of twenty admitted to that institution within the last year, have arisen from the effects of Miller's doctrines.

Any doctrine that has for its foundation such results, must, if it fasten upon the mind, tend to destroy its faculties. We only wonder that all who believe it do not lose their right minds. To live in continual expectation of such an event, the end of the world, must be distressing in the extreme. It is a kind of continual death.

Daily Commercial.

As an illustration of the last paragraph, read the following:

"Then shall ye return and discern between the righteous and the wicked, between him that serveth God and him that serveth him not." Malachi 3: 18.

"For if we sin wilfully after that we have received the knowledge of the truth, there remaineth no more sacrifice for sins, but a certain FEARFUL LOOKING FOR OF JUDGMENT and fiery indignation that shall devour the adversaries." Heb. 10: 26, 27.

THE CHRISTIAN'S HOPE AND DUTY.

"Looking for that blessed hope, and the GLORIOUS APPEARING OF THE GREAT GOD, AND OUR SAVIOUR JESUS CHRIST: who gave himself for us, that he might redeem us from all iniquity, and purify unto himself a peculiar people zealous of good works. These things speak, and exhort, and rebuke with all authority. Let no man despise thee." Titus 2: 13-15.

We are informed that when the Second Advent publications first reached this city, the editor of the Commercial, was the chief man in circulating them.

EATING AND DRINKING WITH THE DRUNKEN.

Brother Weston informs us that on the evening it was known he would arrive in Enfield, N. H., to commence a course of lectures on the Advent, a noted infidel determined to have a feast on the occasion.—He accordingly prepared a sumptuous fare, and invited, 1st, the Congregational minister, and his right hand deacon; 2d, the Methodist minister, and one of his leading members for a delegate, and 3d, the Universalist minister, with one of his head men. Then, to be even with the clergy, the infidel said he should need a delegate; and accordingly he invited another infidel. These eight sat down to the sumptuous repast, and on separating, the infidel presented each of the ministers with a large cheese, and three dollars, when they parted to the mutual satisfaction of all. Bro. Weston saw the infidel's delegate the day following, who spake very highly of the feast, he said he never had a better time, they all agreed respecting "Millerism:" he had been rather afraid of the clergy, but he found them a very jolly set of fellows.

ANOTHER FEAST.—The following is copied from the printed advertisement of a feast at the Congregational Church at Webster, on Sunday evening, where, we are informed, six clergymen were present; and also that cake with rings in it were gambled for, and various articles sold at auction, &c.

From the Midnight Cry.

COMING OF CHRIST.

Lo, the Saviour is coming, with bright clouds descending,
Who once bled for sinners, by sinners was slain!
With thousands of thousands of seraphs attending,
Which swell the loud chorus and join in the train.

The islands, the hills, the seas and the mountains,
The heavens and the earth in confusion retire;
Creation astonished, and nature confounded,
The air is ignited, the world is on fire.

Hark! Gabriel's shrill trumpet the sepulchres rending,
The lightnings are flashing and piercing the sky;
The living and dead, in Christ Jesus ascending,
And mounting to meet their redeemer on high.

While all who've been running in open rebellion,
And slighting his love, when the world's all on flame,
Will cry for the rocks and the mountains to hide them
From the presence of God and the wrath of the Lamb.

O shout, my dear brethren, that day long expected
Is coming—redemption through Jesus is nigh;
No longer oppressed, no longer rejected,
All tears, by our Lord, will be wiped from each eye!

THE TESTIMONY OF OUR OPPONENTS.

We copy the following from the "Millennial Harbinger," published in Bethany, Va. It denies the time of the Advent, and nature of the kingdom. This work is edited by Alexander Campbell, who in his debate with Owen, has furnished us with an argument for the termination of the prophetic periods in 1843. He here furnishes us an excellent argument in favor of the wholesome effects of the Second Advent doctrine. It was written better than a year ago.

"As time advances, the doctrine of the Second Advent in 1843 gains new interest, and grasps with a stronger hold the minds of all who assent to its strong probability.—This is just what we expected and predicted since first we heard its annunciation.—Excitement keeps pace with every new convert, and consequently has not yet reached its proper height. The ardently pious and strongly imaginative proclaimers of the world's immediate end, in their untiring efforts to propagate the opinion, in such a community as this, cannot fail to influence thousands, and to inflame their zeal to the highest enthusiasm. What topic more sublime, more soul-subduing, more delightful to the Christian than that of the Lord's glorious return to judge the world, to reward his friends and punish his enemies! Talk they of sublime themes! Methinks the most sublime of all that earth and time afford, are the veriest common-places compared with this.

Many sincere and conscientious spirits are already enrolled amongst its advocates, and some of them are not only sincere, but pure, and noble, and amiable Christians.—These are the great Apostles of the theory, to whose virtues and excellencies the cause is mainly indebted for it comparative success. Its temples are festooned with Christian charity. Its altars are covered with the garlands and wreaths of piety and humanity.—Its priests wear the coronal of elevated sanctity, and its votaries are from necessity all more learned in the symbols of prophecy than those who oppose them.

Every thing in society is now favorable to the rapid propagation of the new theory.—The prevailing ignorance of the Bible, and especially of prophecy, on the part of many who declaim against "Millerism," and the unfortunate essays of learned men in their zeal for old opinions, so far transcending the oracles of reason and the canons of common sense, have contributed no little to advance into public favor the doctrine of "the Second Advent near." Amongst these essays may stand first that of Professor Stuart, whose high attainments in biblical learning I highly appreciate. That essay already trumpeted by a thousand voices, republished in various forms by distinguished preachers and writers from Boston to Cincinnati—by the Colvers, the Stowes, and the Mahans of this land, has greatly aided "THE SIGNS OF THE TIMES" and "THE MIDNIGHT CRIES" of the new school prophetic expositors.

But more than any other individual cause, have the profane scoffings, falsehoods, and caricatures of the religious and political press, in opposition to the doctrine of "the Second Advent near," contributed to confirming the minds of the initiated in the pleasing hope, and to the furnishing of their preachers with new "signs of the times" in arguing the certainty of their opinions. If Noah, Daniel, and Job had re-appeared in the person of friend Miller, and uttered the oracles of the Lord, they would have been derided, slandered, misrepresented, and denounced as disturbers of the peace of the world's giddy dance, and troublers of the modern Israel in her one hundred and one factions of orthodox proscription, just as Mr. Miller and his party have been.

Another reason of the assurance of the faith in the minds of those who are true believers of the doctrine, is the delightful state of mind into which they feel themselves inducted through the new theory. Every righteous man must feel an exquisite pleasure in the strongly anticipated immediate return of his Lord. What possible event could be hailed with such overwhelming joy as the end of this sin-distracted and convulsed world, and the beginning of a new creation, in which as Christians, all hope to participate! New heavens, illuminated with an unsetting sun of ineffable glory, spangled with stars brighter far than our present sun: a new earth, surrounded with an immortal atmosphere, filled with unfading freshness, sweetness, and beauty, decorated with charms incomparably superior to those of Eden and its ancient Paradise, animated too with the presence of Nature's eternal and immortal King and his celestial train, the eternal home of the saints, where "sin and sorrow, pain and death, are felt and feared no more." I say, who would not gladly exchange a sin-emaciated face, a shattered constitution, sown thick with the seeds of death for a spiritual and immortal frame, a shipwrecked earth, filled with unquenchable fires, convulsed with interminable agonies, and covered with floods of water that have washed and drenched its deeply furrowed face with a thousand mountains and valleys, for a new earth never to be trodden by the profane foot of a solitary prodigal, nor marred by the unsanctified touch of a rebel hand during the ceaseless ages of eternity!

None on earth are more to be envied than those happy spirits who are wrought up, or have wrought themselves up, to the full persuasion that in one short year, a little less or more, and they shall most certainly realize all this. Methinks to such the year 1843 will pass along with dreams of felicity and sweet antepasts of blessedness, whose remembrance will in years to come be as the delightful oasis in a parched desert—as the vision of a Paul caught away into the celestial Paradise, into the purer climes of the third heavens. And all this, too, without even the parting pang which nature feels when "shuffling off this mortal coil" and bidding a long adieu to those we leave behind. For in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, perhaps during some prayer or song of praise, while in the midst of a monosyllable, one half uttered in time, the other in eternity—the first accent from a mortal, the second from an immortal tongue, crystalized into a gem in less than time's shortest mark or minutest point, we have passed the bourne of mortality, and are found dwelling not in houses of clay founded in the dust, but in a house from heaven, spiritual, incorruptible, immortal, and glorious. And all this, too, I repeat, without the pain of parting from one we love. We cast not one "longing lingering look behind." None are left we care any thing about. Nature, flesh, and all earth's associations, are forever left without one single feeling that time or sense endear. What a mysterious, delightful, ineffable moment that in which mortality is swallowed up in life; in which we obtain beauty for ashes, joy for mourning, the garment of praise for the spirit of heaviness; in which we part from sin, and sorrow, and woe, and find ourselves at home in the presence of the Lord, in the bosom of his love, surrounded with all the sons of light, with the riches and glory of the New Jerusalem temple, thronged with the great hierarchs and kings of all the dominions of Eternity. Who of the Christian family would not rejoice with joy unspeakable and full of glory, that in a few months all this should transpire, and that without the least of all the agonies of death—perhaps fall asleep some night and awaken glorified in the presence of the Lord, hearing with an immortal ear the last echo of the grave-opening, body-reanimating, soul-transforming sound of the archangel's trumpet!

No doctrine, then, more cheering than that of "the Second Advent near;" no opinion produces a more delightful state of mind."

Speaking of Prof. Stuart, he says, p. 293,

"Our good brother Scott, of Carthage, has written a very handsome refutation of Prof. Stowe's version of Prof. Stuart's version of some of the German Professor's interpretations of prophetic times. He has fully exploded the whole Neologistic notion of making all prophetic days literal days. I never was more disnppointed in reading any treatise on prophecy, than in perusing that of Professor Stuart. The first part of the book propounds useful rules of scripture interpretation, for history, poetry, and didactic instructions; but in the end he applies them all to symbolic imagery. This is the radical error of Stuart's treatise. He lays down good rules; but afterwards, as I conceive, misapplies them. Besides all that, brother Scott has said in exposition of the error of applying to symbols grammatical rules, the Professor's argument places the Prophets Daniel and John in rather an eccentric attitude—nay, according to Stuart, Stowe, &c. the spirit of revelation gave to Daniel some three and a half, or, at most, seven years of the history of the Jews; and to John about the same period of the church, so far, indeed, as her wilderness condition is contemplated. What a singular aberration from common sense for so distinguished a man! To present Daniel and John as chiefly engrossed in writing the prophetic history of from three to seven years of all time, regardless of all the rest. How true the saying—'Great men are not always wise!' "

OBJECTION ANSWERED.

Our opponents say, "It will make infidels. If your calculations fail, the faith of the people will be shaken in the Bible." Let us look at this objection. Who will be made infidels? Not our opponents, for they don't believe us. It is all moonshine with them! Who then will be made infidels? Surely none but Second Advent believers. Well, we will suppose a case to illustrate this matter. Believers in the Second Advent are students of prophecy. We have fifty positive predictions in the Bible which have been literally fulfilled. In all we will suppose there were fifty one to be fulfilled. Fifty are already fulfilled, and have become matters of history. By these we know that the Bible is the word of God. This is settled forever. Well, in the course of time, certain members of the church by reading the Bible, and by comparing Scripture with Scripture, come to the conclusion that the fifty-first event will take place in a given year, say 1843. No one in the mean time is able to disprove it, or show a better calculation. Well, we continue looking for the event until the time expires, and the last event does not take place as they had calculated. What will these believers do? They have 50 demonstrations of the truth of God's word, and they have ONE mistake of their own in a mere calculation. Let common sense decide whether we should reject our Bibles! Make Infidels!! It is a skeptical church that is making infidels.—Signs of the Times.

THE JUDGMENT SCENE.

The great tremendous day 's approaching,
The awful scene is drawing near,
When we shall see the great transaction,
When Christ in judgment shall appear.
The orbit lamps all veiled in sackcloth,
No more their shining circuits run;
The wheel of time stops in a moment,
Eternal things are now begun.

Bright forked lightning dart the concave,
Loud thunders roar from pole to pole;
The heavens are shaking, the earth is quaking,
While horrors seize the guilty soul.
See nature stand all in amazement,
To hear the last loud trumpet sound;
"Arise, ye dead, and come to judgment,
Ye nations of the world around!"

Seas, grave yards, and the tombs of marble,
Give up their dead, both small and great;
Now the whole world, both saints and sinners,
Are summoned to the judgment seat.
See Jesus on the throne of justice!
With clouds of dazzling glory round!
While countless armies of saints and angels
With shouts, his glory far resound!

Bright glory streams from Jesus' presence,
His chariot rolls on burning flame;
The angels in their state attending,
His order to their hosts proclaim.
"Go forth, ye heralds, with speed like lightning,
Gather my saints from every land!
Those whom my blood from sin has ransom'd,
And who prepared for glory stand?"

O, come, ye blessed of my father—
The purchase of my dying love;
Receive the crowns of life and glory,
Which are laid up for you above!
There's flowing founts of living waters!
No sickness, pain or death to fear—
No sorrow, sighing, tears or weeping,
Shall ever have admittance there!

But how will sinners stand and tremble,
When Justice calls them to the bar!
Those who have slighted his offered mercy,
Their everlasting doom to hear.
"Depart from me, ye cursed rebels!
Of this ye have been warned full well;
I waited long, from your hearts you drove me;
Your chosen doom is the pains of hell."

The guilty souls, now struck with horror,
With anguish throbbing in their breast;
Are given up to pain and sorrow,
No more to find a moment's rest.
O sinner, heed this faithful warning,
Return to Jesus while you may;
He is waiting to receive you—
Prepare, prepare for that dread day.

LETTER FROM MR. MILLER—HIS POSITION.

My Dear Brother Himes:—

I am now seated at my old desk in my east room. Having obtained help of God until the present time, I am still looking for the dear Saviour, the Son of God from heaven, and for the fulfilment of the promise made to our fathers, and confirmed unto us by them that heard him, that he would come again and would receive us to himself, or gather in one body all the family of the first born in heaven, and earth, even in him.—This, Paul has told us, would be in the fulness of times, Eph. 1: 9, 10. The time, as I have calculated it, is now filled up; and I expect every moment to see the Saviour descend from heaven. I have now nothing to look for but this glorious hope. I am full in the faith that all prophetic chronology except the 1000 years in the 20th of Rev. is now about full. Whether God designs for me to warn the people of this earth any more, or not, I am at a loss to know: Yet I mean to be governed, if time should continue any longer than I have expected, by the word and providence of Him, who will never err; and in whom I think I have trusted, and been supported during my twelve years arduous labors, in trying to awaken the churches of God, and the Christian community, and to warn my fellow men of the necessity of an immediate preparing to meet our Judge in the day of his appearing. I hope I have cleansed my garments from the blood of souls. I feel that, as far as it was in my power, I have freed myself from all guilt in their condemnation. It is true, but not wonderful, when we become acquainted with the state and corruption of the present age of the Laodicean church, that I have met with great opposition from the pulpit and professed religious press; and I have been instrumental, through the preaching of the Advent doctrine, of making it quite manifest that not a few of our theological teachers are infidels in disguise. I cannot for a moment believe, that denying the resurrection of the body, or the return of Christ to this earth, or of a judgment day yet future, is any the less infidelity now than it was in the days of infidel France; and yet, who does not know that these things are as common as pulpits and presses are? And, which of these questions are not publicly denied in our pulpits and by the writers and editors of the public papers? Surely, we have fallen on strange times. I expected of course the doctrine of Christ's speedy coming would be opposed by infidels, blasphemers, drunkards, gamblers, and the like; but I did not expect the ministers of the gospel and professors of religion would unite with characters of the above description, at stores and public places, in ridiculing the solemn doctrine of the Second Advent. Many, who were not professors of religion, have affirmed to me these facts, and say they have seen them; and have felt their blood chilled at the sight.

These are some of the effects which are produced by preaching this solemn and soul-stirring doctrine, among our Pharisees of the present day. Is it possible that such ministers and members are obeying God, and watching and praying for his glorious appearing, while they join these scoffers in their unholy and ungodly remarks? If Christ does come, where must they appear? and what a dreadful account will they meet in that tremendous hour? But I feel almost confident that my labors are about done, and I am, with a deep interest of soul, looking for my blessed and glorious Redeemer, who will then be King over all the earth, and God with us for evermore. This I can truly say is my chief desire. It is my meditation all the day long. It is my song in the night, and my faith and hope, amidst the scenes of this sin-cursed earth. It consoles me in sickness, comforts me in tribulation, and gives me patience to endure the scoffs and tauntings of an ungodly, selfish, and unfeeling world. My faith and confidence in God's word is as strong as ever; although he has not come in the time I expected. I still believe the time is not far off, and that God will soon, yes, too soon for the proud scoffers, justify himself, his word, and the cry of alarm which has been given through your indefatigable labors, with others whom God has raised up to assist in giving the midnight cry.

I am highly gratified with your present position; if you had gone to criticising words in order to find another time, yet future, men would not have thought you honest in your views, would have lost all confidence in you, and the good you have done would have been neutralized, had you shifted or changed your ground.

You have good, honest and sure ground yet to stand upon; for Christ says, "So likewise ye, when ye shall see all these things, know that he is near, even at the door."—Now we have lived to see all the signs fulfilled, the time accomplished. "Watch, therefore: for ye know not what hour your Lord doth come."

This is the position I have now to take, and what more work I have to do, will be done in this manner. I will.

I. PROVE BY SCRIPTURE AND HISTORY THAT TIME IS FULFILLED.

II. SHOW THE SIGNS ALL COMPLETED.

III. THE DUTY OF WATCHING, FOR WE KNOW NOT WHAT HOUR THE LORD MAY COME. And if God has any thing more for me to do in his vineyard, he will give me strength, open the door, and enable me to do whatever may be his will, for his glory and the best good for man.

To him I leave the event, for him I watch and pray, saying, "Come Lord Jesus, come quickly. Amen, even so come Lord Jesus."

WM. MILLER.

Low Hampton, March 25, 1844.

WHERE ARE WE?

PHILADELPHIA, March 28, 1844.

Dear Br. Tullock:—While the brethren have freely given their views of the prophetic periods, and especially of the ending of the 2300 days of Dan. 8: 14, for a year past, I have forborne to say anything through the press, because I thought quite enough had already been said, and a sufficient variety of views were before the public. But I have had my own views, and freely expressed them in my preaching and conversation; and on the coming events, I have given my views in writing to the public.

The prophetic times, as we have understood them, may now be fairly considered as at an end. Bro. Miller's time, which was between March 21, 1843, and March 21, 1844, is gone.

I now will come to what I wish to say. I now firmly believe, as I have for the last six years, that the 2300 days only reach to the spring of A. D. 1843, I think the anniversary of the ascension. I come to this conclusion,—

1. Because the last event which was to take place in the 70 weeks, was the anointing of the MOST HOLY, or literally, THE HOLY OF HOLIES, the Sanctum Sanctorum.

The import of this service in the Tabernacle made by Moses in the wilderness, may be learned from Ex. 30: 25–31. "And thou shalt make it an oil of holy ointment, an ointment compound after the art of the apothecary: it shall be an holy anointing oil. And thou shalt anoint the tabernacle of the congregation therewith, and the ark of the testimony, and the table and all his vessels, and the candlestick and his vessels, and the altar of incense, and the altar of burnt-offering with all his vessels, and the laver and his foot. And thou shalt sanctify them, that they may be most holy: whatsoever toucheth them shall be holy. And thou shalt anoint Aaron and his sons, and consecrate them, that THEY may minister unto me in the priest's office. And thou shalt speak unto the children of Israel, saying, This shall be an holy anointing oil unto me throughout your generations." And from Lev. 8: 10–13, "And Moses took the anointing oil, and anointed the tabernacle, and all that was therein, and sanctified them. And he sprinkled thereof upon the altar seven times, and anoint the altar, and all his vessels, both the laver and his foot, to sanctify them. And he poured of the anointing oil upon Aaron's head, and anointed him, to sanctify him. And Moses brought Aaron's sons, and put coats upon them, and girded them with girdles, and put bonnets upon them; as the Lord commanded them."

This anointing took place immediately previous to and preparatory for the presentation of the blood of the sin-offering in the holy place.

That ark built by Moses, was a perfect pattern of the tabernacle in heaven, whither Christ is for us entered with his blood as the sin-offering, which he shed without the camp. See Heb. 7th to 10th chapters.

What, therefore, Moses and the High Priest did in the pattern, Christ our prophet and priest did in the true tabernacle, heaven itself. That must have been anointed immediately after his ascension into heaven, and before the Pentecost, because the peaceful answer then came, the evidence that he prevailed before the Mercy seat.

2. It seems to me that the eclipse of the moon which immediately preceded the death of Herod, the king, which was 1847 full years preceding the 13th of the present month, and must have been some months after the birth of Christ, proves that if he was not more than thirty when he began his ministry, the 69 weeks must have ended in A. D. 26. Then 30 years, the Saviour's age when he commenced preaching, from 1847, leaves 1817. We now want 7 years more to make 70 weeks. Take this from 1817, and we have 1810 left, after the 75 weeks end. Then add the one week to A. D. 26, where the 69 ended, and we have A. D. 33, for the end of the 70 weeks or 490 years, which is just where Ferguson's Astronomical argument places the crucifixion. True, some doubt the correctness of that argument; but I have never seen sufficient evidence yet to shake my confidence in it, in the least degree. If he was crucified in the spring of A. D. 33, and ascended into heaven 40 days after his resurrection and anointed the Holy of Holies, that is the last moment to which I can trace the 70 weeks. Leave that landmark as forming one extreme of the 70 weeks, and we are upon a wide sea without chart or compass.

The only question now remaining to be settled, is, the meaning of the word midst. I freely admit all that is contended for as to the primary meaning of the word, signifying middle. But then I do not admit that it has that signification here. But the sense in which the word is used frequently in the Bible, is, within a thing. The sense and subject requires this meaning in Dan. 9: 27.—"He shall confirm the covenant with many for one week and in the midst of the week," within it, before it ends, "he shall cause the sacrifice and oblation to cease." If this was done at his crucifixion, 43 days before he ascended, it would be in the midst of the week. The fact that the Holy of Holies was to be anointed as the last thing in the weeks, shows that the period could not be protracted three and a half years after that was done. I believe that anointing marked the last hour of 490 exact years from the decree to restore and build Jerusalem. And that 1810 full years from that event which ended in May, 1843, A. D., terminated the 2300 years, and the Justification or pardon of the Sanctuary or Jerusalem. And that from that moment she has stood innocent, preparatory to her deliverance from the Gentiles and her glorification at the coming of the Lord. I am the more convinced of this, from the fact that immediately on the expiration of that period as I have formerly shown, the Lord began to scourge Jerusalem's desolator, ROME, and has continued and increased those troubles ever since. I am fully persuaded that before the Lord comes in the clouds of heaven, the fourth beast of Dan. 7th, will be put to death and his body, the capital or seat of empire be burned with fire. I am not certain that we shall hear the news of its fall, but whether we do or not, I believe it will go to ruin.

I have looked upon the 1335 days of Dan. 12: 12, as extending beyond the 2300 days and reaching to the resurrection. Their termination cannot be far distant. I have looked with great interest for some months past, to the anniversary of the captivity of the pope, which took place March 27th, A. D., 1799. The papal government was abolished Feb. 15, 1798; but the pope was not led into captivity until 1799. I have thought that might have been the end of the 1290 days as 1798 was of the 1260. But the day has gone by, and I have no more time to count. I do, however, expect, if we have time to hear from Europe, that the anniversary of that captivity is marked by some important event. I have not time or room now to give you all my reasons. I may soon give a full view, in a separate work, of the 2300 days and the book of Revelation from the 12th chapter throughout.

Behold, I come quickly: blessed is he that keepeth the sayings of the prophecy of this book.—Rev. xxii. 7.

ESSAY ON THE JUDGMENT.

BY J. D. DOW.

(Concluded.)

ing compassion and grace of his glorious Lord and Savior, and join in that song of the redeemed which shall thrill through all heaven. "Saying with a loud voice, Worthy is the Lamb that was slain to receive power, and riches, and wisdom, and strength, and honor, and glory, and blessing:" "for thou wast slain; and hast redeemed us to God by thy blood, out of every kindred and tongue, and people and nation; and hast made us unto our God kings and priests: and we shall reign on the earth!"

3. What a scene of solemn and awful realities will that day discover to the enemies of God!

"Great day of consternation and of dread!"

O ye careless, ye presumptous! suffer a word of exhortation. Prepare to meet your God. Of what avail then, will be all your vain boastings of no fear of death, or hell—shall I add, or even of the Almighty?—no regard for the entreaties, warnings, rebukes, and threatening, of God in his word—echoed and reiterated in tones of thunder in your ears, by his ministers and people; the significant admonitions of conscience, the strivings of the Holy Spirit, and the ominous dispensation of Divine Providence? What will it avail, that you have labored all your lives, and spent all your strength, and time, and talents, to cover up hell, and pile the whole tremendous mass of curses, and threatenings, and denunciations, of terror and wrath to come, from the "King of Kings, and Lord of Lords," upon the contracted limits of old Jerusalem and its inhabitants?

O the fearful responsibility of preaching "peace, peace," when God has not spoken peace; but positively declared that "there is no peace to the wicked!"

"Then shall he say also unto them on the left hand, Depart from me, ye cursed, into everlasting fire, prepared for the devil and his angels: for I was an hungered, and ye gave me no meat: I was thirsty, and ye gave me no drink: I was a stranger, and ye took me not in: naked, and ye clothed me not: sick and in prison, and ye visited me not. Then shall they also answer him, saying, Lord, when saw we thee an hungered, or athirst, or in prison, and did not minister unto thee? Then shall he answer them, saying, Verily I say unto you, inasmuch as ye did it not to one of the least of these, ye did it not to me. And these shall go away into everlasting punishment." It seems that they will either think they had been doing very well—all that was required of them; or, that they never had an opportunity of doing those things, for the neglect of which they will be condemned. Will they then plead, in extenuation of their guilt, the fact that they had opposed revivals of religion, the doctrines of faith and repentance, as necessary to salvation; that they supposed they were ministering to His wants when they saw their fellow beings in trouble and distress on account of their sins, "a certain fearful looking for of judgment and fiery indignation, which shall devour the adversaries;" and used every effort in their power to soothe and lull their disturbed consciences to sleep, and quiet their gloomy forebodings of future retribution, by crying "peace, peace," "ye shall not surely die;" while they charged all these apprehensions to an improper and foolish excitement, produced by the "fanatics" of the day—"the preachers of the doctrine of endless misery?" "O that they were wise, that they understood this, that they would consider their latter end!" May the Lord save us from such a course, and such a fate!

4. It will be a day of the eminent display of God's glory. "When the Son of Man comes in his glory, and all the holy angels with him, then shall he sit upon the throne of his glory." Matt. xxv. 31. He will then "come to be glorified in his saints, and admired in all them that believe." 2 Thess. i. 10; Eph. i. 6, 12, 14, 18. I think it is also evident, that God will be glorified by displaying his justice in the final condemnation of the wicked. For, if he was honored or glorified in the destruction of rebellious Pharaoh and his host: (Ex. xiv. 17, 18,) and if he is glorified in the preaching of the gospel, whether it is believed or rejected: whether its hearers are finally saved or lost;—as appears very obvious from Paul's remarks in 2 Cor. ii. 15, 16, it seems to follow as a rational consequence, that that glory will be more fully revealed when "all flesh shall see it together," and they are rewarded according to their works. Indeed, we are informed by the same apostle, (Rom. xiv. 10–12,) in allusion to this very subject, that "it is written, As I live, saith the Lord, every knee shall bow to me, and every tongue shall confess to God." And again: (Phil. ii. 9–11,) "Wherefore God also hath highly exalted him, and given him a name which is above every name: that at the name of Jesus every knee should bow, of things in heaven, and things in earth, and things under the earth; and that every tongue should confess that Jesus Christ is Lord, to the glory of God the Father."

The glory of God, then, is the grand point, to which all things are tending; the one great object, to which the eternal salvation, life, death, resurrection and glorification of the saints, are designed and adapted to contribute: and which the final exhibition of Divine justice, in the "everlasting destruction" of the sinner, "from the presence of the Lord, and from the glory of his power," will eventually be made to subserve. Now consider this, ye that forget God;" and lest "the day overtake you as a thief" O, whilst the door of hope remains open, and mercy pleads—"turn ye, turn ye; why will ye die?" repent, and believe the gospel; and thus obey the injunction of the apostle: "Therefore glorify God in your body, and in your spirit, which are God's;" and be prepared with every holy being in heaven and earth, to pray like the Psalmist: "And let the whole earth be filled with his glory! Amen and Amen."

A MILLERITE BEFORE HIS BISHOP.

At the Maine Conference, a few days since, a brother was accused of "Millerism;" but had liberty to speak for himself. Then he stretched forth the hand, and answered for himself.

"I think myself happy, bishop, because I shall answer for myself this day before thee, touching all the things whereof I am accused of the Methodists; especially, because I know thee to be expert in all customs which are among the Methodists: wherefore I beseech thee to hear me patiently.

My manner of life from my youth, which was at the first among mine own nation in Maine, know all the Methodists which knew me from the beginning, (if they would testify) that after the most straitest sect of our religion I lived a Methodist.

And now I stand, and am judged for the hope of the promise made of God unto our fathers:" unto which promise our whole churches, instantly serving God day and night, hope to come. For which hope's sake, bishop, I am accused of the Methodists. Why should it be thought a thing incredible with you, that God should raise the dead in 1843? I verily thought within myself, that I ought to do many things contrary" to the doctrine of Christ's second coming, which thing I did in Maine, and persecuted them in all our churches, and was exceeding mad against them. Whereupon, O bishop, I saw in the way a light from God's holy word, above the brightness of the sun, shining round me and them that journeyed with me. And when I was prostrated by the force of evidence, my conscience accused me for thus persecuting the Adventists, and being convinced that I was kicking against the pricks. I said this must be the truth as it is in Christ Jesus; and remembering that he had made me a minister and a witness both of those things which I had seen, and of those things which will shortly appear to all to whom he had sent me; to open their eyes, and to turn them from darkness to light, and from the power of Satan unto God; that they may receive forgiveness of sins, and inheritance among them which are sanctified by faith that is in Christ Jesus.

Whereupon, O bishop, I was not disobedient unto the heavenly vision; But showed first unto them of—and at—and throughout all the coasts of Maine, and then to the unbelievers that they should repent and turn to God and do works meet for repentance. For these causes the Methodists caught me, and went about to accuse me. "Having, therefore obtained help of God, I continue unto this day, witnessing both to small and great, saying none other things than those which the prophets and Moses did say should come: That Christ should suffer, and that he should be the first that should rise from the dead, and should shew light unto the people and to the Gentiles."

And as he thus spake for himself, on motion, it was voted that he be admonished.—Whereupon the presiding bishop arose and spake: By vote of the conference, it has been made my duty to admonish you. You will therefore consider yourself admonished.

SECOND ADVENT—ITS PRACTICAL TENDENCY.

Some inquiry respecting the practical tendency of the Second Advent and its kindred doctrines, was promised in our last. This inquiry we might prosecute by an appeal to different sources of information. We might inquire directly of those who have been in the habit of preaching the doctrines, and be told that they have found them exceedingly powerful in stirring the hearts and bending the wills of men: but it would not, we presume, be generally thought safe to ground a conviction upon the experience of men who may be biased by an over-attachment to a favorite theory. The only proper course, therefore, is to appeal directly to the Word of God, and ascertain what practical use the writers of the Sacred Canon made of the future advent of Christ. If they frequently urge this doctrine as a ground of repentance, and as a motive for calling into exercise a variety of Christian graces and duties, then, as the Spirit cannot err in the adaptation of means to an end, we must admit its great practical importance.

Peter, when addressing the people in the temple, employed this doctrine as a motive to repentance. "Repent ye, therefore, and be converted, that your sins may be blotted out, when the times of refreshing shall come from the presence of the Lord, and he shall send Jesus Christ," &c. (Acts iii. 19, 20.) St Paul urges it as a threatening persuasive to love Christ,—"if any man love not the Lord Jesus Christ, let him be Anathema, Maranatha;" which, we are told, means, "let him be accursed; our Lord cometh." (1 Cor. xvi, 22.) He also urges it as a motive of love one to another; "The Lord make you to increase and abound in love one toward another, and toward all men, even as we do toward you; to the end he may establish your hearts unblameable in holiness before God, even our father, at the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ with all his saints." (1 Thess. iii. 12.) Also as an incentive to the mortification of earthly lusts,—"When Christ, who is our life, shall appear, then shall ye also appear with him in glory.—Mortify, therefore, your members," &c.—(Col. iii. 4, 5.) "The grace of God that bringeth salvation, hath appeared to all men, teaching us that denying all ungodliness, and worldly lusts, we should live soberly, righteously, and godly, in this present world; looking for that blessed hope, and the glorious appearing of the great God, and our Saviour Jesus Christ." (Ti. ii. 11–13.) In Phil. iii. 20, Paul links it very significantly with spirituality of mind,—"for our conversation is in heaven; from whence also we look for the Saviour the Lord Jesus Christ. For every condition, either in the Christian's or the worldling's life, this doctrine has a voice of warning, of encouragement, or of exultation. To the careless it utters the language of warning,—"For the Son of Man shall come in the glory of his Father, with his angels; and then he shall reward every man according to his works." (Matt. xvi. 27.) To the trembling souls, it says,—"And now, little children, abide in him, that when he shall appear, we may have confidence, and not be ashamed before him at his coming." (1 John ii. 28.) To the dead sinner, it cries, with startling emphasis,—"Behold, I come quickly; and my reward is with me, to give every man according as his work shall be." (Rev. xxii. 12.) In the mouth of the humble follower of Jesus, it has a language of triumph, like this,—"We know that when he shall appear, we shall be like him; for we shall see him as he is. And every man that hath this hope in him purifieth himself even as he is pure." (1 John iii. 2, 3.) Few Christian duties can be more important than watchfulness; and as a persuasive to this, the coming of Christ is often urged. Our Saviour, and Paul, and John often press it on the heart with this avowed end in view. We have not space to quote the passages; but the reader will be well rewarded by consulting in this connection, Matt. xxiv. 42–44; xxv. 13; Luke xii. 35–37; Rev. xvi. 15; 1 Thess. 5. 4–6; Rev. xxii 7. Let him compare 2 Thess. i. 4–7, and see with what skill and power this doctrine is employed for the purpose of begetting patience and long suffering in the Christian heart. Hear the same writer in Hebrews x. 36, 37,—"For ye have need of patience, that, after ye have done the will of God, ye might receive the promise; for yet a little while and He that shall come will come, and will not tarry."

Hear James, also, chapter v. 7, 8,—"Be patient, therefore, brethren, unto the coming of the Lord. Behold the husbandman waiteth for the precious fruit of the earth, and hath long patience for it, until he receive the early and the latter rain. Be ye also patient; stablish your hearts; for the coming of the Lord draweth nigh." See likewise, 1 Peter i. 7, 7; iv. 12, 13. The reader may also see it pressed as a motive to moderation and sobriety in Phil. iv. 5, and 1 Peter i. 13; to ministerial fidelity and diligence in Matt. xxiv. 46; 1 Thess. ii. 19; 1 Tim. vi. 13, 14; 2 Tim. iv. 1, 2; 1 Peter 1–4; and against uncharitable judgment in 1 Cor. iv. 5.

But in addition to the numerous passages thus brought under the notice of the reader, and showing the practical importance of this doctrine, there are others which attach to it a still higher degree of consequence, placing a love and "waiting for the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ," among the gifts of the Christian calling. Thus St. Paul in writing to the Corinthians, thanks God that "they came behind in no gift; waiting for the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ." (1 Cor. i. 7.) Of the Thessalonians he says, "that they turned from idols, to serve the living and the true God, and to wait for his Son from heaven." (1 Thess. i. 9, 10.)—So also to the Phillipians,—"For our conversation is in heaven, from whence also we look for the Savior, the Lord Jesus Christ." (Phil. iii. 20.) Paul speaks of a "crown of righteousness which the Lord should give him at that day; and not to him only; but to all them also that love his (Christ's) appearing." (2 Tim. iv. 8.) And in Hebrews ix. 28, he says,—"Christ was once offered to bear the sins of many, and unto them that look for him, shall he appear the second time without sin unto salvation."

Other passages might be brought forward; but let these suffice. The reader, we think, if he has never before given his attention to this subject, will be surprised at the frequency with which the writers of the New Testament employ the Second Advent as a motive to influence human conduct. And we would respectfully ask whether the style of presenting truth at the present day corresponds in general with the Divine pattern thus given in the sacred volume? Do we often hear men urged to repentance and newness of life by the awful consideration that the Son of Man is soon to come again, and that suddenly and unexpectedly, to destroy the wicked, and take vengeance on his enemies? Are the righteous, in the instructions of the present day, frequently exhorted to love the appearing of our Lord Jesus Christ, and to long for, and hasten unto his coming? Alas! No. Other motives have been allowed to take the place of this, which the Spirit has so largely honored.—Witness and Advocate.

FUNDAMENTAL PRINCIPLES
ON WHICH
THE SECOND ADVENT CAUSE IS BASED.

I.—The Word of God teaches that this earth is to be regenerated, in the restitution of all things, and restored to its Eden state, as it came from the hand of its Maker before the fall, and is to be the eternal abode of the righteous in their resurrection state.

II.—The only Millennium found in the word of God, is the thousand years which are to intervene between the first and second resurrections, as brought to view in the 20th of Revelation. And the various portions of Scripture which are adduced as evidence of such a period in time, are to have their fulfilment only in the New Earth, wherein dwelleth righteousness.

III.—The only restoration of Israel yet future, is the restoration of the Saints to the New Earth, when "the Lord my God shall come, and all his saints with him.

IV.—The signs which were to precede the Coming of our Saviour, have all been given; and the prophecies have all been fulfilled but those which relate to the coming of Christ, the end of this world, and the restitution of all things.

V.—There are none of the prophetic periods, as we understand them, extending beyond the [Jewish] year 1843.

☞The above we shall ever maintain as the immutable truths of the word of God, and therefore, till our Lord come, we shall ever look for his return as the next event in historical prophecy.

WESTERN MIDNIGHT CRY.

CINCINNATI, APRIL 27, 1844.

LECTURES.

A lecture will be delivered at the Hay Scales in Fifth street, on Sabbath morning next, at 9 o'clock. Also, at the College Hall, at the usual hours throughout the day and evening, by Bros. Fitch and Stevens.

Lectures are continued at the Lawrence st. Church each evening, except Saturday, including Sabbath evenings, hereafter till further notice.

LABORERS.

Brother Cook is at Springfield, Ill. He writes last from St. Louis, in which he says, "Our stay here has been very pleasant—an apparent comfort to the truly cheerful band of believers."

Bro. Chittenden, left this place for the east, on Monday last.

Brother Kent is laboring in Cleveland and vicinity, where he will probably remain till brother Elon Galusha arrives at that place.

Brother C. Fitch has consented to comply with the request of brethren in this place, and deliver a course of lectures. Brother Kent's letter informs us, that brother Fitch will probably be here by the 25th inst.

Bro. Stevens, arrived here from Illinois, on Monday evening last, and is now laboring with us.

Brother Hall, is at Granville, unable to labor as will be seen by his letter in another column.

THE MEETINGS.

Our meetings are more fully attended than they were last week. We have been informed of some recent cases of conversion to the Second Advent faith. Things move on harmoniously, and there appears no want of attachment to the cause, among those who have heretofore been its friends. We should, however, be pleased to witness a more earnest groaning for "adoption, to wit, the redemption of the body." A more earnest crying, 'Come Lord Jesus, come quickly!" We lectured at Cummingsville, four miles from the city, on Wednesday evening. Considerable interest is being awakened in that place.

Two boxes of Second Advent publications have just been received at this office; one from Boston, and the other from New York. All who are willing to investigate are invited to call and get them. They will be furnished to those who are able to pay for them, for money; and to those who are not, gratis.

"CONVERSION OF DR. CAPADOSE, a Jewish physician of Amsterdam, author of the treatise 'Jehovah Jesus,' &c. written by himself."

This is Tract No. 388, published by the American Tract Society, 150 Nassau street, N. Y., and advocates precisely the same views relative to the "restoration of the Kingdom to Israel," as those advocated by Adventists. Judging from the circumstance of its publication, a favorable change must have very recently come over the views of the managers of the Tract Society.

We may make some extracts next week.

OUR POSITION.

It has been said to us, "if you are honest men, you will now give up your position relative to the Second Advent, as the times have all gone by."

What shall we give up? Every thing that is unsupported by God's word. This, through grace, will we do; and if God strengthen us, we will hold on to every thing that his word does teach: Consequently we cannot give up the doctrine of a still future, personal, and visible appearing of Christ upon the earth. As proof of this read the texts quoted in Chapters one and two of the article in another column, headed, "First principles of the Second Advent Faith." Neither can we be honest men and Christians, and go back to the doctrine of a Thousand years Millennium, and Return of the Jews, before Christ comes. Our reasons for rejecting these fables may be found by reading the texts quoted in chapters 3, 4, and 5, of the article above referred to.

We cannot give up the doctrine, that the earth is to be renewed, and become the dwelling place of the saints,—That all the righteous, living and dead, are to be made immortal when Christ comes, and that the wicked, at that time, or soon after, will be destroyed. For reasons, (as true Second Advent believers will believe nothing without a good scriptural reason,) read the texts in chapters 6, 7 and 8, of the above named article.

But, says one, had you not a good argument that Christ would come in 1843? We reply, Yes: and that argument is as good as it ever was. But tracing chronology through 2300 years, has left us in error, as all those who believed that time would terminate in March last, willingly grant; not because the unbeliever in the Bible proved it, but because time, and that only, has demonstrated it. The Bible truth, that in 2300 years from the going forth of the commandment to restore and build Jerusalem, the Sanctuary will be cleansed—the Host cease to be trodden under foot, is Bible truth still. So, allowing for errors in chronology, it will be 1843 when that work is accomplished. Therefore we cannot give up the position that the Bible does teach the time of our Saviour's Second Advent. As further evidence of the correctness of this position, consult the texts in Chapter 10 of the aforesaid article, in connection with Amos 3:7. As children of God, and students of his truth, if we should say we know NOTHING about the time of the Second Advent, we should make ourselves liars like unto those that charge us with knowing nothing about it. In the fear of God, we are bound to say, that even the passing of the time, has made developments of prophetic truths, which more than ever convince us, that the error in time can be but a trivial one, and that the Lord is now at the door.

ROME.

The "Daily Times" of the 24th inst., says that by the arrival of the packet ship, St. Nicholas, Peel, from Havre, whence she sailed on the 18th of March, "preparations were making for an insurrection throughout the Roman States. Land ahead!!! Rev. 18: 20.

For the upright shall dwell in the land, and the perfect shall remain in it. But the wicked shall be cut off from the earth, and the transgressors shall be rooted out of it.—Proverbs, ii. 21, 22.

COMMUNICATIONS.

LETTER FROM BROTHER KENT.

Cleveland, April 17th, 1844.

DEAR BRO. JACOBS:

I arrived in safety at this place, yesterday, P. M., being about six days on my way hither. I however spent one day (Sunday) in Ellsworth, attended meeting twice—talked once—distributed some books, &c. * * * * * The cause here is yet prospering. The brethren are strong in faith; looking for immediate redemption. The meetings are well attended, and interesting. Last evening I spoke from John xiv. 3. It was a good season. Religion is the same here that it is in Cincinnati. Brother Galusha is expected here soon—when he arrives I shall probably go to Buffalo, and tarry there certain days. From thence, providence permitting, to other places further east; having a desire to visit the brethren where I have once labored, and exhort them to hold fast the profession of their faith without wavering, knowing that he is faithful who hath promised.

Next week, I expect to spend a day or two in Medina, and return here again. * * * * J. H. KENT.

LETTER FROM BRO. STEVENS.

CINCINNATI, April 23d, 1844.

DEAR BRO. JACOBS—

I have time barely to notice the effect of the Advent doctrine in the places where I have lectured. Were I to judge from the general attention bestowed on the subject, and the favor which I myself have received, while in Dayton and Ottawa, Ill., my convictions of the truth of the doctrine, and the happy results of disseminating it, would be more firmly than ever expressed. It may be safely stated, that the subject commanded universal respect. The different denominations mingled together in a most friendly manner for a patient hearing. The importance of the subject was to a good degree felt, and its legitimate influence in quickening Christians, and converting some sinners, was again manifest, to the joy of my soul. To God be all the glory. This is one instance at least, of some good effects being produced, entirely aside from the "time." Those who talk of "Millerism" being "dead," will now, I trust, be led to inquire whether it do not comprehend something more than 1843. The idea they express is grossly absurd, or, at least, betrays the most profound ignorance respecting what we have been saying and doing. They might as well talk about the Bible being dead, and the Christian being left without hope. But thanks be to God, our hope remains—its foundations are as firm as ever—our faith still fastens on his precious word.

The kind attentions bestowed by numerous friends in these places, occasioned me to feel deep regret when called to leave them. This is often the case. I have frequently felt the joyous reward which flows into the soul, when made fully conscious of having formed friendships under the influence of religious considerations, which more than repays for all the sacrifices we can make here in life. Such union of souls, I expect, will remain unbroken forever.

On my way to this place I called at St. Louis. The brethren had continued steadfast, and held meetings among themselves almost every night. They were then enjoying the labors of Bro. Cook. I was almost overjoyed at meeting this dear Bro. and his family. They are of the pilgrim band, but are "seeking a city which hath foundations, whose builder and maker is God." In accordance with an urgent call from Springfield, Ill., they left for that place on the 17th. The brethren in St. Louis are thus again left destitute, but applying to the same source which has hitherto sustained them, they will continue to be upheld, and, I trust, be preserved blameless until Christ's appearing.

Yours, devotedly, A. A. Stevens.

LETTER FROM BROTHER WALKER.

New York, April 13th, 1844.

Dear Bro. Jacobs:

I still have an abiding reason for the expectations which I cherish, of soon entering upon a state of endless joy, when the master shall appear. My hopes will be realised if I am found of him at his appearing, not having on mine own righteousness which is of the law, but the righteousness of faith, and waiting for him from heaven: knowing that to such as look for him, he shall appear the second time without sin unto salvation.

I do rejoice that I have heard, and heeded the cry made at midnight, Behold the Bridegroom cometh! It has caused many to arise and trim their lamps, thereby preparing themselves to open unto him immediately. So far as signs and time is concerned, that "cry" has nearly, if not quite accomplished that whereunto it was sent; consequently we are in the time of trial, (Dan. xii. 10.) Also described in Hab. 2: 4. When the just shall live by his faith. True, all men should so live, and all good men will, and do so live; and especially so at this time, as all helps fail, but faith in God's word alone. Notwithstanding we are living in the "perilous times," when men are proud, boasters, high minded; having a form of godliness, but denying the power thereof; by reason of whom, the way of truth is evil spoken of,—yet the power of the everlasting gospel has been effectual in bringing to light their hidden things of darkness, and proving to all men, the truth of the apostles words, that "all things that are reproved are made manifest by the light." This truth has made manifest secret evils, and shown to the world who it is that loves darkness rather than light. It has touched a tender spot, and made many cry out, "Our great Goddess Dianna is in danger, and if we let these men go, they will draw all men after them."

Such, see the truth and merits of the doctrine of the Advent, but are not as much in love with it, as with some other God; consequently their work is different from those who love the truth. Their character and course, is described in 2d Timothy iv. 3, 4. Their lusts are gratified, in the room of being crucified. Instead of heeding the truth, they are turned to fables, which are more pleasing to an unsanctified ear. These being such as have a form of godliness—professors of religion, they being the book that is read by the world more than the Bible, there is no wonder that "the way of truth is evil spoken of." It is the multitude that do evil, while the comforting promise is to the little flock, that enter in at the straight gate: while broad is the way that leadeth to destruction: So broad as to call forth from the son of God those startling words, "When he cometh, shall he find faith on the earth?" Again, many shall come in that day and say, Lord, Lord! open unto us, while it is but a little flock, that is to inherit the kingdom. It seems to me, that an article in your paper, headed, "The Church at the first Advent," must awake some from their slumbers, to see their danger, while they continue to trust in man, or make flesh their arm. O, that such as are saying, I am rich, increased in goods, and have need of nothing, might see that their boasting is not of God's authority, and heed the exhortation to buy the gold tried in the fire, that they may be rich. I send you the enclosed, feeling it a privilege that I have, of shewing my respect, and endearing recollection of yourself and family.

As I receive weekly information from you, I see how God makes you more than triumphant in all your trials from a world lying in the wicked one. O, my brother, how sweet it is to live, when his commandments are not grievous to us! It is my earnest prayer to God, that he would still enable you by his truth, to show forth his power and coming, until he shall say, "Enter thou into the joy of thy Lord." How sweet, yet mysterious to the world, is that frame of mind described in 2d Cor. vi. 4—10.

I do not know that these lines will reach you, yet I feel like uniting, and watching, and exhorting one another; and so much the more as we see the day approaching; knowing that we have need of patience, that after having done the will of God, we might receive the promise: for in a very little while, he that shall come, will come, and will not tarry. But if it does (seem to) tarry, wait for it, for it will surely come, and will not tarry: then we can say, Lo this is our God! we have waited for him. May we be found of him in peace, without spot, and blameless, is my prayer.

Yours in the bonds and love of gospel truth,

Anson Walker.

LETTER FROM BROTHER HALL.

Dear Brother Jacobs:

Having little of interest to communicate, you must pardon me for addressing to you this letter. Sitting in my room, with little or nothing to do, I thought I would drop a line to you.

I am now in Granville, Ohio, at the reside nce of Bro. Wilson. Viewing the beautiful scenery with which it is surrounded, and thinking how pleasantly he is situated to remain here longer than Advent believers expect to do, the thought just occurred to me, that it was a little singular that he should become a Second Advent believer. Yet such he is, "and of the right stamp too," as a circumstance of a recent date will show.

You are aware that in the present corrupt state of the church, an individual may entertain almost any sentiment, if he will say but little about it, and be a zealous supporter of the church—he is peaceably retained as a member. But if an individual becomes a believer in the Second Advent, and fearlessly avows his sentiments, if he is ever so devoted a christian, he must be excluded; especially if he has been an influential member, and has done much to support systems of error. But as it will not do to have it appear that such members are excluded on account of their Second Advent principles, various other charges are brought; if they wish to be tried by the word of God, that is laid aside, and for it is substituted the articles of faith. Such have been the circumstances that have attended the exclusion of brother Wilson, from the Baptist church. Truly, it is a matter of rejoicing, that to such churches are not committed (as one persecuting-one has claimed) the kings, of the kingdom of heaven. But notwithstanding the spirit manifested by the churches in G., there are a number of Advent believers here, as firm and unwavering in the belief of the truth as any I have ever seen. They have sustained a prayer meeting for the last year, and for several weeks past have had three during the week; which have been interesting and profitable. Although I have been several weeks in Granville; on account of poor health I have not been able to lecture but three or four times. The brethren and sisters have been very kind to me. May they receive their reward at the resurrection of the just.

A year has now passed since I have been looking for the "consolation of Israel." And though I thought it probable last spring, that before the present time, he that sitteth on the throne would say, "Behold I make all things new," my faith is not in the least shaken. But spring has again returned, and as bright and glorious almost, methinks as earth appeared ere paradise was lost.

For though by the winter and storm desolated,
The earth hath been shorn of her glory, and drear;
As if by the power of God new created,
All nature in beauty again doth appear.

The streamlet again gushes forth from the fountain,
The tree, herb, and flower, their leaflets expand;
And voices of gladness o'er valley and mountain,
Are heard, as if echo'd from some fairy land.

Yet earth is still desolate, gloomy, and dreary!
There surely remains a more glorious rest;
Where lifes lonely pilgrim, all way-worn and weary,
Shall find a repose in the land of the blest.

And whilst thus in grandeur, our God is unfolding
Earth's beautuous garb, as at earliest birth;
I think, whilst this power I thus am beholding,
How He will create a new heaven and earth.

And soon will Jehovah in beauty, and splendor,
And glory unfading the earth beautify,
As shown by his promise like branches yet tender,
And putting forth leaves, show that summer is nigh.

Then brother, rejoice in this soul cheering promise!
Redemption is nigh! it is e'en at the door!
For though our Redeemer hath long remained from us,
He soon will appear and lost Eden restore.

For though by the curse and by sin desolated,
The earth hath been desolate, gloomy, and drear;
Yet soon by the power of God new-created,
All nature in beauty again shall appear.

Yours affectionately,

J. B. Hall.

FIRST PRINCIPLES OF THE SECOND ADVENT FAITH.

BY L. D. FLEMING.

CHAPTER I.

The Lord Jesus Christ will come to this Earth a second time.

Acts i. 9–11. "And when he had spoken these things, while they beheld, he was taken up; and a cloud received him out of their sight. And while they looked steadfastly towards heaven as he went up, behold, two men stood by them in white apparel; which also said, Ye men of Galilee, why stand ye gazing up to heaven? this same Jesus which is taken up from you into heaven shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven."

Heb. ix. 28. "And to them that look for him shall he appear the second time without sin unto salvation."

Job xix. 25–27. "For I know that my Redeemer liveth, and that he shall stand at the latter day upon the earth; and though after my skin worms destroy this body, yet in my flesh shall I see God: whom I shall see for myself and mine eyes shall behold, and not another; though my reins be consumed within me." For proof that this will be at the resurrection, see Psalms xvii. 15. "As for me, I shall behold thy face in righteousness, I shall be satisfied, when I awake with thy likeness."

Isa. xxiv. 23. "Then the moon shall be confounded, and the sun ashamed, when the Lord of Hosts shall reign in Mount Zion, and in Jerusalem, and before his ancients gloriously."

xxvi. 21. "For behold the Lord cometh out of his place to punish the inhabitants of the earth for their iniquity: the earth also shall disclose her blood, and shall no more cover her slain."

lix. 20. "And the Redeemer shall come to Zion, and unto them that turn from transgression in Jacob, saith the Lord."

lxvi. 15. "For behold, the Lord will come with fire, and with his chariots like a whirlwind, to render his anger with fury, and his rebuke with flames of fire."

Dan. vii. 13, 24. "I saw in the night visions and behold, one like the Son of Man, came with the clouds of heaven, and came to the Ancient of days, and they brought him near before him. And there was given him dominion, and glory, and a kingdom, that all people, nations, and languages should serve him; his dominion is an everlasting dominion, which shall not pass away, and his kingdom that which shall not be destroyed."

Matt. xxiv. 30. "And then shall appear the sign of the Son of Man in heaven; and then shall all the tribes of the earth mourn, and they shall see the Son of Man coming in the clouds of heaven with power and great glory."

Mark xiii. 34. "For the Son of Man is as a man taking a far journey, who left his house, and gave authority to his servants and to every man his work; and commanded the porter to watch."

Luke xvi. 26, 27, "And as it was in the days of Noe, so shall it be also in the days of the Son of man. They did eat, they drank, they married wives, they were given in marriage, until the day that Noe entered into the ark, and the flood came and destroyed them all."

John xiv. 1–3. "Let not your hearts be troubled; ye believe in God, believe also in me. In my Father's house are many mansions: if it were not so, I would have told you. I go to prepare a place for you. And if I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again and receive you unto myself; that where I am, there ye may be also."

1 Cor. xv. 22, 23. "For as in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive. But every man in his own order: Christ the first fruits; afterwards that they are Christ's at his coming."

Philip. iii. 20. "For our conversation* is in heaven; from whence also we look for the Saviour, the Lord Jesus Christ."

1 Thess. ii. 12. "For what is our hope, or joy, or crown of rejoicing? Are not even ye in the presence of our Lord Jesus Christ at his coming?"

iii. 13. "To the end that he may establish your hearts unblameable in holiness before God, even our Father, at the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ with all his saints."

iv. 16–18. "For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the arch-angel, and with the trump of God; and the dead in Christ shall rise first: then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air; and so shall we be ever with the Lord, wherefore comfort one another with these words."

2 Thess. ii. 1. "Now we beseech you brethren, by the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ, and by our gathering together unto him."

* Parousia, Coming.

Titus ii. 13. "Looking for that blessed hope, and the glorious appearing of the great God and our Saviour Jesus Christ."

1 John iii. 2. "Beloved, now are we the sons of God, and it doth not appear what we shall be, but we know that, when he shall appear, we shall be like him, for we shall see him as he is."

Rev. i. 7. "Behold, he cometh with clouds, and every eye shall shall see him; and they also which pierced him; and all kindreds of the earth shall wail because of him. Even so, Amen."

xxi. 3. "And I heard a voice from heaven, saying, Behold, the tabernacle of God is with men, and he will dwell with them, and they shall be his people, and God himself shall be with them, and be their God."

xxii. 20. "He which testifieth these things, saith, Surely I come quickly: AMEN; EVEN SO, COME, LORD JESUS."

CHAPTER II.

The second coming of Christ will be personal and visible.

Acts i. 9–11. John xiv. 3. 1 Thess. iv. 16. See Chapter I.*

2 Thess. i. 7. "And to you who are troubled, rest with us, when the Lord Jesus shall be revealed from heaven with his mighty angels."

Matt. xxiv. 30. See Chapter I.

Matt. xvi. 27. "For the Son of Man shall come in the glory of his Father, with his angels; and then he shall reward every man according to his works."

Mark xiii. 26. "And then shall they see the Son of Man coming in the clouds with great power and glory."

Rev. i. 7. Job xix. 26, 27. See Chap. I. 1 Peter i. 13. "Wherefore, gird up the loins of your mind, be sober, and hope to the end for the grace that is to be brought unto you at the revelation of Jesus Christ."

The Greek word parousia (coming) occurs twenty-four times in the New Testament, and in every instance it refers to the actual appearing or coming of the object referred to. People talk of Christ's coming spiritually. But as he has never left this world by his Spirit, he cannot be said to come spiritually again: for how can that which is with us, be said to come to us?

* Where texts are referred to, and not quoted in full, it will be found they have been given in some previous chapter.

CHAPTER III.

There will be no Millennium previous to the second coming of Christ.

Dan vii. 21, 22. "I beheld, and the same horn (Papacy) made war with the saints, and prevailed against them; until the Ancient of days came, and judgment was given to the saints of the Most High; and the time came that the saints possessed the kingdom."

Here we see that war is to be made upon the saints till the coming of Christ. If we have a millennium to precede the coming of Christ it must be infested with Papacy. See also,

Dan. xii. 1–3, 10. "And at that time shall Michael stand up, the great prince which standeth for the children of thy people; and there shall be a time of trouble, such as never was since there was a nation even to that same time; and at that time thy people shall be delivered, every one that shall be found written in the book. And many of them that sleep in the dust of the earth shall awake, some to everlasting life, and some to shame and everlasting contempt. And they that be wise, shall shine as the brightness of the firmament; and they that turn many to righteousness, as the stars forever and ever. . . . Many shall be purified, and made white, and tried; but the wicked shall do wickedly: and none of the wicked shall understand."

Matt. xiii. 30. "Let both (the tares and the wheat) grow together until the harvest: and in the time of the harvest I will say to the reapers, gather together first the tares, and bind them in bundles to burn them; but gather the wheat into my barn."

39, 40. "He answered and said unto them, He that soweth the good seed is the Son of Man; the field is the world; the good seed are the children of the kingdom; but the tares are the children of the wicked one; the enemy that sowed them is the devil; the harvest is the end of the world; and the reapers are the angels. As, therefore, the tares are gathered and burned in the fire; so shall it be in the end of this world."

The tares and the wheat are to grow together till the harvest, which is the end of the world. If we have a millennium before Christ comes, it must have a mixture of tares and wheat.*

Matt. xxiv. 37–39. "But as the days of Noe were, so shall also the coming of the Son of Man be. For as in the days that were before the flood, they were eating and drinking, marrying and giving in marriage, until the day that Noe entered the ark, and knew not until the flood came, and took them all away; so shall also the coming of the Son of Man be."

Luke xvii. 26–30. "Likewise also as it was in the days of Lot; they did eat, they drank, they bought, they sold, they planted, they builded; but the same day that Lot went out of Sodom, it rained fire and brimstone from heaven, and destroyed them all; even thus shall it be in the day when the Son of Man is revealed."

Instead of there being a day of millennial glory before Christ comes, it is to be as it was in the days of Noah and Lot.

1 Tim. iv. 1–3. "Now the spirit speaketh expressly, that in the latter times some shall depart from the faith, giving heed to seducing spirits, and doctrines of devils, speaking lies in hypocrisy, having their conscience seared with a hot iron: forbidding to marry, and commanding to abstain from meats, which God hath created to be received with thanksgiving of them which believe and know the truth."

2 Tim. iii. 1–5, 12, 13. "This know also, that in the last days perilous times shall come. For men shall be lovers of their own selves, covetous, boasters, proud, blasphemers, disobedient to parents, unthankful, unholy, without natural affection, truce-breakers, false accusers, incontinent, fierce, despisers of those that are good, traitors, heady, high-minded, lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God: having a form of godliness, but denying the power thereof; from such turn away. . . . Yea, and all that will live godly in Christ Jesus, shall suffer persecution. But evil men and seducers shall wax worse and worse, deceiving and being deceived."

* That the original word aion, here translated world, does not signify the Jewish age or dispensation, is manifest from such passages as these where this word [aion] is rendered world. 2 Tim. iv. 10. Luke xx. 35. Titus ii. 12. Eph. i. 21.

1 Peter iv. 13. "But rejoice, inasmuch as ye are partakers of Christ's sufferings; that, when his glory shall be revealed, ye may be glad also with exceeding joy."

2 Peter iii. 3–7. "Knowing this first, that there shall come in the last days scoffers, walking after their own lusts, and saying, where is the promise of his coming? for since the fathers fell asleep, all things continue as they were from the beginning of the creation. For this they willingly are ignorant of, that by the word of God the heavens were of old, and the earth standing out of the water and in the water; whereby the world that then was, being overflowed with water, perished: but the heavens and earth which are now, by the same word are kept in store, reserved unto fire against the day of judgment and perdition of ungodly men."

Rev. xi. 15–18. "And the seventh angel sounded: and there were great voices in heaven, saying, The kingdoms of this world are become the kingdom of our Lord and of his Christ, and he shall reign for ever. And the nations were angry, and thy wrath is come, and the time of the dead, that they should be judged, and that thou shouldst give reward unto thy servants the prophets, and to the saints, and to them that fear thy name small and great: and shouldst destroy them that destroy the earth."

This is far from presenting a picture of millennial glory to precede Christ's coming!

CHAPTER IV.

The Jews as a nation will not return to Palestine, because they are not the rightful heirs of the promised land.

Matt. iii. 9. "And think not to say within yourselves we have Abraham to our father; for I say unto you, that God is able of these stones to raise up children unto Abraham."

John viii. 39–44, "They answered and said unto him, Abraham is our father. Jesus said unto them, if ye were Abraham's children ye would do the works of Abraham. . . . Ye are of your father the devil, and the lusts of your father ye will do: he was a murderer from the beginning, and abode not in the truth: because there is no truth in him. When he speaketh a lie, he speaketh of his own; for he is a liar and the father of it."

Rev. ii. 9. "I know thy works and tribulation, and poverty, (but thou art rich,) and I know the blasphemy of them which say say they are Jews, and are not, but are of the synagogue of Satan."

iii. 9. "Behold, I will make them of the synagogue of Satan, which say they are Jews, and are not, but do lie; Behold, I will make them to come and worship before thy feet, and to know that I have loved thee."

Isa. lxv. 11–15. "But ye are they that forsake me, and forget my holy mountain, that prepare a table for that troop, and that furnish a drink-offering unto that number. Therefore will I number you to the sword, and ye shall all bow down to the slaughter, because when I called, ye did not answer; when I spake, ye did not hear; but did evil before mine eyes, and did choose that wherein I delighted not. Therefore thus saith the Lord God, Behold, my servants shall eat, but ye shall be hungry; behold, my servants shall drink, but ye shall be thisty; behold, my servants shall rejoice, but ye shall be ashamed; behold, my servants shall sing for joy of heart, but ye shall cry for sorrow of heart, and shall howl for vexation of spirit. And ye shall leave your name for a curse unto my chosen: for the Lord God shall slay thee, and call his servants by another name."

Could the title of the carnal Jews to the land of promise be denied in stronger language?

Acts xiii. 45, 46. "But when the Jews saw the multitudes, they were filled with envy, and spake against those things which were spoken by Paul, contradicting and blaspheming. Then Paul and Barnabas waxed bold, and said, It was necessary that the word of God should have been spoken to you; but seeing ye put it from you, and judge yourselves unworthy of everlasting life, lo, we turn to the Gentiles."

Rom. ix. 25–28, 31, 32. "As he saith also in Osee, I will call them my people, which were not my people; and her beloved, which was not beloved. And it shall come to pass, that in the place where it was said unto them, Ye are not my people; there shall they be called the children of the living God. Esaias also cried concerning Israel, though the number of the childrdn of Israel, be as the sand of the sea, a remnant shall be saved; for he will finish the work, and cut it short in righteousness, because a short work will the Lord make upon the earth. . . But Israel which followed after the law of righteousness, hath not attained to the law of righteousness. Wherefore? (or why?) Because they sought it not by faith, but as it were by the works of the law. For they stumbled at that stumbling stone."

Isa. vi. 9–11. "And he said, go and tell this people, Hear ye indeed, but understand not; and see ye indeed, but perceive not. Make the heart of this people fat, and make their ears heavy, and shut their eyes, lest they see with their eyes, and hear with their ears, and understand with their hearts, and convert and be healed. Then said I, Lord, how long? And he answered, Until the cities be wasted without inhabitant, and the houses without man, and the land be utterly desolate."

Deut. xxviii. 61, 63. "Also every sickness, and every plague which is not written in the book of this law, them will the Lord bring upon thee, until thou be destroyed. . . . . And it shall come to pass, as the Lord rejoiced over you to do you good, and to multiply you: so the Lord will rejoice over you to destroy you and to bring you to nought; and ye shall be plucked off the land whither thou goest to possess it."

Jer. xxiii. 39, 40. "Therefore behold, I, even I will utterly forget you, and I will utterly forsake you, and cast you out of my presence; and I will bring an everlasting reproach upon you, and a perpetual shame, which shall not be forgotten."

In the above passages we are taught that the Jews are to be left in utter desolation and blindness, till the land be without inhabitant, or till the end—and that instead of being restored, they are to be plucked up forever—to be an everlasting reproach, and a perpetual shame.

CHAPTER V.

Believers,—Christians, are the true Jews, the real Israel of God, the true seed, and the rightful heirs of the promised land,

Rom. ii. 28, 29. "For he is not a Jew which is one outwardly, nether is that circumcision which is outward in the flesh. But he is a Jew which is one inwardly, and circision is that of the heart, in the spirit and not in the letter; whose praise is not of men but of God."

Those whom we call Jews are NOT Jews.

Rom. ix. 6–8. "Not as though the word of God hath taken none effect; for they are not all Israel, which are of Israel. Neither because they are the seed of Abraham are they all children; but in Isaac shall thy seed be called. That is, they which are the children of the flesh, these are not the children of God, but the children of the promise are counted for the seed."

Gal. iv. 28. "Now ye brethren, (ALL who believe, whether Jew or Gentile,) as Isaac was, are the children of promise."

We will now examine the original promise, as made to Abraham.

Gen. xiii. 14, 15. "And the Lord said unto Abram, after that Lot was separated from him, Lift up now thine eyes, and look from the place where thou art, northward, and southward, and eastward, and westward; for all the land which thou seest, to thee will I give it, and to thy seed forever."

Gen. xvii. 7, 8. "And I will establish my covenant between me and thee, and thy seed after thee, in their generations, for an everlasting covenant; to be a God unto thee, and to thy seed after thee. And I will give unto thee and to thy seed after thee, the land wherein thou art a stranger, all the land of Cannan, for an everlasting possession; and I will be their God."

The following passages show that the promise was not a literal Canaan.

Acts vii. 4, 5. "Then came he out of the land of the Chaldeans, and dwelt in Charran, and from thence, when his father was dead, he removed him into the land wherein ye now dwell. And he gave him none inheritance in it, no, not so much as to set his foot on; yet he promised that he would give it to him for a possession, and to his seed after him, when as yet he had no child."

Heb. xi. 8—11. "By faith Abraham, when he was called to go out into a place which he should after receive for an inheritance, obeyed; and he went, not knowing whither he went. By faith he sojourned in the land of promise as in a strange country, dwelling in tabernacles with Isaac and Jacob, the heirs with him of the same promise. For he looked for a city which hath foundations, whose builder and whose maker is God."

13—16. "These all died in faith, not having received the promises, but having seen them afar off, and were persuaded of them, and embraced them, and confessed that they were strangers and pilgrims on the earth. For they that say such things declare plainly that they seek a country. And truly if they had been mindful of that country from whence they came out, they might have had opportunity to have returned. But now they desire a better country, that is, a heavenly; wherefore God is not ashamed to be called their God; for he hath prepared for them a city."

39, 40. "And these all having obtained a good report through faith, received not the promise; God having provided some better thing for us, that they without us should not be made perfect."

Original promises to Isaac and Jacob.

Gen. xxvi. 3, 4. "Sojourn in this land, and I will be with thee, and will bless thee; for unto thee and thy seed I will give all these countries, and I will perform the oath which I sware unto Abraham thy father. And I will make thy seed to multiply as the stars of heaven, and will give unto thy seed all these countries; and in thy seed shall all the nations of the earth be blessed."

Gen. xxviii. 13, 14. "And behold the Lord stood above it and said, I am the Lord God of Abraham thy father, and the God of Isaac; the land whereon thou liest, to thee will I give it, and to thy seed. And thy seed shall be as the dust of the earth; and thou shalt spread abroad to the west, and to the east, and to the north, and to the south; and in thee and in thy seed shall all the nations of the earth be blessed."

Now, who are THE SEED?

Gal. iii. 7—9. "Know ye, therefore, that they which are of faith, the same are the children of Abraham. And the scripture, foreseeing that God would justify the heathen through faith, preached before the gospel unto Abraham, saying, In thee shall all nations be blessed. So then they which are of faith are blessed with faithful Abraham."

16—19, 26—29. "Now to Abraham and his seed were the promises made. He saith not, And to seeds, as of many, but as of one, And to thy seed, which is Christ. And this I say, that the covenant which was confirmed before of God in Christ, the law, which was four hundred and thirty years after, cannot disannul, that it should make the promise of none effect. For if the inheritance be of the law, it is no more of promise. Wherefore, then, serveth the law? It was added because of transgressions, till the seed should come to whom the promise was made; and it was ordained by angels in the hand of a mediator. . . For ye are all the children of God by faith in Christ Jesus. For as many of you as have been baptized into Christ have put on Christ. There is neither Jew nor Greek, there is neither bond nor free, there is neither male nor female, for ye are all one in Christ Jesus. And if ye be Christ's, then are ye Abraham's seed, and heirs according to the promise."

The above texts show to whom the promises belong. The following allegory presents the subject in a clear light.

Gal. iv. 21—26, 28, 30, 31. "Tell me, ye that desire to be under the law, do ye not hear the law? For it is written, Abraham had two sons, the one by a bond woman, the other by a free woman. But he who was of the bond woman was born after the flesh; but he of the free woman was by promise; Which things are an allegory; for these are the two covenants: the one from Mount Sinai, which gendereth to bondage, which is Agar. For this Agar is Mount Sinai in Arabia, and answereth to Jerusalem, which now is, and is in bondage with her children. But Jerusalem which is above, is free, and is the mother of us all. . . . Now we, brethren, as Isaac was, are the children of promise. . . Nevertheless. what saith the scripture? Cast out the bond woman and her son: for the son of the bond woman shall not be heir with the son of the free woman. So then brethren, we are not children of the bond woman, but of the free."

CHAPTER VI.

Gen. iii. 14, 15. Gen. xvii. 7, 8. See Chap. V.

Dan. ii. 34, 35. "Thou sawest till that a stone was cut out of the mountain without hands, which smote the image upon his feet that were of iron and clay, and brake them to pieces. Then was the iron, the clay, the brass, the silver, and the gold broken to pieces together, and became like the chaff of the summer threshing floors: and the wind carried them away, that no place was found for them: and the stone that smote the image became a great mountain, and filled the whole earth."

44. "And in the days of these kings shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom which shall never be destroyed; and the kingdom shall not be left to other people, but it shall break in pieces and consume all these kingdoms, and it shall stand forever."

Dan. vii. 13, 14, 27. "I saw in the night visions, and behold, one like the Son of man came with the clouds of heaven, and came to the Ancient of days, and they brought him near before him. And there was given him dominion and glory, and a kingdom, that all people, nations, and languages should serve him; his dominion is an everlasting dominion, which shall not pass away, and his kingdom that which shall not be destroyed. . . . And the kingdom and dominion, and the greatness of the kingdom under the whole heaven, shall be given to the people of the saints of the Most High, whose kingdom is an everlasting kingdom, and all dominions shall serve and obey him."

Heb. xi. 8—10, 13, 16. See Chap. V.

Ps. xxxvii. 9, 11, 18, 22, 27, 29, 34. "For evil doers shall be cut off, but those that wait upon the Lord, they shall inherit the earth. But the meek shall inherit the earth, and shall delight themselves in the abundance of peace. . . . The Lord knoweth the days of the upright, and their inheritance shall be forever. . . . For such as be blessed of him shall inherit the earth, and they that be cursed of him shall be cut off. . . . Depart from evil and do good, and dwell forevermore. . . . The righteous shall inherit the land and dwell therein forever. . . . Wait on the Lord and keep his way, and he shall exalt thee to inherit the land; when the wicked are cut off, thou shalt see it."

The foregoing passages prove the extent and duration of the inheritance promised to Abraham and his seed. Paul corroborates this view of the extent of the territorial dominion.

Rom. iv. 13. "For the promise that he should be heir of the WORLD was not to Abraham or to his seed through the law, but through the righteousness of faith."

The earth is to be renewed before the saints possess it. It is "the purchased possession," yet to be redeemed.

Eph. i. 13, 14. "In whom ye also trusted, after that ye heard the word of truth, the gospel of your salvation; in whom also, after that ye believed, ye were sealed with that Holy Spirit of promise, which is the earnest of our inheritance until the redemption of the purchased possession, unto the praise of his glory."

2 Peter iii. 6, 7. See Chap. III.

10—13. "But the day of the Lord will come as a thief in the night: in the which the heavens shall pass away with a great noise, and the elements shall melt with fervent heat, the earth also, and the works that are therein shall be burned up. Seeing then that all these things shall be dissolved, what manner of persons ought ye to be in all holy conversation and godliness, looking for and hasting unto the coming of the day of God, wherein the heavens being on fire, shall be dissolved, and the elements shall melt with fervent heat? Nevertheless we, according to his promise, look for a new heavens and a new earth, wherein dwelleth righteousness."

Where is the promise?

Isa. lxv. 17—19. "For behold I create new heavens and a new earth; and the former shall not be remembered or come into mind. But be ye glad and rejoice forever in that which I create: for behold I create Jerusalem a rejoicing, and her people a joy. And I will rejoice in Jerusalem and joy in my people; and the voice of weeping shall be no more heard in her, nor the voice of crying."

John alludes to the same.

Rev. xxi. 1—4. "And I saw a new heavens and a new earth: for the first heavens and the first earth were passed away: and there was no more sea. And I John saw the holy city, new Jerusalem, coming down from God out of heaven, prepared as a bride adorned for her husband. And I heard a great voice out of heaven saying, Behold the tabernacle of God is with men and he will dwell with them, and they shall be his people, and God himself shall be with them, and be their God. And God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes: and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain: for the former things are passed away."

Rev. xi. 15. See Chap. III.

CHAPTER VII.

The wicked who are living on the earth when Christ comes, will be destroyed by fire.

2 Thess. i. 7—9. "And to you who are troubled, rest with us when the Lord Jesus shall be revealed from heaven with his mighty angels, in flaming fire, taking vengeance on them that know not God, and that obey not the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ; who shall be punished with everlasting destruction from the presence of the Lord and the glory of his power."

2 Peter iii. 7, 10. "But the heavens and the earth, which are now, by the same word are kept in store reserved unto fire against the day of judgment and perdition of ungodly men. But the day of the Lord will come as a thief in the night; in the which the heavens shall pass away with a great noise, and the elements shall melt with fervent heat, the earth also, and the works that are therein shall be burned up."

Rev. xi. 18. See Chap. III.

xviii. 8. "Therefore shall her plagues come in one day, death, and mourning, and famine; and she shall be utterly burned with fire; for strong is the Lord who judgeth her."

Deut. xxxii. 22. "For a fire is kindled in mine anger, and shall burn unto the lowest hell, and shall consume the earth with her increase, and set on fire the foundations of the mountains."

Isa. lxvi. 15, 16, 24. "For by fire and by sword will the Lord plead with all flesh; and the slain of the Lord shall be many. . . And they shall go forth, and look upon the carcasses of the men that have transgressed against me; for their worm shall not die, neither shall their fire be quenched; and they shall be an abhorring unto all flesh."

Ps. xxxvii. 20, 38. "For yet a little while, and the wicked shall not be; yea, thou shalt diligently consider his place, and it shall not be. But the wicked shall perish, and the enemies of the Lord shall be as the fat of lambs—they shall consume; into smoke shall they consume away. . . . But the transgressors shall be destroyed together; the end of the wicked shall be cut off."

Ps. xi. 6. "Upon the wicked he shall rain snares* fire and brimstone, and an horrible tempest; this shall be the portion of their cup."

Prov. ii. 22. "But the wicked shall be cut off from the earth, and the transgressors shall be rooted out of it."

Nahum i. 5. "The mountains quake at him, and the hills melt, and the earth is burned at his presence, yea, the world, and all that dwell therein."

Zeph. i. 3. "I will consume man and beast, I will consume the fowls of heaven, and the fishes of the sea, and the stumbling-blocks with the wicked; and I will cut off man from off the land saith the Lord."

Malachi iv. 1—3. "Behold, the day cometh that shall burn as an oven; and all the proud, yea, and all that do wickedly, shall be stubble—and the day that cometh shall burn them up; saith the Lord of Hosts, that it shall leave them neither root nor branch."

Matt. iii. 12. "Whose fan is in his hand, and he will thoroughly purge his floor, and gather his wheat into the garner; but he will burn up the chaff with unquenchable fire."

xiii. 30, 40—42. "Let both grow together until the harvest; and in the time of harvest, I will say to the reapers, Gather ye together first the tares and bind them in bundles to burn them; but gather the wheat into my barn. As therefore the tares are gathered and burned in the fire, so shall it be in the end of the world. The Son of man shall send forth his angels, and they shall gather out of his kingdom all things that offend, and them which do iniquity; and shall cast them into a furnace of fire, there shall be wailing and gnashing of teeth."

CHAPTER VIII.

At the coming of Christ the righteous dead will be raised, the righteoue living changed, and together escape those things that shall come upon the earth.

Job xix. 25—27. Ps. xvii. 15. See Chap. I.

Ps. l. 3—5. "Our God shall come, and shall not keep silence; a fire shall devour before him, and it shall be very tempestuous round about him. He shall call to the heavens from above, and to the earth, that he may judge his people. Gather my saints together unto me; those that have made a covenant with me by sacrifice."

Isa. xxvi. 19—21. "Thy dead men shall live, together with my dead body shall they arise. Awake and sing, ye that dwell in dust—for thy dew is as the dew of herbs, and the earth shall cast out the dead. Come my people, enter thou into thy chambers, and shut thy doors about thee; hide thyself as it were for a little moment, until the indignation be overpast. For behold the Lord cometh out of his place to punish the inhabitants of the earth for their iniquity; the earth also shall disclose her blood, and shall no more cover her slain."

Ezek. xxxvi. 11, 12. "And I will multiply upon you man and beast; and they shall increase and bring fruit; and I will settle you after your old estates, and will do better unto you than at your beginning, and ye shall know that I am the Lord. Yea, I will cause men to walk upon you, even my people Israel; and they shall possess thee, and thou shalt be their inheritance, and thou shalt no more henceforth bereave them of men."

1 Cor. xv. 22, 23, 51, 52. "For as in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive. But every man in his own order; Christ the first fruits; afterwards they that are Christ's at his coming. Behold, I show you a mystery; we shall not all sleep, but we shall all be changed, in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trump; for the trumpet shall sound, and the dead shall be raised incorruptible, and we shall be changed."

1 Thess. iv, 14—18. "For if we believe that Jesus died and rose again, even so them also which sleep in Jesus will God bring with him. For this we say unto you by the word of the Lord, that we which are alive and remain unto the coming of the Lord shall not prevent them which are asleep. For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God—and the dead in Christ shall rise first; then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air: and so shall we ever be with the Lord. Wherefore comfort one another with these words."

2 Thess. ii. 1. See Chap. I.

Rev. xx. 6. "Blessed and holy is he that hath part in the first resurrection: on such the second death hath no power, but they shall be priests of God and of his Christ, and shall reign with him a thousand years."

Luke xxi. 36. "Watch ye therefore, and pray always, that ye may be accounted worthy to escape all these things that shall come to pass, and to stand before the Son of man."

CHAPTER IX.

The period of Christ's coming is fixed by the Scriptures.

Acts xvii. 30, 31. "And the times of this ignorance God winked at: but now commandeth all men everywhere to repent,—because he hath appointed a day, in the which he will judge the world in righteousness, by that man whom he hath ordained; whereof he hath given assurance unto all men, in that he hath raised him from the dead."

Dan. vii. 13, 14. See Chap. I.

When did this take place? At the breaking up of the fourth, or Roman Empire.

Dan. ii. 44, 45. "And in the days of these kings (feet and toes of the image) shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom, which shall never be destroyed; and the kingdom shall not be left to other people, but it shall break in pieces and consume all these kingdoms and it shall stand forever. Forasmuch as thou sawest that a stone was cut out of the mountain without hands, and that it break in pieces the iron, the brass, the clay, the silver, and the gold; the great God hath made known to the king what shall come to pass hereafter: and the dream is certain, and the interpretation thereof sure."

Dan. vii. 17, 18, 23, 26, 27. "These great beasts, which are four, are four kings, which shall arise out of the earth. But the saints of the Most High shall take the kingdom, and possess the kingdom forever, even forever and ever. . . The fourth beast shall be the fourth kingdom upon earth, which shall be diverse from all kingdoms, and shall devour the whole earth, and shall tread it down, and break it in pieces. . . . But the judgment shall sit, and they shall take away his dominion to consume and to destroy it unto the end. And the kingdom and the dominion, and the greatness of the kingdom under the whole heaven shall be given to the people of the saints of the Most High, whose kingdom is an everlasting kingdom, and all dominions shall serve and obey him."

Dan. viii. 19, 13, 14. "And he said, behold I will make thee know what shall be in the last end of the indignation; for at the time appointed the end shall be. . . . . Then I heard one saint speaking, and another saint said unto that certain saint which spake, How long the vision concerning the daily sacrifice, and the transgression of desolation, to give both the sanctuary and the host to be trodden under foot? And he said unto me, Unto two thousand and three hundred days, then shall the sanctuary be cleansed."

Dan. ix. 24, 25. "Seventy weeks (of the two thousand three hundred days) are determined (i. e. cut off) upon thy people and upon thy holy city, to finish the transgression, and to make an end of sins, and to make reconciliation for iniquity, and to bring in everlasting righteousness, and seal up the vision and prophecy, and to anoint the Most Holy. . . . Know therefore and understand, that, (the commencement is,) from the going forth of the commandment to restore and to build Jerusalem (which see, in Ezra ch. vii. B. C. 457) unto the Messiah the Prince shall be seven weeks, and threescore and two weeks; the street shall be built again, and the wall, even in troublous times."

Hab. ii. 2, 3. "And the Lord answered me, and said, Write the vision, and make it plain, upon tables, that he may run that readeth it. . . . For the vision is yet for an appointed time, but at the end it shall speak and not lie; though it tarry, wait for it; because it will surely come, it will not tarry."

Heb. x. 35. "Cast not away therefore your confidence, which hath great recompense of reward."

Matt. xxiv. 27, 30, 33. "For as the lightning cometh out of the east, and shineth even unto the west; so also shall the coming of the Son of man be. . . . And then shall appear the sign of the Son of man in heaven; and then shall all the tribes of the earth mourn, and they shall see the Son of man coming in the clouds of heaven with power and great glory. . . So likewise ye, when ye shall see all these things, KNOW that it is near, even at the doors."

1 Thess. v. 4, 5. "But ye, brethren, are not in darkness, that that day should overtake you as a thief. Ye are children of light, and the children of the day; we are not of the night, nor of darkness."

Matt. xxiv. 37. See Chap. III.

How was it in the days of Noah? Ans. God revealed the time of the flood. Gen. vi. 12, 13, 3. The time was one hundred and twenty years.

Rev. xiv. 6, 7. "And I saw another angel fly in the midst of heaven, having the everlasting gospel to preach unto them that dwell on the earth, and to every nation and kindred, and tongue, and people, saying with a loud voice, Fear God, and give glory to him; for the hour of his judgment is come: and worship him that made heaven and earth, and the sea, and the fountains of waters."

It is obvious that this angel (or messenger) is the symbol representing men who should preach this gospel. That this judgment is a final one, will be seen by comparing verses 14—20 with Matt. xiii. 36—43. See also Joel iii. 13.

CHAPTER X.

There will be Two resurrections, one thousand years apart. The first, or the righteous, to take place at the coming of Christ.

Isa. xxvi. 19—21. See Chap. VII.

Hosea xiii. 14. "I will ransom them from the power of the grave; I will redeem them from death. O death, I will be thy plagues, O grave, I will be thy destruction; repentance shall be hid from mine eyes."

Dan. xii. 2. "And many of them that sleep in the dust of the earth shall awake, some to everlasting life, and some to shame and everlasting contempt."

John v. 28, 29. "Marvel not at this; for the hour is coming in the which all that are in the graves shall hear his voice, and shall come forth; they that have done good, unto the resurrection of life, and that they have done evil, unto the resurrrection of damnation."

Acts xxiv. 14, 15. "But this I confess unto thee, that after the way which they call heresy, so worship I the God of my fathers, believing all things which are written in the law and the prophets. And I have hope toward God, which they themselves also allow, that there shall be a resurrection of the dead, both of the just and the unjust."

1 Cor. xv. 22, 23, 51, 52. 1 Thess. iv. 14—16. See Chap. VII.

The following passages show a marked distinction between the resurrection of the righteous and the wicked.

Luke xiv. 13, 14. "But when thou makest a feast call the poor, the maimed, the lame, the blind, and thou shalt be blessed; for they cannot recompense thee; for thou shalt be recompensed at the resurrection of the just."

xx. 34, 35. "And Jesus answering, said unto them, The children of this world marry, and are given in marriage; but they which shall be accounted worthy to obtain that world, and the resurrection from the dead, neither marry nor are given in marriage."

Phil. iii. 10, 11. "That I may know him, and the power of his resurrection, and the fellowship of his sufferings, being made conformable unto his death; if by any means I might attain unto the resurrection of the dead." [Or, according to the Greek, out from among the dead, leaving some behind.]

Heb. xi. 35. "Women received their dead raised to live again; and others were tortured, not accepting deliverance, that they might obtain a better resurrection,"

Rev. xx. 4—6, 13. "And I saw thrones, and they sat upon them, and judgment was given unto them; and I saw the souls of them that were beheaded for the witness of Jesus, and for the word of God, and which had not worshipped the beast, neither his image, neither had received his mark upon their foreheads, or in their hands; and they lived and reigned with Christ a thousand years. But the rest of the dead lived not again until the thousand years were finished. This is the first resurrection. Blessed and holy is he that hath part in the first resurrection, on such the second death hath no power, but they shall be priests of God and of Christ, and shall reign with him a thousand years. . . . And [after the thousand years] the sea gave up the dead which were in it; and death and hell delivered up the dead which were in them; and they were judged every man according to their works. And death and hell were cast into the lake of fire. This is the second death. And whosoever was not found written in the book of life, was cast into the lake of fire."

The following extract from Dr. Gill's Body of Divinity, shows that that very learned and godly man applied the Scriptures concerning the two resurrections as we now do.

"The distribution of the persons to be raised, are of two sorts, the just and the unjust; that the just, or righteous ones, will be raised from the dead, there can be no doubt; since the resurrection of the saints is called the resurrection of the just from them, Luke xiv. 14, it being peculiar to them; and the first resurrection, Rev. xx. 6, because they will rise first; and the better resurrection, Heb. xi. 35, being better than that of the wicked, and of which only some are counted worthy, Luke xx. 35, and is what the apostle Paul desired to attain unto, Phil. iii. 11, called [exanastasis] a resurrection from the dead—the wicked dead."

CHAPTER XI.

Christ's kingdom is not yet set up on the earth, but it is to be at his coming.

Dan. vii. 13, 14. Christ's kingdom is not set up till he comes in the clouds of heaven.

Dan. ii. 44. See Chap. VI.

Luke xii. 32. "Fear not, little flock, for it is your Father's good pleasure to give you the kingdom."

xix. 11, 12. "And as they heard these things, he added and spake a parable, because he was nigh to Jerusalem, and because they thought that the kingdom of God should immediately appear. He said therefore, a certain nobleman went into a far country to receive for himself a kingdom and to return."

Christ is the nobleman who is gone to receive his kingdom.

2 Tim. iv. 1. "I charge thee, therefore, before God and the Lord Jesus Christ, who shall judge the quick and the dead at his appearing and his kingdom."

Rev. xi. 15. See Chap. III.

Christ does not come into the possession of his kingdom till the seventh angel sounds—this is the last trump.

Rev. x. 7. "But in the days of the voice of the seventh angel, when he shall begin to sound, the mystery of God shall be finished, as he hath declared to his servants the prophets."

1 Cor. xv. 51, 52. See Chap. VIII.

Luke xi. 2. "And he said unto them, when ye pray, say, Our Father which art in heaven, hallowed be thy name, thy kingdom come; thy will be done, as in heaven, so in earth."

Why pray for the kingdom to come, if it be already here?

CHAPTER XII.

The second coming of Christ in the glory of his Father, with his holy angels, is presented in the Scriptures as the great object of the desire, hope, and prayer of the saints.

1 Thess. i. 9, 10. "For they themselves show of us what manner of entering in we had unto you, and how ye turned to God from idols, to serve the living and true God; and to wait for his Son from heaven, whom he raised from the dead, even Jesus, which delivered us from the wrath to come."

2 Thess. i. 7. See Chap. VII. Titus ii. 11—13. "For the grace of God that bringeth salvation hath appeared to all men, teaching us, that denying ungodliness and worldly lusts, we should live soberly, righteously, and godly in this present world, looking for that blessed hope and the glorious appearing of the great God and our Saviour Jesus Christ."

Rom. viii. 18, 19, 23. "For I reckon that the sufferings of this present time are not worthy to be compared with the glory which shall be revealed in us. For the earnest expectation of the creature waiteth for manifestation of the sons of God. . . . And not only they, but ourselves also, which have the first fruits of the spirit, even we ourselves groan within ourselves, waiting for the adoption, to wit, the redemption of our body."

Phil. iii. 20, 21. . . . "Who shall change our vile body, that it may be fashioned like unto his glorious body, according to the working whereby he is able even to subdue all things to himself."

Heb. ix. 28. See Chap. I.

2 Peter iii. 11, 12. "Seeing then that all these things shall be dissolved, what manner of persons ought ye to be in all holy conversation and godliness, looking for and hasting unto the coming of the day of God, wherein the heavens being on fire shall be dissolved, and the elements shall melt with fervent heat?"

The word speudontas rendered hasting, signifies "earnestly desiring." See Doddridge, Macknight, Campbell, and others.

1 Peter iii. 3—5, 13. "Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, which, according to his abundant mercy, hath begotten us again unto a lively hope by the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead, to an inheritance incorruptible, and undefiled, and that fadeth not away, reserved in heaven for you, who are kept by the power of God through faith unto salvation, ready to be revealed in the last time. . . . Wherefore gird up the lions of your mind, be sober, and hope to the end, for the grace that is to be brought unto you at the revelation of Jesus Christ."

1 Peter iv. 12, 13. "Beloved, think it not strange concerning the fiery trial which is to try you, as though some strange thing happened unto you; but rejoice, inasmuch as ye are partakers of Christ's sufferings; that, when his glory shall be revealed, ye may be glad also with exceeding joy."

James v. 7, 8. "Be patient therefore, brethren, unto the coming of the Lord. Behold, the husbandman waiteth for the precious fruit of the earth, and hath long patience for it, until he receive the early and the latter rain. Be ye also patient; stablish your hearts—for the coming of the Lord draweth nigh."

Matt. xxv. 31, 34. "When the Son of man shall come in his glory, and all the holy angels with him, then shall he sit upon the throne of his glory. . . . . Then shall the king say unto them on his right hand, Come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you, from the foundation of the world."

Dan. xii. 11, 12. "And from the time that the daily sacrifice shall be taken away, and the abomination that maketh desolate set up, there shall be a thousand two hundred and ninety days. Blessed is he that waiteth and cometh to the thousand three hundred and five and thirty days."

Job. xix. 25—27. See Chap. I.

Psalms xxxix. 14. "Like sheep they are laid in the grave; death shall feed on them; and the upright shall have dominion over them in the morning; and their beauty shall consume in the grave from their dwelling."

Rev. xxii. 20. "He which testifieth these things saith, Surely I come quickly; Amen, Even so, come, Lord Jesus."

It is when the seventh angel sounds, that the reward is given to them that fear the Lord.

Rev. xi. 18. "And the nations were angry, and thy wrath is come, and the time of the dead, that they should be judged, and that thou shouldest give reward unto thy servants the prophets, and to the saints, and them that fear thy name, small and great; and shouldest destroy them that destroy the earth."

Col. iii. 4. "When Christ, who is our life, shall appear, then shall ye also appear with him in glory."

1 John iii. 2. "We know that, when he shall appear, we shall be like him; for we shall see him as he is."

2 Tim. iv. 8. "Henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous Judge, shall give me at that day; and not to me only, but unto all them also that love his appearing."

The meaning of "THAT DAY," is plain from the first verse of the chapter.

Matt. xvi. 27. "For the Son of man shall come in the glory of his Father, with his angels; and then he shall reward every man according to his works."

Rev. xxii. 12. "And behold, I come quickly; and my reward is with me, to give every man according as his work shall be."

Heb. x. 36, 37. "For ye have need of patience, that, after ye have done the will of God, ye might receive the promise. For yet a little while, and he that shall come will come, and will not tarry."

Compare xi. 20, 40. 1 Peter v. 4.

Review this array of testimony, which shows that the righteous do not receive their reward till Christ comes; remember, the popular notion that the righteous enter into complete glory at death, is mere "guessing," and you will not wonder that the Scriptures throw such a bright halo around the subject of Christ's SECOND COMING, and that, by precept and example, they teach us to pray, hope, look, watch, and eagerly long for that day.

CHAPTER XIII.

The prophetic writings deserve the most careful attention from all who would walk safely amidst the dangers of the world.

2 Peter i. 19—21. "We have also a more sure word of prophecy; whereunto ye do well that ye take heed, as unto a light that shineth in a dark place, until the day dawn, and the day-star arise in your hearts; knowing this first, that no prophecy of the scripture is of any private interpretation. For the prophecy came not in old time by the will of man; but holy men of God spake as they were moved by the Holy Ghost."

Isa. lxvi. 2. "But to this man will I look, even to him that is poor and of contrite spirit, and trembleth at my word."

NOTE.—The above was written in the Jewish year 1843, which has now expired. According to the best chronologers the captivity of Manasseh, the commencement of the seven times, or 2520 years of Levit. 26th, was B. C. 677; also the captivity of Jehoiakim, the commencement of the Great Jubilee, or 2450 years, was B. C. 607; also the decree to rebuild Jerusalem in the seventh of Artaxerxes, the commencement of the 70 weeks and 2300 days, of Daniel 8th and 9th, was given B. C. 457; and also the taking away of Paganism in Rome, the commencement of the 1335 days of Daniel 12th, was about A. D. 508. Reckoning from those several dates, the respective periods can extend only to about the Jewish year 1843. This being ended, our published time is now past; but as we can find no new dates for the events from which we have reckoned those periods, we cannot extend them beyond the time specified, which has been our only time; and yet our faith is as strong as ever, that at the end of those periods the Lord will surely come; while we can only wait for his coming such time as human chronology may have varied from the exact time—continually looking for, and momentarily expecting his appearing. This we do in accordance with Hab. ii. 3,—"For the vision is yet for an appointed time, but at the end" [of the prophetic periods] "it shall speak and not lie; though it tarry," [beyond their apparent termination] "wait for it; because" [when they are fulfilled] "it will surely come, it will not tarry."

WESTERN MIDNIGHT CRY.

CINCINNATI, MAY 4, 1844.

LECTURES.

Bro. Fitch, will Lecture on Sabbath next, at the usual hours throughout the day. We are deprived of the use of the College Hall, on Sabbath next, in consequence of its being occupied by the Firemen's Fair. At the time our paper went to press, the place of meeting for Sabbath next, had not been decided. Brethren were holding a consultation upon the propriety of erecting the Big Tent.

There will probably be a Lecture at the Hay Scales in Fifth street, as usual, on Sabbath morning at 9 o'clock.

The Lectures will be continued each evening in the week, except Saturday, at the Disciples church on Sycamore street, between 5th and 6th, at 6 o'clock.

The Lawrence street house has been given up to the society that had purchased it.

THE MEETINGS

Are increasing in interest. Bro. Fitch arrived on Friday of last week, and lectured to a good congregation in the Lawrence street house, the same evening. He also lectured at the College Hall three times on the Sabbath, and is continuing a regular course of lectures at the Disciples meeting house on Sycamore street, each evening the present week, except Saturday; the house being hired by the association for the purpose. The friends in this place have been "exceedingly comforted by the coming of" Bro. Fitch, among us at this time. He presents the Scripture view of the Second Advent of our dear Saviour, with all that clearness, that has ever been peculiar to himself since he embraced the great truth. He will probably remain with us some time yet, and it is possible, should time continue, that he may remove his family to this place. Some that have heretofore been neutral upon the subject of the advent, are becoming more interested, and many that never have heard of it, except by way of derision, are studdying into it, with astonishment, to find nothig but plain Bible truth, put forth in its own simple, yet forcible language.

On Monday evening, we lectured at Cummingsville. The people in that neighborhood are becoming so much interested, that the Methodist Episcopal house of worship was freely opened for us.

THE GREAT TENT.

This tent is now in the city, having been left here since the meeting was held in it last season.

We have received a letter from Bro. Himes, saying that he will sell it to the brethren at the west for three hundred dollars, and will himself own a share of fifty dollars in it, leaving two hundred and fifty dollars to be raised. If the friends will pay for it, we stand ready to go with it, where ever the brethren in the surrounding country will call for it, and pledge themselves to pay expenses. Friends from abroad that feel interested about it, can write to us.

Those friends that can aid in the publication of this paper, are requested to forward their funds as soon as convenient, as it is particularly needed at the present time. It is to be hoped that old subscribers who are in arrears, will forward their dues without delay.

☞ Brother Stevens left here for the northern part of the state, on Wednesday morning last.

SPIRITUALISING.

We received a letter the other day, from some part of Indiana, saying, "Mr. ——— has requested me to send the enclosed dollar to you for the "Western Midnight Cry." "I have" he continues, "read some of your views, but DO NOT BELIEVE A WORD OF IT! still, I am surprised that every body, that can see the doctrine of a still future judgment, and coming of Christ, to be taught in Matthew 24: do not believe it. If I could see any thing in that chapter remaining to be fulfilled, I should feel solemnly bound to embrace the views of Mr. Miller." He might as well have said, if I believed the Bible MEANT what it SAYS, I should be an Adventist. It seems to us that a man of sense, should reason thus. If God in his word does not MEAN what he has REVEALED, all the men under heaven cannot tell what he does MEAN; for they are not more wise than he is. If the Bible does not mean what its language expresses, it is not what it claims to be—a REVELATION; and if it is not a revelation, we can never know its meaning until the God that gave it, gives a revelation of "principles of interpretation" whereby we MAY understand it. But the Bible is a REVELATION; as is proved by all the prophecies relative to the first advent, being literally fulfilled; Strikingly so! Therefore such texts as the following in Matt. 24: will be literally fulfilled.

"And then shall appear the sign of the Son of man in heaven: and then shall all the tribes of the earth mourn, and they shall see the Son of man coming in the clouds of heaven with power and great glory. And he shall send his angels with a great sound of a trumpet, and they shall gather together his elect from the four winds, from one end of heaven to the other."

CHRISTIAN HERALD.

This paper is published in Exeter, N. H., and if we mistake not, about a year since, it lent its influence, partially at least, in favor of the Second Advent doctrine. In the number for March 28th, there are upon one page fifteen editorials, and six of them, in some way, caution their readers against the Adventists; not upon the ground that they do not love Christ, or his appearing; but principally because THEIR TIME HAS GONE BY. One of its editors, who used to preach the Second Advent doctrine because the Bible taught it, not long since gave his reasons for abandoning it, which were that he had been examining standard authors.

To show how this editor can now blow hot, and cold, with the same breath, we give two extracts from the number above alluded to. After telling his readers that about 50 Adventists have withdrawn from their church in Haverill Mass., he says:

"The church has come out of the fire purified; having learned a good, but dear bought lesson by the things they have suffered. No people have treated 43 lecturers, so liberally as we have, and no class of churches have suffered so much. This cannot be disputed. Let it be a good lesson to all."

In another article, same page, after speaking of some brethren in Boston, who have for some time worshiped with the Adventists, making an effort to revive their old church organization, he says,

"In this I rejoice, and bid them God speed in their efforts. It will give me great satisfaction to co-operate with them in sustaining the christian cause in Boston. We are brethren, and the cause is the same, and why should we differ?"

Among all these fifteen editorials, and warnings against Second Advent believers, there is not one single word of encouragement for the believer in Jesus, to "look for the blessed hope, and glorious appearing of the great God, and our Saviour Jesus Christ." And yet he calls loudly upon his brethren to "Come back!" Come back to what?

☞The "Western Christian Advocate" alias "Methodist Advocate," alias "Christian Calumniator," in the last weeks number, is out against the Adventists with its usual arguments, why they should not expect the Saviour now; the sum of which is, J. V. Himes, says the time is past, and we have no other time to look to. Furthermore, those that opposed the doctrine of the advent in 1843—did not look for Christ during that whole year, have proved themselves "the wise ones" and shown the unspeakable folly of those that did look for him. Again, he tells us, though he may have said hard things, the New York Courier, has said harder ones, for they recommend that we "go about some honest business, and stop playing the fool," &c. We cannot say that we are surprised, that the "prince of this world" should manifest an unwillingness to abandon to its rightful heir, a kingdom that he has so long possessed; and as he hears the cry, "Prepare the way of the Lord," that he should issue the charge of "dishonesty."

This editor ought now, in order to carry out his principles, to issue an edition of Elder Jones's prayer, "O Lord, I thank thee that I, and so large a congregation, are permitted to tread upon the last sands of Miller's predicted time of thy coming to burn up the world," and then add, "O Lord, I would now thank thee to stay away altogether." Amen.

MATTHEW, 24TH AND 25TH CHAPTERS.

Holding views upon this portion of God's word, different in some respects from many of those brethren that have written upon it, is an apology for so long delaying the publication of ours. In accordance with oft repeated requests of brethren in this place, and to redeem our promise, we now briefly present these views, as the writings of brethren Storrs, Bliss, Miller, and others, render it unnecessary to remark at any considerable length, upon many of the passages in these chapters. Before proceeding, we will here make mention of a rule that seems to be observed in all the prophetic writings; which is, that before entering upon the prophetic history of God's people, the character of the worldly government under which they are living, or by whose hands they are to suffer, is described, or alluded to as having been described. See Rev. 9th, 10th and 11th chapters; 2 Thess. 2: 8; Dan. 11th and 12th chapters, and Rev. 18th and 19th chapters, &c.

Ver. 1. "And Jesus went out and departed from the Temple: and his disciples came to him for to shew him the buildings of the Temple."

The Bible being a very honest book, we shall endeavor not to twist the language out of its place, any more than men naturally would the conversation of an honest man, "Jesus went out, and departed from the temple." This is certainly understood—Jesus had been at the temple, and was now leaving. As he was thus leaving, "his disciples came to him" with a specified object, "to shew him the buildings of the temple." If the mind of Jesus had been no more expanded than that of his disciples, he would have probably been content to gaze at the temple, and remark upon that alone; but in the room of this he replies,

Ver. 2. "See ye not ALL THESE THINGS? Verily, I say unto you, there shall not be left here one stone upon another that shall not be thrown down.

"An evident refference to the destruction of Jerusalem," says one; Where such evidence is, we know not, while we do know that there is evidence of a more extended reference—to "all these things." In Luke 21: 6, "as for these things which ye behold." In Mark 13: 2, the language is more limited, but the same impression is made, as may be seen from the verses that follow. If asked what further evidence we have, that Jesus alluded to a more general, and wide spread destruction, than the city of Jerusalem by the Romans, we answer: The disciples understood the expression "all these things," as referring to a destruction to take place at Christ's Second Coming.

Ver. 3. "And as he sat upon the Mount of Olives, the disciples came unto him privately, saying, Tell us when shall these things be? And what shall be the sign of thy coming, and of the end of the world?

Says one, "they were probably mistaken, and asked an improper question." We reply, that Christ never answered an improper question till first corrected.—For example see Matt. 22: 28, 29. "Whose wife shall she be of the seven?" "Ye do err, not knowing the Scriptures, nor the power of God." They had asked an improper question. Here the case is different, and Jesus proceeds to answer their question, "WHEN these things," (his Second Coming and the end of the world) should be; which they wished to have answered in such a manner that there might be no mistake in their understanding of the time when, by the additional testimony of "the signs of these things." The question is a proper one; therefore use the following precaution:

Ver. 4. "Take heed that no man deceive you."

Neither God, nor his word, will deceive you; but men may do it. This is a precaution that the disciples urged upon the consideration of the people in after days. Eph. 5: 6, "Let no man deceive you with vain words."—Some say it makes but little difference what we believe if our hearts are only right. The apostle says, "because of these things (being deceived with vain words) cometh the wrath of God upon the children of disobedience." Col. 2: 8, 18. "Beware lest any man spoil you through philosophy and vain deceit, after the tradition of men, after the rudiments of the world, and not after Christ." "Let no man beguile you of your reward," &c. 2 Thess. 2: 3. "Let no man deceive you by any means: for that day shall not come, except there come a falling away first, and that man of sin be revealed, the son of perdition:" The apostle here, has under consideration, the same subject that Christ had when he said, "Take heed that no man deceive you." The deception will lie in the effort of men, to make it appear that Christ's coming took place at the destruction of Jerusalem; which could not be the case, as the falling away had not then taken place, nor had the man of sin been revealed.

Ver. 5. "For many shall come in my name, saying, I am Christ; and shall deceive many."

There is no account of many such arising before the destruction of Jerusalem: Some accounts say there were five, others, only two; which last has the best evidence to sustain it: While many false Christs did arise after the conversion of Constantine, and before the rise of Papacy.

Ver. 6. "And ye shall hear of wars, and rumors of wars: see that ye be not troubled: for all these things must come to pass, but the end is not yet."

What end? "The end" is an abbreviation, and refers to something. If there had been no end defined, we should have been at a loss to know what "end" was referred to: But we are spared that difficulty; for in the last clause of verse 3, "the end of the world" is plainly mentioned; and it would be contrary to all usage, of either Scripture or modern language, to make this abbreviation, "the end" refer to any other end, when there is no other defined, in connection with the subject. There were to be "wars and rumors of wars," in the first of which, Jerusalem was to be overthrown, but the end of the world was not to come then. Those wars concerned the government under which they were living, and were waged by the barbarians in the fourth century, and continued, till in A. D. 483, the Roman Empire had been severed into ten parts, or kingdoms, thus fulfilling the prophecy of Daniel 2: 41, 7: 24.

Ver. 7. "For nation shall rise against nation, and kingdom against kingdom: and there shall be famines, and pestilences, and earthquakes in divers places."

As many as four nations, and kingdoms were, according to this text to be involved in war, which never was done between the time of this prediction, and Jerusalems destruction. Neither is there any account of but one earthquake, and one famine, in the same period, while these events did all literally take place, before the Pagan Roman government was overthrown.

Ver. 8. "All these are the beginning of sorrows."

So far from bringing "the end" about which they were so deeply interested, these wars, &c., were to pave the way for the revelation of "the man of sin," "The abomination of desolation," the beginning of that power which was to lay waste, and desolate the church of God, as no power on earth ever had done, or ever should do.

Ver. 9. "Then shall they deliver you up to be afflicted, and shall kill you: and ye shall be hated of all nations for my names sake."

They were not scattered among all nations till long after Jerusalems destruction, that being among the first, of a train of events, that drove the disciples out into all the world. Neither were they killed at the destruction of Jerusalem, for the most authentic accounts are, that every christian escaped in that seige. The first killing of christians, was in the days of Nero, about three years before the destruction of Jerusalem: The second general persecution, was under Domitian, about eleven years after that event, when many more suffered martyrdom, than in Nero's time. Then followed the other persecutions under the Roman Emperors, making up what is generally denominated by historians, the "ten persecutions," reaching to the days of Constantine, in the fourth century. These ten persecutions, fulfilled the predictions, "Ye shall be hated of all nations," and they "shall kill you."

Ver. 10. "And then shall many be offended, and shall betray one another, and shall hate one another."

When a profession of religion was rendered popular, as it was in the days of Constantine, jealousies began to exist, and consequent hatred sprang up. Previous to this time, to profess to be a follower of Jesus, was to make themselves liable to confiscation of goods—and to suffer every conceivable indignity: while their lives were in constant peril. Now, they were taken out of this degradation—their leaders placed in offices of trust and profit, and escorted from one part of the Roman Empire to the other at the public expense. Here, the falling away began: Here, the discovery was made, that Christ had come—that his kingdom was a spiritual one, &c. No such teachings being found on record before that time. Never has the church given evidence of purity of heart and life, only in the time of her trial. No greater calamity ever has, or ever can, befall the church of God, than such a state of prosperity as renders her popular with the governments of this world. Indeed, not one particle of evidence can be produced, that God has ever owned such a church, as his. All was union and love, while they were enduring trials. That love waxed cold, when earth was rendered more desirable than heaven.

Ver. 11. "And many false prophets shall rise and shall deceive many."

The same may be said of these false prophets, (or teachers) that has been said of the false Christs, v. 5. Their numbers were few until the times above alluded to.

Ver. 12. "And because iniquity shall abound, the love of many shall wax cold."

While no motive could induce them to be any thing but honest with each other, they loved as children; but now, being patronised by a wicked human government, they learn by degrees, to adopt its iniquitous policy.

Ver. 13. "But he that shall endure unto the end, the same shall be saved."

In the midst of all this "iniquity" love of the world" and consequent "falling away" from true faith in Christ; the soul that resists all these unholy influences, "stedfast in the faith," enduring to the end, the same shall be saved. What end? We still have but the one "end" defined: "the end of the world." "But," says one, "this cannot mean, being faithful until the end of the world, for millions of the faithful are already dead, and that end has not yet come." The following thoughts have suggested themselves to our minds, upon this text. Rev. 2: 10. "Be thou faithful unto death, and I will give thee a crown of life:" Not until, but unto death: Be faithful, though called to suffer death; for "the devil will cast some of you into prison" and some of you may be called thus to suffer. Again, Heb. 12: 4, "Ye have not yet resisted unto blood, striving against sin." It is made the christians business "to wait for his son from heaven"—to "look for, and haste unto, the coming of the Son of man"—to "watch for his Lord's return" and the consequent end of the world; this is his solemn duty—his happy privilege; and if faithful in his calling, enduring unto the end, he shall be saved. It is no where made the christians duty to wait for death: this would be looking for the devil, and not for Christ; for the devil "hath the power of death." Looking for Christ, and eternal life, is our appropriate work; and if, in thus looking, we fall "asleep in Christ," we shall awake when he comes to reward his servants, thus having been found faithful unto the end of the world. Let it be remembered that there is no promise of reward, till the "seventh angel sounds and the kingdoms of this world become our Lords," Rev. 11: 15—18. The faithful put not on immortality till "the last trump," 1 Cor. 15: 51—53.

What is the sum of the feelings, and calculations of the brave soldier, as he enters the field of battle? He does not go for the purpose of meeting death: Victory! Victory!! is his cry. Upon this, he is intent; nor does he mean that death itself, shall rob him of its laurels. So the christian soldier starts for glory—not for the grave—not to be content with marching into the dominions, and being placed forever under the power of an enemy that has been conquered by the captain of his salvation. He desires "not to be unclothed, (to die) but to be clothed upon, with his house which is from heaven." The Coming of Christ! The Resurrection! The end of a world filled with sin; and the beginning of one where there is "no more curse" is his bright and joyous hope—his constant theme. There is but one place—one point of time given in the Bible, where all the faithful, from Abel, to the last saint that is sealed for heaven, realizes these hopes. That is the point where time ends, and eternity begins;" the coming of Christ, and the end of the world." The only end, that is fixed as an object of the christians faith—an end, to which we are bound to endure, whether we sleep awhile in Christ, or are "alive and remain" when he comes.

Ver. 14. "And this gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world, for a witness to all nations, and then shall the end come."

He here ends the history of God's people, as connected with the then existing, persecuting power. Ending their probation before "the end of the world," the topic most likely to interest Gods people living in that age, was the fact, that the same glad tidings of a kingdom to be set up at his second coming, and end of the world, which he was then preaching to them, should be proclaimed throughout the world for a witness (not to each individual, but) to all nations, then, when that is accomplished, the end of the world shall come. It is to be the gospel of the kingdom: not of faith and repentance alone, without any kingdom. The whole chain of events, connected with God's people under the Pagan form of the Roman government, is here closed up, and referred to judgment day, at the end of the world.

Those who contend for the expression "end of the age" or "dispensation" being meant in ver. 3, must see from this verse, that the end of the gospel dispensation is referred to.

Ver. 15. "When ye, therefore, shall see the abomination of desolation, spoken of by Daniel the prophet, stand in the holy place, (whoso readeth, let him understand)."

What abomination? Not Antiochus Epiphanes, (the abomination of Professor Stuart;) for he had been dead almost 200 years; while this was yet to be seen. "When ye shall see." We are told, that this abomination, &c., was the Roman armies around Jerusalem, but where is the proof? We are pointed to Luke 21, 20, "And when ye shall see Jerusalem compassed with armies, then know that the desolation thereof is nigh. This abomination, was one that was to stand in the holy place: in the temple, and an army, could not do this—much less armies. Different things are referred to, in these two texts, as may be easily seen. Verse 15, agrees with 2d Thess. 2: 4, "So that he, as God, sitteth in the temple of God, &c." A reference to the prophecies of Daniel, will best settle what the Saviour, here refers to. We there find that the first place in the whole book, in which the abomination of desolation, is spoken of, as such, is in chap. 11: 31, "And shall take away the daily, and they shall place the abomination that maketh desolate." Another abomination, bears rule, until THE abomination is placed, or "stands in the holy place." If we are told that the Saviour refers to chap. 9: 26, 27, let it be remembered that the terms there used are in the plural; abominations, and that both of them were to "overspread" after the destruction of the city, (Jerusalem) and the sanctuary, (the temple in Jerusalem): and as we have seen from chapter 11: 31, "THE abomination that maketh desolate," is not placed, till the other is taken away. The abomination spoken of in the last quoted text, is Papacy, holding the civil power, or having power to desolate: Here, appears to be a reason, why the term "transgression of desolation" is used in chapter 8: 13: The Papal power is there referred to in its whole duration, embracing a period after, as well as before it had power to desolate with the sword. In these periods it was a transgressing, but not a desolating power. As further evidence, that Christ refers to the rise, and establishment of this power in verse 15; see Daniel 12: 11, where the last particulars relative to the abomination that maketh desolate, are "spoken of by Daniel." There we are told, that the duration of that power is 1290 days, and that in a period of 45 days longer, Daniel shall stand in his lot. In the preceding verse, the prophet assures us, that a certain class called "the wise" shall understand. Jesus, now points his disciples to the history and duration of this power, as given by Daniel, and says, "whoso readeth LET him understand." What is he to understand, unless it be what he reads in the prophecy of Daniel, relative to "the abomination of desolation?" Understanding the duration of that power, inasmuch as its length is given, is not a matter of small import. It was an absorbing part of the topic, to Daniels mind. How long the vision? How long shall it be to the end of these wonders? O, my Lord, what shall be the end of these things? Were questions over which this man of God wept, fasted, and prayed. No good man, can fail to be interested in the time when "these things" shall be; especially when he sees that time given, and reads from the words of Jesus his authority, not only for himself, but for all that "readeth" to understand, It is not my purpose here, to show where those 1290 days begin—the scripture proof that they are the representatives of so many years, and where they will consequently end; as that is a matter that every interested person will look into for themselves. It would seem that Jesus could hardly have given a more pointed answer to the question, "When shall these things be?" than he has done in this 15th verse. Having introduced this papal power, which had its rise towards the middle of the sixth century, he then proceeds to give the history of God's people, as connected with it.

Ver. 16. "Then let them which be in Judea flee into the mountains."

So far from the Jews being gathered into that land, and Christ reigning over them before "the end" spoken of; or so far from verging toward such a state of things, when the Papal persecuting power shall have arisen, you must flee—not only those that are in Jerusalem, but in Judea. The Papists did persecute Christians out of that land.

Ver. 17, 18. "Let him which is on the house top not come down to take any thing out of his house: neither let him which is in the field return back to take his clothes."

This is the period in the history of the church, in which she was driven by this power into the wilderness. See Rev. 12: 6, 14. The text presents a brief, but true picture, of the situation of God's people, while the so called "Holy Inquisition" was in successful operation.

Ver. 19. "And wo unto them that are with child, and to them that give suck in those days."

The indignities offered to females, and the treatment of these in circumstances here described, may be read in "Fox's Book of Martyrs." It is very questionable whether this text ever had anything like a literal fulfilment at the seige of Jerusalem.

Ver. 20. "Pray ye that your flight be not in the winter nor on the Sabbath day."

While this power is desolating the church, pray that the sanctity of the sabbath may be preserved inviolate, and that you may find a secure retreat during the inclemency of winter. The vallies of Piedmont, and mountains of Pyrences, and other similar places, did afford them such retreat in winter seasons.

Ver. 21. "For then shall be great tribulation, such as was not from the beginning of the world to this time, no, nor never shall be."

Christ was here telling his disciples, the tribulations through which they, or those that followed him, would have to pass. It was not a tribulation for the Jews; therefore the destruction of Jerusalem cannot be referred to, for Christians all, or nearly all, escaped—none but Jews perished. The Saviour here points to the greatest tribulation, through which God's people would ever pass, from the beginning to the end of the world.

Let the individual that has been in the habit of referring this verse to the tribulations at Jerusalem's fall, look at the following comparison:

Destroyed at the seige of Jerusalem, wicked Jews, - - - 1,100,000

Destroyed under Papal rule, Innoc't Chris'n, 50,000,000

But, says one, the tribulation at the seige of Jerusalem was greater than ever known in the same length of time. Even this is questionable when the ancient Jewish wars are taken into account; but the text has nothing to do with the duration of the tribulation, for that has been settled in verse 15; but with its magnitude.—Still 1,100,000 wicked Jews, such as crucified the Lord of life and glory, are worth more than 50,000,000 of God's saints, to those who seem determined to rob God's people, if possible, of their glorious hopes, by wasting his precious promises upon Jews, and Jerusalem. The following position is therefore taken by some: It was a greater tribulation, from the more cruel manner, in which the Jews suffered. Let such bear in mind, that the detailed history of Jerusalem's destruction, furnishes no parallel of sufferings, when placed by the side of Papal persecutions. Torn piecemeal upon racks—broken upon wheels—their flesh pulled from their bones with red hot pincers—their flesh perforated with pitch and set on fire—chained to wild beasts that were let loose—sewed up in sacks with poisonous serpents—their eyes bored out with augurs—hung—whipped—imprisoned—burned—roasted—boiled alive—thrown upon spikes—drowned—shot by thousands—scalped—limbed—starved to death, &c. &c. All these modes of cruelty, and more, were practiced by Papists. The history of our world does not furnish a history of a tribulation for God's people that equals it, and God's word declares it never shall.

Ver. 22. "And except those days should be shortened, there should no flesh be saved: but for the elects' sake those days shall be shortened."

What days? Those pointed to in the 15th verse, which Jesus says, those that read, may understand. The days that reach to the cleansing of the sanctuary—Daniel standing in his lot. For the language of both Jesus, and Daniel, imply an understanding of the rest of the days, as well as of the 1290, one being an answer to the question, "How long to the end of these wonders?" and the other to the question, "When shall these things be?" viz: "Thy coming and the end of the world." Those (2300 or 1335) days (years) were to be shortened 45 years, for the elect's sake—that they might examine the latitude and longitude in prophecy, in which they were situated, and better prepare for their glorious Rest. At the close of the last century, the papal power ceased to desolate with the sword; since which time, it has been a "transgression of desolation." Had their civil power been continued to them, no flesh (of the servants of God, for they were the ones that were to suffer,) would have been saved.

Ver. 23. "Then if any man shall say unto you, Lo here is Christ, or there; believe it not."

Then, at the time of the shortening the days of desolation, if any man shall say, Lo here, &c. The doctrine relative to Christ's Second Coming, prior to the dawn of the present century, has been tolerably uniform—which was, that Christ would not come again till he came to judge all men at the last day; or in the language of the articles of faith, in the Methodist Discipline, Art. 3, "Christ did truly rise again from the dead, and took unto him his body, with all things pertaining to the perfection of man's nature, wherewith he ascended into heaven, and THERE SITTETH until he returns to judge all men at the last day." Is this doctrine held now? Far from it! Those that carry such articles of faith in their pockets, are crying out, Lo here, Christ comes to a man when he dies—when he is converted—when he is sanctified—when he is afflicted—when he is blessed; in short, almost every thing, good, bad or indifferent, is now, with many, a coming of Christ. If Christ comes to any man under any of the above circumstances, why has not the Bible told us so? Does Christ indeed come to a man when he dies? Who holds the power of death? Let Paul answer, Heb. 2: 14, 15, "That through death he (Christ) might destroy him that had the power of death, that is, the devil; and deliver them, who, all their life time through fear of death, were subject to bondage."—In the room, then, of Christ coming to a man when he dies, the devil comes, and binds him, and when Christ does really come, he delivers the man. A sad state of things this, when the coming of the devil, is advocated, and published too, as the coming of Christ. What are we to say to those that advocate so many comings of Christ? Simply this, "believe them not;" that is all we have to do.

Ver. 24. "For there shall arise false Christs, and false prophets, (teachers,) and shall show great signs and wonders; insomuch that if it were possible they shall deceive the very elect."

The arts of Jesuitism, and Mahomedanism have, in the last half century, been carried to a high pitch.—False teachers, have given great signs—evidences of powerful revivals, while they have lived after the flesh. Many have been thus deceived, while they have judged the word of God by men, and not men by the word of God. "False Christs." The German states alone have furnished 200 of these, within 50 years, or since the shortening of the days.

Ver. 25. "Behold, I have told you before."

It shall be the same as it was under the other desolating power, of which I have told you before, ver. 5, 11.

Ver. 26, 27. "Wherefore if they shall say unto you Behold, he is in the desert; go not forth: behold, he is in the secret chambers; believe it not: for as the lightning cometh out of the east, and shineth even unto the west; SO shall also the coming of the Son of Man be."

If any man attempts with his Lo, here, or Lo, there, to convince you that Christ is at Nauvoo—in a Nunnery—at Lebanon, Jerusalem—and try to persuade you to make a pilgrimage to find him, "go not forth," for when he comes "the second time, without sin unto salvation, it will be as the lightning.

Ver. 28. "For wheresoever the carcass is, there will the eagles be gathered together."

This language is understood by comparing it with three other texts, 1 Thess. 4: 16, 17, "For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven [like the lightning] with a shout * * * * and the dead in Christ shall rise first. Then we which are alive and remain, shall be caught up * * * to meet the Lord in the air." Luke 17: 34–37, "I tell you, in that night there shall be two men in one bed, the one shall be taken and the other left- * * * * * * And they answered and said unto him, where, Lord? [shall they be taken to] and he said unto them, wheresoever the body is, thither will the eagles be gathered together." John 12: 26, "Where I am, there shall also my servant be." As the eagle is drawn by instinct to his prey; so, naturally, when Christ comes, will his people rise to meet him.

Ver. 29. "Immediately after the tribulation of those days, shall the sun be darkened and the moon shall not give her light, and the stars shall fall from heaven, and the powers of the heavens shall be shaken."

The same signs are predicted in Isa. 13: 10; Ezek. 32: 7, 8; Joel 3: 15; Amos 8: 9; Mark 13: 24, 25; Luke 21: 25; Rev. 6: 12. The text has had a literal fulfilment, in "the dark day and night" of May 19, 1780, and in the "falling stars" of November 13th, 1833. For the full particulars of these signs, let the reader consult H. Jones's "Modern Phenomena of the Heavens," published in New York. These signs commenced "immediately after the tribulations of those (1290) days," or as in Mark 13: 20, "In those (1290) days." The first of the predicted signs, the darkening of the sun, occurred in the above period, eighteen years before the 1290 days were ended, and after, the greatest part of the tribulations had been passed. No record of any event, that will answer the prediction in the text, can be found in the archives of any nation under heaven, as having transpired before the year of our Lord 1780. We are of opinion that the whole text is not yet fulfilled; for the "powers of heaven" being shaken, seems to be the same thing, as, "the heavens departing as a scroll when it is rolled together," Rev. 6: 14, both being named as the next event after the falling of the stars."

Ver. 30. "And then shall appear the sign of the Son of man in heaven: and then shall all the tribes of the earth mourn, and they shall see the Son of man coming in the clouds of heaven with power and great glory."

What this "sign of the Son of man" is, we are not told; and we can find nothing in Scripture answering to the sign itself, unless it be in Rev. 15: 1, "And I saw another sign in heaven, great and marvellous, seven angels having the seven last plagues; for in them is filled up the wrath of God." Although the sign is said to be seen in heaven, yet it affects men upon the earth, as is seen from the effects of the first of these seven plagues, Rev. 16: 2, "And the first went and poured out his vial upon the earth; and there fell a noisome and grievous sore upon the men which had the mark of the beast, and upon them which worshiped his image." It is a sign that produces great mourning like that named in our text; and it also introduces the seven last plagues, which when accomplised, must leave the earth with "no more curse." Daniel 12: 1, seems to refer to the same time, "And at that time shall Michael stand up, the great prince that standeth for the children of thy people: and there shall be a time of trouble, such as never was since there was a nation even to that same time: and at that time thy people shall be delivered, every one that shall be found written in the book." The sign of these events is found in the last verse of the previous chapter, where the prophet closes his vision with a brief account of the destruction of the Papal power, as he has done in all the rest of his visions, previously given. "He shall come to his end, and none shall help him." His destruction may, be, this sign. What a scene! When ALL the tribes of the earth mourn? And what possible circumstance can cause such mourning, unless it be, the taking of God's people from the earth, and the full knowledge of the fact, with those that are "left," that Christ is now coming to take vengeance upon them that know not God, and obey not the gospel, &c.; while their doom is already, eternally sealed? "And they shall see the Son of man coming in the clouds" personally, and visibly, see Rev. 1: 7; Acts 1: 9–11; John 14: 3; 1 Thess. 4: 16; 2 Thess. 1: 7; Matt. 16: 27; Mark 13: 26; Job 19: 26, 27, &c. &c.

Ver. 31. "And he shall send his angels with a great sound of a trumpet, and they shall gather together his elect from the four winds, from one end of heaven to the other."

"With a trumpet and a great voice," as the margin reads; thus harmonizing with 1 Thess. 4: 16, at which time "the dead in Christ" arise. Also with Rev. 11: 15–18, when the righteous are rewarded, and the wicked destroyed. Rev. 10: 7, when the mystery of God is finished. 1 Cor. 15: 52, 53, When the saints put on immortality. Mat. 13: 41–43, "The Son of Man shall send forth his angels and they shall gather out of his kingdom all things that offend, and them which do iniquity; and shall cast them into a furnace of fire: there shall be wailing and gnashing of teeth. Then, shall the righteous shine forth as the sun in the kingdom of their Father. Who hath ears to hear let him hear."

Christ has now answered the question, when shall these things be?—The destruction of the world with the wicked; and the deliverance of God's people. It is to be at the end of the days "spoken of by Daniel the prophet," as is the privilege of all that read, to "understand." He has furthermore, answered the question, "What shall be the signs of thy coming, and the end of the world?" Those signs have been literally fulfilled within the present generation, and never before.

Ver. 32. "Now learn a parable of the fig-tree: When his branch is yet tender, and putteth forth leaves, ye know that summer is nigh."

No more surely does the budding figtree portend the approach of summer, than these signs prove, that "the Coming of Christ, and the end of the world" is nigh. These signs, as we learn from Luke 21: 28, are to be hailed by the people of God, as the bright harbingers of their coming redemption:—That redemption for which all creation has been groaning since the earth was cursed with sin:—The redemption for which God's people wait while they groan, (Rom. 8: 23,) and which they know, is nigh when these signs appear. How delightful to the weary pilgrim, who has journeyed through a long night of darkness and dangers, is the first evidences of the morning's dawn? When the chilling autumnal frost has seared the dewy leaf, and the bleak winds have torn the mantle from those green clad bowers, once so lovely; and scattered them to the rude sport of every gale:—When the wild storm has swept o'er hill and dale—meadow and fertile field—robbing the beast of its pasture—the fowl of its basking place, and the insect of its flower: The ice has bound the once cooling, refreshing stream, and snow and sleet covers mountain and plain; bespatters the windows of the pilgrim's cottage, forming the rough music that lulls his senses, and causes him to slumber. O when thus a "weary winter's past!" With what inexpressible joy do we hail the first tokens of approaching spring! How closely examine the frozen branch, to see whether a bud is really putting forth! When the sun pours forth its warming rays, and the songster once more perches on the bough, to try anew its almost forgotten strains of nature's music; Then, the glad pilgrim looks up and smiles,—the housed urchin bounds across the fields, while shout answers shout, "The Summer is nigh!" "THE SUMMER IS NIGH!!" THE SUMMER COMES!!! So, O my soul, restrain, for a brief moment, the joy that now almost breaks these walls of clay! The budding signs of the kingdom have put forth, the leaf is nearly grown. Earth's chilling winter is nearly done. Hallelujah! The answered shout, Behold he comes! is heard. Darkness begins to vanish, as from the word, a blessed light is seen. What wait we for, but the trumpet's voice, to break up the icy fetters which bind the pious dead; and the judgment storm, to sweep its rude fragments all away? THEN, O then! When the chiefest among ten thousand appears! The rest is FELT—not expressed. Brightly anticipated now, but soon realized. Come Lord Jesus, come quickly! Even so, Amen!

HERE IS NO REST.

Here o'er the earth as a stranger I roam,
Here is no rest—is no rest,
Here as a pilgrim I wander alone,
Yet I am blest—I am blest;
For I look forward to that glorious day,
When sin and sorrow will vanish away:
My heart doth leap while I hear Jesus say,
There, there is rest—there is rest.

Here fierce temptations beset me around;
Here is no rest—here is no rest:
Here I am grieved while my foes me surround;
Yet I am blest—I am blest.
Let them revile me and scoff at my name,
Laugh at my weeping—endeavor to shame;
I will go forward, for this is my theme:
There, there is rest—there is rest.

Here are afflictions and trials severe;
Here is no rest—is no rest;
Here I must part with the friends I hold dear;
Yet I am blest—I am blest.
Sweet is the promise I read in his word;
Blessed are they who have died in the Lord;
They will be called to receive their reward;
Then there is rest—there is rest.

This world of cares is a wilderness state,
Here is no rest—is no rest;
Here I must bear from the world all its hate,
Yet I am blest—I am blest.
Soon shall I be from the wicked released,
Soon shall the weary forever be blest,
Soon shall I lean upon Jesus' breast,
Then there is rest—there is rest.

DR. CAPADOSE.

From the "Conversion of Dr. Capadose, a Jewish physician of Amsterdam," written by himself,—published by the American Tract Society.

And now, MY BRETHREN IN CHRIST, it is to you I address myself in conclusion. If you have viewed with christian joy, how the Lord has, in his unspeakable goodness, graciously taken some little broken twigs to engraft them anew upon the "cultivated olive," forget not that in the whole world there are many of these scattered branches, now with neither form nor comliness, neither fruit nor verdure, but possessing still the sap of the most glorious promises.

Forget not, that if they are still "enemies as touching the gospel, for your sakes," they are also "dearly beloved, as touching election, for the fathers' sakes; for the gifts and calling of God are without repentance."—Rom. 11: 28, 29. Remember, that "as ye, in times past, have not believed God, yet have now obtained mercy through their unbelief; even so have these also now not believed, that through your mercy they also may obtain mercy." Rom. 11: 30, 31.—Above all, forget not the immense privilege to which you are called, that you may be, by your prayers for Israel, and your charity towards them, co-operators with God, who desires to save Israel for his glory, yes, for his glory; "for if the casting away of them be the reconciling of the world, what shall the receiving of them be, but life from the dead?" Rom. 11: 15.

The day is not far distant, the happy day which the apostle hails from afar with rapture and adoration, when he exclaims, "O the depth of the riches both of the wisdom and knowledge of God! How unsearchable are his judgments, and his ways past finding out!" Rom. 11: 33. "And it shall come to pass when all these things are come upon thee, the blessing and the curse which I have set before thee, and thou shalt call them to mind among all the nations whither the Lord thy God hath driven thee, and shalt return unto the Lord thy God, and shalt obey his voice according to all that I command thee this day; thee and thy children, with all thy heart and with all thy soul, that then the Lord thy God will turn thy captivity, and will have compassion upon thee, and will return and gather thee from among all the nations wither the Lord thy God hath scattered thee. If any of thine be driven out to the outmost parts of heaven, from thence will the Lord thy God gather thee, and from thence will he fetch thee.—And the Lord thy God will bring thee into the land which thy fathers possessed, and thou shalt possess it, and he will do to thee good, and multiply thee above thy fathers." Deut. 30: 1—5. Yes, the Lord is faithful. It is by an oath he promised Abraham that his posterity should one day possess Canaan "from the river of Egypt to the great river, the river Euphrates;" Gen. 15: 18; Exod. 23: 31; Gen. 26: 3; Ps. 105: 9; and that this possession should be "forever;" Gen: 13 15. an everlasting possession; Gen. 17: 7, 8; "forever," 2 Chron. 20: 7. Behold the great promise, that, until now, has not been accomplished!

[As the promise is not yet accomplished, and was to Abraham personally, and his seed, which is Christ, Abraham must be raised from the dead to receive it. Ed.]

Israel, it is true has possessed the land of Canaan, but never with an extent of territory, nor for a period of time proportioned to the grandeur of the promise. Under the reign of Solomon alone have the limits of Israel's kingdom extended to the Euphrates; and this triumph was brief, for we find that the prophet Isaiah, in a touching supplication, in which he enumerates the blessings of the Almighty, and the numberless deliverances of which Israel had already been the object, calling to mind this promise of the inheritance of Canaan, exclaims, "Return, for thy servant's sake, the tribes of thine inheritance. The people of thy holiness have possessed it (the country) but a little while." Isaiah 63: 17, 18.

This promise of perpetual possession has not yet been fully accomplished; but it will be. Yes, it will be under the reign of the true Solomon, of the promised Messiah, of the Lord of Glory, of the King of Israel, for he it is who shall rule "from sea to sea, from the river to the ends of the earth." Ps. 72: 8. Yes, it will be when the Almighty shall RETURN UNTO ZION, and shall dwell in the midst of Jerusalem; when "Jerusalem shall be called a city of truth, and the mountain of the Lord of Hosts, the holy mountain." Then the Lord shall say, "Behold, I will save my people from the east country, and from the west country, and I will bring them, and they shall dwell in the midst of Jerusalem: and they shall be my people, and I will be their God in truth and in righteousness." Zeph. 8: 3, 7, 8.

"There is hope in thine end, saith the Lord, that thy children shall come again to their own border.*

Behold, the days come, saith the Lord, that I will sow the house of Israel and the house of Judah with the seed of man, and with the seed of beast. And it shall come to pass, that like as I have watched over them, to pluck up, and to break down, and to throw down, and to destroy, and to afflict; so will I watch over them to build and to plant, saith the Lord. Behold, the days come, that the city shall be built to the Lord, from the tower of Hananeel unto the gate of the corner. And the measuring line shall yet go forth over against it upon the hill Gareb, and shall compass about Goath. And the whole valley of the dead bodies, and of the ashes, and all the fields unto the brook of Kidron, unto the corner of the horse-gate towards the east, shall be holy unto the Lord; it shall not be plucked up, nor thrown down, any more forever." Jer. 31: 17, 27, 28, 38, 39, 40.

Ah! if, by divine direction, these lines should fall into the hands of any of the children of Abraham, but who have not Abraham's faith—of those Israelites, my dearly beloved brethren according to the flesh, who are now poor, but with the riches of the divine word in their hands; miserable, but having the blood of the prophets in their veins; despised and wandering over the whole earth, but with the promise of eternal glory, if they should be converted; may these lines remind them that this word, these promises, this blood of the prophets, urge them to examine attentively what these prophets have spoken, and by whom their promises must have their accomplishment for them of whom this word is full.

Yes, may they speedily, by God's grace, acknowledge that this precious Bible, which they preserve, and upon which their faith as well as our own is founded, contains prophetically the entire history of the Messiah: his origin, his nature, his birth, his life, his death, his resurrection and ascension to the right hand of God his heavenly Father; his spiritual reign; his return to glory; finally his reign as King of Israel, priest and prophet.

Behold what I have been taught by my researches in the word of God. May these lines excite in them also the desire to seek after the truth!

After bringing forward an array of prophetic testimony, and applying it to the circumstances connected with the first Advent, he proceeds as follows:

When you have thus united all these fea-

* Rachel weeping for her children that were dead. "They shall come again, &c." of course, at the resurrection, in the New Earth, when Abraham, and with him, every christian, is to receive the promise. Jer. 31: 15-17. ED.

tures of the promised Messiah, which the Almighty has traced so clearly, so distinctly, to the very minutest details, that Israel should not be deceived by any false Messiah; when you have placed before you, as it were, face to face, the image of him upon whom your salvation rests; open, O my dear brethren in the flesh, open the New Testament, praying God to enable you to examine its contents with a sincere desire to know the truth! and the glorious light of the God of truth will lead you to acknowledge, with adoration, that all these characterizing features of the true Messiah are to be found, with the most scrupulous exactness, in the person, the life, and death of Jesus Christ, that Saviour blessed for evermore who will soon come in glory with his holy angels.— THEN Jerusalem shall be to him a name of rejoicing, of praise and glory among all the nations of the earth, who shall hear the good that he will do to Israel; "for, "I will cause the captivity of Judah, and the captivity of Israel, to return," saith the Lord, "and I will build them as at the first. And I will cleanse them from all their iniquity, whereby they have sinned against me; and I will pardon all their iniquities whereby they have sinned, and whereby they have transgressed against me." Jer. 33: 7, 8.

"And I saw thrones, and they sat upon them, and judgment was given them: and I saw the souls of them that were beheaded for the witness of Jesus, and for the word of God, and which had not worshipped the beast, neither his image, neither had received his mark upon their foreheads or in their hands; and they lived and reigned with Christ a thousand years. But the rest of the dead lived not again until the thousand years were finished. This is the first resurrection. Blessed and holy is he that hath part in the first resurrection: on such the second death hath no power; but they shall be priests of God and of Christ, *and shall reign with him a thousand years. Apocal. 20: 4—6.

"And the Spirit and the bride say, Come. And let him that heareth say, Come. And let him that is athirst come. And whosoever will, let him take the water of life freely." Apocalypse, 22: 17. Amen!

The foregoing pages contain the doctrine of "Adventists,"—"the faith once delivered to the saints." This is what the world calls "Millerism."

This pamphlet is issued by the "American Tract Society," an institution, under the auspices and superintendence of the different evangelical denominations of our country. See, the inconsistency of our churches!! They denounce that from their pulpits, which, by their presses, they endorse—pronounce orthodox—declare to be the teachings of the Bible.

Here, the restoration of the Jews, and the Millennium, anterior to Christ's second and final coming, is inferentially pronounced HERESY.

And, that coming, we are told is near. "—— who will soon come in glory with his holy angels. THEN, Jerusalem shall be to him a name of rejoicing, of praise and glory among all the nations of the earth, who shall hear the good that he will do to Israel."

☞Mark! all this, is to be AFTER Christ comes in glory with his holy angels—by their own admision.

*Here is the 1000 years Millennium,—after Christ comes in glory with his holy angels.

"When the Son of man shall come in his glory, and all the holy angels with him, THEN, (and not till then,—most certainly not,) shall he sit upon the throne of his glory." Matt. 25: 31 J. H. W.

OUR POSITION.

In the passing by of the Jewish year, our friends and the public will, and have a right to expect from us some exposition of the position we occupy. And this we are free to give. It has never been any part of our purpose to withhold from the public any of our views respecting the future, or the difficulties which may be before us. And we therefore fully and frankly admit that all our expected and published time, has passed: the Jewish year, civil and ecclesiastical, in the which we expected the Lord, has expired, and the Saviour has not been revealed; and we would not disguise the fact at all, that we were mistaken in the precise time of the termination of the prophetic periods.

In view of the present time, it has been repeatedly predicted, that we should either extend the time to some new period, or throw away our Bibles and turn Infidels: but in this; those who have thus prophecied, have prophecied falsely—false prophets have arisen in these last days.

We have never been able to find any other time for the termination of the prophetic periods than the Jewish year now past: nor do we now find any other. The only event we can find, from which to reckon the seven times, or 2520 years that the Gentiles were to reign over God's people, is the captivity of Manasseh, which the best chronologers place B. C. 677, and since which the Jews have never been an independent nation. The only event we can find from which to date the great Jubilee, or 2450 years that the land was to keep its Sabbaths, is at the commencement of the 70 years captivity in Babylon, when Jehoiakim was carried captive, and which the best chronologers place B. C. 607. The only event we can find, from which to reckon the 2300 days, is the going forth of the decree to restore Jerusalem, from which the 70 weeks are dated, given by Artaxerxes Longimanus in the 7th year of his reign; and which the best chronologers pin down to B. C. 457. And the only event we can find from which to date the 1335 days is the succession of the supremacy of papacy, to that of paganism in the Roman empire, which the best chronologists place about A. D. 508. Reckoning the several periods from those respective dates, they can extend only to about A. D. 1843, and as we can find no new dates for the various events from which the respective periods are reckoned, we can find no new point for their termination; and therefore we can extend the time to no new period, unless some error can be shown in our standard chronologers.

In the second place, we shall not throw away our Bibles or turn Infidels. We have not followed "cunningly devised fables" respecting "the power and coming of our Lord Jesus Christ;" but have the testimony of those who were "eye witnesses of his Majesty;" and in addition to that, "a more sure word of prophecy, whereunto ye do well if ye take heed" until the Lord shall come. Although our reckoning is out, yet as our chart has brought us so near the heavenly country that we are within soundings, we shall continue on, looking for the Lord such little while as human computation of time may have varied from an exact chronology—the same as any able seamen, when his reckoning is up, would continue on his course, till the blue hills of the expected country should break upon his view.

We believe, as ever, that the visions of Daniel and John, as interpreted by all the standard Protestant commentators, reveal to us the most prominent events in this world's history to the consummation of all things, and that history shows a literal fulfillment of all that has been predicted to precede the Advent, so that it is to be the next event, and speedily to be ushered in. We also believe that it is proved by the Signs of the times, predicted in the Scriptures as percursors of that event. We also believe that the several prophetic periods, which we have supposed would terminate about A. D. 1843, respectively commence at the several events from which we have reckoned them, and all terminate in the fullness of times, at the setting up of God's everlasting kingdom; and admit that we have been as much mistaken in the date of those several events, or in the computation of time, since their occurrence, as the vision may be delayed beyond the year of their apparent termination: in this mistake, however, we have erred with the standard chronologers and historians of modern times, who have been our authority on chronological points.

Having passed the point of the apparent termination of the prophetic periods, we are placed in a position, which God foresaw his children would be placed in, at the end of the vision; and for which he made provision, by the prophet Habakkuk, (ii. 1–3,) when he says, "I will stand upon my watch, and sit upon my tower; and will watch to see what he will say unto me, and what I shall answer when I am reproved," or as it reads in the margin "argued with." "And the Lord answered me and said, Write the vision, and make it plain upon tables, that he may run that readeth it. For the vision is yet for an appointed time," [the 7 times,] "but at the end [of the prophetic periods] it shall speak and not lie: though it tarry" [beyond their apparent termination] "wait for it; because it will surely come," [in the fulness of prophetic time, beyond which,] "it will not tarry."

That this admonition has reference to the present time is evident from Paul's quotation of it in Heb. x. 36–39. "For we have need of patience, after ye have done the will of God, that ye might receive the promise. For yet a little while, and he that shall come will come, and will not tarry. Now the just shall live by faith: but if any man draw back, my soul shall have no pleasure in him. But we are not of them who draw back unto perdition; but of them that believe to the saving of the soul."

We believe that we are occupying that period spoken of by our Saviour, when the Bridegroom taries—Matt. xxv. 5, to which the kingdom of heaven should be likened when that evil servant [there having been an apparent failure in the time] shall say in his heart, My Lord delayeth his coming, and shall begin to smite his fellow servants, and to eat and drink with the drunken," and the Lord should come in a day they looked not for him.

We believe that we are now occupying that period of time spoken of by Peter, 2 Epistle ii. 3, who when their "judgment now of a long time lingereth not, and their damnation slumbereth not," were to "privily bring in damnable heresies." These Peter says were to be, even as there were false prophets, when the scriptures were indited. As therefore, they of the house of Israel, said, "the days were prolonged and every vision faileth," (Ezek. xii. 23,) so must there have been a time, when there would be an apparent passing by of the time that the scoffers of 2 Peter iii. 4., might inquire, "Where is the promise of his coming," and flatter themselves that "all things continue as they were from the creation."

We believe it was in view of such an apparent tarrying of the vision that the apostle James said, "Be patient therefore brethren unto the coming of the Lord, Be ye also patient; establish your hearts, for the coming of the Lord draweth nigh," and "Behold the Judge standeth at the door."

And we believe it was in anticipation of the passing by of the expected time that our Saviour admonishes us, in the 12th of Luke, to "Let your loins be girded about, and your lights burning; and ye yourselves like unto men that wait for their Lord, when he will return from the wedding that when he cometh and knocketh they may open unto him immediately." To wait implies a passing by of the time, for till that we do not wait. Therefore our Lord adds:—"Blessed are those servants, whom the Lord when he cometh shall find watching."

As our time has thus passed by—the civil year having terminated last October, and the ecclesiastical with the new moon in April, we are now prepared to tell the world what we shall do—a question which has often been asked. We intend to hold fast the integrity of our faith without wavering; and not cast away our confidence which hath great recompense of reward. We intend to continue to comfort one another with the words of the Coming of Christ, who will come and will not tarry. We shall continue to believe God's word, in its litteral acceptation: for not one jot nor tittle of all that is written therein will fail.

We shall continue, God willing, to proclaim, Behold the Bridegroom cometh! go ye out to meet him; and the hour of his judgment is come! and we trust we shall not fail to continue to cry aloud to the world and the church, to arouse themselves from their songs of "peace," and to listen to God's overtures of mercy. We intend to continue waiting and watching for the coming of the Lord, believing that it is just upon us; and we hope to continue faithful to the cause of truth, ever ready to confess or forsake any errors, when pointed out, or to receive any truth in accordance with the word of God By so doing we believe we shall soon unite when the Lord shall come, in that response when "it shall be said in that day, Lo this is our God; we have waited for him, and he will save us. This is the Lord, we have waited for him, we will be glad and rejoice in his salvation," those being blessed who wait and come to the end of the days.

As our time has elapsed, and we have no other specified time in the future, but wishing to live and induce others to live in continual readiness and constant expectation of the Lord's coming, we shall know that all who oppose us for so doing, have no sympathy for the Lord's coming. With those who are looking for the Lord, or loving his appearing, we have no controversy. But with those who put far off the day of the Lord, and say in their hearts my Lord delayeth his coming, claim that the vision has failed, or deny the promise of his coming, we can hold no Christian fellowship: for those who assume such positions, show that they have no love for Christ's appearing; and teach men contrary to the admonitions of Christ and his apostles, that we should take heed to ourselves lest at any time our hearts should be overcharged with surfeiting and drunkenness, and that day come upon us unawares. —Advent Herald.

ROME.

The arrival of the "Acadia" at Boston, on the 21st ult., furnishes the following item of news from Rome as given by the "Daily Times."

ITALY.—The last letters from Italy are full of accounts of the armed band which have of late re-appeared in the Appenines and in the low country on the coast of the Adriatic; and it is said that all the troops the Pope has at his disposal at Bologna are not sufficient to prevent the nightly depredations to which that city is exposed. The Duke of Modena, who is greatly alarmed by the reports circulated of an expedition prepared by the emigrants, has demanded assistance from Austria. The military commission, which has been for some time sitting at Bologna, has determined its sittings. All the sentences have been sent under seal to Rome.

The leading Italian political refugees in Paris have been sent for the prefect of Police and cautioned against carrying on or entering into any conspiracy for revolutionizing Italy. General Pape, expressed his indignation at the proceeding, which he declared was perfectly unjustified by facts. It was, nevertheless, the universal belief in Paris that "the entire Italian Peninsula is ripe and ready for revolt, but that no danger of a rising on a large scale can exist during a time of peace, or so long as the collossal force of Austria, in Italy, remains undiminished.

From the Midnight Cry.

COMING OF CHRIST.

Lo, the Saviour is coming, with bright clouds descending,
Who once bled for sinners, by sinners was slain!
With thousands of thousands of seraphs attending,
Which swell the loud chorus and join in the train.

The islands, the hills, the seas and the mountains,
The heavens and the earth in confusion retire;
Creation astonished, and nature confounded,
The air is ignited, the world is on fire.

Hark! Gabriel's shrill trumpet the sepulchres rending,
The lightnings are flashing and piercing the sky;
The living and dead, in Christ Jesus ascending,
And mounting to meet their redeemer on high.

While all who've been running in open rebellion,
And slighting his love, when the world's all on flame,
Will cry for the rocks and the mountains to hide them
From the presence of God and the wrath of the Lamb.

O shout, my dear brethren, that day long expected
Is coming—redemption through Jesus is nigh;
No longer oppressed, no longer rejected,
All tears, by our Lord, will be wiped from each eye!

SAINTS' INHERITANCE.

This earth renewed is the promised inheritance of the saints.

Dan. ii. 34, 35. "Thou sawest till that a stone was cut out of the mountain without hands, which smote the image upon his feet that were of iron and clay, and brake them to pieces. Then was the iron, the clay, the brass, the silver, and the gold broken to pieces together, and became like the chaff of the summer threshing floors: and the wind carried them away, that no place was found for them: and the stone that smote the image became a great mountain, and filled the whole earth."

44. "And in the days of these kings shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom which shall never be destroyed; and the kingdom shall not be left to other people, but it shall break in pieces and consume all these kingdoms, and it shall stand forever."

Dan. vii. 13, 14, 27. "I saw in the night visions, and behold, one like the Son of man came with the clouds of heaven, and came to the Ancient of days, and they brought him near before him. And there was given him dominion and glory, and a kingdom, that all people, nations, and languages should serve him; his dominion is an everlasting dominion, which shall not pass away, and his kingdom that which shall not be destroyed. . . . And the kingdom and dominion, and the greatness of the kingdom under the whole heaven, shall be given to the people of the saints of the Most High, whose kingdom is an everlasting kingdom, and all dominions shall serve and obey him."

Heb. xi. 8—10, 13, 16.

Ps. xxxvii. 9, 11, 18, 22, 27, 29, 34. "For evil doers shall be cut off, but those that wait upon the Lord, they shall inherit the earth. But the meek shall inherit the earth, and shall delight themselves in the abundance of peace. . . . The Lord knoweth the days of the upright, and their inheritance shall be forever. . . . For such as be blessed of him shall inherit the earth, and they that be cursed of him shall be cut off. . . . Depart from evil and do good, and dwell forevermore. . . . The righteous shall inherit the land and dwell therein forever. . . . Wait on the Lord and keep his way, and he shall exalt thee to inherit the land; when the wicked are cut off, thou shalt see it."

The foregoing passages prove the extent and duration of the inheritance promised to Abraham and his seed. Paul corroborates this view of the extent of the territorial dominion.

Rom. iv. 13. "For the promise that he should be heir of the WORLD was not to Abraham or to his seed through the law, but through the righteousness of faith."

The earth is to be renewed before the saints possess it. It is "the purchased possession," yet to be redeemed.

Eph. i. 13, 14. "In whom ye also trusted, after that ye heard the word of truth, the gospel of your salvation; in whom also, after that ye believed, ye were sealed with that Holy Spirit of promise, which is the earnest of our inheritance until the redemption of the purchased possession, unto the praise of his glory."

2 Peter iii. 6, 7.

10—13. "But the day of the Lord will come as a thief in the night: in the which the heavens shall pass away with a great noise, and the elements shall melt with fervent heat, the earth also, and the works that are therein shall be burned up. Seeing then that all these things shall be dissolved, what manner of persons ought ye to be in all holy conversation and godliness, looking for and hasting unto the coming of the day of God, wherein the heavens being on fire, shall be dissolved, and the elements shall melt with fervent heat? Nevertheless we, according to his promise, look for a new heavens and a new earth, wherein dwelleth righteousness."

Where is the promise?

Isa. lxv. 17—19. "For behold I create new heavens and a new earth; and the former shall not be remembered or come into mind. But be ye glad and rejoice forever in that which I create: for behold I create Jerusalem a rejoicing, and her people a joy. And I will rejoice in Jerusalem and joy in my people; and the voice of weeping shall be no more heard in her, nor the voice of crying."

John alludes to the same.

Rev. xxi. 1—4. "And I saw a new heavens and a new earth: for the first heavens and the first earth were passed away: and there was no more sea. And I John saw the holy city, new Jerusalem, coming down from God out of heaven, prepared as a bride adorned for her husband. And I heard a great voice out of heaven saying, Behold the tabernacle of God is with men and he will dwell with them, and they shall be his people, and God himself shall be with them, and be their God. And God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes: and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain: for the former things are passed away." Rev. xi. 15.

INFIDELITY.—A man is more or less an infidel, who rejects more or less of the written word of God. Consequently we regard all who reject the doctrine of the reign of Christ on earth, and his personal appearing, as so far infidels. Regarding as we do that these questions, sustained as they are by the literal reading of the Scriptures, cannot be despised by one who is a Christian, we cannot consistently fellowship those who deny these doctrines: for "what part hath he that believeth with an Infidel?" Adv't. Her.

THE DIFFERENCE.—Preach every thing connected with our views of the Advent, and leave out the immediate appearing of Christ, and all our opponents are as calm as a summer's morning; but preach the immediate appearing of Christ, and leave out every thing else connected with our views, and they are all ready to exclaim against this "Millerism." Adv't. Her.

FUNDAMENTAL PRINCIPLES

ON WHICH

THE SECOND ADVENT CAUSE IS BASED.

I.—The Word of God teaches that this earth is to be regenerated, in the restitution of all things, and restored to its Eden state, as it came from the hand of its Maker before the fall, and is to be the eternal abode of the righteous in their resurrection state.

II.—The only Millennium found in the word of God, is the thousand years which are to intervene between the first and second resurrections, as brought to view in the 20th of Revelation. And the various portions of Scripture which are adduced as evidence of such a period in time, are to have their fulfilment only in the New Earth, wherein dwelleth righteousness.

III.—The only restoration of Israel yet future, is the restoration of the Saints to the New Earth, when "the Lord my God shall come, and all his saints with him.

IV.—The signs which were to precede the Coming of our Saviour, have all been given; and the prophecies have all been fulfilled but those which relate to the coming of Christ, the end of this world, and the restitution of all things.

V.—There are none of the prophetic periods, as we understand them, extending beyond the [Jewish] year 1843.

☞ The above we shall ever maintain as the immutable truths of the word of God, and therefore, till our Lord come, we shall ever look for his return as the next event in historical prophesy.

NOTE.—The above was written in the Jewish year 1843, which has now expired. According to the best chronologers the captivity of Manasseh, the commencement of the seven times, or 2520 years of Levit. 26th, was B. C. 677; also the captivity of Jehoiakim, the commencement of the Great Jubilee, or 2450 years, was B. C. 607; also the decree to rebuild Jerusalem in the seventh of Artaxerxes, the commencement of the 70 weeks and 2300 days, of Daniel 8th and 9th, was given B. C. 457; and also the taking away of Paganism in Rome, the commencement of the 1335 days of Daniel 12th, was about A. D. 508. Reckoning from those several dates, the respective periods can extend only to about the Jewish year 1843. This being ended, our published time is now past; but as we can find no new dates for the events from which we have reckoned those periods, we cannot extend them beyond the time specified, which has been our only time; and yet our faith is as strong as ever, that at the end of those periods the Lord will surely come; while we can only wait for his coming such time as human chronology may have varied, from the exact time—continually looking for, and momentarily expecting his appearing. This we do in accordance with Hab. ii: 3,—"For the vision is yet for an appointed time, but at the end" [of the prophetic periods] "it shall speak and not lie; though it tarry," [beyond their apparent termination] "wait for it; because" [when they are fulfilled] "it will surely come, it will not tarry."

WESTERN MIDNIGHT CRY.

CINCINNATI, MAY 18, 1844.

GREAT TENT MEETINGS.

LECTURES.

Lectures will be delivered, Providence permitting, at the "GREAT TENT," on Sabbath next, at 11 o'clock A. M. and at 3 and half past 7 P. M., and probably each evening through the week. Further notice relative to the meetings, may be expected on the Sabbath.

THE MEETINGS.

The meetings are still continued at the Great Tent, and have increased in interest since our last account,—Bro. Brewer lectured on Sabbath A. M., upon the "seven seals." The congregation were much interested. Bro. Fitch lectured in the afternoon, briefly going over the second, seventh and eighth chapters of the prophecies of Daniel. The rise and fall of the four universal kingdoms that were to precede "God's Everlasting Kingdom," was illustrated in a very impressive manner, by the aid of a carved image, representing the one described in Dan 2: 32, 33. When proof was adduced that ancient Babylon fell, the head of the image was taken off and laid aside; and so of the breast and arms, the belly and sides, then the legs, leaving nothing but the feet and toes. None but the wilfully blinded could help seeing that we are living in the very last days. Bro. Fitch lectured again in the evening from Dan. 11th and 12th chapters. More attentive congregations could not be found, than we had throughout the day. The number that thronged the tent, could not have been much, if any, less than 5000 persons to each of the meetings P. M. and evening. On Monday evening the rain fell and the wind blew so as to prevent raising the tent, and there was no meeting. On Tuesday evening Bro. Fitch lectured for the last time. His discourse was upon the Hope of the Christian, and penalty of the Divine Law to be executed against the wicked; the former centering in the resurrection and the latter in death. Bro. Fitch and wife, and his little daughter, left on the steamboat Custer, on Wednesday A. M. He goes to Cleveland by the way of Beaver. Bro. Brewer and wife were in his company on the same boat.

Since our tent meeting began, we have heard of many cases of powerful awakening, but no account of any conversions has yet reached us. But we are persuaded such labors are not lost. Indeed they are not; for God's people have been greatly comforted and encouraged, and we humbly hope and pray that when the "Son of Man shall come in the glory of his Father, with his angels, to gather his elect from the four winds," he may find some that have been sealed for the kingdom during these meetings.

On Wednesday at 3 o'clock P. M., the ordinance of Baptism was attended to at the foot of Mill street.—Twenty-one were baptised. The congregation was large and very attentive, except two or three half grown boys, who plunged into the water and swam ashore. Their efforts to disturb our peaceable exercises proved an entire failure. We will bear these taunts in pity for the ignorant creatures, knowing that God will soon vindicate his cause from all such insults.

The communication from Bro. Fitch, should form a part of his discourse which was published in our last number.

☞ We recommend, particularly to our exchanges, a careful perusal of the article in another column under the head, "Psalm of David, 37." It presents the views of the ancients relative to the advent of the Lord, and particularly in regard to the future inheritance of the saints. Will the "W. C. Advocate," "Watchman of the Valley," "Star of the West," and any others, give us their views upon it, particularly upon verses 3, 9, 11, 18, 22, 29, 34?

TABERNACLE.

As we have no place in which to hold our meetings, it is considered by the brethren generally, advisable to erect a temporary building, about 60 by 80 or 100 feet. The friends that will aid in this work are called upon to leave their subscriptions at the office on Third street, as soon as possible. Separate lists will be opened for money, materials, and labor.

☞ It is possible that we may be absent from our post next week. In such case there will be no paper issued till the following week.

☞ In consequence of rain, there was no meetings at the tent on Wednesday and Thursday evenings.

THE PAPER.

If our friends design to have the paper continue beyond the present volume, should it be needed, they must needs send in the funds immediately.

Bro. and sister Brewer left on Wednesday last for N. York, but expect to return immediately should time continue. Their family who live in Brooklyn require their presence. If time and circumstances permit, upon his return the design is to start out a company from this place, with the Great Tent, to spread the truth in the surrounding country.

We have received a lengthy communication from J. H. Denham, Bethel, Clermont county, O., principally devoted to the subject of the "Return of the Jews," which doctrine, in a limited sense, he advocates. The article is well written, and under ordinary circumstances would be published; but so much has been said without eliciting any new arguments, that, we very respectfully decline its publication, until first furnished with a condensed review of the articles in No. 13, Vol. 2, and No. 1, Vol. 3, of the "Wes. Mid. Cry."

☞ Brother Kimball has just returned from a tour of three weeks in Indiana. He lectured in Rushville, in the Methodist Episcopal house, and in the Court House, to full houses. He lectured in Burlington in the Methodist house, attention good; also in Rush county, in Laurel, and at Mr. Lyonville's meeting house, in Fayette county. In the last place four or five preachers have embraced the Second Advent doctrine.

☞ An interesting letter from Bro. Butt has been mislaid. He is lecturing in Kentucky.

CHRISTIANS.

What does this term mean? A body of people in this city, calling themselves by this name, have recently expelled some ten or twelve members, among whom were two of their deacons. What for? Not because they were not Christians, nor for neglect of Christian duty; but because they neglected to go to meeting in the house where these Christians meet to worship. In short, they loved to hear about Jesus Christ obtaining his rights, too well to go to a place where the subject was opposed and trifled with. How would the following look?

"Resolved, That inasmuch as the brethren and sisters [in Macidonia] against whom the charges [for not going to meeting at Ephesus] now under consideration are made, do refuse to give satisfaction [by going back to Macedonia to listen to the opposition of certain apostates, to Christ having his rights] by acknowledging and confessing the same: Therefore, Resolved, that they be expelled." [PAUL, Chairman.]

[Apollos, Secretary.]

The above is a copy of the resolution, except what is included in brackets.

2d THESS. 2: 7—12.

"For the mystery of iniquity doth already work: only he who now letteth [hindereth] will let [hinder] till he be taken out of the way. And then shall that Wicked be revealed, whom the Lord shall consume with the spirit of his mouth, and shall destroy with the BRIGHTNESS OF HIS COMING: WHOSE coming is after the working of satan with all power, and signs, and lying wonders, and with all deceivableness of unrighteousness IN THEM THAT PERISH; because, they received not the love of the truth, that they might be saved. And for this cause God shall send them strong delusion, that they should believe a lie: that they all might be damned who believed not the truth, but had pleasure in unrighteousness."

What "mystery of iniquity" in Paul's day operated against the people of God? There is but one answer. It was Pagan Rome. That power did then, "already work" against the saints, and being a Universal Empire, did hinder any other persecuting power being "revealed." According to historians, ten general persecutions took place under their administration, during which Three millions of Christians, suffered martyrdom. When was that power "taken out of the way?" According to Gibbon, it was done in the year of our Lord 508. (See Litch's Prophetic Expositions.) What "wicked" or persecuting power arose immediately upon that being taken out of the way? This question, also, has but one answer. It was Papal Rome, which during 1260 years destroyed 50,000,000 innocent unoffending christians. This power is doomed to be "consumned" wasted away, and finally destroyed by the brightness of Christ's coming. Its civil power has been so consumed, that they have been unable to take the life of a Christian for almost half a century, unless it may have been secretly done under the dark coverts of some of their pretended religious institutions. Their destruction is to be by the brightness of Christ's coming: whose [not the Pope's. His character is given in verse 4,] coming is after the working of satan, &c. But to whom is Christ's coming after, or like the working of satan? The answer is before you: It is to them that perish. In other words Christ is the sinners devil; for he comes to take "vengeance on them that know not God, and that obey not the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ: who shall be punished with everlasting destruction from the presence of the Lord, and from the glory of his power; when he shall come to be glorified in his saints, and admired in all them that believe in that day."

The coming of Christ is like the working of satan to them that perish, in another sense. When God gave man dominion over the whole earth—delighting himself in the being whom he had created after his own image and likeness—When all the inferior creatures of God delighted to do him homage, and his Maker conversed with him face to face; then satan came by "subtelty" and robbed him of both his dominion, and seat of empire. So Christ will come upon those who do not watch, like a thief, and take his people up to himself in the air, while he spoils the empire of satan, and gives it back to its lawful heir, and to as many others as receive him, and love his appearing. Those that go before him and cry, Prepare ye the way of the Lord! should not be surprised at being set down as deceivers, setters forth of false signs, enemies to righteousness, disturbers of the peace of the church, &c. Those that "receive not the love of the truth" will treat the coming of Christ, with all its attendant circumstances, as though it were the work of sin and satan. A professed Christian editor says, "Millerism is a lie, and its leaders are doomed to the hottest hell, &c." Very well; the coming of Christ is after the working of satan to all such as have pleasure in unrighteousness, having loved this present world.

LAST DAY TREASURES.

"Go to now, ye rich men, weep and howl for your miseries that shall come upon you. Your riches are corrupted, and your garments are moth-eaten. Your gold and silver is cankered; and the rust of them shall be a witness against you, and shall eat your flesh as it were fire. Ye have heaped treasures together for the last days." James 5: 1–3.

Behold, the husbandman waiteth for the precious fruit of the earth, and hath long patience for it, until he receive the early and the latter rain. Be ye also patient; stablish your hearts: for the coming of the Lord draweth nigh." James 5: 7–8.

INFLUENCE OF SECOND ADVENT PREACHING.

While one of our lecturers was recently laboring in Virginia, a man who had been notorious as an oppressor of the poor, listened to the lectures and became awakened. At this time, he was holding in his possession a farm that had been most unjustly obtained. One day before our brother left the said neighborhood, while standing in the door, a man came to him and said, "I feel to thank God that you ever came to this place; for myself, wife, and children, had been turned out of doors by Mr. ——, but since he has heard you preach, he has given me back my farm and I now have a home for my family."

ANOTHER.—Two brothers had for a long time been at variance, and at the time the lecturer above mentioned commenced his labors, they were preparing to fight each other. They listened to the truth of God relative to the near approach of the Saviour to judgment—became convinced of it, and the herald of the coming Bridegroom took them by the hand while they were both bathed in tears—made their mutual confessions, and prepared by humbling themselves before God, to meet the King of Kings at his coming. There has been much talk about frightening weak minded persons with these Bible truths. O that God would frighten a multitude more in the same manner, before they become frightened by "the face of him that sitteth upon the Throne!"

COMMUNICATIONS.

LETTER FROM BRO. BARTHOLOMEW.

AURORA, In. May 11, 1844.

DEAR BRO. JACOBS—

In this week's number of the Western Christian Advocate, I notice an article by the editor, under the head, "Consistency and Justice," which perhaps deserves a passing remark. The editor takes some three paragraphs from a communication in the Western Midnight Cry, of the 13th of April last, upon which he comments as follows: First paragraph, "A writer signing himself D. Bartholomew, in a late number of the Western Midnight Cry, giving an account of the cessation of several Millerites, (no such name in the communication,) from the Methodist Episcopal Church in Aurora, In., says, considering their escape somewhat fortunate, and having put their hands to the plough, they do not wish to return. Like Lot in one sense, they wish not to look back, and unlike him in another, they plead not for the little city of Zoar, but are determined to flee to the mountain, which alone will prove like the shadow of a great rock in a weary land." On this he remarks: "Now it is strange that those Millerites should have been so long (how long, mark!) in making up their minds to flee from the city of destruction—the Methodist Episcopal Church. Lot's wife lingered only a few minutes, and she was turned into a pillar of salt; but the Aurora Millerites have been lingering, at least nine or twelve months. The Almighty must have been more merciful with them than he was with Lot's wife, or else the Methodist Episcopal Church is not the doomed city of destruction after all." Perhaps my Bro. can inform us how long Lot had sojourned in Sodom, to the moment he was commanded to flee from the city devoted to destruction; and also how many minutes Lot's wife lingered, after having escaped from the city, when she was turned into a pillar of salt. I can find no account of her lingering after leaving the city, but looking back; perhaps a desire to return. Lot, it is said, lingered in the city until the angels laid hold of him, and took him, his wife and two daughters, by the hand, the Lord being merciful to him, and brought them forth and set them without the city. Now, my Bro. I would just remark, that I believe with two or three exceptions, we are unlike Lot's wife, we have not looked back, and as far as I know, have not as yet had a desire to linger, or return. But how my Bro. got his knowledge of our lingering, at least nine or twelve months, I know not; if we did linger, it was like Lot before he left the city, for surely it is not since, although we have left many for whom we have a strong attachment, and christian fellowship. But further, says the editor: "The same writer says the preacher in charge stated that none of those who had seceded, could be admitted into class meetings, or love feasts in the Methodist Episcopal Church, and that the door of the Methodist Episcopal Church would be closed against all lecturers on the Second Advent. He then asks, does the writer suppose the Methodists can fellowship, or open the doors of their church, for the use of persons that compare them to the abominable inhabitants of Sodom and Gomorrah?" and closes this paragraph with a short petition, which I hope all will remember when they address the throne of grace: "O that the Great Head of the Church would teach them Christian charity!" I frankly acknowledge that I do not suppose the Methodists, as a body, can fellowship those that oppose them in their views on doctrinal points, or attempt honestly to point out what they think to be errors in the church, or those that call them Babylon, Sodom, &c. Neither do we suppose the methodists can fellowship those they charge with damnable heresy, and of giving heed to seducing spirits and doctrines of Devils, false prophets, &c. I do most cheerfully agree with my Bro. to unite with him in his petition. Once more, says the editor, the writer remarks, it is not considered that the Methodist Episcopal Church, as a body, own a house or place of worship in Aurora. They have been, and still are, dependent on the favor of the Trustees, a majority of whom are believers in the speedy Advent. He then remarks: "We hardly supposed that an editor of a newspaper would have published such a statement." If true in fact, why should not an editor have published it; if false, perhaps our good Bro. can point out our error, for surely he has not done so by his reference to the law of the land, in certain cases made and provided; it will not apply under all circumstances. He goes on to exemplify, by what he may conjecture a parallel case, but it is like beating the air. After striving to create the impression, that the claim on what is called the Methodist Episcopal church in Aurora, rested on the fact that a majority of the Trustees of said church were what he calls Millerites, the case is so plain to his own mind, that he says he waits for no reply, but remarks truly that self interest will teach some men what the truth cannot; and he might have added to this, that self interest with some is stronger than the principles of Justice and equity. Suffice it to say that the Trustees of said church, being men of some little understanding, do not pretend to any shadow of claim, on the ground he has supposed, their claim being founded on better premises. He further remarks: "If the day of judgment had come on the 21st of March, and found D. Bartholomew, and the editor of the Midnight Cry, holding opposite principles, they would have been ranked with the bold advocates of wrong." Indeed, Bro. Jacobs and myself have great reason to be grateful, that we are not to be judged alone by this Brother, for then might we be condemned for crimes that we might commit in the future. We are commanded to judge not, lest we be judged, for with what judgment, &c. Also it is said, judge nothing before the time. But this Bro. would have had us judged, and condemned, on the 21st of March, for supposed crimes committed on the 12th of April. Now, my Bro. where is your head, Consistency and Justice? "Whoso rewardeth evil for good, evil shall not depart from his house." Prov. 16: 13. "Let us therefore, not judge one another any more, but judge this rather, that no man put a stumbling block or an occasion to fall in his brother's way." We see a great fitness in your petition, and let us again, and again, press our suit at a throne of grace, and when we pray earnestly for others, we may be justified if we should be a little selfish, and pray also for ourselves. A little more charity will surely do us no harm, and let us pray God to preserve us, soul, body, and spirit, blameless to his coming, Amen. D. BARTHOLOMEW.

P. S. Perhaps our good Bro., when he sees his error, as I think he must, may inform his numerous readers, through his widely circulated paper, that he too is liable to be mistaken, and that he also, as the editor of a newspaper, published statements which might be some little injury to others, which are not altogether justifiable by the facts in the case. Come, my Bro., it is said an open confession is good for the soul, and we think it is even better than sacrifice, and to harken than the fat of rams, and thereby, it may be, you will escape that judgment by which you have perhaps too prematurely judged others as the bold advocates of wrong.

We had understood previous to publishing the article which called forth the one above noticed, that the house in which the M. E. Church at Aurora, was private property. [ED.

LETTER FROM BRO. J. B. COOK.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., May 8th, 1844.

DEAR BRO. JACOBS:—

I arrived here about the 20th ult., found a goodly number of believers, who are "looking for and hastening unto the coming of the day of God." They did, and do still, believe that "the coming of the Lord draweth nigh." There was especial expectation excited by the facts connected with the time of the passover, from the 2d to the 4th inst. This period has, however, passed, and we have not to wait for that, or any other period to terminate, ere the Great "Nobleman's" return.

I confess my confidence was strong that the 2300 prophetic days would have ended, and some marked event relative to "the end" would have been witnessed ere now. I do confess that I have both "looked for" and loved the appearing of my blessed Saviour; and as my belief that the time for that longed for event was revealed in the 2300 days, I have been disappointed. My mistake in that particular is manifest, yet so far as my knowledge now extends, it is confined to that particular. My reasons for believing in the time have been freely and fully given. They were obtained at first from the unerring word of the Lord; and as I afterwards learned, was sustained by some of the brightest ornaments of the church. This last fact is by most, thrown into the shade; but the events which not a few of our opponents have looked for as marking "the end" of prophetic time have not transpired. My disappointment, therefore, should be shared by all who have seen that the time would end ere this period; and who expected some marked development of the Divine plan for human salvation. As no event has occurred which can be regarded as "the end" of indignation, I conclude that the period has not past, though I have no light to detect the mistake, if any, in the dates. However, the argument based on the "signs of the times," the prophetic events, and the seven trumpets, seems firm as eternal truth; hence I say, that the Lord is coming soon. My whole heart and soul cries out for God, "Come Lord Jesus," come quickly, "even so, amen." Angels and apostles raised their hearts and harps in joy at this event, Rev. 19: 16; 22: 20. We cannot feel sympathy with apostles or angels if indifferent to the coming of Jesus. Some of the most enlarged promises of God cannot consistently apply to those who are indifferent, much less, those who are opposed. I could not deem myself a Christian at all were I, as most seem, indifferent to this subject, and these promises. The marvel is that many can be so deluded as to deem themselves Christians when doing despite to the condition of those promises, viz. "looking for" and loving the appearing of Jesus.

We are in a waiting posture, willing to do all in our power to prepare ourselves and others for the great crisis. We are stayed on God, assured that those who trust him shall not be confounded. We could not consistently, or, to speak in general terms, with a clear conscience, have done differently from what we have; consequently we are not anxious for the future. The Lord will come soon and gather together all his believing children. Amen! Yours in hope, J. B. COOK.

I have had an attack of ague, which has prostrated me, but I did not think it best to publish it; I am now better, as are the rest of my family.

LETTER FROM A. G. PERKINS.

CONNERSVILLE, Fayette Co., Ind., May 19, 1844.

DEAR BRO. JACOBS:—

The Advent cause is the only one in which I feel any great degree of interest. Politics, sectarianism, and worldly gains, have all vanished before the glorious doctrine of the coming of Christ.

The cause in this part of the country is about at a stand. Those who have been its enemies appear determined to remain so to the end; and it is probable that nothing will awake them but "the sign of the Son of Man in Heaven." On the other hand, its friends have neither burned their Bibles, nor turned infidels; neither have they cast away their confidence, in the speedy coming of their Master. If they had trusted in man, they would have drawn back, and though March is past, and their redemption has not come, they believe from the expiring prophetic periods, and the signs of the times, that it is nigh even at the doors. One new feature in the history of the cause is developing itself in this part of the land. Adventists are beginning to agitate the question, whether they shall stand connected with the sects of the day. But some of us were not permitted long to think upon it, until we found our old places too hot with contention for us, and we were forced to leave; or have been cut off for plain dealing with those in high places.

With myself, this question is entirely settled. The Bible has been my counsel in the case, and I find in Rev. 18: 13, that dealing in the bodies and souls of men, is a part of that unholy Babylonish traffic, which God will destroy: And I read in verse 4, "Come out of her my people." Not, "I will come and take you out," but Come out; do it yourself. The churches have, and continue to sanction this abominable work, and as I believe we are bound to obey God or lose our souls, what else can we do but leave? Moreover, it is evident that a large majority of Church members do not love the appearing of the Lord. So much are they opposed to it, that you must not pray about it, sing nor talk about it, or they are offended; and as for preaching on the subject, that is entirely out of the question; so much so that it appears to damp their holy joy when it is mentioned. Their own preachers purposely go round it in many instances when it comes directly in their way. Or if they mention the coming of Christ, they are very careful to guard themselves by saying they are not "Millerites" ie. they are not looking for Christ. I here put the question to all who are looking for their Lord, Can you hold communion with such things? Can you listen, and behold, and not arrive at the conclusion that you have no business there?

But they have no use for us in the churches. We can do them no good. Our theme is the Coming of Christ and the Resurrection. Theirs is death. We are looking for an inheritance in the new Earth. They for a heaven nobody knows what, or where. Why then should we remain together?

Perhaps these views may be considered disorganizing, but they are my honest sentiments, and I have acted accordingly: but I am willing to change them when I am convinced they are erroneous.

Yours, in the hope of Christ's speedy coming,

ALBERT G. PERKINS.

MARTIN LUTHER TO POPE LEO, X.

"Now, then, I come to you, Most Holy Father, and prostrate at your feet, entreat you to restrain, if possible, the enemies of peace. But I cannot retract my doctrines. I CANNOT CONSENT THAT RULES OF INTERPRETATION SHOULD BE IMPOSED ON HOLY SCRIPTURE. The word of God, the source whence all liberty flows, must be left free." D'Aubigne's Reformation.

How then has it come to pass, in these days of degeneracy, that so many who profess to rejoice in the principles and practices of that great Reformer; do now so stoutly maintain, that "principles of interpretation" 'must be imposed on Holy Scripture," and that the word, of God must not be left free, to express its own meaning, in the language which God has been pleased to use?

Why did the Pope need principles of interpretation? Most manifestly because he could not establish his blasphemous pretensions in any other way. But allow him his own principles of interpretation, and he could establish all his impious pretences from the word of God. The same is true of Emmanuel Swedenborg. Just allow him his principles of interpretation and he can find scripture for all his ridiculous fooleries. So can any one else. Yet there are few things which our Professors, and Presidents, and D. D's. and the whole batch of Scribes and Pharisees have prated so much about in these last days, as their principles of interpretation.

Nothing is more convenient, for those who wish to have the credit of believing God, and of avoiding at the same time all reproach for the sake of any truth that is unpopular among men, than these principles of interpretation, for with these, the Pope, or the Devil, or Dr. Whitby, or Swedenborg, or any body else, can prove any thing they wish to have true. But the idea that the Bible is a revelation from God as it is, without any principles of interpretation whatever, or in other words, that God has told us what he means in the very words that express this meaning, without circumlocution or doubledealing; this is enough to fill the whole multitude of professed believers in God with pious horror.

But what can be plainer than this one thing, that if the Bible does not express Gods meaning, in the language which it uses, it never can be a revelation, without an inspired interpreter; and this is what the disciples of Emmanuel Swedenborg believe him to have been. Our temporal millennium spiritualizers, therefore, are bound to show that they have an inspired interpreter, or else admit that they do not know what the Bible means, and cannot know until such an one is found. The Bible as it is, teaches the speedy personal coming and reign of Christ on the earth with the immortal saints; but by principles of interpretation, the unbelievers of the age have learned to spiritualize the whole away. May God forgive the man who have dared thus to insult Him by wresting His word, and by their abominable principles of interpretation, making it teach any thing they wish to have true; may their eyes be opened, before it is too late, to see, that God has given us His own meaning, and to receive it, and look, and wait, with all who believe the Bible, for the immediate coming of their Lord. C. Fitch.

HYMN.

We see the bright signs of his coming revealed,
And hear the rejoicings of those that are sealed,
And lift up our heads and unite in the song,
That soon the bright harps of the sky shall prolong.

He's coming he's coming no longer delay,
But ride, trim your lamps and be hasting away,
Unspotted and holy each garment must be,
And the soul from all sin and entanglement free.

To meet him in glory my soul is on fire,
And filled with the raptures of holy desire;
Oh haste blessed Jesus in majesty come,
And take thy redeemed to their heavenly home.

The glory already seems gleaming on high,
Be ready to meet with the Lord in the sky,
Pray on till the moment of conflict is o'er,
Pray on for our sorrows will soon be no more.

O hasten thy coming blest Saviour we pray!
Speed the wheels of thy chariot, and make no delay!
As strangers and pilgrims in sadness we roam,
We're waiting, we're longing to meet thee at home.

O put on thy glories blest Bridegroom and come,
Let the deserts be glad and the wilderness bloom,
And the saints who've been wash'd from their sins in thy blood,
Shall exclaim, looking upward, "Lo, this is our God!"

WESTERN MIDNIGHT CRY,

CINCINNATI, MAY 18, 1844.

HAIL STORM.

A hail storm passed over this city about sunset on Wednesday evening. It lasted about five minutes. The hail resembled broken fragments of ice, more than ordinary hail stones.

One of these pieces of ice was measured by Bro. Eshelby, 186 Main street, after having been handled by a number of individuals. Its dimensions were 1¾ inches in length, 1¼ wide, and about 1 inch thick.

THE SEVENTY WEEKS.

The time of the commencement, and consequent termination, of the "seventy weeks" of Dan. 9: 24, is a matter about which a difference of opinion has existed for hundreds of years. We introduce an article below from "Wood's Bible Dictionary," published by D. Hitt, and T. Ware, for the Methodist Connexion in the United States" in 1813, which will show to our readers the views adopted by the early Methodists in this country, relative to this prophetic period. Let it be remembered that because the weight of evidence seemed to preponderate in favor of their termination in A. D. 33, which would consequently settle the end of the 2300 days, Dan 8: 14, to be in 1843; the passing of a few months over that time leads the said Methodists now to join the scoffing rabble, in saying; what will they do? The time has gone by! It is now proved to be a delusion, &c.—"A few years" makes but little difference according to this author. A brief period of variation in the time will not change the principle proved, viz: that Christ will come; and that the time of his coming is so fixed that we can arrive at it within "a few years." How do Methodists now talk? Why, in substance they say, because Christ did not come before the 21st day of March last, we therefore know nothing about it. He will not come in a thousand years, if at all—or because a given point in human argument has passed, they will not believe what God has said: We ask, who it is that is "throwing away their Bibles," and "turning infidels?" Look at your own "Standard authors," and blush at your skepticism and infidelity!

"A natural week is the space of seven days; such a week of nuptual feasting for Leah's marriage, Jacob finished, ere he obtained Rachel, Gen. xxix. 27. A prophetic week is the space of seven days, a day for a year. Nor was this method of calculation abtruse to the Jews, who had their seventh year a Sabbath, as well as a seventh day: and who, at the end of seven prophetical weeks, had their Sabatical jubilee. That the 70 weeks mentioned by Daniel, denote weeks of years, is agreed by every sensible commentator, but not the time when these 70 weeks or 490 years began. It is plain, they began from an edict to rebuild the city: they could not therefore begin at the edict of Cyrus or Darius for rebuilding the temple; but at the edict of Artaxerxes Longimanus for repairing the city, either in the seventh year of his reign, when he gave Ezra his commission to that effect, Ezra vii. and viii. or in the 20th year of it, when he gave Nehemiah his, Neh. ii. The edict in the 7th year of his reign was most favorable and was ratified by the counsellors, as well as by the King, and appears to have been just 490 years before our Saviour's death, wherein he finished transgression, and made an end of sin, by his complete atonement. Of these, seven weeks, or 49 years, were spent in rebuilding the city and its walls, amidst no small trouble, and these ended about the death of Nehemiah. Sixty-two more weeks or 434 years, elapsed ere the public ministry of John or Christ began; and after confirming the covenant with many, Jesus, in the last half of the seventieth week, that is, at the end of it, made the sacrifice and oblation to cease in point of obligation. If, with Mercator and Petavius, we should allow Artaxerxes to have reigned ten years along with his father, and so the 20th to be the 10th after the death of his father Xerxes; then 483 years elapsed between that and the commencement of our Saviour's public ministry; and in the midst of the 70th week, or about three years and a half after, the sacrifices were abolished by his death. If we date the commencement of these weeks from the 20th of Artaxerxes, after the death of his father, the death of our Saviour happened 478 years after, in the middle of the 69th week; and we must leave the 70th for the events at the destruction of the Jewish nation, between A. D. 65 and 72, in which, after making covenants or leagues with a variety of the eastern princes, Vespasian, and his son Titus, entirely overturned the Jewish church and state. But, after all, it must be allowed, that the chronology of that period is not so absolutely fixed and clear, as to occasion any warm dispute about a few years; so that to me, it appears a small matter whether these 490 years be reckoned from the 7th or 20th year of Artaxerxes Longimanus, Dan ix. 24—26.

CANDID TESTIMONY.

We copy the following from the "Star," a political paper published at Richmond, Va. Well would it be for many professed Christian editors, and ministers, if they would go and listen to the reading of the Bible, with equal candor. By so doing, some of them might possibly be led to believe its truths.

Mr. Editor—I have been a regular attendant upon the lectures of Messrs. Stuart and Freeman, upon the Second Advent nigh, embracing the following subjects: 24th Matthew, 11th Revelation, 2d and 8th chapters of Daniel—to all of which I listened with critical attention, and am ready to allow that the prejudice which in some degree existed in my mind to these 'ignorant fanatics,' (as they are frequently called) has been entirely removed by the clear and explicit language of Scripture brought to bear upon the several topics discussed. If the Bible be a fanatical book, then are these men fanatics; for they seem to be thoroughly imbued with the spirit as well as the letter thereof. It appears to me sir, that the prejudice existing in the minds of many with regard to the advocates of this doctrine, would be entirely removed, would they but give a candid and impartial hearing; and that they are not such fanatics and perverters of sound doctrine as their opponents unwarrantably pronounce them to be.

If the doctrine of the Second Coming of Christ be a doctrine founded upon the scriptures of Divine Truth, can it be an unwelcome one to those who profess to be his disciples? and do they not by their opposition to the nearness of his Kingdom, declare with the Jews at his first advent, that they want not this man to reign over them? If they loved his appearing would they not love to hear it talked of? I put these questions to those who profess and call themselves christians. If it be a doctrine of the Bible can it do harm to those whom it warns to prepare for that event? I for one think not.

I am glad to observe that as these lectures progress, there is also a progressive increase in the number of those who come to hear—and I am glad for the honor of Richmond as a christian city, that these gentlemen are beginning to be treated with that attention and respect which their mission demands.

The lecture of Mr. Stuart on Monday evening, on the 'Everlasting Kingdom,' was listened to by a respectable audience with the most profound attention; and while the speaker brought forward text after text of Holy Writ, in proof of his proposition that that kingdom was yet future, but nigh at hand, the eager and earnest listening of the audience attested that there was at least a plausible reason for them all to be interested in the subject. I understand that these lectures will be continued every night, excepting, Saturday, during the present week, and that the topics to be discussed will be of a highly interesting character. All who desire to hear, correctly, the views of the Second Adventists, would do well to hear the remainder of these lectures. If possible, they will be heard by A SUBSCRIBER.

ANOTHER.

Such has been, and still is, the determined opposition of the political and religious press to the Reign of Christ on earth, that we had long since given up the idea of ever receiving justice at their hands. The following, however, from "the Aurora," one of the organs of the hated "abolitionists," deals in language which ought to convey a lesson to the so called Christian editors around us. We wish the said editor success in his praiseworthy efforts to ameliorate the condition of the "down trodden" and "oppressed;" while we assure him that we still go for "abolitionism" not only of negro slavery, but of sin, death, and the Devil.

"MILLERISM."—Much obloquy is heaped upon those who believe in the Second Advent, by certain political papers, especially by those edited by some of the pharisees, who care not to vote for a duelist, gambler, Sabbath-breaker, slave-holder, free-mason, &c.; but the abuses of these men are comparatively light to those lavished by part of the so-called religious press. Now whether Mr. Miller is right or not in anticipating the speedy advent of the Saviour, it evinces any spirit but that of a true Christian to attempt to ridicule the subject in the manner in which many do. Let the final consummation of things arrive when it may, no man, I conceive, possessing generous feelings will make light of the matter—and should it be a thousand years to that time, even those who are now making sport of it, be they preachers, editors, or the great of the earth, will have to render a strict account for what they do. Are such preparing themselves to meet with approbation, the arrival of that period, when they talk in a vein of ridicule of "ascension robes" and all that kind of slang? Let them read that scripture which says, for every idle word spoken we shall give an account.—There is now almost a universal exultation over Mr. Miller because he expected the end of time about the 23d of March. Who dare say it will not be soon?

PERILOUS TIMES.

"This know also, that in the LAST DAYS, perilous times shall come: For men shall be lovers of their own selves, covetous, boasters, proud, blasphemers, disobedient to parents, unthankful, unholy, without natural affection, truce breakers, false accusers, incontinent, fierce, despisers of those that are good." 2d Tim. 3: 1—3.

"And at that time shall Michael stand up, the Great Prince which standeth for the children of thy people: And there shall be a time of trouble, such as never was since there was a nation to that same time; and at that time thy people shall be delivered, every one that shall be found written in the book." Dan. 12: 1.

The time of trouble is introduced before the deliverance of God's people, is spoken of. It would seem that they are to see the time of trouble, but be delivered from it: Being few in number, and possessed of wisdom to "discern between him that serveth God and him that serveth him not;" their combined influence is little dreaded, and hardly sufficient to awaken a persecution against themselves. There are, however, abundance of materials in a state of fit preparation for a time of trouble, which time, we doubt not, is now dawning. After having perused in our last number an account of troubles in Italy, and the combined operations of Russia, Prussia, and Austria, for the extermination of a whole nation, (the Poles,) and the Roman, and Russian decrees against the Jews, add the following relative to the recent troubles in Philadelphia, between the Native Americans, and Roman Catholics. The Gazette describes the scene as follows:

The Natives held a meeting at Kensington. That meeting was attacked and dispersed by foreigners! On Monday, the 6th, another meeting was organized; that was attacked. Clubs, brickbats, fire-arms were used; houses stoned, and the Native Americans retreated, defending themselves with stones and pistols. Once they gained an advantage over their alien assailants. But the rioters became more fierce; they poured in a sharp fire; and the Natives retreated from the ground. A number of men were killed and wounded. George Shiffler was shot by an Irishman and died almost instantly. The Irish were in houses, and fired some 20 or 30 shots. Joseph Cox, C. Jackson, John Deal, George McCalmot, Samuel Beatty, Charles Vanstavern, Henry Temper, Edward Spain and David Ford, were severely wounded. Mr. Develin's house was torn down, John Taffarty's injured! The whole Irish population turned out; men, women and boys; the women and boys cheered on the men, and furnished them with stones, and ammunition and clubs!

1 past 12 o'clock, P. M.—About 10 o'clock an attempt was made by a part of the crowd to burn down the fence which encloses the Nunnery. They were fired upon by a party of Irish, and five of them shot. One, Nathan Ramsey, a blind maker, in Third street, near Brown, was mortally wounded. J. W. Wright, son of Mr. Wright, firm of Wright & Nephew, salt merchants, who was a silent spectator, was shot through the head, and fell dead on the spot!

The Native Americans held a meeting on Tuesday, the 7th inst., in the State House yard—they adjourned to the corner of Second and Master streets, where they proceeded with their flag, occupying the market place.

Several guns were fired at them from the windows opposite the meeting; one man was killed, and several wounded. The houses were then attacked; the firing continued briskly, and much loss of life and destruction of property followed.

J. Wesley Rhinedollar, Matthew Hammit, Lewis Grieble, and John Luster, were killed. Wounded, Geo. Young, Augustus Peale, Wright Adis, W. E. Hilman, James Whittaker, Chas. Orte, Henry Henlepoth, Willis H. Bloney, J. M. Lawrence.

In the afternoon the houses on Cadwallader street were fired, and burned down. No engines were allowed to approach them. The military force headed by Gen. Cadwallader were ordered out, and about dark they marched to the spot where the riots and murders had taken place. Quiet followed: all firing ceased. Two men were seized, John O'Conner and Owen Daily, in a house where another man had his arm torn by the bursting of a gun, and another gun was found loaded with nearly two ounces of slugs! John Taggart was taken up as the murderer of Rhinedollar, and while being conveyed to prison was almost killed by the mob. Nathan Ramsay, Tabacconist, wounded on Monday, died on Tuesday.

Later accounts, at 9 o'clock of Tuesday the 7th, represent the riots at that hour as more fierce than ever. The Native Americans held a meeting, and passed strong resolutions against the murderers, (offering $1000 for their apprehension,) and against being attacked by foreigners while treading their native soil, and discussing matters touching the public good. They then proceeded to the scene of the riot. Here an Irishman, who had shot an American, was caught. Two pistols were fired at him. He was then seized, dragged down the street, with a rope around his neck, and hanged at the market house.

The Hibernia Hose House, from which shots were fired, was burned down. In addition, one square of houses in Master street was burned! Three men were killed! upwards of thirty wounded!! and the city in a scene of tremendous excitement!!!

Wednesday Morning.—Report says the riots still continued worse than ever. About forty were killed—St. Michael's Church was occupied by the Irish. The Irish on the Rail Road and other places were pouring into Philadelphia to help their countrymen.

STILL LATER.—A mass meeting of the Native Americans was held on Wednesday—(some seven thousand present) and organized. After speeches, resolutions, &c., they adjourned.

At one o'clock, on Wednesday the 8th, another American was shot dead in the streets. The Irish were infuriated. The people were arming! Fire arms were discovered in various out-houses in Kensington. At 1 past 2, hundreds of Irish who fled from Kensington, are arming themselves at Richmond.

At 4 P. M., the riots were renewed, one church burned, several buildings destroyed, and more lives lost. The number of persons killed were put down in one account at 50, in another at 80; and, what is more, force and more shedding of blood, it was thought, could only stop the riot. We suppose the church burned to be St. Michaels.

At ½ past 4, the conflict was hotter. Nothing could check a general fight. The natives resolved to hold their ground—and, report says that at five o'clock the Irish were giving way before them. A bloody night's work was anticipated!

We may be laughed at for calling the very trivial circumstance of shooting down only a fewscores of men in the city of "Brotherly Love," one of the events beginning the time of trouble: So be it. There are a class of men, who in consequence of their unbelief, are destined, not only to scoff at every fulfillment of prophetic truth, but to gather themselves together to fight against the King of Kings, and Lord of Lords. Rev. 19: 19.

Another paper gives the following picture of the scene on Tuesday and Wednesday.

"The sights presented during yesterday and last night were truly sickening. Men with their wives, and often six or seven children, trudging fearfully through the streets, with small bundles, seeking a refuge, they knew not where. Mothers with infants in their arms, and little ones following after them, carrying away from their homes whatever they could pick up at the instant, passing along with fearful tread, not knowing where to turn."

"The fire now raging at St. Augustines Church, is occasioned by the burning of the magnificent library of books attached to the Church. They are piled up in front of the house, and made a bonfire of."

Later accounts state that 60 private dwellings in Kensington, were in ruins. The military had been called in from the surrounding country, and order in a measure had been restored. The Philadelphia American states that although the riots had been quelled, there was no concealing the fact, that the mob spirit was in the ascendant.

On Friday, Gov. Porter was in the city, and had ordered the military companies from Lancaster, and Harrisburgh.

The following from the "Clarksonian," published in Hartford, Ct., by a colored brother, will aid in making up the list of "Perils in the last days."

Record of Bloodshed!—Four Hundred Slaves to be Shot! Capt. Clarke, of schr. Patoxet arrived in New York recently from Matanzas, and states that 400 slaves connected with the late conspiracy were in irons, and would be shot in a few days. One of them had poisoned a whole family. Capt. C. left on the 25th ult.

Slave Trade.—Late Bermuda papers state that the slave trade of Cuba is rapidly on the increase. During the last two months upwards of 2000 Africans have been landed on the island, directly from the coast of Africa.

In 1838, Mr. Turnbull estimated that 23,000 slaves per year, were imported into Cuba, of which Matanzas is a principal port. It is well known that these freshly imported slaves, are those who struggle for freedom, or, as it is falsely said, "create an insurrection." The result of their struggle is, that they are murdered by the hireling soldiers of Cuba. How long, Oh God! How long will a Christian world witness this deliberate transportation of human beings from one hemisphere, to be murdered by the tender mercies of Christianity in another!

As a test of the state of feeling on this subject, in the Free States, it is sufficient to state that "Four hundred slaves to be shot," have gone the rounds of the papers as quietly as if there were "Four hundred cattle to be slaughtered!"

Further from the Island of Bloodshed.—We have advices from Havanna to the 14th inst. General O'Donnell, the Governor General of Cuba, is determined to quell the insurrection, and all fancied sources of it, by murdering all who are suspected! "It is said," cooly observes the fiendish hearted New England man who conducts the New Orleans Picayune, "he (O'Donnell) will materially diminish the number of those engaged in labor on the island." If any thing could be more atrocious than the wholesale murders which the above sentence announces, it is the horrible, the awful audacity of the terms in which it is announced! "There were ordered to be shot this day, twenty-five negroes, and four English mechanics, and a mulatto poet, said to be very clever. He was to have been a leader in the insurrection." This is false: these wholesale murders are based upon fear, not facts.

"Arrests were daily made at Havanna. Private houses turned into prisons, the jails being full. Among those arrested, and soon to be shot, are Blakely, a dentist, Barbosa, an undertaker, and Rangel, a silversmith." We presume that Governor O'Donnel is moved to the murder of these men in order to confiscate their property, to his own use.

Will not our churches appoint a day of humiliation and prayer, in view of these dreadful massacres?

Among the items of intelligence in England by the last overland mail from the East, is the following:

"Peace and tranquility prevailed throughout the whole of the British possessions in India. * * * The accounts from China are equally favorable, and universal peace also reigns in that quarter. We regret to state that the massacre of three Catholic Bishops, with seventy Christians, at Corea, is confirmed. They were all beheaded. One hundred and eighty more were strangled!"

MOST HORRID.

The Baltimore Argus contains a private letter from Constantinople, dated March 26, 1844, in which is enclosed a translation of a letter from the Bishop of Scopia to the Greek Patriarch at Constantinople, giving an account of the outrages on a christian sect on the borders of Bulgaria, by the Albanians. This letter says:

"The men they have tied to columns and have committed upon the women and their daughters acts the most attrocious; after this they have hung the men up by their feet and forced their own wives to stifle them by means of smoke from straw burned under their heads. They have violated old women of eighty years, and young girls of ten. They have pierced the boys with their lances and roasted them like sheep, saying to them, "You, in the time of Chivzi Pacha, would not prepare mutton for us to eat; see, now, in recompense, we roast you, and call to your assistance Chivzi Pacha." They tore off the clothes of the girls and compelled them to remain on foot all naked, and to serve them with wine all night. They dishonored the married women before their husbands, whom they obliged to hold torches in their hands. Oh! heaven and earth! how suffer such wickedness to be done, without shame and without fear, by the impious Albanians!"

This sounds like the cries of the martyrs under the altar, "How long, O Lord, holy and true, will thou not judge and avenge our blood on them that dwell on the earth." Rev. 6: 10.

Earthquakes.—Capt. Tilton, of the brig Nauvoo, arrived this morning, informs us that a severe shock of an earthquake was felt at St. Johns on the 16th of April, at 8 P. M. Considerable damage was done to the houses. The inhabitants had commenced moving out of the city. Vessels in the harbor felt the shock. Heard of no lives being lost.

Capt. Stevens of the brig Meteor, arrived this morning from Guyama, reports that on the 16th of April, at 3 o'clock, P. M., a shock of an earthquake was felt at that place, which lasted about a minute. The Custom House walls were cracked in several places, but did not hear of its doing any other damage.

At Ponce, P. R., the shock was more severe. A great many of the houses were more or less injured, some being thrown down. It is said to be the heaviest shock ever felt at that place.—Balt. Pat. May 10.

The following is from the second number of a little sheet published in Oswego, N. Y., May 2d, 1844, L. Dolos Mansfield, editor.

"IF YOU WERE HONEST YOU WOULD CONFESS."

"Confess what?" "Why! that the time has passed by." "What time?" "The time you've set, the 21st of March." Well—we do confess that the 21st of March has passed. "Then you will acknowledge that you have been false prophets, will you not?" "No sir—far from that." We believe that the time has been given to the world just as God designed it should be, and for an important reason, even the fulfillment of prophecy—for until now the scoffing world and Laodicean Church, and apostate ministry, could not say, "Every vision faileth," (Ezek. xii. 21,) but now they do. Hear an extract of a letter from a clergyman on that point—"And now the time has passed. The event did not take place. You have deceived the people. Even the most distant period ("every vision faileth,") fixed on by Mr. Miller and his followers, as far as I can learn has passed." Yes, dear friends, and for what reason? That just such ministers and people might fulfill the last prophecy by saying as above; and crying, "The days are prolonged—every vision faileth." But what saith the Lord unto them, (Ezek. xii. 23, &c.) "Tell them, thus saith the Lord God, I will make this proverb to cease—but say unto them the days are at hand and the effect of every vision. For I am the Lord, I will speak, and the word that I shall speak shall come to pass, it shall be no more prolonged, FOR IN YOUR DAYS, O rebellious house, will I say the word and perform it, saith the Lord God." Yes; we furthermore confess that we believe this prophecy, as well as ALL the blessed Bible, and that the "effect of every vision" will soon be experienced, and that we do pity in our inmost souls, those poor deluded men, who are exulting because the dear Jesus has not come, for we know if they loved Him, they would not be so ready to anathematize us, because we expected him a little too soon. And we also confess that we believe, that eighteen hundred and ten years from the Cross, or eighteen hundred and seventeen from Christ's baptism, (when the sixty nine weeks were fulfilled Dan. ix. 24 and 25, in con. Dan. viii. 14,) or 1335 years from the time Paganism was removed to make room for the papal power, (Dan. xii. 11) we shall see the glorious King of Israel in his beauty. We confess that we have not the shadow of a doubt on that point, and we are expecting Him whom our souls love, daily and hourly, and we can see nothing of the 2300 days beyond about the present time. And moreover, we confess that we can even be guilty of saying, "Come Lord Jesus, Come quickly." Now we recommend to those who are crying "peace and safety" for the glory of God, and are calling us false prophets and teachers of heresy, one passage in Isa. lxvi. 5, "Hear ye the word of the Lord, ye that tremble at His word. Your brethren that hated you, that cast you out for my name's sake, said, Let the Lord be glorified! but He shall appear to your joy and they shall be ashamed." The following verses show that the Resurrection immediately comes. The people are now crying out "The World's Conversion! Foreign Missions, Return of the Jews, Temporal Millennium, and all, that the Lord might be glorified, and are casting out those who "tremble at God's word," when he tells us "the great day of the Lord is near and it hasteth greatly." But Jesus will appear to the joy of those looking for Him, but "they (those saying the days are prolonged) shall be ASHAMED."

2 Peter, iii. 3, 4: "Knowing this first, that there shall come in the last days scoffers, walking after their own lusts, and saying, Where is the promise of his coming? for since the fathers fell asleep, all things continue as they were from the beginning of the creation."

The world moves on as it has for the last eighteen hundred years—the sea rolls in grandeur and majesty—the sun gives heat by day—the moon gives light by night, and the stars gem the sky as they did on the glorious morning when the sons of God shouted for joy.

The man who can see signs in heaven and on earth, when every thing moves on so harmoniously, must have a distorted vision, a distempered brain, and a heart impregnated with the quintessence of fanaticism.—Portland Tribune.

SEARCHING QUERY.—We put it, says Brooks, to the consciences of some pious persons in modern time, whether the apprehension of the labor of studying prophecy, has not so prevailed over them, as effectually to prejudice their minds against the subject?

HYMN.

This world explore from shore to shore,
'Tis like a baseless vision;
Its lofty domes and brilliant ore,
Its gems and crowns are mean and poor,
There's nothing rich but heaven.

Fine gold will change and diamonds fade,
Swift wings to wealth are given,
All varying time our forms invade;
The seasons roll, light sinks in shade;
There's nothing lasts but heaven.

Empires decay and nations die,
Bright hopes to winds are given;
The vernal flowers in ruin lie,
Death conquers all below the sky,
There's nothing lives but Heaven.

Creation's mighty fabric all
Shall be to atoms riven;
The skies consume, the planets fall,
Convulsions rock this earthly ball;
There's nothing firm but Heaven.

A pilgrim stranger here I roam,
From place to place I'm driven;
My friends are gone and I'm in gloom,
The earth is all a lonely tomb,
I have no home but Heaven.

The clouds dispense, the light appears,
My sins are all forgiven,
Triumphant grace has quelled my fears;
Roll on thou sun, fly swift my years,
I'm on my way to Heaven.

Should war's turmoil, and passions boil,
Like Etna's burning levin,
Should sins and wrath the nations sweep,
A tempest o'er the howling deep;
I'll not be long from Heaven.

"MEN'S HEARTS FAILING THEM FOR FEAR."

Jesus Christ when on earth gave his disciples signs by which we who see them may know that his second coming is near, even at the doors. He told them there should be signs in the sun, moon and stars; which would directly precede his glorious advent. These signs have been seen, and the hearts of the wicked are failing for fear. The awful conviction rests upon their minds that Christ will come. They are afraid that these things will come to pass. And they try with all their power to shake off this conviction, and scoff, and cry "peace and safety," and "where is the promise of his coming." And when they hear some evil servant preach, "My Lord delayeth his coming," they extol him to the clouds. But sudden destruction awaits them! The indignation of God will come like a whirlwind! His fierce wrath will soon be poured upon a wicked world! Their feasts will be turned into mourning, and their joy to lamentation! Their cries of peace will soon be changed to cries for mercy. O what a time of trouble that will be! But the people of God will then be delivered, "every one that is found written in the Book." Then will the sanctuary be cleansed from all unrighteousness, and all will be "Holiness unto the Lord." Sin will then be swept off from the face of the earth. The stone cut out of the mountain without hands, will smite all earthly kingdoms and human governments upon their foundation, and they will be blown away like the chaff of the summer threshing floors, so that no place will be found for them: and the everlasting kingdom of God will be set up, and the saints of the Most High, the the meek and lowly followers of Jesus, will take the kingdom and possess it forever, even forever and ever. O ye slumbering virgins, if you would possess the kingdom awake, awake, trim your lamps and prepare to meet the Bridegroom!

Yours in hope of speedy deliverance,

THE RICH ARE IN DANGER.—"Verily I say unto you, that a rich man shall hardly enter into the kingdom of heaven." You who are laboring unremittingly to "join house to house, and lay field to field," without a thought or a desire beyond the attainment of these perishable possessions, learn from the lips of your Redeemer the true nature of the work in which you are engaged. You are merely assisting the great enemy of your souls, in forging those golden chains with which he binds you to his cruel service. Difficult as the work of salvation unquestionably is to every fallen child of Adam: to the rich, and to the man hastening to be rich," the difficulty is infinitely increased; with a profusion of the gifts of God: the ungrateful heart of man becomes, in general, strangely alienated from the heavenly Giver; with an earnest desire after wealth, comes an increasing indifference to spiritual duties and spiritual privileges; with an attainment of wealth, comes frequently a sordid selfishness, deadness of heart to God, coldness to the brethren. Few Christians perish from the cutting winds of adversity, many wither and fall away beneath the sun of prosperity. Intimately he was acquainted with the human heart, who looking around upon the splendid mansion of his friend, and remarking the exulting expression of his countenance, exclaimed, "Ay, these are the things that make a death-bed terrible!"—Rev. Henry Blunt's Lectures.

HOW IT STRIKES A STRANGER.

Extract from a letter received from a brother in Virginia, not an Adventist:—

In connection with the subject, however, I certainly do think it is something like boy's yelling after they have got out of the woods, for the clergy to wait until the time understood by Adventists, had passed, and then bravely set to for the purpose of showing the absurdity of the doctrine. But with the shocking want of magnanimity to be found in this degenerate age, it is not to be wondered at.

WESLEYAN METHODISTS.—This once humble people have joined with the older sects in "eating and drinking with the drunken." The Editor of the "True Wesleyan" for December 23d says,

☞The Wesleyans at the first church in Lowell are holding a Fair, which promises to aid them considerably in raising funds to meet their expenses. We hope our friends there will join heartily in the enterprise. A collation will be served up on Monday evening, at which we intend to be present.

Why do men exhibit such uncalled for hostility towards the poor brethren who are forced to espouse the doctrine of Christ's second coming at hand. Is it because they are unable to meet this subject on fair grounds? Is it because all those who are engaged in this cause are bad men, and only seeking their own interest? Or, is it because this doctrine is too true? and that in their very natures they hate God, and their heart's will not submit to Christ's righteous government. O the war! the war! (I fear) which they are carrying on, is against themselves, and that they will be found crucifying the Saviour afresh.—Ex. paper.

THE END OF ALL THINGS IS AT HAND."—Peter.

"Like the angel's voice sublime,
Heard above a world of crime;
Crying of the end of time."—J. G. Whittier.

One foot on sea and one on land,
See the mighty herald stand,
As he utters his command.

See him lift his hand on high—
Swear that time shall shortly die
Sounding forth the "Midnight Cry."

"His voice is like the lion's roar,"
The trembling earth from shore to shore
Echoes, "Time shall be no more!"

Give to God the glory!" Fear!
Lo! the judgment hour is near;
'Tis hasting, and will soon appear."

On, the gospel armor gird;
Watch and pray—believe the word
Of the angel thou hast heard.

"Rocks and mountains on us fall!"
Soon, poor sinners, you will call,
When your hopes have perished—all:

When the clouds of vengeance lower,
Who, oh who! may 'bide the hour—
Unrescued by the Saviour's power?

In the covert of thy side—
Then, Lord Jesus, let us hide—
So shall we that day abide.

PSALM OF DAVID—XXXVII.

Fret not thyself because of evil doers, neither be thou envious against the workers of iniquity:

2 For they shall soon be cut down like the grass, and wither as the green herb.

3 Trust in the Lord, and do good: so shalt thou dwell in the land, and verily thou shalt be fed.

4 Delight thyself also in the Lord; and he shall give thee the desires of thine heart.

5 Commit thy way unto the Lord; trust also in him, and he shall bring it to pass:

6 And he shall bring forth thy righteousness as the light, and thy judgment as the noon day.

7 Rest in the Lord, and wait patiently for him: fret not thyself because of him that prospereth in his way, because of the man who bringeth wicked devices to pass.

8 Cease from anger, and forsake wrath; fret not thyself in any wise to do evil.

9 For evil doers shall be cut off: but those that wait on the Lord, they shall inherit the earth.

10 For yet a little while and the wicked shall not be; yea, thou shalt diligently consider his place, and it shall not be.

11 But the meek shall inherit the earth, and shall delight themselves in the abundance of peace.

12 The wicked plotteth against the just, and gnasheth upon him with his teeth.

13 The Lord shall laugh at him; for he seeth that his day is coming.

14 The wicked have drawn out the sword, and have bent their bow, to cast down the poor and needy, and to slay such as be of upright conversation.

15 Their sword shall enter into their own heart, and their bows shall be broken.

16 A little that a righteous man hath is better than the riches of many wicked.

17 For the arms of the wicked shall be broken: but the Lord upholdeth the righteous.

18 The Lord knoweth the days of the upright: and their inheritance shall be forever.

19 They shall not be ashamed in the evil time; and in the days of famine they shall be satisfied.

20 But the wicked shall perish, and the enemies of the Lord shall be as the fat of lambs: they shall consume: into smoke shall they consume away.

21 The wicked borroweth, and payeth not again: but the righteous sheweth mercy, and giveth.

22 For such as be blessed of him shall inherit the earth; and they that be cursed of him shall be cut off.

23 The steps of a good man are ordered by the Lord; and he delighteth in his way.

24 Though he fall, he shall not be utterly cast down: for the Lord upholdeth him with his hand.

25 I have been young, but now am old; yet I have not seen the righteous forsaken, nor his seed begging bread.

26 He is ever merciful and lendeth; and his seed is blessed.

27 Depart from evil, and do good; and dwell for evermore.

28 For the Lord loveth judgment, and forsaketh not his saints; they are preserved for ever: but the seed of the wicked shall be cut off.

29 The righteous shall inherit the land, and dwell therein forever.

30 The mouth of the righteous speaketh wisdom and his tongue talketh of judgment.

31 The law of his God is in his heart: none of his steps shall slide.

32 The wicked watcheth the righteous, and seeketh to slay him.

33 The Lord will not leave him in his hand, nor condemn him when he is judged.

34 Wait on the Lord, and keep his way, and he shall exalt thee to inherit the land: when the wicked are cut off, thou shalt see it.

35 I have seen the wicked in great power, and spreading himself like a green bay tree.

36 Yet he passed away, and, lo, he was not; yea, I sought him, and he could not be found.

37 Mark the perfect man, and behold the upright: for the end of that man is peace.

38 But the transgressor shall be destroyed together; the end of the wicked shall be cut off.

39 But the salvation of the righteous is of the Lord: he is their strength in the time of trouble.

40 And the Lord shall help them, and deliver them: he shall deliver them from the wicked, and save them, because they trust in him.

ROME.

The following item by the Hibernia, is copied from the "Weekly Herald." Compare it with the following: "The merchants of these things which were made rich by her, shall stand afar off, for the fear of her torment weeping and wailing, and saying, alas, alas!" &c. Rev. 18: 15, 16.

THE PAPACY AND THE GREAT POWERS.—The Tablet, a Catholic newspaper, takes a gloomy view of the present state of the Papal dominions, and the dangers which threaten them from several quarters. Amongst the most dangerous of these enemies is said to be Russia, whose emperor is denounced as "the great Antichrist of the north," and from whose rule, when once it includes Italy, is predicted "a hideous persecution and calamity, such as the Church has never yet hardly witnessed." The other enemies of the Papal see, besides its own insurgent subjects, are said to be England and France, and the following is a summary account of its alleged position at the present moment:—"Besides, then, the local and social convulsions of Italy, we have hanging over the Holy See—first, the armed Protectorate of Austria; secondly, the efforts of Russia to gain, at least, so much influence in Rome, as shall prevent the publication of unpleasant documents; thirdly, the endeavors of England to cajole the Pope into putting the screw (spiritual) upon his too ardent subjects in Ireland; and, fourthly, the endeavors of France to secure the same advantage against the Catholic subjects of that kingdom. The Pope, unable to uphold his temporal dominion without Austrian bayonets, and the three most powerful cabinets of Europe applying all their craft and force to compell his Holiness to abuse his spiritual power to the common injury of Christendom! Luckily, the hand of God has carried the Church through as great dangers as the present, and has promised to carry her through all dangers; otherwise we would say that this was no very pleasant prospect.

FUNDAMENTAL PRINCIPLES

ON WHICH

THE SECOND ADVENT CAUSE IS BASED.

I.—The Word of God teaches that this earth is to be regenerated, in the restitution of all things, and restored to its Eden state, as it came from the hand of its Maker before the fall, and is to be the eternal abode of the righteous in their resurrection state.

II.—The only Millennium found in the word of God, is the thousand years which are to intervene between the first and second resurrections, as brought to view in the 20th of Revelation. And the various portions of Scripture which are adduced as evidence of such a period in time, are to have their fulfilment only in the New Earth, wherein dwelleth righteousness.

III.—The only restoration of Israel yet future, is the restoration of the Saints to the New Earth, when "the Lord my God shall come, and all his saints with him.

IV.—The signs which were to precede the Coming of our Saviour, have all been given; and the prophecies have all been fulfilled but those which relate to the coming of Christ, the end of this world, and the restitution of all things.

V.—There are none of the prophetic periods, as we understand them, extending beyond the [Jewish] year 1843.

☞ The above we shall ever maintain as the immutable truths of the word of God, and therefore, till our Lord come, we shall ever look for his return as the next event in historical prophecy.

NOTE.—The above was written in the Jewish year 1843, which has now expired. According to the best chronologers the captivity of Manasseh, the commencement of the seven times, or 2520 years of Levit. 26th, was B. C. 677; also the captivity of Jehoiakim, the commencement of the Great Jubilee, or 2450 years, was B. C. 607; also the decree to rebuild Jerusalem in the seventh of Artaxerxes, the commencement of the 70 weeks and 2300 days, of Daniel 8th and 9th, was given B. C. 457; and also the taking away of Paganism in Rome, the commencement of the 1335 days of Daniel 12th, was about A. D. 508. Reckoning from those several dates, the respective periods can extend only to about the Jewish year 1843. This being ended, our published time is now past; but as we can find no new dates for the events from which we have reckoned these periods, we cannot extend them beyond the time specified, which has been our only time; and yet our faith is as strong as ever, that at the end of those periods the Lord will surely come; while we can only wait for his coming such time as human chronology may have varied from the exact time—continually looking for, and momentarily expecting his appearing. This we do in accordance with Hab. ii. 3,—"For the vision is yet for an appointed time, but at the end" [of the prophetic periods] "it shall speak and not lie; though it tarry," [beyond their apparent termination] "wait for it; because" [when they are fulfilled] "it will surely come, it will not tarry."

WESTERN MIDNIGHT CRY.

CINCINNATI, JUNE 1, 1844.

THE PAPER.

Our paper is nearly TWENTY DOLLARS in debt, and we do not intend that any further debt shall be incurred in its publication. We have labored upon it night and day, and have never taken the first SHILLING from its funds, but have helped it forward with means that our family needed. We do not complain at this; we are WILLING to do it again, when it is in our power. We still say that we are willing to labor gratis, in spreading the truth among the THOUSAND readers of the "Midnight Cry," if the Lord's servants that have the means, make provision to pay for it. If any poor wanderer strays away into THE PIT, for want of this light, we are determined by the grace of God, that the sin shall not lie at our door.

LECTURES.

Lectures will be delivered, and prayer and conference meetings held each evening in the week, except Saturday and Sabbath, at the Engine House on Fifth street, a few doors west of John.

Lectures will be delivered at College Hall on Sabbath next, at 11 o'clock A. M., and at 3 and 8 o'clock P. M.

THE MEETINGS.

The rainy weather set in after Bro. Fitch and Brewer left us, so that we have had but few meetings at the Tent. A week ago last Sabbath it rained during the day, and our meetings were held at College Hall. Three meetings were held at the Tent during that week, and notwithstanding the unpleasantness of the weather, were well attended. On Sabbath morning last it rained, and we held our meeting at College Hall. In the afternoon and evening we lectured at the Tent, where large congregations assembled, though the weather remained unsettled. The lecture in the afternoon upon the Fall of Babylon, aroused the ire of a number of Catholics that were present, who spake "great words," but we well understood that they could do nothing more.

On Monday the Tent was taken down, and our meetings are held at present in the Engine House on Fifth street, west of John. The recent troubles in Philadelphia, and news from Rome, has produced much excitement in the community generally. The interest upon the subject of our Lord's soon expected return, we think has never been greater than at the present time. The undecided are becoming decided, either for, or against the doctrine; while believers are becoming more confident in their hopes and expectations of soon seeing the King in his beauty.

☞ The "Daily Cincinnati Gazette," has copied from our paper, No. 9, Vol. 3, the sermon of Bro. C. Fitch, entire, with the following editorial remarks.

THE SERMON.

"A sermon of brother Fitch's will be found on the outside of this day's paper. We publish it by special request. He and his friends think we have been very hard upon them in noticing certain cases of madness produced, as alleged by their preaching, and demand, in justice, that they may be heard. Agreed. So friends, if disposed, turn to the outer page, and there read brother Fitch's discourse."

The proprietor, very kindly, published the discourse in question, at our request; and we made the complaints as stated. So far as Bro. Fitch is concerned, he had nothing to do with it, and knew not what the Gazette had, or had not published.

As it is our business to benefit our fellow men, they will please accept our thanks for placing the article before their numerous readers. We are not in the habit of giving puffs, but we think we may, with safety say, the Gazette of Tuesday morning, May 28th, contains more gospel truth, than can be found in any, or all of the daily papers in this city put together; or than can be found in a cart load of their own back numbers.

☞ It is possible that the request for Second Advent lectures in the Lutheran Chapel at Milville, may be complied with, as soon as Bro. Brewer arrives. The brethren will soon be advised upon the subject, by letter or some other way.

Bro. Goodrich writes us from Licking county, Ohio, May 23d. He had spent about two weeks in that place, lecturing in the Methodist and Disciples churches, and in a school house in an adjoining neighborhood. The congregations were large, and a prospect of good, by the aid of some opposition that was raised, as usual.

THE TABERNACLE.

At a meeting of the Second Advent Association, of the city of Cincinnati, held at the Great Tent, on Monday evening, May 21st, 1844, after a season of prayer, Bro. J. Hamilton was called to the Chair, and E. Jacobs appointed Secretary.

The Chairman stated the object of the meeting, which was to examine the propriety of erecting a Tabernacle, or temporary place of worship, for the use of the Association. After a short discussion it was

Resolved, That in view of being deprived of a place in which to worship, free from exposure to the weather, that we approve of the plan of erecting a temporary building for such purpose.

Resolved, That a subscription list be now opened in order to ascertain the probable means that can be raised for such purpose.

(Here follows a list of subscriptions amounting to $402, which we understand was increased to about $1000, before the close of the week.)

Resolved, That a committee of five be appointed, with instructions to proceed immediately in the erection of a perfectly plain building—eighty feet square, walls of brick, one foot in thickness, and twelve feet in height; with a square, or hip roof. Brethren T. Ball, W. Swain, J. Jones, D. Moore, and J. Perkins were appointed said committee.

Resolved, That Brothers J. Hamilton, J. D. Dwyer, and D. Moore, be appointed a committee to take charge of the subscription lists.

Resolved, That we accede to the proposals of Mr. O. Britton, to lease his lot of ground, 85 feet on Seventh street, 80 feet on John, and also bounded on a certain alley running parallel with Seventh street, at the rate of $250 per year, to be paid quarterly.

Resolved, That a committee of seven be appointed to execute the lease of said lot of ground in trust, for the use of the Second Advent Association of the city of Cincinnati. Brethren J. Jones, D. Moore, J. Smith, J. Gorrell, W. Winby, J. Hamilton, and J. Perkins were appointed such committee.

Resolved, That we adjourn. Prayer by Bro. Jones.

J. HAMILTON, Chairman.

E. JACOBS, Secretary.

We confess that we have had our misgivings relative to erecting such a place for meetings, notwithstanding we were entirely thrown out of a place; but the opposition and wrath, that this move has awakened with those professors of religion that have been warmest in their opposition to the Bible doctrine of Christ's speedy advent leads us to see that the hand of God is in the measure. We have been driven to the measure against our wills and dispositions. If the brethren could have rented a place such as would accommodate our congregations at any price, even beyond the bounds of reason, we think they would have done it in preference to building; but it could not be done, and the Tabernacle is consequently going up, but we sincerely hope and pray that the Lord will come before it is done. If he does not, we expect, should the weather be favorable, that it will be ready to meet in on Sabbath after next. And if we never meet in it but once, we do not believe we shall ever have occasion to regret the work of building it. We assure our friends abroad, that from present appearances, there is more sympathy among the sects in Cincinnati for the Papal chair, than for the Second Advent Tabernacle.

Some of the talk that we have heard, runs thus, "They have formed themselves into a Church, and are building a Church." "It is just what I anticipated." "It is a practical illustration that they do not believe what they profess." These sentiments not only stand self condemned, but they illustrate the dishonesty of those that make them. Some of these accusers a week or two since were pouring out their imprecations upon us for flocking out to the tent on the commons by hundreds and thousands, exposed to both sun and rain. Because we done THAT, we are FOOLS. Now, because we are preparing a temporary shelter, a little more convenient, we are, in their estimation, knaves. Again, they are the ones, that do not believe what they profess, for not long since they said that this mania of Second Advention or Millerism, would all go by the board after the 21st of March, and now they tell us that, building a church is "just what they anticipated."

Furthermore, we are not building a Second Advent Church, for that is God's building—made of living stones, and its register is the book of life. It is upon this building that we are at work, and all we have to say to such medlers is, "Why should the work cease, whilst we leave it and COME DOWN TO YOU."

We have said this much once for all upon this subject, and could not well have said less, in view of the great amount of inquiries as to our future movements.

The following is a copy of the last official document of the Springfield Presbytery. Bro. Worley, whose remarks follow the article, has penned it down from memory, and consequently there may be some slight deviations from the original.

From these proceedings, originated that numerous and once devoted body of people, known in this section by the name of "Christians" or "Christian Baptists" as they are sometimes called. We are informed that they have never had any other written articles of association, than this "last Will and Testament," &c.

This being the fact, our readers will see how far the so called "Christian Church" in this city, have departed from Law, as well as Gospel, in expelling, or disowning the best part of their members for believing that Christ will soon come, and for attending the Second Advent meetings.

The real death of the said Presbytery is rather questionable. Seeing its danger after the sentence of death had gone forth, it probably fled to Cincinnati, and assumed the name of "Christian," and has been for many years a respectable, useful citizen; but is now playing some of its old pranks again.

SPRINGFIELD PRESBYTERY.

Springfield Presbytery, sitting at Cane Ridge, Bourbon co., Ky., June 4th, 1804.

In more than ordinary health, growing in strength and size daily; but knowing that it is appointed unto all delegated bodies once to die, as it is written, "That which THOU sowest is not quickened except it die," and considering the life of every such body very uncertain, Do make and ordain this their last Will and Testament, in the manner and form following.

1st. We will that this body die, be dissolved, and sink into the body of Christ at large; for "there is one body and one spirit, even as ye are called in one hope of your calling." Paul.

2d. We will that our power of making laws for the government of the church, and executing them by delegated authority, forever cease, that the people may have free access to the Bible, and adopt "the law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus."

3d. We will that candidates for the gospel ministry henceforth study the Holy Scriptures with fervent prayer, and obtain license from God to preach the simple gospel, with the Holy Ghost sent down from heaven; without any mixture of vain philosophy, or traditions of men; and let no man take this honor to himself, but he that is called of God, as was Aaron.

4th. We will that the church resume her native right of internal government—try her candidates for the gospel ministry, as to their gravity—acquaintance with experimental religion—aptness to teach, and admit no proof of their call, but Christ speaking in them, and that each church choose her own minister, and support him by a free-will offering, without any written call or subscription.

5th. We will that the people pray more and dispute less; and, while they see the signs of the times, look up, and confidently expect that their "redemption draweth nigh."

6th. We will that the people take the Bible for their Way Bill, or guide to Heaven, and as many as are offended with other books that stand in competition with the Bible, cast them into the fire if they choose; for it is better to have but one book and enter into Heaven, than having many to be cast into hell.

7th. We will that our weak brethren who may have been wishing to make the Presbytery of Springfield their king, and wot not what has now become of it, betake themselves to the Rock of Ages, and follow Jesus for the future.

8th. We will that J. A—— the author of two letters lately published by him in Lexington, be encouraged in his zeal to destroy partyism.

9th. We will that our hypast conduct, be examined into by the Synod of Kentucky, and that she examine the conduct of all who may have been suspected of departing from the Westminster confession of faith, and that she expell every such suspected HERETIC immediately, that the oppressed may go free, and taste the sweets of gospel liberty.

10th. Finally. We will that our sister body's read their Bibles carefully, and see their fate therein determined, and prepare for DEATH before it is too late.

Springfield Presbytery SEAL.

JOHN THOMPSON, ROBERT MARSHALL, JOHN DUNLAVY, RICHARD MCNAMER, DAVID PURVIANCE, Witnesses.

John Dunlavy, and Richard McNamer, in the month of March, 1805, giving heed to seducing spirits and doctrines of devils, forbidding to marry, &c., which things Paul said would be in the LATTER DAYS, went with the people called Shakers. John Thompson and Robert Marshall, in 1810, went back to the flesh pots of Egypt, or in other words, took the confession of faith, and its whole contents. B. W. Stone and David Purviance, are yet living, and cleave to the Bible as their only rule of faith and practice. With many more of their elder brethren, they have never lorded it over the heritage of God, or the consciences of their brethren; but have truly been examples to the flock or church of God. Other younger men, however, have since grown up, imitating the example of the younger Pharaoh who knew not Joseph, and from the course some of them have been pursuing of late, that they think they have power to expell members from the body of Christ—the church, for searching his holy word, and calling on God for wisdom to understand it. They have disowned brethren for no other crime, than believing that "the day of the Lord is at hand." May God open their blind eyes to see that the day is indeed at the door, when he will come, and cut such servants assunder, and give them their portion with hypocrites and unbelievers: because they are beating their fellow servants, and casting them out for nothing only because they will believe the plain testimony of God, rather than the constructions men put upon it. If this is not requiring men to bestow more honor upon the creature, than upon the Creator, I know not what it is. That God may show them their folly before the master of the house rises up, and forever shuts the door against them, is my prayer.

COMMUNICATIONS.

LETTER FROM BRO. COOK.

JACKSONVILLE, May 20th, 1844.

DEAR BRO. JACOBS:

Having an attack of ague and fever, which seized me the first instant, I have been detained in this region; the long continued rains are now obstructing my progress. I find calls multiplying however just round me so that had I the strongest constitution, I could keep myself weary in doing only what providence calls me to do.

I was hindered from preaching only a few days. As soon as possible I began again, though my physical energies are exhausted.

There is a truly interesting company in Springfield. I had the pleasure of baptising about thirteen in that place. Bro's. Chittenden and Stevens are remembered with much affection through all this region, so far as I have gone. In this place we have had good meetings, though the weather has been very unfavorable.

My conviction is that we have nothing to do but labor, looking all the time for Jesus' glorious appearing.—Amen, even so come Lord Jesus.

Yours in the blessed hope,

J. B. COOK.

LETTER FROM BRO. KIMBALL.

CINCINNATI, May 16th, 1844.

DEAR BRO. JACOBS:

Three weeks ago yesterday, I left this place for a short tour in Indiana. Took the canal to Laurel, conversed freely with the passengers, both ladies and gentlemen, on the subject of our Saviour's advent at hand; who did not attempt to disprove it. Stopt at Brookville an hour, which time I improved by circulating about 50 tracts up and down the principal street. Then proceeded to Laurel, where I met with Bro. Thomas P. Haerle, who is a local preacher in the M. Episcopal Church, but warm in the advent cause, and has to encounter much opposition; but is firm and unyielding. I left some publications with him, and a promise to return in a week or two; then proceeded on to Rushville, the seat of Rush county, seventy miles west of this place, and 30 miles this side of Indianapolis. Here I was kindly received by the citizens, put up at brother Carr's where I made my home the year I traveled that circuit—at this house my reception was kind as in former days, sister Carr took my chart of her own accord and hung it up in the hall in open view to all that were coming and going, from Friday evening till Monday morning. On Sabbath morning I went up to see Bro. Smith, the stationed minister of the M. E. Church, was kindly received, invited to attend him to the class, then to take the lead, then to preach at night, all which I consented to with cheerfulness. The house was well filled, and I read, and compared the 10th and 11th chapters of Revelation with the 12th of Daniel,

At the close, the preacher in charge arose, and said, all is well enough save knowing any thing about the time of the end: this God in his wisdom, and for our good has put within his own power. Christ says no man knoweth the day nor the hour. And as the Bible teaches us that one day with the Lord is as a thousand years, and a thousand years as one day; therefore it was impossible to know within a thousand years of the time. Who among all those, who unite to give their power unto the beast; and who honor the mother of harlots, and her daughters, do not see the irresistible force of the preacher's argument. Next morning I called on him with my chart. This he turned to ridicule, and became very jealous for the honor of his mother, the M. E. Church. I saw it would be lost labor for me to try to get that house any more; so, I applied to the Presbyterian minister for the use of his house—he said he had no right to let it to any one, but I might see the trustees.

I did so: and was referred from one to the other, each disclaiming the right to let it go. I then applied to the sheriff, who let me have the court house, without any hesitation, where I lectured twice to a very attentive congregation. On Monday rode to Burlington, lectured in the M. E. Church seven miles west of Rushville, and on Tuesday night lectured in a public school house in the neighborhood of Bro. Bracken's. This Bro. Bracken is a local preacher in the M. E. Church, of first rate standing, as a christian, but by the Laodiceans whose craft is in danger, he is set down on the insane list, nearly crazy as I am, and as birds of a feather &c., we were much delighted in each others company. He became a subscriber to the Western Midnight Cry. I think his mind is about made up to leave the lukewarm establishment. He helped me on my way with his beast, and when we parted gave me money to help the truth further. I then came down to Laurel, and not finding a boat ready, I was by Bro. Hadric prevailed on to stay and attend a two day's Second Advent meeting, five miles from town. The meeting house was principally built by those who are now looking for their Lord, and is safely deeded to the M. E. Church. There are three or four local preachers in this neighborhood, all of whom are looking for the blessed hope, and glorious appearing of the great God, and our Saviour Jesus Christ. May the Lord help them to arise and discharge their duty, though they should, like Amos, be reproved for droping their word towards the king's chapel, Amos vii. 12–13. I am not able to express the interest I feel for these dear brethren, and I know too, that the salvation of their neighborhood, yea, surrounding neighborhoods, under God depends on them. His truth is already like a fire shut up in their bones, Jer. xx. 9. I lectured in Laurel in the M. E. Church, but was advised by the stationed preacher not to take the chart—he attended, and closed the meeting. At the two days meeting I lectured four times, Bro. Hadric once.

I can truly say that the last three weeks have been the happiest of my life. I have thought much and often on what I have heard you say, about having the truth of this doctrine written on the heart. And I think I can say, that I have about as strong an assurance, that the time of our Lord's second advent is at hand, as that, through his grace I have passed from death unto life. May the Lord make us all consistent believers in, and co-workers together with him.

Yours in the blessed hope,

ISAAC KIMBALL.

FOR THE WESTERN MIDNIGHT CRY.

Wait we for the blessed Saviour,
Wait the trumpets joyful sound;
Panteth Lord, our souls to greet thee,
On thy throne of glory crowned.

Full of hope we hail thy Advent,
Hail the world's resplendant heir;
Hail the joys of thy salvation,
Filled with peace and freed from care.

Tardy fly the winged moments,
Swiftest wines with languor move,
Lightnings flash and sights quick vision,
All are slow compared to love.

Sure 'tis some seraphic sunbeam,
Essence pure that holds control;
Spark angelic sped from heaven,
Which transforms and cheers the soul.

Spirit animating spirit,
Life inspiring life divine,
Love engendering love electric,
Flowing from the Living Vine.

LETTER FROM BRO. KENT.

CLEVELAND, May 10, 1844.

DEAR BRO. JACOBS—

While I am informed through the medium of the Western Midnight Cry, (which I prize more highly than any other publication,) of the faithful labors and glorious success of the dear brethren at Cincinnati, of late; it so reminds me of the many precious seasons we enjoyed together last winter, so sweet to my soul, that though now absent in body, yet I participate with you in the rich favors you are enjoying. We rejoice to hear that you are strong in faith, still looking for the coming One. He will soon, very soon appear. The prophetic history in Daniel and John, the signs foretold by prophets, apostles and the Lord Jesus, the numbers given to Moses, Daniel and John, all proclaim his coming "nigh at the door." "He is faithful that promised." "Firm as a rock his truth shall stand, while rolling years shall cease to move." Now to give up our faith in the personal, glorious, speedy advent of our Lord, would be in us as inconsistent and foolish, as it would have been in Noah to have forsaken his ark the sixth day of the seven. Let us, like Noah, wait. For thus we are commanded, "if the vision tarry, wait for it, because it will surely come, it will not tarry." In our reckoning there may be a mistake of a few months; but in God's reckoning there is no mistake. It is given to us under oath in Dan. xii. 7, and John x. 5, 6, 7, and it will surely come at the time appointed. I do not, cannot doubt it.

The vision is written on tables so plain,
To doubt it, in me, would surely be vain,
And wherever I go, o'er the valley and plain,
From preaching this vision I cannot refrain.

Since I came to Cleveland, besides preaching here every week more or less, I have visited Medina, Strongville, Akron and Detroit. The brethren in Akron enjoy the very efficient labors of Bro. Pickands. They have come out of Babylon—built themselves a convenient, temporary house of worship; have no creed but the Word of God; are united; strong in faith, and looking for immediate redemption. My soul was greatly refreshed while with them.

Last week I visited the brethren in Detroit, Mich.—They are few in number, but love the Lord and his appearing. I labored there three evenings, then returned to Cleveland. About half the inhabitants of Detroit are Roman Catholics. The greater part of the other half, so far as religion is concerned, are but a shade better. They have rejected the Bible, concluding it not fit to be used in their Common Schools. Thus the Little Horn is prevailing.

The brethren in Cleveland are still looking, prayerfully looking for the Lord. They meet at present in the Congregational House, but if time continue, expect to meet in the tabernacle soon. It will probably be finished in about three weeks. The Bible is their creed and only rule of life. Meetings are ordinarily interesting. Last Sunday one week four more were baptised, and added to their number.

By a letter received from Bro. Fitch, we learn that he was to be in Warren yesterday, Sunday. We expect him here as soon as Tuesday or Wednesday. We wish Bro. Brewer and his wife were coming with them.—Cannot they come this way? Bro. Galusha has not arrived here yet. Hence you perceive that I have not gone East yet. Perhaps it is all right. I expect however to be in Buffalo next Sunday.

Yours, in the faith and hope of the Gospel of Jesus,

J. H. KENT.

FOR THE WESTERN MIDNIGHT CRY.

Lamb of God, thou died to save us,
Woke us from the death of sin,
Shed thy holy spirit on us,
Fix'd the seal of faith within.

Taught by thy divine anointing,
Truth we know as 'tis in thee,
At the mercy seat atoning,
Pascal Lamb, O keep us free.

Daily tinge our hearts with crimson,
Let no trace of guilt be there,
Let the hosts that deal thy judgments
Pass us by, our households spare.

Shafts of death and destruction,
Soon will fill the heated air;
Vengeance, wrath, and indignation,
Shake the earth and make it bare.

Thunder, fire and wind commingle,
Lightning, storm, and hail descend,
Mountains, rocks, and rivers sever,
Ocean, earth, and islands rend.

A SINNER.

HYMN.

This world explore from shore to shore,
'Tis like a baseless vision;
Its lofty domes and brilliant ore,
Its gems and crowns are mean and poor,
There's nothing rich but heaven.

Fine gold will change and diamonds fade,
Swift wings to wealth are given,
All varying time our forms invade;
The seasons roll, light sinks in shade;
There's nothing lasts but heaven.

Empires decay and nations die,
Bright hopes to winds are given;
The vernal flowers in ruin lie,
Death conquers all below the sky,
There's nothing lives but Heaven.

Creation's mighty fabric all
Shall be to atoms riven;
The skies consume, the planets fall,
Convulsions rock this earthly ball,
There's nothing firm but Heaven.

A pilgrim stranger here I roam,
From place to place I'm driven;
My friends are gone and I'm in gloom,
The earth is all a lonely tomb,
I have no home but Heaven.

The clouds disperse, the light appears,
My sins are all forgiven,
Triumphant grace has quelled my fears;
Roll on thou sun, fly swift my years,
I'm on my way to Heaven.

Should war's turmoil, and passions boil,
Like Etna's burning lavin,
Should sins and wrath the nations sweep,
A tempest o'er the howling deep;
I'll not be long from Heaven.

HYMN.

We see the bright signs of his coming revealed,
And hear the rejoicings of those that are sealed,
And lift up our heads and unite in the song,
That soon the bright harps of the sky shall prolong
He's coming he's coming no longer delay,
But rise, trim your lamps and be hasting away,
Unspotted and holy each garment must be,
And the soul from all sin and entanglement free.

To meet him in glory my soul is on fire,
And filled with the raptures of holy desire;
Oh haste blessed Jesus in majesty come,
And take thy redeemed to their heavenly home.
The glory already seems gleaming on high,
Be ready to meet with the Lord in the sky,
Pray on till the moment of conflict is o'er,
Pray on for our sorrows will soon be no more.

O hasten thy coming blest Saviour we pray!
Speed the wheels of thy chariot, and make no delay!
As strangers and pilgrims in sadness we roam,
We're waiting, we're longing to meet thee at home.
O put on thy glories blest Bridegroom and come,
Let the deserts be glad and the wilderness bloom,
And the saints who've been wash'd from their sins in thy blood,
Shall exclaim, looking upward, "Lo, this is our God!"

NEW BIRTH.

Its Necessity. Man is diseased, and will eventually die past all remedy, unless there be a new principle of life begotten in him, as really as there was any principle of life in him when born into the world. When God created him at the first, the life by which he lived, rendered him infinitely happy. 'Every tree of the garden' ministered to his most extended wants, except one, of which he was forbidden to eat, 'for' said his Creator, 'in the day that thou eatest thereof, thou shalt surely die;' (Gen. 2: 17.) Or as the margin reads, dying thou shalt die; from which language we can understand no more, nor less, than that in the day he transgressed the commandment of God he should become diseased, from which he would sooner or later die: Dying thou shalt die: or in the day thou eatest thereof thou shalt begin to die. He did thus violate the above command, for 'when the woman saw that the tree was good for food, and that it was pleasant to the eyes, and a tree desired to make one wise; she took of the fruit thereof, and did eat; and gave also unto her husband with her, and he did eat.' Gen. 3: 6. That day the penalty attached to the commandment was fulfilled; but that day he did not die, for after that he lived with his wife who bore children; (Gen. 4: 1,) but on that day he did begin to die, according to the sense of the text as conveyed in the language of the margin. That all are involved in the same 'dying state,' see Rom. 5: 12, 'Wherefore as by one man sin entered into the world, and death by sin; and so death passed upon all men, for that all have sinned.' For the order, in which this 'dying' is brought on, and finally finished in death, see James 1: 15, 'Then, when lust hath conceived it bringeth forth sin; and sin, when it is FINISHED, bringeth forth DEATH. Unless it can be proved that our first parents finished sinning in the day they eat, &c., nothing more can be shown than that they then commenced 'dying.' James, is undoubtedly right in placing death at the end of man's transgression, and those that tell us 'man is dead spiritually' when he begins his course of sin, are undoubtedly wrong. The final execution of the sentence is only revoked through the new birth, or being 'born again.' Thus 'being made free from sin, and become servants to God, ye have your fruit unto holiness, and the end everlasting life. For the wages of sin [to be paid when the work is done] is death: but the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord,' Rom. 6: 22, 23. Yes. Through Jesus Christ our Lord! for he it is, that 'hath abolished death and brought life and immortality to light through the gospel,' 2d Tim. 1: 10. The manner in which he hath abolished death, is abundantly explained to be through faith in Jesus Christ. We learn from 1 Cor. 15: 56, 57, that, 'the sting of death is sin; and the strength of sin is the law. But thanks to God who giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ.' We are frequently told that the sacrifice of Christ, has actually placed all mankind in possession of eternal life, or of an eternal conscious existence; but in the room of one pointed text to prove such position, we find abundant testimony like the following, 'That as sin hath reigned unto death, even so might grace reign THROUGH RIGHTEOUSNESS unto eternal life, by Jesus Christ our Lord,' Rom. 5: 21. Ag in, 'To be carnally minded, is DEATH; but to be spiritually minded, is LIFE and peace,' Rom. 8: 6. Also, verse 13, 'For if ye live after the flesh, ye shall DIE: but if ye through the Spirit do mortify the deeds of the body, ye shall LIVE.' To escape the penalty of the law, (death) a character must be formed which, in this state of probation, accords with that of Christ, John 3: 14. 'We know that we have passed from death unto life, because we love the brethren. He that loveth not his brother abideth in DEATH.' And in death there is no remembrance of God—in the grave none give him thanks, Psa. 6: 5.

All will be raised from the dead, but all will not be freed from the penalty of the law, Rom. 14: 10. 'We shall all stand before the judgment seat of Christ.' 2d Cor. 5: 10. 'For we must all appear before the judgment seat of Christ; that every one may receive the things done in his body, according to that he hath done, whether it be good or bad.' Acts 21: 15, 'There shall be a resurrection of the dead, both of the just and unjust.' But this is not a release of the unjust from death, for in Rev. 20: 13-15, we read, 'And the sea gave up the dead which were in it; and death and hell delivered up the dead which were in them: and they were judged, every man according to their works. And death and hell were cast into the lake of fire. This is the SECOND DEATH. And whosoever was not found written in the book of life was cast into the lake of fire.' Here is the execution of the penalty of the law upon all that are not born again—upon all that are not written in the book of life. When man is born into this world, he 'is born unto trouble, as the sparks fly upward,' (Job 5: 7,) and 'Except a man be born again, he cannot see the kingdom of God,' John 3: 3. There is no other way of escape—the language is imperative, 'Ye MUST be born again,' ver. 7.

The Process.

The process through which this being 'born again' is accomplished, will be briefly considered. It is not of blood, for that constitutes all the life we have in this 'dying' state; and it scatters death through our whole system. John 1: 12, 13, 'But as many as received him, to them gave he power to become the sons of God, even to them that believe on his name: which were born NOT OF BLOOD, nor of the WILL OF THE FLESH, nor of the will of man, but of God.'

The first agent in working this change—causing man to pass from death unto life, is the word of God. 1 Peter 1: 23, 'Being born again, not of corruptible seed, but of incorruptible, BY THE WORD OF GOD, which liveth and abideth for ever.' The LIVING word; the word of God attended by the Spirit of God: for the 'letter (alone) killeth, but the Spirit giveth life,' 2d Cor. 3: 6. The saving efficacy of the living word, is seen in the expression of David, Psa. 17: 4, 'Concerning the works of men, by the word of thy lips I have kept me from the paths of the destroyer.' The absence of that word (not in its letter only, for he undoubtedly had access to that at all times) caused him thus to lament 'Mine eyes fail for thy salvation, and for the word of thy righteousness,' Psa. 119: 123. Giving heed to the word is indispensible, in the work of being 'born again.' Prov. 13: 13, 'Whoso despiseth the word, shall be destroyed: but he that feareth the commandment shall be rewarded.' To prove, that in being born of the word, something more than the letter as it exists in the Bible is spoken of, let the reader consult Matt. 13: 19—23, 'When any one heareth the word of the kingdom, and understandeth it not, then cometh the wicked one, and catcheth away that which was sown in his heart.' It is the word of God, as sown in the heart by 'the Son of Man' alone, which can work life IN us. If that word be received INTO the heart, and is cherished there; bringing forth the fruits enumerated in Gal. 5: 22, 23; then it is one of the powerful agents, that works in us a new principle of life.

Begetting us to a new life, is a work in itself, over which we have no control, further than that of submitting to God, that he may perform the work. James 1: 18, 'Of his own will begat he us with the word of truth, that we should be a kind of first fruits of his creatures. The word of God, not alone, but in the hands of his faithful servants, accomplishes this work. 1 Cor. 4: 15, 'For though ye have ten thousand instructors in Christ, yet have ye not many fathers: for in Christ Jesus I have begotten you through the gospel.' While the written word is before us, those words must be spoken to the inmost soul by the Son of God himself, in order to create lost man a 'new creature in Christ Jesus.' John 6: 63, 'It is the Spirit that quickeneth; the flesh profiteth nothing: the words that I SPEAK UNTO YOU, they are spirit, and they are LIFE.'

If the word of God be such an all-important agent, in accomplishing the work of being 'born again,' how necessary to heed the instructions of Paul to the Ephesians 5: 6, 'Let no man deceive you with vain words: for because of these things cometh the wrath of God upon the children of unbelief.' (See margin.) O how many are fitted for the day of wrath, in consequence of being deceived with vain words! And how easy to avoid that storm of wrath, by testing all the words we hear from men, by the unalterable, soul changing word of God!

The next agent brought to view in the Bible, to accomplish the work of being 'born again' is the Holy Ghost. John 3: 5, 'Jesus answered, (Nicodemus) verily, verily, I say unto thee, except a man be born of water, and of the SPIRIT, he cannot enter into the kingdom of God.' The work of begetting again to a new life, by the Spirit, is an instantaneous one—performed by Christ, and is called the baptism of the Holy Ghost; which as completely cleanses, and renovates the whole inner man, as the washing of water does the outer man. There must be a moment from which an individual exists in a state of embryo, before they can be born, and grow up to be a man; which figure is used in Eph. 4: 15, 'Grow up into him in all things.' And 1 Peter 2: 2, 'As new born babes, desire the sincere milk of the word, that ye may grow thereby.' The work of conferring the Holy Ghost, is the prerogative of Christ. Its application is called baptism, which shows the perfection, as well as the suddenness of the work. John, by the spirit of prophecy, testified to this work in Matt. 3: 11, 'I indeed baptize you with water unto repentance: but he that cometh after me is mightier than I, whose shoes I am not worthy to bear: he shall baptize you with the Holy Ghost, and with fire.' John 1: 33, 'And I knew him not: but he that sent me to baptize with water, the same said unto me, upon whom thou shalt see the spirit descending and REMAINING on him, the same is he which baptiseth with the Holy Ghost.'' Acts 2: 3, 4, 'And there appeared unto them cloven tongues like as of fire, and it sat upon each of them, and they were all filled with the Holy Ghost, and began to speak with other tongues, as the Spirit gave them utterance.' To get rid of the truth that Christ does in these days, baptise with the Holy Ghost internally, as well as man with water externally, this text is quoted to show that the baptism of the Holy Ghost was an external application only, while the expression, 'They were all FILLED with the Holy Ghost,' is lost sight of, as being the most important part of the work accomplished. 1 Cor. 12: 13, 'For by ONE SPIRIT, are we all BAPTISED INTO ONE BODY, whether we be Jews or Gentiles, whether we be bond or free; and have all been made to drink into one spirit.' In what way can we get into Christ, but by being baptised into him? And the agency of that baptism is not inferred in this text, but plainly stated. The Holy Ghost thus becomes a principle of life in the believer, as may be seen from Mark 13: 11, 'But when they shall lead you, and deliver you up, take no thought beforehand what ye shall speak, neither do ye premeditate: but whatsoever shall be given you in that hour, that speak ye: for it is not ye that speak, but the Holy Ghost.' Its real substance was prefigured, when it descended in a bodily shape upon the Saviour at his baptism, Luke 3: 22. The Holy Ghost was conferred, under the preaching of the doctrines of Christ, upon those that believed, and at the moment when their faith embraced Christ. Acts 10: 44, 'While Peter yet spake these words, the Holy Ghost fell on all them which heard the word.' Or upon all that heeded, or in their hearts believed it. (See Matt. 13: 9.) Peter, in narrating the above circumstance said, 'And as I began to speak, the Holy Ghost fell on them, as on us at the beginning. Then remembered I the word of the Lord, how that he said, John indeed baptized with water; but ye shall be baptised with the Holy Ghost,' Acts 11: 15, 16.

The faith of the church relative to the gift and operations of the Holy Ghost, has much more sadly degenerated, than it has relative to the doctrine of the Second Advent of Christ. The first is denied in toto, while the latter is only spiritualized away. If it was the privilege of the disciples to be 'filled with joy and with the Holy Ghost,' (Acts 13: 52,) where is that privilege denied to the disciples of Christ in later days? Again, we say where? There was no baptism with the Holy Ghost before the ascension of Christ, for he told them, 'If I go not away, the Comforter [which is the Holy Ghost,' John 14: 20.] will not come unto you; but if I depart, I will send him unto you.' The ordinance of baptism contained in the commission of Christ to his disciples, Matt. 28: 19, 20, by a fair inference was to continue 'unto the end of the world.' The gift of the Holy Ghost by a plain declaration is to 'abide with you forever,' John 14: 16. We do not wish to be understood as saying, that the people of God, before the ascension of Christ, did not enjoy the Holy Ghost. They did enjoy it. They prophesied and wrote under its influence, for it is written, 'Well spake the Holy Ghost by Esaias the prophet unto our fathers,' Acts 28: 25. And the prophecy came not 'by the will of man: but holy men of God spake as they were moved by the Holy Ghost,' 2d Peter 1: 21. But they received it in the exercise of a faith like unto that of Abrahams, through the deeds of the law: but since the ascension of Christ, men are baptised with it, through 'the hearing of faith,' Gal. 3: 2. The Holy Ghost SANCTIFIES the possessor, Rom. 15: 16, 'That I should be the minister of Jesus Christ to the Gentiles, ministering the gospel of God, that the offering up of the Gentiles might be acceptable, being sanctified by the Holy Ghost.' It is no vain shadow, but a blessed reality—a principle of far more importance to the believer than every outward form, or than even life itself. 'What! know ye not that your body is the temple of the Holy Ghost which is in you, which ye have of God, and ye are not your own?' 1 Cor. 6: 19. So it is of as much more value than our lives, as the TENANT is of more value than the TENEMENT. So indispensable is it, that we are saved by it. Titus 3: 5, 'Not by works of righteousness which we have done, but according to his mercy he saved us, by the washing of regeneration, and renewing of the Holy Ghost.' However pure a man may be cleansed, from every evil way, without the RENEWING of the Holy Ghost, he is still in his 'dying state.' The Holy Ghost, as well as the word of God, is a witness to the believer, of the work of Christ in his salvation. Heb. 10: 14, 15. It is also our EARNEST, pledge, or title, to the everlasting inheritance. Eph. 1: 13, 14, "In whom also, after that ye believed, ye were sealed with that Holy Spirit of promise, which is the EARNEST of our inheritance, until the redemption of the purchased possession, unto the praise of his glory.' 2d Cor. 1: 21, 22, 'Now he which establisheth us with you in Christ, and has also sealed us, and given the earnest of the Spirit in our hearts.' The life thus inspired in us, groans to break forth from its embryo state, as it will do at the Resurrection from among the dead. Rom. 8: 23, 'Even we ourselves, groan within ourselves, waiting for the adoption, to wit, the redemption of our body.' The word of God as contained in the Bible alone, is no more title to an heavenly inheritance; for, then might the bold blasphemer say, under the influence of fear, with the Bible in his hand 'this is my hope,' and when a contrary influence arose, his hope would flee. The Holy Ghost—the Spirit of God, so formed in the heart as to become a new principle of life—struggling, groaning, waiting, looking, for victory over the little ALL of life, we have in our 'dying' state; panting for immortality, (Rom. 2: 7,) and finally becoming clothed with it in the first resurrection, 1 Cor. 15: 52, 53.—The indwelling of the Holy Ghost is that which constitutes, in connection with the other agents, our title to immortality, and an inheritance in the New Earth.

The next agency brought to view, in accomplishing the work of being 'born again' is Water. John 3: 5, 'Except a man be born of WATER, and of the Spirit he cannot enter into the kingdom of God.' It has been held by many that this being 'born of water' is a work accomplished by baptism with water under the commission Christ gave to his disciples, Matt. 28: 19; But there are scriptural objections to this view. There are no exceptions made in this text: and if the outward ordinance be what is brought to view, every man, no matter under what circumstance, that ends his probation without being baptised with water, never enters into the kingdom of God. In such case, the poor thief upon the cross is lost—hopelessly lost. Look also at the perfect pattern of christian character that our Saviour gives, Matt. 19: 14, 'Suffer little children, and forbid them not, to come unto me: for OF SUCH is the kingdom of heaven.' The great mass of the subjects of God's kingdom is made up of such. If the outward ordinance was absolutely essential to the salvation of this class, Christ could not have forgotten to say 'of such' (after they have been baptised with water) 'is the kingdom,' &c., knowing, as he must, if the outward ordinance be what is alluded to in the text, that every child of man, unbaptised with water, was eternally lost. If the words of Jesus here point to the outward ordinance, then the sick and dying, the prisoner and the exile, that are placed beyond the reach of that ordinance, must lie down in despair, for, 'Except a man be born of (baptised with) water, * * * * he can not enter into the kingdom of God.' In vain then has Paul said to the Galatians 2: 16, 'Knowing that a man is not justified by the works of the law, but by the faith of Jesus Christ, even we have believed in Jesus Christ, that we might be justified by the faith of Christ, and not by the works of the law: for by the works of the law shall no flesh be justified.' Baptism is a ceremonial act, is but a work of the law; whether it be embraced in the ceremonies of the Mosaic LAW, or 'the perfect LAW of liberty,' (James 1: 25,) in which LAW the subjects of the gospel dispensation are exhorted to 'continue.' It was for seeking to be justified by Christ, in these deeds of the law, that Paul withstood Peter to the face; assuring him that while thus people sought justification, if they were found sinners, Christ was not to be blamed. See Gal. 2: 11—17. We may be wrong; and if we are, the lover of truth, and of his fellow man, will no doubt endeavor, by a 'thus saith the Lord,' to guide us into the right path. The views we collect from Scripture, are briefly these: The work of being 'born again' (or begotten again) is not accomplished in any outward work, or ordinance: but through a purely mental exercise—simple faith in Christ alone. Here, is where mourning ceases and joy begins. Rom. 5: 1, 'Therefore being justified by faith, we have peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ.' But before we further digress, we must learn wherein, water becomes an essential ingredient in the work of being 'born again,' or begotten again: (for it is questionable whether being born again, in its most extended sense, takes place till the first resurrection.)

In the outward ordinance, there is no visible change takes place with the candidate, and if his inward joys are increased, it must be the effect of the grace of God upon his heart, through faith in Christ, (which we do not say, may not be exercised at the time.) It is the internal, and not the external application, that makes him a better man—a man of God. If the Almighty had taught us in his word, about any internal application of water, such as would reach, and cleanse the thoughts of the heart, we should at once conclude such to be the water employed in the work of being 'born again.' Without manufacturing Scripture, to sustain a theory, we will here see what God has said, relative to such internal application of water. Ex. 17: 6, 'Behold I will stand before thee upon the rock in Horeb; and thou shalt smite the rock, and there shall come water out of it, that the people may drink. And Moses did so in sight of the elders of Israel.' See the use that Paul makes of this Scripture in 1 Cor. 10: 2-4. Our fathers 'were all baptised unto Moses in the cloud and in the sea; and did all eat the same spiritual meat; and did all drink the same spiritual drink: (for they drank of that spiritual Rock that went with them: and that Rock was Christ.') A real principle of life flowed from Christ, of which they partook. When the name of God is exalted in the (new) earth, (Isa. 12: 4,) we read (ver. 4) 'Therefore with joy shall ye draw water out of the wells of salvation.' Water from such fountains will effectually remove sin. Such water is again mentioned in Isa. 44: 3, 'For I will pour water upon him that is thirsty, and floods upon the dry ground: I will pour my spirit upon thy seed, and my blessing upon thine offspring.' Jer. 2: 13, 'For my people have committed two evils; they have forsaken me the fountain of LIVING WATERS, and hewed them out cisterns, broken cisterns, that can hold no water.' See also Ezek. 36: 25, 'Then will I sprinkle CLEAN WATER upon you, and ye shall be clean: from all your filthiness, and from all your idols will I cleanse you.' But we are told, that the water mentioned in these texts is not real water, but refers to the operations of the Spirit. If thus, the application of living water, which cleanses from filthiness, and idols, be spiritualized away; the same principle would also spiritualize away the spirit, mentioned in the next verse; and which is given after the filthiness has been cleansed away with this water: Or in other words, a plan of rendering Scripture, that reduces water to Spirit, will also reduce the Spirit to nothing.

With the text already quoted from Jer. 2: 13, compare Zec. 13: 1, 'In that day there shall be a fountain opened to the house of David, and to the inhabitants of Jerusalem for sin and uncleanness.' These texts abundantly prove that there is such a fountain of water; and the question arises whether men have access to it this side of the New Earth, and whether it be used in the process of being 'begotten again.' That ancient Israel partook of it, is plainly stated: 'They all drank of that rock,' &c. More positive proof, that water from that fountain is used in the work of man's salvation, may be found in John 4: 10, 'Jesus answered and said unto her, (the woman of Samaria) if thou knewest the gift of God, and who it is that saith to thee, Give me to drink; thou wouldst have asked of him, and he would have given thee LIVING WATER.' 'The woman saith unto him, sir, thou hast nothing to draw with, and the well is deep: from whence then has thou that living water? Art thou greater than our father Jacob, which gave us the well, and drank thereof himself, and his children, and his cattle? Jesus answered and said unto her, Whosoever drinketh of this water, shall thirst again: But whosoever drinketh of the water I shall give him, shall never thirst; but the water I shall give him, shall be IN HIM a well of WATER, springing UP into everlasting life.' The living water is a cleansing, satisfying principle; and in this text is made to run parallel with the spirit, as brought to view in Rom. 8: 11, 'But if the spirit of him that raised up Jesus from the dead dwell in you, he that raised up Christ from the dead, shall also quicken your mortal bodies by his spirit that dwelleth in you.' That both the living water, and the spirit have a real, and not an imaginary existence in the believer, is just as necessary to believe, as that our existence in a resurrected state, will be real. The living water is shared by none but believers, 'He that believeth on me shall never thirst.' John 6: 35. See also John 7: 37, 38, 'In the last day, that great day of the feast, Jesus stood and cried, saying, If any man thirst let him come unto me, and drink. He that believeth on me, as the Scripture hath said, out of his belly shall flow rivers of living water.' 'But this spake he of the spirit,' the quickening principle more particularly, than of the water—the cleansing and reviving principle. In the room of finding texts to destroy the water, in the text, 'Except a man be born of water,' &c. we find none but what harmonize, like those we have quoted, to strengthen the declaration, 'Except a man be born of water,'

[as well as of the spirit,] 'he cannot enter into the kingdom of God.'

In order to correct natural diseases, it becomes necessary to make ourselves acquainted with the operations of our natural existence: and so of spiritual diseases.—The properties of the new birth are certainly taught in the Bible; and what can be the harm of making ourselves acquainted with those properties? In bringing forth from under the sackcloth covering of sectarian prejudice, to which the truths of God have so long been made to bend, and attempting to show what are the essential properties of the new life 'begotten' in us, which is to raise these bodies from the dead, (Rom. 8: 11,) we may indeed peril our reputation. And what then? Will that change God's truths? Not at all. Furthermore, when we find ourselves in possession of a reputation that stands in the way of a free and open investigation of Bible truths, no matter how soon we loose it.—For the honor of God, and the interests of the soul, the quicker the better.

That water and spirit (not spirit, and spiritual water,) constitute two of these properties, is put beyond controversy by the naked word of God, 'Except a man be born of WATER and of the SPIRIT, he cannot enter into kingdom of God.' The one, without the other, will not answer the purpose. They must both operate together; and they must be in the believer, or there is no salvation for him, as we have seen.

Let the reader now consult 1st John 5: 8, 'And there are three that bear witness in earth, the SPIRIT, and the WATER, and the BLOOD: and these three agree in one.' See verses 1 and 10, 'Whosoever believeth that Jesus the is Christ, is born of God: and every one that loveth him that begat, loveth him also that is begotten of him.' The locality of the THREE witnesses, agreeing in ONE, that bear their testimony in earth, is shown in verse 10, 'He that believeth on the Son of God [and is thus born or begotten of him, verse 1] hath the witness IN HIMSELF: he that believeth not God, hath made him a liar, because he believeth not the record that God gave of his Son.'

Two indispensable properties of being 'born again' has been proved; and to make the testimony complete in earth, another is here added, which is 'blood.' The blood of Adam constituted the life of Christ in his human nature; which blood he shed, in order to take up a new principle of life, which the Father gave him, (John 5: 26,) and of which to impart to us; first, through the channel of our FAITH; and second, through the RESURRECTION to ETERNAL LIFE. The blood of Adam still flows in the Christian's veins, and constitutes the third witness. Thus we have the living water, and the Holy Ghost, not dreamed of merely, but actually imparted to us, and through the medium of our veins and blood, conveying a sensible evidence through our whole system—bearing witness in earth that we are the Lord's—that being 'begotten again to a lively hope,' &c. means something more than externals.

The child of God knows, that the Holy Ghost affects his whole system: It is not confined to his head, or his heart; but as 'a burning fire shut up in his bones.'—'My soul longeth, yea, even fainteth for the courts of the Lord: My heart and MY FLESH crieth out for the living God.' Psa. 84: 2.

Inasmuch as a sensible evidence is produced throughout the entire system, under the operations of the Holy Ghost, and the Living Water, what objection can there be to the veins being the medium through which those witnesses operate? All the life we now have, is communicated through that medium. Man is to be raised, and the faithful in Christ to have eternal life, thus being restored to what man was before he fell. The properties of his existence, while enjoying eternal life, is Living Water and the Holy Ghost, as may be seen from texts quoted. These properties filling the veins, which blood now fills, we can see, (upon natural principles if the reader pleases) how existence can be eternally perpetuated. Blood is a degenerating, corrupting principle, and works death in all bodies which it animates.—The Holy Ghost, and Living Water, are principles, when occupying the place of the blood, which will tend to increase and perpetuate life, as that does death. The 'blood' is a 'dying' witness. It is not to continue after we are 'born into the kingdom.' To overcome, and be seated with his father in his throne, Christ laid down his life—shed his blood. So we are to overcome when we are seated with him in this throne. Rev. 3: 21. The third witness, which only operates in earth, and before the resurrection, and is now the ruling principle of life, is to be laid aside when this mortal puts on immortality.

When a portion of the Holy Ghost, and Living Water, is imparted to these frail systems of ours, easy to how know it! It brings a 'joy that this world cannot give nor take away.' It leads its possessor to cry out, 'I have peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ.' It leads him to 'groan for adoption, to wit, the redemption of his body,' to exclaim with joyful hope, 'Come Lord Jesus, come quickly! Even so. Amen.' Through its operations the heart is changed. The very thoughts are cleansed. The affections restored from earth to heaven. The whole inner man is corrected. He now finds how he can love God with all his heart, and his neighbor as himself. The outer man must now be corrected; but as his agency, viz: his FAITH, has been employed in procuring the baptism of the Holy Ghost, so his works will be employed in correcting the exterior.

Or Baptism.

What has baptism to do in the work of being 'born again?' That there are two baptisms taught in the Bible, none pretend to deny: The baptism with water, and the baptism of the Holy Ghost. Some hold the doctrine, that the latter was never promised to any but the disciples then living, and that it was dispensed with after the day of Pentecost. Others hold the view that the former was dispensed with in the days of Paul, while others still contend that both yet remain in full force. With this latter view the Scriptures fully harmonize. The ordinance as practiced by John the Baptist, was not the same, nor used for the same purposes, as that embraced in the commission of Christ to his disciples. John's was a baptism, not into the name of Christ, but 'unto repentance.' (Matt. 3; 11.) The Christian baptism was in the name of the Father, Son, and Holy Ghost. John's baptism was administered to 'Israel only.' (Acts 13: 24.) The Christian baptism was to be administered to 'ALL NATIONS.' That the baptism of John was a work of righteousness belonging to the Law, seems evident from the saying of Christ when he came to John to be baptised of him, (Matt. 3: 15,) 'Suffer it to be so now: for thus it becometh us to FULFILL all righteousness.' It is spoken of thus by the Saviour, by way of distinction, 'The baptism of John, whence WAS it?' (Matt. 21: 23.) It is spoken of as having existed, performed its work, and then being dispensed with.—'Whence was it?' 'I indeed baptise you with WATER, but one mightier than I cometh, * * * * he shall baptise you with the HOLY GHOST'—the all important baptism, 'Beginning with the baptism of John,' (Acts 1: 22,) [the end of it.] 'That word, ye know, which was published throughout all Judea, and began from Galilee, after the baptism which John preached. (Acts 10: 37.) But John himself can best settle the purposes which his baptism served, 'And I knew him not: but that he should be made manifest to Israel, therefore am I come baptising with WATER.' (John 1: 31.) As John came baptising to prepare the people for the First Advent, so Christ himself came baptising to prepare the people for his Second Advent. 'He that sent me to baptise with WATER, the same said unto me, upon whom thou shalt see the spirit descending and remaining on him, the same is he. which baptiseth with the HOLY GHOST.' (John 1: 33.) John admitted the superiority of Christ's baptism, saying, 'I have need to be baptised of thee.' (Matt. 3: 14.) John truly baptised with WATER, but ye shall be baptised with the HOLY GHOST not many days hence.' We nowhere, after John's day, find an account of any one baptising unto repentance; nor do we find a commission embracing any such work.

In order to ascertain what is accomplished by this ordinance, we will examine some of those texts where it is brought to view, beginning 'after the Baptism which John preached.' The commission embracing Christian baptism, is as follows, 'Go ye therefore and teach all nations, baptising them in the name of the Father, and of the Son and of the Holy Ghost; teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you: and lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world:' Amen. Matt. 28: 19, 20. As this was a work to be performed by the disciples, the outward work is undoubtedly what is brought to view. But first in order is teaching them, or as the margin reads, 'make disciples or christians of all nations.' A disciple is a scholar, or one who learns; and in this case, Christ is the teacher, as to him the disciples were made. A few examples will show that under apostolic teaching, after the the door was opened to the Gentiles, the baptism of the Holy Ghost was first conferred. 'But I certify you, brethren, that the gospel which was preached of me is not after man: for I neither received of man, neither was I taught it, but by the revelation of Jesus Christ.' Gal. 1: 11, 12. 'When he, the spirit of truth, is come, he will guide you into all truth: for he shall not speak of himself; but whatsoever he shall hear, that shall he speak: and he will show you things to come.' * * 'He shall receive of mine, and show it unto you. All things that the Father hath are mine: therefore said I, that he shall take of mine, and show it unto you.' John 16: 13–15. This spirit of truth is the Holy Ghost. John 14: 26. His teachings alone can make a disciple, or scholar of Christ. 'But the anointing which you have received of him abideth in you, and ye need not that any man teach you, but as the same anointing teacheth you of all things, and is truth, and is no lie, and even as it hath taught you, ye shall abide in him.' It being the office of the spirit to make a disciple according with the commission, that must first be received. Under the teachings of Peter on the day of Pentecost, the people were first 'pricked in the heart,' so as to cry out, and then 'gladly received the word' before they were baptised. Act 2: 37, 41. The first recorded instance of apostolic preaching, to any other nation besides the Jews, and of course the first instance where the commission of Christ to 'teach all nations' was fully acted under; the statement is, that the Holy Ghost was conferred under the teaching. Acts 10: 44. 'While Peter yet spake these words the Holy Ghost fell on all them which heard the word. In 1 Peter 3: 21, It is administered not to put away the filth of the flesh, but to answer a good conscience; which already bore its witness in the Holy Ghost: see Rom. 9: 1. The outward ordinance in Paul's day, became so much a cause of contention, that he justified himself in refusing further to administer it. See 1 Cor. 1: 11—17. 'Jesus made and [afterwards] baptised more disciples than John, though Jesus himself baptised not but his disciples.' John 4: 1, 2. 'But when they BELIEVED Philip preaching the things concerning the kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ, they were baptised, both men and women.' Acts 8: 12, 13. 'Repent and be baptised every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost.' Acts 2: 38. In these two last instances, the gift (or baptism) of the Holy Ghost seems to have followed the outward ordinance; but let the reader bear in mind that both of these occured before the opening of the gospel door to the Gentiles. When that was done, to the astonishment of Peter, he says, 'Can any man forbid water, that these should not be baptised which have received the Holy Ghost as well as we.'? Acts 10: 47. God conferred his blessings on men under the old dispensation, through the works of the Law; which works, when completed, procured for the door justification in the eye of that Law: But Christ, under the gospel dispensation, justifies men through the bearing of faith—such kind of faith as receives Christ in us the hope of Glory, &c. from which flows every good work. Rom. 2: 25. Gal. 3: 2; 5: 6.

In the work of preparation for God's kingdom, there is an inward, and outward cleansing, or purity of heart and then of life, so clearly taught, and so undisputed that it is unnecessary in this place to dwell upon the proofs. A few texts will be here introduced to show the relative importance of the inward and outward work.—'The Holy Ghost this signifying, that the way into the holiest of all was not yet made manifest, while as the first tabernacle was yet standing: which was a figure for the time then present, in which were offered both gifts and sacrifices, that could not make him that did the service perfect, as pertaining to the conscience, only in meats and drinks, and divers washings, and carnal rites imposed until the time of reformation.' Heb. 9: 8, 10. 'Wash me thoroughly from mine iniquity, and cleanse me from my sins. Psa. 51: 2. This is God's work alone. 'And now why tarriest thou? Arise, and be baptised, and wash away thy sins, calling on the name of the Lord.' Acts 22: 16. An acknowledgement that the work of washing away sin is God's; for it is done while calling on his name. 'But ye are washed, but ye are sanctified, but ye are justified in the name of the Lord Jesus, and by the SPIRIT of God.' 1 Cor. 6: 11. 'Unto him that loved us, and washed us from our sins in his own blood.' Rev. 1: 5. 'These are they which came out of great tribulation, and have washed their robes, and made them white in the BLOOD OF THE LAMB.' Rev. 17: 14. 'That he might sanctify and cleanse it, [the church,] with the washing of water by the WORD.' Eph. 5: 26. 'Not by works of righteousness which we have done, but according to his mercy he saved us, by the washing of regeneration, [with living water] and renewing of the Holy Ghost.' Titus 3: 5. 'Purge me with hyssop, and I shall be clean: wash me, and I shall be whiter than snow.' Psa. 51: 7. 'He that is washed needeth not save to wash his feet, but is clean every whit.' John 13: 10. 'Now ye are clean through the word which I have spoken unto you.'—John 15: 3. 'Truly God is good to Israel, even to such as are of a clean heart.' Psa. 83: 1. And to no other Israelites. 'But if we walk in the light as he is in the light, we have fellowship one with another, and the BLOOD of Jesus Christ his Son cleanseth us from all sin.' 'If we confess our sins, he is faithful and just to forgive us our sins, and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness.' 1 John 1: 7, 9. 'Seeing ye have purified your souls in obeying the truth through the SPIRIT unto unfeigned love of the brethren, love one another with a PURE heart fervently.' 1 Peter 1: 22. 'And put no difference between us and them, [Jews and Gentiles] purifying their hearts by faith.' Acts 15: 9. 'For if the blood of bulls or of goats, and the ashes of an heifer sprinkling the unclean, sanctifieth to the purifying of the FLESH: How much more shall the blood of Christ, who through the eternal spirit offered himself without spot to God, purge your conscience from dead works to serve the living God?' Heb. 9: 13, 14. 'Therefore we conclude that a man is justified by faith without the deeds of the Law.' Rom. 3: 28. This does not make void, but establishes the Law. Verse 31: 'Knowing that a man is not justified by the works of the Law, but by the faith of Jesus Christ, even we have believed in Jesus Christ, that we might be justified by the faith of Christ, and not by the works of the Law: for by the works of the Law shall no flesh be justified.' Gal. 2: 16. 'Christ has become of no effect unto you, whosoever of you are justified by the Law; [embracing all external works,] ye are fallen from grace.' Gal. 5: 4. Men may be justified IN the performance of good works, but not BY them, 'And the Scripture foreseeing that God would justify the heathen through FAITH, preached before the gospel unto Abraham.' Gal. 3: 8. 'Sanctify them through thy truth, thy word is truth.' John 17: 17.—'That I should be the minister of Jesus Christ to the Gentiles, ministering the gospel of God, that the offering up of the Gentiles might be acceptable, being sanctified by the Holy Ghost.' Rom. 15: 16.

'For though ye have ten thousand instructors in Christ, yet have ye not many fathers: for in Christ Jesus have I begotten you through the gospel.' 1 Cor. 4: 15. He baptised none but Crispus and Gaius, and the household of Stephanus. In the following texts the external cleansing is brought to view. 'Wash you, make you clean: put away the evil of your doings from before mine eyes: cease to do evil; learn to do well; seek judgment, relieve the oppressed, judge the fatherless, plead for the widow.' Isa. 1: 16, 17. 'Go thy way, show thyself to the priest, and offer for thy cleansing those things which Moses commanded FOR A TESTIMONY unto them.' Mark 1: 44. 'If a man therefore purge himself from these, he shall be a vessel unto honor, sanctified, and meet for the master's use, prepared unto every good work.' 2d Tim. 2: 21. 'For by thy words thou shalt be justified, and by thy words thou shalt be condemned. Matt. 12: 37.

In such texts as the following both the internal and the external work is brought to view in connexion:—'There is a generation that are pure in their own eyes, and yet is not washed from their filthiness.' Prov. 30: 12. 'Having therefore these promises, dearly beloved, let us cleanse ourselves from all filthiness of the flesh and spirit, perfecting holiness in the fear of God.' 2 Cor. 7: 1.

The outward cleansing is attended to by an outward ceremony. Pilot washed his hands in token of his innocency. Thus 'having our hearts sprinkled [with living water] from an evil conscience, and our bodies washed [by baptism] with pure water,' in token of our outward conformity to the law of Christ. Heb. 10: 22.—'Know ye not that so many of us as ARE baptised into Jesus Christ were baptised into his death? Therefore we are buried with him by baptism into DEATH: that like as Christ was raised up from the dead by the glory of the father, EVEN SO we also should walk in newness of life.' Rom. 6: 3, 4. We would not say that the outward ordinance is not brought to view in this text; but who cannot see that something more than that is presented? To be baptised INTO CHRIST is a lasting baptism. 'Abide IN ME,' says Christ, 'and I in you. As the branch cannot bear fruit in itself, except it abide in the vine, no more can ye, except ye abide IN ME.' John 15: 4. The idea conveyed to our minds in this text, is just what is expressed by a plain understanding of the language. As Christ died—shed out of his veins the blood of Adam, so must we; and into this death we are baptised with the Holy Ghost—'the spirit of him that raised up Jesus from the dead,' 'that like as Christ was raised up from the dead by the glory of the Father, even so we also should walk in newness of life.' Does the expression 'even so' mean any thing? Does it mean what it says? How then was Christ raised up? In what KIND of a new life did he walk? 'For though he was crucified through weakness, yet he liveth by the power of God. For we also are weak with him, but we shall live with him by the power of God towards you.' 2d Cor. 13: 4. 'To him that overcometh will I grant to sit with me in my throne, EVEN AS I also overcame and am set down with my Father on his throne.' Rev. 3: 21. 'Even so;' We shall walk in newness of life. A new life—living by a new principle of life—the Holy Ghost, 'even so,' as Christ lives. The outward ordinance conveys no new life. The man is the same as he was, with the exception of his openly having declared his faith in Christ. If this text does not embrace the resurrection from the dead, in vain may we look for that glorious doctrine in the Bible. The manner of being baptised INTO Christ is plainly stated in 1 Cor. 12: 13. 'For by ONE SPIRIT we are all baptised into one body.' &c. 'We being many are one body IN CHRIST.' Rom. 12: 5.

We have protracted our remarks further than we had designed, and will close the examination of Scripture texts by requesting the reader to compare with the views here advanced the following texts: Eph. 4: 5; Col. 2: 12; Matt. 3: 11; Mark 1: 8; Luke 3: 16; John 1: 26; Mark 16: 16; Acts 1: 5; Acts 11, 16, 19: 5, 22, 19; 1 Cor. 12: 13; Gal. 3: 27.

A few remarks upon the Baptism of the Holy Ghost, and we have done. We are not of the opinion that its effects are in the main, materially different from what they were under the old, or Jewish dispensation, only as to the manner of its being conferred. Then it was received by faith through the works of the Law. Now, men are baptised with it THROUGH FAITH; working an instantaneous change in the heart. If he that is born (or begotten as the term may be understood,) of God, hath the witness in himself; and there are three that bear witness in the earth, the spirit, the water, and the blood, we ought to be able to know, (from the same cause that John did;) that we are his, by his spirit which he hath given us. 1 John 3: 24. If we have no other evidence of a preparation to meet our Lord at his coming with joy, than the Bible in our pockets—a tolerable knowledge of its truths in our heads, and the life of a pharisee, accompanied with the recollection that we have been baptised with water and partaken of the Lord's Supper: we have sadly degenerated from the apostolic standard of true piety. And if with these evidences alone we content ourselves to meet the events of the last day, we should, it is to be feared, find ourselves among the signs of 'the last time,' as written in Jude 9. 'These be they who separate themselves, sensual, having not the spirit.' 'But ye, beloved, building up yourselves on your most holy faith, praying in the Holy Ghost, keep yourselves in the love of God, looking for the mercy of our Lord Jesus Christ unto eternal life.' Jude 20, 21. These with many other parallel texts, show the absolute necessity of God's people possessing the Holy Ghost in 'the last time.' If it produced a sensible effect upon the human system in the Apostle's days, it will do it now. Every child of God can recollect when he was thus baptised—when this soul-inspiring spirit thrilled through his entire frame, almost raising him from the earth; and why should it not? for by it Elijah and Paul were caught up.

The baptism of the Holy Ghost may be distinguished from animal feeling, such as are manifest under the exhibition of pleasant sights, or pleasant sounds—grand and sublime displays of nature, art, &c. Thrills of feeling thus experienced, leave the mind in a depressed and unhealthy state, causing it to loath the ordinary blessings of life: While the baptism of the Holy Ghost leaves the mind in a peaceful, happy and contented state. It may be known by God's rule, 'Try the spirits whether they are of God: because many false prophets are gone out into the world.' 1 John 4: 1. Try them by God's rule—his word. If it be that, or any exercise that harmonizes with it, which has caused these joyous emotions, what can it be but the spirit of God—the baptism of the Holy Ghost? In enforcing the duty, and necessity, of the baptism of the Holy Ghost, we do not wish to be considered as detracting from the outward ordinance. Far from it. It is a blessed ordinance—a happy privilege which God's people enjoy, of professing their faith in Christ, and acknowledging their deadness to the world. It is a good work, but not the christian's God.

We do not present the above, as the general views of Adventists, but as our own: which we believe are fully sustained by the word of God. We have only given the outlines in this article, begging the reader, prayerfully, to study, and carefully to compare the Scriptures upon this subject—a subject that we have spent days in the examination of, with more pleasure than any other, connected with the great truth of our Lord's soon coming.

WESLEYAN METHODISTS.—This once humble people have joined with the older sects in "eating and drinking with the drunken." The Editor of the "True Wesleyan" for December 23d says,

☞The Wesleyans at the first church in Lowell are holding a Fair, which promises to aid them considerably in raising funds to meet their expenses. We hope our friends there will join heartily in the enterprise. A collation will be served up on Monday evening, at which we intend to be present.

Why do men exhibit such uncalled for hostility towards the poor brethren who are forced to espouse the doctrine of Christ's second coming at hand. Is it because they are unable to meet this subject on fair grounds? Is it because all those who are engaged in this cause are bad men, and only seeking their own interest? Or, is it because this doctrine is too true? and that in their very natures they hate God, and their heart's will not submit to Christ's righteous government. O the war! the war! (I fear) which they are carrying on, is against themselves, and that they will be found crucifying the Saviour afresh.—Ex. paper.

PSALM OF DAVID—XXXVII.

Fret not thyself because of evil doers, neither be thou envious against the workers of iniquity:

2 For they shall soon be cut down like the grass, and wither as the green herb.

3 Trust in the Lord, and do good: so shalt thou dwell in the land, and verily thou shalt be fed.

4 Delight thyself also in the Lord; and he shall give thee the desires of thine heart.

5 Commit thy way unto the Lord; trust also in him, and he shall bring it to pass:

6 And he shall bring forth thy righteousness as the light, and thy judgment as the noon day.

7 Rest in the Lord, and wait patiently for him: fret not thyself because of him that prospereth in his way, because of the man who bringeth wicked devices to pass.

8 Cease from anger, and forsake wrath; fret not thyself in any wise to do evil.

9 For evil doers shall be cut off: but those that wait on the Lord, they shall inherit the earth.

10 For yet a little while and the wicked shall not be; yea, thou shalt diligently consider his place, and it shall not be.

11 But the meek shall inherit the earth, and shall delight themselves in the abundance of peace.

12 The wicked plotteth against the just, and gnasheth upon him with his teeth.

13 The Lord shall laugh at him; for he seeth that his day is coming.

14 The wicked have drawn out the sword, and have bent their bow, to cast down the poor and needy, and to slay such as be of upright conversation.

15 Their sword shall enter into their own heart, and their bows shall be broken.

16 A little that a righteous man hath is better than the riches of many wicked.

17 For the arms of the wicked shall be broken: but the Lord upholdeth the righteous.

18 The Lord knoweth the days of the upright: and their inheritance shall be forever.

19 They shall not be ashamed in the evil time; and in the days of famine they shall be satisfied.

20 But the wicked shall perish, and the enemies of the Lord shall be as the fat of lambs: they shall consume: into smoke shall they consume away.

21 The wicked borroweth, and payeth not again: but the righteous sheweth mercy, and giveth.

22 For such as be blessed of him shall inherit the earth; and they that be cursed of him shall be cut off.

23 The steps of a good man are ordered by the Lord; and he delighteth in his way.

24 Though he fall, he shall not be utterly cast down: for the Lord upholdeth him with his hand.

25 I have been young, but now am old; yet I have not seen the righteous forsaken, nor his seed begging bread.

26 He is ever merciful and lendeth; and his seed is blessed.

27 Depart from evil, and do good; and dwell for evermore.

28 For the Lord loveth judgment, and forsaketh not his saints; they are preserved for ever: but the seed of the wicked shall be cut off.

29 The righteous shall inherit the land, and dwell therein forever.

30 The mouth of the righteous speaketh wisdom and his tongue talketh of judgment.

31 The law of his God is in his heart: none of his steps shall slide.

32 The wicked watcheth the righteous, and seeketh to slay him.

33 The Lord will not leave him in his hand, nor condemn him when he is judged.

34 Wait on the Lord, and keep his way, and he shall exalt thee to inherit the land: when the wicked are cut off, thou shalt see it.

35 I have seen the wicked in great power, and spreading himself like a green bay tree.

36 Yet he passed away, and, lo, he was not; yea, I sought him, and he could not be found.

37 Mark the perfect man, and behold the upright: for the end of that man is peace.

38 But the transgressor shall be destroyed together; the end of the wicked shall be cut off.

39 But the salvation of the righteous is of the Lord: he is their strength in the time of trouble.

40 And the Lord shall help them, and deliver them: he shall deliver them from the wicked, and save them, because they trust in him.

FUNDAMENTAL PRINCIPLES
ON WHICH
THE SECOND ADVENT CAUSE IS BASED.

I.—The Word of God teaches that this earth is to be regenerated, in the restitution of all things, and restored to its Eden state, as it came from the hand of its Maker before the fall, and is to be the eternal abode of the righteous in their resurrection state.

II.—The only Millennium found in the word of God, is the thousand years which are to intervene between the first and second resurrections, as brought to view in the 20th of Revelation. And the various portions of Scripture which are adduced as evidence of such a period in time, are to have their fulfilment only in the New Earth, wherein dwelleth righteousness.

III.—The only restoration of Israel yet future, is the restoration of the Saints to the New Earth, when "the Lord my God shall come, and all his saints with him.

IV.—The signs which were to precede the Coming of our Saviour, have all been given; and the prophecies have all been fulfilled but those which relate to the coming of Christ, the end of this world, and the restitution of all things.

V.—There are none of the prophetic periods, as we understand them, extending beyond the [Jewish] year 1843.

☞ The above we shall ever maintain as the immutable truths of the word of God, and therefore, till our Lord come, we shall ever look for his return as the next event in historical prophecy.

NOTE.—The above was written in the Jewish year 1843, which has now expired. According to the best chronologers the captivity of Manasseh, the commencement of the seven times, or 2520 years of Levit. 26th, was B. C. 677; also the captivity of Jehoiakim, the commencement of the Great Jubilee, or 2450 years, was B. C. 607; also the decree to rebuild Jerusalem in the seventh of Artaxerxes, the commencement of the 70 weeks and 2300 days, of Daniel 8th and 9th, was given B. C. 457; and also the taking away of Paganism in Rome, the commencement of the 1335 days of Daniel 12th, was about A. D. 508. Reckoning from these several dates, the respective periods can extend only to about the Jewish year 1843. This being ended, our published time is now past; but as we can find no new dates for the events from which we have reckoned those periods, we cannot extend them beyond the time specified, which has been our only time; and yet our faith is as strong as ever, that at the end of those periods the Lord will surely come; while we can only wait for his coming such time as human chronology may have varied from the exact time—continually looking for, and momentarily expecting his appearing. This we do in accordance with Hab. ii. 3,—"For the vision is yet for an appointed time, but at the end" [of the prophetic periods] "it shall speak and not lie; though it tarry," [beyond their apparent termination] "wait for it; because" [when they are fulfilled] "it will surely come, it will not tarry."

WESTERN MIDNIGHT CRY.

CINCINNATI, JUNE 22, 1844.

LECTURES.

At the College Hall on Sabbath next at the usual hours, unless notice to the contrary shall be given in the daily papers of Saturday.

Lectures, prayer and conference meetings, are held at the Engine House, in Fifth street, west of Smith, on Monday, Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday evenings.

THE TABERNACLE.

In consequence of wet weather, and some other disappointments, the Tabernacle will not be ready to meet in until Sabbath after next. It is enclosed, and the work of plastering, laying floors, and making the seats, is rapidly progressing. It is an immense building, and requires more time to finish it than was at first anticipated.

THE PAPER.

The next number completes our 3d vol. for which, (including vol. 2) there is enough due from subscribers to publish a fourth volume CHEAP, should it be needed. Sorry as we are to say it, past experience has taught us that we can not rely upon such means for the continuance of the paper. So without regard to what is due us, those friends who wish the paper continued, will send the means; and should we be compelled to stop for want of funds, the amounts received will be returned, or the value in other publications, if required.

A number of copies of vol. 2, bound, can be had if ordered soon. Price, 50 cents. They can be sent by mail at the same rate of postage, as though they were not bound.

☞ This is to inform those certain preachers that manifested so much concern about our welfare during our brief absence—reporting that we should never be heard of more, that we are still well, and "looking up, knowing that our redemption draweth nigh."

☞ Prof. McGuffey has been edifying his congregations for some Sabbaths past, with lectures against the coming of our Lord, as held by the Adventists. He is a very learned, as well as talented man; consequently we may set down these efforts as another arm in the prosperity of the Second Advent cause in Cincinnati.

☞ Brother and Sister Brower arrived on Thursday morning, in good health and spirits. Their labors will be confined to this vicinity at the present.

TOUR TO NEW YORK.

On Thursday, the 31st ult., at 11 o'clock A. M., we took passage on the Steam Boat "Monongahela," for Wheeling, where we landed on the following Saturday about 3 o'clock P. M.

The boat was crowded with passengers, among whom were a number of the members of the Presbyterian General Assembly, on their way home from that late session at Louisville.

On Thursday evening, worship was held, Dr. Cuyler, of Philadelphia, taking the lead. On Friday evening, at the request of the passengers, I lectured upon the Second Advent—read the Scriptures relative to the inheritance of the saints in the "New Earth,"—the time when they would possess it, as evidenced by the signs, and also some texts relative to the inheritance of the wicked. I then requested Dr. Cuyler to make some remarks, which he did, in a very plain manner, dwelling upon the importance of being ready—This was every thing.—It was of but little comparative consequence where the saints inheritance was, or when they possessed it, if they were only ready. The doctrine that it does not matter where a person goes to, or when they go, does not obtain in the present world; for then the attractions and desirableness of the prison, would be equal with the palace. But such doctrine in religious matters, does obtain to a great extent. I however got along with the Dr's remarks, by making use of a principle that is sometimes applied to the plain language of the Bible, viz. That it does not mean just exactly what it says.

On Saturday evening, at six o'clock, I took the stage for Brownsville, where I arrived about sunrise the next morning, and spent the Sabbath.

The keeper of the public house sent for a Mr. Foster, to come and see me, having been requested to let him know when a Second Advent lecturer should come into the place. I found Mr. Foster to be a strong Second Advent believer. He is a Deacon, and Trustee in the Baptist church in Brownsville. He procured the use of their large and commodious meeting house for me in the afternoon, and published my appointment for a Lecture. The congregation was large, and listened with intense interest. There were present eight preachers. It was the first Second Advent lecture ever delivered in the place. By request, I lectured in the M. E. Protestant meeting house in Hedgeport, (a part of Brownsville) in the evening. The house was crowded, although the people had but about three hours previous notice. I learned that a copy of Br. Miller's lectures, by some means, had found its way into this place last fall, and produced so much excitement, that a good reader was employed to read the work in one of the churches. During this reading, which occupied eight or ten successive evenings, the interest was intense. The house was crowded, and an extensive revival followed. It was at that time that Bro. Foster, and some others, embraced the doctrine of the Advent. I was beset by a multitude to remain and deliver a course of Lectures, but in consequence of other engagements, was compelled to decline. On Monday morning I continued my journey through Uniontown, Cumberland, Baltimore, Philadelphia, and arrived at New York on Wednesday, P. M.

The friends in that place all seem to remain steadfast in the blessed hope, of soon seeing the blessed Lord coming in his kingdom. The difference that exists among some of the brethren, relative to the "intermediate state of the dead," and the "end of the wicked," causes some feeling that we are entire strangers to in this section: and a feeling that they would be strangers to, if they would earnestly endeavor to purge out the old leaven of attempting to hold dominion over the faith of the saints.

It seems to us the height of folly, to spend a multitude of words relative to the intermediate state, when in a few days that state is to be done away, as we are all agreed. And as of the "end of the wicked." So long as we are all agreed that the saints are to be eternally happy in the new earth, what have we to do with the wicked, further than to proclaim in their ears "the day of vengeance of our God?" And are not the terms God has given us to do this with, sufficient?

Take a little advice from Esdras. Be not curious to know how and when the wicked are punished, but be thou curious to know how and when the righteous are rewarded.

The brethren have four places of worship in New York, in three of which we lectured during our short stay among them, viz: three times in the house, corner of Christie and Delancy streets—once on the corner of Grove and Hudson streets, and once at Franklin Hall in Chatham Square. We also lectured once at the house of prayer in Brooklyn.

During this visit, we experienced the warm greetings of numerous friends, whom we had expected, ere this, to have met in God's everlasting kingdom. Such meetings we should have prefaured, delightful as was the present interview.

We were happy to find Bro. Southard so far recovered from his protracted illness, as to be able to resume his editorial labors.

On Tuesday, the 13th inst., we started for home, but were much disappointed in not meeting Bro. and Sister Brewer in Philadelphia, who, according to previous arrangement, were to accompany us. We were compelled, however, to continue our journey night and day, or leave the brethren in Cincinnati another Sabbath. We arrived home on Saturday evening,—found all things proceeding harmoniously as usual.

COMMUNICATIONS.

THE PROMISE OF GOD.

And I will give unto thee (Abraham) and unto thy seed after thee, the land wherein thou art a stranger, all the land of Canaan, for an everlasting possession; and I will be their God; Gen. 17:8. And God himself shall wipe away all tears from their eyes; &c., &c. Rev. 21: 3, 4. Did Abraham and his seed receive the promise in this life? And He gave him (Abraham) none inheritance in it, NO, not so much as to set his foot on, yet he promised that he would give it to him for a possession, and to his seed after him, &c., &c. Acts 7: 5. By faith Abraham when he was called to go out into a place which he should AFTER receive for an inheritance obeyed, &c., &c. By faith he sojourned in the land of promise as in a strange country, dwelling in tabernacles with Isaac and Jacob, the heirs with him of the same promise. For he looked for a city which hath foundations, whose builder and maker is God, Heb. 11: 8, 9, 10. Well but if Abraham and his seed did not receive the promise immediately did they not receive it in this life? Hear Paul in the 13th verse, These all died in faith, not having received the promises, but having seen them afar off, and were persuaded of them, and embraced them, and confessed that they were strangers and pilgrims on the earth. And others were tortured not accepting deliverance; that they might obtain a better resurrection. And others had trial of cruel mockings and scourgings, yea moreover of bonds and imprisonment. They were stoned, they were sawn asunder, were tempted, were slain with the sword; they wandered about in sheep skins and goat skins; being destitute, afflicted, tormented. And these all having obtained a good report through faith, received not the promise, Heb. 11; 35—40. Let us hold fast the profession of our faith without wavering for He is faithful that promised, Heb. 10: 23. For ye have need of patience, that after ye have done the will of God ye might receive the promise. For yet a little while and He that shall come, will come, and will not tarry, Heb. 10: 36, 37. Who are the children or seed of Abraham? Know ye therefore, that they which are of faith, the same are the children of Abraham, Gal. 3: 7. For as many of you as have been baptized into Christ, have put on Christ. There is neither Jew nor Greek, there is neither bond nor free; there is neither male nor female, for ye are all one in Christ Jesus. And if ye be Christ's then are ye Abrahams seed and heirs according to the promise, Gal. 3: 27—29. And when the chief shepherd shall appear, ye shall receive a crown of glory that fadeth not away, I Pet. 5: 4. Even so, come quickly.

J. H. D.

[OUR "REDEMPTION."]

And there shall be signs in the sun, and in the moon, and in the stars; and upon the earth distress of nations, with perplexity; the sea and the waves roaring. Men's hearts failing them for fear, and for looking after those things which are coming on the earth; for the powers of heaven shall be shaken. And then shall they see the Son of Man coming in a cloud with power and great glory. And when these things begin to come to pass, then look up, and lift up your heads, for your REDEMPTION draweth nigh, Luke 21: 25—28. And not only they, but ourselves also, which have the first fruits of the spirit, even we ourselves, groan within ourselves, waiting for the adoption, to wit, the "REDEMPTION" of the body, Rom. 8: 23. For we know that if our earthly house of this tabernacle were dissolved, we have a building of God, an house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens. For in this we groan, earnestly desiring to be clothed with our house which is from heaven, 2d Cor. 5: 1, 2. And the "REDEEMED" of the Lord shall return, and come to Zion with songs, and everlasting joy upon their heads; they shall obtain joy and gladness, and sorrow and sighing shall flee away, Isaiah 35: 10. And God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes; and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow, nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain, for the former things are passed away, Rev. 21: 4. I will RANSOM them from the power of the grave; I will REDEEM them from death, &c., &c., Hosea 13: 14.

Then look up, and lift up your heads, for your REDEMPTION draweth nigh. What a joyful anticipation! What a soul thrilling thought, that we shall soon see the heavenly Bridegroom, the King of Kings, in all his glorious apparel, the meek and lowly one, who had not where to lay his head; coming again to take EVERLASTING possession,—to restore ALL things—to drive death and the devil forever away. Our hope blooms in the rose,—the love of this sin cursed world is forever vanished, when we by faith see our "REDEMPTION" draweth nigh.

And is there not a better world,
Where minds commingle with the blest
Where sorrow, pain, and conflicts cease.
And where the weary are at rest?

Where friends deceive not with the breath,
Where kin and kindred ne'er shall sever,
And where intrudes no poignant death,
In realms where saints shall live forever.

O blest be He, whose power divine,
Forbids us from the path to roam;
That leads to everlasting bliss,
A peaceful and a happy home.

When our career on earth is spent,
And life is ebbing fast away,
Thus may we calmly sink to rest,
And rise in worlds of endless day.

J. H. D.

The following is from an old sea captain, who on a former occasion sent in an account of the falling stars as discovered by himself while at sea.

[Fairview, Ct., June 8, 1844.

DEAR BROTHER JAMES:—

I hope you won't give up the ship for the want of funds, or the voyage because our reckoning is out. Why, it frequently happens that we are ahead of the ship by our reckoning in consequence of not making proper allowance for leeway and current, or giving too much distance on our log book. In such cases what is to be done? Do you suppose we give up in despair, and say we shall never get to land? I recollect the first journal I kept when before the mast. The mate came to me and asked me where I was, I told him I would tell him when I got ashore. He said he was ashore, and the captain was over the Alleghany mountains. I told him I was sorry for that for we should have to be heaving the lead all night. Now sir, is it not all the better to be astern of our reckoning? We shall keep a bright look out, sounding often, with a man at the mast head. As for making any further calculation for the time when our voyage will be ended I think it without warrant from our Master's command, and I have always been in the habit of obeying orders, and I consider it sufficient for me that my Master has told me to keep a good look out ahead and be watchful for He has said that like a thief in the night he may come when we are all asleep. It is perhaps owing in my great caution and watchfulness that I have never for 35 years at sea, met with any disaster of any consequence. I am sorry to read the contention between brother Litch and Storrs, for I think their time and talents ought to be employed in warning a wicked world of the speedy judgments that are coming upon them. I think we are too apt to lose sight of the power and wrath of our adversary, which seems to be very great and increasing, knowing that he hath but a short time to live. I think it would be very natural for him to assume the garb of an angel of light, and cause us to put our own constructions upon the word of God. I should suppose he would make the most violent attack upon those who are proclaiming the speedy coming of our Lord, and be rather careless respecting the Laodiceans who are crying peace and safety. Or those who has his mark on their forehead or hand. Like a fowler when he fires in to a flock of birds, he runs after the wounded that are like to get away from him, for the dead ones he can pick up at his leisure. * * * * *

I think I can imagine in my minds eye, our Saviour looking down from the main top, viewing us in various parts of the ship, some asleep, some slumbering and others hoping between doubts and fears, and almost given up to despair, their reckoning being out, and many having given up their various occupation for a living, but a few faithful watchmen with their charts spread out before them, steering their own course and occasionally calling out to the helmsman steady,—keep her steady! with a bold and fearless reply, Aye Aye sir.

From your brother in Christ,

A. G. JENNINGS.

FOR THE WESTERN MIDNIGHT CRY.

LETTER FROM BRO. BARTHOLOMEW.

"For when they shall say, peace and safety; then sudden destruction cometh upon them, as travail upon a woman with child; and they shall not escape."

The apostle Paul in his letter to the Thessalonians, speaking of the latter days, and the signs which should precede the second advent of the blessed Lord, seems perfectly to have understood the position or course, that a degenerate and worldly priesthood would take; and what manner or kind of an opiate the D. D's. would administer, to quiet the fearful apprehensions of a professing church in her Laodicean state. And the very sign, or premonition, which he gave, as a sure and infallible proof, of the sudden destruction of this sinful world, is now being most literally fulfilled, by the almost universal proclamation of the fallacious doctrine or fable, of one thousand years, of what they call a temporal (thousand years) millennium, a time of universal peace and prosperity, as also, the return of the discarded carnal Jews to the land of Palestine. And this all will most assuredly take place, according to the doctrines and commandments of man, (not the Bible) before the appearing of the great God and our Saviour Jesus Christ. And as the world is now undergoing such a great political and moral revolution, that as elder Jones stated in a sermon, in which he attempted to say something against the speedy advent, that it would be impolitic for God to destroy the world now, in its milky state, it is under such rapid improvements. Perhaps such watchmen can prescribe a better course of policy, for the government of this world, than that revealed in the book of books. There might have been some in the days of Noah, and Lot, who were as wise as the teachers of the present day. This watchman may, if this should meet his eye deny the statement, as he has some others, but they are susceptible of good and sufficient proof.

The prophet Jeremiah, in the 23d c. from the 16th to the 41st verses inclusive, seems to have had a special reference to those of the present day, who prophecy so long, and loud, of peace and safety, teaching for doctrines the commandments of men. Hear him, verse 16th, "Thus saith the Lord of hosts, harken not unto the words of the prophets, that prophecy unto you, they make you vain, they speak a vision of their own heart, and not out of the mouth (or word) of the Lord; they say still unto them that despise me, the Lord hath said ye shall have peace (for at least one thousand years, which will soon commence, at the sound of the seventh [and third woe] trumpet,) and they say unto every one that walketh after the imagination of his own heart, no evil shall come upon you, (the Lord cannot, or will not come, until the close of our millennium, then the whole world is to be converted, and the earth filled with the knowledge and glory of God, as the waters cover the sea; Fear not, see the Jews, the descendants of Abraham, scattered over the face of the earth; They must all be gathered by some means, natural, or supernatural, to the land of Palestine, and build up old Jerusalem: Yes, we say again, fear not, what these Millerites say about the speedy advent, false prophets are they all;) 18th, For who hath stood in the counsel of the Lord, and hath perceived and heard his word, who hath marked his word and heard it, (surely, not these false prophets, and wild fanatics, the "Millerites,") no man knows the day or the hour, we know when it will not come, and the time that must intervene before the consummation; but these Millerites pretend to know, or understand, at least, some of the mysteries contained in the prophecy's and revelations, but it is no revelation, for we do not believe these hiden mysteries ever was, or ever will be understood by man. It is true, the apostle John tells us, "but ye have an unction from the Holy One, and ye know all things, and the Spirit shall teach you all things, and bring all things to your remembrance, whatsoever I have said unto you." And the apostle tells us, that all scripture is given by inspiration of God, and is profitable for correction, instruction, &c. But we think the apostle Paul, could not have understood this matter as we do, for we know that no doctrine advanced, can in any way be profitable, or give us the least instruction, if it be so shrouded in mystery, that we can in no wise understand it. The apostle must have meant in an accommodated sense, such parts as are plain and simple, to wit, No man knows the day and the hour, this is plain. The evangelist tells us, at the commencement of his mysterious book, Blessed is he that readeth, and they that hear, (obey attend to) the words of this prophecy, and keep those things which are written therein, that is, the part or things they understand, in an accommodated sense. In the last chapter he tells us, he was commanded, not to seal the sayings of the prophecy of this book, for the time is at hand; we do not think that the revelator was strictly obedient to this command, for we think, and are sure that the greater part of the things contained therein, ever have been, still are, and will be sealed while time endures.

Peter, in his 2d epistle 3d chap. speaking of the second advent, says, that our beloved brother Paul also, according to the wisdom given unto him, hath written unto you, as also in all his epistles, speaking in them of these things, (the coming of Christ,) in which are some things hard to be understood, which they that are unlearned, and unstable, wrest, as they do also other scripture, (that does not speak of the advent) to their own destruction. Sure Peter must have had a special reference to the Millerites, for none are more ignorant, and how very unstable they are, just see how they are leaving the churches, calling them Babylon, &c. Yes, they pretend to believe that the prophets have ever enquired and searched diligently into these things, who prophesied of the grace that should come unto you, (or them) searching what, or what manner of time, the Spirit of Christ which was in them, did signify, when it testified beforehand the sufferings of Christ, and the glory that should follow; unto whom it was revealed, that not unto them, but unto us, they did minister, the things which are now reported unto you, &c. We say still, fear not, keep your minds eye still on the one thousand years, peace and safety, and all is well. 19th. Behold a whirlwind of the Lord is gone forth in fury, even a grievous whirlwind, it shall fall grievously upon the head of the wicked. 20th. The anger of the Lord, shall not return, until he have executed, and till he have performed the thoughts of his heart; in the latter days ye shall consider it perfectly. Sure these things are now taken into serious consideration, which proves a fruitful source of many serious reflections, and most unpleasant sensations. 21st. I have not sent these prophets, yet they ran, I have not spoken to them, yet they prophesied, and still they continue to say peace and safety, but when they shall say peace and safety, then sudden destruction cometh upon them. In conclusion we would say, hearken not to the words of the prophets who prophecy unto you, they make you vain, or cause you, in vain to look for the fulfillment of their prophecy, of peace and safety. But let us rather gird up the loins of our mind, and hope to the end, for the glory that is to be brought unto us at the revelation of Jesus Christ, for surely the signs of the times indicate that the coming of the Lord draweth nigh. In confident assurance of the blessed hope we are still looking.

We have a number of communications on hand, all of about the same character and written in the same spirit. The following is a sample.

MANCHESTER, WABASH Co., IND., May 4th, 1844.

DEAR BRO. JACOBS—

Inclosed in this, I send you one dollar to pay for the "Western Midnight Cry," which I receive and read with deep interest. Please send me one more copy commencing with the first number if you have them. I received the last volume from Bro. Chaplain, from the reading of which I have been led to see that we are living in the last days, and soon the Lord will come and take the weary pilgrim home to rest. But many of the dear brethren in Christ are slumbering upon the verge of eternity, and many who have heard the midnight cry, seem to remain inactive and unconcerned upon this soul-cheering event; and who, I awfully fear, God will spew out of his mouth: For surely if they loved his appearing they would not remain stupid in the cause of Christ. Yours in the blessed hope,

J. N. SPEAR.

HAMILTON, May 30th, 1844.

DEAR BRO. JACOBS—

Our prospects here are not very encouraging, but yet we have a little band that remain stedfast. We prize the Midnight Cry above any other publication that we have ever read, and cannot think of parting with it so long as it continues to be the advocate of Bible truth, and dictated by a christian spirit. Our desire is to do what we can for the support of the cause, but our means are very limited. I now send you inclosed, two dollars for the Western Midnight Cry.

Yours in the hope of the gospel,

ISAAC PARTON.

LETTER FROM BRO. HICKLIN.

NOBLE Co., INDIANA, June 1, 1844.

DEAR BRO. JACOBS:

A few in this vicinity are still waiting for the return of the blessed Saviour to translate them to the joys of paradise—to a restored earth, where Christ shall sit upon the Throne of his father David, and the whole earth shall be full of his glory; where we shall reign kings and priests forever, even forever and ever.

Among those who embraced the Second Advent faith few if any have turned away from the blessed hope of his "glorious appearing." They have neither turned infidel or committed their Bibles to the flames—nor given up their faith in the speedy coming of the Son of God. They believe fully and firmly in their Bibles, and believe that it shows clearly that the end of all things is at hand, at the very door.

Last Sabbath we formed an Advent Association of nearly twenty members, near Fort Wayne, and some others not then present, is expected to unite; they did not think it necessary to withdraw from their several communions. Prayer, reading the Bible, christian conversation, and exhortation, are the objects of this association.

Brother Chaplin and I, propose making a tour to northern Indiana, if time continues, to lecture, and if not, we hope to meet you on the new earth and walk the streets of that golden city which hath foundation whose maker and builder is God.

There is a midnight slumber weighing down a carnal church, which nothing but the sign of the Son of Man vaulting the heavens in descending glory, can arrest; even our Second Advent friends many of them, seem to sleep and slumber like the disciples when their Master agonized in Gethsemane—but while we slumber let us be careful to have oil in our vessels. Dear Brother Jacobs, though our Master tarry, we will wait for him, for he will surely come. Yours in hope of being found worthy through Christ to inherit eternal life.

LEWIS HICKLIN.

FOR THE WESTERN MIDNIGHT CRY.

THE MIDNIGHT CRY!

Behold the cry! The midnight cry
Is sounding through the earth abroad,
Awake, ye saints, the Bridegroom's nigh,
Go forth to meet your coming Lord.

He comes to take into his arms
His holy church, his spotless bride—
To bless her with his heavenly charms,
And place her by his glorious side.

With his own hand he'll wipe the tear
Forever from her weeping eyes—
Dissolving all her griefs and fears,
Amid dissolving earth and skies.

Then on her lovely brow, a crown
Of dazzling lustre, rich and bright,
He'll place—then quick descending down
Shall reign with her on Zions height.

Then wake ye virgins! Sleep no more;
The cry is made, awake! awake!
The time of slumbering now is o'er,
Oil with your lamps in vessels take.

He comes! the Bridegroom quickly comes,
The oracles of God declare—
The bearer of eternal doome—
Of endless life—of sad despair.

Go forth to meet him, quickly go,
No time to waste with idle dreams,
'Rouse ere the seventh trumpet blow,
The night 's far spent the morning gleams.

He comes, enthroned in dazzling light,
A rain-bow spans the shining heaven,
While at his feet dark clouds of night,
And coals of fire with fury's driven.

He comes! A cry both long and loud,
Announces the Judge—the Saviour nigh,
Saints rise and meet him in the clouds,
Wise virgins, trim your lamps and fly

LETTER FROM J. H. DENHAM.

Bethel, Clermont Co., O., June 3, 1844.

Dear Bro. Jacobs:

I take this opportunity of writing you a few lines more. I did not mean to convey the idea that God has any more respect for the carnal Jew than he has for the carnal Gentile. Paul says, all are not Israel that are of Israel. Neither do I suppose, on the same principle, that all are Israel that are of the Gentiles. For there is no difference between the Jew and the Greek, for the same Lord over all is rich unto all that call upon him, Rom. 10: 12. For whosoever shall call upon the name of the Lord shall be saved, 13th verse. But it seems as if the spirit that was in the Jews at Christ's first coming, is transferred over to the Gentiles. The Gentile Churches seem as blind concerning the signs of the second advent, as the Jews were of the first advent. The Jews seem, by different accounts which I will now show, to have humbled themselves before God. See Eastern Midnight Cry, Vol. 6, number 9, page 279, last item. They seem to be returning to God in the latter or last days. Hosea 3: 4, 5. See Western Midnight Cry, Vol. 2, number 9—There is one case of a Jew's conversion. In the Midnight Cry, by L. D. Fleming, he says, "Among the Jews throughout the world, there is a general movement and looking toward the land of their fathers; their cruel persecutions in Persia quicken their movements; (in their affliction they will seek me early. Hosea 5: 15.) 4000 Jews have resolved to embrace the Gospel in one year (from 1842) if their expected Messiah does not come. 4000 more are under Christian instruction in Palestine, more than a third of whom have embraced Christ. See ibid., 74th page. The missionary papers, I am credibly informed, give most astonishing accounts of the conversion of Jews. Now, with these facts before us, I would candidly enquire, are not those passages I referred you to, confirming us the more in the fact, that the coming of Christ is just upon us? That some of the Jews at least will say, blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord, Matt. 23: 39. It need not hinder the coming of the day of God a moment, as I can possibly perceive, by admitting that a remnant will acknowledge their offence; it is already done. Concerning the manner of their being saved, your views are as correct, that it is not worth while for me to try to attempt to rectify them. I just merely wrote in the first place, to try to show that an unusual number would come in true believers, in the fullness of times, or last days.

Yours, in the blessed hope,

J. H. DENHAM.

You wished me to send you a review of your views. They cannot be bettered or made more clear, as I can perceive. J. H. D.

[The letter to which Bro. D. refers, seems to us, to claim exclusive privileges for the Jews, which subject was considered as having been put to rest by the testimony of God. It will be seen, however, that the writer did not design to occupy such ground. The present letter, and the paragraphs to which he refers, contain all that was important in the former communication.—Ed.]

Babylon.

The following comment is upon Rev. 14, 8.

"And another angel followed—saying, Babylon is fallen—With the overthrow of Babylon, that of all the enemies of Christ, and consequently happier times are connected. Babylon the great—So the city of Rome is called upon many accounts. Babylon was magnificient, strong, proud, powerful. So is Rome also. Babylon was first, Rome afterwards, the residence of the Emperors of the world. What Babylon was to Israel of old, Rome hath been both to the literal and spiritual Israel of God. Hence the liberty of the ancient Jews was connected with the overthrow of the Babylonish empire. And when Rome is finally overthrown, then the people of God will be at liberty.

"Whenever Babylon is mentioned in this book, the great, is added: to teach us, That Rome then commenced Babylon, when it commenced the great city; when it swallowed up the Grecian monarchy and its fragments, Syria in particular; and in consequence of this, obtained dominion over Jerusalem, about sixty years before the birth of Christ. Then it began, but it will not cease to be Babylon, till it is finally destroyed. Its spiritual greatness began in the fifth Century, and increased from age to age. It seems it will come to its utmost height, just before its final overthrow.

"Her fornication is, her idolatry, invocation of saints and angels, worship of images, with all that outward pomp, yea, and that fierce and bloody zeal wherewith she pretends to serve God. But with spiritual fornication, as elsewhere, so in Rome; fleshly fornication is joined abundantly. Witness the stews there, licensed by the pope, which are no inconsiderable branch of his revenue. This is fitly compared to wine, because of its intoxicating nature."

Comment upon Rev. 17: 4—6.

"And the woman was arrayed—With the utmost pomp and magnificence, in purple and scarlet—These were the colors of the imperial habit; the purple, in times of peace; and the scarlet, in times of war, having in her hand a golden cup. Like the ancient Babylon, Jer. li. 7, full of abominations. The most abominable doctrines as well as practices.

"And on her forehead a name written—Whereas the saints have the name of God and the Lamb on their foreheads, Mystery, This very word was inscribed on the front of the pope's mitre, till some of the reformers took public notice of it. Babylon the great—Benedict XIII. in his proclamation of the jubilee, A. D. 1725, explains this sufficiently. His words are, 'To this holy city, famous for the memory of so many holy martyrs, run with religious alacrity. Hasten to the place which the Lord hath chose. Ascend to this new Jerusalem, whence the law of the Lord and the light of evangelical truth hath flowed forth into all nations, from the nations, from the very first beginning of the church: the city most rightfully called the palace, placed for the pride of all ages, the city of the Lord, the Sion of the Holy One of Israel.' This Catholic and apostolical Roman church, is the head of the world, the mother of all believers, the faithful interpreter of God and mistress of all churches.' But God somewhat varies the style, the mother of harlots—The parent, ringleader, patroness, and nourisher of many daughters, that closely copy after her, and abominations—Of every kind, spiritual and fleshy, of the the earth—in all lands. In this respect she is indeed catholic or universal.

"And I saw the woman drunk with the blood of the saints—So that Rome may well be called, The slaughter-house of the martyrs. She hath shed much christian blood in every age; but at length she is even drunk with it, at the time to which the vision refers. The witnesses of Jesus—The preachers of his word. And I wondered exceedingly—At her cruelty and the patience of God."

Comment upon Rev. 18: 2.

"And he cried Babylon is fallen—This fall was mentioned before, ch. xiv. 8, but is now declared at large, and is become an habitation, a free abode of devils, and an hold, a prison, of every unclean spirit—Perhaps confined there where they had once practised all uncleanness, till the judgment of the great day. How many horrid inhabitants hath desolate Babylon? Of invisible beings, devils, and unclean spirits: Of visible, every unclean beast, every filthy and hateful bird. Suppose then that Babylon to mean heathen Rome. What have the Romanists gained? Seeing from the time of that destruction, which they say is past, these are to be its only inhabitants for ever."

On Rev. 17: 10, he fixes the probable destruction of Rome to take place about 1836.

The Time.

Comment upon Rev. 1: 3. Rev. 12: 12, 14—16.

"Happy is he that readeth, and they that hear the words of this prophecy—Some have miserably handled this book. Hence others are afraid to touch it. And while they desire to know all things else, reject only the knowledge of those which God has shewn. They enquire after any thing rather than this: as if it were written, happy is he that doth not read this prophecy. Nay but happy is he that readeth, and they that hear and keep the words thereof: especially at this time, when so considerable a part of them is on the point of being fulfilled."

"God has not given this prophecy, in so solemn a manner, only to shew his providence over his church; but also that his servants may know at all times in what particular period they are. And the more dangerous any period of time is, the greater is the help which it affords. But where may we fix the beginning and end of the little time? which is probably four-fifths of a chronos, or somewhat above 888 years. This, which is the time of the third wo, may reach from 947 to the year 1836."

"And there was given to the woman the two wings of the great eagle, that she might fly into the wilderness to her place—Eagles are the usual symbols of great potentates. So Ezekiel xvii. 3, by a great eagle means, the king of Babylon. Here the great eagle is the Roman empire; the two wings, the eastern and western branches of it. A place in the wilderness was mentioned in the sixth verse also. But it is not the same which is mentioned here. In the text there follow one after the other,

1. The dragon's waiting to devour the child.

2. The birth of the child, which is caught up to God.

3. The fleeing of the woman into the wilderness.

4. The war in heaven, and the casting out the dragon.

5. The beginning of the third wo.

6. The persecution raised by the dragon against the woman.

7. The woman's flying away upon the eagle's wings.

In like manner there follow one after the other,

1. The beginning of the twelve hundred and sixty days.

2. The beginning of the little time.

3. The beginning of the time, times, and half a time. This third period partly coincides, both with the first and the second. After the beginning of the 1260 days, or rather of the third wo, christianity was exceedingly propagated, in the midst of various persecutions. About the year 943 it was again settled in Denmark: in 965 in Poland and Silesia: in 980 through all Russia. In 997 it was brought into Hungary; into Sweden and Norway both before and after. Transylvania received it about 1000, and soon after, other parts of Dacia.

Now all the countries in which christianity was settled between the beginning of the 1260 days and the imprisonment of the dragon, may be understood by the wilderness, and by her place in particular. This place contained many countries; so that christianity now reached in an uninterrupted tract from the eastern to the western empire. And both the emperors now lent their wings to the woman, and provided a safe abode for her, where she is fed—By God rather than by man, having little human help, for a time, and times, and half a time—the length of several periods here mentioned, seem to be nearly this:

1. The non-chronos contains less than 1111 years.

2. The little time 880 years.

3. The time, times, and half a time 777 years.

4. The time of the beast 666 years.

And comparing the prophecy and history together, they seem to begin and end nearly thus:

1. The non-chronos extends from about 800 to 1836.

2. The 1260 days of the woman from 847 to 1524.

3. The little time from 947 to 1836.

4. The time, times, and a half time from 1058 to 1836.

5. The time of the beast is between the beginning and end of the three times and an half. In the year 1058 the empires had a good understanding with each other, and both protected the woman: the bishops of Rome likewise, particularly Victor II. were duly subordinate to the emperor. We may observe, the 1260 days of the woman, from 847 to 1524, and the three times and a half, refer to the same wilderness. But in the former part of the 1260 days, before the three times and an half began, namely, from the year 847 to 1058, she was fed by others, and has food herself. To this the sciences, transplanted into the west from the eastern countries, much contributed; the scriptures in the original tongues, brought into the west of Europe by the Jews and Greeks much more; and most of all the reformation grounded on those scriptures.

Water is an emblem of a great people; this water of the Turks in particular. About the year 1060 they over-ran the christian part of Asia. Afterward they poured into Europe, and spread farther and farther till they had overflowed many nations.

But the earth helped the woman—The powers of the earth; and indeed she needed help through this whole period. The time was from 1058 to 1280: during which the Turkish flood ran higher and higher, though frequently repressed by the emperors, or their generals, helping the woman. The (two) times were from 1280 to 1725. During these likewise the Turkish powers flowed far and wide. But still from time to time the princes of the earth helped the woman, that she was not carried away by it. The half time is from 1725 to 1836. In the beginning of this period, the Turks began to meddle with the affairs of Prussia, wherein they have so entangled themselves as to be the less able to prevail against the two remaining christian empires. Yet this flood still reaches the woman in her place; and will till near the end of the half-time; itself will then be swallowed up, perhaps by means of Russia, which is risen in the room of the eastern empire."

On Rev. 10: 6, he makes the sounding of the seventh angel, when the mystery of God is to be finished to take place in 1836.

Had John Wesley lived among Methodists in this age, he would have been required to "desist from agitating the subject of the time" of the great events upon which he treated, or submitted to expulsion seven or eight years ago. So much worse would he have been than a "Millerite." But, says one, time has proved his folly on these points, very well, How did you know that time would prove his folly? According to the course his professed followers in this section, have pursued towards their brethren, they would neither waited for time or scripture to prove him in error, but would have shut him out of their churches long before either of them had done it.

His arguments, to our minds, prove this: That this pious, devoted servant of God, and student of the Bible, looked to about this time in the history of the world, for the consummation, or final overthrow of antichrist, and that for the best of reasons: Because the Bible teaches it. We however differ with his views of the nature of the Millennium.

STATEMENT

To the Friends and Supporters of the Advent Cause.

Dear Brethren and Sisters,—It is now about four years since I became acquainted with Bro. Wm. Miller, and became interested in the subject of the Second Advent through his instrumentality. On a candid and patient hearing of his lectures on the subject, I became fully convinced that there was to be no literal return of the Jews, or spiritual reign on earth of a thousand years, before the resurrection of the righteous dead. I also became convinced by his illustrations of prophetic time, the advent must be nigh and the next event in order, in historical prophecy. I did not, for several months, embrace his views of the time, but was at once so deeply impressed with the truth of its being "nigh, even at the door," that I regarded it as a duty which I owed to the church and to the world, to labor for its universal promulgation.

The paper entitled the "Signs of the Times," was started with a view to a full examination of both sides of the question. During the publication of the first six months in which the arguments were given for and against the time, I became fully settled in the conviction of the truth of Mr. Miller's calculation, and avowed it accordingly.

I then resolved, by the grace of God, and the aid of the believers, to publish this message as far as possible to the entire world. The instrumentalities to be used, were, the Press, public lectures, camp-meetings, conferences, &c. Special arrangements were made for Mr. Miller to visit the principal cities in the Union. Camp-meetings and conferences were held in the less populous parts of the country. And our publications were scattered by the million, over the land and world.

What I have done in this important field of labor, has been from a solemn conviction of the truth of the Advent doctrine. The manifest approbation of God in the progress of every department of our labor, in addition to the strong reasons of its truth, greatly strengthened my faith. The reformation of thousands of the ungodly; the revival of the professors in every branch of the church, the general approbation of the doctrine by the more pious and spiritual members of the churches, and the universal opposition of the wicked, both in and out of the church, has had a strong tendency to confirm the first conviction of its truth.

The time we have published to the world, in which we expected the prophetic periods to terminate, is now past. We were mistaken as to the definite time, but not in reference to the truth of the general theory. The principles of interpretation, which give a day for a year in the prophetic portions of Daniel, and Revelations; and suppose that the prophetic periods reach down to the end of the world, we still believe, and hold with unshaken confidence. The mistake in an exact calculation does not in the least affect the correctness of these views. We therefore look with increased confidence and hope for the Advent of our King, as being now at hand. With this view we feel under stronger obligations than ever to carry forward the enterprise in which we have been engaged.

Our faith is based upon the positive testimony of the living oracles. For example: in the second chapter of Daniel, we have the metalic image of gold, silver, brass, iron and clay. Four universal monarchies, Babylon, Media and Persia united, Grecia, and Rome are here symbolized. A fifth universal and eternal kingdom was to succeed the entire destruction of the first four earthly ones. All that remains to be fulfilled now is this—the stone is to smite the image, and grind it to powder. This is the next event, and may come at any moment.

The seven trumpets also bring us down to the resurrection. The fifth and sixth, confessedly, on all hands, relate to the rise, progress, perfection and fall of the Turkish or Mahomedan power. The fifth trumpet gives the chronology of five months, or 150 years. From 1299 to 1449. The sixth gives a period of 391 years and 15 days. Beginning 1449, it ended in 1840.* Some commence the last named period in 1453, at the fall of Constantinople; with this view, it will end in June of the present year.

On the termination of this period, the "Second Woe," will have passed. And behold the "Third Woe, cometh quickly." And, "in the days of the voice of the seventh Angel, when he shall begin to sound, the mystery of God shall be finished, as he has declared to his servants, the prophets," Rev. x. 7. The next event is, the sounding of the seventh trumpet. Then the kingdoms of this world are to become the kingdoms of our Lord and his Christ; and he shall reign forever and ever. And the nations were angry, and thy wrath is come, and the time of the dead that they should be judged, and that thou shouldst destroy them that destroy the earth," Rev. xi. 15, 18. This is the time when the "Lord himself shall descend from Heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God," 1 Thess. iv. 16.

The recent events in the east, which relate to the Turkish Empire, furnish the strongest evidence of its speedy dissolution. About the time of this event the seventh angel will sound, and the "mystery of God will be finished." Christ will come in his glory. There is no way to avoid this conviction. Christ is "at the door."

Another reason for our faith is founded upon the signs of the coming of Christ, as given in the Gospels. In connexion with the descriptions given of his personal and glorious Advent in the clouds of Heaven, he has given us several signs. The sun shall be darkened, the moon withdraw her light, the stars should fall from heaven. Nations should be in perplexity—men's hearts would fail them for fear, &c. Then, they were to see the Son of Man coming in the clouds of heaven with power and great glory. And when these things begin to come to pass, then look up and lift up your heads: for your redemption draweth nigh. See Matt. 24, Mark 13, Luke 21. These signs have all been fulfilled. Nothing remains now but the grand event, and that must be at the very door. Again, we repeat, there is no way to evade the conclusion: Christ is at the door.

It will be seen then, that if the prophetic periods are not fully understood, as to their exact termination, we have events and signs there is no mistaking, which show the Advent nigh.

How then shall we give up our faith and hope? We see no way for any mistake in these reasons for expecting the personal advent of Christ, as an event for which we may rationally look every hour.

With these views of this subject we cannot cast away our confidence, which has great recompence of reward. But shall rather exercise patience, after having done the will of God, lest the promised reward should be lost. For yet a little while, and he that shall come, will come, and will not tarry. See Heb. x. 25, 39.

If the above view is correct, the labors and sacrifices of the friends of the Advent cause have not been in vain. All our fondest wishes and blessed and glorious hopes are soon to be realized. What time remains, then, should be occupied in watchfulness and prayer, and more abundant labors for the salvation of men.

The Advent meetings, lectures, and papers, should be sustained. The publications should be scattered: and not only keep what ground we have gained, but we should make advances into the ranks of those that are sleeping upon their arms. There should be no giving up—no going back—no temporizing—no truce with a Laodicean church.

Out-list all the soul within you,
For the truth's sake go abroad!
Strike! let every nerve and sinew,
Tell on ages—tell for God.

MY STEWARDSHIP.

In connexion with the above statement of my general views, and course of action, it may be proper to give a brief statement in relation to the business, and financial department.

I have endeavored to conduct the business department under my care from the commencement, on the most efficient and economical principles. I have regarded myself as a steward, and have used the means put into my hands for the advancement of this the most sacred of causes, according to the abilities which God hath given me.

I began the "Signs of the Times," without means but not without faith that it would be sustained. In its publication together with that of the "Midnight Cry," at New York, and the "Second Advent Library," in this city, with various other publications here and elsewhere, in all amounting to five millions; my rule has been to publish and scatter according to the means furnished by divine providence. When I have had little, I proceeded on a small scale, and when furnished liberally, I scattered profusely. So that I have never been embarrassed, or brought disgrace upon the cause by any financial delinquencies. From forty to fifty persons have been employed, and have all received their just demands. Others with whom I have traded largely as men of business, can testify to our punctuality and faithfulness.

My business transactions are all open to the inspection of both friends and foes.—We have been closely watched by the enemies of the cause, and if any thing could have been discovered to impeach my character, it would have been done.

Having said thus much, I now wish to state that I have only sufficient means to meet my present liabilities up to the first of next month. There are subscriptions due on the Midnight Cry at New York, and the Advent Herald in this city, as also, money due for books, from agents, which, if paid in, will enable me to meet the expenses of the offices, and papers up to the present volume without embarrassment.

I have been thus particular because of the current reports now circulated through the length and breadth of the land, that I have greatly enriched myself by the Advent cause! Some, no doubt, really believe it. I shall not defend myself farther than to say, that my books are at the service of all who wish to make an examination. And that I offer my accusers every felicity to obtain the facts in the case.

My purpose now is to continue the papers, and publications as heretofore, while they may be needed. I have no doubt that the means to sustain them will be afforded, as long as they are of use to the cause of God. This I now leave with God, and the friends of his cause to dispose of.

The brethren and friends throughout the country who have aided in the work by donations and labors, will accept my heartfelt acknowledgments for the confidence they have reposed in me, as their fellow laborer, and agent in distributing their appropriations to the cause.

The infallible record is on high. When that shall be opened, and we are called to give an account of our stewardship, may the word be spoken to us all, "Well done good and faithful servant, enter thou into the joys of thy Lord." JOSHUA V. HIMES.

Boston, May 29, 1844.

Blessed are the pure in heart: for they shall see God.—Matt. 5: 8.

*See Litch's Exposition, vol. 2.

The following are selected from among some extracts compiled from the Bible, and English writers, and published in the last "Advent Herald." It appears that they have been printed in England upon a letter sheet, for distribution.

CHRIST CRUCIFIED.

* * * "Some persons attempt to justify an exclusive preaching of the first Advent, by a text of the Apostle's in which he says, 'We preach Christ crucified,' as if the death of the Lord were the exclusive theme of his preaching:—this exposition is false * * * the Second Advent holds a prominent place in the preaching of St. Paul, as well as in that of the Lord and the Apostles. But it is not only false, it is a gross perversion of the Apostle's words. We know that the word CHRIST is the GREEK translation of MESSIAH. Let us then substitute this word—"We preach a crucified MESSIAH,"—and the perversion will appear evident; for what does MESSIAH signify? MESSIAH is the name of our Lord's threefold office of Prophet, Priest and King. * * * If we omit the doctrine of the second Advent, we leave out one of our Lord's offices. * * * The Prophets every where testify of two comings of the MESSIAH—one to suffer, one to reign. And if we preach only one of them, we do not preach the crucified Messiah of the Prophets, nor of St. Paul."—Plain Sermons, p. 277, by the Rev. J. A. McCAUL, D. D.

THE SECOND ADVENT.

"The time is past when we could regard as a matter of comparative indifference the receiving of this doctrine,—the speedy, personal, premillenial appearing of the Lord Jesus Christ. We now feel it to be a matter of such vital importance, that no person rejecting it can rightly understand the Scriptures; and though he may build upon the Rock, and so be personally safe, his work, if he be a minister, certainly will not prove to be either of gold or precious stones.—We say NOW, because the signs are such as to leave no excuse for closing their eyes any longer against the broad clear light of advancing day."—Charlotte Elizabeth. Christian Lady's Magazine, 1843.

* * * "In case of the first Advent, according to the predictions of the prophet, the events, as we have seen, proved the correctness of the literal interpretation. And so it will be in the case now before us. (See Luke, i: 32; Acts, i: 11.) To deny this, is to deal in a most arbitrary manner with the language of the prophets; assuming that nothing can be literally predicted but what has already been fulfilled."—Sermons on the Second Advent, p. 71, by the Rev. H. McNEILE, M. A.

* * * "Prophecy, compared with history, has 'fixed an insurmountable barrier at the threshold of infidelity.' This strong hold of evidence is, however, from taking prophecy in its obvious literal meaning, and history in its manifest literal facts. If it be improper to interpret Moses and the prophets literally, then history cannot be appealed to for evidence of inspiration. On the contrary, if it be proper to appeal to the facts of history as evidence of inspiration, then the literal interpretation of Moses and the prophets is established."—Lectures on the Prophecies, p. xxxi. by the Rev. H. McNEILE, M. A.

* * * "It is a serious question how far we are enabled to adventure the confidence of our hearts upon the bare Word of God without a voucher."—The same, p. xxxix. (See Jer, xxxi. 42.)

* * * "The Lord himself, who spake but little about his death, and the benefits to flow from it, and that little to his disciples only, speaks at great length and with minuteness concerning His second advent, and that to all classes of men, to his friends and enemies, his disciples and his judges; so that he evidently considered it as a doctrine requiring frequent notice, and necessary to be known by all the sons of men. His allusions to his sufferings and death are few and short. His descriptions of his second advent are frequent and long." (See xxiv. and xxv. Matt.; xiii. Matt.; xxii. Luke.) Plain Sermons, p. 257–8–9, by the Rev. J. A. McCAUL, D. D.

* * * "But there are others who flatter themselves that they have repented. To such I would repeat one question that I have already put:—Have you ever prayed for the coming of the Lord Jesus Christ? And I would add another. Have you ever wished for it? or do you feel a secret misgiving that all will not be well at that great day; an internal conviction that your profession of religion is but hollowness and hypocrisy?"—Plain Sermons, p. 247.

* * * "Consider this objection. Let us for a moment grant the supposition that it is only a providential movement, (viz. Luke, xvii. 26–30, &c.) and then, I ask, where is His personal coming revealed in all the Bible? Where is there a passage left which predicts his personal coming? And surely that cardinal point of Christian truth, the coming of Jesus Christ in glory to judge the world, will not be denied altogether. Where then is it revealed? Select your passage; and whatever passage you select, we will show that it must be fulfilled at the commencement of the Millennium. If you deny our Lord's personal coming at the commencement of the Millennium, we deny it altogether, and require you to prove it. If you do advance texts to prove it, we take the contexts of your proofs, and proceed to show that it must be at the commencement of the Millenium. This is of itself sufficient to refute the objection."—Sermons on the Second Advent, p. 35, by the Rev. H. McNEILE, M. A.

* * * "Furthermore supposing the passage (xx. Rev. 7,) did imply this; supposing that it did not afford foundation for saying that the world, subsequent to the Millennium, would be in that condition; still the objection would not hold good against our argument; for I proceed to shew you, not only that the world shall be in a wicked state at the coming of the Lord, but that it shall continue in such a state till the Lord comes."—Sermons on the Second Advent, p. 61.

FURTHER PROOF.—* * * "'For the earth shall be filled with the knowledge of the Lord as the waters cover the seas.' Such a period, you are well aware, is plainly and repeatedly predicted. Now I wish to show you, that the coming of the Lord Jesus Christ will precede, and usher in, that glorious state of blessedness on earth. It will precede it; for at the time of our Lord's coming, the earth, instead of being in a millennial state of holiness and happiness, and harmony, will be in a state resembling the wide-spread wickedness of the days of Noah and Lot. This is precise and plain, as you learn from the xvii. chap. of Luke."—Sermons on the Second Advent, p. 56.

* * * "It will scarcely be denied, that the Bible describes our Lord Jesus Christ as having come to this earth, (Mark xvi. 19,) as surely to come again in like manner as he went away, (Acts i. 11,) and so CONCLUDES, without any mention of his leaving the earth again. The Bible closes, leaving the Lord upon the earth! Whatever, therefore, is written or spoken, concerning his or our final departure from the earth, is purely gratuitous, in addition to the Bible."—Sermons on the Second Advent, p. xvii.

CHRONOLOGICAL CALCULATION.

The following is an extract of a letter we have received from P. H. Gosse, Esq., of London:

"Your calculations of time are subject to a slight error, (amounting only to a single year however,) arising from an element in the process not being attended to, which is in fact little known except to Chronologers. It is the fact, that the year called* 1, B. C., was followed, not by a year called 0, but by the one called 1, A. D. Hence there is an apparent loss of a year, so that in calculating periods which reach from one era into the other, if we merely subtract the date of the former era, from the period, we shall have, not the true date of the termination, but one just a year short of it. To give an example—a period of 11 years commences on the 5th June, in the year 7, B. C.: when will it terminate? Many would say, take 7 from 11, leaves 4: answer 5 June, 4, A. D. But the true answer is 5th June, 5, A. D. as you will see by counting the years. The period begins 7th June, 7, B. C.

|---|---|---|
| The 1st year has elapsed, | | 5th June, 6, B. C. |
| The 2d year | " " | 5th June, 5, B. C. |
| The 3d year | " " | 5th June, 4, B. C. |
| The 4th year | " " | 5th June, 3, B. C. |
| The 5th year | " " | 5th June, 2, B. C. |
| The 6th year | " " | 5th June, 1, B. C. |
| The 7th year | " " | 5th June, 1, A. D. |
| The 8th year | " " | 5th June, 2, A. D. |

I have chosen a short period for convenience of counting, but of course you will see its application to periods of any length, provided they commence B. C. The only doubt possible is whether the fact is so, that the year 0 does not exist in Chronology: I have considerable means of reference, having access to the largest library in England,

* This is not at all affected by the actual time of Christ's birth, which was 4 B. C. but is a question of pure chronology.

that of the British Museum, and I can give you my word that it is: but a reference to any copious Chronological tables would show the fact. Blair's in particular. The consequence is that the great periods which you supposed to terminate in 1843, do terminate in 1844."

It is now about five months since we discovered the same "element in the process," though not exactly in the way mentioned by Mr. Cosse. While we subtracted 457 from 2300, leaving 1843, we added 457 and 1843 together, which made 2300. We at once perceived that it required the whole of 457 B. C. and the whole of 1843 A. C. to constitute 2300 years. So that if the decree to restore and build Jerusalem went forth on the first day of the year 457 B. C., it would require till the first day of the year 1844 to complete 2300 years. Or if the edict were issued in any subsequent part of the year, the 2300 years would not terminate till the corresponding period in 1844.

* * * * * *

The above principle will apply with equal propriety to the SEVEN TIMES, or the 2520 years. The date of the commencement is the captivity of Manassah, which, according to the best chronologers, took place in the year 677 B. C. Subtract 677 from 2520 and the remainder is 1843. Then add 677 and 1843 together and you have 2520. This proves that it requires the whole of 677 B. C., and the whole of 1843 A. C. to consummate 2520 years. So that if the captivity of Manassah took place in the year 677 B. C., it would, of course, demand till the same period in the year 1844.

This is the only light which we have in relation to the time.

We believe that God will not exceed his own date even by a fraction. "At the time appointed the end shall be." "The vision is yet for an appointed time, but at the end it shall speak and not lie; though it [apparently] tarry, wait for it; because it will surely come, it will not [really] tarry.—Voice of Elijah.

WHO CAN DOUBT?

Doubt what? The coming of the Lord. Certainly, we know not a single reason why a single doubt should be entertained on a subject so strongly fortified with facts and truth, and which is daily being strengthened with the addition of new and most convincing testimony.

No one truth is more clearly sustained by divine testimony than that which proclaims the near coming of the adorable Lord. A seven-fold wall of light has been thrown around it, by the unerring hand of inspiration, which all the learned and unlearned assaults of the darkness of this infidel age have not in the least impaired. No, thanks to the wise and Omnipotent Builder, every attack which has been made against it has served more fully to develope its invulnerable strength, and super-excellent glory, grandeur and beauty.

The numerous witnesses, though standing, many of them, far remote in point of time from each other; yet what perfect harmony marks their heavenly story. The light of prophecy, which shineth in a dark place until the day dawn, caught their eye, inspired their tongues, and guided their pens. They spake as they were moved by the Holy Spirit. Hence their testimonies agree—are one in proclaiming the coming of the Lord at the very doors. And who can doubt their testimony? It is folly, nay madness, to even waver on a subject which the wisdom of the Highest has been so visibly manifested in proving true, as the speedy coming of Christ.

If you are troubled with doubts, go to God and his word, in fervent and constant prayer. Review the evidences which first produced your precious faith, and your doubts will soon be gone, and you will be found "lifting up your hands rejoicing, knowing that your redemption draweth nigh."

If the time is not at the door when God will "gather together in one all things in Christ," why do the seven times predicted by Moses for the scattering of His people, (the 2,300 and the 1,335 days in Daniel's prophecy, at the end of which the sanctuary is to be cleansed, and Daniel stand in his lot,) we ask, why do they terminate at about this time? And why do John's seals, trumpets, woes, witnesses, 42 months, and 1,260 days—Paul's revelation and destruction of the man of sin, his perilous times—Peter's last days of scoffing, and Jude's last times of mocking—Christ's signs in the sun, moon, stars, earth, and seas—the distress and perplexity of nations—the growing wickedness and crime of our distracted world—the apathy, unbelief, divisions, confusion, corruption, and revelry, of the Laodicean church around us—we again ask, why do these and many other witnesses we might name, all, yes ALL, as it were, stand with the hand uplifted towards heaven, and "swear by him who liveth forever and ever," that the auspicious moment has come, in which we should look for the coming of the Lord in power and great glory?

Most certainly this is their testimony, and God, who cannot lie, has inspired it. It is his own word; and though heaven and earth pass away, his word will not fail. It never has failed, but has immutably established its divinity by the fulfilment of a thousand or more of its own predictions. And shall we, or can we, for a moment doubt the accomplishment of its last and most glorious promise? God forbid! We will hold fast the profession of our faith without wavering, for he is faithful who has promised." The Lord will surely come at the time appointed, and that time is at the door. Be ready to meet it!

Voice of Truth.

FUNDAMENTAL PRINCIPLES

ON WHICH

THE SECOND ADVENT CAUSE IS BASED.

I.—The Word of God teaches that this earth is to be regenerated, in the restitution of all things, and restored to its Eden state, as it came from the hand of its Maker before the fall, and is to be the eternal abode of the righteous in their resurrection state.

II.—The only Millennium found in the word of God, is the thousand years which are to intervene between the first and second resurrections, as brought to view in the 20th of Revelation. And the various portions of Scripture which are adduced as evidence of such a period in time, are to have their fulfilment only in the New Earth, wherein dwelleth righteousness.

III.—The only restoration of Israel yet future, is the restoration of the Saints to the New Earth, when "the Lord my God shall come, and all his saints with him.

IV.—The signs which were to precede the Coming of our Saviour, have all been given; and the prophecies have all been fulfilled but those which relate to the coming of Christ, the end of this world, and the restitution of all things.

V.—There are none of the prophetic periods, as we understand them, extending beyond the [Jewish] year 1843.

☞ The above we shall ever maintain as the immutable truths of the word of God, and therefore, till our Lord come, we shall ever look for his return as the next event in historical prophecy.

NOTE.—The above was written in the Jewish year 1843, which has now expired. According to the best chronologers the captivity of Manasseh, the commencement of the seven times, or 2520 years of Levit. 26th, was B. C. 677; also the captivity of Jehoiakim, the commencement of the Great Jubilee, or 2450 years, was B. C. 607; also the decree to rebuild Jerusalem in the seventh of Artaxerxes, the commencement of the 70 weeks and 2300 days, of Daniel 8th and 9th, was given B. C. 457; and also the taking away of Paganism in Rome, the commencement of the 1335 days of Daniel 12th, was about A. D. 508. Reckoning from those several dates, the respective periods can extend only to about the Jewish year 1843. This being ended, our published time is now past; but as we can find no new dates for the events from which we have reckoned those periods, we cannot extend them beyond the time specified, which has been our only time; and yet our faith is as strong as ever, that at the end of those periods the Lord will surely come; while we can only wait for his coming such time as human chronology may have varied from the exact time—continually looking for, and momentarily expecting his appearing. This we do in accordance with Hab. ii. 3,—"For the vision is yet for an appointed time, but at the end" [of the prophetic periods] "it shall speak and not lie; though it tarry," [beyond their apparent termination] "wait for it; because" [when they are fulfilled] "it will surely come, it will not tarry."

WESTERN MIDNIGHT CRY.

CINCINNATI, JUNE 29, 1844.

LECTURES

Will be delivered (providence permitting) at the Fourth Street Hall, between Main and Sycamore, on Sabbath next, at the usual hours throughout the day and evening.

Lectures, prayer and conference meetings will be held at the Engine House on Fifth street, each evening in the week except Monday and Saturday.

GREAT TENT MEETING.

The Great Tent (providence permitting) will be pitched at Madison, Indiana, at the junction of Main Cross, and Vernon Streets, in the west part of the city, sometime during next week, and the meeting commenced on July 7th, to continue eight or nine days, should the weather be favorable.

The Tent is of circular form, 100 feet in diameter, and will accommodate about 2000 persons.

Lectures may be expected from J. Litch, of Philadelphia, S. S. Brewer, of New York, and E. Jacobs, of Cincinnati, embracing all the great Scripture truths, relative to the Second Advent of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, now especially "nigh, even at the doors."

All are invited to come and hear, and then judge for themselves; remembering that if "we be beside ourselves, it is to God: or whether we be sober, it is for your cause."

I have taken the entire responsibility of this appointment upon myself, trusting in God; without any assurance from a single individual, of receiving a dollar towards defraying the expenses, which will probably amount to more than $200.

Those friends who may feel it their duty to aid this missionary enterprise, will make their remittances to me at Cincinnati, or communicate with me personally, at Madison.

E. JACOBS,

Superintendent of the Tent Meeting.

Cincinnati, June 29th, 1844.

ARREARS.

Those persons that are owing us for either, or all, of the first three volumes of the Western Midnight Cry, will please make their remittances to J. V. Himes, Cincinnati, without delay. We are very sure that all honest persons that have it in their power will comply with this request, when we say to them, that it is very much needed at this time, to replace some funds that have been borrowed to complete the volume.

☞ Brother Himes, writes us from the camp meeting at Adison, Vt., that Bro. Litch will be with us about the first of July, and remain about two weeks. He will probably lecture at the Tabernacle July 7th.

WESTERN MIDNIGHT CRY, VOL. 2 AND 3.

About 40 copies of these two volumes can be had neatly bound together, in boards for $1,50, or bound with paper covers for $1,25 each. They contain Mr. Miller's Lectures, and a vast amount of reading matter upon all points connected with the Second Advent doctrine.

VOLUME 4.

The present number completes volume 3, and if needed, the fourth volume will be commenced, so soon as funds are received for the purpose.

Brother Stuart arrived here from Philadelphia, on Sabbath last—Lectured on Tuesday and Wednesday evenings, and is now lecturing at New Richmond, in Clermont county, twenty miles from this place. His friends, who wish to communicate with him will direct to him at Cincinnati, Ohio.

☞ An apology is due our friends for not making acknowledgments regularly. Our only excuse is, that the letters have not been regularly placed in our hands, and we have had nothing to do with the financial department of the office. We presume, for the most part, that monies received for the paper have been accredited on the mail books.

THE DEPOT.

The depository of Second Advent books has been removed from Third, to Fifth street, three doors west of Smith street, south side—the residence of bro. Kiloh, who has kindly consented to take charge of all matters connected with the office. Friends from abroad will make their remittances for publications, and send their orders as formerly, to J. V. Himes, Cincinnati, Ohio.

JOSIAH LITCH.

The peculiar views held by this brother for a number of years past, relative to some of the events marking the termination of the prophetic periods, will, of course, awaken an anxiety to hear upon the subject. Our friends will please spread the notice of his Lectures commencing at the Tabernacle, July 7th.

SIXTH STREET CHURCH.

There are some who seem to think, that whatever cause believers in the soon coming of our Lord, may have had for withdrawing their fellowship from some churches in this city, they have had no sufficient reason for leaving such a charitable, free, orthodox, republican, and "mutual rights" body of people, as that comprising the membership of the Methodist Protestant Church in Sixth street: but alas! we are daily admonished that 'all is not gold that shines.' Says one, "Our principles are good, and if there be improper acts of administration, that does not alter the principle." So says the blinded devotee of Romanism: whatever acts of abomination the members of the Roman Catholic Church may be guilty of, "The Church" has never erred, nor never can.

The following proceedings will speak for themselves, relative to the position said Church occupies.

Sister Metcalf, has been connected with the Methodist Church since 1815, and with the Methodist Protestant Church in this city since its organization, which was about fifteen years ago. During the whole of this time, no complaint was ever made against her, and she never failed to pay her quarterage till about eight months since. She testifies of having lived with a reference to the coming of the Lord from the time she embraced religion; and that the "Midnight Cry" was a glad sound to her. About four weeks ago, the preacher in charge came to her enquiring her reasons for not attending her class? She gave in answer, that she was looking for her Lord, and her Leader, in the room of leading her into this Bible doctrine, had declared that he would leave the Church if it was preached there. The next day, the preacher in charge again called, and requested her to take her letter and leave the Church. This she refused, hoping that they might yet learn to "look for" and love the Saviour's appearing. He then told her that it was made his painful duty to inform her that she would be brought to trial before the brethren, unless she took her letter; but would not tell her for what; and if he failed to inform her, the brethren would bring him to trial. Having lived in peace, and thus understanding that the decree had gone forth, she consented to receive her letter. The following is a copy:

"Harriet Metcalf, a member of the Methodist Protestant Church, being DESIROUS to withdraw, is entitled to this certificate of her good standing.

"JAMES E. WILSON, Superintendent.

"Cincinnati Station, May 28th, 1841."

Feeling some anxiety to know what charges could have been brought against her by those she had so long fellowshiped, she made inquiry, and was informed by a member of the official board, that the charges were "HETERODOXY and CONTUMACY"—for believing things contrary to the established opinion, and for disobedience to lawful authority. No definition of these terms refers to the word of God as an only and sufficient rule of faith and practice. What higher prerogatives has ever the Church of Rome assumed, than to try persons for Heterodoxy and Contumacy? We have been accused of causing divisions in the Church—of breaking up churches, &c. In one sense, the charge is true; and the above account illustrates the manner in which it is done.

The Second Advent doctrine is doing to the Methodist Protestant Church in Sixth street, what Christ told Peter, the gates of hell should not do to HIS CHURCH. And is there any wonder, while said church continues to fellowship and acknowledge in "good standing," persons, who in their estimation, are guilty of Heterodoxy and Contumacy? Of which fact, sister Metcalf's letter is proof.

This looks like saying to Satan, If you will leave us, and not torment us before the time, we will acknowledge that you are in good standing with us; but if you will not go, we will just let people know that you are the Devil.

SEVENTH SEAL.

BY E. JACOBS.

Rev. 8: 1, "And when he had opened the Seventh Seal there was silence in Heaven about the space of half an hour."

To ascertain when this takes place, we must see where the events under the opening of the Sixth Seal have left us. Rev. 6: 12, "And I beheld when he had opened the Sixth Seal, and lo, there was a great earthquake; and the Sun became black as sackcloth of hair, and the moon became as blood;" (ver. 13,) and the stars of Heaven fell unto the earth, even as a fig tree casteth her untimely figs when shaken of a mighty wind." The same events are predicted, and in the same order, in Luke 21: 25, "And there shall be signs in the sun, and in the moon, and in the stars; (ver. 27,) then shall they see the Son of man coming in a cloud," &c. Matt. 24: 29, "The sun shall be darkened, and the moon shall not give her light, and the stars shall fall from Heaven," &c.; (ver. 30,) and they shall see the Son of man coming in the clouds of Heaven with power and great glory." Mark 13: 24, "The sun shall be darkened, and the moon shall not give her light, (ver. 25,) and the stars of Heaven shall fall, (ver. 26,) and then shall they see the Son of man coming in the clouds of Heaven with power and great glory." Isa. 13: 10, "For the stars of Heaven and the constellations thereof shall not give their light; the sun shall be darkened in his going forth, and the moon shall not cause her light to shine, and I will punish the world," &c. Ezekiel 32: 7, "I will cover the heavens, and make the stars thereof dark; I will cover the sun with a cloud, and the moon shall not give her light, (ver. 10,) and their Kings shall be horribly afraid," &c. Joel 2: 10, "The sun and the moon shall be dark, and the stars shall withdraw their shining; (ver. 11,) and the Lord shall utter his voice, &c., (ver. 31,) the sun shall be turned into darkness and the moon into blood, before the great and the terrible day of the Lord comes." Joel 3: 15, "The sun and the moon shall be darkened, and the stars shall withdraw their shining; (ver. 16,) the Lord shall come out of Zion," &c. Amos 8: 9, "And it shall come to pass in that day, saith the Lord God, that I will cause the sun to go down at noon, and I will darken the earth in the clear day, (ver 10,) and will turn your feasts into mourning," &c. Acts 2: 20, "The sun shall be turned into darkness, and the moon into blood, before that great and notable day of the Lord come." These parallel texts and their connexional reading harmonize so well with the events predicted to transpire under the opening of the Sixth Seal, that we have no grounds to doubt the same things being brought to view. The earthquake mentioned, we suppose, embraces the events named in the 14th verse. If we were to give a history of such an event, we should be likely to say, "there was a great earthquake; such and such were the signs of its commencement, and such its final termination."

The first thing named as the commencement, or sign of this approaching earthquake, is the darkening of the sun.

The following scraps from history will show that this has taken place, and when:

"The 19th May, 1780, was a remarkable dark day. Candles were lighted in many houses. The birds were silent and disappeared. The fowls retired to rest. It was the general opinion that the Day of Judgment was at hand. The Legislature of Connecticut was in session at Hartford, but being unable to transact business, adjourned. A motion for adjournment was before the Council; but when the opinion of Col. Davenport, [of Stamford,] was requested, he replied—'I am against the adjournment. The Day of Judgment is either at hand or it is not. If it is not, there is no cause for the adjournment; if it is, I wish to be found in the line of my duty. I wish, therefore, that candles may be brought.'"—President Dwight, in Ct. Historical Collections.

"Dark Day of May 19, 1780.—The sun rose clear, and shone for several hours; at length, the sky became overcast with clouds, and by ten o'clock, A. M. the darkness was such as to occasion the farmers to leave their work in the field, and retire to their dwellings; fowls went to their roosts, and, before noon, lights became necessary to the transaction of business within doors. The darkness continued through the day; and the night until near morning was as unusually dark as the day."—Gage's History of Rowley, Mass.

"Anniversary of the Dark Day.—The Dark Day, May 19, 1780, is thus described by Mr. Stone, in his History of Beverly:

The sun rose clear, but soon assumed a brassy hue. About 10 o'clock, A. M. it became unusually dark. The darkness continued to increase till about one o'clock, when it began to decrease. During this time candles became necessary. The birds disappeared and were silent, the fowls went to their roosts, the cocks crew as at daybreak, and every thing bore the appearance and gloom of night. The alarm produced by this unusual aspect of the Heavens was great, and tradition has preserved many anecdotes of terror."—Portsmouth Journal, May 20, 1843.

"In the Dark Day, May 19, 1780, the heavens were covered with a dense cloud for three or four hours . . . . During this time, the clouds were tinged with a yellowish or faint red, for hours, for which no satisfactory cause has been assigned. I stood and viewed the phenomenon, but had not any fear that the world was coming to an end."—N. Webster, Ll. D.—New Haven Daily Herald.

The next in the catalogue of predictions in the text is the signs in the moon.

"The following is an extract of a letter from Mr. Beadle, at Alleppo, and published in the Missionary Herald of June, 1842, page 234. It is an account of an earthquake in that place in 1822. He says, 'On the night of the earthquake, there was something peculiar in the atmosphere, the moon appearing as red as blood. This greatly alarmed the inhabitants, who were continually crying out—Now we shall hear the trumpet sound! and the dead will rise! the day of judgment has arrived!'"

"Night after the Dark Day of 1780.—The darkness of the following evening was probably as gross as has ever been observed since the Almighty first gave birth to light. I could not help conceiving at the time, that if every luminous body in the universe had been shrouded in impenetrable darkness, could not have been more complete. A sheet of white paper held within a few inches of the eyes, was equally invisible with the blackest velvet."—Rev. Mr. Tenny, of Exeter, N. H., quoted by Mr. Gage "to the Historical Society."

Many accounts of similar appearances in the moon since 1780, might be added but the above will suffice.

The next event here predicted, and the last to transpire before the heavens depart as a scroll, is, "the stars of heaven fell unto the earth, even as a fig tree casteth her untimely figs, &c.

The following is an extract from an article by Mr. Henry Dana Ward, published in the N. Y. Journal of Commerce, November 15, 1833, and now taken from the Bible Reader, No. 2. "Modern Phenomenon of the heavens," by Henry Jones. The phenomena here referred to, was on the morning of the 13th of November, 1833.

"One of the family arose at 5 o'clock, A. M., to prepare for leaving the city in the 7 o'clock boat. He threw up the windows to see whether the dawn had come; and behold the east was lighted up, and the heavens were apparently falling. He rubed his eyes, first in doubt, but seeing on every side the starry firmament, as if it were broken up, and falling like the flakes of snow, and whitening the skies, he aroused the whole family. At the cry, 'look out of the window,' I sprang from a deep sleep, and with wonder saw the east lighted up with the dawn and METEORS. The zenith, the north, and the west, also showed the falling stars, in the very image of one thing, and of only one, I ever heard of. I called to my wife to behold: and while robing, she exclaimed: 'See how the stars fall!' I replied, 'that is the wonder;' and we felt in our hearts, that it was a sign of the last days. For truly 'the stars of heaven fell unto the earth, even as a fig tree casteth her untimely figs, when she is shaken of a mighty wind.'—Rev. 6: 13. This language of the prophet has always been received as metaphorical. Yesterday it was literally fulfilled. The ancients understood by aster in Greek, and stella in Latin, the smaller lights of heaven. The refinement of modern astronomy has made the distinction between stars of heaven and meteors of heaven. Therefore, the idea of the prophet, as it is expressed in the original Greek, was literally fulfilled in the phenomenon of yesterday, so as no man before yesterday had conceived to be possible that it should be fulfilled. The immense size and distance of the planets and fixed stars forbid the idea of their falling unto the earth. Larger bodies cannot fall in myriads unto a smaller body; but most of the planets and all the fixed stars are many times larger than our earth. They cannot fall unto the earth; but these fell toward the earth."

This remarkable literal fulfillment of prophecy, being fresh in the recollection of so many, we make no further extracts. But we are told again and again, that these things are not to be understood literally; and why not? Is there a single Scriptural reason why? The whole of the Christian era, down to near the close of the last century, has passed away without a single record, now to be found on the page of history, of events fulfilling these predictions on the inspired page, until those named in the above quotations. Similar statements to this have been denied, but we say again, although the world has been searched for the last few years, and large sums of money offered, yet every effort to prove that any similar events transpired prior to 1779 have failed. Yet Pharisees of these days, as well as Pharisees of old, are ready to say, "Master, we would see a sign from thee." Meteorologists are producing about the same effect upon the public mind, as did the magicians, and astrologers of Egypt.

The next thing to take place under the sixth seal is, "the heaven departed as a scroll when it is rolled together."

This is strong inferential proof that "the sign of Son of man in heaven," (Matt. 24: 30) is directly connected with his personal appearing.

Of the fulfillment of this prediction, we have no record, none can be found. It is not fulfilled, but it very soon must be, for it is the next event.

Then "every mountain and island were moved out of their places," the next event to take place after the heaven has departed. Meterologists, soothsayers, &c., still find customers, for all these things do not appear greatly to alarm the inhabitants. No consternation is manifested by the kings of the earth, the great men, the rich men, the chief captains, the mighty men, the bond men, and the free men; until they see the face of Him that sitteth on the throne. (verse 16.) The departing heavens, will probably be accounted for by the star gazers and meterologists. The removing of mountains and islands, in some of the shocks of this last tremendous earthquake, will not cause sufficient alarm for great men to cry out—that would betray weakness. No particular fright till the face of Him that sitteth on the throne is seen. This last scene causes so much alarm, to those who have long rejected the offers of mercy, that they fly to falling rocks, and dissolving mountains, as friends and protectors; and offer their last prayers to the only god they ever worshipped, and that too, at the very moment she is sinking to perdition. They now make an acknowledgment which the fulfillment of all the foretold signs failed to extort from them, viz: "The great day of his wrath is come;" and add the mournful inquiry, "Who shall be able to stand?" The time of trouble for the ungodly, which now transpires, is brought to view by the prophet Daniel at the close of the predicted events which are to wind up the world's history. (Ch. 12: 1.) See also Rev. 16: 18, 20 and Rev. 11: 13, 18. But the servants of God are to be delivered when this great day of trouble comes. See Isa. 26: 20, 21, "Come, my people, enter thou into thy chambers, and shut thy doors about thee: hide thyself as it were a little moment, until the indignation be overpast. For behold the Lord cometh out of his place to punish the inhabitants of the earth for their iniquity: the earth also shall disclose her blood, and shall no more cover her slain." Jer. 30: 7, "Alas! for that day is great, so that none is like it: it is even the time of Jacob's trouble, but he shall be saved out of it." See also Rev. 15: 2 and 4: 6. The events under the sixth seal have left the great men, &c., in the midst of the great day of God's wrath. Before showing the events under the seventh seal, the revelator goes back, in chap. 7, and brings up the history of the church to the period where he has left the wicked. He shows us the circumstances connected with their deliverance—the sealing time, which has been going on since the commencement of the present century, under the last peculiar dispensation of the gospel mentioned in Rev. 14: 6, 7, in which the true Israel of God are sealed, and soon after delivered. He sees them before the throne and hears their songs of praise. (Rev. 7: 10, 17.) They have been caught up, (1st Thess. 4: 17,) changed in a moment, (1st Cor. 15: 52,) and delivered as soon, or before the wicked began to cry to the rocks and mountains. They are now safe, and free forever from the scoffs and jeers of an ungodly world, and the cold calumnies of a proud Pharasaic Church.

Here the sixth Seal leaves us; the wicked in the midst of the great day of God's wrath, and the Saints in the air before the throne; but this is not the consummation, for the Saints are to inherit the earth.—Matt. 5: 5; Rev. 5: 10; Dan. 7: 18, 27; Ps. 37: 9, 11, 29, 34. The opening of the Seventh Seal concludes the whole scene, and brings Heaven and earth into the condition that God originally designed for them; the condition in which they are to remain forever. The text should be the last verse of the 7th ch. as it concludes the subject of the Seals; placing it in the first verse in chapter eight, is only man's work—he alone having the responsibility of dividing the Bible into chapters and verses. The Revelator has named none of the events under the Seventh Seal only the "Silence"—they all transpire after probation has ended, and he has left eternity to unfold the scene. We may, however, look as far into the immortal state as the word of the Lord authorizes us. Hab. 2: 20. "But the Lord is in his holy temple: let all the earth keep silence before him." This required silence has an important connexion with the termination of the vision as may be seen from the rest of the chapter from which it is taken. Again, Zech. 2: 13, "Be silent, O all flesh, before the Lord: for he is raised up out of his holy habitation." When is this required silence? Ver. 12. When he is about to "inherit Judah, his portion in the holy land, and choose Jerusalem again"—(Jude 14,) to come to the earth with "ten thousand of his Saints" from whence they have been caught up. Zech. 14: 5, "With all his Saints." There is something very expressive in the terms representing the Lord "in his holy temple" and "raised up out of his holy habitation," here mentioned in connexion with the silence. See Ps. 68: 5. "A Father of the fatherless, and a Judge of the widows is God in his holy habitation"—the time when the oppressed are rewarded. Again in Ps. 11: 3, 6, "If the foundations be destroyed, what can the righteous do? The Lord is in his holy temple, the Lord's throne is in the Heaven, [as Judge, Mat. 25, 31, 32; 1 Thess. 4: 17,] his eyes behold, his eyelids try the children of men, (ver. 6,) upon the wicked he shall rain snares, fire and brimstone, and an horrible tempest, this shall be the portion of their cup. Zeph. 1: 7, "Hold thy peace (silence) at the presence of the Lord God: for the day of the Lord is at hand, for the Lord hath prepared a sacrifice, he hath bid his guests." This silence is when he is punishing the Princes, the King's children, &c., see ver. 8; when they are calling to the rocks and mountains. For the time of the "sacrifice," and "bidding of guests" here spoken of, see Mat. 22: 2, 7. When those murderers are destroyed, and their city (Great Mystical Babylon, Rev. 19: 18, 11,) is burned. This silence just before the Lord descends with all his Saints to possess the kingdom forever—even forever and ever," is typified in Josh. 6: 10, 16, "Ye shall not shout, (silence) nor make any noise with your voice; neither shall any word proceed out of your mouth, until the day I bid you shout, then shall ye shout. This is in harmony with the stillness of the first resurrection: "in a moment"—"the twinkling of an eye"—"caught up"—"changed"—"as the lightning"—"one taken and the other left," &c. As Joshua and Israel marched in silence around the walls of Jerico, and viewed the city devoted to destruction, so under the opening of the Seventh Seal will Jesus, with all his spiritual Israel, in silence, view the earth groaning beneath its corrupted mass. Josh. 6: 16, "And it came to pass at the seventh time, when the priests blew with the trumpets, Joshua said unto the people, shout! for the Lord hath given you the city." So will the Saints, with Jesus at their head, return to the earth triumphant, and "take the kingdom." Isa. 35: 10, "The ransomed of the Lord shall return, and come to Zion with songs and everlasting joy upon their heads; they shall obtain joy and gladness, and sorrow and sighing shall flee away." This time of triumph as the Saints enter the new earth, is typified in Mat. 21; 8, 9, by Christ's triumphant entrance into Jerusalem amid the shouts of Hossannah, from the multitude who strewed branches of trees in his way. Also typified in the feast of the harvest, (Lev. 23: 39, 40,) when the people were commanded to cut branches of palm trees, &c., and rejoice before the Lord seven days; which was to be a statute throughout their generations forever, to be celebrated in the seventh month. Thus we might proceed, for there is no end to the harmonious connected chain of scripture truth, when unfolded to the mind by the spirit of the Lord. O what scenes are to be developed under the remaining part of the Sixth and Seventh Seals! The Heaven's rolling down like a parchment scroll—the earth shaken to its centre, and every mountain and island removed out of their places—the "mighty man weeping bitterly," while yonder! in mid-Heavens, assembled around the Throne, the Saints clothed in bodies like unto Christ's glorious body, look down upon the earth after its scenes of blood and carnage are well nigh done. At the command of Jesus they descend, with a shout! and once more Adam places his feet in his long lost Eden; Abraham finds his city that hath foundations, and his promised seed inherit Canaan safely. Job in his flesh sees God, and Daniel stands in his lot. Peter walks upon an earth where there is no more sea in which to sink; and Mary's tears are dried forever. The torturing lash and cruel stocks will trouble Paul and Silas no more. Persecution, war, and bloodshed, are made to cease to the ends of the earth; and in the room of sighs, groans, and parting scenes, which now reach from one end to the other of this great charnel house: one harmonious song of praise will rise from millions of immortal tongues, where fond ties shall be no more severed, and Jesus shall wipe all tears away. O, who that has one spark of the love of God in his soul, for the hope of entering this glorious inheritance in a few short days, upon the sure testimony of God's word; is not willing to yield his worldly prospects, sectarian creeds, and all of this fading world? Poor "pilgrim on the word's highway!" cast your anchor here, in the hope of Christ's speedy coming.

Remember, the next event is, the Heaven's departing as a scroll.

DELIVERANCE FROM BONDAGE.

1 Our bondage it shall end, bye and bye, &c.
From Egypt's yoke set free;
Hail the glorious jubilee,
And to Canaan we'll return, bye and bye.

2 Our Deliverer he will come, bye and bye.
Our troubles have an end;
When our Saviour shall descend,
And glory crown the day, bye and bye.

3 Though our enemies are strong, we'll go on,
Though our hearts dissolve with fear;
Yet Sinai's God is near,
While the fiery billows roll, we'll go on.

4 Through Marah's bitter streams, we'll go on,
Though Baca's vale be dry,
And the land yield no supply,
To a land of corn and wine, we'll go on.

5 And when to Jordan's flood we are come,
Jehovah rules the tide,
And the waters he'll divide;
And the ransomed hosts will shout we are come.

6 There friends shall meet again who have loved,
Our embraces shall be sweet,
At the dear Redeemer's feet,
When we meet to part no more who have loved.

7 There with all the happy throng we'll rejoice,
Shouting glory to our King,
Till the vaults of heaven ring;
And through all eternity we'll rejoice.

Blessed are the pure in heart: for they shall see God.—Matt. 5: 8.

GENTILE TALMUDISTS, OR SPIRITUALIZERS.

[CONCLUDED.]

QUESTION. Addressed most respectfully to all, but especially to the Clergy and other expounders of God's Holy Word in the Established Church. "At what period of this dispensation do you think you ought to begin to warn your hearers to 'WATCH' for that 'COMING' of our Blessed Lord as promised, Acts 1. 11?"

As there will be some alive at the time of our Blessed Lord's return to this Earth, and as Teachers under the baneful influence of the spiritualizing system do not look for such an event, until the end of the Millennium, and thus virtually not at all; the above "Question" must be a very perplexing one. May it please God to put it into their hearts to examine the subject.

Clergymen, Biblical Students of all denominations, Committees of Missionaries and other Religious Societies, Editors of Religious Periodicals, (especially those of the "RECORD" Newspaper,) Teachers in Sunday Schools, are respectively entreated to consider well the contents of this paper.

A. B. C. QUESTION.

* * * "If the obvious sense of a great portion of the Bible be erroneous, what becomes of the great Protestant doctrine, that the Bible is a safe rule of faith; and of the great Protestant principle of the duty to circulate the Bible, without note or comment.—Plain Sermons, p. 151, by the Rev. J. A. McCaul, D. D.

* * * "It is easy to say that Zion, spiritually means the CHURCH, and some perhaps might agree with certain of the Fathers in thinking that camels, and dromedaries, aptly symbolize proud, rich men."—Plain Sermons, p. 206, by the Rev. J. A. McCaul, D. D.

* * * "Let every religious professor remember, that it is to them only that love the appearing of the Lord Jesus, that is promised the crown of righteousness, (2 Timothy iv. 8;) and certainly this character does not belong to those, whether ministers or professors of religion, who treat with levity or with scorn the annunciation of the speedy advent and glorious reign of the Lord Jesus Christ and all his saints; 'who shall judge the quick and the dead at his appearing and his reign;' or even to those who will not listen to the scriptural evidence of these truths. (2 Tim. iv. 1.) The Greek word Basileia, means the same as our word reign, regnum, regia, potestas, Scapula. If it be asked, where His reign shall be? Daniel answers it, vii. 13, 27—It is under the whole heaven, that is, on earth. What say our Doctors to this? We shall have another Transubstantiation. They will tell us, that UNDER the whole heaven means ABOVE the whole heaven."—Political Destiny of the Earth, p. 27, Nisbet.

CONTROVERSY.

* * * "And whatever may be said (and too truly said) about the acrimonious spirit in which religious controversy is usually conducted, still, it is a recognized fact, that the most prosperous times of the Church have been times of controversy. In this deadening world, we have much more to fear, as Christians, from stagnation, than from storms."—Lectures on the Prophecies, p. 8, by the Rev. H. McNeile, M. A.

CONVERSION OF THE WORLD.

* * * "The Gospel dispensation is an election dispensation. Universal conversion is no where promised to the preaching of the Gospel, either amongst Jews or Gentiles: But an election is promised from both."—Plain Sermons, p. 367, by the Rev. J. A. McCaul, D. D.

* * * "The Scriptures no where hold out the hope of a gradual reformation of the world, or an awakening in the Church, which shall become abiding and universal, and experience is against it."—Plain Sermons, p. 241.

DEATH AND THE SECOND COMING.

* * * "Some may perhaps say that it is not yet time to expect the Lord's Advent: it would therefore be folly to wait for it; when it is near, it will be time enough to look for it. If there be in the congregation any in this faithless state of mind, let me remind them that this is exactly the excuse of the unprofitable servant, whose portion is appointed, 'with the unbelievers.' He says, 'My Lord delayeth his coming.' It is not so near—no need of watching yet! You will perhaps answer, we are watching for death, for death will certainly arrest us before the Lord come again. I ask, in reply, where has the Lord commanded you to watch for death, instead of watching for his second coming? Tell me the chapter and the verse. I ask you, in the second place, what reason have you for thinking that death will surprise you sooner than the second advent? Who revealed to you the day and hour, of which no man knoweth?"—Plain Sermons, p. 294, by the Rev. J. A. McCaul, D. D.

DILEMMA.

* * * "After discussing the subject of this paper, and other similar topics, with an Evangelical Clergyman, who denied and opposed my views, I ceased to occupy the defensive position, and asked him his view of several of those passages of Scripture which are the turning points of the whole debate. The substance of his reply on each of these occasions was—The passage is very important, very important indeed; but I have not made up my mind as to the meaning of it!" Sermons on the Second Advent, by the Rev. H. M'Neile, M. A., p. 44.

FAITH AND REASON.

(To those who imagine that they hold the doctrine of "Justification by Faith," the following will be found worthy of deep consideration.)

* * * "If this be your mode of arguing, then beyond all doubt you believe more firmly in the probable conclusion of your own reason, than in the words of our Lord and Master. Where then is your faith? And where is your likeness to those disciples of whom our Lord says,—'Blessed are those servants whom the Lord when he cometh shall find watching.' But whatever you may think of your own state, you cannot possibly deny, that steadfastly to trust in Christ's promise, confidently to expect its fulfillment, and humbly to obey his commands, is an indispensable evidence of the reality of that faith, without which no man has a right to esteem himself as one of Christ's true disciples."—Plain Sermons, p. 294, by the Rev. J. A. McCaul, D. D.

GENERATION (THIS.)

* * * "Verily I say unto you the same generation, Luke xxi. 32, (see this indisputably proved in the preceding page,) shall not pass away till all be fulfilled. What generation does he refer to? With critical accuracy he emphatically refers to the generation last spoken of in the parable; and he asserts, that the generation of men upon earth, who shall be living to see the budding of the April branches, shall not have been taken from this life, until they behold the summer fruits of these glorious events."—Look to Jerusalem, p. 114, by the Rev. A. Dallas, M. A.

MISSIONS.—Luke xxiv. 47.

* * * "The Gentile Church has arrogated to herself, presumptuously and exclusively, all the blessing of Gerizim, and cast the curses of Ebal alone on Judah."—Missions, p. 67, by the Rev. Mr. Mudge, B. A.

* * * "Our public speakers or writers do not inform us how, or when, or under what peculiar circumstances the kingdoms of this world are to become the scene of Messiah's triumphant reign and rule."—The same, p. 25.

* * * "Oh! says individuals, (we wish it were not superciliously asserted,) Jesus Christ himself declares—'My Kingdom is not of this world.' It might suffice to ask, in reply, Why then do you wish to convert the whole world unto him? Is not this your professed aim and expectation, by your present missionary agency?"—The same, p. 37.

REMARKABLE TEXTS.

Matthew xiii. 38.—"The field is the world," (o Kosmos) signifying the whole planet.

Matthew xiii. 39.—"The harvest is the end of the world," (aion, the age or dispensation.)

Matthew xiii. 39.—The Harvest is (sunteleia tou aionos) the winding up of the age. Are not these most striking passages?!!!

Matthew xxiv. 37, 39.—"Coming" is (e Parousia,) personal presence.

Phillipians i. 26.—"My Coming." (Parousia) to you.

2 Cor. x. 10.—"His bodily presence." (e de Parousia.)

In Matthew xxiv. and xiii. there is no mention of a Resurrection or Millennium! but a description of the character of the times, the state of the world preceding the Lord's Advent, the signs, the manner, the consequences of His appearance.

In 1 Cor. xv. there is no mention of the rising of the wicked dead, Ps. i. 5. See Rev. xx. 5; 1 Thess. iv. 13–17.

Reader, "THINK on these things, 1 Thess. v. 21.

"Thy Kingdom come." * * * "In the prayer which our Lord hath taught us, we offer the same petitions, (see Ps. 68: 1–3,) at least if we understand the words aright. 'Thy kingdom come, thy will be done on earth as it is in heaven,' is a petition that the Lord may take unto him His kingdom, and begin that reign of righteousness, during which God's will shall be done on earth as it is in heaven. It is plain that when we say 'Thy Kingdom come,' we pray for something that is not yet come; for if it be already come, it is folly to pray that it may come. And the Scriptures tell us positively that there is a kingdom, which is not to commence until the Son of God cometh in glory, vii. Dan. 13. * * * The Lord himself speaks of a kingdom which is not yet come, for he has gone to receive it, xix. Luke, 12; 2 Tim. iv. 1."—Plain Sermons, p. 236.

"Unbelief exemplified." * * * "In conversation with a person unacquainted with the Gospel, I quoted this passage, Matt. vii. 14, 'Do you know,' said he, 'I do not believe that.' 'I am glad,' I replied, 'to hear you say so: I have been endeavoring, all along, to convince you that you do not believe the Scriptures, and now you have acknowledged it.' 'But I do believe the Scriptures.' 'You said this moment that you did not believe this plain declaration.' 'Not in your sense of it.' 'But I gave no sense of it; I merely quoted it.'"—Atonement, &c., by J. A. Haldane.

"WATCH."

* * * "'What I say unto you, I say unto all, Watch,' Mark xiii. 37. It is a command so clearly expressed, and so exactly limited by the context, that it cannot be interpreted figuratively, nor wrested to apply to any thing, but the coming of the Lord in glory. For in the Gospels it is preceded by an account of the judgment; and in the epistles, connected with the resurrection of the dead, or the conflagration of the world. What then is the state of a man who deliberately disobeys such a command as this? If obedience be at all times necessary, is it not in such a case indispensable?"—Plain Sermons, p. 300.

How common a thing it is, to find people shrinking, as it were, from the study of unfulfilled prophecy, even though it has pleased the Author thereof to promise a blessing on those who will "read and hear,"—Rev. i. 3, and who has in many instances, given an exposition thereof. (See Rev. i. 20, the Parables, and other portions of His Holy Word.) These erroneous notions are mainly obtained in the same way that the Tractmen do their Tradition from the study of Commentaries: It is passed on from one to another, having the authority of man only for its foundation, and when weighed in the balance of the sanctuary, is found to be spurious and deceptive. The teaching to watch for death instead of the "Coming of the Lord," is an instance of such error, such being opposed to the plain commands recorded in the Word of God. The Spiritualizer expects the world to be converted by preaching, and that the Lord will not come again till the end of the Millennium: and thus, if the same system of instruction be carried on from generation to generation, the command to "Watch", for His return will be constantly disregarded. In England, which is considered, perhaps, the most enlightened part of the globe, do we see any thing to encourage a hope of such a blessed period being nigh at hand? On the contrary, the prophecy by St. Paul, 2 Tim. iii. 1—5, is evidently and rapidly fulfilling before our eyes. Instead of a Millennium, it will be wisdom to be looking for a wide-spread Apostacy, under "a form of Godliness," and can we not even now perceive some very strong symptoms of such, especially wherein the Established Church is concerned? Reader, cannot you perceive some of the fruits of that "worldly wisdom" ACT of 1829 ripening apace? Was not that National Act one of the deepest ingratitude and of treason to Him, even JESUS OF NAZARETH, "who is over all, God blessed for ever," the KING OF KINGS and the Lord of Lords? Can we not see the Banner of the MAN OF SIN unfurled among us, and thousands, who have sworn fealty to the "the Head of the Church lifting up their heel" against him? See 2 Peter, ii. 1, 2; 1 Peter iv. 17. Reader, away with TALMUDS!—John v. 39; 1 Thess. v. 17; Luke xxi. 34—36; 2 Thess. iii. 5.

* * * "The Woman of a thousand superstitions is indeed riding upon the Beast of a thousand blasphemies; the idol is set up; the princes, the governors, the captains, the judges, the treasurers, the councilors, the sheriffs and all the rulers of the provinces, are lending their aid to the dedication of the image; and at the varied honied sounds which proceed from the cornet, flute, harp, sackbut, psaltery and dulcimer of Liberalism; all people, and nations, and languages are falling down to worship the image which Satan hath set up."—"Lectures on the Passion Week, p. 103, by the Rev. H. MCNEILE, M. A.

Surely, then, instead of preaching "Peace and safety," 1 Thess. v. 1–3, and "speaking smooth things," it is the duty of our watchmen to "cry aloud and spare not,"—Is. lviii. 1; and in lieu of prescribing those Spiritualizing, empirical, and benumbing opiates, to warn their flocks "to flee from the wrath to come."—Luke xxi. 34—36. The Spiritualizing system, if honestly weighed, will be found to be one of downright wickedness, and it is of no use to "mince the matter;" for if the "adding to and taking from" the Word of God, together with a willful disregard to such plain commands as are recorded, Prov. xxx. 5, 6, and the teaching of others to do the same, be not acts of wickedness, what are? Let us hope some troublers for the truth—some BOANERGES, will stand forth at our Public Meetings, and break the death-like silence which prevails on this subject.

Reader, let not "the whisper in your ear"—that because many excellent men have written and taught, and lived and died, holding the Spiritualizing system,—divert you from examining the subject; bear in mind that a majority in error can never render you blameless. Please to turn to John v. 39; Prov. xxx. 5, 6; Is. ii. 10—20; John xvii. 13, Dan. xii. 10. Take the Word of God, wherever the context will bear it, in its literal and grammatical sense; by doing this, no sophistry of man can drive you from your position. Obtain the two or three books here most strongly recommended (they are not costly), if honestly desirous to avoid error, and open to conviction, you will find in them (and from the highest authority too) the system of Spiritualizing thoroughly annihilated. May the examining of their contents be blessed to you, and be the means of inducing you to be "looking for that blessed hope and the glorious appearing of the great God and our Saviour Jesus Christ." Titus ii: 13. When convinced of your error, strive to draw the attention of others. "Pray for the peace of JERUSALEM, they shall prosper that love thee." "LAICUS."

SAINTS ARISE.

Soon we shall see, shall see the glorious morning
Saints arise, Saints arise!
Sinners attend, attend the notes of warning,
Saints arise, Saints arise!
The resurrection day draws near,
The king of saints shall soon appear,
And high unfurl his banner here,
Saints arise, saints arise!

Hear ye the trump, the trump of God resounding,
Saints arise, Saints arise!
Through dearths dark vaults, dark vaults its notes resounding,
Saints arise, saints arise!
To meet the Bridegroom, haste, prepare,
Put on your bridal garments fair,
And hail your Saviour in the air.
Saints arise, Saints arise.

The saints who sleep, who sleep, with joy awaken,
All arise, all arise!
Their clay cold beds, cold beds are soon forsaken,
All arise, all arise!
Not one of all the faithful few,
Who have on earth the Saviour knew,
But starts with joy their Lord to view,
All arise, all arise!

Pursue then on, then on their pathway glorious
All arise, all arise!
Led by their king, their king o'er death victorious,
All arise, all arise!
On Zions hill secure they stand,
With palms of victory in their hands,
They now possess the promised land,
Praise the Lord, Praise the Lord.

Fast by the throne, the throne of God behold them!
Blissful scene, Blissful scene!
And in his arms, his arms the Saviour folds them,
Blissful scene, Blissful scene!
With wreaths of glory round their head,
No tears of sorrow now are shed,
To joy's full fountain all are led,
All is bliss, all is bliss.

CONFESSIONS OF MR. MILLER AND OTHERS.

This appears to be a remarkably confessing time, particularly in reference to the Advent question. We begin with Mr. Miller's. During anniversary week he gave out notice that on an evening named he would make his confession. A large number was present, some of whom evidently expected a full renunciation of his views; but as it in fact afforded nothing to quiet their fears, they have themselves confessed how glad they would be to have the old man "come back," "turn infidel," "burn his Bible," or do something to overthrow the doctrine which has so often been overthrown. They have also confessed, since Mr. Miller's confession does not suit them, that they are determined to put it into the right shape themselves.

The sum and substance of his confession was to this effect: "That the time in which he had expected the end had passed—that he had no other definite point of time in view—that he was now continually looking for it—that he was satisfied it was near, and that he should not cease to look for it while he lived, should it be his lot to die, be the time longer or shorter.

The "Baptist Register" of June 12, gives currency to the reported confession as follows:

"MR. MILLER'S CONFESSION.—We learn from the Christian Herald that Mr. Miller preached at the Tabernacle, Boston, on the 28th ult., and made what he called his confession. He stated that what he had preached and published respecting the coming of the Lord in '43, was done honestly, and that he fully believed it, but that now the time had all transpired, and he was proved to be mistaken—that when the time passed he felt bad—felt lonely—thought he should never have any thing more to say in public—he felt more on the account of others than he did himself. He said there was an error somewhere in the calculation, but he could not tell where. He now had no definite time—he should wait God's time—it might come in a day, it might not come in fifty years, he could not say exactly when—he was waiting.

This is magnanimous and christian. So far as the controversy with Mr. Miller is concerned respecting '43, it is enough."

And this is improved upon so that the current version now reads: that he never knew about the subject, has given it all up, does not profess to know anything of the matter.

We give below a notice of the confession, written by a hearer, which appeared in the Boston Post of June 1, which we consider very candid and very correct.

"FATHER MILLER'S CONFESSION.—Many people were desirous of hearing what was termed father Miller's confession, which, according to rumor, was to be delivered at the Tabernacle on Tuesday evening last, when and where a large concourse assembled, myself among the number, to hear the "conclusion of the whole matter;" and I confess I was well paid for my time and trouble. I should judge, also, by the appearance of the audience, and the remarks I heard from one or two gentlemen not of Mr. Miller's faith, that a general satisfaction was felt. I never heard him when he was more eloquent or animated, or more happy in communicating his feelings and sentiments to others. Want of time and space will not permit me to give even a mere sketch of his remarks, which occupied more than an hour. He confessed that he had been disappointed, but by no means discouraged or shaken in his faith in God's goodness, or in the entire fulfillment of His word, or in the speedy coming of our Saviour, and the destruction of the world. Although the supposed time had passed, God's time had not passed. "If the vision tarry, wait for it." He remained firm in the belief that the end of all things is at hand, even at the door. He spoke with much feeling and effect, and left no doubt of his sincerity.

LETTER TO A BROTHER AT THE WEST.

Dear Brother D——, As we compute time, 1843 has now passed, and while the vision seems to tarry, you may wish to enquire what my present views are relative to the Second Advent?

I do not wish to be deceived, but I must embrace the truth whenever and wherever I may find it. Even though I may dig for it as for hidden treasure, yet, I would hail it as a pearl of great price, a precious gem. As a choice boon sent from heaven, I have carefully examined "that which is noted in the Scripture of truth," and my faith in the Advent at hand is not in the least shaken. I am still firm in the opinion that the Saviour is even at the doors. These are golden moments, emphatically so, as we are yet on praying ground. But it is a solemn thought that each hour, and each minute that steals upon us, speaks the knell of departed time, and I cannot now see from Scripture, that we have another moment's time promised us, neither can I find any license that gives me liberty to cease from watching until the Saviour shall come.

Now suppose that you should look at your watch and say, "My watch indicates that it is now time that the sun had set; how is it that he seems to linger on his journey, and is yet visible above the horizon?" Would it not be the height of folly, when we saw this great luminary of day fast sinking towards that point which must inevitably unfold to our view the shades of evening, to say that night was not near? I know that, in this case, you would not argue thus, but you would say, "My watch is a little too fast."

Such, my brother, is now our position. Our chronology has been kept, we know, by fallible and erring man, yet we are satisfied it is not far out of the way. Still, "We have a more sure word of prophecy, whereunto ye do well that ye take heed." "For the vision is yet for an appointed time, but at the end it shall speak, and not lie: though it tarry wait for it, because it will surely come, it will not tarry." Hab. ii. 3. We may be assured that just so certainly as the broad leaves of summer have succeeded the tender buds of spring, just so surely will the coming of the Son of man follow the signs which he foretold, and which have been literally fulfilled. "So likewise ye, when ye shall see all these things, know that it is near, even at the doors."

These, my brother, are solemn considerations, and ought forcibly to remind us that we have not one moment's time to lose, that while we remain in unbelief, we are treading on dangerous ground, even one step farther may find us within the vortex—the whirlpool, from which there is no escape. "For what shall it profit a man," said the Saviour, "if he shall gain the whole world and loose his own soul, or what shall a man give in exchange for his soul?"

Suffer me, my dear brother, and I would do it with all the fond affection of a sister, suffer me to press the question home to your conscience, Do you cherish in your bosom this treacherous and soul killing foe, unbelief? The wiles of this blind guide, this enemy of souls, are so deceptive, that her votaries are often themselves deceived, and know not that they are entangled in a snare that may prove fatal to them, "when the Lord Jesus shall be revealed from heaven with his mighty angels, in flaming fire taking vengeance on them that know not God and obey not the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ." Then, if not before, unbelief will be driven from us. Then unbelief will no longer shield us. There it will be no cloak for our sins, and it may prove fatal to him or her who may wear this mantle now. Even the shadow of it here brings darkness on the soul. If you, my brother, should find one vestage of this fell destroyer of the soul lurking in your bosom, tear it at once from your heart, as you would pluck a noxious and poisonous weed from your garden. Shun it as you would the deadly influence of the Upas. O delay not one moment. If you have not already made your peace with God, prostrate yourself at the feet of the Saviour, and let your prayer be, "Lord help my unbelief." That you and I may be prepared for the scenes that are just ready to burst upon us, is the prayer of your sister,

BOSTON, June 6th, 1844. A. W.

FOR THE WESTERN MIDNIGHT CRY.

"Blessed are they that mourn, for they shall be comforted."

When first on life's expansive sea,
I launched with spirits high;
Its crystal surface soon grew rough,
And clouds o'ercast my sky:
I saw suspended on the cross,
'Mid raillery and scorn,
The Lamb of God, who came to seek
And comfort them that mourn.

I viewed the gore upon his brow,
The crimson from his side—
Astonish'd saw the Sinless bleed,
And marked how meek he died.
Amazed! I learned what him became,
And why his flesh was torn,
Who came to drink the sinner's cup,
And comfort them that mourn.

All nature shook when he expired;
Death wore his darkest mien;
And o'er creation's peopled realms,
A deep eclipse was seen:
But soon he rose,—abolished death,
And ensecured the forlorn;
Ascended high our cause to plead,
And comfort them that mourn.

WESTERN MIDNIGHT CRY!

J. V. HIMES, Publisher. "WATCHMAN, WHAT OF THE NIGHT?" E. JACOBS, Editor.

Volume IV. CINCINNATI, FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 29, 1844. Number 5.

☞ Bro. CHITTENDEN has arrived from St. Louis, and left for the East yesterday.

Bro. SWEETMAN, from Philadelphia, has been with us the past week, and leaves for Dayton, O., to-day.

☞ Our friends in the country, who feel it a duty to aid in defraying the expense of this paper, will make their remittances, as usual, to the "Western Midnight Cry," Cin. O. But a very trifle has, as yet, been received, and the entire responsibility rests upon myself alone.

TO ADVENT BELIEVERS.

The following remarks were originally designed as a kind of defence of our position before the world; but having become satisfied that it would be wrong for us to attempt to satisfy those that are "led captive by the Devil at his will" of the propriety of our course, I now put them forth for the purpose of satisfying believers in the speedy coming of Christ, and to recover, if possible, any that may have been led astray by the falsehoods and stereotyped delusions of the age.

If one out of one hundred of the reports of "insanity" "suicide," "starving," "freezing." "frightening," "hanging," "drowning," "stealing," "absconding," &c. &c., as the results of this, so called, "awful delusion;" now in circulation, had even a shadow of foundation in truth, we might forever despair of obtaining justice for ourselves from the public press if disposed to attempt it. Having made it a part of my business for the last two or three years to examine into, and search out the origin of these reports, I am perfectly satisfied that the whole mass of them are as destitute of truth, as they are of argument.—Moses Clark, reported by the N. H. Patriot, to have committed suicide by drowning himself, a few weeks since, the Portsmouth (N. H.) Journal of Nov. 6, says, "is alive and well." The colored man in Boston that was reported to have "given away $2000, and left himself poor," states over his own signature, that he never gave to the Advent cause but $3,00, "besides a little in the penny collections;" The Carpenter on Tremont road, reported to have "given away $500, all he had," states that "he has not given to the Advent cause $20 a year for the last five years, what he always gave for religious purposes." The Grocer on Pleasant street, Boston, reported to have given away $500, says he has not given more than he used to do before he was an Adventist, and never gave Mr. Himes but 50 cents, which was for another person. Messrs. Davis Palmer, & Co., that bought the old jewelry, say that it has not amounted to $200 for five years past, and nothing during the last six months. The several ladies that gave up their borders to accommodate "Adventists free of charge, to their great pecuniary embarrassment, if not ruin," proves to be a Mrs. Hedge, of Boston, who says she never thought it worth while to enquire of the public whether she might receive or dismiss boarders, and that when she fails to pay her bills, and rent, it will then be time to say she is embarrassed in her finances. The Mr. Holbrook, reported to have become deranged as the "fruits of Millerism," his wife, and her father state his derangement to have commenced at a Methodist Camp-meeting in August last, since which time he had not attended the Advent meetings. A Mr. Williamson, of Medford, Mass. reported to have committed suicide and left his family poor, writes that he is well and boards ten ship carpenters. Abram Riker, of New York, reported to have committed suicide, is an old friend of mine, and on my arrival in New York a few weeks since, I had the privilege of condoling his family with himself in their midst, alive, cheerful, agreeable, and happy as usual.—Mr. Wyatt, of Dover, who was said to have poisoned himself to death, the Herald says is alive and well. The two children said to have "frozen to death near Philadelphia," are undoubtedly well, for Mr. Marshall, now at Louisville, Ky., told me he was on the ground all the time of the encampment, and that there was not a single case of sickness, or death; nor even a case of taking cold. The large bundle of Bank bills sent to J. V. Himes, proved to be "a single letter, and a few newspapers;" to which fact the clerk of Adams & Co. certifies over his own signature—he being the bearer of it, and it was opened in his presence. The Mr. Gregg, who was reported as having "runaway with $1900," had been to visit his friends in Lancaster, and was under the necessity of borrowing funds to return home to Philadelphia, where he now is. "The man Himes," who has been reported as having amassed great wealth out of the Second Advent cause,—purchased farms—put out money at interest, and finally absconded to England, Canada, and Texas; and again as having returned and made his "confession"—is at home, and still busy in spreading the great leading truths of the Bible, so long neglected by the Nominal church, and trampled under foot by the world. He is the man, that has expended his all of this worlds goods, and become poor, in promulgating a truth dearer to us than the wealth of this world.

The above refers to only a few of the falsehoods of modern date, that have gone the rounds of the newspaper press. If documents are required, proving their falsity, they can readily be obtained, by any individual who will take a little trouble to furnish himself with the facts, in the several cases. We have considered it a virtue to bear all these things in silence, because he that "spake as never man spake" has told his disciples, "Blessed are ye when men shall revile you, and persecute you, and shall say all manner of evil against you falsely, for my sake." But since mob violence, the customary appendage, has been added to the catalogue of falsehood and misrepresentation, a statement of the causes may possibly open the eyes of some misguided soul, before the great day of God shall be revealed. Of what crime against the laws of our land of boasted freedom, are we guilty, that we have been denied the privilege of meeting in our own houses of public worship? Can the united world prove that it is more than this? viz. Reading our Bibles, and noting the signs of the present time! How could we do less, when the Lord Jesus Christ denounced the Church at his first advent, as "hypocrites" for a failure in this duty? (See Luke 12: 56.)

Our fathers fled from a land of religious intolerance and oppression—toiled and bled to rear in this once wilderness world the pillars of a Constitution, into each one of which, was interwoven a glorious privilege, for generations then unborn—the privilege of worshiping God according to the dictates of their own consciences. It was this that gave birth to the American Republic. And yet the public press—the guardian of this "cradle of Liberty," have combined their influence against a body of people that have come before the public with their Bibles, and their Bibles only,—till they have succeeded in throwing open our houses of worship to the merciless mob, and rendering our peaceful firesides insecure. Our lecturers have been assailed in the public streets of Dayton, with blows—threatened in the Christian city of Cincinnati, and brought before Magistrates in some of the Eastern cities, for appealing to the word of God as evidence of the immediate coming, and peaceful reign of Messiah.

Who, not longer than three months ago, could have been made to believe that such a state of things could possibly have been brought about in this land of civil and religious liberty in so short a time? A thing before unknown in our nation's history; when the worshippers of God have simultaneously, in scores of places, been driven from their consecrated altars. And who, now, can longer blame us, for believing that God has sealed the nations doom?

We beg that none will misunderstand us. We do not complain at the ill treatment we have received, on our own account, nay! we have rejoiced in it all, and will rejoice; not that truth is fallen in the streets, and error is triumphant: But that in these things, we see the thickening tokens that our redemption draweth nigh. That a company of comparatively obscure individuals have been abused and misrepresented before community, by the public press, is indeed a small matter. That is not the issue: It is opposition to a vital puinciple, acknowledged by all. THE KINGDOM AND REIGN OF THE LORD JESUS CHRIST ON EARTH.

Had we came before the public with dark and mysterious spiritualisms of the Word of God, like those of Emanuel Swedenbourg, or like the Pope of Rome, claimed to have been its infallible interpreters, or like the Prophet of Nauvoo, laid claim to a new Revelation, and thus, or by any similar means, arrived at the conclusions to which we find ourselves irresistably driven, viz: that "Christ is at the door,"—Then might our enemies have found some paliation for their opposition to long established truths. But claiming that the Bible is a plain system of Revelation from God—discarding the popular idea, that principles of interpretation are necessary to an understanding of its simple truths; we have held it forth as an honest Book; easy to be understood by every soul of man that would pursue God's method to obtain wisdom. Coolly and dispassionately we have presented our conclusions to the church, and to the world.

For these conclusions we have courted investigation from the Theological world: Such investigation has been had, and the documents pro and con, have been placed within the reach of every one. Finding our opposers widely differing among themselves—no two of them agreeing with the fathers of the church, and no one of them with the Bible, upon the principle that it means what it says, we of course have cleaved more closely to our position that "the Lord is at hand," and from the signs and periods God had given us, that we could tell very near when his Advent would take place.

This has been the head and front of our offending. In every position we have taken, we have asked for argument, and scriptural reasons why we should not do thus. These arguments have been given in the shape of "reports" of "suicides," "starvation," "frightening," &c., with a small sprinkling of rotten eggs and brick bats. O shame! on our boasts of "equal rights" and "religious freedom." If every man, with the soul of a man in him, spurns from him such contemptible meanness, in endeavoring to bring into disrepute a position with which he is unable to grapple, how must the great God of truth, look upon these things?

"An honest man is the noblest work of God," and if Christianity will not make men honest, it is not worth the having: and how can a man be honest when he studiously avoids everything calculated to throw light upon a theory against which he has imbibed a hatred, and as studiously seeks, and puts into circulation every rumor, tending to the injury of such theory? But leaving our "false accusers" to their frozen consciences, and to God, I will proceed briefly to answer some of the queries that are now afloat concerning us. And first, we confess that we have been twice disappointed, as to the time, in which we had expected the Advent of our Lord. For this cause we are told that if we are honest, we shall now give it up. We think not. Our ideas of honesty, lead us to look now, with more confidence than ever, for the immediate return of our Lord. And for reasons as follows:

1st. It is perfectly natural. Suppose a very dear friend was at a great distance, and your all of this world depended on his return? He had written to you a number of epistles, in all of which were statements of either times or circumstances, under which he might be expected. As the first of those periods drew near, who would blame you for confidently looking for your friend? and what man of reason would denounce you for your disappointment after the time had passed? As another of those periods drew near, it would be perfectly natural for you again to expect your friend, and a disappointment the second time would naturally awaken many sympathisers for you.

If, however, your friend were a landlord that was to dispossess certain tenants that had abused his goods, and violated his laws, there might be murmuring on the part of such, and such only would be displeased with your expectations.—When the last of those circumstances, named to transpire, prior to your friends return, had passed, and the last of those periods was drawing to a close, your faith would settle down into a certainty, and all your calculations be made with the assurance that it was perfectly impossible for you to meet with another disappointment. Such is my position relative to the coming of Christ. All prophetic periods terminate within a circle of a few years, and within that circle we now are, as is clearly demonstrated by the fulfillment of events marked to transpire within it, and which no Bible student can mistake. Such are the passing away of the "Ottoman supremacy" (Rev. 9: 11.) "The Papal civil power" having been, within the last year, "broken without hand," so fallen beneath its own weight, without any foreign interference, as to be incapable of exercising itself without the aid of a foreign power. (Dan. 8: 23—27.) The fulfillment of 2d Pet. 3: 1—4; Ezek. 12: 21—28; Matt. 25: 6; &c. &c.

Again—if we are called upon to abandon our position, in order to get wisdom from our learned opposers, let us enquire who these learned opposers are.

Prof. Stuart, of Andover College, is one of the most learned that has taken up his pen to lay in ruins this "morbid delusion." And what does he say? Hear him: "It is a singular fact, that the great mass of interpreters in the English and American world, have, for many years, been wont to understand the days designated in Daniel and in the Apocalypse, as the representatives or symbols of years. I have found it difficult to trace the origin of this general, I might say, almost UNIVERSAL custom." Hints, p. 77. He admits that the events for which we are looking, are correct; and that they will, at some time or other, transpire; but the days in connexion with those events, mean nothing but days, though the harmony of the reading requires an understanding of them, the same as in Ezek. 4: 6; covering, as they do, the kingdoms of Media and Persia, Grecia, and Rome.

The next highest, in the list of our learned opposers, is Prof. Bush, of New York. In writing to Mr. Miller, he says: "I do not conceive your errors, on the subject of chronology, to be at all of a serious nature, or in fact to be very wide of the truth. In taking a day as the prophetical time for a year, I believe you are sustained by the soundest exegesis, as well as fortified by the high names of Mede, Sir Isaac Newton, Bishop Newton, Faber, Scott, Keith, and a host of others, who have long since come to substantially your conclusions on this head. They all agree that the leading periods mentioned by Daniel and John, do actually expire about this age of the world, and it would be strange logic that would convict you of heresy for holding in effect the same views which stand forth so prominently in the notices of these eminent divines." "Your results, in this field of inquiry, do not strike me as so far out of the way, as to affect any of the great interests of truth or duty." Adv. Her. vol. 7, p. 38. Here, then, are the two great champions of opposition to the immediate advent. They stand at the head of the theological schools of the Western world; and one of them admits that WE ARE RIGHT IN THE TIME, and the other, that WE ARE RIGHT IN THE EVENTS, and, furthermore, that the great mass of interpreters agree in understanding the prophetic periods as we do. The advice of our leading opposers, if we are permitted to gather it from their own language, is, virtually, that to be consistent, we must still cleave to our faith. But it is again alleged, that our faith is not the difficulty—all believers in the Bible, admit, that in the main, "it may be true;" and this admission is constantly strengthened by oft-repeated exhortations from the mass of popular theologians, to "get ready." The difficulty, say they, is the impropriety of our course, in ridding ourselves of our worldly interests, and spending so much of our time in public worship. We have been wont to suppose that our Lord meant what he said, in Luke 12: 31—43, and language similar in other places. But suppose we should turn aside from the only acknowledged "rule of faith and practice," and again go to our popular opposers for a course of action corresponding with our faith? First, listen to the Rev. John Dowling:

"The truth or falsity of this doctrine is a consideration in which the enjoyments, the hopes, the fears, and the prospects of the whole human family are most deeply involved. An intelligent and pious member of my church lately remarked to me: 'Sir, if this doctrine is true, we certainly ought to know it: and to whom are the christian community to look for instruction on this subject, but to those who are appointed as watchmen upon the walls of Zion, to sound the note of alarm when the day of evil approaches, and to blow the blast of triumph when the glorious jubilee dawns. Were this doctrine of Mr. Miller established upon evidence satisfactory to my own mind, I would not rest till I had published in the streets and proclaimed in the ears of my fellow townsmen, and especially of my beloved flock, The day of the Lord is at hand! Build no more houses! plant no more fields and gardens! Forsake your shops, and farms, and all secular pursuits, and give every moment to preparation for this great event! for, in three short years this earth shall be burned up, and Christ shall come in the clouds, awake the sleeping dead, and call all the living before his dread tribunal.' It is not, therefore, in a captious spirit that the following pages are sent into the world, but in order to vindicate myself, as a minister of the gospel, from what would be a most criminal neglect in not sounding such an ALARM, were this doctrine true."

To us, the evidence was then satisfactory, and none therefore could reasonably find fault with us for acting accordingly, untill they should furnish some argument, sufficiently powerful to overthrow the testimony upon which we rested. True, that time has passed, but the additional testimony makes it now equally sure to our minds, that months cannot pass untill our highest hopes are realized.

It is again charged upon us that our faith is accompanied with a deleterious effect upon the mental faculties, "dethroning reason," filling "lunatic asylums," &c. The testimony of Paul to Titus, 2: 12, 13; 1 Pet. 4: 13, and other similar texts, is sufficient for us on this head, but if the language of an opposer is needed, take the following from the pen of the celebrated Alexander Campbell.

"Another reason of the assurance of the faith in the minds of those who are true believers of the doctrine, is the delightful state of mind into which they feel themselves inducted through the new theory. Every righteous man must feel an exquisite pleasure in the strongly anticipated immediate return of his Lord. What possible event could be hailed with such overwhelming joy as the end of this sin-distracted and convulsed world, and the beginning of a new creation, in which as Christians, all hope to participate! New Heavens, illuminated with an unsetting sun of ineffible glory, spangled with stars far brighter than our present sun: a new Earth, surrounded with an immortal atmosphere, filled with unfading freshness, sweetness, and beauty, decorated with charms incomparably superior to those of Eden and its ancient paradise, animated too, with the presence of nature's eternal and immortal King and his celestial train, the eternal home of the saints, where "Sin and sorrow, pain and death, are felt and feared no more." I say, who would not gladly exchange a sin emaciated face, a shattered constitution sown thick with the seeds of death, for a spiritual and immortal frame, a shipwrecked earth, filled with unquenchable fires, convulsed with interminable agonies, and covered with floods of water that have washed and drenched its deeply furrowed face with a thousand mountains and valleys, for a new Earth never to be trodden by the profane foot of a solitary prodigal, nor marred by the unsanctified touch of a rebel hand during the ceaseless ages of eternity! None on earth are more to be envied than those happy spirits who are wrought up, or have wrought themselves up, to the full persuasion that in one short year, a little less or more, and they shall most certainly realize all this."

This testimony of an opposer to the happy influences of our faith, so well according with the Scripture, may account for the perfect failure of numerous malignant spirits to prove a single case of insanity as the result of Second Advent preaching.

Again, we are told that no confidence can be placed upon our hopes being realized in the future as the result of the termination of prophetic periods, unless we account for the passing by of the year 1843.

To every such reasonable enquiry I think we can give a satisfactory answer. One of the prophetic periods will do for this purpose. The 2300 days [years] Dan. 8: 14, begin as all agree, sometime in the year B. C. 457, but whether in the first or last of the year, we think will be difficult to prove. Now add to this period A. D. 1843 and we have 2300 the length of the vision. But who cannot readily see that to obtain this number we have taken the whole of 457 B. C. as well as the whole of A. D. 1843. Consequently we have no positive means of knowing that chronology is wrong until the whole of 1844 shall have passed. And should that fail we have no positive means of knowing when 2300 full years from the going forth of the commandment to "restore and build Jerusalem," (Dan. 9: 25; Ezra 7 - 13—20) are filled up, but the coming of Christ and the Resurrection, for when that time terminates he certainly will come: His word cannot fail. The late position that the Lord would come on the tenth day of the seventh month, almost uniformly believed by Adventists, is not to be wondered at. Sustained by Scripture, and justified by the mass of commentators throughout the known world, that we were living in the last days, and the proof as yet uncontroverted that we are in the last year of prophetic periods, we were led, (from an investigation of the accuracy with which the types of the law had been fulfilled in point of time) to believe that Christ would come to those "that looked for him," as the antitype of the High Priest coming out of the "Holy of Holies" on the tenth day of the Seventh month, as explained by Paul to the Hebrews chap. 9. And now, after that time has passed, and we have been disappointed in not seeing him personally, yet our confidence in his immediate appearing is greatly strengthened.

(See article on "Time.")

THE TIME.

Believers in the soon coming of our Lord to reward his servants, and punish the wicked, have taken the position that the time of the advent might be known.

As authority for such position, the following texts of scripture have been quoted, with reference to a careful examination of their several connexions. Acts, 17: 31; Job, 7: 1, 14: 14; Isa. 40: 2; Dan. 8: 19; 10: 1; 11: 35; 12: 10; Hab. 2: 3; Acts 17: 26; Gal. 4: 1, 2; Amos 3 - 7; 1 Thess. 5: 4; Ecc. 8: 5; Matt. 24. 33; 1 Pet. 1: 9—13; Dan. 8: 13, 14; 9: 23.

The above is but a part of the proof on this subject.

We may be told, that our efforts to understand the time, having twice proved a failure, it will be a species of gross inconsistency for us again to attempt it. We think not, seeing our chart, the Bible, contains directions in this matter.

Jesus Christ is our best friend: He has "gone into a far country to receive for himself a kingdom, and to return." He has told us that he "will come again and receive us to himself." He has furthermore told us by his servant that his children will not be in darkness that that day should overtake them as a thief: and if any of his children are so well prepared that the event cannot overtake them as a thief, still, "that day," even to such, would come as a thief, unless they had some intimations of its approach before it dawned. The following are some of my reasons for believing that "that day" will yet be known previous to its coming. In 1 Thess. 5: 2, we are told that "the day of the Lord so cometh as a thief in the night," but in ver. 4 we have the proof that it is only upon the wicked that it will thus come; and in ver. 6 our knowledge of "the day," is urged as a reason for awaking from sleep, and soberly watching. In 2 Pet. 3: 10, we are again told that "the day of the Lord will come as a thief in the night," but not to God's people, for they "are not of the night," (1 Thess. 5: 5,) and furthermore, in ver. 17 Peter tells them. "Ye therefore, beloved, seeing ye know these things before, beware LEST YE ALSO being led away with THE error (not an error) of the wicked, fall from your own steadfastness." And what is that great leading error with which the wicked have been "led away"? Obviously this; making the ignorance of "that day and hour" (Matt. 24: 36,) reach down to the last days, when they had been told (ver. 33,) "When ye shall see all these things, know that HE is near, even at the door." Thus they become "children of the night," and say in the midst of their darkness, "Where is the promise of his coming?" "All things continue as they were," &c. This is "THE error of t wicked" on whom "that day" will come "as thief,"—an error from which we pray God to d liver us. Again, we are frequently exhorted watch; and to a watchman the thief never show himself, "as a thief." He is no thief to the o who watches. Thus we are told, Rev. 3: 3, " therefore thou shalt not watch, I will come upo thee as a thief."

To show that Christ will never, at any mome of time, sustain a relation to his children compa rable to the thief, we have only to look at th character and work of a thief as God has give it. "The thief cometh not, but for to steal, an to kill, and to destroy;" John 10: 10. Thu does Christ come to the wicked, for he is to b "revealed from heaven with his mighty angels i flaming fire, taking vengeance on them that know not God, . . . who shall be punished with ever lasting destruction from the presence of God, &c., 2 Thess. 1: 7—9. "A certain man wen down from Jerusalem to Jericho, and fell among thieves, which stripped him of his rayment, and wounded him, and departed, leaving him half dead." Luke 10: 30. The wicked look upon the character of Christ's coming, like that of a thief —this is their "error;" and to them it will truly be such, but not to God's people.—He come "to their joy,"—"that they may have life,"—a "the Bridegroom" who always has an appointed day understood by both parties. "He shall bring forth their righteousness as the light, and their judgment as the noon day." Our history proves, that we cannot "watch" for our Lord's return consistently, viz. in a high state of expectation, without definite time. I do not wish to be understood as saying, that we shall ever have another day so generally proclaimed as to constitute a rallying point, but for us to claim that it will come on the saints as a thief, will be throwing away our Bibles in earnest.

Our Lord has named in connexion with the event of his second coming, three watches; Luke 12: 35—38, and how can we divide time into watches without definite points where three watches will terminate?

Two of these watches, and only two, as I conceive, we have passed. 1843 was the first where scriptural authority for the time of the advent has been given: Upon this we were all agreed. The tenth day of the 7th month was the second; upon this we were all satisfied, and all disappointed. During the first and second watch, as many points in the prophecies, and jots and tittles of the Law have been fulfilled, that we may as well doubt the being of God, as to doubt that we are living in the very last days. With this evidence before us, from God's word, that a knowledge of definite time is to be imparted to those that "watch," shall we now throw ourselves back into our former slumbering position, and say that the day of the Lord is to come upon saint and sinner indiscriminately as a thief? or shall we fearlessly claim that our lamps are not "gone out?

Which of these two positions will best accord with the scriptures of truth? Which will best please the triumphing foe that is now taunting, enquiring, "Where is now thy God?" Which will heat the king's furnace "seven times hotter than it was wont to be heated," and purge away the last dross from the jewels that are so soon to be made up? There is but one answer. Through the unbounded mercy of God in Christ Jesus, our lamps still burn. Their rays strike not upon an intervening light, as they have hitherto done, but fall directly upon the eternal shore of bliss.—And here, in this third and last watch it will not be strange, if an exasperated enemy should use his utmost endeavors, by the aid of false lights, to decoy us to destruction. Therefore "let us take heed to the sure word of prophecy untill the day dawns, and the day star arise in our hearts." We have taken heed to the light in the second watch untill its types and shadows have been fulfilled. The sure word of prophecy will now give us our last light before "the day dawns."

When Christ appears there must be a body of people on earth to say, "Lo this is our God; we have waited for him." Not waited for intervening events, but for HIM; and if such people are not found among advent believers, when on earth can they be found? If God has not a people among them, then indeed must it be questioned whether he has a people at all. In all ages of the world, his people at times have strayed from him—fallen into errors, and com as they were," &c. This is "THE error of the wicked" on whom "that day" will come "as a thief,"—an error from which we pray God to deliver us. Again, we are frequently exhorted to watch; and to a watchman the thief never shows himself, "as a thief." He is no thief to the one who watches. Thus we are told, Rev. 3: 3, "If therefore thou shalt not watch, I will come upon thee as a thief."

To show that Christ will never, at any moment of time, sustain a relation to his children comparable to the thief, we have only to look at the character and work of a thief as God has given it. "The thief cometh not, but for to steal, and to kill, and to destroy;" John 10: 10. Thus does Christ come to the wicked, for he is to be "revealed from heaven with his mighty angels in flaming fire, taking vengeance on them that know not God, . . . who shall be punished with everlasting destruction from the presence of God," &c., 2 Thess. 1: 7—9. "A certain man went down from Jerusalem to Jericho, and fell among thieves, which stripped him of his rayment, and wounded him, and departed, leaving him half dead," Luke 10: 30. The wicked look upon the character of Christ's coming, like that of a thief,—this is their "error;" and to them it will truly be such, but not to God's people.—He comes "to their joy,"—"that they may have life,"—as "the Bridegroom" who always has an appointed day understood by both parties. "He shall bring forth their righteousness as the light, and their judgment as the noon day." Our history proves, that we cannot "watch" for our Lord's return consistently, viz. in a high state of expectation, without definite time. I do not wish to be understood as saying, that we shall ever have another day so generally proclaimed as to constitute a rallying point, but for us to claim that it will come on the saints as a thief, will be throwing away our Bibles in earnest.

Our Lord has named in connexion with the event of his second coming, three watches; Luke 12: 35—38, and how can we divide time into watches without definite points where these watches will terminate?

Two of these watches, and only two, as I conceive, we have passed. 1843 was the first where scriptural authority for the time of the advent has been given: Upon this we were all agreed. The tenth day of the 7th month was the second; upon this we were all satisfied, and all disappointed. During the first and second watch, so many points in the prophecies, and jots and tittles in the Law have been fulfilled, that we may as well doubt the being of God, as to doubt that we are living in the very last days. With this evidence before us, from God's word, that a knowledge of definite time is to be imparted to those that "watch," shall we now throw ourselves back into our former slumbering position, and say that the day of the Lord is to come upon saint and sinner indiscriminately as a thief? or shall we fearlessly claim that our lamps are not "gone out?"

Which of these two positions will best accord with the scriptures of truth? Which will best please the triumphing foe that is now tauntingly enquiring, "Where is now thy God?" Which will heat the king's furnace "seven times hotter than it was wont to be heated," and purge away the last dross from the jewels that are so soon to be made up? There is but one answer. Through the unbounded mercy of God in Christ Jesus, our lamps still burn. Their rays strike not upon an intervening light, as they have hitherto done, but fall directly upon the eternal shores of bliss.—And here, in this third and last watch, it will not be strange, if an exasperated enemy should use his utmost endeavors, by the aid of false lights, to decoy us to destruction. Therefore "let us take heed to the sure word of prophecy untill the day dawns, and the day star arises in our hearts." We have taken heed to the Law in the second watch untill its types and shadows have been fulfilled. The sure word of prophecy will now give us our last light before "the day dawns."

When Christ appears there must be a body of people on earth to say, "Lo this is our God! we have waited for him." Not waited for intervening events, but for HIM; and if such people are not found among advent believers, where on earth can they be found? If God has not a people among them, then indeed must it be questioned whether he has a people at all. In all ages of the world, his people at times have strayed from him—fallen into errors, and committed sad mistakes. But where in their history shall we go to find an instance of a mistake similar to that of the passing by of the tenth day of the seventh month, under circumstances like those in which those "waiting for him" were then found? Deeply humbled before him—praying night and day with fasting—earnestly watching—their eye of faith directed heaven ward, and their finger upon God's word as authority for their glorious hopes—almost constantly living upon their knees.—Where I say, under such circumstances have God's people been led to embrace and greedily swallow a theory composed of error from root to the outermost branch? The instance, in my opinion, cannot be found. There must however, have been some error in that proclamation, or we should on that day have seen our Lord.

Our present danger lies in the strong temptation to run into one of two extremes. The first is, in totally abandoning the whole position relative to the tenth day, and the other, that of making a wrong application of scripture to that extraordinary movement. Upon this subject, I will here record my present views, upon my own individual responsibility, and if any clearer light is presented I will then abandon the position here taken.

EVIDENCE THAT THE JUDGMENT MIGHT HAVE SET ON THE TENTH DAY OF THE 7TH MONTH.

1st. The reader is referred to the evidence that was presented by Bro. S. S. Snow, in the "True Midnight Cry," that we are in the last year of prophetic periods, and that to fulfill the type of the High Priest coming out of the Holy of Holies, (Lev. 23: 27—32.) Christ must come on that day.

2d. From a re-examination of the subject, it seems quite probable that the coming out of the High Priest on "the day of atonement" was typical of Christ sitting in judgment, rather than of his personally appearing to the inhabitants of the earth. Let the reader examine Ex. 28: 15, 29, 30; Num. 27: 18—21; Ex. 30: 10; Lev. 16: 29—31. The names of the children of Israel were borne on the breast-plate of judgment, (and why is it called thus?) whenever the High Priest went in before the Lord at these anual atonements. No names could have been upon that breast-plate but those that had complied with the conditions in Lev. 23: 29, 32. Thus the disobedient were condemned already, (John 3: 18.) yet that condemnation was not made manifest untill the Priest came out in the presence of the congregation. They suffered judgement to go against them by "default," in refusing to appear in obedience to the summons and enter their plea, or "afflict themselves" on the ninth day.

Examine in connexion with the above quoted texts, Heb. 4: 14—16; Heb. 5: and 8: the whole chap. & Heb. 9: 6—12, 19—26, & ver. 28, which shows that there must be a similarity between the appearing of Christ, and that of the High Priest. From Lev. 9: 22—24, it appears that while Aaron was offering the sin-offering he lifted up his hands and blessed the people; (it does not appear that the congregation saw him at that time,) he then came down from the Holy of Holies through the vail into the tabernacle of the congregation, and from thence he came out and blessed the people, and THE GLORY OF THE LORD APPEARED UNTO ALL THE PEOPLE, and they shouted and fell upon their faces. Here is a blessing the people at two different times by the High Priest: the first when the offering is made at the time their sins are put away, and the second when he came out of the tabernacle of the congration and appeared to all the people. Christ has gone, as the High Priest did, through "the vail," that is, "into heaven itself:" And to harmonize the scripture on this subject it seems necessary that there should be some movement on his part in putting away the sins of his people as a body, before he personally appears.

Acts 3: 19—21, "Repent ye therefore, and be converted, that your sins may be blotted out, when the times of refreshing shall come from the presence of the Lord," [typified in the first blessing conferred by the High Priest,] "and he shall send Jesus Christ, which before was preached unto you," [typified by the second blessing,] "whom the heavens must receive, untill the times of restitution of all things spoken of by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." See Isa. 25: 7, 8, "And he will destroy in this mountain the face of the covering cast over all people, and the vail that is spread over all nations. He will swallow up death in victory," &c. This vail now prevents our discovering the New Jerusalem, and within this vail, answering to the tabernacle of the congregation, Christ might have set in judgment on the tenth day, and thus fulfilled the type. It is in this mountain that the vail is to be destroyed. See Psa. 2: 6; Isa. 59: 20, "And the Redeemer shall come [first] to Zion and [afterward] to them that turn from transgression in Jacob." Gal. 4: 26, "But Jerusalem which is above is free, which is the mother of us all."

Unless something as decisive as the setting of the judgment took place on the tenth day, the antitype is not yet given—the "True Midnight Cry" not sounded; and the overwhelming evidence that we live in the last year of prophetic periods must be abandoned; and God's people are left in darkness, not only to be overtaken as by a thief, but to be devoured by merciless wolves.

EVIDENCE THAT THE JUDGMENT SITS BEFORE THE PERSONAL APPEARING OF CHRIST AND RESURRECTION OF THE SAINTS.

When Christ personally appears to the inhabitants of the world it is not to sit in judgment and pass sentence upon them; but to execute the judgment previously writen.

Jer. 23: 5, "Behold the days come, saith the Lord that I will raise unto David a righteous branch, and a king shall reign and prosper, and shall execute judgment and justice in the earth." Ezek. 5: 8, "Therefore thus saith the Lord God; Behold I, even I, am against thee, and will execute judgment in the midst of thee in the sight of the nations." A fair inference that he is not in sight of the nations when he sits in judgment.—John 5: 26, 27, "For as the Father has life in himself, so hath he given to the Son to have life in himself; and hath given him authority to execute judgment also, because he is the son of man." Jude 14: 15, "And Enoch also, the seventh from Adam, prophecied of these, saying, Behold, the Lord cometh with ten thousand of his saints to execute judgment upon all, and convince all that are ungodly among them of all their ungodly deeds which they have ungodly committed, and of all their hard speeches which ungodly sinners have spoken against him." It is not when the judgment sits that the wicked are convinced of their folly, but when it is executed. Psa. 149: 5—9, "Let the Saints be joyful in glory: Let them sing aloud upon their beds. Let the high praises of God be in their mouth, and a two edged sword in their hand; to execute vengeance upon the heathen, and punishments upon the people; to bind their kings with chains, and their nobles with fetters of iron; To execute upon them the judgment written: This honor have all the Saints." See also Ezek. 39: 13; Rev. 19: 14, and other places which show that when judgment is executed upon the ungodly, the resurrected Saints will have a hand in that work.

The term "Judge" is frequently put for the execution of judgment, but when thus found, its connexion will always determine its import.—There must be a rendering of judgment before it can be executed, and we are assured that God hath "appointed a day" for that purpose: (Acts 17: 31) and furthermore that, to all men, he hath given assurance, or "offered faith" (see margin) relative to that appointment.

ITS RENDERING BEFORE EXECUTION.

Mat. 5: 25, "Agree with thine adversary quickly, while thou art in the way with him; lest at any time the adversary deliver thee [first] to the Judge, and the Judge [after the passing of sentence] deliver thee to the officer [to execute the penalty] and thou be cast into prison."

Rev. 11: 15, 18, "And the seventh Angel sounded, [the antitype of the Jubilee Trump, as all agree, which always sounded on the tenth day of the seventh month] and there were great voices in heaven, saying, The kingdoms of this world are become our Lord's and he shall reign forever and ever. And the four and twenty elders, [for the "great multitude," ch. 7: 9, were not yet there] which sat before God on their seats, fell upon their faces," &c. What event do these circumstances usher in? "And the nations were angry, and thy wrath is come, and the time of the dead, THAT THEY SHOULD BE JUDGED, and that thou should'st give [or assign] reward unto thy servants the prophets, and to the saints, and them that fear thy name, small and great; and shouldest destroy them that corrupt the earth." Rev. 20: 12, "And I saw the dead [not yet raised] small and great stand before God; and the books were opened: and another book was opened, which is the book of life: and the dead were JUDGED out of those things which were written in the books, according to their works."

I trust God will show that we have not been mistaken in the day, and he will soon demonstrate that in proclaiming that day, we have "preached the preaching that God has bid us." That he hath now given assurance of that day to all men we are willing to leave with him. On this subject consult the following text with its parallells. Rom. 2: 14—16, "For when the Gentiles, which have not the law, do by nature the things contained in the law, these having not the law, are a law unto themselves. Which show the work of the law written in their heart, their conscience also bearing witness, and their thoughts the mean while accusing, or else excusing one another; in the day when God shall judge the secrets of men, by Jesus Christ, according to my Gospel." See also 1 Cor. 11: 32; and Dan. 7: 9, 10. The Prophet here sees first, the thrones cast down: The thrones of the four universal monarchies, for of them only had he been speaking. The next thing is the Ancient of days sitting—the "judgment sits," and the books are opened. Next the beast (the fourth beast) is slain—then his body destroyed and given to the burning flame. And then, while life is yet remaining in some parts of the four beasts, the Son of man comes with the clouds, and finally with his Saints takes the kingdom. The thrones of the four kingdoms, must first be cast down before the judgment sits. Rome, the last of those kingdoms, has maintained its throne, or seat of civil power till the present, or nearly till the present time. The last advices from Rome, were that placards with the inscription "down with the Pope," "down with the government," were recklessly posted up in the public streets in open day light. This looks as though the last of those thrones might be cast down; and if so, there is no Scriptural evidence in the way of the judgment having set on the tenth day of the seventh month.

I think we are not given to understand that we are personally, individually to appear before God, at the time the judgment sits, but we are told in an appropriate type of that event in Ezek. 21: 30, "I will judge thee in the place where thou wast created in the land of thy nativity." And in Isa. 11: 3, 4, "He shall not judge after the sight of his eyes, neither reprove with the hearing of his ears: But with righteousness shall he judge the poor, and reprove with equity for the meek of the earth: and [after that] he shall smite the earth with the rod of his mouth, and with the breath of his lips shall he slay the wicked."

There must be a movement on his part, at that time, if not visible to us, See Psa. 98: 8, 9, "For he cometh to judge, &c." Psa. 50: 3-5, "He shall call to the Heavens from above, and [give notice,] to the earth that He may judge his people," &c., Psa. 82: 8, "Arise, O God, judge the earth," &c. Psa. 96: 11-13, "For he cometh, for he cometh to judge the earth," &c. Psa. 76: 8, "Thou didst cause judgment to be heard from Heaven; the earth feared and was still." Psa. 2: 7-9, "He hath prepared his throne for judgment," &c.

THE PLACE.

Rev. 1-6 "After this I looked, and behold, a door was opened in Heaven: and the first voice which I heard was as it were the voice of a trumpet, [Rev. 11: 15,] talking with me; which said, come up hither, and I will show thee things which must be hereafter, and immediately I was in the spirit: and behold, a throne was set in heaven, and one sat on the throne," "And before the throne there was a sea of glass like unto chrystal." He does not yet see the "great multitude," on that Sea—he only sees it "prepared." Rev. 20: 11, and I saw a great white throne, and him that sat on it," and then (ver. 12,) the dead were judged, before the resurrection, which is the retribution. Rev. 14: 14, "and I looked and behold a white cloud, and upon the cloud one sat like unto the Son of Man, having on his head a golden crown, and in his hand a sharp sickle." After this there went forth an earnest petition for the reaping to take place inasmuch as the time had come for that work, and the harvest also was ripe.

I. Thess. 4: 16, 17; "For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the Archangel, and with the trump of God," (Rev. 11: 15;) but not to the earth, for them which are "alive and remain," are to be caught up with the resurrected saints "in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air." The Lord descends at the time appointed, and the first case brought before the tribunal of heaven thus "prepared" is that of "the dead in Christ."

From Isa. 34: 1-9; and 40: 2, Rev. 14: 7, 15, and other places I am satisfied that it is made the duty of the Watchmen, to proclaim words of comfort to the Saints during the period lying between the sitting of the judgment, and this first resurrection: If I am wrong, let the Bible student tell me, under what circumstances, the proclamation is to be made? "Her warfare [appointed time] is accomplished, her iniquity is pardoned?" Many will doubt this position, as we learn from Isa 40: 27; "Why sayest thou, O Jacob, and speakest, O Israel, my way is hid from the Lord, and my judgment is passed over from my God? Read the connexion from verse 21 to 31, & also, Isa. 49: 13-17.

The Judgment begins at the house of God, (1 Pet. 4: 17,) and for the whole world cannot occupy more than a full year, (Acts 17: 31,) and for God's people, I have been inclined from the following texts, to believe that it would occupy but 40 days. Gen. 7; 4, 12, 17; "Forty days after Noah was shut into the Ark before it was taken up, and one year and ten days from the time the rain began, till Noah and his family went out upon the renovated earth, Gen. 7: 11; and 8: 13; see the use made of this type in 2d Pet. 3: 3-7, Matt. 24: 37-40; Isa. 46: 9, 10; See also, Ex. 24: 12, 18; Rom. 2: 12; Ex. 34: 28, 29; Matt. 4: 2, 11; Gen. 8: 6; Deut. 9: 1-9; 1 Kings 19: 1-8; Num. 13: 25, and 14: 34; Deut. 9: 25; Ezek. 4: 6; compared with Isa. 5, 3: 5; and Acts 3; 19-21: Jonah 3: 4; Acts 1; 3. If those "waiting for" their Lord do not gain deliverance from these mortal bodies at the end of forty days, from the tenth day, their peculiar trial of faith during this period, seems to me appropriately typified.

I think also that the 40 years from the elevation of Buonaparte to the Throne of France, in 1804, to the present time, with the circumstances intervening, has its type in some of the following texts; Deut. 25: 1-3; Ex. 16: 35; Josh. 5: 6; Judg. 13: 1; Psa. 95: 10; Acts 7: 30. 36; Heb. 3: 9, 17. The reasons for attaching this importance to his elevation, are, that he was the head of that power which subverted the Papal Government, by which dominion had been held over the Saints for 1260 years. In this act he also opened the way for tearing off the sack-cloth from the two witnesses (word of God,) with which Papacy had clothed it.

One thing must be perfectly plain to every Bible student! that there must be a time for God to judge the world, before judgment can be executed. And the evidence from Scripture is, that when Christ personally appears, it is to execute judgment. Why need any believer in the Bible with these evidences before him, and a thousand more clustering around him, abandon any thing more relative to the tenth day, than that Christ did not personally appear on that day?

THE MIDNIGHT CRY.

No believer in the immutability of Jehovah can doubt that he knew the course the people who were "waiting for him," would pursue in the last days. He seeing this, likened them to ten virgins that first went forth to meet him—afterwards slumbered and slept, at length were aroused by "a cry at midnight;" in the next place refused to furnish oil to the foolish, and finally went in to the marriage and the door was shut.

If there was to be a false cry, would the Saviour failed to have noticed it? At present we are bound to believe that we have had the "true midnight cry," recognised in the 25th chapter of Matthew, with this error on our part, viz. the time proclaimed, and not the proclamation itself, was the midnight. This is evident from the fact that no especial blessing attended the proclamation—no slumbering virgins were awakened, until more than half of the previous three months had expired. And never, in all the history of the church, was a people found "waiting for his Son from heaven," with more earnest expectation than those that looked for him on the tenth day &c.—trimming their lamps constantly, which gave a brilliant light until that day, which brought them to the middle watch, and left them in the middle of the present Jewish year, and in midnight darkness relative to the definite time of the Advent: For definite time alone, for the event, could ever have aroused them from their slumbers.

Definite time for the personal appearing of our Lord is certainly contained in the Bible, and if it lies not at the end of forty days from the "tenth day," it most assuredly does between that time and the end of the Jewish year. If "the path of the just is as a shining light that shineth more and more until the perfect day," we ought to be sure that our lamps are not gone out upon a subject relative to which we are not to be "in darkness."

The word of God is a lamp to our feet, and a light to our path; but a perfectly useless light if our feet are not to move in that path, and a ray of light is not to be cast before us, to show us the threshhold of the celestial gates. Can it be possible, that those who have so earnestly contended for the faith once delivered to the saints, are now to fall back into their old position and say we can know nothing of the definite time—the Scripture has left us in the dark so far that the day will come as a thief upon saint as well as sinner? And why shrink from a position that has been so triumphantly defended in the past? Is it because your wounds are yet unhealed and you dread another conflict? Will you thus abandon your ground to an enemy that has given evidence of hatred to the coming and kingdom of our Lord, and thus leave them to say we have been compelled to fall back upon their position? If I am deluded, let some meek disciple of Jesus make haste to my rescue, and speedily throw down in my path a "thus saith the Lord," for I am now, through his ever abounding grace, "HASTING UNTO THE COMING OF THE DAY OF GOD." I feel an indiscribable and glorious light shining upon my path, ever since the passing by of the tenth day; and which I believe to be the result of proclaiming a truth, which I saw from the first, would be so unpopular, that none would proclaim it but those who had been entirely divested of love to the world, and possessed a stronger desire for Christ to have his rights, than even for sinners to obtain pardon.

Our forty days of temptation will find us settled upon something—either light or darkness. That period has nearly come, and I am sorry to say that it finds me so unsettled as to the definite day when Christ will come, while I am so well assured from Scripture testimony that it is to be known.

Many are saying, "do not fix upon another time," and when the evidence is poured down upon them from the great treasury of truth, that it is the happy privilege of the wise to understand even this, they say, "Show it to us, and we will believe it too." To them we only reply, there is the word of God, containing fixed periods at short intervals, reaching, as we believe, not only to, but far into the immortal state. God, by his spirit, has impressed these facts upon our heart, as we have prayerfully searched his word, and God alone is able to impress them upon your hearts: "Go to him"

Some have, from my remarks on this subject, drawn the inference that I was proclaiming the end of probation. This is not true. I have never to my recollection proclaimed either the end or beginning of probation, nor do I consider it my prerogative to do so, finding nothing upon that subject in the Bible. I know it has been a popular expression that when Christ leaves the "meditorial throne" human probation will end, but I never have been shown the chapter and verse, nor that Christ had a "meditorial throne." I always have, and always shall, feel it my duty to point the enquiring penitent to Christ, but now especially, do I believe it our duty to comfort God's people. I would refer the reader to my remarks on Matt. 25: 1—13, in Vol. 3, No. 9, of the "Western Midnight Cry," published in May last.

Let those that are now "groaning for adoption, to wit, the redemption of their bodies," prayerfully, and without prejudice, search the subject of the time of their deliverance, and more surely than we know that the morning sun will rise at its appointed time, shall we know the coming of that day. And now, while darkness reigns in triumph, and the predicted cries of "peace and safety" are fulfilled as never before, the glorious rays of prophetic light, shining from the sacred Word, will glow upon our path till we enter the long sought haven. Our mistakes have not been in wrong calculation of time so much as the proper application of events. No point of time will probably ever be understood long enough before the event to constitute another rallying point, for this would be a second "Midnight Cry," and only one is authorised; but "the wise SHALL understand."

The Midnight Cry.

THE YEAR.

A definite year is brought to view in Scripture, as a period of peculiar trial, and final deliverance for the people of God; and which is also to witness the discomfiture of all their enemies.

Isa. 61: 1–3, "The Spirit of the Lord God is upon me; because the Lord hath anointed me [first] to preach good tidings unto the meek; [second] he hath sent me to bind up the broken hearted, [third] to proclaim liberty to the captives, and the opening of the prison to them that are bound; [fourth] TO PROCLAIM THE ACCEPTABLE YEAR of the Lord, and the day of vengeance of our God; [and fifth] to comfort all that mourn; to appoint unto them that mourn in Zion, to give them beauty for ashes, the oil of joy for mourning, & the garment of praise for the spirit of heaviness; that they might be called Trees of Righteousness, the planting of the Lord, that he might be glorified."

Here is the whole work to be accomplished by the Gospel, from its first buddings till the "Trees of Righteousness" are complete. When this scripture began to be fulfilled, (Luke 4: 18, 19,) no intimation was given that any part of the commission could be dispensed with till all was accomplished: so it continued to be confirmed by those that heard Christ. (Heb. 1: 2, and 2: 3.)

The injunction "to comfort all that mourn," following the proclamation of "the acceptable year of the Lord," harmonizes with Isa. 40: 2, where Jehovah commands words of comfort to be spoken to Jerusalem, in view of her warfare (or appointed time) being accomplished, and her iniquity pardoned; as typified by the the day of atonement.

Isa. 63: 1–4, "Who is this that cometh from Edom with dyed garments from Bozrah? that is glorious in his apparel, travelling in the greatness of his strength? I that speak in righteousness, mighty to save. . . . . I will tread them in mine anger, &c. . . . . For the day of vengeance is in mine heart, and THE YEAR OF MY REDEEMED is come."

Jer. 51: 45–47, "My people go ye out of the midst of her, [Babylon] and deliver ye every man his soul from the fierce anger of the Lord. And lest your heart faint, and ye fear for the rumor that shall be heard in the land; a rumor shall both come one year, and after that IN ANOTHER YEAR shall come a rumor, and violence in the land, ruler against ruler. Therefore the days come that I will do judgment," &c.

With this text the language in Rev. 11: 15–18, harmonizes: there the first event under the sounding of the seventh trump is, "the nations were angry, and thy wrath IS come, and the time of the dead that they SHOULD BE JUDGED." This "anger of the the nations," and "violence in the land," following the year 1843 when the first "rumor" went forth, had a marked beginning on the tenth day of the seventh month; and from the connexion we must regard the "violence" as having a direct connexion with the people of God; particularly those that are looking for the Judgment of Babylon. When nations are angry, there must always be a commencement of its developments; and on that day it was so prominent throughout the land and nation, that the Almighty has not marked in vain, The time of the dead, THAT THEY SHOULD BE JUDGED.

It seems to me that this judgment could not have commenced in 1798, as some of our brethren have held, for the reason that the Sixth Trumpet could not have closed its sounding sooner than the year 1840; and furthermore the "rumor in the one year," to be followed with a "rumor and violence" in "another year," which was to precede the judgment of Babylon had not then gone forth. Ought not the rumor, together with the rumor followed with violence, and the anger of the nations, on the very day of the year upon which the Jubal Trump sounded, to be considered as the introduction of the antitype of that event? And also to constitute a point that we have reached upon the prophetic chart, where we can safely rally and take soundings? See, also, Isa. 21: 16.

This particular, or definite year, is also appropriately called "the year of Liberty," Ezek. 41. 16, 17, and "the year of recompenses for the controversy of Zion," Isa. 34: 8, and is typified by the "year of rest," Lev. 25: 5,—the "year of release," Deut. 15: 9, the "year of tithing," Deut. 26: 12. It is also, in Num. 14: 34, and Ezek. 4: 6, where days of bearing the iniquity of God's people are used as the symbols of years, the last one of which serves as a type of "the year of recompenses," &c.

However these texts may be considered, there is but little difference of opinion relative to the 2300 days representing so many full years, and that the last one of these days is a symbol of the year of "release," "recompenses," &c., or brings us to the commencement of that year, so celebrated in prophecy.

This last prophetic day has its

which I think is adverted to by the Saviour himself in Luke 17: 34, "I tell you in that night there shall be two men in one bed; the one shall be taken, and the other left." That this is a literal night seems irreconcilable with the idea that the dead are to be raised and the living "changed in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye," the world around; when of course the same moment of time would find all times of both day and night. From the connexion of the text also, it is seen that some are "in the field," and in the mill, engaged in employments peculiar to the day, but not so to the night. As there are prophetic days, and every day has its night, I must understand our Lord as referring to such a night in this place, as he never speaks indefinitely nor in vain.

To the same night, Paul undoubtedly refers in Rom. 13: 11–13, "And that Knowing the time, that now it is high time to awake out of sleep: for now is our salvation nearer than when we believed. THE NIGHT is far spent, the day is at hand: let us therefore cast off the works of darkness, and let us put on the armor of light." This night is also referred to by the prophet Micah, 3: 5–7, with some of its causes and consequences: "Therefore night shall be unto you, that ye shall not have a vision; and it shall be dark unto you, that ye shall not divine; and the sun shall go down over the prophets, and the day shall be dark over them."

That a little period, just previous to the personal appearing of Christ, or the rising of "the Sun of Righteousness," (Mal. 4: 2,) is particularly recognized as night, is still further evidenced from the appearing itself, being frequently referred to as the morning.

Mal. 4: 2; Rev. 22: 16, "I am the root and the offspring of David, the bright and morning star." Rev. 2: 28, "And I will give him the morning star." 2 Pet. 1–19, "We have also a more sure word of prophecy; whereunto ye do well that ye take heed until the day dawn, and the day star arise in your hearts."

The sure word, is our lamp, (Psa. 119: 105.) and accompanied by the Spirit, our only light to guide us, not into, but through this dark night to the dawning of that day.

Hosea 6: 3, "Then shall we know, if we follow on to know the Lord: his going forth is prepared as the morning; and he shall come unto us as the rain, as the latter and former rain unto the earth."

Ezek. 7: 7, 10, "The morning is come upon thee, O thou that dwellest in the land: the time is come, the day of trouble is near, and not the sounding (or Echo; margin) again of the mountains. Behold the day, behold it is come: the morning is gone forth; the rod hath blossomed, pride hath budded."

Psa. 130: 6, "My soul waiteth for the Lord more than they that watch for the morning." (Margin. Or, which watch unto the morning.)

Psa. 49: 14, "Like sheep, they are laid in the grave; death shall feed upon them; and the upright shall have dominion over them in the morning; and their beauty shall consume in the grave from their dwelling."

Psa. 46: 5, "God is in the midst of her; she shall not be moved: God shall help her right early." (Margin; When the morning appeareth.)

Our Lord has told us that while he was in the world, he was the light of the world, (John 9: 5,) and that this world is darkness (Eph. 6. 12), but he has afforded us a "light" or "lamp" to guide us through this darkness, (Psa. 119: 105; Prov. 4: 18; 6: 23; 2 Pet. 1: 19; Matt. 25: 1,) till the "Sun of righteousness" arises; (Mal. 4: 3.) And furthermore, that we can not move forward toward the morning light, destitute of this "lamp" in a burning state, without "stumbling," (John 11: 10.) And again, that a time would come when the mass that professed to have the light, would be in darkness, Micah 3: 6, 7; Ezek. 20: 45–49. And more than this, that those likened to the "virgins" who took their lamps and went forth to meet the Bridegroom, would one half of them complain that their lamps had gone out, or were going out, (Matt. 25: 8.) This last mentioned state of things, to my mind, answers to the last prophetic night.

There never has been a period during the whole Christian dispensation, till the last few years, in which it was not acknowledged by the Church of God, that the Scriptures of the Old and New Testament, gave us light relative to the time of the second advent of Christ, and the end of the present dispensation. It has been a principle universally acknowledged, that 6000 years from the creation would bring us to the great "Sabbatic year," and the most popular Theological writers upon the prophetic periods, have brought their termination within a circle of about 44 years, lying between the year 1825 and 1869. The doctrine of the time of the advent, in the room of being the most repulsive part of the popular Theological systems, has been considered the most interesting.

Within a little comparative period, this part of scripture instruction has not only been totally abandoned by the mass of religious teachers, but efforts have been made to conceal the fact that it ever formed a part of the teachings of the fathers. Light from this quarter, so far as guiding us to the time when day will break, has entirely disappeared.

Another class of religious teachers, in the midst of much tribulation, have sought out these "old paths," and found therein the "good way."

The light from this quarter has been so brilliant as to discover and disipate the dark sackcloth coverings heaped upon the precious word by Papal superstition and bigotry: such as a temporal "Millennium," "Jews Return," "Spiritual Kingdom in the heart," &c. &c. The evidence of the immediate advent, proclaimed from the "sure word" by this latter class, has been so abundant as to overcome all opposition. The year 1843 has been pointed to as the end of the 2300, and 1335 years of Daniel. Thousands took their lamps—saw this evidence, and "went forth." The year passed by, "and they all slumbered and slept: But in the middle of the Jewish year following 1843, a "cry" was made that aroused them all: and now, oh now! the danger comes; for many begin to say "We have no more time," and others, that they have fixed upon the "present day," which is always safe, but which, it is to be feared in many instances, is used as a kind of abandonment of the whole theory of the time, or a kind of indefinite postponement of the subject. What renders this state of things more truly astonishing to my mind is, that recent developments prove the loss of one year in the chronology, lying between B. C. and A. D., which would leave us, at the time the midnight cry was given, but little past the middle of the last one of the 2300 years. Judging from the communications in our various periodicals, previous to October, we would naturally be led to think that at least, one half of those that "took their lamps and went forth," had given up the point that the Scriptures taught any thing further relative to the time, and those that still held to that position, advocated it in a very sleepy, and slumbering manner. The comparative movements of the proclamation of the advent in 1843, and the "midnight cry," made in the middle of this year, has been just as described by our Lord. First, it was a gradual, yet powerful awaking up to this subject—a taking of "lamps," and going forth at a time when "darkness covered the earth, and gross darkness the people:" and second, like a clear, loud, decided, and distinct cry, in the middle of a dark night. It caused a most singular, and astonishing movement throughout the entire land. It fell upon the ear of the humble follower of the meek and lowly Jesus, with almost as joyous surprise, as though it had been the final blast of the Seventh Trump. On the one hand hearts were beating high with the "blessed hope," and on the other, "all faces gathered paleness," while with awful suspense, (whether confessed or not) they awaited the "appointed day." Here let it be remembered, that this last proclamation was in the middle of the Jewish year, occupying about the same length of time before the middle as after; and as light upon the time did not cease with the close of last year, and as the present prospects are that the light of day will soon begin to dawn, the night may be considered as occupying the middle part of the year.

Another thing ought not to be forgotten, that the latter part of the night is the real sleeping time: Even those that are placed upon watch, always have the most trouble to keep awake just before the dawn, and from a knowledge of this fact, the injunction to WATCH, has been often repeated.

I cannot agree with Dr. Field, and others of our good brethren, that the "True midnight cry" can not be given by one of the "wise virgins," because, as is said, "they all slept." I think this is more than is said in the text. The expression is, "They all slumbered and slept." SLEEP, "A suspension of all the faculties of the mind. To live without care or thought—a state wherein external objects act on the organs of sense, without exciting their usual sensations." SLUMBER, "Light and imperfect sleep. Figuratively, to live in a state of negligence." See Barclay's English Dictionary, pp. 562, 563.

A person cannot, at the same time, both "slumber and sleep." We must understand that a part (the foolish) slept, and the other part (the wise) slumbered. The cry must be made, either by some of the virgins, or by some of the company that attended "the Bridegroom" to the residence of the bride. Suppose it to be made by one of the latter, and the language is unintelligible; for then it should be put in this form, "Behold the Bridegroom cometh! come ye out to meet him." What was the business of the virgins? he answers in ver. 12, "Watch therefore;" as they do, whose business it is not only to receive and escort the Bridegroom, but to announce his approach upon the receipt of the first evidence, in the language, "Behold the Bridegroom COMETH!" Those that were only "slumbering," "sleeping imperfectly," occasionally closing their eyes, and (burdened with the duty of "watching,) again opening them, and gazing in the direction of the Bridegroom, were the only ones from whom the cry could come.

If we were to give a description of the manner in which we would have Matt. 25: 1--7, fulfilled, could we possibly do it better than by adverting to what has recently transpired?

It may be possible that this whole year is recognized as "that night," but, according to present light I cannot conceive that it is any thing more than half of the prophetic day, and half of this, reckoning from the "midnight," would correspond with the last part of the ninth, or the first of the tenth month: But as the sure word is only to serve us "until the day dawn," which must be a little before the "Sun of righteousness" arises, we shall find harmonizing with this view the 2nd chapter of Haggai.

After telling us in the seventh month, (the point of time when it was seen that we should need more light) that it was yet a little while, and he would "shake all nations," "and the desire of all nations should come;" (ver. 1--7) he tells us that on the four and twentieth day of the ninth month, "I WILL TAKE THEE, O Zerubbabel, [stranger at Babylon—a type of the Church,] my servant, the son of Shealtiel, saith the Lord, and will make thee as a signet; for I have chosen thee, saith the Lord of Hosts;" (ver. 23.)

But preceding this, he tells us, (ver. 21,22,) "I will shake the heavens and the earth; and I will overthrow the throne of kingdoms, [Rome,] and I will destroy the strength of the kingdoms of the heathen; and I will overthrow the chariots, and those that ride in them; and the horses and their riders shall come down, every one by the sword of his brother."

To prove that this scripture has been fulfilled, we shall be obliged to resort to the Papal practice of denying that it means what it says. Admitting that it is a prediction of events yet future, we must also admit that the events named must commence on the 24th day of the ninth month of some year, for it is a plain statement of facts, harmonizing with all scripture as yet future, on this subject, & is to be IN THAT DAY, (see ver. 23.) If this is not the year, who can tell when the last year of prophetic periods does come? And had darkness on this point formed a part of the original design, why so much light thrown upon a day, when God has solemnly assured us that he will "shake the heavens and the earth," &c. Paul to the Heb. 12: 25--29, in quoting this language of the prophet, tells us what this word, "yet once more," of "shaking" "signifieth"—It is "the removing of those things that are shaken," and our "RECEIVING A KINGDOM."

It seems to me that Paul has removed all obscurity, if any there was, from this prophecy.

If the Lord had personally appeared on the 10th. day of the 7th month, we should have been found "taking heed" to the types and shadows of the law, in the room of the "sure word of prophecy," and yet, every "jot and tittle" of the Law must be fulfilled.

The expression, "ye know not when the time is," used in the present tense 1800 years ago, it seems to me, can not affect the plain declarations of our Saviour,—Daniel, Paul, and Peter, who have told us, "Then know,"—"The wise shall understand,"—"Ye brethren, are not in darkness," "Seeing ye know these things before," &c.

THE MORNING WATCH.

This agrees in its types with the other divisions of time.

The deliverance of God's people from the bondage of Egypt, has ever been regarded as a type of the final deliverance of God's people in the last days. We read in

Ex. 14: 23, 24, "And the Egyptians pursued, and went in after them, to the midst of the sea, even all Pharaoh's horses, his chariots, and his horsemen. And it came to pass that in the morning watch the Lord looked unto the host of the Egyptians through the pillar of fire and of cloud, and troubled the host of the Egyptians."

The antitype in Rev. 6: 15--17, says, "And the kings of the earth, and the great men, and the rich men, and the chief captains, and the mighty men, and every bond man, and every free man, hid themselves in the dens and in the rocks of the mountains; and said to the mountains and rocks, Fall on us, and hide us from the face of him that sitteth on the throne, and from the wrath of the Lamb: For the great day of his wrath is come; and who shall be able to stand?"

Hab. 2: 1--3. When the first watch is set the fact is made known that the vision is for an "appointed time." "I will stand upon my watch." When this "stand" was taken, the "appointed time" (1843) was proclaimed. This, then, was the first watch.

Matt. 24: 43, "But know this, that if the good man of the house had known in what watch the thief would come, he would have watched," &c. Just what the prophet said he would do. Here the evidence is clear that the watches would be known, from a doubt being expressed by those on whom the day is to come as a thief, as to which one of them the thief would come, in.

Luke 12: 38, "And if he shall come in the second watch, or come in the third watch, and find them so, blessed are those servants." This seems to be plain, that those servants would be able to distinguish between the different watches.

Psa. 130: 6, "My soul waiteth for the Lord more than they that watch for the morning, I say, more than they that watch unto the morning."

David knew that he should not wait for that morning, for when it came, it would awake him from the "dust of the earth." Yet with prophetic eye, he saw that an anxiety for the Lord to come would not then be as great as his then was.

A fourth watch is spoken of, but not in connexion with Christ's appearing. (Matt. 14: 25.) In Mark, 14: 35, his coming is placed in connexion with the "cock crowing, or in the morning," which I have supposed to be the same point of time. The division of time into watches, does not appear to be in equal portions, neither is it necessary that it should be so, in order to comply with the figure.

The parts of the night, apportioned to each of the several watches, have always varied in the same, and in different countries, according to the circumstances.

I claim no superior knowledge, neither do I wish to be found occupying the place of an accuser of my brethren when the Lord shall appear. These things all appear much plainer to my mind at present, than I can make them appear to others upon a sheet like this. And now, to those who oppose the idea of our knowing any thing now of the time, and are contending that "that day" is to come upon God's people, as well as "all the world," like a "thief," I wish to propound a few questions which you can ponder during your prayerful investigations of scripture truth.

1st. Have you found any arguments in the Bible, perfectly satisfactory to your own mind, overthowing the evidence contained in the following plain texts, that the time of the advent might be known? 1 Pet. 1: 11, 12; 2 Pet. 1: 19; 1 Thess. 5: 4; Rev 3: 3; Dan. 12: 10--13, &c. &c.

2d. On what ground did you believe that the second advent of our Lord would take place in the year 1843, unless it was that the weight of argument went to show that the prophetic periods terminated in that year?

3d. What argument did you then possess, proving 1843 to be the end of prophetic periods, which does not now prove the same thing for the year 1844, the evidence being clear, that one year was lost from the chronology between the years 1, B. C. and the year 1, A. D.? And have you not in reality, all the arguments proving the time of the advent, that you had at this time of last year, and these arguments strengthened by signs that you did not then have?

4th. Are you not satisfied that the predicted proclamations of "Peace and safety," that was to precede the sudden destruction of the ungodly, are more perfectly fulfilled now, than ever before?

5th. Are you as well prepared, and do you feel as much anxiety to meet our coming Lord, as when you believed the time of his coming was taught?

6th. Is it going backward or forward in the path marked out in the Bible, for the follower of Jesus, to "confess that we are in darkness relative to time and that "that day" will overtake us as a thief?

7th. Do you love the appearing of Christ as well, and do you talk as much about it as you did in the year 1843?

8th. Does the world hate your company and conversation as bad as they did when you fearlessly, yet affectionately contended that the Bible taught the time of the advent?

9th. Is your present course a "drawing back," or "pressing forward," in the light of scripture instruction relative to "the last days?"

10th. Do you still carry your Bible in your et, and in conversation with the brethren, d produce it as evidence of the correctness of position as often as you used to do?

From the position I now occupy, I regard my duty, and as a source of comfort to God's ing people, to send forth these "reasons hope," that on the twenty-fourth day of the month, according to the word of Haggai the p et, as confirmed by the apostle Paul, the "
ens and the earth will be shaken" preparato God's people "receiving a kingdom that ca be moved."

WESTERN MIDNIGHT CRY.

Cincinnati, Wednesday, December 11, 1844.

To Country Subscribers.

If twenty-eight, out of five hundred and fifty of our subscribers, will send us 50 cents per week, it will enable us to issue an edition of our paper each week until the Lord comes. Brethren ought to feel the importance of having a medium of free investigation of the scriptures in a time like this. If the means are furnished, the paper will be published each week as long as it may be needed. In such case, brethren are requested to furnish short articles, either upon matters of religious experience, or their views upon scripture; and they will be published whether they agree with my own or not; as we now, especially, need the privilege of a fair view of the Christian's future prospects from every possible point.

Whether our hopes will be realized, in continuing to make this sheet a medium of comfort to the saints that are "scattered abroad" is a matter that depends, principally, upon the course now pursued by the individual that has read this article.

PROPOSITION.

If one hundred and fifty of our brethren and sisters in this city will pay 6¼ cents for their paper, I will agree that they shall be furnished with it regularly each week, at the Depot on Fifth st., near Smith, and at Bro. J. Eshelby's, 186 Main st., and also at the Tabernacle on the evening of publication. For the balance, I have no doubt that dependence can be made upon our friends from abroad, after they shall have read the notice "to country subscribers." The present probability is, that but few more numbers will be needed; but this temporary arrangement will secure a weekly emission. It will be seen from these propositions, that our sheet is now published at less than half its former expense.

The Cause in this Place.

Our meetings are held at the Tabernacle four evenings in the week, and three times on the Sabbath. The congregations are quite as large as they were before the "midnight cry" was given. I think there is more unity, love, and spiritual mindedness now existing among us, than has ever before been known.

A variety of opinions have been held, relative to definite time, among those that are looking for the immediate Advent, but they have in no way affected the ardent love that still prevails. Some, in consequence of the recent movement, and the disappointment, have left us, or rather withheld from us their fellowship, and in some cases have made "hard speeches," "murmured," "complained," &c., Jude 15 16, but there are those that find in their hearts the "charity" that "beareth all things" after their faith has been subjected to such a severe test.

A Question for Believers.

Why is it that those persons who signalized themselves by their opposition to the personal Advent of Christ, so readily point to the concessions of those brethren who have given up the idea of the definite time being taught, and as a consequence, fix upon "to-day," and with an air of triumph, say, well, Mr. —— has found the right time at last!?

☞ We hope Bro. Christian, of Louisville, will visit the brethren at Madison, as soon as he conveniently can. We should also be pleased to see him at this place.

☞ An interesting letter from Bro. Miller, received by a friend in this vicinity, will appear in the next number. It is a reply to some questions propounded to him on the subject of the "atonement."

☞ Bro. Cherry, P. M. at Marysville, Union Co., O., writes to us Dec. 6th, "Enclosed I send you one dollar, to assist you in publishing the 'W. M. Cry.' The last number was a feast. May the Lord assist you to continue its publication," &c.

Going Back.

Since the passing by of the tenth day of the seventh month, some of the clergy in this section have been very industrious in endeavouring to persuade advent believers to go back to their old churches, and in a few instances, if I am correctly informed, they have succeeded. If our brethren can get more scripture truth, and better glorify God in any of the religious organizations of the day, than they can in the advent meetings, they are in duty bound thus to "go back." But what are the facts? They well know that in the great mass of these churches, the prominent themes are, "The world's conversion," a "thousand year's millennium," and the "Return of the Jews to Palestine," before the personal advent of our Saviour. Those that "go back" to sit under the lullaby songs of such unscriptural, unreasonable doctrines, do it with their eyes open; and such a course on their part, will be "going back" indeed.

These churches, or nearly all of them, acknowledge, and practice upon the right of legislation, or making, and enforcing discipline; and in subscribing to such a claim, we are verily guilty of an act of High Treason against the government of God. Where in all the Bible—that perfect law—the Christian's only law, has God acknowledged this right of mortals? No where: not in one place has he conceded the privilege of remodeling the least portion of his truth for the government of his creature man. This consideration alone, ought forever to debar us from subscribing to any human creed.

"Join our church," says the ecclesiastical functionary. "I cannot conscientiously do it," says the believer, "as I wish to be governed by the word of God alone." Again, it is replied, "you are deluded; does not every sect profess to be governed by the Bible? and is not the christian world already shivered into its 'six hundred three score and six' fractions? This discipline and 'articles of faith' is in perfect accordance with the scriptures—in fact it has been compiled from them, with more labor and study than an illiterate man like yourself is able to bestow." Then a principal object that I am to gain by subscribing to your articles of faith, is the liberty of violating one of the plainest injunctions in the Bible, viz. "Search the scriptures;" and furthermore, I have already learned that I can not obey the command "go on to perfection," and retain your fellowship under those articles; as they suppose me to know all that I ever can know of scripture, the moment I subscribe to them. The proof of this I have, in previously having been "evil entreated" by the proprietors of similar articles to those you now offer me, because I "searched the scriptures," and found that the "millennium" theory, and "return of the Jews," were fables, and that the second advent of our Lord was brought to view as being very near at hand; and when I wished these blessed truths to be incorporated among others in our "articles," I soon found that those "articles" were unalterable, except upon very complicated conditions, which had been so inserted as to reserve the glorious privilege of "living and dying" a —— (Methodist, or Baptist, &c, as the case may be.)

Having become "free," in the scripture sense, it is much more safe to "press forward," than either to "go back," or "draw back," especially at this time when the crown of glory is so soon to be given to the faithful in Christ Jesus.

PATIENCE.

"Patience is that grace that enables us to bear calamities, afflictions and oppositions, with constancy and calmness of mind, and with a ready submission to the will of God."

It is something to be "followed after," 1 Tim. 6: 11; The teachings of truth, as also the temptations of the Devil, constantly present before the mind's eye, a path, and inducements to walk in it. The path of "Patience" is presented by truth, and is to be followed.

By Paul, (2d Cor, 6: 3-12;) it is placed at the head of those graces that commend us to God and good men, in the midst of all the trials, that have ever been the common lot of God's children, or that ever will be incident to christian life. See also, 2d Thess. 1: 3,6; and 2d Tim. 3: 8-13. While it preserves its possessor from offending by any departure from the path of duty marked out by the Lord, (2d Cor. 6: 3;) it does not always prevent people from becoming offended with us. See ver. 12.

Its exercise is a condition of God's favor, and of being preserved by him in the hour of temptation. Heb. 6: 12, 10: 36; Jam. 1: 3, 4 and Rev. 3: 10.

It is a link in that chain of graces upon which is suspended the christian's hope; Rom. 5: 3, 15: 4; and 2d Pet. 1: 6. It is preceded by love. 1st Tim. 6: 11.

It is as impossible to secure, and retain the noble grace of Christian patience, without "righteousness, godliness, faith and love," as it is for the smith to attach a fifth link to his chain, before he has put on the fourth one; and the Devil will never assail us with "great wrath," until this chain of graces is complete.

Almost all classes of community hold on to, and admire some one of the links in this chain. Thus we have the "Moral Reform Society," for the promotion of "virtue." The "Temperance Society," for the promotion of "Temperance." &c., &c., But alas! where is the society for the promotion of christian patience? For the want of this link in the chain, the christian's hope is fallen in the dust, where it fails to attract the malicious eye of the enemy of God and man.

Patience is wrought in the "trial of our faith," Jam. 1: 3; God has given us a rule of faith—the Bible—containing things to be believed, that when fully believed and practised, will bring the tribulation necessary to work Patience in the soul. Christian patience supposes tribulations—such as are peculiar to the christian—tribulations occasioned by following Christ, 2d Cor, 11: 22-31. It cannot be possessed without tribulation—it is wrought by it. So says the sure word, and we are unsafe without a kind of patience thus wrought

An anxiety for the wealth and honors of this world will destroy its exercise, 1st Tim. 3: 3; 2d Tim. 2: 24.

To gain Eternal Life, the exercise of patience must be continuous, Rom. 2; 7; 2d Tim. 2: 9, 10; 1st Cor. 4: 12-16.

It is a duty enjoined, in waiting for the coming of the Lord, Jam. 5: 7, 8; Psa. 37: 7; 40: 1; 2 Thess. 3: 5; &c.

We need it to bear with each others infirmities, and with a scoffing world; 1 Thess. 5: 14. All men like ourselves, are poor fallible beings, possessing the same liability to err; and we should ever bear in mind that their opposition can affect our salvation in no other way, than by trying our patience. In such trials our eternal well-being is endangered; for if we yield to impatience, the chain is broken, and our hope is lost; or become a mere creature of imagination. Those followers of Jesus, whose minds are naturally sensitive, and easily affected by tribulations arising from Sarcasm, Falsehood and misrepresentations, will ever be safe in turning to the reasonings of the Apostle in Rom. 8: 31--39.

We should exercise patience toward our fellow men, because we are ever liable to be placed in circumstances where we may need it extended to us. Matt. 18: 26.

Another reason for the exercise of patience, is, that God has not authorized us to ask any more lenity from him, than we extend to our fellows. Matt. 6: 12; 18: 21, 22, 33.

True patience reaches to the end of the christain's pilgrimage, James 1:4. Rev. 13: 10; 14: 12, while the patience of the unstable and worldly minded man, wears out somewhere on his journey, but is more likely to be exhausted near the journey's end. None tire at the beginning of a pilgrimage; few in the middle of it, but many give out near its end.

God has furnished us with an excellent rule for testing our patience, whether it be of the proper kind; for there is seldom a true bill without its counterfeit, 1 Pet. 2: 20--23, is a complete counterfeit detector in this line of graces. It must be a kind of patience wrought by tribulations, occasioned by following Christ, or his word, which is a transcript of himself.

O how much has the christian pilgrim to try his patience, while passing through this "vale of tears!" "looking for the glorious appearing of the Great God, and our Saviour Jesus Christ." "Behold," says James, "the husbandman waiteth for the precious fruit of the earth, and hath long patience for it, until he receive the early and the latter rain. Be ye also patient, for the coming of the Lord draweth nigh." The husbandman prepares his ground, sows his seed, fences his field, and watches the first appearance of "the blade." and never once murmurs because the harvest is not ready at mid-summer; and even though the "harvest" is a month later in ripening, than usual, he patiently waits until it is ready, when he thrusts in his sickle and returns, "rejoicing bringing his sheaves with him."

But we have a higher example, in the patience of God toward our fallen race. After the world has slighted his grace, rejected his laws, and established laws, systems, and governments of their own; Behold his patience, and mark well his tender love! "God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him might not perish, but have everlasting life." John 3: 16.

James 5: 10. Moses, the meek, was also the patient servant of God. He exchanged the heirship of the Egyptian throne, for a companionship with oppressed slaves; and while he appealed again and again to the haughty tyrant for the liberation of God's people, he patiently waited till the "first-born of Egypt" were slain; the host assembled; the pillar of fire appeared; then meekly pursued his course through the Sea, and the wilderness, till the promised land was stretched out before his view.

Joshua, marshalled the "Sacred Hosts of God's elect," and, following his directions, marched seven times around the city of Jerico, and on the seventh day, when the patience of many would have failed, he accomplished as much as in the whole previous six days, and through his patient and unwearied application, possessed the land promised to his fathers.

Joseph, betrayed by his brethren; falsely and maliciously accused by Potiphar's wife; patiently suffered the privations of a prison, till God plead his cause, elevated him to a seat above the throne of Egypt, and finally signalized him as another deliverer of his people.

Gideon, with his despised band of three hundred men, occupying a station claimed by thirty thousand, that God rejected, patiently pursued his course; and waited at the Midianite's camp, with their simple armor of "pitchers and lamps," till the swords of the enemies of the Lord were turned one against another, and he was left to share the conqueror's spoils.

David, "because God was with him," became an object of the wicked hatred of Saul, who bade his servants slay him. He slew the enemies of Saul "with a great slaughter:" yet, even this, embittered his enemy, who again attempted to thrust him through with a dart. When the kingdom was within his reach, he fled away and sought seclusion in the society of Samuel. In vain did he appeal to his enemy, "what have I done?" he must be sacrificed to the demon of jealousy; and again he fled away—begged some bread, and the sword of Goliath, and took refuge in the cave of Addullam. This was the man of whom the damsels sung, "Saul hath slain his thousands, but David has slain his tens of thousands," yet now, one heart alone could feel for him; "Jonathan fell upon his neck and wept."

When they that would destroy him wrongfully, were "more in number than the hairs of his head," then he "restored that which he took not away." His companions were the "discontented, and every one that was in debt." Rewards of honor, fields, and vineyards, were offered for his life, yet in no instance would he take revenge upon one that bore the name of an Israelite, but suffered in patience.

His forbearance caused even his proud enemy to weep with a loud voice, and say, "Thou art more righteous than I;" when David held up the "skirt of his robe," that he had cut off while he slept, and exclaimed, "The Lord judge between me and thee," and again he fled into the wilderness of Engedi. When Saul had fallen upon the plains of Gilboa, David stood by his side, and with unaffected grief, cried "How are the mighty fallen!"

Again, an aspirant for human honors, his own son! sat in the gate, and with fair speeches and enticing words stole away the hearts of the people from following after David. Meekly he yields the throne to the usurper, and when a just reward was visited upon the head of the rebel, in the room of joining the song of triumph, he clothed himself in sackcloth, and cried, "My son, Absalom, my son, my son!! would to God I had died for thee."

On no occasion, does he trouble himself with a defence of his course, or character; yet God raised him to honor and turned the counsel of Ahithophel against him, into foolishness. Look at his last words, 2d Sam. 23: 1-7.

Elijah, is another example of patience. Seven times in prayer he bowed himself, and patiently waited for rain upon the thirsty land, till he saw the "little cloud" arise. He preferred to lie down in the wilderness alone, and receive his food from the wild raven's claws, rather than yield to the claims of wicked Ahab, for a prophecy of peace, and prosperity for his corrupted kingdom, and tyranical reign, when God had not spoken peace. As a reward of his patient sufferings, God sent his chariots, and bore him forever away from the scene of his trials.

Elisha was no longer safe, after he had directed the anointing of Jehu, and delivered the Message God had given him against Joram, King of Israel.

Nehemiah and Ezra, were special objects of hatred, when they had courage to rebuild the fallen walls of Jerusalem. Sanballat, and Tobiah, sneeringly said, "If so much as a fox go up on your wall he will break it down:" But as the work was patiently prosecuted, they changed their tune, first to flattery, then to threats. The dignified, patient reply, to their crafty efforts, was, "I am doing a great work, and why should it cease for me to come down to you?"

Esther, raised from obscurity to the Throne of Media and Persia, in patient silence wept and prayed awaiting deliverance from the hand of God, for herself and people, against the deep laid and crafty designs of wicked Haman; and witnessed his overthrow.

Job. Ye have heard of the patience of Job, Jam. 5: 11. In the midst of affluence, tribulations came. His "oxen were ploughing," and his asses quietly "feeding beside them," when the Sabeans fell upon them—carried them away, and slew his servants, and the fire from heaven consumed his flocks.—His houses were rent by winds, and his children perished. His body was smitten with boils till he sat down in the dust and cried aloud with pain. He mourned alone; even his wife upbraiding him for his constancy. His friends conspired against him, taking peculiar pains to prove him a bad man; yet "in all this he sinned not, nor charged God foolishly," but looked forward to the day of retribution, and exclaimed, "I know that my Redeemer liveth, and that he shall stand at the latter day upon the earth: and though after my skin worms destroy this body, yet in my flesh shall I see God."

Isaiah, patiently bore the disgrace of walking three years, naked, and barefoot, for a sign, and a wonder upon Egypt and Ethiopia.

Jeremiah, went down to the potter's house, and foretold the evils to come upon Israel and Judah; then they conspired against him and said, "Come and let us smite him with the tongue." God sent him again to prophecy against Israel and Judah, charging him to "diminish not a word." Then they conspired against him, saying, "he is worthy to die." He patiently submitted himself to them—was shut up in the court of the prison—afterwards was cast into a dungeon where he nearly perished with hunger; and in all this, not one bitter complaint for himself, but for his people he cried, "O that my head were waters, and mine eyes a fountain of tears, that I might weep day and night for the slain of the daughter of my people!"

Ezekiel, patiently submitted to eat the "bitter roll," and speak the words that God had given him, and "briers and thorns were with him." At the end of his patient, and as usual with God's servants, unpopular labors, he was presented with a view of the Glorious city, and River of life.

Daniel, and his brethren, patiently suffered the privations of captivity from their Canaan home, and without a murmur submit to the exactions of an unrighteous decree, & thus "stopped the mouths of lions, and quenched the violence of fire."

The minor prophets, all suffered privations in their turn, leaving their cause to God.

And what of all these? Why, if you will obey God, and be his, take them for an example of "suffering affliction and patience."

The Jewish dispensation, with its scenes of suffering, passed away at that point of time, when professed servants of God were conspiring the death of Creation's acknowledged Lord.

And now opens a fresh scene of tribulation, that loudly calls forth the exercise of this manly—this God-like grace. I say, manly, because it is completely divested of that want of principle—that impatience, which seeks the destruction of its victim—a work the child of God never can, nor never will attempt to do.

First on the list of patient sufferers under the Gospel dispensation is, Who! Ah, Who!! Its leader!—No less than Him that is now soon to appear, leading on the whole army of once patient suffering pilgrims—wearing the insignia of KING OF KINGS, AND LORD OF LORDS. See him in the midst of a mob, Matt. 26: 50--56, betrayed by a professed disciple, yet no unkind word.—They all abandoned him to his enemies, Yet no reproaches. "He was led like a lamb to the slaughter, and as a sheep before her shearers is dumb, so he opened not his mouth." They spit in his face, and insulted him on the cross, yet on the cross he prayed, "forgive."

Through patience he slept—he arose—and captive led, the tenant of the tomb.

"Consider him that endured such contradiction of sinners against himself, lest ye become wearied and faint in your minds." Heb. 12: 3.

Letter from Brother F. G. Brown.

DEAR BRO. BLISS:—I want to say to the dear brethren and sisters scattered abroad, that I am yet looking for Jesus, in confident expectation of seeing him right speedily. I have not gone off again, into indefinite time, as that is generally understood by our opposers, or as it has been used by ourselves. I mean something by looking for Christ speedily. I really expect him every day, and every hour; and am as frequently disappointed, says the despiser of my hope. Yes, I am continually disappointed: but what then, I am not injured by the disappointment: Such a hope as ours can bear many disappointments: it is heaven to look for God's dear son, although disappointed. Disappointments! why they test the depth of our love to Christ. I had no idea I loved Jesus so passionately, until after the tenth.—It was the first disappointment I had ever experienced of the kind. You know I always thought that '43 must pass, in order to fulfil various prophecies relative to the prolonging of the days, the tailing of every vision, the tarrying of the vision, peace and safety, &c.. But my time has now come for the Lord to make his appearing, and I was sadly, sadly disappointed in not seeing him on the tenth ult. The scorners of our hope exult while we weep, but the next time of our exulting, will be their time of weeping. This late movement has distinctly shown who love and who hate Christ's coming; it has more than any other movement since the days of our Lord's betrayal, condemnation and death, exposed the hellish blasphemy of wicked men—everything sacred in time and in eternity, has been caricatured and ridiculed by them. What a sign of the times! I must yet believe that this last cry was from God; by the same mode of reasoning which might lead me to deem it a farce, I might reject the whole movement in relation to going forth to meet the bridegroom. True, Jesus did not come at the time expected, but I had rather wait a few days, before I admit that it was not right to preach as we did. God will reconcile this mystery soon.—I believe yet that the virgins arose and trimmed their lamps at that time, according to the parable, and that those lamps will burn until Jesus comes; a disappointment cannot extinguish them. We are now in the 12th chapter of Luke, 35—6 verse, with our lamps trimmed and burning; we are literally watching for our Lord; we are in the trying time, when our faith is being tested in the sight of men and angels; we are just where Peter and James and the prophets foresaw we should be—in the furnace of affliction; we are just where our great prototype Jesus was before his glorification; read the history of his last days of suffering, and then tell me in what footsteps of his, physical death excepted, have we not been? what a parable! Read the mournful songs of his father David, and then see how all the descendants are journeying the same way! In no virtue are we so deficient as that of patience; James (i: 1—4,) speaks of it as the crowning of the graces. If the dear saints can stand this late trial, they surely could go to the stake for their religion; and they do stand it nobly and gloriously. My brother, the doctrine of Christ's coming, is indestructible: the cause is of God, and nothing but the power of Omnipotence can overthrow it; the Holy Ghost begat these things in our souls, and you might as well try to annihilate our thoughts, dry up our passions, stop our breath, or draw the last drop of blood from our hearts, by the use of words of reproach, of expostulation, or of flattery, as to scare us, or allure us from this hope, and this service for Christ. Could I be exhonorated from these labors by the most severe servitude under man, without offending God, I don't know sometimes but that I should prefer it to any longer endurance of such trials, but the hope of "Well done," cheers me, the thought of "blessed is that servant," animates me, the solemn admonitions of my Savior—"Watch," alarms me: so that if I am to die in the struggle, on the altar of this cause I lay my poor life. Praise God, he never was so kind to me, as he has been since I began to proclaim the coming of his Son—he lets me lack for nothing. We are greatly humbled now, but I tell every one of Christ's ministers and members, if there be any remaining who have not as yet taken ground with us, YOU have got to come here! I tell you, you have got to stoop, and to pass through as low and as humble a gate as your despised brethren, or go to perdition! I speak it in all kindness and faithfulness. God has prepared us for ANY CRISIS—we are in advance of you in preparation for it. You are now joined with the world, you are puffed up with self, with pride, you are soundly asleep—you are trying to effect in your own strength, what God will never, never sanction! The startling peals of the Almighty's trump will soon confound you!! You have got such works of repentance to effect for yourselves, as ever had those who were engaged in condemning and crucifying the Son of God! I wish only your good in sounding the alarm to awake out of sleep. I am not mad: it is painful to speak in this strain to many who are my superiors; but I must, I must, or offend God. Do bear with me, while I humbly ask: Is not God fighting against you? You fear, you groan at what you deem innovations upon the order of the ministry, &c. The foundations of Christianity are rocking, as you think. Beloved, take another view of it. May not God's hand be at the bottom of this terrible revolution? and may it not be that you are fighting against God. From my soul, I pity you in your blindness, and would willingly approach your feet, though it were under the lash of scorpions, and through the burning fires, if by so doing you could be persuaded to embrace the simple, yet glorious truth of the immediate coming of my Lord. Oh, how my inmost soul yearns over my former associates in the church and ministry! it seems to me as tho' they are all going to hell together. "Oh, that they were wise." I cannot, I dare not go with them, it would be my death. Oh that God Almighty would speak to them! I have, in common with others, been tempted and tried since the tenth, but I have with them enjoyed great peace, especially since I took The Message and have gone forth speaking "Comfortably unto Jerusalem!" God's seal is just as visible upon this as upon any previous Message. I had abundant evidence of it here on yesterday, (Lord's day.)—The brethren in the neighboring towns joined the band here, and I have seldom witnessed a more powerful meeting. The Holy Ghost poured an unceasing tide of salvation into my soul the whole day, so that to-day my lungs are quite feeble.—I was never more sensible of having help from heaven: I dreaded coming here without being able to "define my position," but without any premeditation I had three full Messages: glory to God! We are not in the tarrying time, nor slumbering time—the war will not, I think, be removed, if at all, as before—we are in the waking, waiting, watching, praying time. We are now to use the Lord's prayer, John's prayer (which is the crowning item of all prophecy previous to Christ's coming,) and the unfortunate widow's prayer: we are, in this last respect, just where I have always said we should come, before Jesus would make his appearance; and praise God for the unceasing stream of praying breath that he is granting us. Tremble, ye sinners and slumberers in Zion! for such a rich cloud of holy incense never before went up to God! The foolish have gone (to buy oil.) The wise were never wiser and stronger in the faith: we shall not have another disappointment. The next hope will be realized! I wish you could have been with us yesterday—"we had wine on the lees:" several were baptized, among others three little lambs of the flock, who came out of the water shouting glory to God. Several backsliders were forward for prayers. Strange and startling signs are being seen in the heavens in this region as well as elsewhere, by both the righteous and the wicked.

I do hope that every lecturer, and every one who has a gift, will thrust themselves out, and comfort the flock; Oh, you will get a rich pay. Let the Peters, "feed the sheep and the lambs." Jesus "went about doing good." Do not let us act, preach, or publish as though "My Lord delayeth his coming." I am touring about in the delightful, delightful service, of feeding the lambs, and the Great Shepherd is feeding me.

Yours, &c.

Extract of a Letter from Bro. Miller.

"We have done our work in warning sinners and in trying to awake a formal church. God in his providence has shut the door; we can only stir one another up to be patient; and be diligent to make our calling and election sure. We are now living in the time specified by Malachi iii: 18, also Daniel xii: 10, and Rev. xxii: 10—12. In this passage we cannot help but see, that a little while before Christ should come, there would be a separation between the just and unjust, the righteous and wicked, between those who love his appearing, and those who hate it. And never since the days of the apostles, has there been such a division line drawn, as was drawn about the 10th or 23rd day of the 7th Jewish month. Since that time, they say, "they have no confidence in us." We have now need of patience, after we have done the will of God, that we may receive the promise; for he says, "Behold, I come quickly, to reward every one as his work shall be." You may enquire, how long, quickly means. The false hearted professor will tell you, it may mean ages upon ages yet to come; but the real lover of Christ, will hope it is near. Christ has told us how near.—Matt. xxiv: 32, 33. Again, the apostle James has told us that we are to have patience, for it is nigh. He then tells us that the husbandman waiteth for the precious fruit of the earth, and hath long patience for it, until he receive the early and latter rain. How long then does the husbandman wait? The former rains, in Judea, fell after the autumnal equinox, at their seed time, to quicken the grain; and the latter rains, after the vernal equinox, to ensure a plentiful crop.—[Carpenter's Introduction p. 334.] "Be ye also patient; stablish your hearts: for the coming of the Lord draweth nigh." How nigh? It cannot be seen by the reading of the passage, that we are to be in this patient waiting for his coming, after we have done the will of God, sown the seed, given the midnight cry; longer, and it may be much less than the husbandman waited. Therefore, let us stablish our hearts, be determined to go forward, let us not look back, "Remember Lot's wife." I think the event for which we look cannot be far off. I know of no rule, by which we can fix on any day or hour. But Christ tells us we may know when it is near even at the door. James v: 9, tells us, when this time of patient waiting comes, then, "Behold the Judge standeth before the door." I feel as confident as ever, that God will justify us in fixing the year. And I believe as firmly, that this Jewish year will not terminate before this wicked and corrupted earth's history will all be told. The amount of scoffing and mocking at the present time, is beyond any calculation. We can hardly pass a man, professor or non-professor, but what he scoffingly inquires, "You have not gone up," or "God cannot burn the world," &c., ridiculing the Bible itself, and blaspheming the word and power of God. And yet ministers and moral editors wink at it. And some of them are performing the same, to the no small joy of the most depraved characters in community.

If this is not a sign of the last day, we are sure never to see fulfilled 2 Peter iii: 3, 4,—"Knowing this first, that there shall come in the last days scoffers, walking after their own lusts, and saying, "Where is the promise of his coming? for since the fathers fell asleep, all things continue as they were from the beginning of the creation," nor Jude, 18, "How that they told you there should be mockers in the last time, who should walk after their own ungodly lusts." I pity the inhabitants who may live in an age of the world that is worse than this. I cannot believe this earth will ever again be so cursed.—Where are our moral judges and rulers? Has virtue fled from the earth, and is there no fear of God in all the land?

Come Lord Jesus, O! come quickly. Or we shall be as when God overthrew the cities of the plain, like unto Sodom and Gomorrah. Where are the watchmen upon the walls of Zion? Can the sign of Peter and Jude be fulfilled before their eyes, and they not see it? Do they not know that one sign plainly fulfilled is proof enough? for God is not man that he should lie, nor is like unto the sons of men, that he should be mistaken. I would beg to know what could be called scoffing, and mocking if the conduct of all classes of men opposing the Second Advent doctrine, is not.—Paul tells us, 1 Thes. iv: 17, "Then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air: and so shall we ever be with the Lord."—And some are tauntingly enquiring, "have you not gone up." Even little children in the streets are shouting continually to passers by, "Have you a ticket to go up." The public prints, of the most fashionable and popular kind, in the great Sodoms of our country, caricaturing in the most shameful manner, the "white robes of the saints." Rev. vi: 11. The "going up," and the great day of "burning." Even the pulpits are desecrated by the repetition of scandalous and false reports concerning the "ascension robes," and Priests are using their powers and pens, to fill the catalogue of scoffing in the most scandalous periodicals of the day. England and France, with their sinks of pollution, London and Paris, cannot, will not, and dare not, compete with our Boston, New York, or Philadelphia, in scoffing. If these will not open the eyes of our good men in these cities, then I shall believe there is none there. And at any rate, the world must and will be burned up, and few men left. Adieu, my brother, I am patiently waiting for my King, &c.

WM. MILLER.

Low Hampton, Nov. 18th, 1844."

LETTER FROM BRO. MILLER.

LOWHAMPTON, Nov. 22, 1844.

Dear Bro. Holmes,—Your letter of the 8th has been just received, I hasten to answer it, you request me to give my views on the atonement.

The word atonement, signifies reconciliation, or at-one-ment, and is a work which Christ performs, our High Priest, so that God can forgive sin and receive the sinner into his favor as though he never had sinned. We then want to know how this is performed. I know of no better way than to examine the shadow which is contained in the typical law. There can be no atonement only where there is or has been sin, God is not displeased with his own work, when it comes from his hand it is pronounced good. Therefore sin is produced by some other agent than God, and as sin is a transgression of the law, the agent must be a subject of law. Man is according to this reasoning the subject and age it I have described; for being made under the law, and by transgression has become obnoxious in the sight of God, unreconciled to God, and justly condemned. He cannot be reconciled to a holy God only by the atonement. God seeing man in this deplorable condition provided a remedy in his Son Jesus Christ, and gave him to the world as an offering and a ransom for the world, and as without shedding of blood there could be no remission of sin; in due time Christ came into the world and shed his blood, and according to the typical law he that knew no sin became a sin for us. Thus far he fulfilled the law for the sinful world; but this could not have saved one sinner, if this had been all that Christ had done. No; but like the High Priest under the Law, he must take his life, or blood which is the life, Lev. 18: 11—and must enter into the holy of holies, which is heaven, to appear in the presence of God for us, where he makes an atonement for us, who come to God by him; therefore he that cometh to God, must believe that he is our intercessor, and that he is a rewarder of all that diligently seek him. He must also confess his sins, for confession of sin is unto salvation, and he who is our High Priest, is faithful over all his house, as was Moses, to forgive them their sin, whose house are we if we hold fast to our faith without wavering firm unto the end.

Permit me now to make plain by questions and answers.

Is not the offering and sacrifice of Christ the atonement? No. These are only preparatory steps, Lev. 1: 1–4; 4: 13–20.

Where is the atonement made? In the most holy place, Lev. 16: 17, also 26, 31, 35 verses; Luke 1: 9–11; Heb. 9: 7–9 & 22–26.

How is the atonement made? By sprinkling of blood, intercession and prayer.

Who makes the atonement for us? Jesus Christ the High Priest, Heb. 7: 24–28; Rom. 8: 34; 1 Tim. 2: 5–6; 1 John 2: 1.

For whom is the atonement made? It is made for all who believe, confess their sins, or repent, which is the same thing in gospel sense, and come to God by, or through our High Priest. See type Lev. 1: 4, also 16: 20–22; Isa. 53: 11, 12. John 1: 29; Rom. 3: 25; 2 Cor. 5: 17–21; 1 John 1: 7–9; Gal. 1: 4, & 2: 20; Heb. 2: 17, & 7: 25, & 9: 24.

Where is the atonement made? While the High Priest is in the holy place, Lev. 16: 27, and when the sinner believes in Christ confesses his sins; then the atonement is made for that sinner, and not before, see the law.

Can all men be atoned for? All men have a probation, and while in that probation might have an atonement if they would comply with the requirements of the gospel. The sacrifice and offering is sufficient for every individual of mankind; but none who need an atonement will ever be reconciled to God, but those who believe and repent.

Instead then of the atonement being made at the death and sufferings of Christ, it is made by his life and intercession in heaven, Heb. 7: 25. His death and sufferings being only the sacrifice and offering, by which he is the propitiatory sacrifice to God, so that through his intercession we can be saved by his life, Rom. 5: 10; 1 John 5: 11.

You enquire about the laying on the hands of the Priest upon the head of the scape goat, and their sins being carried away into the wilderness, or land of oblivion.

The type was this: On the day of atonement, the Jews were to bring two goats of a year old, and the Priest was to cast lots upon them, before the Lord, and the goat on which the Lord's lot fell, was to be slain, his blood caught in a bason, and then carried into the holy place, sprinkled upon the mercy-seat, and the atonement or reconciliation made for the place first, and for the people. All this, has had its antitypical fulfilment in the first advent, death, resurrection, ascension, and intercession of Christ. Then after the Priest had made the atonement with the blood of the goat sacrificed; then the High Priest came out of the holy place, laid his hands upon the head of the other, called the "scape goat," and laid all the sins of the congregation of Israel upon his head, and the "scape goat" was driven into the wilderness by some one appointed for that purpose.

So must it be when Christ shall come at his second advent. He will come without a sin offering unto salvation, and being then our Judge, he will bear away our sins from us, as far as the east is from the west, and they will be remembered no more forever, Jer. 31: 34; 33: 8; 50. 20; Acts 10: 43; Rom. 11: 27.

That our sins cannot be blotted out until Christ comes to judge his people, is evident from the following texts, Rom. 14: 10; 2 Cor. 5: 10, Rom. 2: 6. If our sins are blotted out now, and remembered no more forever, how can we be judged at the judgment seat for every deed, done in the body? We could not. And if Christ does not come the second time and bear away our sins, our faith is vain, and we are yet, and always shall be in our sins.

But bless the Lord, he that shall come, will come, and will not tarry. Now is a very important time, much danger if we go to sleep now, it will overtake us as a thief. This is the third time within one year we have slumbered, and now we are in the time of patience. Heb. 10: 36; James 5: 7 to 11, you may examine. How long will this time of patience last? I answer it may last as long as the farmer waits for his crop, as James cautions us to have patience as the husbandman has long patience. How long? About 3 or 4 months. Will he come then? Have patience brethren, says James, for the coming of the Lord draweth nigh. Who does Paul and James exhort to have patience? Why, the brethren, say you. Who then are Paul and James' brethren in this day? It cannot be our sects and popular churches. Why, not? say you. Because the exhortation implies that the brethren are almost or quite impatient to have Christ come, and no rational man or woman can say our sects, or nominal churches, are over anxious to have him come. Who then, would the dear apostles call brethren if they were among us at this day? Suppose you heard a voice from heaven, like the voice of mighty thunderings, commanding you on the peril of your soul, to go and tell the brethren, and none else, "To be patient for the coming of the Lord is nigh," to whom would you go? Would you dare risk your soul's welfare, to go and tell it to the popular churches, or would you suppose yourself most sure to go and tell it to those who were praying and crying, "come Lord Jesus, come quickly," I am confident you would suppose without any hesitation, it means the second advent brethren. Then we can easily tell who and what, Paul and James means. And do believe I am one that ought to take the caution, "BE PATIENT THEREFORE BRETHREN, UNTO THE COMING OF THE LORD."

Give my love and this exhortation unto all the dear brethren looking for our King of Kings.

Yours, looking for the blessed hope,

WM. MILLER.

WESTERN MIDNIGHT CRY.

Cincinnati, Saturday, December 21, 1844.

THE PAPER.

Our receipts for the past week, from country subscribers, amounts to one dollar only. And yet a few of the friends who are unwilling that the paper should stop, and who have felt it their duty to aid the cause in this way more than any other, have paid for it. This they cannot continue to do without curtailing the edition, in which case we shall be obliged to discontinue our gratis list, and this we shall be sorry to do.

As but a fraction has been received from abroad towards the fourth vol., we again ask, if we shall receive our dues? We have no salaries to pay, and the brother who prints the paper, and who has to work for his daily bread, feels a sufficient interest in its continuation, to give every week more than he is able to do.

The Great Supper.

Luke 14: 16, "A certain man made a great supper, and bade many;" see Matt. 22: 2; Isa. 25: 6–9; Prov. 9:—15; Matt. 8: 11; Rev. 19: 9. These sayings are no simile, but, "the true sayings of God."

FIRST MESSAGE.

Verse 17, "And sent his servants at supper time, to say to them that were bidden, Come, for all things are now ready." See Dan. 7: 14; 8: 19; 9: 24; 12: 10, 13; Hab. 2: 3; Jeb 14: Psa. 102: 13; Isa. 40: 2, &c.

A call to supper, implies a little previous [illegible] —that guests may cease from the labors of day, and prepare themselves. I solemnly b[elieve] this text has had its fulfilment in the proc[lamation] tion of the coming of the Lord in, or about [1843] as founded upon the above, and other evid[ence]

Verse 18, "And they all with one consen[t] gan to make excuse. The first said unto h[im] have bought a piece of ground, and I must [needs] go and see it; I pray thee have me excused. in other words, the Lord cannot come ye[t] there are large portions of the earth yet [unin]habited. A "piece of ground" in the way.

Verse 19, "And another said, I have b[ought] five yoke of oxen and I go to prove them. I [pray] thee have me excused." I have so much [business] on hand that I have not time to exa[mine] the subject.

Verse 20, "And another said, I have ma[rried] a wife: and therefore I can not come." I [will do] as much as I can do to attend to my family [affairs] do not believe one word of it. It is well [enough] ready, but as for me, it is my business to at[tend] to my family.

SECOND MESSAGE.

Verse 21, "Go out quickly into the streets [and] lanes of the city, and bring in hither the poo[r] maimed, the halt and the blind." And "quick[ly]" was the message delivered in the proclama[tion] "Behold the Bridegroom cometh!" Lev. 23: 41; Matt. 21; 8, 9; Num. 29: 1, 7; Lev. 2[5]: 13. They were not to return to their posses[sions] of necessity on that day, or in that month, but THE YEAR of this Jubilee," Rev. 11: 15; [Isa.] 23: 16.

THIRD MESSAGE.

Verse 23, "Go out into the highways and he[dges] and compel them to come in that MY HO[USE] may be filled." This last message is not con[fin]ed to man, for men are no where command[ed] do any thing more than invite. Besides, [the] last work is bringing the guests into the ho[use] to the "Marriage supper," and this is a[lso] work, Matt. 24: 31; 1 Cor. 15: 51, 52; 1 [Thes.] 4: 16, 17.

☞ I expect to be absent, on a visit amo[ng] brethren in Indiana, next week, in which case [there] will be no paper issued till the week followi[ng]

OUR WORDS.

How careful we should be of the words. [Let] ter, in a time like this! The land is filled [with] gossip, and "false accusers," and the temp[ter] to retort upon these "busy bodies," in lan[guage] similar to that which we receive from them [may] be very strong; but now is our time to suffe[r] only patiently, but as our master did, in s[pirit] "By thy words thou shalt be justified, and b[y thy] words thou shalt be condemned." Matt. 1[2]: Let those that are in the habit of speaking [evil of] words, and acts of others, with whom they [do not] agree in religious sentiment, look at the foll[owing] definition of the word, "FALSIFIER: One wh[o al]ters the words or sentences of an author, so [as to] make the sense contrary to what it was ori[gina]ly: one who counterfeits, or makes a thing s[eem] to be what it is not: a liar, or inventor of [false]hood," Barclay. If others are willing, care[less] or malignantly, to place themselves in a [wrong] to say to them that were bidden, Come, for all things are now ready." See Dan. 7: 14; 8: 14, 19; 9: 24; 12: 10, 13; Hab. 2: 3; Job 14: 14; Psa. 102: 13; Isa. 40: 2, &c.

A call to supper, implies a little previous notice—that guests may cease from the labors of the day, and prepare themselves. I solemnly believe this text has had its fulfilment in the proclamation of the coming of the Lord in, or about 1843, as founded upon the above, and other evidences.

Verse 18, "And they all with one consent began to make excuse. The first said unto him, I have bought a piece of ground, and I must needs go and see it; I pray thee have me excused." Or in other words, the Lord cannot come yet, for there are large portions of the earth yet uninhabited. A "piece of ground" in the way.

Verse 19, "And another said, I have bought five yoke of oxen and I go to prove them. I pray thee have me excused." I have so much business on hand that I have not time to examine the subject.

Verse 20, "And another said, I have married a wife: and therefore I can not come." I have as much as I can do to attend to my family, and do not believe one word of it. It is well to be ready, but as for me, it is my business to attend to my family.

SECOND MESSAGE.

Verse 21, "Go out quickly into the streets and lanes of the city, and bring in hither the poor, the maimed, the halt and the blind." And "quickly," was the message delivered in the proclamation, "Behold the Bridegroom cometh!" Lev. 23: 39—41; Matt. 21; 8, 9; Num. 29: 1, 7; Lev. 25: 9, 13. They were not to return to their possessions of necessity on that day, or in that month, but "IN THE YEAR of this Jubilee," Rev. 11: 15; Exod. 23: 16.

THIRD MESSAGE.

Verse 23, "Go out into the highways and hedges, and compel them to come in that MY HOUSE may be filled." This last message is not committed to man, for men are no where commanded to do any thing more than invite. Besides, this last work is bringing the guests into the house—to the "Marriage supper," and this is angel's work, Matt. 24: 31; 1 Cor. 15: 51, 52; 1 Thes. 4: 16, 17.

☞ I expect to be absent, on a visit among the brethren in Indiana, next week, in which case there will be no paper issued till the week following.

OUR WORDS.

How careful we should be of the words we utter, in a time like this! The land is filled with gossip, and "false accusers," and the temptation to retort upon these "busy bodies," in language similar to that which we receive from them, may be very strong; but now is our time to suffer, not only patiently, but as our master did, in silence. "By thy words thou shalt be justified, and by thy words thou shalt be condemned." Matt. 12: 37. Let those that are in the habit of speaking of the words, and acts of others, with whom they do not agree in religious sentiment, look at the following definition of the word, "FALSIFIER: One who alters the words or sentences of an author, so as to make the sense contrary to what it was originally: one who counterfeits, or makes a thing appear to be what it is not: a liar, or inventor of falsehood," Barclay. If others are willing, carelessly or maliguantly, to place themselves in a condition to be arranged under the above head, let us take heed, remembering that, "if any man among you seemeth to be religious, and bridleth not his tongue, but deceiveth his own heart, this man's religion is vain, James i: 26.

Brother.

A brother in the time of trial and adversity is "A brother indeed" And who are our brethren now, when our names are "cast out," and "all manner of evil spoken against us falsely?" Jesus, on one occasion, turning away from his natural blood relations, "streched forth his hand toward his disciples, and said, Behold my mother, and my brethren! For whosoever shall do the will of my father which is in heaven, the same is my brother, and sister, and mother." Matt. xii: 49, 50. They that DO the will of God, will perform all the kind offices for each other, that are associated with such endearing names.

Brethren that do not the will of God, are no brethren now. They have other interests to attend to besides the interest of the family of Heaven. How valuable is the relationship of a brother!—one that does the will of his Heavenly Father. No other brethren can do us good. Where brethren of this sort are, there is Love—pure and unadulterated.—Love, such as existed between David and Jonathan, or Jesus and the disciple that leaned upon his bosom.—Love, such as drew forth from the Jews, the expression, "Behold how he loved him," as "Jesus wept" at Lazarus' grave. Brethren will love; it is a principle interwoven in the whole being of those that Love the appearing of Jesus. Nothing can separate brethren.—They will sweetly live together, and that "forever, even forever and ever:" but God is not wanting in means, to separate from his people all that do not "love as brethren."

ELIJAH.

The translation of Elijah, has been considered an appropriate type of the deliverance of those "that are alive and remain" when the Lord appears.

2 Kings 2: Elijah, when he had an intimation that his change was near, went with Elisha from Gilgal (or "heap of heaps," different bodies,) to Bethel, (or "house of God."] So, when evidences of the near approach of the coming of Christ began to present themselves; from different bodies, (heaps) God's people began to collect and worship him according to primitive usage, with no other articles of faith than his word, and no bond of union but Love "whose house are we, if we hold fast the confidence, and the rejoicing of the hope firm unto the end," Heb. 3: 6.

Not finding deliverance at Bethel, Elijah, nothing discouraged, journeyed on to Jericho, (month, or moon.) So the body of God's people collected from these "heaps," seeing the evidences clustering around a certain "month," journeyed thither with high expectations, and as Elijah was, so were they, disappointed.

Elijah, full of hope, journeyed on next across Jordan, or "river of judgment," where his faith was tested, and he prevailed; dividing the water, he passed over.

God's people have had a time of similar trial for their faith—a trial, that in my opinion, has fully tested who do, and who do not, love the Lord's appearing. What period of time is occupied in the antitype of the crossing Jordan, or river of judgment, may be uncertain, but the reader can consult the evidence in No. 5 of this vol., relative to the forty days.

The next account of Elijah after he crossed Jordan is, that while in company with Elisha, "It came to pass, as they still went on, and talked, that, behold there appeared a chariot of fire, and parted them both asunder; and Elijah went up by a whirlwind into heaven."

So let it be said of us. "They still went on and talked," notwithstanding the sneering inquiries of "the sons of the Prophets," "knowest thou that thy master will be taken away from thy head to day?" Do you know it? Do you know that Elijah is soon to "go up"?

And even after Elijah was taken up, their scoffs did not cease, for they charged the Spirit of the Lord with having taken him up and "cast him upon some mountain, or into some valley."

How delightful the thought! as they still went on and talked, behold! What? The chariot of the Lord!! "Behold, the Lord cometh with ten thousand of his saints"!! He comes to reward his servants! to wipe away all their tears, and end forever their bitter reproaches.

☞ The letters from Bro. F. G. Brown, and Bro. Miller, in another column, will be read with interest. They breathe life and joy into the heart of the waiting pilgrim.

The conclusions to which these brethren have come, that our work with the church and the world is now done, is painful indeed, but at the same time, it is the one to which we are almost irresistibly driven, after having seen again and again, their utter rejection of the plainest truths found in the word of God.

Some cry out bitterly, and protest against such conclusions, because it has a "bad influence," and is "abominable," &c., not because the word of God does not fully justify it.

The complaints against the idea of a division or separation between the righteous and the wicked before the Lord comes to "execute judgment," do not appear to me to be well founded.

The tares are gathered "first," in bundles to be burned, Matt. 13: When they that work wickedness "are set up,"—and they that fear the Lord are found speaking often to each other, there is a discerning "between the righteous and the wicked," Mal. 3: and when the Lord comes, he comes to execute "the judgment written." Objections, not well founded in scripture, to having our case now brought before the tribunal of heaven for its righteous decision, seem to argue that such are not NOW prepared for the judgment.

The Enquirer and Message.

The following editorial from the "Enquirer and Message," will show the estimate which that editor places upon our claims for justice.

"A FINE OFFER.—The Western Midnight Cry proposes that "if twenty-eight out of five hundred and fifty of our subscribers, will send us fifty cents a week, it will enable us to issue an edition of our paper, each week, until the Lord comes." How if they don't send the dimes? We can't tell!! The same journal says, "the present probability is that but a few more numbers will be needed." Then, we suppose, the chances of Millerism being true have somewhat increased of late. When will the impudence of the leaders in this delusion have an end?"

We have asked our subscribers to send us a small pittance weekly, of what they owe us. And now, says the Enquirer man, "How if they do not send the dimes? We can't tell." But we can:

Our honest dues will be withheld from us, and according to the above, it will be "impudence" for us to ask for them.

Again, "the chances of Millerism being true, have increased of late," certainly so, if "the coming of the Lord" is what you call "Millerism;" for now is our salvation nearer than when we believed." Again, he says, "when will the impudence of the leaders of this delusion have an end?"

Judging from the past course of this editor, the answer to this last question is perfectly plain. The doctrine of the coming of Christ will live till the Lord comes, of course; and his coming is near at hand, as we know from evidence contained in the Bible, and corresponding events in the history of the present times. Therefore, this so called "delusion" will "have an end" long before we can expect justice from the editor of the "Enquirer and Message," by his retracting the false statements about us, which he has aided in circulating.

Voice of the Fourth Angel.

The above is the title of a small sheet just received—published at Cleveland, by Bro. J. B. Cook, and J. D. Pickands.

The object of the leading article is to show that the mission of the three Angels Rev. 14: has been fulfilled, and that we are now living under the fourth, where it becomes the imperative duty of God's children to pray for his coming. The duty is made clear, and the arguments for the most part are conclusive. It is a subject that has occupied the attention of many of our friends of late. We gladly join in the petition, "Thrust in thy sickle and reap," Come Lord Jesus, and come quickly."

The following articles are from the above named paper:

THE BIBLE, A "LAMP TO OUR FEET."

Many ask "why did you not see that the vision of the fourth angel must be fulfilled?"

ANSWER: We had not then got up to it. A lamp shines on that part of our path where we need to step next. It shines on and is a light to our feet only as we advance. "We have a more sure word of prophecy to which we do well to take heed as unto a light that shineth in a dark place, till the day dawn."

By the light of God's word we are to walk; because we are in a "dark" world. Moral darkness now shrouds our path. Dangers beset us, and we are strictly charged to "watch," with our lamps trimmed and burning; especially as we draw near the end of the way. By watching we saw the apparent termination of the prophetic periods; we took heed and came right on. Then, watching still, we saw the tarrying time; and on we stepped, crying in a loud clear tone, to tell all that the lamp showed us. Next we saw the Seventh month. The thousand voices swelled on the breeze as we advanced to meet him, "Behold the Bridegroom cometh!" Finally, we see that there must be time for the foolish to expend their oil, and for the wise to go on to meet him; while the voice of the fourth angel cries "thrust in thy sickle and reap." Glory, glory, glory is about to burst upon our enraptured vision. It is "the glory of God and the Lamb," to make eternal day.

THE CHRISTIAN'S HOPE.

What is it? Let us ask the Pope. He answers in his encylical letter: "Let us lift up our hearts to the 'Blessed Virgin' Mary, who alone destroys heresies, and who is the foundation of OUR HOPE."

Ask again the N. Y. Evangelist, what is the Christian's hope? The editor answers in a recent article on revivals, they 'are THE HOPE of the church and of the world.' Is there not then a strong affinity between the hope as defined by the Pope and the Protestant? Mary being 'the foundation' of the former,—those who carry forward 'revivals' the means of the latter. A arm of flesh is the basis, or essential of both.

Papist and Protestant have thus lost the Divine definition and description of our hope. Titus 2: 11—13. 'The grace of God that bringeth salvation, hath appeared to all men, teaching us that denying ungodliness and worldly lusts, we should live soberly, righteously and Godly in this present world, looking for THAT BLESSED HOPE, and the GLORIOUS APPEARING OF THE GREAT GOD AND OUR SAVIOR JESUS CHRIST."

The apostle Paul was 'bound with this chain,' 'for the hope of Israel,' 'the hope of the promise made of God unto our fathers,' and this hope was 'the hope and resurrection of the dead.' Human agency is not the basis or means of this hope.—Divine promise is the foundation; divine power the agency to which believers look for its consummation.

It is painful to see that Protestants can no more use the language 'which the Holy Ghost useth,' (and make it mean what the terms teach) than the Papist, when speaking of our hope.

'The hope' of the fathers is set forth in the following portions of scripture: Psa. 16: 11, and 17: 15. Acts 2: 29, 31. Heb. 11: 32, 39. The patriarch David looked forward to the period when he should 'awake in' the 'likeness' of his Lord.—The apostle Peter affirms of David 'that he is both dead and buried'—also that he 'is not ascended into the heavens." Paul assures us that he with others 'died in faith not having received the promise'—'these all having obtained a good report through faith, received not the promise.' Of whom he testifies, that some would not accept deliverance, 'that they might obtain a better resurrection.' Mark!—They had 'obtained a good report through faith.' They had 'not received the promise,' but sought to obtain a better resurrection. Then David will awake—then he will know 'the path of life'—then he will ascend, have 'fulness of joy,' and 'be satisfied.' Then he will obtain the hope contained in 'the promise, which God made to our fathers.' 'Amen, even so, come Lord Jesus!'

For this creation groans, Rom. 8: 18, 24. For this the soul's seen in vision under the altar, cry: 'How long, Oh Lord, how long?' For this the fourth angel cries to him who sitteth on the cloud: 'Thrust in thy sickle and reap the harvest of the earth! Who would not speed the flight, and swell the voice of this angel, that Patriarchs, Prophets, apostles and righteous men, may 'obtain the hope of the promise'—the 'better resurrection.'

Letter from Sister Bishop.

MADISON, IND. DEC. 9, 1844.

Dear Bro. Jacobs,—It is with pleasure I take my pen to inform you that we are still alive and well, and was much rejoiced to receive a paper from you, and from it to learn that your confidence in the advent cause is unshaken. I hope you will thus remain—firm as the pillars of heaven untill our Lord shall come and take his children home. I, for one, long to see that day; for ever since I embraced the doctrine of Christ's soon coming, I have felt like a pilgrim and stranger on the earth. I still attend the Methodist meetings, but our preachers preach Jesus so far away, and us so low down in the grave, and make things look so cold, dark, and dreary, that it affords no comfort to the soul that loves the appearing of the Lord. Such preaching is cold comfort indeed—such as I never again expect to enjoy. We are told that it is presumption in us, to want Christ to come and destroy the world, and damn all the sinners; and that we are mad because he does not do it: But do we not love sinners? Who on this earth has taken more pains to warn sinners than Advent believers? They have spared neither time nor money, in arousing mankind to the importance of a preparation to meet their God in peace.

O what a fearful darkness is hanging over our city! It seems to be in all the churches, as well as among those of the world. All appear alike—of the world. * * *

I have had a home in the Methodist church for thirty-eight years—it is a church that I have loved much, and within whose pales I have enjoyed much of the comforts of religion; but now, it seems no more like home to me. Strange as this may seem, every true advent believer that I know in this place says the same. Perhaps you are not unacquainted with the same class of feelings yourself. Can this be sin? O tell me! * for I would not be led astray for worlds of gold. Gold has no charms for me. Let me have food and raiment, and the love of God in my heart, and, for myself, I ask no more.

Had I the means, I would freely pay the expenses of some of our Seecond Advent Lecturers, to this place every week, to have them preach for us; for I think we are more like a little flock of sheep without a shepherd than I ever saw before. Though I have been beloved in the church, I am now looked upon suspiciously, and what for? Because I believe the Lord is soon coming to take his children home. Well, I can bear all this, and more, for the sake of Christ and his kingdom. Should time continue, it is possible our persecutions have but just begun.

Are we ready to lay down our lives for Christ? Are we ready to go to the stake sooner than deny our Lord? Yes, I doubt not, there are thousands who would shout victory in the fire rather than disown Christ. O how humble I feel, even to think upon the subject of laying down our lives for Him that laid down his life for us 1800 years ago.—That Saviour was a poor pilgrim on the earth, and had but few that truly loved him then, and comparatively few that love him now; and a part of that few are called to suffer great reproach for his sake. O may they remain steadfast untill he shall come! I am striving to be one that shall have a share in his kingdom. Pray for me that my faith fail not. * * *

We have determined to hold our meetings once or twice in the week, as we are certain this is the only way we can enjoy ourselves. Our names are already cast out as evil, and to go back from the advent doctrine I should risk my all, and perhaps louse my soul.

I will not forsake plain Bible truth. No name or sect on earth shall take away my prospects of soon seeing the Saviour. In such case, my comforts would all die, for I know that I have enjoyed more solid happiness since I embraced the second advent doctrine, than in all my life before, in the same length of time.

Mr. Bishop, joins me in love to all the friends.

SARAH BISHOP.

* Amos 3: 3; Eph. 3: 14, 15; 2 Tim. 4: 8, &c. In choosing the subjects of Christian fellowship it must be a safe rule to test them by the word of God, but very unsafe to test the word of God by those whose fellowship we may desire.—ED.

Letter from Bro. Thomas.

The following extract is from a letter of Bro. J. H. Thomas, Post master at Jacksonburgh, dated Dec. 13, 1844.

"Dear Bro. Jacobs,—I received the "Western Midnight Cry" of Nov. 29th, which informed me that you were still alive and in action, notwithstanding the many persecutions, and peltings you may have had to endure since I saw you at the "Great Tent" meeting in Dayton. * * Though you may have been disappointed as to Christ's second advent, yet you need not be discouraged—the truth is just as certain as ever, and it becomes us more than ever to be awake, and watching.

Although I must confess my faith did not take hold on the last "cry," as to the point of time, yet I do trust I am watching with my brethren, for his coming. I am trying to live, pray, and proclaim in my weak manner, in reference to it. I know not how soon the concave of heaven may open, and the curtain that now hides his lovely face from us may roll back, and let his glory appear to the joy of his persecuted and down-trodden people, and to the annoyance of his now open and scoffing enemies. Perhaps many of the last named may be found in that day, as having been enrolled in the church books of the various denominations,—now numbering over 640—fast approaching the number of the Beast of Rev. 13:

Amongst all my desires, I think, if I know myself, the one greatest and most predominant, is, a desire to be ready at the sound, "Behold the Bridegroom cometh, go ye out to meet him!"

The money sent by Bro. Thomas, for five subscribers, was received, July 13th.—ED.

MARYSVILLE, Dec. 18, 1844.

Dear Bro. Jacobs,—I believe the first article in your paper of Dec. 11th, is really "meat in due season."

I am truly sorry to learn that so many are ready to admit they can learn nothing about definite time from the Bible. Shall we, who have been so signally blessed while we fearlessly proclaimed that God had revealed the time to his "servants the prophets,"—who were instructed that not unto themselves, but unto us they did minister—and that we, that we might understand, are instructed to ask wisdom of God and are assured that we shall receive it,—shall we now yield the whole ground, because we believed we should see the consummation of our hope on the 10th of the 7th month, and we are still here living under the testing time of our Patience? ## The Sign of the Son of Man in Heaven.

Many inquiries are made what this sign can be, and for years I have been perplexed when I looked at Matt. 24: 30. But upon looking over this Chapter a few days since, the true light shone, I believe, and therefore I speak. We have in the 29th and 30th verses, the signs in the order following: 1st, The sun darkened—2d, The moon not giving her light—3d, The stars falling, and the powers of heaven shaken—Lastly, The sign of the Son of man in heaven.

The first, then, have been seen. Where? In the sun—in the moon—and among the stars. But does it follow that we must look for the last in heaven, or in the heavens? I think not. This is to be the sign that when it appears, will end all doubt, and put to silence the most obdurate scoffer at our hope. It is this sign which will call out all, yea, even those who cannot now be induced to attend a prayer meeting, when prayer may be heard and answered. This sign will call those out and cause them to join in the prayer that will not be answered; even to the rocks and mountains, and to the confession that the great day of God's wrath is come. When this sign appears, then truly, shall all the tribes of the earth mourn. Then they (who mourn) shall see the Son of man coming, &c. "The Lord cometh with ten thousand of his saints," Jude 14; "The Lord my God shall come and all the saints with thee," Zech. 14: 5. The sign then precedes and prepares the way for the coming of the Lord with all his saints. We have the substance of the sign recorded in the same chapter in the 40, 41 verses; "Then shall two be in the field, the one shall be taken and the other left—two grinding at the mill, the one shall be taken and the other left;" and in a parallel passage in Luke 17: 34—36. Then the ungodly husband will awake and find the godly wife gone—the ungodly wife find the godly husband gone—the ungodly child find the godly parent gone—the ungodly parent find the godly child gone—and the ungodly neighbor find the godly neighbor gone—and many ungodly parents will, we trust, find their babes gone—and all who are left to witness this sign when the tremendous reality seizes upon them, as it will soon—then all the tribes of the earth shall mourn. But when shall this sign be given? When the seventh trump begins to sound, the mystery of God is to be finished, Rev. 10: 7. The mystery, is in the singular number—"Behold I show you a mystery, (in the singular number) we shall not all sleep, but we shall all be changed, in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye." When at the last, (the 7th) trump, for the trumpet shall sound, (what trumpet? The seventh trumpet) and the dead shall be raised, and we shall be changed," 1 Cor. 15: 51, 52. If the foregoing views be correct, may we, dear brethren, be found ready to strike hands on the sea of glass—among the number who will then assemble as an escort to our Lord when he comes with all his saints.

Yours, in the patient waiting for Christ,
SILAS G. STRONG.

MARYSVILLE, O., Dec. 18, 1844.

The Rev. (so called, though improperly) F. F., preached in the 1st Presbyterian church last Sabbath evening, in which discourse he undertook to show up the inconsistencies of those who believe the coming of the Lord is near, (the millennarians as he called them.) He distinctly and honestly admitted that it was not a new doctrine, but it had been held to by some portion of the church since some time in the 3d century. But he did not inform his congregation, that the doctrine which he preached (the 1000 years probationary millennium) was (as is the fact) less than 200 years old. He entirely misrepresented our faith, by trying to make it appear that we held to three comings of Christ: One at his incarnation, one at the time of the first resurrection, and one at the final judgment at the close of the 1000 years. Whereas he asserted that the Bible did not speak of but two comings of Christ. He then went on to show that he did come at the destruction of Jerusalem—but whether his coming at the destruction, was his first or second coming he did not distinctly say. Before he closed he found occasion to say, that Christ came to an individual at death—indeed that he had come about 3400 times since he had began his discourse; Leaving his congregation to infer that his coming was, to use the language of some of them, "only in some certain sense;" but in what sense I did not understand. If it was a personal coming what would become of his former assertion, "that the Bible did not speak of but two comings"? and if in a spiritual sense, where did he learn that Christ would come in any sense that the Bible did not speak of? Neither did he inform his hearers, when Christ rescinded that promise found in Matt. 28: 20, "Lo I am with you always even unto the end of the world,"—or when Christ went away spiritually. He attempted to show that there was but one resurrection, and that a general and universal one at the close of the 1000 years—and for proof dwelt largely on Revelations 20: 4; but took the precaution not to read or repeat the verse following—"But the rest of the dead lived not again until the thousand years were finished—this is the first resurrection." But he dwelt much on the word souls, and tried to show that it could not be the bodies. But he did not tell when these souls died—or from whence they arose—whether it was from a sleep in the grave, or whether they arose from the third heavens (where he contended the departed souls of the saints were,) down to earth!! Neither did he attempt to show from the Bible or in any other way, that the word "souls," was used in the Bible, in a sense to indicate—vicarious transfer—had he done so, it is presumable he would, with his logical acumen, have shown that, instead of eight persons being saved by entering into the ark, only eight souls without bodies were preserved, and after the ark rested, appeared in some newly created beings, or some spontaneous production of the earth in that age of the world. And that instead of about three thousand of persons, real tangible human beings, being added to the number of disciples on the day of Pentecost, the disciples that were there, recieved a very large increase of faith, hope, love and Christian graces; and thereby he might have strengthened incidentally, one of his favorite theories; to wit, the certain return of the Jews, previous to the coming of our Lord, by showing that the three thousand devout Jews were not so unwise as to become Christians on the day of Pentecost (as we have generally thought was the case) and thereby forfeit all their title and the title of their descendants for 1800 years, to the promises of God made to Abraham. ## Letter from Marysville, Ohio.

Dear Bro. Jacobs—

We hope the Brethren will not suffer the W. M. Cry to be discontinued again. I am glad to see you persevere in the position that time is revealed. If time is not a matter of revelation there are some passages of scripture I cannot understand. May the Lord assist us to arrive at the truth.

Is the prayer of your unworthy brother,
G. W. CHERRY.

PROFIT OF PERSECUTION.—God schooleth and nurtureth his people, that so, through many tribulations, they may enter into their rest. Frankincense, when it is put into the fire smells the sweeter, the earth, when it is torn up with the plow, becomes more fruitful; the seed in the ground, after frost and snow, and winter storms, springs the ranker, the nigher the vine is pruned to the stock, the greater grapes it yields; the grape, when it is most pressed and beaten, makes the sweetest wine; fine gold is better when it is cast into the fire; rough stones with hewing are squared and made fit for building; cloth is rent and cut that it may be made a garment, linen is bucked and washed, and wrung, and beaten, and is the fairer. These are familiar examples to show the benefit and advantage which the children of God receive by persecution.—Bishop Jewel.

THE REASON.—Persons who are above the performance of a dirty action, are slow in suspecting others. Those whose hands are not clean, imagine every one to be as polluted as themselves.—Willmot's European Times.

The above principle will explain to our friends the cause of the many insinuations and charges of our maligners. Let men become honest themselves, and they will learn how it is possible for others to be honest.—Advent Herald.

WESTERN MIDNIGHT CRY.

Cincinnati, Monday, December 30, 1844.

INTOLERANCE.

How earnestly ought God's dear children to pray that they may be saved from that wicked spirit of intolerance, that has driven many of us from the society and fellowship of those we have loved. God has been merciful in hitherto granting us a forbearing spirit, while, on some points we have held views, to say the least, widely differing from each other. These views have been freely, and publicly advanced without any fear of denunciation from those who were "looking for the Lord," and with very little apparent danger of weakening the "cords of Love" with which God has bound us together. "We have great need of caution now" in this time of trial, lest this disposition, freely to investigate the word of God, should be checked by the intolerance of brethren. If any view that we may have advanced, with motives, pure as ever dwelt in the human heart, and under a high and solemn sense of duty, is disposed of under a caution, headed "Fanaticism," or in any other way, except candid scriptural reasoning, the tendency with sensitive minds, is, to shut out the light. It seems to me that the editor of the "Voice of Truth," has disposed of the arguments of certain brethren, rather too much in this short hand way.

He remarks as follows, "If any man or minister tells you that the Lord came, in any sense, on the "tenth day" more than he has come since or for centuries previous, "Believe it NOT," &c. Now I do not wish to find fault with Bro. Marsh, for his reference may not be to the particular class which I have supposed; but if it is, with all Christian kindness, I would make a suggestion, not only to him, but for the benefit of all such as may be tempted to dispose of an argument in this summary way. It is this; That the argument be plainly stated. Thus,

1st. There are certain brethren who believe that Christ did in some "sense," come on the "the tenth day," "more than he has come since or for centuries previous."

2d. They argue that Christ did on the "tenth day," "come" from his "Father's throne" to his "Judgment seat," where he is now sitting in judgment on our world, Ex. 28: 15, 29, 30; Num. 27: 18--21; Ex. 30: 10; Lev. 16: 20--31; Lev. 23: 29, 31; Heb. 4: 14--16: 5: 8: 0: 6--12, 19--26; Lev. 9: 22--24; Acts 3: 19--21. Whether the judgment has yet set upon the "living," they do not pretend to say.

3d. They give as further evidence, that the judgment must set before Christ personally appears to "execute judgment." Rev. 11: 15--18; 20: 12; Matt. 5: 25; Dan. 7: 9, 10; Ezek. 21: 30; Isa. 11: 3, 4; Psa. 93: 8, 9; 50: 3--5; 62: 8; 96; 11--13; 76. 8; 2: 7--9; Rev. 4: 1--6; 20: 11; 14: 14; 1 Thess. 4: 16, 17.

4th. They hold that when Christ appears to all the inhabitants of the earth, "as the lightning," he will be attended with "all" or "ten thousand" "of his saints" that must previously have been "raised," "changed in a moment," and that he will then "execute judgment upon all" that were "left" when the righteous were "taken;" and not till then will "all know and understand" his coming; for he will then "convince all that are ungodly among them," &c., Psa. 147: 5--9; Jude 14, 15; John 5: 20, 27; Luke 5: 8; Jer. 23: 5; &c.

If these positions constitute an error, sufficient to induce our good brother to caution others to "beware of fanaticism on this point," it is every way worthy of a more extended notice; and it may be the easiest thing in the world to overthrow them.

If we are not now acting under the commission "Comfort ye, comfort ye my people," &c. Isa. 4: 2; it is important we should know it. As for myself, I am solemnly pledged to yield to scripture evidence let the consequences be what they may. Let us possess the "more noble" spirit of the "Bereans," and "Search the Scriptures daily," that we may see whether these things be so.

CONFESSION.

The "confession" of Bro. Storrs, of his mistake relative to the advent on, or about the 22d of October, has developed the fact, that a strict adherence to the principle of "confessing your faults one to another" is in these times of apostacy, a matter so uncommon for a Christian minister, as to be every way worthy of ridicule, and of destroying, rather than of restoring public confidence in the man that presumes to practice up on this scriptural injunction.

The papal prerogative of claiming infalability at the expense of cloaking error, and false doctrine, is every where predominant. Br. Storrs, has confessed his error just so soon as he had a demonstration to his own mind that it was such.

Every lover of honesty and truth can but admire such a course—a course, which must be pursued, in order to restore to the confidence of a Holy God, those teachers that have spent so much of their time in throwing imaginary obstacles in the way of the immediate Coming and Kingdom of our Lord, when they have failed to produce any real ones.

☞ Bro. Eli Green, writes from Rossville, O., Dec. 20th. "We are still looking for the coming of our Blessed Lord and King. Though few in numbers we are strong in faith.

We should feel very thankful to have one of the Lecturers visit us." &c.

☞ My absence from the City last week will account for the want of editorial, and also for a review of the article under the head of "The true Millennium."

BRO. WILLIAMSON.

As Bro. Williamson, was the first, that to any considerable extent, preached in this region, the coming of the Lord on the "tenth day of the seventh month," there has been no little enquiry among the friends, since that time passed, as to the effect "the disappointment" has had upon him.

The following is a private letter from him to a friend in this place, which I am permitted to make public, and which will "define his position."

NEWPORT, N. H., Nov. 20, 1844.

My Dear Bro. K.,—"Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, which, according to his abundant mercy, hath begotten us again unto a lively hope, by the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead; to an inheritance, incorruptible, undefiled, and that faileth not away, reserved in heaven for you, who are kept by the power of God through faith unto salvation, ready to be revealed in the last time: wherein ye greatly rejoice, though now for a season, (if need be) ye are in heaviness through manifold temptations; that the trial of your faith, being much more precious than gold that perisheth, though it be tried with fire, might be found unto praise, and honor, and glory, at the APPEARING OF JESUS CHRIST." "Mercy unto you, and peace, and love be multiplied. Beloved, when I gave all diligence to write unto you of the common salvation, it was needful for me to exhort you that ye should earnestly contend for the faith once delivered to the saints." A faith of all others the most Blessed, because it is to bring Jesus. This will soon be lost in sight. We see now through a glass darkly, but in a "little while" face to face. We have in the providence of God, been disappointed again in realizing our expectations of seeing Christ. But let us "rest patiently," knowing that "the long suffering of God" "is salvation" to us who through the eternal Spirit are kept through faith unto salvation.

I have often thought of the brethren and sisters in Cincinnati, since the 10th day of the 7th month passed by; I have asked myself a great many questions, and tried to answer them to my satisfaction, but have not been able. I know that I went to Cincinnati with as pure motives as ever were cherished in the breast of a mortal being: and I preached the truth as I understood it, and I have no cringing nor drawing back. I am glad I went there, and I am glad I preached to you that Christ was coming on the 10th day of the 7th month.—"Glory to God in the highest."—I believe it was salvation, and I believe God sealed all that came up to that day, as men and women expecting to meet Christ, and had the glory of it in their souls. God blessed it; souls were converted, set free from sin, who stand to-day "looking for that blessed hope and glorious appearing of of the great God and our Saviour Jesus Christ." While a multitude of our advent brethren and sisters, had it not been for this preaching would have been lost. I believe the preaching of this doctrine was of God, as well as the singing, praying, shouting and exhortations, all of God; and our gathering together unto him in the clouds will show to an assembled multitude that the 10th day of the 7th month was of God, by showing there the souls that were converted "by the foolishness of" that "preaching." "Therefore my beloved brethren, be ye steadfast, unmovable, always abounding in the work of the Lord, for as much as ye know that your labor is not in vain in the Lord"!

I find in my journeyings from place to place, that many who were, up to the 10th day, firm in the coming of the Lord, and foremost in the ranks, are the first to go back to perdition, and that those who seemed to be rather weak are now strong to come up to the help of the Lord. I am convinced that the separation must take place before Christ comes; the wheat will be by itself, and the tares bound in bundles to be burned. The line is drawn, Bro. K., which side of it are we? If you are on the right side stay there, and pray God to heat up the crucible, keeping the cleansing refining process going on until Christ sees his image in us: He won't keep us in there so long that we shall spoil. Lord keep us by the power of God unto everlasting life! I said that many of our foremost brethren are going and are gone back. Is it not true? How lamentable! * * * I hope we shall learn to cease from man, whose breath is in his nostrils. We live in an awful time. I don't know how it is with the friends in Cincinnati, but here brethren and sisters cannot get back without going to destruction; nor can they make calculations for winter without losing the glory out of their souls. So here we stand on a pivot: if we turn either way we fall; we must therefore stand still and see the salvation of God. I am convinced we shall never have "time" to preach again. The Sign of the Son of man will, I believe, reveal the day and hour, and that will be a white cloud, and upon the cloud one like the Son of man, having on his head a golden crown, and in his hand a sharp sickle, Rev. 14: 14. You will, I think, by looking this through, find by a multitude of scripture that this will be so. Also I believe that there will be made the cry, "Give us of your oil, for our lamps are gone out." It will be "an hour of temptation" "I tell you," when the virgins will be crying for oil, and the wicked for mercy. But God has promised to keep us from that hour: it is going to try all that dwell on the earth. "From" such "an hour of temptation," "Good Lord deliver us!" When this sign of the Son of man appears, he then tells us to lift up our heads, and look up, for our redemption draweth near. O, hallelujah! I long to have it come!! My prayer to God is, Lord, send out Jesus, our High Priest, to bless the people. But we must do what the Lord tells us: "Rest in the Lord, and wait patiently for him; fret not thyself because of him who prospereth in his way; because of the man who bringeth wicked devices to pass: for yet a little while and the wicked shall not be; yea, thou shalt diligently consider his place, and it shall not be. Wait on the Lord and keep his way, and he shall exalt thee to inherit the land; when the wicked are cut off thou shalt see it. For the upright shall dwell in the land, and the perfect shall remain in it; but the wicked shall be cut off from the earth, and the TRANSGRESSORS SHALL BE ROOTED OUT OF IT." I don't believe we shall ever winter in this world. Many of our brethren in New Hampshire, and those of other places, are looking for his coming this week. I don't believe this month will pass without the revelation of Jesus Christ; but be that as it may, my anchor has good grapples, and it is cast within the vail; it has taken good hold. I have hold of the cable: Every time I pray, I get nearer the kingdom, and when I get a little time, be it ever so little, it is as a good knot in the cable; it helps me to hold on, so that I feel a great deal better. I am not afraid of its breaking, glory to God! While I keep my eye on the mark, remembering Lot's wife, and looking unto Jesus the author of our faith. When the 10th day of the 7th month came I believe we got through preaching. I recollect when I left Ireland, that all the way across the ocean the sailors managed the ship until we came nearly in sight of the Gulf of St. Lawrence—the Captain hoisted a signal for a pilot; two came on board; one stepped up to the wheel and dismissed the sailors, while the other walked the deck. The Captain and sailors had no more to do with managing the ship than you or I. You ask, why was all this? I answer, because through the Gulf and up the river to the port of Quebec, was the most dangerous part of the whole voyage. You will want to know what I mean by writing such a circumstance as this; I will tell you. When the advent doctrine was first started, Father Miller went every where preaching the word; steered the Old Ship, took you and I on board, from the dock of Repentance, with a host of others; Bro. Himes, Litch, Fitch, Storrs, French, and a large convoy of others that I might mention—in fact, a good supply of sailors from the highest order down to myself; as true hearted a company of sailors as ever went on a voyage from the dock of Repentance to the New Jerusalem. We did our part until we came to the 10th day of the 7th month; we then found ourselves near land. We began to call for a pilot, we were unacquainted with the rest of the way, it being the most dangerous. King Jesus came aboard, discharged the sailors, and is now steering the Old Ship Zion into port. I tell you he understands the channel. The sails are all spread and well filled with breezes from off the land of Canaan. Sometimes we have a good breeze, again, we have a gale, and sometimes we have almost a hurricane, as she ploughs thru' the water. It seems as if we could see the white caps and sprays forward of her. The Captain tells us not to fear: Sometimes we can stand up, while at other times we are obliged in consequence of a heavy gale to get flat down on the deck while she rides upon the waves. We are expecting every day to hear him give us the signal, the city is in sight. We shall enter the port soon, cast anchor, and be landed in the city, which is the New Jerusalem. "Then shall be brought to pass the saying that is written, Death is swallowed up in victory. O death, where is thy sting? O grave, where is thy victory? Thanks be to God which giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ."

Glory! GLORY!! GLORY!!! GLORY!!!!
I will be in this band! hallelujah;

"Go on, go on my soul replies,
I'm bound to meet you in the skies
And claim a mansion there.

O, here's my heart, and here's my hand,
To meet you in that heavenly land,
Where we shall part no more."

It would perhaps be useless for me to indulge the thought of ever seeing the friends in Cincinnati, until we shall meet to crown the King of kings, and Lord of lords. Time is so short that I could not perhaps get there before he comes. * * * * If time should continue, and the way is open, I shall start on a tour—to "comfort one another with these words," and perhaps come to Cincinnati; but it seems as though I never shall go there again. I want you should tell the brethren and sisters to hold on to God with a firm grasp and we shall soon meet: let nothing drive them from Him. * * * * Remember me to the household of faith.

Farewell, till we meet in that happy, happy land. M. WILLIAMSON.

THE TRUE MILLENNIUM.

Such is the heading of a lengthy communication from H. B. Woodcock, Connersville, Ind., which has just been received. It is altogether worthy of publication, although it contains views entirely new, on many points. Its great length will prevent its publication in this sheet; but as the author feels—like many others, that "what is done must be done quickly," I will give below, a few extracts from the article, not however subscribing to all that is contained in them, but feeling that it is the privilege of those that "love the appearing of the Lord" to speak for themselves.

"I have read your papers with a great deal of interest, especially the few last numbers. They come to me like a refreshing shower upon the parched ground; yet I was not disappointed when the time passed by without any visible change in the course of Nature. Indeed I could not see how the Scripture could be fulfilled, unless that day did pass by and the servants return and say, 'Lord, it is done as thou hast commanded, and yet there is room.'"

But we are now within a very few days of the coming of the Son of man. We shall soon, if found worthy, be admitted to the marriage of the King's Son, Matt. 23d, or to the great supper to which many were bidden, Luke 14th; and to whom the servant (Mr. Miller and others) was sent at supper time, in the evening or beginning of the true Jewish year 1843, to say, Come, for all things are now ready. That this is the evening of the day, or year, we have proof from the fact of its being the time of slaying the passover. And that it was the evening in which we might expect the Saviour, from the fact of its being the two thousand three hundredth evening of Daniel's vision, which was unto 2300 evening mornings. This was the evening when the virgins took their lamps and went forth to meet the Bridegroom. But he did not come; and why not? was there any mistake with regard to its being the right evening? Surely there was not. But had he come at that time, how could the Scripture be fulfilled, seeing that it was the first call to those that were bidden to the marriage? At that time the sun (or lamp) was darkened; the moon (or church) did not give her light; and many a brilliant star fell to the earth. Since that time many have been purified, and made white, and tried. But alas, many have suffered their lamps to go out.

The next time we might have expected him was at midnight. But at that time there was barely enough awake to raise the cry, Behold the Bridegroom cometh at the cock crowing, or sounding of the trumpets on the 10th day of the 7th month. This midnight was the time when the King sent forth other servants, saying, TELL them which are bidden, Behold I have prepared my dinner, my oxen and my failings are killed, and all things are ready: Come unto the marriage. But they made light of it, and went their ways: One to his farm, another to his merchandise. Or as it is recorded in the 14th chapter of Luke, They went forth quickly into the streets and lanes of the city, and brought in the poor, and the maimed, and the halt, and the blind. The servants could not return and say, Lord it is done as thou hast commanded, and yet there is room, (or time) until the set time had passed.

During the time of this call there was a great excitement, or earthquake, but when the time passed, the last ray of light seemed to be swept away, the sun became black as sackcloth of hair; and the moon became as blood, and it seemed to all human appearance, to those that felt deeply interested in these things as though nothing awaited them but blood and carnage, persecutions and destruction. And the stars of heaven fell to the earth, even as a fig-tree casteth her untimely figs when she is shaken of a mighty wind. And the 7th seal was opened, and there was silence in heaven about the space of half an hour. But why did he not come at the cock-crowing, or feast of trumpets on the 10th day of the 7th month? What saith the answer of the King to the servants when they return? Matt. 22: 8; The wedding is ready, but they which were bidden were not worthy. Go ye, therefore, into the highways; and as many as ye shall find, bid to the marriage. See Luke 14: 23.

But when shall they come? The evening has passed—the cock-crowing has passed; and now will he not come in the morning? SURELY HE WILL. If he tarry till another evening, it will be the commencement of another day, and all will be a failure. But not so: The seventh trumpet has already begun to sound."

He here claims that the trumpets are all of one character, and all belong to the kingdom of the Beast,—that the "seventh trump" sounded in this country, and is connected with the event of the commencement of the Presidential Election; which, it is claimed, was carried by Roman Catholic influence. The "half hour silence," prophetic—filled up between Oct. 23d and Nov. 1st, when the Presidential Election commenced in Pennsylvania.

"Under the sounding of this trumpet the enemy will come in like a flood, but the Spirit of the Lord will lift up a standard against him. Under this trumpet the seven last plagues will be poured out upon those that worship the Beast, and receive his mark in their foreheads or in their hands; (i. e. ecclesiastical or civil power.) Under the sixth of these plagues, the way for the kings of the East will be prepared, and the Beast or Pope will rally his standard forces, and gather them into a place called in the Hebrew tongue, Armageddon, but in our tongue, America. Then will the abomination of desolation spoken, of by Daniel the prophet, stand where it ought not. Then let those that are in the City flee to the mountains. But, he that taketh the sword, shall perish by the sword. Many a true-hearted Christian will perish in this last great conflict. But "I heard a voice from heaven, saying unto me; Write, Blessed are the dead, that die in the Lord from henceforth, yea saith the Spirit, for they rest from their labor, and their works do follow them;" And they will be raised and share with their brethren whose souls were seen under the fifth seal.

As the seven trumpets all belong to the kingdom of the Beast, and reach down to the time when the Beast shall be slain, and his body given to the burning flame, the tares, also, shall be gathered and burned; and there shall not be one wicked man left, or any thing that defileth or maketh a lie. So, also, do the seven seals belong to the Kingdom of God, and reach down to the final triumph of all the saints over their last enemy, Death, and their complete glorification in the mansion prepared for them by Christ himself, the New Jerusalem, which cometh down from God out of heaven."

"This sealing time commenced with the opening of the sixth seal, and might have closed on the 10th day of the 7th month had those that were bidden been found worthy; but that was not the case: consequently there must be another call to those who are in the highways and hedges, to compel them to come in, that His house may be filled. This call will not take place till we shall see the sign of the coming of the Son of man. Then will all the tribes of the earth mourn.

and many of them will receive the seal of God in their foreheads; while those that were bidden, and have hitherto refused to come will be cast out into outer darkness, there shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth."

What is the object of Christ's coming at this time? It is to send forth his angels to gather his elect from the four winds, from end of heaven to the other. But who are the elect? They are the 144,000 sealed of all the tribes of the children of Israel. These are they that follow the Lamb whithersoever he goeth; these were redeemed from among men, being the first fruits unto God, or the first ripe fruits, plucked from the tree of life, meet for the Master's use without falling to the ground or seeing corruption.

This is the end of the seed time; the harvest will soon commence. The harvest is great, but the laborers are few; pray ye therefore the Lord of the harvest, that he would send forth Laborers into the harvest. But you will say, the reapers are the angels, true, and so are all ministering servants that are sent forth to minister to them that shall become heirs of salvation.

But who shall he send? Here am I, Lord, send me, should be the prayer of every sincere follower of the meek and lowly Jesus, who loves his appearing.

The 144,000 are a chosen number for a special purpose; and that number is 144,000, and no more or less; and the purpose for which they are chosen is to reap the harvest. Twelve were chosen to sow the seed; twelve times twelve thousand are chosen to gather the harvest home; and yet it is said that the laborers are few,—how great must be that harvest. The next we see of the 144,000 they are with the Lamb standing on the Mount Zion, having their Father's name written in their foreheads, and they sing a new song which no man could learn but they themselves."

"But I have said that this is the marriage of the King's Son; and so it is. Christ has finished the work that was given him to do; to his bride, the church, belongs the work of cleansing the sanctuary, casting out the devil, raising the dead, making the earth new, and preparing all things for the Bridegroom, that when he shall come to the marriage supper of the Lamb, he may find her adorned as a bride for her husband, not having spot, or wrinkle, or any such thing. But the church has not the power to cast out devils, raise the dead, and do all these mighty acts. No; nor will she have until she is endued with power from on high.

In proof of this being the marriage of the King's Son, and not the marriage supper of the Lamb, I would quote a passage from Matthew, where it is said that there was found at that feast one that had not on the wedding garment: and who was he? In Revelation are told that there was war in heaven: Michael and his angels fought against the dragon, and the dragon fought and his angels, and prevailed not, neither was their place found any more in heaven. And the great dragon was cast out, that old serpent, called the Devil and Satan, which deceiveth the whole world. He was cast out into the earth, and his angels were cast out with him. And then they raise a general shout in heaven, and say: Now is come salvation, and strength, and the Kingdom of our God, and the power of his Christ: For the accuser of our brethren is cast down, which accused them before our God day and night. Therefore, rejoice ye heavens, and ye that dwell in them. Why? Because his place is no more found in heaven. Woe to the inhabiters of the earth, and of the sea: for the Devil is come down unto you having great wrath, because he knoweth that he hath but a short time. And he will go forth, and his angels will go forth with him, and will preach, saying I am Christ, and the time draweth nigh, (a part true and a part false) and would, if it were possible, deceive the very elect. But, thanks be to God they cannot be deceived. And although the Devil has got a little the start of them, and has made many proselytes, yet when they do return they will discern between the righteous and the wicked, between him that serveth God and him that serveth him not.

The sending forth of the seventy disciples was figurative, of the sending forth of the 144,000 elect, to preach the gospel of the Kingdom, cast out Devils, heal the sick, raise the dead, and make all things new: and when Christ, speaking prophetically of the event that we now expect, said: I beheld Satan as lightning fall from heaven. Behold, I give unto you power to tread on serpents, and scorpions, and over all the power of the enemy, and nothing shall by any means hurt you. Notwithstanding in this, rejoice not, because the spirits are subject unto you: but rather rejoice because your names are written in heaven. And when the King came in to see the guests, he saw there a man that had not on a wedding garment; and he saith unto him, Friend, how camest thou in hither not having on a wedding garment: and he was speechless. Then said the King to the servants, Bind him hand and foot, and take him away, and cast him into outer darkness, there shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth. But was he bound without a struggle? No. Nor could the servants have bound him had not Michael, the great Prince, stood up and come forward to the rescue. Then Michael and his angels fought against the dragon; and the dragon fought and his angels, and prevailed not. And they cast him out. In this mighty battle with our common enemy, the 144,000 overcome through the blood of the Lamb, and they loved not their lives unto death. He that shall seek to save his life shall loose it, and he that shall lose his life for my sake and for the Kingdom of heaven's sake shall find it. This great battle was permitted to be fought in heaven to show the servants their power over the great adversary of God and man, that wheresoever they should meet with him in their future labors, they may meet him without fear, in the name of Jesus, and cast him out till he is driven from the face of the earth, into the bottomless pit and shut up, and the seal of God put upon him. I will bruise Satan under your feet shortly, says the Saviour.

St. John was called, by way of distinction, the disciple whom Jesus loved. And when Jesus spake to Peter and said unto him, Follow me, he turned and saw John following. And he said unto Jesus, And what shall this man do? Jesus answered and said unto him, If I will that he tarry till I come, what is that to thee, follow thou me. And the saying went abroad, that that disciple should not die; yet Jesus said not, that he should not die, but if I will, that he tarry till I come, what is that to thee. Now, this scripture has its meaning; and what is it? I understand it to be simply this; Peter was commanded to follow Christ immediately and preach the gospel, and he obeyed the command. But John was soon banished to the solitary island of Patmos. While upon this lonely island, being found in the Spirit on the Lord's day, he was taken up into heaven; and as a representative of the Church, had a glorious view of the things that God had prepared for those that love him. He returned and wrote the book of Revelations. This book has been justly called a sealed book; for indeed it was sealed with seven seals; and no man in heaven nor in earth, neither under the earth, was able to open the book; neither to look thereon; and the Church has long wept, or at least desired to read and understand the things contained in this book, but have not been able. But, behold, the Lion of the tribe of Juda, the root of David, the Lamb for sinners slain, Jesus our Saviour, hath prevailed to open the book and to loose the seals thereof.

And as one seal after another has been opened, the things that were noted under them have been realized by the Church, until now the last seal is opened, and Revelations is no longer a sealed book. The writings of John are now understood: Thus, he has tarried until the coming of Christ; and he being dead yet speaketh, under the sixth and seventh seals, and in a few days, the Elect, or 144,000 sealed, will receive their commission from on high, to again prophesy before many peoples, and nations, and tongues, and kings. And they shall preach the gospel of the kingdom in all the world, for a witness unto all nations, and then shall the end come. The gospel of the grace of God, has been preached during the whole of the seed time, but the kingdom is not yet set up, hence the gospel of the kingdom is not yet preached. We have not heard the gospel of the kingdom; and how shall we hear without a preacher, and how shall they preach except they be sent?

After this there will be a great multitude which no man could number, of all nations and kindreds; and peoples and tongues, stand before the throne and before the Lamb (at the marriage supper of the Lamb,) clothed with white robes, and palms in their hands. After the 144,000 were seen standing on the Mount Zion with the lamb, having their Fathers name written in their foreheads, an angel was seen flying through the midst of heaven, having the everlasting gospel to preach to them that dwell on the earth." Next an angel following him saying, Babylon is fallen, is fallen; after this a voice from heaven, saying blessed are the dead that die in the Lord from henceforth; yea saith the spirit, for they rest from their labours and their works do follow them. This voice is given not for the sake of the Elect, but for the sake of those that are still on the earth, that they may not make the mistake that we have already made, viz: that probationary time ends with the coming of Christ, or when the angel says, Time shall be no longer, (which I think means there shall be no longer tarrying of the vision.) These 144,000 will return in the spirit and power of Elijah the Prophet, to turn the hearts of the fathers to the children and the hearts of the children to the fathers, before that great and dreadful day of the Lord come, lest he come and smite the earth with a curse. This is not the great and dreadful day of the Lord, but it is the set time to favor Zion, and had not those that were bidden most unthankfully refused to come, and entreated the servants spitefully, perhaps there would have been no exhibition of his wrath; and although his wrath is kindled a little, and he destroys those murderers and burns up their city, yet blessed are all they that put their trust in him. Then be not dismayed, or think the work too great. Jesus, the Captain of our salvation will go with us. It is his Father's good pleasure to give us the kingdom. We shall receive palms of victory at the marriage of the King's Son, if we then conquer our common enemy through the blood of Jesus; but many are called but few chosen; but we shall not receive our crowns till we get to the end of the race, or to the marriage supper of the Lamb. Then all will be blessed and holy that are called,—there will be no battle to be fought,—there will be no tarrying on account of the unworthyness of those that are bidden to that feast,—there we shall meet with all those holy martyrs that have yielded up their lives for the sake of Christ,—there, also, we shall meet with those that shall yet be killed in like manner as they were in the last great persecution that is already gathering over our heads,—there we shall sit down with Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, and all the Prophets, in our Father's kingdom and enjoy a sabbath of a thousand years."

I cannot at present, agree with the writer of the above, especially as to the character and work of the "144,000" before the resurrection. I do not know how we can have Rev. 14: 6--14, fulfilled more literally than it has been. Ver. 15, is now very evidently fulfilling in the earnest petitions that are every where arising for the coming of the Lord. Those persons must be not only the safest, but the most happy, who are looking more earnestly for "Jesus and the resurrection," than for intervening events: and we think also, the strongest fortified with evidence.

Lines Occasioned by the Death of a Friend.

There are some tender flowers
That seem at evening shade,
As if their beaten forms
Had withered and were dead.

Yet 'tis not so—they only sleep,
While cold and darkness reigns;
Let but the morning sun arise
And they revive again.

'Tis thus with Christian friends
That vanish from our eyes;
They are not dead—they only sleep,
Till Christ shall say—"Arise"!

We then shall see their forms
In God-like beauty clad;
And then renew the Love
That erst had made us glad.

1844.

The year Eighteen Hundred forty-four, as computed by the powers that have "changed times and laws" has passed away. A year fraught with consequences of more importance to the human family than any previous equal period of time, unless it be that which first gave birth to the design of creating man in God's own image and likeness.—A year in which not much less than 30,000,000 of our race have "suffered, groaned, and died;" and a hundred million hearts that have tenderly placed the green sod upon the bosom of loved ones, are left to bleed. No tie of affection has been too strong for death's unsparing hand—no warm kiss of early love, too sweet for the tyrant to withhold awhile the dregs of sorrow.—No eye has sparkled too brightly to be shaded with his sable pall, and no human arm too potent to fall powerless at his nod.—No soft music has charmed away the destroyer, and, in this age of invention, no machinery of man has turned him aside from his work. Despite human effort, death has closely pursued his cruel designs—the high and low, rich and poor, bond and free, male and female, young and old, have fallen.

A year of deeper interest, from the fact, that while the causes of human misery have greatly increased, the population of the world, according to the best authorities, has more than proportionately increased.—Thus producing more than compound interest, annually to add, to the already monstrous sum total of human woes.

Concentrate the annual sum of mortality, and look it fairly in the face! Think of sixty cities like the great American Emporium, depopulated, and a hundred more clad in mourning in the short year 1844. In contemplating this picture, the heart that cannot feel, must be one that is sunk to the level of the brute, and in which the fountain of human sympathies is forever dried. The eye that cannot weep over it, is one that is never stirred at the sight of misery and destitution. As our thoughts are turned to the history of the past—in tracing up the stream of time, we see nothing we would have restored, that casts a ray of hope upon this dark picture, till we reach the spot where the Lord God walked among "the trees of the Garden" and held converse with his creature man: But man has grieved his Maker, and by sin brought death into the world. We now cast our eye before us—"above, beneath, and all around," and from every point, save one, the picture darkens, & despair settles down upon us. Bible, Tract, Sabbath School, Temperance, and Moral Reform societies, ameliorate our condition, but they detract but little from the annual bill of mortality. The preaching of a gospel that points to the grave—the already dark and solitary resting place of one hundred thousand millions of mortal beings, as the consummation of human hopes, is no good tidings to "the whole creation" that "groaneth and travaileth in pain together until now."

The voices of the master spirits of the age on Zion's walls, have been lifted high in defence of a remedy for this sickening scene; but I will not swear that many of them are not Jesuits in disguise, in the service of his majesty, the Prince of this world—pledged to carry on his work; for their harangues during the year 1844, have been loud and clamorous in favor of 1000 years perpituity of this work of the devil, while the devil himself they would have bound. Indeed, some have so plainly shown which side of the question they are on, as to publish the eternal perpituity of death in our world, in the room of that faithful prediction, that Jesus Christ "hath abolished death, and hath brought life and immortality to light through the Gospel.

The only hope of a groaning creation, for deliverance from these poisonous winds of adversity and death, is the fulfillment of "the promise made to the fathers"—"The Resurrection of the dead"—the destruction of "death and hell"—"the restitution of all things"—The kingdom "under the whole heaven" being given to the saints of the Most High.

Are we told, the good man should not groan for "all the wicked" to be "destroyed"! We reply that the good man cannot pray for the overthrow of his enemies because he wants to see them punished, but because he longs to have Him Reign, "whose right it is." Still, is it not the most merciful prayer that we can offer, and also the most reasonable? Every day is adding to the sin, and consequent condemnation of the great mass of mankind, which, neither the experience of the past, nor the word of God teach us will ever become any better. Besides this, ten hundred millions that now inhabit the earth, must at all events, be cut off within the short space of thirty years, and were not the Christian's hope to be realized till then, not only ten hundred millions, but nearly double that number would be left upon the earth to re-enact, and improve upon, all the diabolical acts of wickedness and rebellion against the government of God, with which we are now surrounded.

Every principle of Justice, Mercy, and truth—of Love to God and man.—Every principle of reason and Revelation, is in favor of the consummation of the believer's hope, in the "Coming of Christ and the Resurrection;" and every redeemed faculty of man will respond, Amen! Even so, Come Lord Jesus!!

The year 1844, has been a year of more importance to the lover of Christ's appearing than the year 1843, or any previous year; because it has developed a page of fulfilled prophecy that has greatly strengthened our faith in "the word of God." and confirmed our hopes of a speedy—glorious Resurrection. In it has been drawn a line, showing more clearly who love, and who hate the appearing of Christ, than ever before. In it has ended the "second watch" of that prophetic "night" which is to terminate our earthly toils.—In it has been fulfilled, as never before, the predicted cries of "peace and safety," "every vision faileth," "my Lord delayeth his coming," "smiting of fellow servants," "scoffers in the last days," "mockers in the last time." In it has gone forth the "spirit of devils working miracles," or ancient "witchcraft" reduced to a popular science, as in the days of Paul, when it was called "Exorcism," but is now known by the name of "Mesmerism."

The year 1844, has given birth to the predicted cry at "midnight, Behold the Bridegroom cometh! go ye out to meet him."—It has brought to our ears the first glad notes of the "Seventh Trump," while

> The anger of the nations
> In wild commotion rise.

Although, during the past year we have been made "partakers of Christ's sufferings"—subjected to trials and disappointments "as all our fathers were," yet strengthened from a thousand points, we are still able to rejoice in all our tribulations, knowing that "when his glory shall be revealed we shall be glad with exceeding joy."

"Eighteen hundred and forty-four" has left us in the time of "patience," and in the "third watch" of the last prophetic night that will ever spread its mantle of darkness over the land of graves—just upon the verge of that "lovely morning,"

> "Where sin and death no more controll
> The sacred pleasures of the soul."

1845.

*—TIME STILL IS NIGH:—When seas no longer roll
The Ocean's foamy wave from pole to pole;
When Spring and Summer—Autumn, Winter, here
No longer mark the changes of the year;
When cloud-wreathed mountains, that embrace the skies,
Shrink into nought, and vanish from all eyes,
And Etna, bursting from its base, shall spread
Flames that shall decompose earth's rocky bed;
When yon bright stars grow dim, that shed their light,
No sun shall shine by day, no moon by night;
When man and nature tremble at the strife,
Which threatens them the universe of life,
And death's deep darkness o'er this earth shall spread,
And graves wide opened, shall yield up their dead;
Oh! then, when chaos rules, that reigned before
Earth fill'd its space, then" "TIME SHALL BE NO MORE."

Never more lovely did the rays of sunlight rest

> On fields of smiling green, or > Unruffled ocean's deep, than upon our city and surrounding hills, vallies, and "beautiful river" on the first day of Eighteen hundred and forty-five. The fires burned but faintly in the parlor, and counting-room—the merchant's doors were thrown open to welcome the sun's returning beams—the customary dark cloud of smoke arising from bituminous coal, was swept away by the pleasant breeze, and the ever falling soot, refrained from besmearing our faces on that day. Every cheek seemed to bear the glow of health—every countenance smiled—every footstep was buoyant—every eye sparkled, while the usual salutation of "Happy New Year" was heard at almost every step, as I passed slowly along "Main street," the "Cheanut street" of the "Queen City:" and thus ran my meditations.

Will all these "happy" wishes be realized? Will 1845 perform what it seems to promise? Will it be more merciful to our race than the year that has just sent the last dark page of its record to Heaven's tribunal? O deceitful world! How many of this giddy multitude will "bite the dust they tread with scorn" before another year is told? God has called, and called again, to raise the thoughts of this unthinking throng above "happy wishes" for the extension of Satan's reign—still they "wish" and long, and pray, that earth may continue to groan beneath its corrupted mass. But will it thus!—or with one mighty struggle, burst its cankered bands, in obedience to its Maker's word; and scatter far the implements of death and ruin! This sun of peace that sheds its pleasing rays on mountain, and glen, as if in patient waiting to kiss the early bud of spring, and drink the expanding flower's sweet perfume,—to millions of our race, must prove a treacherous sun. True, she doth rise and sit again—the moon sheds, as usual, its pale beams on the darkness below:—The stars sparkle in the firmament, and here on earth, "all things continue as they were." The stormy wind still lends its aid to bear the anxious marriner beneath his whitened sail, to the desired port. The mountain billows, with their wonted thunder, still lash the distant coast, and mighty rivers roll toward their ocean home. The mountains still mix their folds with lazy clouds, and the tall cedars, graceful "wave their heads to him who bade them grow." The noble horse—the faithful ox—the beast and bird, now rests; while man has turned from his accustomed toil aside, to pay his "New Year's" compliments—taste his "New Year's" cheer—settle his "Old Year's" accounts, and start on life's course again. God, and his truth

"Forgotten Him."

God's Prophets gave us "times and seasons," when his people should no longer be "trodden down," and the "first dominion" should return—when earth should be restored, and his saints that "sleep in the dust" awake. Eighteen hundred years, and more are gone, since the rightful heir to David's fallen Throne, renewed the promise, and with these cheering words, lit up the torch of hope within the pilgrims breast. "When ye shall see all these things come to pass, THEN KNOW that the kingdom of God is nigh." As it was then, so now; there are but few to mark the passing signs, and know "when these things come to pass."

These precious words now fail to charm but few—they lie neglected, or spiritualized away—while by Satan's cunning art, his menial servant DEATH, by almost unanimous consent, wears the honor, of promising at least, to place upon the christians brow his "crown of Glory:" An honor, which the tried servant of Jesus, will never consent to take from his Master, and give to the devil's slave.

What means all this? There is nothing like it in the history of the past! Is it not "the dead calm" that goes before the coming storm?—The low murmur that breeds the tempest! the hollow groan that portends the approaching "Earthquake, such as never was, since men were upon the earth, so mighty and so great."

* "Such storms now gather as hath not been seen
Since CHRIST, upon the cross on Calvary's Mount,
Gave up the spirit to his maker God.
Now the dark atmosphere still darker grows;
And there, the thunders and the lightnings born
And bred together, are the allied powers:
Then the strong elements, well disciplined,
Prepare for an attack upon the foe
[illegible]
Oh! who shall sketch the countenance of HIM,
Who is the same, should universal worlds
Fly from their orbits through the realms of space,
And at his bidding breed chaotic strife!
Darkness increases—one refulgent star
Is seen, and all the planets are obscured.
The "PRINCE OF PEACE," descending from his [FATHERS] throne,
High in the Heaven of Heavens above our heads,
Amidst the glory of eternal light;
Doth now command the strife which now ensues."

The soul that can wantonly trifle with the warnings brought to their ears in the year 1844, can do more.—They can reach forth their hand to play with the lightnings of Almighty vengance, or treading the thin crust of the sleeping Volcano, can say, "I will exalt my throne above the stars of God." "I will be like the most High."

The faithfully predicted "Midnight Cry," has sent out its notes into every corner of this land, so faithfully pictured on the prophetic page, as the great Theatre of the Gospel's last work. So surely then, as a faithful God has fulfilled this last predicted message of "joy to the daughters of sorrow;" so surely will earth's slumbering thunders awake, and sever the iron bands of the sleeping saint, and let into his earthly cell, the long excluded rays of the "glory that excelleth."

Treading the threshold of the year 1845, it becomes us more than ever before, to watch for the returning "Bridegroom; for never before have we been surrounded with such certain evidences of his speedy approach.

Although darkness, for the moment, reigns in the mass of mind around us, yet, this year opens up before us a "New Era." An era of resplendant glory; like "Ezekiel's river," widening ont into an eternal expanse of happiness. It is more than madness for us now to slumber, or for a moment to doubt that "our great deliverer's nigh."

Let those who will, make much of this distracted and distracting world; the waiting pilgrim's thoughts are far above it, where his sacred treasure lies. He has turned away his eyes from its "false light and fading glory." To "go back," is to go to perdition—to "look back," is, like "Lots wife," to be petrified.

Thanking God for "mercies past," and trusting him for what is to come, I close by praying that Christ may have his promised rights,—"The heathen for his inheritance, and the uttermost parts of the earth for his possessions;" and by wishing all God's dear children "A HAPPY NEW ERA," where the glory of God is to "cover the earth as the waters cover the sea."

WESTERN MIDNIGHT CRY.

Cincinnati, Thursday, January 9, 1845.

THE CAUSE IN THIS PLACE.

God has mercifully interposed in preserving the band of Advent Believers in this place, in peace, harmony and love—and in a "patient waiting for his Son from heaven." I humbly trust he will here find a "little flock" to whom he will say, "It is your Father's good pleasure to give you the kingdom."

The meetings at the Tabernacle, and at private houses during a part of the week evenings, continue in interest.

In accordance with the suggestions of brethren at the East, the first day of January was observed as a day of fasting and prayer. Lectures were delivered at the Tabernacle, in the morning and afternoon of that day—the last one by Bro. Lewis Hicklin, of Indiana, who is now on a tour through this State, to comfort the brethren.

In the evening, a business meeting of the Association was held, and the remaining debt upon the Tabernacle, amounting to about $735, voluntarily divided among the friends, and thus an end was put to the various false rumors, that the building was to be converted into a work house, stable, &c. &c.

We have had a tolerable share of falsehoods, and "evil reports" circulated about us, but in the room of inflicting an injury, though such might have been intended, the effect has been, more effectually to draw off our attention from a treacherous world, and fix our affections more firmly upon the Coming One.

In this place, as in every other, more evil has been accomplished by pretended friends of the cause, than by any, or all others. Under a pretext of deep feeling for the cause, such can go from house to house, retailing slander about those they fear to meet "face to face" as God directs: "But they shall proceed no further; for their folly shall be manifest unto all men," as was the folly of those that withstood Moses. O why will frail man—"a worm crushed before the moth," violate the plainest principles of God's unchanging truth?

Be patient brethren, our case is before a tribunal where every thought, word, work, and design, will be accurately weighed in the balances of the Sanctuary—a tribunal every honest man and woman will love, whatever its decision may be in their own individual case.

THE TRUE MILLENNIUM.

In our last number an intimation was given that some further notice would be taken of Bro. H. B. Woodcock's article under the above caption. The first objectionable clause is the following.

"At that time [the close of 1843] the sun (or Lamp) was darkened; the moon (or Church) did not give her light; and many a brilliant star fell to the earth."

However necessary it may seem that the terms, "sun," "moon," and "stars" should be figuratively understood, it does not appear warranted in this place. In applying the language of scripture, it is a safe rule never to understand it figuratively, until it is first proved that it cannot be literally understood. This, I think cannot be done in this case, for none can deny that the predictions of the Saviour relative to the darkening of the sun—moon, and falling of the stars, has been most literally fulfilled within the present generation: Besides, I am not aware that the "sun" is any where used in the Bible to prefigure "Lamp" or "Word of God." The same objection may also be urged against the application of the recent excitement under the sound of the "Midnight Cry" to the predicted "great earthquake." A constant danger into which we are liable to fall, arises from an anxiety to find events applicable to scripture which we have made up our minds, must now be fulfilled.—Thus, we may be unfitted for the great events that cannot be far in the future. While we would shun the "hypocricy" and sin of failing to "discern this time" by the "signs" around us, we should also carefully avoid those fanciful applications of scripture that have obscured their light in past ages.

When wrong premises are laid down, error becomes easily established: That the premises of our respected correspondent are wrong, may be readily seen from his conclusion that the "seventh seal" has been opened, and the predicted half hour of "silence" taken place.

I know not that I fully comprehend his views in regard to the "Seven Seals," but if I do, the idea is carried that they apply to the book of "Revelation" alone—that their opening is in the order in which they are laid down, and consequently all the events named under the "Sixth Seal" must transpire, before the seventh is opened. This is the only safe way in which they can be understood.

Let us then enquire, Have all the events named under the sixth seal transpired?

The first named is the "great earthquake" (Rev. 6: 12). This may have been fulfilled in the earthquake which took place about the year 1757, as has been argued by able students—being the most extensive one, of which any record can be found: But there is reason in the supposition that this is simply a "prologue" to the narration, which more fully describes the earthquake in verses 14 and 15. In either case, the fulfilment must be literal or the idea of it being a revelation would be destroyed.

The next event named under this seal is, "The sun became black as sackcloth of hair, and the moon became as blood: and the stars of heaven fell unto the earth, even as a fig-tree casteth her untimely [or green] figs when she is shaken of a mighty wind." It is unnecessary for us here to repeat that these events are all literally fulfilled. The record is plainly spread upon the page of our world's history, lying between the years 1780, and 1833, and no where else. This should be as clear a demonstration to the enquiring mind, that the remainder of the events will be literally fulfilled, as that the remainder of the 2300 days of Daniel are to be fulfilled in years, when 490 of them are proved to be thus fulfilled. If we are to have part of a prediction spiritually fulfilled, and a part literal, when nothing in the connexion makes such distinction; our conclusions are mere assumptions, and the "sure word of prophecy" becomes frittered away to an empty name.

The next events are, "The heaven departed as a scroll when it is rolled together; and every mountain and island were moved out of their places."

This certainly has not been fulfilled, for when it is done "the heavens above and earth beneath" must bear the record; which it does not yet do. Again, we have the direct cause of the final calamities of the "kings of the earth, and the great men, and the rich men," &c. "The face of him that sitteth on the throne," and not any particular power with which "the elect" are clothed, extorts from them a confession of the truth of what they now so stoutly deny will ever take place—viz. "the great day of his wrath is come."

After reading this, in connexion with Jude 14, 15; 1 Thess. 4: 16, 17; 2 Thess. 1: 6–10, and the parallel texts, the only rational conclusion to which we can come relative to "the great day of his wrath"—the "time of trouble such as never was," &c., is, that it must be developed by the personal Advent of our Lord "to execute judgment upon all," when he will be attended with all his "raised" "changed" saints.

The close of the sixth seal finds the wicked in the midst of the great day of God's wrath, Rev. 6: 17, and the righteous having come "out of great tribulation"—"before the Throne"—serving him "day and night in his temple." From thence they are to "return" to "Zion"—the "new Earth" at the close of the half hour silence, Isa. 35: 10—Typified in Joshua 6: 10–16, by the Israelites entering upon the promised land.

The conclusion of Bro. W.—as to the fact of the seventh trumpet "beginning to sound" in the "seventh month" of the present Jewish year, seems to be both rational, and scriptural. That the plagues will be poured out under the sounding of this trumpet, may also be correct: But he has not given us the scripture warrant that "many a true hearted Christian will perish in this last great conflict."

There is no intimation that any but the impenitent are affected by these "plagues."

The application of "Armageddon" (Rev. 16: 16) to "America" is a new interpretation, but there is something in it worthy of being looked at. The meaning of the term "Armageddon" is, "The mountain of Megiddo, or the mountain of the Gospel; otherwise, the mountain of fruits, or of apples." In connexion with this, take the fact, that the great moral machinery for the spread of the Gospel, after the 1260 years of Papal rule—during which time the Gospel was "clothed in sackcloth," has been mainly devised,—set in motion and carried forward in this country; and furthermore, that it is the most fruitful land on earth: Bro. W.' application of "Armageddon" is not without some reason.

In referring to "the abomination of desolation spoken of by Daniel the prophet, standing in the holy place" as yet future, Bro. W. has left unnoticed the expositions of Matt. 24: which, I think, clearly proves the fulfilment of that prediction, in the usurpations of Papacy, before which power the church "fled into the wilderness." See "Western Midnight Cry," vol. 4, pp. 59, 59, 60, 65, 66, 67.

The position that the "seals belong to the kingdom of God, and reach down to the final triumph of all the saints" is probably correct; neither have I any objection to the idea that the "sealing time" commenced with the opening of the sixth seal, and ended in the seventh month.

"The 144,000 are a chosen number for a special purpose; and that number is 144,000, and no more or less; and the purpose for which they are chosen is to reap the harvest."

I see not one particle of evidence to sustain this statement, "The harvest is the end of the world," Matt. 13: 39.—The first work is gathering the tares in bundles, to burn them; which work Bro. W. must believe is done, if he believes the sealing time ended in the seventh month. After the burning of the Tares, the righteous "shine forth as the sun in the kingdom"—new Earth; and they must have been "changed" sometime before this, to have 1 Thess. 4: 16; 1 Cor. 15: 52, fulfilled. The saints, yet mortal, may have had a hand in "gathering together the elect," but it is Christ himself that reaps "the earth," Rev. 14: 16; John 5: 28, 29, while "another angel" reaps the vine and casts it "into the great wine press of the wrath of God," Rev. 14: 17-20. Here the resurrected, and not mortal saints will participate in the Great battle—and that not till after "the marriage supper of the Lamb." See Rev. 19: 9–21. That the "marriage supper of the Lamb" takes place immediately upon the resurrection and changing of all the saints, is proved in Luke, 14: 12–14, and its connexion. The distinction between the "marriage supper of the Lamb," and the "marriage of the King's Son," if in reality there be any distinction, is not important, since there is no proof that the earth must be purified before either of them takes place.

From Ezekiel 37: 38: and 39th chapters, it is evident that the "cleansing of the land" is after the resurrection of "the whole house of Israel."

There are other points in the argument of Bro. W. that might be noticed as objectionable, but as the principles embraced in the preceding remarks covers them, it will not be necessary to go farther at this time.

One thing seems certain; if these events of "great tribulation" are yet to take place before the deliverance of the saints, we are so far left without evidence of the fact that it is made an indispensable duty to look for Christ, and not for intervening events.

Not long since an individual attended a second advent meeting where the principal topics of discussion were the yet future triumph of wickedness, and the time of trouble spoken of by Daniel, (as was claimed) to transpire before the resurrection—remarked, that in the room of looking for Christ, as they were commanded to do, they seemed to be looking for the devil.

No true believer in the speedy advent, can for a moment shrink from any trial that may come, for they have long since decided that these truths are worth infinitely more than their heads: But from all the evidences, we may "Comfort" God's people with the blessed assurance that their "warfare is ended," and God will now be better to those that have stood the trial of their faith, than all their fears.

Vision of the Eagle.

Our next number will contain an exposition of the vision of the "Eagle," 2 Esdras, 11th and 12th chapters, copied from the "Voice of Truth." Those who wish to examine this interesting prophecy, "hidden" for the "last times," will send their orders immediately, as only about 400 copies can be spared after supplying our regular subscribers.

"The Things that are Coming on the Earth."

The first account of a singular "fatality among the fish," which we received a few weeks since, was passed by unnoticed: But the subjoined account, which is taken from one of our City papers, if it be true, renders it probable, that it is a fulfillment of predictions contained in the Bible, and directly connected with the "great day of God." A few out of many texts are added that the reader may examine them with their contexts.

"FATALITY AMONG THE FISH.—A gentleman who has just returned from the sea shore of New Jersey, informs the U. S. Gazette that the whole shore, for 30 or 40 miles, is covered with dead fish, cast up by the sea. They are of all kinds, from the smallest perch, to the largest sturgeon; some rock fish, weighing forty or fifty pounds, and rich sea bass. Many of the fish are washed up before they are dead. So great is the number, that a gentleman computed that on Leaming's Beach alone there must be 10,000 bushels. What has happened among the fish, we cannot tell, as we do not know to what unwholesome influences they are liable in the deeps below, but something extraordinary must have been in operation to produce an evil so extensive. Was it a volcanic eruption?

It will be recollected that a few days ago we gave a similar account from Long Island Sound, this is most singular, and extends over a stretch of several hundred miles of coast."

The "Seven last Plagues" of Revelation, are typified by the "plagues of Egypt."

Ex. 7: 18, "And the fish that is in the river shall die."

Psa. 125: 29, "He turned their waters into blood, and slew their fish."

Rev. 16: 3, "And the second angel poured out his vial upon the sea; and it became as the blood of a dead man; and every living soul died in the sea."

The first plague might have had its fulfillment in the troubles of Rome, in connexion with the Civil and Ecclesiastical powers: See ver. 1, 2.

Rev. 7: 3. The four angels are charged to "Hurt not the earth, neither the sea, nor the trees, till we have sealed the servants of God in their foreheads."

If the sea, (or its inhabitants) is "hurt" as it never was before, then the sealing time is done.

Isa. 19: 8, "The fishers also shall mourn, and all they that cast angle into the brooks shall lament, and they that spread nets upon the waters shall languish." See also verses 9–17.

Isa. 23: 45, "Be thou ashamed, O Zidon: for the sea hath spoken, even the strength of the sea, saying, I travail not, nor bring forth children, neither do I nourish up young men, nor bring up virgins. As at the report concerning Egypt, [when their fish died] so shall they be sorely pained at the report of Tyre," or strong nation. Ver. 11, "He stretcheth out his hand over the sea, he shook the kingdoms," &c.

Isa. 24: 14, "They shall lift up their voice, they shall sing for the majesty of the Lord, they shall cry aloud from the sea. Wherefore glorify ye the Lord in the fires," &c.

Isa. 50: 2, "Behold, at my rebuke I dry up the sea; I make the rivers a wilderness: their fish stinketh because there is no water, and dieth for thirst."

Ezek. 29: 5. "I will leave thee thrown into the wilderness, thee and all the fish of thy rivers: thou shalt fall upon the open fields; thou shalt not be brought together, nor gathered: I have given thee for meat to the beasts of the field and to the fowls of the heaven."

Ezek. 38: 19, 20. "For in my jealousy and in the fire of my wrath have I spoken, surely in that day there shall be a great shaking in the land of Israel; so that the fishes of the sea, and the fowls of the heaven, and the beasts of the field, and all creeping things that creep upon the earth, and all the men that are upon the face of the earth, shall shake at my presence, and the mountains shall be thrown down, and the steep places shall fall, and every wall shall fall to the ground."

Zeph. 1: 3. "I will consume man and beast; I will consume the fowls of the heaven, and the fishes of the sea, and the stumbling blocks with the wicked; and I will cut off man from off the land, saith the Lord." Ver. 10, "And it shall come to pass in that day, saith the Lord, that there shall be the noise of a cry from the fish gate, and an howling from the second, and a great crashing from the hills."

Hosea 4: 1, 3. "Hear the word of the Lord, ye children of Israel; for the Lord hath a controversy with the inhabitants of the land, because there is no truth, nor mercy, nor knowledge of God in the land. By swearing, and lying, and killing, and stealing, and committing adultery, they break out, and blood toucheth blood. Therefore, shall the land mourn, and every one that dwelleth therein shall languish, with the beasts of the field, and with the fowls of heaven; yea, the fishes of the sea also, shall be TAKEN AWAY."

Heb. 3: 8. "Was the Lord displeased against the rivers? Was thine anger against the rivers? Was thy wrath against the sea, that thou didst ride upon thine horses and thy chariots of salvation?"

Zech. 10: 11. "And he shall pass through the sea with affliction, and shall smite the waves in the sea," &c.

Psa. 77: 18, 19, "The voice of thy thunder was in the heaven; the lightnings lightened the world; the earth trembled and shook. Thy way is in the sea, and thy path in the great waters, and thy footsteps are not known."

Psa. 89: 25. "I will set his hand also in the sea, and his right hand in the rivers." See verses 1—37.

Hag. 2: 6. "Yet once, it is a little while, and I will shake the heavens, and the earth, and the sea, and the dry land."

Heb. 12: 27. "And this word, 'yet once more' signifieth the removing of those things that may be shaken, as of things that are made, that those things that cannot be shaken may remain.—Wherefore we receiving a kingdom," &c.

Luke 21: 25, 26. "Upon the earth distress of nations with perplexity; the sea and the waves roaring. Men's hearts failing them for fear, and for looking after those things that are coming on the earth; for the powers of heaven shall be shaken."

I do not wish to be understood as conveying the idea that these texts are all fulfilled in the above named "fatality"—they are presented to show events with which it is connected. Men have seen the signs "in the heaven above, and in the earth beneath," and now, that signs are done, and the things themselves begun, under the "second plague," can it be expected that many will profit by these things? It is written that under the very last of these plagues, "Men blasphemed God because of the plague of the hail."

Eccl. 9: 12. "For man also knoweth not his time: as the fishes that are taken in an evil net, and as the birds that are caught in the snare; so are the sons of men snared in an evil time, when it falleth suddedly upon them."

J. B. COOK.

Our beloved Bro. Cook, arrived in this place on Friday last. Though considerably afflicted with rheumatism, brought on by his arduous labors, yet he was able to lecture three times in the Tabernacle on Sabbath last.

His message was truly comforting. He purposes to leave in a few days for Indianapolis, Ind.

The following is a brief synopsis of his discourse delivered on Sabbath morning. Text, Exodus 3d chapter.

Having turned our backs upon the world, and gone "forth to meet the Bridegroom," we find an adaptation in the word of God that prevents our "going back" again.

From this chapter we learn much of God, and the distinction he makes between those that serve him, and those that serve him not.—The design of God extends from creation's beginning to its end, and covers the history of all worlds.—The Egyptians stood in the way of his chariot wheels, and they were judged.

The Mosaic, forms the basis of the Christian dispensation; and strong analogies exist between them, some of which will here be noticed.

Abraham and his posterity were chosen to be the people of God, and were, above all others, peculiar in their National character. Then read from Gen. 12: Deut. 6: 7; 2 Chron. 20: 7.

So are God's Israel now—a peculiar—a chosen people, Gal. 3: 6–9, 26–29; Isa. 42: 3–5; Rom. 4: 13.

Again, afflictions were predicted as the lot of God's ancient people; Gen. 15: 1–15, &c. As long as they were in Egypt they were afflicted, yet they grew and prospered. There is a kind of grass, the more it is trodden upon, the more deep and firm it takes root:—So with grace; the more it is tried, the stronger and more vigorous its exercise.

As long as Christians are in this world, like Israel in Egypt, they will have "Tribulation." If they call "the Master of the house Beelzebub," so will they call the members of his household. The ruling spirit of this world has never changed its character, nor never will. Four universal empires were predicted to "tread down" the people of God, until, with Christ at their head, the saints take the kingdom. The fires have been kindled around the "down trodden," yet like the "burning bush" they have not been consumed. Nearly 11,000,000 Christians have been burned by the last one of these monarchies, but not a grain of the pure gold has perished.

God's ancient people were not to change or remodel the Government of Egypt:

So Christians can never change the worldly governments under which they live. The Dragon reigned in the first, and he reigns in the last; and will reign, till chained by the "Coming One."

Again, to God's ancient people, deliverance was promised, Gen. 13: Ex. 6: 6–8:—

Yet not so full and frequent are these promises, as those made to all God's people of a glorious Resurrection at the coming of Christ, Matt. 1: 21.—When will he do this? Heb. 9: 28; Rom. 8: 21–23. It is as absurd to expect pardon and forgiveness without the blood of Christ, as to expect salvation without the Second Advent.

As the time drew near for the Israelites to be delivered from the bondage of Egypt, Moses was raised up for a deliverer, to communicate with them that they might be the better prepared to leave the land of oppression. He that set in "Satan's seat"—that he might overthrow this deliverer, issued a decree that all the male children should be slain; but God who is "high over all," controlling cause and effect, looked down, and both guided and guarded the work he had begun. The mother of Moses, in faith, committed him, in his frail vessel, to the river: A watchful providence soon restored him to her arms—adding a compensation for a mother's care.

Moses, "after he had come to years" interposed in favor of an oppressed brother, and "slew the Egyptian:"—Thus another providence drove him from the corruption of of a heathen court, where he would have been unfitted for his work.

Read the account of the first appearing on earth of our Great Deliverer.—His life was sought—yet he lived, and triumphed o'er the Christian's foe.

A time was given for the deliverance of God's ancient people, Gen. 1; 15–16; Acts 7: 6, 7. And not only time, but events to fill up that time.—The four generations filling up the four hundred years.

So God hath appointed a day in which he will judge the world, Acts 17: 31; Hab. 2: 1–3; Dan. 8: 13, 14. The four generations answer to the four kingdoms, that were to afflict God's people.

Every attempt made to escape from Egypt increased their trials. They were delayed, and accused of idleness; and then, in their trials, they complained of Moses, and said "the Lord look upon you and judge." Moses, not fully understanding God's plan, and having none to sympathise with him, complained to the Lord. After they had left their work, and started for Canaan, there arose an absolute necessity for a Divine interposition. They could not build a bridge across the Red Sea, nor a fleet to carry them over: And "on that self same day"—the end of the predicted period; the whole host was delivered.

LETTERS.

Bro. D. M. C., of Fredericktown, O., has sent a communication which he wishes published. He sent the pay for his paper, which is more than every one does; and we should be glad to accommodate him, but must decline his article for the reason that it is made up of assumptions, and no accompanying proof. Well written articles, that have a fair show of evidence will not be excluded though they may differ from cherished views of my own.

Bro. D. M. C. states that we are looking for the wrong kingdom—the kingdom of the Man of Sin is to be set up and to last 42 months, to the end of the third woe:—this kingdom cannot be revealed by theory—is hid from the wise and prudent, and revealed to babes—those that are trodden down; And all this he claims to "know by experience."

His exhortation for me to take the yoke of Christ upon me, and learn of him, is received with all kindness, and I will endeavor, as I have been striving to do, still, through grace, to improve upon it.

☞ Bro. A. S. Richardson, Postmaster at Waterbury, Vt., writes Dec. 26, 1844. "The brethren increase in faith daily. Bro. Himes preached here on Saturday and Sunday last—the house was full. The Spirit moves like the moving of many waters. It moves with the soul that desires to be filled:—Not as man measureth, but with measure pressed down, and running over. Glory be to Jesus, for the fountain is full!—free for all."

Letter from Bro. Holmes.

MULBERRY, January 5th, 1845.

Dear Bro. Jacobs:—I enclose you one dollar, my mite towards sustaining the "Western Midnight Cry." As many are giving their opinion what the "sign of the Son of Man" will be, I will also give mine. God, by the mouth of his Prophet, I think, has clearly revealed what it is. Isaiah 30: 25, and onward, "Moreover the light of the moon shall be as the light of the sun, and the light of the sun shall be seven fold as the light of seven days, in the day that the Lord bindeth up the breach of his people, and healeth the stroke of their wound: Behold the name of the Lord cometh from afar, burning with anger, and the burden thereof is heavy. His lips are full of indignation, and his tongue as a devouring fire, and his breath as an overflowing stream shall reach to the midst of the neck, (for what he says,) to sift the nations with the sieve of vanity, and there shall be a bridle in the jaws of the people, causing them to err, when God heals the breach of his people:" Not the carnal Jew, for he is not the Lords. Then the above sign will be given, and all Christs children at least will understand it, and the ungodly will begin to call for "rocks and mountains to fall on them and hide them from the presence of Him that siteth upon the throne. May the Lord prepare us for that glorious happy day, which according to every appearance is so close upon us!

Yours, as ever looking for the glorious appearing of our Lord Jesus Christ.

WESTERN MIDNIGHT CRY!

J. V. HIMES, Publisher. "WATCHMAN, WHAT OF THE NIGHT?" E. JACOBS, Editor.

Vol. 4. CINCINNATI, TUESDAY, JANUARY 14, 1845. No. 10.

For the Western Midnight Cry.

"COME LORD JESUS!"

Dear Saviour, thy children are longing to see
The smiles of thy tarrying face;
To join in ascribing salvation to thee
Who ransomed a world by thy grace.

We long for the coming of Jesus—our King,
When the sanctified millions shall meet;
When the Jew and the Gentile their tribute shall bring,
And worship with joy at thy feet.

We long for the time when thy "sign" shall appear,
Haste, haste, Blessed Lord, the glad day!
When thy saints, who now sleep, the Trumpet, shall hear,
And joyful the summons obey.

We long for the hour—to be clothed in white
Before our Redeemer to stand—
A crown on our brow which outdazzles the light—
A palm of thy love in our hand.

Haste, Lord, the bless'd day when thy will shall be done
On earth as it now is in Heaven;
Haste, haste the bless'd day when thy Kingdom shall come,
And the glory to thee shall be given.

THE GOVERNMENT OF THE UNITED STATES,

A SUBJECT OF PROPHECY.

THE VISION OF THE EAGLE.

"Buy the truth and sell it not."

It has always been a matter of surprise to us that no reference is made by any of the prophets to this government. And especially when we take into consideration the fact that no one of the nations of the earth has received more marked and peculiar manifestations of divine favor. And yet we must admit, if we confine ourselves to those books styled the "canonical scriptures," we search in vain for such a prophecy. This has induced us to examine those styled the "Apocryphal." And in the 2d Book of Esdras we find a prophecy which so clearly defines the prominent events connected with the history of our government and which has been so literally fulfilled as to lead us irresistibly to the conclusion that it must have been written with special reference to this nation and by inspiration of God. But we are aware that in introducing to your consideration this book, we have to contend with long established prejudices. With the mass we are satisfied these are based on the simple fact of its being found in the Apocrypha; therefore it is rejected by them as uninspired. But how came it in the Apocrypha? Why, many centuries after the book was written, a convention of men (for whom I believe no one claims divine inspiration) declared it uninspired. It is however a conceded fact that Esdras was rejected by a majority simply of one, i. e. 23 out of 47 of that learned body of divines declared it worthy of being received as divinely inspired. Take another fact in relation to the decisions of that council. The book of Revelation, one of the most interesting portions of the New Testament scriptures—the Key to Daniel, and without which that interesting prophecy could never have been understood, was saved by a majority of only one. Thus we see that one vote would have placed Esdras in the sacred canon and Revelation in the Apocrypha. And the same objection that now exists against Esdras being received would have existed against Revelation. Now this fact shows conclusively that there must have existed good reasons for supposing Esdras divinely inspired or 23 of those 47 would not have cast their vote for its reception. And are you prepared to take the ground that the truth in that case was not with the minority? Are we bound as protestants to receive or reject these books as inspired or uninspired according to the decisions of that council? Is such evidence the best we can have upon which to decide? We think not. Now all will concede doubtless that the best evidence we can have of the inspiration of a book, is internal evidence. And the best internal evidence is that of foretelling future events. If so, then we may have evidence of the inspiration of that book now, which they could not have had then, and which had they then possessed they would have received it into the sacred canon. That we may have increased evidence of this character since the decisions of that council none will deny. For the opening providences of God have rendered certain the inspiration of some books which were then considered as quite doubtful. If this is true with reference to other books, it may also be true with reference to Esdras. Now if in examining Esdras we find future events foretold long before they transpired, we must receive it as divinely inspired. For God has ever claimed this as His sole prerogative, and with it has ever defied all false gods. See Isa. 45: 21; 46: 9, 10.

WARNE, in his "Introduction to the study of Scriptures," in speaking of the insufficiency of the inspiration of superintendency to foretell future events, remarks; "Therefore in prophecy other and superior inspiration is afforded."

We have other evidence of its inspiration. By comparing 2d Esdras 1: 1–3, with Ezra 7: 1–5, we find the genealogy of the two are the same. HORNE, in his "Introduction"—vol. ii. p. 289, observes, that "In the Alexandria Ms. the first book of Esdras is placed before Ezra," also that "in some editions of the Septuagint it is called the first book of the priest, meaning Ezra." The same author observes with reference to the 2d book of Esdras, that "Morinus supposes it was written in Hebrew or perhaps Chaldee, and afterwards translated into the Greek and Latin." Arch-Bishop Lawrence says, "the character given to the Messiah by Esdras is different from what a Christian would have given, and therefore believes it was written before the Christian era." Watson in Relig. Ency. article, Apocrypha, says, "they were written before the promulgation of the gospel." Now if these writers are correct as to the time these books were written (of which there is but little doubt) then we have additional internal evidence of their inspiration from the frequent quotations of Christ and the Apostles therefrom. A few of which we will now notice.

Compare 2d Esdras 1: 24, "I will turn me to other nations, and unto those will I give my name that they may keep my statutes," with Matt. 21: 43, "Therefore say I unto you the kingdom of God shall be taken from you, and given to a nation bringing forth the fruits thereof." 2d Esdras 1: 30, "I gathered you together as a hen gathereth her chickens under her wings; but now, what shall I do unto you? 32d ver. I sent unto you my servants the prophets whom you have taken and slain and torn their bodies in pieces, whose blood I will require of your hands, saith the Lord. 33d ver. Thus saith the Almighty Lord, your house is desolate"—compare with Matt. 23: 34–38. In this passage our Lord quotes almost verbatim—and which is not found in any other prophet. Those who wish to pursue this investigation farther, will compare the following texts: 2d Esdras 1: 37, with John 20: 29; 1 Pet. 1: 8. 2 Esdras 2: 10–13, with Matt. 25: 34. 2 Esdras 2: 34, with John 10: 14–16; Heb. 9: 26. 2 Esdras 7: 6–19, with Matt. 7: 13, 14.

We might multiply texts of comparison to a great number but the limits of this article forbid. "History informs us that many of the Christian Fathers believed Ezra by divine inspiration rewrote the scriptures destroyed in the Babylonish captivity. The foundation of this belief is found in 2d Esdras 14: 21, 48. Again, the Jews and Christians award to Esdras the collecting and arranging a correct edition of the Old Testament scriptures. According to Josephus he was considered by the Jews a second Moses. We learn from the scriptures that he was a ready scribe of the law of Moses, having prepared his heart to seek the law of the Lord and to do it, and to teach in Israel statutes and judgments." Considering the important station he filled, being so highly approved and beloved of God, would it be incredible to suppose that God would reveal unto him events in the future as he did unto other holy men of old? Certainly not. Permit us then in view of these evidences of the authenticity and inspiration of this book, to invite your candid attention to a vision found in the 11th and 12th chapters, in which is brought to view that which remaineth of the 4th beast (or kingdom,) to bear rule in this world and ushers in the 5th and everlasting Kingdom of the Son of David.

2d ESDRAS, 11: 1–11—"Then saw I a dream; and behold, there came up from the sea an eagle, which had twelve feathered wings and three heads. And I saw, and behold, she spread her wings over all the earth, and all the winds of the air blew on her, and were gathered together. And I beheld, and out of her feathers grew other contrary feathers; and they became little feathers and small. But her heads were at rest: the head in the midst was greater than the others, yet rested it with the residue. Moreover I beheld, and lo, the eagle flew with her feathers and reigned upon earth, and over them that dwelt therein. And I saw that all things under heaven were subject unto her, and no man spake against her—no, not one creature upon earth. And I beheld, and lo, the eagle rose up on her talons and spake to her feathers, saying, Watch not all at once; sleep every one in his own place and watch by course; but let the heads be preserved for the last. And I beheld, and lo, the voice went not out of her heads, but from the midst of the body. And I numbered her contrary feathers, and behold there were eight of them."

Here we have a description of the eagle having twelve feathered wings, (or wings of twelve feathers,) three heads and eight contrary feathers. We perceive by referring to the interpretation, that this eagle symbolizes a kingdom—the same as is represented by Daniel's fourth beast. See 12: 11, "The eagle whom thou sawest come up from the sea, is the kingdom which was seen in the vision of thy brother Daniel." See also 11: 39, "Art thou not it that remaineth of the four beasts, whom I made to reign in my world? * * * * "And the fourth came and overcome all the beasts that were past, and had power over the world with great fearfulness," &c. Its origin is the same. Dan. 7: 3, "And four beasts came up from the sea."—(Sea denoting people.) See Rev. 17: 15; also Dan. 7: 23. "Thus he said, the fourth beast shall be the fourth kingdom upon the earth," which we all allow to be Rome; and which, according to Daniel, was to continue until the Ancient of days shall sit in judgment. Dan. 7: 7–10.

The twelve feathered wings denote twelve kings that are to reign in this kingdom. See 12: 14, 16. "In the same shall twelve kings reign one after another; and this do the twelve wings signify which thou sawest"—which brings to view the reign of the twelve Cæsars. 12th ver. "And I looked, and behold, on the right side there arose one feather, and reigned over all the earth,"—the first of the Cæsars—Julius.

13–17, "And so it was, that when it reigned the end of it came, and the place thereof appeared no more; so the next following stood up and reigned, and had a great time; and it happened, that when it reigned the end of it came also, like as the first, so that it appeared no more. Then came there a voice unto it and said, Hear, thou that hast horne rule over the earth so long, this I say unto thee before thou beginest to appear no more. There shall none after thee attain unto thy time, neither unto the half thereof." This is Augustus Cæsar. See 12: 15, "Wherefore the second shall begin to reign, and shall have more time than any of the twelve." Was this fulfilled? See Goldsmith's Rome, chap. 21st and 22d, and Robinson's Outline, pp. 133 and 140. Julius reigned 15 years, Augustus commenced his reign in 43 B. C., in the triumvirate, and terminated A. D. 14; making his whole reign 57 years. As sole emperor he reigned 41 years. Tiberius reigned 22 years; and there was no Cæsar after him whose reign exceeded 15 years; thus fulfilling the prophecy, that the second (Augustus) should reign longer than the twelve, and longer by half than any of the ten who succeeded him.

18, 19, "Then arose the third, (Tiberius) and reigned, as the other before, and appeared no more also. So went it with all the residue, (i. e. the twelve) one after another, as that every one reigned and then appeared no more." Now observe, in the interpretation of these twelve kings, the reign of but one is noticed, i. e., Augustus Cæsar. See 12: 14, 15. "In the same shall twelve kings reign, one after another; wherefore the second shall begin to reign, and shall have more time than any of the twelve." Now as one great object of this prophecy, is to bring to view the first and second Advent of Christ; having noticed that age of the Roman government, and the reign of that king in which the Saviour made his first Advent, at this point of the vision he drops the history of the Roman government and brings to view the government of the United States, as that which remainest of the 4th kingdom, ver, 30, and ushers in the 5th and everlasting Kingdom of the Son of David to be established at his 2d Advent.

20 verse, "Then I beheld, and lo, in process of time the feathers that followed stood up upon the right side to rule also." The expression, "process of time," conveys the idea of a long period elapsing. "Then the feathers that followed stood up to reign;" (i. e. the eight contrary feathers mentioned in the 11th ver.;) "and I numbered her contrary feathers, and behold there were eight of them." See also 12: 19, 20, where is given an interpretation of these eight feathers—"And whereas thou sawest the eight small under feathers sticking to her wings, this is the interpretation, That in him there shall arise eight kings, whose times shall be but small and their years swift. And some of them ruled; but within a while they appeared no more." 21st verse, "For some of them were set up, but ruled not;" i. e. as yet: for mark, when they are to rule they place themselves upon the right side. See verse 12. Now down to a certain period, there were some of them that had ruled, as he shows in the next verse—22d, "After this I looked, and behold the twelve feathers appeared no more," i. e. the twelve Cæsars having had their time of reigning, were plucked from the eagle and disappeared, "nor the two little feathers;" i. e. the same that ruled, (of the eight contrary feathers,) spoken of in the last clause of the 20th verse. And now he speaks of what remains at this point, on the eagle's body.

23d verse, "And there was no more upon the eagle's body, but three heads that rested and six little wings. (Wings and feathers are terms used as synonimous.) Now mark, the six kings or feathers are those yet to reign. The three heads symbolize the three last of these feathers that are to reign. Having ruled and retired, they are represented as being at rest;—[see 12: 22–25] and therefore are called the heads of the eagle.

24 verse, "Then saw I also, that two little feathers divided themselves from the six, and remained under the head that was upon the right side, for the four continued in their place." These three heads represent, as we shall see, the three last of the eight that are to rule their time over this government;—Adams being the 1st of the three last, and their reigning is represented as being on the right side. And at this point he mentions an important fact in the history of his reign: Two of the little feathers divide themselves from the six and remain under that head—i. e., two are to die during his reign. Was it fulfilled. Yes: the elder Adams and Thomas Jefferson, died July 4th 1826,—the remaining four continued in their place. See 12: 21, "And two of them shall perish the middle time approaching, four shall be kept until their end begin to approach, but two shall be kept unto the end."

25 verse, "And I beheld, and lo, the feathers that were under the wing thought to set up themselves, and to have the rule." [We would remark here that the expression "I beheld, and lo," is used in the same sense as "I saw," by the revelator John—i. e. as commencing a new vision, or another view of the same.] Now he says, he "beheld, and lo, the feathers under the wing thought in themselves to have the rule;" but by noticing the interpretation, [see 12: 20:] there are only eight spoken of that are to have their time and rule, and those who thought to set up themselves and to have the rule, are therefore not noticed in the interpretation in connection with the eight, but succeed them.

26 verse, "I beheld, and lo, there was one set up, but shortly it appeared no more." Harrison was set up; but ruled not; in one short month from the time of his inauguration, while as yet he had done nothing for his country, he passes away and is seen no more.

27 verse, "And the second was sooner away than the first." Who stands next to Harrison? O Reader, pause and reflect! After giving this remarkable circumstance, he introduces the history of the three heads.

28 verse, "And I beheld, and lo, the two that remained thought also in themselves to reign; (doubtless these are the two that were to remain unto the end—see 12: 20:)" and when they so thought, behold there awaked one of the heads that were at rest, namely it that was in the midst; for that was greater than the two other heads. Now as Adams reigned first, he is represented as the right head; Jackson reigned next and is the head in the midst, and Van Buren reigning the last of the three, is the left head.

Now when Adams, the right head, thought to reign a second term, he was defeated by Jackson, the left head giving him his support. Jackson having reigned, rests as the middle head of the eagle, and giving its influence in support of the left head, it reigns in its turn. And now having finished the history of the reign of the three heads, he adds in the 30th verse, "And then I saw that the two other heads were joined with it;" i. e. the three having finished their reign, rest together as the heads of the eagle. 31st verse, "And behold, the head was turned with them that were with it, and did eat up the two feathers that were under the wing that would have reigned:" The same spoken of in verses 25–27. The heads having ruled, now officiate as the heads of the eagle, and must swallow up or end all government; for there were but eight to have their time and rule. 32d verse, "But this head put all the earth [or land] in fear, and bear rule in it over all those that dwelt upon the earth, [or land] with great oppression; and it had the governance of the world more than all the wings that had been;" i. e. the eight. In this verse is given the character of the reign of the head that was in the midst.

33d verse, "And after this I beheld, and lo, the head that was in the midst suddenly appeared no more, like as the wings." See 12: 20. "And whereas thou sawest that the great head appeared no more, it signifieth that one of them shall die upon his bed, and yet with pain. 34th verse, "But there remained the two heads, which also in like sort ruled upon the earth, and over them that dwelt therein."

35th verse, "And I beheld, and lo, the head upon the right side devoured it that was upon the left side. See 12: 27, 28, "For the two that remained shall be slain with the sword. For the sword of the one shall devour the other; but at the last shall he fall through the sword himself." Here the reign of the other two heads is mentioned, but not their death as we see in 12: 21, last clause—"but two shall be kept unto the end." "The head upon the right side devoured the head upon the left;" i. e. the head upon the right side reigns first—that party prevails, or as in the interpretation, the sword of the one shall devour the other.

36th and 37th, "Then I heard a voice which said unto me, Look before thee, and consider the thing that thou seest. And I beheld, and lo, as it were a roaring lion chased out of the wood: and I saw that he sent out a man's voice unto the eagle, and said:—This voice is from the lion of the tribe of Judah." See 12: 30, 32. "The lion whom thou sawest rising up out of the wood and speaking to the eagle," &c, * * * "This is the anointed which the Highest hath kept for them." Who is the anointed but Christ? This same voice addressed the eagle at His first Advent, in the days of the 2d Cæsar. See verse 13. And now having finished the reign of the eight kings over this government, his voice, at his second Advent, is heard addressing the eagle, and declaring its end as follows:—

Verses 38–46, "Hear thou, I will talk with thee, and the Highest shall say unto thee, Art thou not it that remainest of the four beasts whom I made to rule in my world, that the end of their times might come through them? And the fourth came and overcome all the beasts that were past, & had power over the world with great fearfulness, and over the whole compass of the earth with much wicked oppression; and so long time dwelt he upon the earth with deceit. For the earth hast thou not judged with truth. For thou hast afflicted the meek, thou hast hurt the peaceable, thou hast loved liars, and destroyed the dwellings of them that brought forth fruit, and hast cast down the walls of such as did thee no harm. Therefore is thy wrongful dealing come up unto the Highest, and thy pride unto the Mighty. The Highest also hath looked upon the proud times, and behold they are ended, and his abominations are fulfilled. And therefore appear no more, thou eagle, nor thy horrible wings, nor thy wicked feathers, nor thy malicious heads, nor, thy hurtful claws, nor all thy vain body; that all the earth may be refreshed, and may return, being delivered from thy violence, and that she may hope for the judgment and mercy of him that made her." Here the voice of our God, addressing the eagle, describes the character of the government which it symbolizes, and declares its end. compare this description with Dan. 7: 7, 8, 23–25: 8: 9–12; 2d Thess. 2: 3, 4, and Rev. 13: 4–8, and no one can fail to see the identity of the eagle with Daniel's fourth beast and little horn that waxed exceeding great, Paul's man of sin, and John's blasphemous beast. After thus declaring its end and character, he closes by bringing to view the glorious restitution of all things, that the earth being delivered may receive the mercy of him that made it.

12: 1, "And it came to pass while the lion spake these words unto the eagle, I saw, and behold, the head that remained and the four wings appeared no more; and the two went unto it, and set themselves up to reign, and their kingdom was small and full of uproar. And I saw, and behold they appeared no more and the whole body of the eagle was burnt, so that the earth was in great fear. Now while the lion is addressing the eagle and declaring its end, [see 11: 36–46.] Esdras has his eye fixed upon the eagle, and sees the closing scenes of the government; the last head (V. B.) passing away, and the four wings mentioned in 11: 24, last clause; then he sees the two feathers, mentioned in 11: 26, 27, set up themselves, having a short reign and full of uproar, and the body (i. e. the subjects) of the eagle given to the burning flame. Compare with Daniel 7: 11, where we have brought to view the last or Papal form of Daniel's fourth beast, which existed until the judgment was set, and there he saw the beast slain and his body destroyed and given to the burning flame. Isa. 33: 12. "The people shall be as the burnings of lime—as thorns cut up shall they be burned in the fire."

Verses 3–9. Esdras now awakening from his trance seeks an interpretation of the vision, which is given him.

THE INTERPRETATION OF THE VISION.

10th, "And he said unto me, This is the interpretation of the vision:" (11 verse,) "The eagle whom thou sawest come up from the sea, is the kingdom which was seen in the vision of thy brother Daniel," See Dan. 7: 7, 23. 11th verse, "But it was not expounded unto him; therefore, now I declare it unto thee;" i. e. that part of the reign of the fourth beast directly connected with the first and second advent of the Lord Jesus Christ. The reign of the Cæsars, and that which remainest of the fourth kingdom—the government of the United States—was not given to Daniel. 13th verse, "Behold the days will come, and there shall rise up a kingdom upon the earth, and it shall be feared above all the kingdoms that were before it. Compare with 11: 30—43, Dan. 7: 7.

14th and 15th, "In the same shall twelve kings reign, one after another"—(the twelve Cæsars.) "Whereof the second shall begin to reign, and shall have more time than any of the twelve"—this is the reign of Augustus Cæsar. See exposition of 11, 13—17. 17th verse. "And this do the twelve wings signify that thou sawest. * * 17th verse, "As for the voice which thou heardest speak, and that thou sawest not to go from the heads, but from the midst of the body thereof, this is the interpretation, That after the time of that kingdom,—what kingdom? Why, the Roman, over which the twelve wings or twelve Cæsars had ruled.—Then, as in the vision, (see 11: 20,) he beheld, and lo, in process of time—what? Why, the last state of this kingdom—that which remainest, as mentioned in verse 39, passing what intervenes from the reign of the second Cæsar, during which Christ made his first advent, to the time of the rise of our government. "There shall arise great strivings, and it shall stand in peril of falling: nevertheless it shall not then fall, but shall be restored again to his beginning." Now observe, he treats it all as one kingdom, symbolized by the eagle, the propriety of which will be seen hereafter. "There shall be great strivings" in the last state of this kingdom.—From whence came our pilgrim fathers? England: and what is England but one of the great toes of Nebuchadnezzar's image, representing Rome in its divided state.

"There arose great strivings." What was the early history of this country? Let the history of the Indian wars at its first settlement, subsequently our revolutionary struggle, answer the question. Were we in peril of falling? Yes: and what under God saved us, when even a Washington almost despaired of success? See in the offing those vessels filled with valiant warriors, led on by a Lafayette. Where from? Why, the other big toe of Rome. And where are our subjects from? Made up from the ten toes of Rome in its divided state.

Observe the peculiar characteristic of this kingdom—the voice spake not from the heads, but from the body. Now what does the body of the beast symbolize? The subjects, (see Dan. 7:) denoting the government to be republican in its form. We speak through the ballot box, and the voice of the people is law. "Nevertheless it shall not then fall, but shall be restored again to its beginning. What was the beginning of Rome? A republic. "Its kings were chosen by the popular voice," says Goldsmith's Rome, chap. 2d, section 4th. "All things relative to peace or war, to the election of magistrates, and even to the choosing a king were confirmed by suffrages in their assemblies." No one can read the early history of the Roman government, but what will see, in many respects, a striking similarity between that and ours. See also Ferguson's History of the Roman Republic, Book 1st, chap. 1st.

19th verse, "Whereas thou sawest eight small under feathers sticking to the wings, this is the interpretation. (These are eight contrary feathers mentioned in 11: 3, 11.) 20th verse, "That in him there shall arise eight kings whose times shall be but small & their years swift." We have had eight kings or presidents, (as kings and rulers are the same,) who have ruled their time. But, says the objector, we have had nine rulers, and the tenth elected. True, and we find them brought to view in this vision But only eight, however, were to rule their time. The other two thought in themselves to reign; and one was set up, but shortly it appeared no more, and the second was sooner away than the first. See 11: 25—27. With reference to these kings, he says, "their times shall be but small and their years swift;" having reference to the period of their reign. Our presidential term is four years; none have ruled to exceed two terms.

21st verse, "Two of them shall perish the middle time approaching, four shall be kept until their end begin to approach, but two shall be kept unto the end." "The prophet there notices three important events connected with their history: 1st, "Two shall perish the middle time approaching." —Approaching what? The end; i. e. two of those eight kings shall die a few years past the middle from the commencement of their reign, which was in 1789, to the end of the government, which was fulfilled: John Adams and Jefferson both died July 4th, 1826, during the reign of J. Q. Adams, as stated in 11: 24—"Two of the little feathers divided themselves from the six, and remained under the head that was upon the right side." "Four shall be kept until their end begin to approach, and two shall be kept unto the end." The four are Madison, Adams, Jackson and Van Buren. Madison died in 1836; one is yet to die, to which reference will be had hereafter.

22d, verse, "And whereas thou sawest three heads resting, this is the interpretation." The three heads resting, are the three last of the eight that were to rule, and having retired, become the heads of the eagle and are said to rest.

23d—25th, "In his last days" (i. e. the last days of the eagle,) "shall the Most High raise up three kingdoms, or kings, the terms being synonymous in prophecy, see Dan. 7: 17, 23; and what settles the point that kings are meant here, is, one is to die upon his bed and with pain, see verse 26th, 'and renew many things therein; & they shall have dominion of the earth (or land,) and of those that dwell therein with much oppression, above all those that were before them." (i. e. of the eight,) "therefore are they called the heads of the eagle; for these are they that shall accomplish his wickedness, and shall finish his last end." Here is given the prominent feature of the reign of these three kings. "They renew many things and rule with great oppression." Has this been fulfilled? Robbins, in his "Outline of History," makes the following remark, p. 237.—"The presidency of Monroe, the predecessor of Adams, continued through two terms, and was an era of good feelings. Five states were added to the union during his administration; but the period of internal concord and good will soon came to a close. Party altercations arose in the choice of Mr. Monroe's successor, John Q. Adams, in 1825; and have continued with more or less violence under the administration of President Jackson." And may we not add, with propriety, until the present day!

Again; "many things were to be renewed."—What has been the history of our legislation during their reign? A continual change of policy. There has been a removal of the deposits, dissolution of the cabinet, sub-treasury, tariff, denial of the right of petition, a bankrupt law passed at one session and repealed by the same congress at its next session; with many other schemes pertaining to our financial operations, &c.

"Rule with much oppression," &c. Why did Harrison obtain such a popular vote? Because of the oppression of the people in consequence of the change of policy, and renewing of many things, and they hoped through him to obtain relief. And when the eyes of the whole nation were directed towards him, God, in a very signal manner, rebuked the nation by removing him, for he was soon to appear no more. See 11: 20.

26th verse, "And whereas thou sawest that the great head appeared no more, it signifieth that one of them shall die upon his bed and yet with pain." The great head is that designated as being in the midst, (see 11: 29,) or the second of the three last that were to rule. This head is to die upon his bed and yet with pain. All are acquainted with the precarious state of the ex-President's health and liability, from the nature of his disease, to drop away any moment. In a late political letter, dated Nov. 14 h, he observed that he had just had another hemorrhage, and was in great pain.

27th and 28th verses, "For the two that remain shall be slain with the sword. For the sword of one shall devour the other: but at the last shall he fall through the sword himself." This cannot mean they are to be slain by a literal sword; for these are to be kept unto the end, (see verse 21,) consequently must have reference to their political strifes. In the 11: 35, we are told "that the head upon the right side devoured it that was upon the left side." What are the facts? Now the head upon the right side is designated as the one that is first to rule of the three. We have here brought to view the first political strife between the heads. And inasmuch as he speaks of the government through the heads, the party symbolized by the right head predominates, and Adams is elected. "But at the last shall HE fall through the sword himself," which was effected by the predominance of the opposite party in the election of Jackson, and succeeded by Van Buren, which party continued in power until the close of the reign of the eight kings.

29th verse, "And whereas thou sawest two feathers under the wings passing over the head that is on the right side, (these are the two mentioned in 11: 25—27, and 12: 2,) 30th verse, "It signifieth that these are they whom the Highest hath kept unto their end"—i. e. the end of the government. "This is the small kingdom and full of trouble, as thou sawest," (see verse 2nd,) that is, their reign is to be short and full of trouble. For the term "small," has reference to the length of their reign. See verses 19 and 20. None will deny but that the reign of the first was short, being but one month from his inauguration; and the prophet says, (see 11: 27,) "The second was sooner away than the first." The future will determine this. As to the "uproar," what is the history of the two last presidential campaigns?—Nothing in the history of the world can begin to furnish a parallel. Have you forgotten the immense uproarous gatherings of the people and their gorgeous procesions? Are the log cabins and poles lost to the sight, or their songs and shouts to the ear?

31st verse, "And the lion whom thou sawest rising up out out of the wood and roaring, and speaking to the eagle, and rebuking her for her unrighteousness with all the words which thou hast heard;" 32d verse, "This is the Anointed which the Highest hath kept for them (plural) and for their wickedness unto the end; He shall reprove them, and upbraid them with their cruelty." This voice, we see, is none other but the anointed son of David, the Lion of the tribe of Judah, speaking to the eagle—i. e. its body, which symbolizes the subjects; for all those parts which symbolized its rulers have passed away, and the subjects are now rebuked and upbraided for their cruelty, and their end is to be burned. See verse 3d, "For the Lord shall be revealed from heaven in flaming fire, taking vengeance on the wicked." And says Isa. 33: 12, "And the people shall be as the burnings of lime; as thorns cut up shall they be burned in the fire."

"He shall reprove them and upbraid them for their cruelty." How signally has God rebuked this nation; but they repent not, nor humble themselves before him. Never, in the history of the world, has God given such manifest tokens of his displeasure as to this nation; but they pause not, nor consider. Let us call to remembrance a few of those tokens of displeasure. The following we copy from the Washington Globe. The Editor says,

"That while Mr. Webster was making his first speech, with the assurance of a man in power, he brought up the subject of the tariff; he was listened to with deep attention, and he had scarcely taken his seat when the golden eagle, which is placed with the arms of our country above the chair of the Vice President, let fall the scroll inscribed with the motto of the Union—'E Pluribus Unum.' Soon after this, the grand chandelier, which was manufactured in Massachusetts at an expense of $5,000 for the purpose of lighting the House of Representatives fell down and crushed many of the seats of the members under it. And on the same day that the scroll fell, the arm of the female figure which represents the goddess of Liberty; and stands in front of the capitol, broke off, and came tumbling down with our glorious constitution to its pedestal, where it remains. In Roman times, these incidents would be looked upon as portentous."

Another political paper, friendly to the administration, says, "That when the late chief magistrate of the nation set out for the capitol, an earthquake shakes the ground. He crosses the mountains and arrives at Baltimore, and an explosion of the banks in that city (Philadelphia, the 'great regulator of the currency,' taking the lead,) astites him! During the imposing celebration at his inauguration, in a style of gorgeousness which royalty itself might envy, a cord stretched across the broad avenue leading from the Presidential mansion to the capitol, with the banners of the several States, breaks in the centre, and the State emblems, dividing to the north and the south, and thrown upon the ground, and dragged in the mire." The following incidents have also appeared in the newspapers:—"It is said that a fine portrait of Mr. Harrison, taken at considerable expense, and placed in one of the public halls at Washington, about the same time, fell from its position to the floor, breaking in pieces the glass and the frame."

"One of the stirrup irons of the saddle upon which Washington rode during the revolutionary war, and which had been kept in a good state of preservation, quit its hold, and came tumbling to the floor." And the mysterious providence, in the very sudden and unexpected death of the President, an event which clothed the whole nation in mourning, should teach us that God has a controversy with man." And the liberty bell, which was a most perfect specimen of bell metal, and which for more than 70 years has remained perfectly sound, yet when tolled at the death of Harrison, was so cracked as to destroy its sound.—The Steamer President which sailed for England with the news of Harrison's Inauguration, has never been heard of since. On board the Steamer Princeton, in a moment two members of our cabinet, Gilman, and Upshur, were launched into eternity. Thrice within three years has the funeral procession moved from the President's house, the last time with five coffins in its train. Within three years, a President, President's wife and one half of a cabinet have gone from time into eternity. We might mention many more incidents of a similar character that have transpired within a short time, which to my mind are evident tokens of God's displeasure, and clearly indicating that God has a controversy with us as a nation.

In view of these things is it not time to pause and consider? Should not the people of America inquire with the prophet, "Is there not a cause." But instead of this we see a blindness to these tokens and a hardness unequaled in the history of nations. Says Kendall in his 'Expositor,' a political Paper, speaking of the state of things that has existed in our nation for the last four years—"crimes unprecedented in number and unequaled in atrocity filled every section of our country with horrors exhibiting a hardened barbarity in their details only to be exceeded in the bosoms of demons from the burning pit." Is it so? Is this the state of things in our land? Who can deny it? And yet we discover no symptoms of repentance and humility of souls before God. What can we look for but the wrath of an angry God to be revealed against us.

33. "For he shall set them alive before him in judgment and shall rebuke them and correct them," (i. e. the subjects.) We are here evidently brought down to the sitting of the Ancient of days in judgment. The personal advent of our Lord Jesus Christ and the judging of the quick and dead & destruction of this nation as that which remainest of the fourth beast of Daniel, synchronizing with the time of trouble spoken of in Dan. 12: 1. "When Michael shall stand up the great prince which standeth up for his people, and at which time there shall be a time of trouble such as never was since there was a nation even to that same time, and then shall thy people be delivered, every one which shall be written in the book."

34. For the rest of my people shall he deliver with mercy, those that have been preserved upon my borders, and He shall make them joyful until the coming of the day of Judgment, whereof I have spoken unto thee from the beginning." There is a remnant then, preserved upon the borders. Yes, bless the Lord. "The little flock"—to whom it is said—"Fear not for it is your Father's good pleasure to give you the kingdom." "He will make thee joyful until the coming of the day of Judgment," for they have obeyed the injunction of the Savior, "when ye see these things begin to come to pass look up and lift up your heads for your redemption draweth nigh." And they shall say in that day, "Lo, this is our God; we have waited for Him and He will save us: this is the Lord: we have waited for Him, we will be glad and rejoice in His salvation.

35. "This is the dream that thou sawest, and and these are the interpretations."

36. "Thou only hast been meet to know this secret of the highest." You will perceive that in this vision is presented that which remainest of the 4th beast and pertaining to its last days as promised to Esdras in the last verse of the 10th chapter. "And so shall the Highest show thee visions of the high things (or as in margin, 'the last things') which the Most High will do unto them that dwell upon the earth in the last days." Having reference to this government, which we see clearly is the main object of the vision and which it is a striking fact has never been revealed to any other prophet.

37. "Therefore write all these things that thou hast seen in a book and hide them." Has this been fulfilled? Yes, as effectually as though buried in a cave of the Rocky mountains. I recollect when about to lecture in a place on this subject a few days since, before proceeding to the place of worship I asked the ministering brother who had labored there for one year nearly, if the bible on their desk contained the Apocrypha, and he was unable to tell, and actually carried his own to be certain of having one to use. But how hid? Why placed in the Apocrypha, the meaning of which term is to hide or conceal. See Relig. Ency. Article—Apocrypha.

38. "And teach them to the wise of the people, whose hearts thou knowest may comprehend and keep these secrets." Who are the wise of the people? The same as spoken of in v. 34th as being made "joyful until the coming of the day of judgment." And this is one of the truths calculated to comfort them, for says Dan. 12: 10, 'The wise shall understand, but the wicked shall do wickedly, and none of the wicked shall understand," The heart of the wise man shall discern both time and judgment. And we believe God has designed this truth for our present exigency, & therefore it has been concealed as intimated by the prophet in ver. 42. "For of all the prophets thou only art left us, as a cluster of the vintage, and as a candle in a dark place, and as a house or ship preserved from the tempest." We have long been feasting upon the rich clusters of the vintage. A famine succeeds—not of bread, but of hearing the words of the Lord—when lo, the last of all the prophets appears, and presents to our famished souls a cluster rich and fair, the last of the vintage on which to feed until we land on Canaan's shore and pluck ambrosial fruit in the paradise of our God. And we believe it is all we shall need if our interpretation of the vision be correct, we see there is a mere title unfulfilled and in this respect synchronizes with other portions of scripture. In the parable of the ten virgins we see the last event is now fulfilling. The foolish virgins have gone to buy oil, and what next? The bridegroom cometh! Be joyful, ye saints, for behold your God cometh, yea and with a recompense, and will save you.

The Vision of the Eagle.

This article will be read with interest by every observer of the signs of the present times. If it becomes a settled matter that the 2d Book of Esdras is Divinely inspired, it is certain that frequent "reference is made" by "the Prophets to this Government;" for there is much in the Scriptures which goes to corroborate his testimony on this point. We shall probably give our readers another article next week that may, by the blessing of God, throw further light upon this subject.

A communication has been received from Bro. Philip H. Hough, of Toronto, Canada West; on "the time of the Advent." It will be noticed in its turn.

☞ Bro. J. B. Cook, lectured at the Tabernacle on Sabbath last, in the afternoon and evening, and also on Monday evening. I have taken down the outlines of several of his discourses for publication, but in consequence of the long article in this number, they are deferred.

Bro. Cook leaves for Hamilton O., on Tuesday.

☞ I have not yet received one dollar, with which to pay for the present number of our paper; which will again remind our subscribers of the necessity of punctuality in their remittances, if they wish the paper punctually to visit them.

The Life of William Hayden.—Proposals for the publication of a work under this title, are before me. To contain 150 pages duodecimo—with the likeness of the author, &c.; price 50 cents.

William Hayden, is a man of color, and from a personal acquaintance with him, I should think, a man of deep piety. From accounts received from his own lips, his life is one of those rare developments of the providential dealings of our Heavenly Father, which lead men to wonder, if not adore, his goodness.

LETTERS.

A number of interesting communications are on hand, all of which would be published with pleasure; but for the want of room.

Bro. J. G. Butt's article will be noticed as soon as time and room permits.

Bro. J. H. Thomas, gives a brief but interesting account of a meeting held at Liberty, Montgomery Co. Ohio, Jan. 10th 1845. "The members of the Church were revived—Backsliders were reclaimed—Luke-warm souls aroused and brought to action—Sinners convicted, and I trust converted: Said to be about twenty-eight in number.

Bro. Thomas's explanation of the business of the paper is perfectly satisfactory. He will excuse my previous suggestions, as I was directed by the mail book, upon which the correction had not been made.

Bro. J. H. Kent, has given an interesting account of things where he has been laboring at the East. He closes by saying,

"Lest I should not have another opportunity of speaking a word of encouragement to the dear brethren in Cincinnati, Newport and elsewhere in that region, with whom in time past, I have enjoyed so many precious seasons, in laboring for God—believing his Word, and looking for the glorious appearing of his Son from heaven, to change us from mortal to immortality, in a moment, and take us up to glory; I will therefore improve this; desiring that great grace may abound to them all. Dear brethren, cast not away your confidence—quit yourselves like men—gird on the whole armor—be strong; yea, be strong.—Fight manfully for Christ—overcome every day.—The last enemy will soon be slain—Victory is yours.—A robe unspotted—pure—surpassing the sun for brightness.—A harp of gold celestial—a crown of glory—unfading glory—honor—immortality—eternal life—an eternal weight of glory, Jesus, will soon, to all that overcome, impart. Be faithful—overcome, and by the grace of God, I will meet you in the Kingdom."

I think Bro. Kent's labors are needed in this section, as there are many little bands that need comforting with the word of Life, and the "laborers are few."

Letters and Receipts.

Bro. J. B. COOK.

CONCLUSION OF THE EXTRACTS FROM BRO. COOK'S DISCOURSE AT THE TABERNACLE, JAN. 5TH, 1845: CONTINUED FROM THE "W. M. CRY" OF JAN 9TH.

As Moses, with all the Host's of Israel were brought out of Egypt, on the very day appointed, so God's people will be gathered to the land "promised to the Fathers" on the appointed day, for "faithful is he that promised who also will do it."—The day appointed for Daniel to stand in his lot; for there is a lot for Daniel, and a lot for David, and a lot for all the Patriarchs and Prophets, and for every lover of Jesus.

Allusion might have been made to the light we now have, that the termination of the prophetic periods is yet future; but this I will defer till another occasion. I know it is supposed the time has gone by; and opposers are exclaiming, Will you give it up now?—Give up what? Why, that Christ is coming. No!! Why not,—you know he did not come when you expected! Very true; and that is the reason we will not "give it up." Had he came on the tenth day, we were prepared to "give it up" then—to give up all we had on earth, and receive an unfading crown. Well, says the opposer, Confess that you were deluded! We confess that we were disappointed, but to confess that we were deluded, any more than the children of Israel were, in being for a time, unexpectedly detained in Egypt, we cannot do.

Again, we are told, that it is indeed singular for us, so obstinately to maintain our position: But is it not more singular that men should be so deluded as to hope for God's favor, while they treat lightly the great subject of Christ's Second Coming? None can be deluded in looking for Christ, and looking for him now. The fact of his coming is settled. "In like manner" as he went up, so he will come—to raise the dead and change his living saints. Eighteen hundred years ago it was said, "David hath not yet ascended into heaven," and what was true of David was true of Abel—Noah—Abraham, and a host of others, who died in faith, not "having received the promises, but seen them afar off embraced them;" and can we now do less?

Pharaoh, would not let God's people go until compelled so to do: Neither will the old Dragon now let us depart until he is chained. God preserved Moses until the proper time came, and the men of Egypt that sought his life, were dead. He had no means of knowing the disappointments and trials to which he was to be subjected;—The plan of Israel's deliverance was not his,—it belonged to God: and God protected him till his work was done.

As the great work of the final deliverance of God's people—now begun; is a work of his own, and we are his servants; it remains for us to labor—"stand still," or "go forward" as he shall direct, and not "murmur" as did some in the wilderness, lest we should "fall after the same example of unbelief." When we are subjected to as many disappointments as Moses was, our faith will be well divested of its dross.

It is faithfully recorded that they "that are without chastisement are bastards and not sons"—O what fearful signs of bastardy, are those with which we are every where surrounded! Where there is no chastisement—no affliction: there is no clear evidence of being a child of God.

Now is our time of Patience; and they that are patient will not get tired of waiting—neither will they rest "day nor night until HE make Jerusalem a praise in the earth."

Now, also, is our time to pray "Thy Kingdom come." The close of every prophetic period in the past, has been signalized with unusual prayerfulness on the part of the people of God.

Bro. Cook, here introduced a number of instances to prove the last proposition, dwelling particularly upon the case of Moses—Elijah, and Daniel, with which remarks he closed his morning discourse.

AFTERNOON DISCOURSE. SUBJECT, THE PERSONALITY OF CHRIST'S SECOND COMING.

Christ's Second Coming is a real—personal—visible coming; and therefore we have been right, and still shall be right in looking for him.

First, I will remark, that if we have any occasion to doubt the truthfulness of the Bible—that the words of God mean just what they say, we also might have the same reason to doubt the claims of any Divinely authorized exposition he might give us. It is a resting upon the plain letter of God's word, that imparts a faith which enables us to feel the value of that word. O what a majesty is there in the language of the blessed Bible, when divested of the "spiritualisms," and "sackcloth" coverings, which has been palmed upon it by the "sleight of men."

"Let not your heart be troubled: ye believe in God, believe also in me. In my Father's house are many mansions: If it were not so, I would have told you. I go to prepare a place for you. And if I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again and receive you unto my myself; that where I am, there ye may be also." John 14: 1-3.

If we are told, this is a spiritual coming, let it be remembered, that there is another promise of the coming of the Spirit, in verses 16, 17, separate and distinct from this.

Again, "Ye men of Galilee, why stand ye gazing up into heaven? this same Jesus which is taken up from you into heaven, shall so come in like manner—as ye have seen him go into heaven," Acts 1: 11; This promise is also separate from the promise of a "Spiritual Coming" plainly made in the 5th verse of the same chapter.

Barron Stowe, has used a text in this connexion, as the occasion of a discourse against the "evils of Millerism"—which discourse contains but one other passage of scripture, from the beginning, to its end. The language which he once used, never applied better than to this effort of his—viz. He has used this text (ver. 7) for a "percussion cap" with which to "fire off his big oration."

Leaving human schemes and speculations, turn again to 2 Tim. 4: 1, "I charge thee therefore before God, and the Lord Jesus Christ, who shall judge the quick and the dead at his appearing and his Kingdom."

Such language as the above has been applied to Christ's Spiritual Coming in revivals of religion, &c. Most of our opposers believe that the 24th chapter of Matthew refers to the destruction of Jerusalem, in connexion with the Second (Spiritual) Coming of Christ. Let such look at some of the following inconsistencies involved in such a faith. "Watch therefore" lest the destruction of Jerusalem come upon you as a thief. "Ye know neither the day nor the hour" when Jerusalem shall be destroyed—as though it must be done in less than an hour, &c., or "if they say unto you" Jerusalem is to be destroyed "in the desert," or in the "secret chamber," "believe it not." Who teaches the duty of watching and praying, lest a great revival of religion should come suddenly upon them! Or "If thou shalt not watch" I will send thee a revival of religion,—or "take heed, and be ye also ready, for as a snare shall" a revival of religion come upon you!

Again, we are told, Since Christ did not come at the time you expected, to be honest, you'l give it all up now, and agree with us that Christ comes at death.

Look at this requirement! "If they shall say unto you, Behold, he [death] is in the desert; go not forth!"—do not believe any man that tells you death is in the desert. Again, "if they say unto you * * * Behold, he [death] is in the secret chamber, believe it not." How incongruous are such attempts at reasoning. Or if they tell you the Spirit is in the wilderness, or secret chamber, believe it not. Is not, rather, the secret chamber the very place, above all others, that men choose, in which to die? and does not the Spirit there do its work?

The same remarks will apply to the claims that Christ comes in his providences.

In Luke 14: we have a parable of the "nobleman who went into a far country to receive for himself a kingdom and to return;" in which parable the relation of Christ to his Church as its Head, is clearly presented: But modern Theology teaches that the Church is to take the kingdom without Christ: Or in other words, the Body is to Reign without a Head.

Those that hold the doctrine of a Spiritual Coming, exclusively, must of necessity teach that none but unconverted sinners have a right to the Lord's Supper; for in 1 Cor. 11: 26, it is said, "As often as ye eat this bread, and drink this cup, ye do show forth the Lord's death till he come." If this coming be spiritual,—at conversion; then this healthful ordinance must be dispensed with, as soon as the Spirit comes to a man.

The order of the Second Advent is clearly presented in Heb. 9: 28, "Christ was ONCE offered to bear the sins of many; and unto them that look for him shall he appear the SECOND time without sin unto salvation." The second is the next after the first.

If Christ comes at the destruction of Jerusalem—at death—at revivals—by providences, &c., some one of these must be his second coming, for there are no intermediate comings between the first and second, as is seen by the last quoted text. Paul can explain the circumstances in connexion with the second coming, 1 Thess. 4: "For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the arch-angel, and with the trump of God: and the dead in Christ shall rise first." At his second coming, the dead arise.

Again, Acts 3: 20, 21, "And he shall send Jesus Christ which before was preached unto you: whom the heaven must receive, until the times of restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy Prophets since the world began."

It is a point settled by the word of God, without our help, that the second coming of Christ is personal,—real—and visible; and has not yet taken place, for when it does, there is to be a "restitution of all things;"—all will know it, and men will no longer be duped—deluded, or led astray with "Lo here, or Lo there" on this subject.

There has been much said about the "ignorance" of Millerites, but in all my travels, I have never found one so ignorant but what he could count two, and furthermore, perfectly understood that two, always comes first after one; while many Doctors and learned men have got into a snarl about the second Advent—putting in between the first and second; from one, to scores, of comings of Christ; thus confusing themselves and others: and all because they seem not to have learned, that two, always comes first after one.

Here, some objections were answered, founded on Luke 17: 20.

This subject is made perfectly clear. The speedy personal coming of Jesus, cannot be controverted without taking Infidel ground. He says, "I will come again." "Again," in this connexion, must mean the second time; because he utters this promise at his first Advent. This is sustained by the teachings of the sacred Supper;—"Ye show his death till he come." His death at the first Advent, is thus exhibited till his second coming. These texts are confirmed by the uniform language of our Lord when speaking of the "coming of the Son of man." It is spoken of as one—in the future, not as several.

All this testimony harmonizes with the work of the typical High Priest. In the beginning of the Gospel day, he offered himself once: at its close, he comes in glory to bless those who wait for him. Now to bring out and put in the Key-stone of this great arch spanning the Gospel dispensation, the holy apostle calls this coming, "the second time." It is not the third, much less the fourth. Christ was once offered to bear the sins of many, and unto them who look for him, (as ancient Israel waited for the return and blessing of their High Priest) shall he appear the second time without sin unto salvation.

His coming is at the destruction of "the man of sin," as well as the final salvation of those that "look for him" in the Resurrection.

To preclude the possibility of this "coming" being any thing else but personal, it is written, "He shall send Jesus Christ which before was preached unto you, whom the heaven must receive till the times of restitution." Mark! He shall send JESUS CHRIST. Is this a glorious administration of Providence? Then "Jesus Christ" signifies a glorious administration of providence. Can it mean the ample out pouring of the Spirit? Then the name "Jesus Christ" denotes an ample out pouring of the Spirit. If you insert the idea of Jerusalem's destruction, or death, or conversion; then you are guilty of equal absurdity.

The glorious name of JESUS, does not denote death, or the destruction of Jerusalem, or an ample out pouring of the Spirit. No! No!! It is the name of Him who is also "The Coming One." When the Eternal Father shall thus send Jesus Christ, it will be his second coming, because his first Advent had then passed; and the next to the first is the second. This second coming, which is for salvation in the Resurrection, must be personal; because there is no number between the first and the second; and it is written, "He shall send Jesus Christ." This, all must allow, is the designation of the Son of God. The second, all must admit to be the next after the first.

SABBATH EVENING, JAN. 5TH.

The discourse this evening was founded principally on Rev. 14: The substance of which is contained in a paper recently published in Cleveland, O., called "The Voice of the Fourth Angel."

Bro. Cook's health was such that he was unable to Lecture again until SABBATH P. M., JAN. 15TH.—TEXT, Gen. 13th CHAPTER.

The substance of the chapter was stated, nearly as follows.

Ver. 1–3. Abraham went into Egypt from necessity; but took the earliest opportunity to leave it: Thus setting an example for the Christian sojourner in this, enemy's land.

Ver. 4. The motive of Abraham, in removing from Egypt, was, that he might draw near to God, and enjoy his smiles aside from the noise and strife of wickedness.—So Moses "chose rather to suffer affliction with the people of God, than to enjoy the pleasures of sin for a season."

Ver. 5–7. The strife between the servants of Abraham and Lot, and the course pursued by Abraham, affords another instructive lesson.

Ver. 8, 9. The disposition to strive, was on the part of Lot; and Abraham had the power to put him down, but did not do it. His faith got him the victory, for he chose rather to suffer than to "strive."

Every man that has Abraham's faith, will prefer suffering to sin. See Matt. 5: 39, "I say unto you, that ye resist not evil: but whosoever shall smite thee on thy right cheek, turn to him the other also." Where in our world, at the present day, is Religion measured by such a standard? There is no true religion, without these principles wrote upon the heart.

Ver. 10–13. Here is the statement, not of Lot's necessity, but of his choice. So little concerned was he about the Sodomitish practices of the people whither he had determined to go, that he forsook his friends—left the society of Abraham, in whom the promises of God centered, and went into a land that God never promised to either him or Abraham.

Now, look at the case of Abraham, after Lot was separated from him. The presence of the King of kings was with him:—angels ministered unto him. This was the result of the faith by which he overcame, in refusing to strive with Lot. An example of a still higher character is given us in the case of our Saviour, who when he overcame, was in like manner visited by angels. And every Christian, when he overcomes temptation, beholds the glory of God by an eye of faith.

Abraham saw that Lot felt wrong, but denied himself; and if there was any choice in the pasture, he gave him the best; still God saw that he was amply provided for—his wants were all supplied.

God will give his people just as much of this world as they need, but avoiding all the unrighteous claims that may be urged upon us, we must deny ourselves, feeling that God will judge.

The great moral lesson to be learned from this chapter, is, avoiding the enticements presented to our minds by this Sodomitish world.

Lot, first, "lifted up his eyes and beheld all the plain:" It looked desirable, and he began to reason with himself.—This plain affords better pasture than the place where I am,—I shall raise fairer cattle, and more butter by going thither, than by remaining with Abraham:—There are advantages to be derived from going there that I cannot have here; &c.

He next "journied east" and "pitched his tent toward Sodom." In separating himself from Abraham, he first looked, then "pitched" toward it, and finally got into it, and next, gave his daughters in marriage to the men of Sodom.

The progress of sin is down hill. He probably did not intend to go so far, but when once fairly under way "toward" it, he did not stop until he was in their midst.

Following a course of human reasoning, he yielded to the allurements of the world. Desiring to gain more of earthly goods and live better, he not only lost his all of the world, but came well nigh losing his soul.

Not so with Abraham. He had chosen God for his portion, and would not "strive." He had the laws of God, and the privileges of his altar, which he preferred to every earthly consideration.

All who love this world are guilty of Lot's Sodomitish deed. On the one hand we have placed before us the Laws and promises of God, with all their privileges;—on the other, the world with its privileges: Follow the latter and your soul is endangered:—Submit to the former, and you are safe. A choice must be made, for you cannot enjoy both.

Lot's choice was against light and knowledge. He knew, or had the means of knowing the evil consequences of his course. Though connected with the people of God, and with them entitled to all the privileges of the altar, his moral relish led him to "love this present world."

If you will avoid falling into sin, follow the standard laid down in Matt. 6: 19–22. "Lay not up for yourselves treasures upon earth," &c. For if you begin to cherish Lot's feelings, contrary to the experience of all God's servants, and contrary to his moral code, that moment you will begin to fall; for "they that will be rich, fall into temptation, and a snare, and into many foolish and hurtful lusts, which drown men in destruction and perdition." 1 Tim. 6: 9.

The consequences of Lot's course. He lost, not only his worldly goods in the fires of Sodom, but lost also almost all his family—his children, all but "his two daughters" were consumed, and his companion was left—a mournful monument of his, as well as her own folly. This was the result of his forsaking the covenant God made with Abraham, and mixing with adulterers, and adulteresses.

"Know ye not that the friendship of the world is enmity with God? Whosoever therefore will be a friend of the world, is the enemy of God," James 4: 4; How many here have seen and felt the force of this language? How many here have been brought to see the covenant God made with Abraham, while the rectitude of your course, for a while, gave evidence that you loved that covenant; and whose course now shows, that you love the world, or like Lot, are leaning toward Sodom.

Are you not told, "Love not the world, neither the things that are in the world,"? and that, "If any man love the world the love of the Father is not in him."?

The reasons for this command may be found in Luke 4: 5, 6, "And the devil, taking him up into a high mountain, showed unto him all the kingdoms of the world in a moment of time. And the devil said unto him, all this power will I give thee, and the glory of them: for that is delivered unto me, and to whomsoever I will, I give it."

Is this claim of the devil, to the world, with all its governments, acknowledged? See John 14: 30, "Hereafter I will not talk much with you: for the Prince of this world cometh, and hath nothing in me," John 12: 31, "Now is the judgment of this world: now shall the Prince of this world be cast out." Eph. 2: 2, "Wherein in time past ye walked according to the course of this world, according to the Prince of the power of the air, the spirit that now worketh in the children of disobedience."

The devil is the god of this world, 2 Cor. 4: 2-4, "But if our gospel be hid, it is hid to them that are lost: in whom the god of this world hath blinded the minds of them that believe not, lest the light of the glorious gospel of Christ, who is the image of God, should shine unto them." The third ver. is properly rendered, "Hid by the things that are perishing." We have, then, the authority of Christ and his apostles, that the devil's claim to this world, under its present existing governments, and under the "curse," is a claim conceded by the Almighty. This is a fact overlooked by the mass that profess love to Christ.

Lot was blinded to the privilege of being with Abraham. Those that do not prize the society of God's people, that are such in reality, generally throw themselves into the midst of a society where the temptations to sin are overwhelming.

Another evil of his was, he went to hold his property without recognizing God. Any that do this, follow Satan, who is a usurper, and also sustain Lot in departing from Abraham.

As a contrast with Lot's course, look at the following language, John 16: 33, "These things have I spoken unto you that in me ye might have peace. In the world ye shall have tribulation, but be of good cheer: I have overcome the world." Read also Heb. 12: 1-6. 1 Pet. 4: 1, "For as much then as Christ hath suffered for us in the flesh, arm yourselves likewise with the same mind: for he that hath suffered in the flesh hath ceased from sin."

How few are willing to have the sign of affliction! As Lot, no doubt did, so do they, think it strange that God's people should be afflicted. He considered, no doubt, that he had the advantage of Abraham—better soil, pasture, &c., and looked upon Abraham's course as singular because he would not go with him: But "there is a way that seemeth right unto a man, but the end thereof is the way of death."

Abraham chose the way of God, which is to be humble: Keep down! The mast head is not the place for safety in a storm. If you would avoid the danger of being thrown overboard, keep down.

LOT'S EXPERIENCE, AFTER HE SEPARATED FROM ABRAHAM.

"His righteous soul was vexed from day to day with their unrighteous deeds." He is said to be "Righteous," and such he was, compared with the Sodomites: and from which we may also infer that he retained his profession, and perhaps the form of godliness.

He did not at first, remove into the City of these "filthy dreamers," but the probable idea of a better market, and other advantages, led him to adopt such a course. This prepared the way for his willingness to consent to the unholy alliance of his daughters with its inhabitants. He thought to gain the world, but lost his wife and the most of his family, and was himself saved "so as by fire." Read the account in Gen. 19: 12-17. So torpid had he become, that he could not go out of Sodom—he could barely be brought out: God had to send his angels and lead him out; and when they had led him out they set him down.

Afraid to fly to the mountain, he plead for the little city of Zoar: And when he had got there, he was afraid to stay. Having no faith in God, he went and dwelt in a cave.

The fate of Sodom, is the doom of this world. Luke 17: 28; "Likewise also as it was in the days of Lot; they did eat, they drank, they bought, they sold, they planted, they builded; But the same day that Lot went out of Sodom, it rained fire and brimstone from heaven and destroyed them all: Even thus shall it be when the Son of man is revealed."

O who, is pursuing Lot's course? Where is there an Abraham to intercede for you and bring you out? Pitch your tent toward Sodom at this late day, and who will bring you out? Is it not rather to be feared that you will perish. Seeing the doom of this world is such—"briers and thorns whose end is to be burned," we should overcome the world—ask for nothing in Sodom, but look for an "enduring substance" in a "better country."

Look at the governments of the present world—symbolized by beasts; and properly so, for they are beastly governments. Their down hill progress is fairly represented by the character of the beasts they have chosen for their emblems. From the Lion of ancient Babylon, they have finally come down to the dunghill fowl and the coon—the meanest of all beasts, that in the light of open day, slinks away into a hollow log.

Let them turn to the right hand or to the left, or go which way they will, yet will not I refrain to cry against the Sodomitish practices, of this Sodomitish world; and show its coming doom at the coming of my Lord. This is my work, to cry "Thy Kingdom come!" The great "day of God is near and hasteth greatly."

Abraham had a vision of angels—one of them the angel of the covenant:—Lot at the commencement of his wanderings was taken a prisoner:—He gave his daughters to strangers, and received the visits of the sons of Sodom.

Lot was finally delivered at the overthrow of Sodom in answer to the prayers of Abraham. See Gen. 19: 29; "And it came to pass, when God destroyed the cities of the plain, that God remembered Abraham, and sent Lot out of the midst of the overthrow, when he overthrew the cities in the which Lot dwelt." Here reference is had to Abraham's intercessions in chap. 18: 23–32.

Look at the different positions occupied by Abraham and Lot, at the time of the destruction of the cities of the plain. Lot, in haste, fleeing from the threatening storm—leaving houses, goods, and children—his wife struck down by God's judgment—stripped of almost his earthly all, is thus left in a state of mourning and lamentation. Abraham, entirely free from all intercourse with Sodom—owning nothing there, and desiring nothing there—stood upon a lofty eminence of his unshaken mountain, and beheld the smoke of the whole country below him;—himself secure; and among all that was lost he had nothing to mourn.

And here let me enquire, if the soul that has been cut loose from every Sodomitish lust—the soul that has learned to love nothing but with reference to the speedy coming and Kingdom of his Lord,—does not enjoy the secure eminence of Abraham? Yes, verily! The true Second Advent believer is planted upon an eminence that overlooks the world. The breezes of the morning cheer, and the sun's declining rays smile with approbation:—Like Abraham above the plains of Sodom, they'l see a burning world. Like Abraham, they will know when it is coming, as I will endeavor to show this evening.

Children that are faithful and obedient, imitate the example of their parents; and Paul, who was a true child of Abraham, tells us, that it was for the "hope and resurrection of the dead," that he was called in question by his accusers, (Acts 23: 6.) This was also the hope of the Prophets, (Acts 24: 14, 15.) It was also the promise made to the fathers, of whom Abraham was one, (Acts 24: 6,7.) See also, Titus 2: 11-14. The hope of Paul and Titus, was the hope of Abraham, and is also the hope of the Christian. Rom. 4: 13-15, 18-23. When this hope is realized, the inheritors of the groaning creation will be "delivered from the bondage of corruption," and not before. Not a son or daughter of Adam that has departed from this faith, but what has lost the Christian's hope. See Col. 1: 21-23; Heb. 10: 37-39, &c. "For yet a little while, and he that shall come will come, and will not tarry. Now the just shall live by faith: but if any man draw back, my soul shall have no pleasure in him." "Live by faith" in what? The Lord is coming!! "Draw back" from what? The great truth that the Lord is coming!—Those that "draw back" pursue Lot's course, and like him "mind earthly things."

"Our conversation is in heaven"—we are dead to the world, and "our hope is hid with Christ in God; and when he who is our life shall appear, then shall we appear with him in glory."

The Spirit of God in men, now, will lead them to act just as Paul did, who groaned for the redemption of his body, or like John, who cried, "Come Lord Jesus, and come quickly!" It will also lead them to obey the directions in 1 Thess. 4: 18, to "Comfort one another" with these truths of Christ's appearing to deliver his saints.

Lot dreamed of peace—Go with him and you see your fate. Abraham saw the gathering storm, and prayed for the deliverance of his friends.

Let me here bring a test for those that may have departed from the faith of the soon coming of our Lord.

Have you enjoyed the peace of mind that you did before? Have you not been afflicted and distressed in mind? You are leaning toward Sodom. You tell us by way of excuse, that you are commanded to "Occupy" till he comes. For who are you commanded to occupy? For the Lord; that at his coming he may receive his own with usury: and yet, like Lot, you have been occupying for yourself. My employment, say you, is a lawful one: So was Lot's; and Abraham brought no charge against him on this score. The sore of his heart was first seen in his disposition to strive—to find fault with Abraham. Is this course the one you have been pursuing toward your brethren? Beware! O beware!! You are fast leaning toward Sodom.

Abraham's faith preferred the altar of God with its privileges, to every worldly motive. So likewise, follow out the promises of God, and you will gain a height of moral eminence and excellence, fitting you for the companionship of angels.

The Lord is coming—speedily coming, the second time to all that look for him. (J. B. COOK

WESTERN MIDNIGHT CRY.

Cincinnati, Thursday, January 23, 1845.

THE TIME.

When the seventh month passed by, and we did not see our Lord as we had expected, we knew that the word of God had been given to us, as a "lamp to our feet, and a light unto our path," and furthermore, that we were exhorted to take heed to the "sure word of prophecy" "until the day dawn." So we again directed our attenion to the Bible—willing to feel our way in the dark the rest of the way to the Kingdom, if God had so ordered. But the more we searched, the more God manifested the truth of his declaration, that his word was a light.

Light began to break in upon our minds from various points. First, we saw that the periods beginning B. C. would be shortened just one year, by our present method of reckoning, which commences at the Christian era and counts back, as well as forward.

This gave us all the arguments for the whole of 1844 Jewish time, that our brethren had used for the whole of 1843, Jewish time.

We next saw that we could not have the type of the "Jubal trump" fulfilled, had God's people been delivered in the seventh month; for the Jubal trump sounded on the 10th day of the seventh month, in the forty-ninth year, the year preceding the Jubilee, when they were to return "every man to his possessions."

Had the captives been delivered on the tenth day, the Scripture would not have been fulfilled for they would have served only 49 years 7 months, and 10 days.

Again, we saw there must be a "Cry" that would arouse the slumbering virgins after they "went forth," and also, a seeking for oil—a separating, or turning back of a part of the virgins.

Furthermore, we saw there must be a time of "Patience" and a time of earnest interceding for the "Kingdom" to come—the reaping to take place, while our Saviour occupied the position mentioned in Rev. 4: 2; 14: 14; &c.

In the mean time, many of us saw some light on the twenty-fourth day of the ninth month, for which we were not more sorry, than we would be in a dark night, for the benefit of a dim light, in passing on our way, between two more brilliant ones.

Other light was, that as an honest belief in the teachings of the Bible had served to cut us loose from the world; the same truths were sufficient to keep us loose.

And as all admit, that we have received some light from that word, we surely thought there could be no harm in believing our path would be "as the shining light, that shineth more and more until the perfect day."

We also looked with much anxiety for the views of our brethren at the east; and when we read their letters, especially those of Bro. Miller, and Bro. F. G. Brown, in which they spoke with so much confidence of the "very little while" we now had to wait, our hearts were glad: But when we read their last letters in the Herald, in which they talk about "indefinite time" and "1847," although we loved the spirit of their letters, yet in spite of ourselves, they made us sad.

Brethren, while we have a lamp that gives light about our "feet," is it not rather dangerous to strain our eyes toward 1847, because chronologers say so?

May it not cause some that are now carefully watching their footsteps, to lift their heads so high, or be so "lifted up" that in an unguarded moment, they may step into the pit?

It seems to me we have nothing to do now, with periods about which chronologers have disputed. God has settled the chronology, by giving us the "Midnight Cry" before the "day dawns."

I know of but few advent believers in all this western section, but what are as decided believers in definite time as they ever have been: and I believe they are able to give the reasons of their hope, with arguments more clear, conclusive, and triumphant, than any with which the position of time has ever been defended.

What I mean by "definite time" in this place, is not a "day or hour" that we may reach with our present system of reckoning; but a small circle of a few weeks, or months at the outside.

The most of us are looking to the termination of the present Jewish year, for the time of deliverance: Some few think they can see as far as the next seventh month.

☞ The report of Bro. Cook's discourse on Sabbath evening Jan. 12th, will appear in our next. The language of these reports is probably varied in many places; but if the sense is in any way affected, Bro. Cook will please correct.

☞ The article mentioned in our last, throwing further light, upon this country being a subject of prophecy, could not be got ready for this number. We shall probably commence its publication next week.

THIS VOLUME.

Two numbers more will complete this volume of 13 numbers. Nothing having been said about the terms of the paper since it has been reduced to one half its former size, it may be proper here to state that but one half the former price will be charged. If two-thirds of our subscribers would pay for the paper, it would be sustained at this low price; but so far, not more than one out of five, have paid for this volume. Those that have had the paper since its commencement, should have paid us up to the close of this vol. $1.75, or 50 cts. per vol. 1, 2, and 3; and 25 cts. for vol. 4.

Those friends who do not want the paper, had better get their post master to order it discontinued before the commencement of vol. 5. And those who may wish to read it, but are unable to pay, are requested to make this fact known through the same medium.

We are drawing so near the "morning" that it is thought not inappropriate to change the name to "The Day Star."

THE FISH.

If our good brethren, who write long articles in the eastern papers, will give us the points in prophecy, of which the following account is a fulfillment, they will do us good; and themselves too; for they write like a man lost in the woods. ✂

"DESTRUCTION OF FISH ON THE COAST—ALARMING MORTALITY AMONG THEM.—We are sorry to hear that the mortality among the fish on our shores is spreading with alarming rapidity. The infected district already embraces the entire coast, from near the east end of Long Island to the capes of Virginia, extending out into the ocean for a distance of 1 to 3 miles. We learn from several intelligent citizens, some of them Sandy Hook Pilots and Captains of coasting vessels, that the shores of Long Island, New Jersey, and Delaware are lined with millions of dead fish, while thousands are found floating in every direction. The cause of this strange calamity is yet unexplained. It has been noticed that the water in the infected district is discolored, and looks blacker than the ordinary sea water. Immediately on entering the brown water, the fish are seized with convulsions, rise to the surface, and die in a few minutes. It seems to us that our scientific men should investigate this phenomenon as speedily as possible. Many persons fear that on the approach of summer, a pestilence may result from the putrifaction of the masses of dead fish already thrown upon the coast, while the loss and injury to our great shad fisheries, the season of which is approaching, may be very disastrous.

The great volume of fresh water from the Hudson and other rivers in this vicinity, seems to have kept the infected water of the ocean from entering our bays and harbors. Should the infection find its way into our bays and rivers, the results would be deplorable."—N. Y. Sun, of Jan. 10th.

Letter from Bro. P. H. Hough.

This letter on "the time of the Advent," referred to in our last, is not properly prepared for the press, and I therefore take the liberty of giving his argument in a condensed form, inasmuch as other valuable articles are crowded out, for the want of room.

Bro. H. says he spends his whole time in lecturing, and searching the Bible, particularly with regard to time. He knows the time of the Advent is fixed—that it is in the Bible, and that God will not refuse to let his children "understand" all that the Prophets have spoken.

He proves that the Bible chronology has not failed, so far as prophecy has been fulfilled.

First, by showing that the 65 years in Isa. 7: 8, beginning B. C. 742, (see margin) carry us to B. C. 677, (2 Chron. 33: 11;) the Bible date for the captivity of Manasseh, and the commencement of the Seven times.

Second; The 70 years of Jeremiah, chap. 25: 11; according to the Bible date commenced B. C. 606, and terminate B. C. 536.—Then refers to Ezra 1: 1--3, and the date in the margin as the proof that there was no failure.

Third, The 70 weeks of Daniel, begin B. C. 457, Dan. 9: 24; Ezra 7: 13; ending A. D. 33, Mark 15: 25.

"Here are three of the greatest Prophets, proving the chronology. Mr. Miller says, also, that the 70 years begin 606 B. C. (See Dan. 1: 2;) Take 606 from 2450, the length of the Jubilees, and you have 1844 in the fall, then add 1, which has been wrongfully counted in the beginning of the Era when Christ was born, and you have 1845. (See Clark, vol. 5, p. 806.) See also Blair's chronology, and P. H. Gosse's letter, published in the "Voice of Elijah."

"Did we not all expect the Lord last spring? and were we not all in darkness about the one year being counted between the Era's?

He here proves that the one year was counted. The argument has been so frequently given, and is so well understood that it is not necessary to repeat it.

"I have a chronology before me that says Nehemiah flourished in the the year B. C. 456; and Nehemiah and Ezra built the walls together, Neh. 8: 9; Likewise look at Ezra 10: 16, 17; see the margin 456; when they had separated themselves from the strange wives.

"I believe the 1290 days of Daniel, ended when the Consular Government was established in 1800. See "Court and Camp of Buonaparte," p. 241."

He thinks he is able to prove that the Pope received his power A. D. 540, and lost it when the Consular Government was established in 1800.

Bro. H. has promised another article. I hope he will make the subject as clear as possible with brevity; for there is good ground for the argument, and it can be sustained; by facts, and by the arguments of all the prominent laborers in the second Advent ranks; fully so, until the end of the present Jewish year.

Letter from Bro. Maull.

RISING SUN, Jan. 10, 1845.

Dear Bro. Jacobs:—I embrace the present opportunity to address a few lines to you, and the brethren and sisters in Christ.

"Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, which according to his abundant mercy hath begotten us again unto a lively hope by the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead; to an inheritance incorruptible, undefiled, and that fadeth not away; reserved in heaven for [margin] us, who are kept by the power of God, through faith unto salvation, ready to be revealed in the last time." We have been greatly refreshed and encouraged by the godly conversation, and many specimens of precious faith, we have witnessed in this place, and in Aurora. The band of brethren in Aurora, have greatly increased in piety since I was last with them. The reason, or one of the reasons for this, I have been led to believe, is the interest taken in the advent papers. There is taken by that little band, 9 copies of the "Morning Watch," besides 12 or 14 copies of the "Western Midnight Cry." I hope Bro. Jacobs, together with all the brethren, will feel encouraged to continue the publication of the paper in the WEST. I am well satisfied, could they witness the interest manifested by the brethren in the country—how anxiously they look for their paper; and hear them talk of sitting down when their day's work is done, and compare the many quotations with the Bible, they would take courage in their efforts, and continue their aid in its publication.

I cannot close my short epistle without speaking of the Blessed Bible. Truly this blessed book is still a lamp to our feet and a light to our path. How full of light and glory it still remains! Throw away the Bible!! God forbid. Never were its truths more precious: And the sure word of prophecy continues to be a light in a dark place.—By this glorious light we have moved on thus far securely; and I am well satisfied this light will not go out till the day star arise, and the day dawns, that will never be followed by night. Glory be to God! That portion that seems to encourage me most now, I find in Rev. 17th, 18th and 19th chapters. I hope these portions of the Word will arrest the attention of the brethren; and I should like to see an exposition of them from some one. To me they are full of interest. Bro. Butt is with me, strong in the faith, and sends his love to the brethren. I conclude by remaining yours in the blessed hope of soon seeing Jesus. W. H. MAULL.

Letter from Bro. Bartholomew.

AURORA, IND, Jan. 12, 1845.

Dear Bro. Jacobs,—I notice by the last number of the "Cry," that there appears to be a great delinquency, in furnishing means, by those who receive, and no doubt are comforted, blessed, strengthened & edified, by the weekly visits, and perusal of your most welcome and interesting little sheet. I regret much that this should be the case. As it respects myself, I can truly say, that with but one exception, that is the Bible, there is no book, ancient or modern, no paper of the day, political, ecclesiastical or reputed religious, that to my mind, bears but a small degree of comparison, for gospel truth, Bible knowledge, and comfort to the weary pilgrim, tossed to and fro on life's tempestuous sea, with reckoning all run out, looking daily for the light house, just ahead, on the blissful shores of immortality, as that of the W. Mid. Cry, and what is appropriately called now the Morning Watch. This through the providence of God, and a pamphlet of Brother Fleming's, was the means of opening my eyes to the truth, which now shines in its beauty, simplicity, and power, throughout its sacred pages, in a manner that I had never before discovered. And now the weekly visits, and most welcome reception of these most interesting sheets, come to us like gentle showers on a thirsty land, filling our souls with joy and gladness, and our minds with the most pleasing sensations of the coming glory of the King of kings. If Esdras was Divinely inspired, in his Vision of the Eagle; which by the way, we certainly have but little reason to doubt, and if the eight contrary feathers was symbolical of the American government, which we can hardly suppose was passed altogether unnoticed, in the councils of the Most High, by Divine inspiration, as existing in this last age of the world, while other events of seeming less note to us, have been clearly pointed out by the finger of inspiration, and most literally fulfilled in their signified times. I say, if this government was the subject of a part of that vision, or prophecy, and if our brethren Finney and Fassett, are right in their exposition, which is indeed quite plausible, and almost conclusive to my mind, then indeed are we on the very threshhold of that great, glorious, and yet terrible day of the Lord. And perhaps within two short months, a fraction more or less, will the hope, the only hope of the true Israel, be personally revealed in the clouds of heaven, with all the resplendent glory of the Father, and the holy angels. O blessed day! O glorious hope, replete with all the blessings and joys of life and immortality, to all those who watch for, and love his appearing. But I must drop this pleasing subject, and circumscribe, knowing your limited means of publication, and that other communications you receive, might be much more interesting to the readers of your most interesting little sheet, which I hope may be sustained the little time that remaineth. To this end, I send you two new subscribers with advance pay. Our little band here remain firm, Looking for the blessed hope, and glorious appearing, being confident, that although we should pass the vale of death, yet when Christ who is our life shall appear, then, (not before) shall we appear with him in glory. This is our blessed hope. Hallelujah! Amen.

J. V. HIMES, Publisher. "WATCHMAN, WHAT OF THE NIGHT?" E. JACOBS, Editor.

Vol. 1. CINCINNATI, THURSDAY, JANUARY 30, 1845. No. 18.

THE SECOND ADVENT.

Written (by request of a Brother) Cincinnati, Jan. 22, A. D. 1845.

BY HENRY S. GIBSON.

All hail the Son of God! all you who love
The name of Jesus; nor the name alone;
But He who with His Father reigns above,
Exalted on the everlasting throne:
Above all principalities on high,
And heavenly places of celestial light,
Above the earth, the firmament or sky,
Above all glorious and angelic light.

All hail! the Prince of all the realm of peace;
Once Prince and heir, and now the glorious King!
Whose power cannot diminish nor increase;
Thy coming Kingdom and thyself we sing.
All hail, earth's Potentate and ocean's Lord,
And sovereign ruler of each element,
Thyself thy faithful servant's best reward
That go to Thee, who unto them were "Sent."

All hail! Messiah that was and still the same,
That changest not, nor canst thou rise nor fall;
Perplexing mortals with thy various name;
Good, Father of us, and "God over all."
Hail Thou, the centre of thy universe!
The groans of Hell itself, where ere it be,
(While Heaven above thy glories shall rehearse,)
Shall celebrate thy Justice, praising Thee.

Still "hallowed be thy name," teach us to pray;
"Thy Kingdom come" to ardently desire;
"Thy will be done on earth," (to truly say,)
"As 'tis in Heaven," by the angelic choir:
And thus "to pray" until Thou shalt appear,
And "without ceasing," and as thou hast said:
Continue, too, to sanctify us here,
And "give us day by day our daily bread,"

"Forgive us," Lord, "our sins as we forgive"
All "those who trespass against us and Thee;"
"Deliver us from evil" whilst we live;
From sin—its evils, whatso'er they be.
By Thy restraining and preventing power,
Thus lead us not into temptation's sway:
That we may praise Thee every day and hour,
Still answer us and give us grace to pray.

"For thine the Kingdom is," Oh Christ divine;
And thine the power, to whom all praise is due
For our salvation; and the glory Thine,
Who art our God and art our Father too.
All hail, the Prince of all the realm of Peace!
Once Prince and heir, and now the glorious King,
Whose power cannot diminish nor increase;
Thy coming Kingdom and thyself we sing.

Bro. J. B. COOK.

REPORT OF A DISCOURSE DELIVERED BY BRO. J. B. COOK, AT THE TABERNACLE, ON SABBATH EVENING, JAN. 12th.—TEXT, Psa. 25: 14.

"The secret of the Lord is with them that fear him; and he will show them his covenant."

Ver. 9. "The meek will he guide in judgment: and the meek will he teach his way." It is when we "walk contrary unto" the Lord, that he walks contrary unto us. If a man does not fear God, there is no promise to such, that he will teach them his way, or show them his covenant.

Similar language to the text may be found in Prov. 3: 32, "For the froward is an abomination to the Lord: but his secret is with the righteous." Dan. 12: 10, "None of the wicked shall understand; but the wise shall understand." But how are the wise to understand? All at once? No! It is God's prerogative to communicate the knowledge of his ways to his servants. It is his, to know all things at once; but ours to learn gradually, as in his providence he opens the way.

Psa. 119: 105, "Thy word is a lamp unto my feet, and a light unto my path." Peter also tells us, "We have also a more sure word of prophecy, whereunto ye do well that ye take heed, as unto a light that shineth in a dark place until the day dawn,"—(1 Pet. 1: 19.) The Bible—the great treasury of light that God has given us, is just calculated to give light around us, to show us what, and where, we are; and the safe course for us to pursue. We shall always be able to understand the word of God so far as to know our duty, and do the will of God.

Suppose in a dark night, we wished to go from this place to the steamboat; and should for this purpose take a lamp that we might not miss our path: Our lamp does not shine all the way to the steamboat when we first start; but it shines where we are, and by it we avoid obstacles, and dangers; and by it, we discover this, that, and the other object as we pass, by which we know when we are drawing near to the boat. So the Bible shows us our present position, and teaches our present duty. If we are asked why we did not discover the "tarrying time" of the vision, the answer is ready: We had not come to it. Thus we journied on—holding up our lights, till a thousand voices swelled on the breeze, "Behold the Bridegroom cometh"!! Ah, this is the "Midnight Cry"! In our anxiety for the morning, we thought it was about to dawn; but it was the cry at midnight, and now we stand upon the rock, more firmly than ever.

Our opposers concluded, that unless we understood this matter as God understood it, we ought to give it all up:—But, not so; we are to learn our position by the light of the lamp:—God needs none. We are to understand as Christians,—not as God. He opens the way;—it is for us to walk in it. He shows us his covenant;—it is for us to see it.

Of the teachings we have presented to the world, we can say as did our blessed Lord, John 7: 16, 17, "My doctrine is not mine, but his that sent me. If any man will do his will, he shall know of the doctrine, whether it be of God, or whether I speak of myself." Who shall know? They that do his will. If you are willing to adopt this position, to test the falsity or truthfulness of our course, you will surely know. But if you do this, be sure of one thing; worldly men will have no sympathy with you. Christ spake to those that were not willing to "do his will," in parables; (see Matt. 13: 10.) But to those that did his will; he made all plain, and he will do the same now.

The word "secret," is the same as "mystery" in Eph. 1: 9, 13; and signifies the mind and will of God concerning us.

When God was about to overthrow the cities of the plain, He said, "Shall I hide from Abraham" the thing I am about to do?—shall I keep from him the secret? So in the days of the Coming of the Son of man:—To those that fear God, all will be made plain. There is no lack, either in the analogies or in the plain statements of scripture upon all these points; yet how many say, and truly too, "We do not know," when God has spoken out as clearly as by an angel's voice.

"Why?" says Christ, "do you not understand my speech? even because ye do not hear my word," (John 8: 43.) Like the boy intent upon his play, after being called the first, second, third and fourth time; stupidly replied, "I can't hear." So they do not want to hear:—they do not do God's will,—they have another master to serve.

Christ told the Pharisees to "Search the scriptures; for in them ye have eternal life: and they are they which testify of me." But this they could not do:—They would have lost character—salary—and friends, by this simple course. They that pitch their tent "toward Sodom" "can't see.

A short time since, I called on Prof. Finney, at Oberlin, to converse with him upon the subject of the Advent. I referred him, among other prophecies, to the 7th chapter of Daniel; and finally remarked that, It did not, surely, take a philosopher to understand this,—and asked him what he thought of it? He replied, "I do not know—O that I did know." In presenting these scriptures upon the soon expected Advent, before Dr. Bushnel, of New England, some time since, and asking his opinion upon them; his reply was, "I do not know what they mean, nor you either." I spoke of the Saviour's ascension, and the promise of his coming again "in like manner." The substance of his reply was,—that, that was the husk; and when he could get the pure grain, without the husk, he preferred it—intimating that his spiritual understanding of the passage was the pure grain. Dr. Hawes, of Hartford, Ct., when his opinion was solicited upon the agitated subject of the Advent, quoted an expression of Dr. Humphrey, to this effect, viz.: That he once undertook to search out the meaning of the prophecies of Daniel, but was glad to get out from among his horns, before he got hooked. This, Dr. Hawes, seemed to quote as Orthodox.

There are a class that spiritualize away the word of God,—and make destruction mean moral renovation; and the coming of Christ, to be death, —conversion, &c. But when the "nobleman" is taken out of the parable of the nobleman, there is nothing left: Or when the King, is taken out of the kingdom, the kingdom itself vanishes.

There are those however, that dare not inherit the quadruple curse of "taking away" from the word of God. With such "the coming of Christ," means the coming of Christ. Read, Isa. 66: 1-5; and you will see why some do not know. A man does not "tremble at his word" who says the coming of Christ is spiritual, death, conversion, Jerusalem, &c.

"Jesus Christ" means Jesus Christ, and he came once, at the commencement of the gospel day, and will come again, "the second time" at the close of that day.

How many turn aside when God calls! "They have chosen their own ways," "I also will choose their delusions, and will bring their fears upon them; because when I called, none did answer; when I spake, they did not hear: but they did evil before mine eyes, and chose that wherein I delighted not." But some say, "I am concerned for souls—to get souls converted is my work," &c. True, and how can you do it? Not with error certainly! The only way you can become instrumental in saving souls, is by taking God's naked truth, and holding it up—letting it shine. But do not dare to trifle with God, so as to make his truth unmeaning. When God speaks, we have his plain word—we have his "secret." It is faith, not fancy, that we follow.

I stated on Sabbath evening last, an opinion that Christ now occupies the visionary attitude described in Rev. 14: 14-16; but lest I might have been misunderstood, I will further explain. There must be a time when the Bridegroom is "coming"—on his way. Such a proclamation has been made; and it would be too much for us, to say it was untrue. Did your first view of this matter, cut you loose from the world?—the truth of God will hold you loose. If you have not the same interest in his coming, that you then had; your lamp has gone out,—or you have lost your eyes.

Why should it be thought a thing incredible with you, that there should be a succession of events connected with the Judgment of the great day?

We read, Mal. 3: 18, "Then shall ye return and discern between the righteous and the wicked, between him that serveth God and him that serveth him not." When? When God has brought about the circumstances that shall cause a separation between them.

My position is, that the events separating God's people from the world, transpire before Christ comes. If the coming of the Son of man is as it was in the days of Noah, and Lot, it must be so. Noah was shut into the ark before the storm,—and the number of days was given. In advance of the Judgment of God upon Sodom and Gomorrah, the angels brought out Lot, though almost dead—so long had he been with them. Look also at the chain of events connected with the deliverance of the children of Israel from Egypt! They were tried—disappointed—opposed—persecuted—oppressed, and finally "went forth" from Egypt, before "the horse and his rider was overthrown."

Before Jerusalem was destroyed, God's people were forewarned by signs—they trembled at his word—they feared God, and to them, these warnings proved salutary; but not so to the multitude, nor to the church. They could say in the face of all the warnings, Peace, Peace!—Do you not see that Jerusalem is the city of the great God!—It is fanaticism—delusion, to talk of its overthrow! So now, it is said, Don't you see God has chosen the church, and if the Judgment was at hand, they would give the warning! Yes, I see he has chosen the church; and I see too, that "Babylon has Fallen, Fallen! and become a hold of every foul spirit, and a cage of every unclean and hateful bird."

Just as distinctly as we have a succession of events in all the above cases, just so distinctly is marked the succession of events, ushering in the Judgment of the Great Day.

The books are opened in advance of the coming of Christ—the overthrow of worldly kingdoms, and the possessing "the kingdom under the whole heaven" by "the saints of the Most High." (See Dan. 7:)

We thought, say some, that the Lord would have come last spring;—we expected him, and enjoyed the prospect of "this mortal putting on immortality."

Let me enquire then, Did you look more earnestly than you were authorized by the word of God?—And is that day, further off now than it was then?—Has the harvest been growing green?—From the multitude of evidences that now surround us, if you can not see, and realize, the coming of the Lord nearer than it was then; one of two things must be true; you have lost either your eyes, or the light of your lamps.

Honest souls, to whose minds these truths have not been fairly presented, may yet receive them: But I acknowledge I have but little hope for those that reject the doctrine of the Lord's coming, and have closed their church doors against it. I believe God has "shut the door" against them.

You have probably seen an advertisement of a number of clergymen in Philadelphia, for "a week of Prayer," to pray, as the "N. York Evangelist" said, for the "Advent of the Spirit." Have those teachers known their duty and privilege, they would have had "the Spirit" without thus advertising. Some length of time has elapsed since their notice was published and circulated through the land, and has their anticipated advent of the Spirit taken place? I think not, from the fact that it has not been "advertised." There can be little doubt but they would have promptly done this, had their expectations been realized.

The churches may have additions, but what argument of God's favor is this? The Romish church has additions—more than all the rest: But are they added to Christ?

THE TIME.

From language contained in the 12th chapter of Daniel, I think we must have the means of knowing the Time of the Advent: God will not, like Pharaoh, require us to make brick without straw.

There is light, to my mind, yet shining from Dan. 8: 13, 14;—the 2300 days. Some of the great men of this age have argued their termination about this time; among whom are Prof. Bush, Alexander Campbell; and Dr. Wilson of this city. We could all see how those days might have reached to the spring of 1844. So far, they gave us light. Well, there let that light stand. What we now want, is light upon our present position. What is said to take place at the end of those days? "Then shall the Sanctuary be cleansed." Then shall the work be begun; but when shall it be completed? Turn to Rev. 17: 8, where the plagues of Babylon are said to "Come in one day:" This, I understand to be another day of prophetic time, in which the Sanctuary is to be cleansed.

Again, the "trumpet of the Jubilee" was to sound on the tenth day of the seventh month, in the forty-ninth year, while the "fiftieth year" was to be hallowed—it was the Jubilee—and in it every captive was to return to his possessions. It is perfectly clear to my mind that we have had the antitype of the Jubilee trumpet, and that God's people will return to their possessions, next year. But why did you not see this before? says one. I answer, If we had seen the antitype of all the types in the seventh month, we should not have given as distinct a sound to the "Seventh Trump" as we were enabled to do.

In looking at the types and prophetic time, the most of us have rested upon those texts that speak of the suddenness of Christ's coming, while we have passed by such as are found in Rev. 14:—He is here represented in a peculiar position—waiting to reap the harvest, while his children are crying to him to do the work.

But it is said, If Christ has left the mediatorial throne, there is no more mercy for sinners. Christ is our intercessor, and such, "he ever liveth." But where do you read of a mediatorial throne,—or that Christ ceases to intercede for those that commit their cause to him? No where but in the corrupt systems of Theology. Christ is a mediator on the Father's Throne,—he's a mediator on the way, and he's a mediator at the Judgment, and "EVER LIVETH to make intercession for us."

He is also styled the "Bridegroom"—nor is the title to be taken from him. He is the Bridegroom in Heaven, and the Bridegroom "Coming," and the Bridegroom while the foolish are seeking oil, and the Bridegroom forever.

But, says one, do you not believe that Christ has ceased to plead for sinners?

Where do you learn that Christ ever pleads for sinners? Christ plead for rebels!! The doctrine is not found in the Bible. If Christ plead for careless sinners, they would soon feel his power: But he pleads for those, and for those only, that commit their cause to him. The doctrine that Christ is pleading for sinners, is false as hell!!! It is deceiving souls down to destruction.

Convince the sinner that Christ is pleading for him, before he pleads for himself, and full well does he know that he is safe; for Christ has said of the Father, "thou hearest me always."

I can find no point in all the succession of events that is to precede the coming of Christ, where he refuses to plead for those that commit their cause to him.

What further light I have on the time, I will here present. If you will examine Lev. 25: in connexion with what has been said about the Jubilee, you will learn that the antitype of the deliverance, must come in the spring, or the first of the year.

The 50th year, also began at the Passover: Christ, also uses the appropriate figure of a budding fig-tree, to set forth his coming to their deliverance. (See Matt. 24: 32.) It was also the first day of the first month, when the Sanctuary was to be cleansed. (See Ezek 45: 18.) It was in the first month, that the children of Israel went out of Egypt: (See Ex. 12.)

Again, James exhorts his brethren (ch. 5: 7, 8,) to be patient in waiting for the Lord, as the husbandman is, who waits for the "early and latter rain." And the Prophet Joel (2: 23,) tells us this latter rain is to 'come down' in the first month.

Some that went out with us to meet the Bridegroom, seem to have fallen into a train of doubts upon the glorious theme of Christ's coming, and tell us they "don't know;"—though the arguments are clear, yet they seem to fear to say any thing more about the subject of time.

But I shall speak all I know about the subject of time. To my mind there is light, and it is clear. We are close upon the Jubilee, but have not reached it. Having started out to meet the Bridegroom, I want to keep on till I meet him.

I once went with a company of friends down Newark Bay in an open boat in the night. After we started it became cloudy, the bay was rough, and the rain began to fall in torrents. For safety, we put into a small cove, and waited for the morning. At length we saw a bright spot through the clouds just above the horizon, and being cold, wet, and fatigued, we were glad to hail it as a bright evidence of approaching day. But we soon discovered our mistake, it was nothing but the moon, and our hearts were sad. Again, we saw what we took to be evidence of morning, and again were disappointed. Though disappointed again and again, yet each time we looked for morning with more assurance than before, for the obvious reason; we knew it was nearer. And so do I now look for our Coming Lord:—with more confidence to the coming periods, than I have done to any that are past.

I pity, in my soul, the man that has given up his hope, and thinks the Lord will never come. While you indulge this delusion, do not longer profess to be the Lord's, Throw away your old musty lamp, for it will do you no good.

"But to you that believe, he is precious." Press forward! Life, Life! Eternal Life is yours. A crown—an Inheritance—a Kingdom will soon be given. Come Lord Jesus, come quickly! Even so. Amen.

WESTERN MIDNIGHT CRY.

Cincinnati, Thursday, January 30, 1845.

THE TIME.

I purpose in next number to commence an article on "the time of deliverance." Let brethren lay aside their prejudices, if they have any, and prepare to re-examine the "sure word;" for "now is our salvation nearer than when we first believed."

Bro. H. H. Gross, has a lengthy well written article in the last "Morning Watch," showing the harmonious termination of the prophetic periods with the present Jewish year: which he is "satisfied will be" "about April 20th to 23d next."

Bro. Southard, the editor, however remarks, that he does not agree with Bro. Gross—and of course has an argument against his article. This intimation of Bro. S. has awakened a great anxiety in my mind to see his reasons. Give them to us dear brother without delay.

"Voice of Truth."

Bro. Marsh, the editor of the above sheet, considers himself charged with "intolerance" in an article under that head in our paper of Dec. 30th. By looking at the article it will be seen that it was not intended for him alone, neither did it charge any one directly with intolerance. Its object was to guard brethren against expressions that might be calculated to awaken such a feeling. His article was alluded to as one in point, because he had called upon his readers to disbelieve "any man or minister" that might tell them "the Lord came in ANY SENSE on the tenth day, more than he has come since, or for centuries previous." I believed, and had given what I supposed to be good scripture reasons for believing, that the Lord did on that day, come to his "throne prepared for judgment"—"set in heaven"—"upon the cloud," &c., from which he will soon be revealed. Bro. Marsh's remarks therefore condemned my views—without a reason.

I however, sincerely beg pardon of Bro. Marsh, for any injury inflicted upon his feelings in my remarks; for I am perfectly satisfied he is not the brother that would refuse to tolerate any individual who takes the word of God alone for their guide.

His article headed "Fanaticism" was undoubtedly called forth by circumstances, that to his mind, required them.

"The Voice of Truth" is much admired here for its frank uncompromising, and open course. It is also much called for.

☞ We again refer our readers to another article showing the progress of mortality among the fish. This certainly is another land mark in the prophecies that shows us where we are. Isa. 10: and parallels.

The article is from the "United States Saturday Post."

"THE FRESH FISH TOO."

"It seems that the death among the fish is not confined to the salt water alone. The Boston Post states that recently, Messrs. Brevity Gray and Thomas Crosby, cut a large hole in the ice of a pond in Tewkesbury, when, to their astonishment, myriads of fish of various kinds and sizes rushed to the aperture, and seemed to be striving to leap from their native element. The fishermen were enabled to take them in great numbers, with their hands, and many thus supplied themselves and neighbors, without resorting to hooks and spears. After the pond became free from ice, vast loads of dead fish floated ashore. The same thing has been observed at other places."

Why do not our editors publish the above accounts and save us from purchasing eastern papers? They probably think it will be carrying "Millerism" so far as to produce an "excitement."

Letter from Indianapolis.

January 22, 1845.

Dear Bro. Jacobs:—There are a few names of us here who are waiting with great patience for our Blessed Redeemer from Heaven, and expect soon to realize our hopes.

We have fresh encouragement to hold fast the beginning of our confidence unto the end. We hail the "Morning Watch" and "Western Midnight Cry" as welcome messengers every week. The last No. of the Western Cry, gave us new ideas:—"The Vision of the Eagle," is new, and interesting to us, and seems to have a very striking resemblance to our National Government. * * * I wish you to send me a few of the last numbers of the W. M. Cry, and oblige yours in the faith of soon seeing our Saviour coming in the clouds of Heaven, to the great joy of all our dear brethren who "love his appearing."

W. K.

Another friend writing from Indianapolis, remitting money for two copies of the paper to be sent to her friends at the East, adds,

"I cannot say that I am either a believer or disbeliever of your views, but do sincerely wish to be on the right side. With regard to the explanation, or rather the application of "the Vision of the Eagle," I confess it looks very plausible."

Bro. Howells, writes from Hamilton, O., Jan. 27th, "I am still a believer that the Second Advent of our Lord is near. I think there is no subject that yields to the good man more delight, than to contemplate the near approach of that event. May the Lord prepare us for that day," &c.

Bro. Maull, writes from Louisville, Jan. 27th, that the brethren are holding a conference at the Christian Church, to last one week:—Prospects encouraging.

The urgent request of the brethren for me to attend, would be gladly complied with, but indisposition will prevent; as I now write upon the cover of a book, bolstered up in my bed, where I have been brought by severe application to my round of duties.

The Morning Watch.†

From a private letter just received from Bro. Southard, we regret to learn that the state of his health is such as to demand his withdrawal from the editorial department of the above paper.

This will be much regretted by his numerous readers, yet we doubt not some amicable arrangement will be made to supply the vacancy.

THE SAVIOUR RETURNING.

Tune.—The Old Church Yard.

1 O I long to see my Saviour,
O I long to see my Saviour,
O I long to see my Saviour
In the opening skies;
When the saints in glory,
When the saints in glory,
When the saints in glory,
Shall be sounding forth his praise.

2 Hope will change to glad fruition,
On that blissful day,
When the saints in glory, &c.

3 O that happy time is coming,
When the holy throng
Of the saints in glory, &c.

4 Lo! the glorious dawn approaches
Of that happy morn,
When the saints in glory, &c.

5 Then the blast of Gabriel's trumpet
Will awake the dead,
And the saints in glory, &c.

6 O the blessed Saviour's coming
In the op'ning clouds,
Then the saints in glory, &c.

7 Then the final conflagration
Will destroy the earth,
While the saints in glory, &c.

8 How poor sinners will be wailing,
On that dreadful day,
While the saints in glory, &c.

9 O, poor sinners, stop and listen
To the Saviour's voice—
Join the saints in glory
When they're sounding forth his praise.

The Second Advent of Christ.

The following article has been prepared with the design of showing the connection this country has with the prophecies—the "Midnight Cry" especially; while other lands apparently have little to do with the predicted proclamations, ushering in the great day of God.

"The reaping of the harvest," treated upon in the latter part of the article, is a subject that cannot fail to interest.

The arrangement of the article, owing to a press of other duties, is not as good as I should have desired: and to make the subject more clear, it should have been preceded with an article on prophetic symbols, throwing new light upon a large class of prophecies, hitherto little in use by us.

THE VINE.

The Reaping of the "Forest of the Vintage" in the Great Day of God Almighty.

Isa. 5: 1–7, "Now will I sing to my well-beloved a song of my beloved touching his vineyard. My well-beloved hath a vineyard in a very fruitful hill: and he fenced it, and gathered out the stones thereof, and planted it with the choicest vine, and built a tower in the midst of it, and also made a wine press therein: and he looked that it should bring forth grapes, and it brought forth wild grapes.

And now, O inhabitant of Jerusalem, and men of Judah, judge I pray you, betwixt me and my vineyard.

What could have been done more to my vineyard, that I have not done in it? Wherefore, when I looked that it should bring forth grapes, brought it forth wild grapes?

And now go to; I will tell you what I will do with my vineyard: I will take away the hedge thereof, and it shall be eaten up; and break down the wall thereof, and it shall be trodden down: and I will lay it waste: it shall not be pruned, nor digged; but there shall come up briers and thorns: I will also command the clouds that they rain no rain upon it.

For the vineyard of the Lord of Hosts is the house of Israel, and the men of Judah his pleasant plant: and he looked for judgment, but behold oppression; for righteousness, but behold a cry."

What does this Vine Symbolize?

The vine itself, symbolizes Christ in the first place; and its principal branches, the Church; first in the Jewish, and afterward in the Christian form: The nations of the earth are also represented as corrupt "branches" of this vine, that are to be taken away "with the corrupt church" and "burned."

John 15: 1, "I am the true vine, [says Christ] and my Father is the husbandman." So far then, the identity of the vine is fixed, and that it is the same whose branches are brought to view in Isa. 5: the sequel of this article will show. Again, as quoted in

Isa. 5: 7, "For the vineyard of the Lord of Hosts, is the house of Israel, and the men of Judah his pleasant plant."

John 15: 5, "I am the vine, ye are the branches."

Matt. 7: 16, "Ye shall know them by their fruits: Do men gather grapes of thorns, or figs of thistles?"

John 15: 2, "Every branch in me that bringeth not forth fruit, he taketh away; and every branch that beareth fruit he purgeth it that it may bring forth more fruit."

Gal. 3: 7, "Know ye therefore that they which are of faith, the same are the children of Abraham." Ver. 29; "and if ye be Christ's, then are ye Abraham's seed, and heirs according to the promise."

Christ is the Vine, his Father is the Husbandman, and the people are the branches."

The history of the Vine, or principal branches of it.

Jer. 2: 20, 21, "For of old time [in Egypt] I have broken thy yoke, and burst thy bands * * * * Yet I had planted thee a noble vine, wholly a right seed: how then art thou turned into the degenerate plant of a strange vine unto me?"

Psa. 80: 8, "Thou hast brought a vine out of Egypt: thou hast cast out the heathen and planted it."

The chileren of Israel were brought out of Egypt by a mighty hand, and planted in Canaan, a "right seed;" and here is the point where the history of the vine begins.

Our Saviour gives a synopsis of its history in Luke, 20: 9–16; "Then began he to speak to the people this parable: A certain man planted a vineyard, and let it forth to husbandmen, and went into a far country for a long time.

And at the season he sent a servant to the husbandmen, that they should give him of the fruit of the vineyard: but the husbandmen beat him, and sent him away empty.

And again, he sent another servant: And they beat him also, and entreated him shamefully, and sent him away empty."

And again he sent a third, and they wounded him also, and cast him out. Then said the Lord of the vineyard, What shall I do? I will send my beloved Son: It may be they will reverence him when they see him.

But when the husbandmen saw him, they reasoned among themselves, saying, This is the heir: Come, let us kill him, that the inheritance may be ours. So they cast him out of the vineyard, and killed him. What therefore shall the Lord of the vineyard do unto them?

He shall come and destroy these husbandmen, and shall give the vineyard to others. And when they heard it, they said, God forbid."

The reason of their crying out "God forbid!" was because "they perceived that he spake of them." (See Matt. 21: 45.) They also uttered the very sentiment of the corrupt vine in this day. The church have heard that God will soon establish a Kingdom "under the whole heaven"—upon the destruction of the "fourth Beast,"—or last of earthly governments; and they exclaim, "God forbid!"

The Vine became Corrupt.

He "looked that it should bring forth grapes, and it brought forth wild grapes."

The causes are seen in connection with the history of its rejection, Isa. 5: 11–14; They followed "strong drink"—consulted their lustful pleasures—"The harp, and the viol, the tabret, and pipe, and wine are in their feasts: but they regard not the work of the Lord, nor consider the operation of his hands."

Isa. 16: 9, "Therefore will I bewail with the weeping of Jazer the vine of Sibmah: [Captivity, old age, rest, &c.] I will water thee with my tears, O Heshbon, and Elealeh: for the shouting for thy summer-fruits and for thy harvest is fallen."

Moses, with prophetic eye, saw the corrupting of the professed people of God, when he said, "Their vine is worse than the vine of Sodom, and of the fields of Gomorrah: their grapes, are grapes of gall, their clusters are bitter: Their wine is the poison of Dragons, and the cruel venom of asps." Deut. 32: 32, 33.

Our Saviour also said to this corrupt vine, "Fill ye up then the measure of your Fathers. Ye serpents, ye generation of vipers, how can ye escape the damnation of hell?

Wherefore, behold, I send unto you prophets, and wise men, and scribes; and some of them ye shall kill and crucify, and some of them shall ye scourge in your synagogues, and persecute them from city to city."

THE DISPERSION AND REJECTION OF THE VINE.

"Break down the wall thereof, and it shall be trodden down; and I will lay it waste: it shall not be pruned nor digged; but there shall come up briers and thorns," &c. This is the "house of Israel" and "the men of Judah." And our Saviour tells us in Luke 21: 24; how long this treading down shall last: "And they shall fall by the edge of the sword, and shall be led away captive into all nations: and Jerusalem shall be trodden down of the Gentiles, until the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled."

Matt. 7: 19, "Every tree that bringeth not forth good fruit, is hewn down and cast into the fire." Those that profess godliness and bring not forth good fruit, will perish with the Gentiles, when their "times" are accomplished. See Dan. 7: 8.

The Prophet says, Isa. 5: after the history of the pride and wickedness of the vine, "Therefore hell hath enlarged herself, and opened her mouth without measure: and their glory, and their multitude, and their pomp, and he that rejoiceth shall descend into it."

Isa. 65: 15, "And ye shall leave your name for a curse unto my chosen: for the Lord God shall slay thee, [the Jews] and shall call his people by another name."

When the Jews had rejected Christ—"the heir," and God had rejected them, the disciples said, "Lo we turn to the Gentiles." And for the same reasons that God rejected the Jews, he will reject the Gentiles. The wall of the vineyard was broken down, and Jerusalem was trodden down because they "knew not the time of their visitation." See Luke 19: 44.

Ezek. 15: 1–6, "What is the vine tree more than any tree, or than a branch which is among the trees of the forest? Shall wood be taken thereof to do any work? or will men take a pin of it to hang any vessel thereon? Behold it is cast into the fire for fuel: the fire devoureth both the ends of it, and the midst of it is burned. Is it meet for any work?

Behold, when it was whole it was meet for no work; how much less shall it be meet yet for any work, when the fire hath devoured it, and it is burned?

Therefore, thus saith the Lord God; As the vine-tree among the trees of the forest, which I have given to the fire for fuel, so will I give THE INHABITANTS OF JERUSALEM." This is the only restoration promised to the corrupt church in its Jewish form.

This Prophet in making allusion to the same vine, in ch. 19: 10—says, "Thy mother is like a vine in thy blood, planted by the waters: She was fruitful and full of branches by reason of many waters. [WATERS, denotes nations, Rev. 17: 18;] And she had strong rods for the sceptres of them that bare rule, and her stature was exalted among the thick branches, and she appeared in her height with the multitude of her branches. But she was plucked up in fury, she was cast down to the ground, and the east wind dried up her fruit: her strong rods were broken and withered; the fire consumed them. And now she is planted in the wilderness, in a dry and thirsty ground. And fire is gone out of a rod of her branches, which hath devoured her fruit, so she hath no strong rod to be a sceptre to rule.

This is for a lamentation, and shall be for a lamentation."

"EAST WIND," here denotes the coming of Christ at his first Advent; see Hosea, 13: 15; John 1: 23.

"A ROD," is an emblem of power; see Isa. 10: 5.

"A ROD OF HER BRANCHES," in this place refers to Christ; see Isa. 11: 1.

The vine was brought out of Egypt,—The heathen were cast out of Canaan where it was planted, and we now find it in the "wilderness;" and where is this?

Ezek. 20: 35, "And I will bring you into the wilderness of the people, and THERE will I plead with you face to face." Ver. 36, "Like as I plead with your fathers in the wilderness of the land of Egypt, so will I plead with you, saith the Lord." In Isa. 10: the final deliverance of God's people, is said to be "after the manner of Egypt;" and here it is said to be "in the wilderness."

I am satisfied that this wilderness is on the American continent, in proof of which, other reasons will here be given.

The Gospel, like the natural sun, arose in the East, and as it has to be "preached in all the world, for a witness unto all nations," and as we have no scripture proof that its rays are reflected upon all parts of the earth at the same time—before the "restitution of all things," I infer that its last rays of light are sinking in the "west." The present history of the eastern world shows that the church has been "chased," or "driven" almost entirely out of it, except, perhaps some small branches in the British Isles. Let the matter be fully investigated whether or not, this country is "the wilderness" of Rev. 12: 6, 14.

The Prophet points to the vine starting for this "wilderness" in Isa. 16: 8; "For the fields of Heshbon languish, and the vine of Sibmah: the LORDS OF THE HEATHEN have broken down the principal plants thereof, [the fourth beast trod down the host] they are come even unto Jazer, they wandered through the wilderness: her branches are plucked up, [margin] they are GONE OVER THE SEA."

The old country was, but this land now is the wilderness of the church. As the vine is said to have gone "through the wilderness" it does not of course remain in the wilderness that it went through.

Who are these "principal plants?" Isa. 5: 7; "The vineyard of the Lord of Hosts is the house of Israel, and the men of Judah his pleasant plant."

After telling us that "all the earth shall be devoured with the fire of his [God's] jealousy, and that then he will "turn to the people a pure language, that they may all call upon the name of the Lord to serve him with one consent;" the prophet proceeds to say, Zeph. 3: 10.

"From beyond the rivers of Ethiopia my suppliants, even the daughter of my dispersed, shall bring mine offering."

Who is the daughter of God's dispersed? Ezek. 34: 6; "My sheep wandered through all the mountains, and upon every high hill: yea, my flock was scattered upon all the face of the earth, and none did search or seek after them." Ver. 11, "For thus saith the Lord God; Behold, I, even I, will both search my sheep, and seek them out." Ver. 31, "And ye my flock, the flock of my pasture, are men, and I am your God, saith the Lord God."

Who are God's suppliants beyond the Rivers, &c. Ezek. 17: 2–6; "Thus saith the Lord God; a great Eagle [Babylon] with great wings, and full of feathers, which had divers colors, came unto Lebanon, and took the highest branch of the cedar: He cropped off the top of his young twigs, and carried it into a land of traffic; he set it in a city of merchants."

Ver. 5, "He took also of the seed of the land, and planted it in a fruitful field; he placed it by great waters, and set it as a willow tree." Ver. 6, "And it grew and became a spreading vine of low stature, whose branches turned toward him, and the roots thereof were under him: so it became a vine and brought forth branches, and shot forth sprigs."

Ver. 12, "Say now to the rebellious house, Know ye not what these things mean? Tell them, Behold, the king of Babylon is come to Jerusalem, and hath taken the kings thereof, and the princes thereof and led them with him to Babylon; and hath taken of the king's seed, and hath made a covenant with him, and hath taken an oath of him, he hath also taken the mighty of the land."

Here is a picture of the church going into bondage. For the "seed of the land" which was planted, and became "a spreading vine of low stature," is explained to be the king of Babylon [ruling spirit of the world] taking the King and Princes of Jerusalem, [or ruling spirit of the church on earth] and making a covenant with them.

As further proof of this we read in verse 20, "I will spread my net upon him, and he shall be taken in my snare, and I will bring him to Babylon, and will plead with him there for his treepass against me." Ver. 21, "And all his fugitives, with all his bands shall fall by the sword, and they that remain shall be scattered toward all winds: and ye shall know that I the Lord have spoken it."

So far I think we have the history of the church in bondage to the Governments of the eastern world, of which Rome is represented as the head: and now we will turn again to the parable, ver. 7;

"There was also another great Eagle, with great wings and many feathers: and behold this vine did bend her roots toward him, that he might water it by the furrows of her plantation."

The vine bent her roots toward the last Eagle [American Eagle] and was planted with it: Showing also, where "the daughter of his dispersed" is found,—and where "his suppliants" "beyond the rivers [kingdoms] of Ethiopia." Harmonizing also with the vine passing "over the sea."

This, is emphatically a "land of traffic:" The wealth, as well as the ruling power of almost every other land, is hereditary—affording no basis for the two great leading sins condemned in the Bible; —ambition for worldly goods, and worldly honors. Here, in this land, is a wide scope for the full development of human ambition; and no people are capable of running a more rapid race to destruction, than the people of this land.

This last Eagle can not be the Roman, for with it the vine was not to prosper; and with the Roman Eagle, the corrupt vine has prospered, and fitted itself for its predicted destruction as we shall see.

Ver. 10, "Being planted, shall it prosper? Shall it not utterly wither, when the East wind toucheth it? It shall wither in the furrows where it grew." See also, ver 9.

"EAST WIND" Coming of Christ to judgment. Proof, Hosea, 13: 11–15.

The principal hopes of Rome, and her family are "bent toward" this land: They desire that under the wings of this Eagle their vine may "bring forth fruit."

In all the wanderings of the church of God in the wilderness, the corrupt vine has closely followed. Wherever "the woman" has been, there the Dragon has been found, making "war upon the remnant of her seed."

WESTERN MIDNIGHT CRY!

J. V. HIMES, Publisher. "WATCHMAN, WHAT OF THE NIGHT?" E. JACOBS, Editor.

Vol. 4. CINCINNATI, FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 7, 1845. No. 13.

Letter from Bro. Bull.

Cincinnati, January 7, 1845.

DEAR BRO. JACOBS,—Considering it a privilege to communicate a few words to my brethren of like precious faith, (especially to those through the country with whom I have a personal acquaintance,) I have taken advantage of your general invitation to make the columns of the "Western Midnight Cry," a medium of communication. Two years ago when I was first led to examine, and from overwhelming evidence to embrace the doctrine of Christ's speedy coming, I expected ere this with all God's redeemed people, many of whom now lay scattered in the "land of the enemy," to have seen the "King in his beauty" and to have walked the golden streets of the New Jerusalem praising him with an immortal tongue who is soon to be our glorious King;—but with my brethren I have been disappointed,—we are still within the confines of probationary time;—but as our pilgrim fathers did before us, we are still looking for and expecting to see "a City which hath foundations, whose builder and maker is God."

I have felt, and still feel that we have not been deluded by a cunningly devised fable—in believing as we have. No, my brethren, with you I feel satisfied that we have had for our foundation the Prophets and Apostles, Jesus Christ himself being the chief corner stone. It is supposed by the opposers of our hope, that we are now floating about upon a sea of uncertainty without chart or compass, not knowing where we are, or whither we are tending; this is undoubtedly a mistake, for we still have the sure word of prophecy which shineth as unto a light in a dark place, and will continue thus to shine "until the day dawn and the day star arise." If this be true, (and we know it is, for it was given by the inspiration of Him who cannot lie). Then, until the Saviour comes, and the eternal day dawns—we have a chart by which we can safely steer our little bark into the haven of eternal rest, though the tempest may howl and threaten it every moment with destruction.

By examining the passage just referred to with its connection, (2 Pet. chap. 1:) we find that it relates specially to the prophecies concerning Christ's second coming. The apostle commences this epistle by calling the attention of his brethren to the "Exceeding great & precious promises" left on record for our encouragement, and in view of their realization, exhorts them, by saying, "Giving all diligence, add to your faith, virtue; and to virtue, knowledge; and to knowledge, temperance; and to temperance, patience; and to patience, godliness; and to godliness, brotherly kindness; and to brotherly kindness, charity. For if these things be in you, and abound, they make you that ye shall neither be barren nor unfruitful in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ. But he that lacketh these things is blind, and cannot see afar off, and hath forgotten that he was purged from his old sins. Wherefore the rather, brethren, give diligence to make your calling and election sure; for if ye do these things, ye shall never fall: for so an entrance shall be ministered unto you abundantly into the everlasting Kingdom of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ." 5–11 verses. Here an entrance into the Kingdom of Christ, which is to be established at his coming, (see 2 Tim. 4: 1;) is presented as an inducement to holiness. In the 16–18 verses of this same chapter, in evidence of the certainty of Christ's second personal coming and consequent establishment of his Kingdom, the apostle refers to Christ's transfiguration on the mount. He thus speaks: "For we have not followed cunningly devised fables, when we made known unto you the power and coming of our Lord Jesus Christ, but were eye witnesses of his majesty. For he received from God the Father honor and glory, when there came such a voice to him from the excellent glory, This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased. And this voice which came from heaven we heard, when we were with him in the holy mount." By a reference to Luke 9: 28–36, where the transfiguration is described, we find that on that occasion was given an exact miniature exhibition of Christ's future Kingdom. Christ was there as he will be in his Kingly glory, when he is seated upon his Father David's throne. There was also Moses the representative of the righteous dead, and Elias of those who will be changed when Christ comes. It is said in the 27th verse, that there were some standing there who should not taste of death till they should see the Kingdom of God, clearly referring to its exhibition in miniature. Peter was one of those referred to who thus had ocular demonstration that the future Kingdom would be established: but after alluding to this in his second epistle, he says: "We have also a more sure word of prophecy," (speaking as though he might have been deceived in his vision on the mount,) "whereunto ye do well that ye take heed, as unto a light that shineth in a dark place." Mark the figure! "As unto a light that shineth in a dark place." Go for instance into a dungeon, where there is no aperture to let in light, and you cannot see your hand before you, or where to tread in safety, but let a light be introduced and you see all around. Thus it is with the prophecies referred to by Peter concerning Christ's future coming in glory. (See those of Daniel in particular). What a cutting rebuke is this language of the apostle to those teachers of our day who are telling the people that these prophecies cannot be understood.—That they need not trouble their heads any thing about them.—That God will not hold them responsible for their ignorance. I wish not to be uncharitable, but is there not danger that these blind guides with many at least of those whom they are deluding by this teaching, of falling into the ditch together.

It is said by this class of teachers that we can know nothing about the time of Christ's coming. And upon what do they predicate this conclusion? Not upon the word of the Lord; 'tis true they quote, "But of that day and hour knoweth no man;" but this only relates to a literal day, as the connection clearly shows. Yet this is quoted by many of the learned collegiates of our day as a triumphant argument in evidence that we can know nothing about the time.—They forget to look at the context, where it says, "When ye shall see all these things know that it (margin he) is near, even at the doors." Again it is said, "It is not for you to know the times or the seasons which the Father hath put in his own power:" Acts 1: 7; but mark what follows, "But ye shall receive power after that the Holy Ghost is come upon you." Again, we are told that he will come as a thief. But upon whom? Not upon the righteous, for the connection of those passages prove the contrary.

Well may we exclaim, "O shame, where is thy blush!" Truly, as Job says, "Great men are not always wise," Job 32: 9. Had we no better evidence than this to sustain our positions we should not be countenanced one hour, neither could we stand, for we should have nothing upon which to predicate our hopes; but instead of this being the case, we have a sure basis,—one upon which we can stand; knowing that "Heaven and earth shall pass away" before this basis (the word of God) can be shaken.

That God's people, those who heed the sure word of prophecy, living just prior to the end, were to have a knowledge of about the time of Christ's coming, I think can be proved to a demonstration. If this is not the case, then certain portions of scripture can have no meaning, or, the language is calculated to deceive, which in the first place, would prove God to be the author of supererogation; and secondly, a virtual impeachment of his character for goodness. God does not thus deal with his creatures when he says "the wise shall understand," he means something. Take this passage in its connection and you will find time is referred, see Dan. 12: 11–13. In these verses we have a period of time given us extending to the resurrection with its date, see 1–3 ver. Now it is evident that God intended that we should know at least about the date of this period, or else he NEVER would have called our attention to it.

Again, he speaks through the apostle Paul. on this wise, "But ye brethren, are not in darkness, that that day should overtake you as a thief," 1 Thess. 5: 4. In the preceding part of this chapter the REASON for this knowledge is given, "But of the times and seasons brethren, ye have no need that I write unto you. For yourselves know perfectly that the day of the Lord so cometh as a thief in the night. For when they (the wicked) shall say, peace and safety; then sudden destruction cometh upon them, as travail upon a woman with child; and they shall not escape." This destruction is clearly the result of the Lord's coming, as described in the next epistle 1: 7–10. Although this language of the apostle was addressed to the brethren then living; yet it is evident its special application is to the brethren now living. Paul knew that the Lord would not come in his day, for he gives us to understand (2 Thess. 2: 1–3) that the day of the Lord's coming would not be until after a certain falling away, and the revelation of the Man of Sin, which event did not take place for several centuries afterwards. Hence the special characters referred to must be those living when Christ comes: The brethren having the prophetic times of Moses and Daniel, (they being now unsealed,) and the REASONS spoken of by our Saviour and the apostles; from these they know the time, or period of Christ's coming, which enables them to watch daily in the well-grounded expectation of seeing Jesus at any moment. Hence when the day comes it will not overtake them as a thief. This truth may also be proven from analogy. God never has brought any great judgment upon the world without first giving it an intimation of its danger.

Notice the case of the antediluvians, Gen. 6th and 7th chapters; of the Sodomites, Gen. 19th chapter; of the Ninevites, Jonah 3: 1–4; and of the Jews in their whole history. Now as God is an unchangeable being, "The same yesterday and to-day, and forever," Heb. 13: 8. It is reasonable to suppose that he will warn the whole world prior to, and in view of the Great Burning Day. This is not only proved analogically, but we have positive testimony to this fact. The apostle John in prophetic vision saw an "Angel [prefiguring clearly human agency] fly in the midst of heaven, having the everlasting Gospel to preach to them that dwell on the earth, and to every nation, and kindred, and tongue, and people, saying with a loud voice, Fear God, and give glory to him; for the hour of his judgment is come: and worship him that made heaven, and earth, and the sea, and the fountains of waters," Rev. 14: 6, 7. The burthen of this message is, "The hour of his Judgment is come," or that God is about judging the world; not that the literal hour of his judgment had actually come, for that ends probation both to saint and sinner, which would conflict with the other portions of the message. "Fear God, and give glory to him," . . . "and worship him that made heaven, and earth;" clearly implying that probation still continued. This is also evident from the sounding of the two succeeding angels: the third angel pronounces the doom of those who worship the "Beast and his Image." This proclamation is also a warning, and relates to probationary time; for it is evident from the language, that it is optional with men whether they worship the Beast, or not. The language is, "If any man worship the Beast and his Image;" the word IF, here, clearly implying a free agency in the case. From these messages, the first in particular, it appears clear to a demonstration, that prior to the coming of Christ, (spoken of in connection,) the solemn warning of the Judgment just impending would be proclaimed in the ears of the children of men.

Notice again the midnight cry of "Behold the Bridegroom cometh, go ye out to meet him," Matt. 25: 6. Some have supposed that this cry would be given in connection with Christ's coming: this however is clearly a mistake, from the fact that after the cry is made the virgins all arise and trim their lamps, [or search the Bible ] Ps. 119: 105 Now I ask, what will God's people, or sinners have to do with searching the Bible after Christ comes? Nothing at all. For the one class will be singing the song of triumph with immortal tongues,—while the other class will be taking up the piteous lamentation of the "Harvest is past, the summer is ended, and we are not saved." After this cry is made some little time elapses before Christ comes, as may be seen from the connection. This furnishes another evidence of an intimation being given of the approach of the Saviour, prior to his coming. There is also inferential evidence to the same point; See Matt. 24: 48-51; Luke 12: 45, 46; Ezek. 12: 21-28; 2 Pet. 3: 1-4. Now what else than the agitation of the subject of Christ's soon coming personally could give rise to the language contained in these passages? It appears to me that direct reference is made to that subject. That they have had, and are still having a fulfilment needs no proof; The professedly religious world furnish a lamentable evidence of this fact; its faith in God's word is almost entirely extinct; a universal cry of peace and safety every where prevails; at which time Paul tells us "Sudden destruction cometh."

Where are we? is the question repeatedly asked. Has the angel yet flew through the midst of heaven? Has the midnight cry yet been given? Do the wise understand? These are questions I think may all be answered in the affirmative. The hour of God's Judgment has been faithfully proclaimed;—the world has been warned;—the preaching of the 10th day of the 7th month aroused all the virgins and they trimmed their lamps;—the cry was "Behold the Bridegroom cometh, go ye out to meet him." But you have erred in regard to time, and can it now be said the wise understand? We have erred slightly in regard to time, it is true; but in this we see the hand of God, had the Lord have come within those specified times some of the jots and tittles of his word could not have been fulfilled; and the very passing by of the times in the which many of us supposed the Lord would come, brought about their fulfilment; which has furnished us with additional evidence, knowing that now we are in a very small circle of time, in the which the Lord will most assuredly come: hence, the wise, those looking for the Lord, in the sense of the prophecy, do understand. We can look up, and lift up our heads, knowing that our redemption draweth nigh; for "He that shall come will come, and will not tarry."

And now it behooves us, my brethren, to take heed to the apostle's injunction of "Hold that fast which thou hast, that no man take thy crown." Let us not ingloriously lay down our arms in the moment of victory.—When the trumpet is about sounding for the gathering of the hosts of the Lord to receive the victor's palm.—And though now the conflict may be sore; though the devil with his legions are bearing down upon us in his mighty phalanx; yet, let us remember that the eye of Israel's God rests upon us.—He that neither slumbereth nor sleepeth, that his arm is extended for our protection and deliverance;—that the New Jerusalem with its glorious King are about emerging from the distant clouds, and the inheritance promised to Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, with all the Patriarchs, Prophets and Martyrs, and the mighty host of the Redeemed from every kindred, tongue, and people.—Redeemed from all the effects of the fall.—When the last burning tear shall be wiped away from our eyes.—When there shall be no more death, neither sorrow nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain, for the former things are passed away. O what a glorious prospect! enrapturing to the soul. Glory be to Heaven's eternal King. What heart that throbs with a Saviour's love, cannot say—

"Fly swifter round ye wheels of time,
And bring the welcome day."

Even so, come Lord Jesus.

Yours, in the blessed hope,
JOHN G. BUTT.

☞ The present ill health of the editor will account for the barreness of editorial matter in this number; but it is hoped that in a few days he will be able to be at his post.

☞ Owing to the present arrangement of our printer, we purpose altering our publication day to Tuesday, in which case there will be no paper issued next week.

☞ The present number closes the 4th vol. of the "Western Midnight Cry." Our next sheet will appear under the title of "The Day Star."

☞ The continuation of the article under the head of "The Vine," in our last number, will probably appear in our next.

☞ We call attention to the article on our first page, by Bro. Butt—it will refresh the hearts of the followers of Jesus.

TERMINATION OF PROPHETIC CHRONOLOGY.

The "Morning Watch" of the 23d ult. contains an article under the above head; but owing to its great length we are unable to give it entire. The article is from the pen of Bro. H. H. Gross. Bro. Gross is of the opinion that the 2300 days (Daniel 8: 14,) extend no farther into the future than to the commencement of the next Creation and Exode, or Sacred year, which he understands will be in the coming April. He also endeavors to show that the other prophetic numbers terminate at or about the same point. He has advanced quite an array of evidence going to prove that creation commenced in the spring—and that the 6000th year of the world will then terminate—ushering in the great Sabbath of rest to all the true Israel of God,—then the Sanctuary will be cleansed, and the Host no longer trodden under foot.

As it was intimated in our last No. that an article on "the time of deliverance" would be forthcoming, the following extracts are given as a substitute. (Owing to the editor being confined to a sick bed he is unable to attend to any business at present, but his physician says he is in a fair way of recovery, and it is hoped that in a few days he will be able to attend to the duties assigned him, and ere long participate in the joys that await all the meek and lowly followers of Jesus.) It is hoped our readers will be prepared to examine the subject with that degree of candor which it demands.—T.

THE TIMES AND THE SEASONS.

When the earth has revolved around the sun 6000 times since Creation—when 2300 years, or complete revolutions, are accomplished since "the going forth of the commandment"—then prophetic time shall be no longer. When the "times," or years, and the "seasons," or months, which designate the prophetic time of the Lord's coming, and the coming of the Day of the Lord, and of the restoration of the kingdom again to Israel, shall be fully understood, and published for a witness to all nations, even to the uttermost parts of the earth, then the end of the world will come.—Mat. 24: 14; Acts 1: 6-11; 1st Thes. 5: 1-5. But the day of the Lord will come as a thief upon those who say PEACE AND SAFETY, in opposition to those who say the Day of the Lord is coming at a definite time, and prove it from the "times and the seasons" recorded in the sure word of prophecy.—At the same time that one class of persons shall be saying, or proclaiming, the time, and the true time, too, there will be another class saying Peace and safety, to oppose the other class, then, at that very time, sudden destruction cometh upon them. But you, BRETHREN, are not in darkness that that day should overtake you as a thief. Ye are children of the light. Christ is the light of the world, and the testimony of Jesus is the spirit of prophecy. The BRETHREN give heed to a more sure word of prophecy, as to a LIGHT shining in a dark place, until the day of the Lord dawns.—2d Pet. 3: 10; 1st Thes. 5: 1-5; 2d Pet. 1: 19; and hence the brethren of Christ, "the wise," will understand and witness to, or publish, the times and the seasons when the Lord will come, and beyond that point of time the Lord will not tarry. But their publishing that time will prove that their influence upon the wicked is gone—that the power of the holy people is scattered, removed, dispersed, gone, and the effect will be, that the wicked will do more wickedly, and NONE of the wicked SHALL understand. Understand what? The TIME when ALL these wonders shall be finished, (Dan. 12: 1-7, 10,) the very time that the wicked will not understand, and hence the day of the Lord will come upon them as a thief—unawares; but ye, BRETHREN, are not in darkness concerning the times and the seasons which teach the precise time, that that day should overtake you as a thief. ☞ Hence a set time will yet be proclaimed, founded on the times and seasons, or years and months, which will result in the coming of the Lord, without any delay, at the very time that the wicked shall be saying in opposition, Peace and safety, WHICH, I AM SATISFIED, WILL BE THE FIRST MONTH, ABOUT APRIL 20th TO 23d, NEXT. ☜

The same truths are taught in Acts 1: 6-8. "It is not for you to know THE TIMES AND THE SEASONS which the Father hath put in his own power." Times and seasons for what? Which show the time when the kingdom shall be restored again to Israel. To what time, or how long were the times and seasons put into the hands of the Father? Dan. 12: 4, 9, 10, "Sealed up and closed till the time of the end," i. e., till the last 45 years of the world. What is a pre-requisite in the time of the end to have POWER TO KNOW the times and the seasons WHEN the kingdom shall be restored to Israel? Answer—"AFTER the Holy Ghost is come upon you." After the Holy Ghost has come upon them in the time of the end, and they not only have power to know the time, as taught in the times and the seasons, but they who receive the Holy Ghost shall be Christ's witnesses unto the uttermost parts of the earth.—Hence the precise time will be witnessed when the kingdom shall be restored to Israel. The 24th and 25th chapters of Matthew teach the same truths, but are now misapplied by many Adventists in the same manner as they have continually been by the lukewarm church and the non-professing world. The Saviour attested in v. 35 of chap. 24 the end of the world, and then said, "But of that day and hour knoweth no man, no, not the angels of heaven, (neither the Son, Mark 13: 32,) but my Father only." Daniel desired to understand the time (chap. 12: 7, and 9: 1-3,) but was told to go his way, for the words are closed up and sealed until the time of the end. And all the prophets that prophesied, searched and inquired diligently as to the time and manner of the time, for both the first and second Advent, (1st Pet. 1: 10-12,) which things the angels desired to look into. And the Son spake as a prophet (spake or made known all things that he had heard of his Father,)—as the Father gave him commandment, so he did.—John 14: 10, 24, 31, 15: 15, 16: 12-15. The Father, of course, did not give to the Son to explain the day and hour of his coming, and the end of the world, because he had put them in his own power, or sealed them up and closed them from human knowledge till the time of the end, hence, if the Saviour had answered the question of the disciples on time, he would have broken the law and the prophets, Mat. 5: 17–19, and not to break them; therefore he said, none now know the time, except the Father. This language does not teach that none SHALL ever know, not even the Son, but Acts 1: 6–8 explains that after the time is passed in which the time was put in the hands of the Father, those who receive the Holy Ghost should receive power to know the time and then be witnesses of it—"the wise shall understand." Verses 37–39 teach, that those who shall be found when the Lord comes, not taking heed and watching, and consequently not ready, [Luke 21: 34–36,] as was the case with all who were destroyed by the Flood, will KNOW it not, and be destroyed. What, therefore, is the argument concerning the righteous? As, then, Noah and his family KNEW because they were READY, so when the Lord comes the righteous will know. To "watch" is to keep "ready," or Rev. 3: 10, 16: 15, keep our garments undefiled, and if we do not, the Lord will come upon us as a thief, and we shall not know the time. The things of the Spirit of God are the Holy Scriptures, which things [1st Cor. 2: 8–14] the natural man cannot RECEIVE, for they are foolishness to him; neither can he KNOW them, because they are spiritually discerned.—Hence the reason that the wicked will not understand or know the time of the Lord's coming. In vs. 40 and 41 some will be taken, and others left, v. 42, "Watch, THEREFORE, for you know not what HOUR your Lord comes." The HOUR may not be known to even the wise. But this verse is addressed to those who KNOW not the time, and consequently are not WATCHING, or READY, and will be left, as vs. 43 and 44 prove; "if the good man [or master] of the house HAD KNOWN the time, he would have WATCHED. So in the case of the wicked at the Flood, if they had KNOWN they would have WATCHED, i. e. kept ready. None have the power to KNOW until the Holy Ghost comes upon them, and then they must watch and keep ready, and more and more clearly come to the light on the time of his coming, as they "see the day approaching," but must persevere in keeping ready, and not draw back to perdition; verse 44, "Therefore be ye also ready, for in such an hour as ye think not the Son of Man cometh." It will be plain to any one that this language is addressed to those who are not ready, and asserts that they know not when the Lord will come. Chap. 25: 11–13, is addressed to the foolish virgins, who wanted OIL, or the light of the Holy Ghost, through the medium of God's Word, in order that they might have the light which the wise virgins had; but the foolish went to the wrong place to get the light of the things of the Spirit [they went after light on time], and tarried in that way until the door was shut. The wise were evidently giving light on the time of the Lord's coming, but the foolish did not get it. Why? WATCH [or be ready], therefore for ye KNOW neither the day nor the hour wherein the Son of Man cometh; certainly this language is not addressed to the wise virgins, for the wise KNEW, and therefore were READY. And all that are ready will know, and if they know, they will watch, or be continually ready.

THE SEVENTH MONTH.

A few words on the 7th month movement, and I close. Will the Lord himself descend from heaven with the trumpet of God on the 10th day of the 7th month in any year? I understand from the law and the testimony that he will not. But were we correct in proclaiming that he would come on that day? In the main we were correct. Under the law the 7th year was a sabbath, holy unto the Lord; man and beast were required to rest from labor, and the land was to rest; and when it began (in the spring) the people were fully RELEASED from bondage and debt. It was an entire year of REST and DELIVERANCE to all the people, and rest to the land, Ex. 21: 2; Deut. 15: 1–5; Lev. 25: 1–7; certainly a type of the deliverance of God's people at the coming of Christ, and their rest from their labors. This release was given, and the rest began on the 1st day of the 1st month. On the 10th day of the 7th month, in the last year of 7 sabbaths of years, that is, in the 49th year, the people were to make the trumpet of the Jubilee to sound throughout all the land. What for? To proclaim liberty, and at the beginning of the next year all Hebrews were entitled to go at liberty, and were commanded to hallow the entire 50th year, and in that year return to their own possessions. Certainly a type of the release and rest of God's people at the end of the world, when the purchased possession shall be redeemed, Lev. 25: 8–24; Eph. 1: 14. This redemption and rest of the people of God was on the 1st day of the 1st month, but the trumpet was blown by the people nearly six months previous, to give notice, and make all ready. As in the type, so it has been, and will be in the antitype. On and before the 10th day of the 7th month in this Sacred, or Creation year, the trumpet was blown, to make all ready, Eze. 7: 14. We obeyed God (Jo. 1: 14, 15; 2: 1–16, 30, 31; Luke 21: 20,) who said "Blow the trumpet in Zion, sound an alarm in My Holy Mountain; let all the inhabitants of the land tremble: for the day of the Lord cometh, for it is NIGH at hand. A day of darkness and gloominess, a day of cloud and of thick darkness. For the day of the Lord is great and very terrible, and who can abide it? As a destruction from the Almighty shall it come. I will show wonders in the heavens and in the earth [what wonders?] blood, and fire, and pillars of smoke: the sun shall be turned into darkness, and the moon into (or Rev. 6: 12, as) blood, before the great and terrible day of the Lord come." Joel, 3: 16, "The heavens and the earth shall shake: but the Lord will be the hope of his people, and the strength of the children of Israel." We proclaimed the above, called solemn assemblies, gathered all classes of people, instructed them how to prepare to meet the Lord in peace. We proved that the meat offering and the drink offering (worship of God in truth and in spirit) was cut off, or withholden, from the house of the Lord; and joy and gladness from the house of our God. The 10th day of the 7th month movement was a trumpet and alarm, a proclamation, and work of the people, the servants of God, to make all ready against the SET TIME to favor Zion should come, (Ps. 102: 13; 76: 9;) when he will arise to judgment, to save all the meek of the earth. The VOICE OF THE LORD, or Trumpet of God, shall raise the dead, and shake the heavens and earth, at the set or appointed time, Hab. 2: 3; John 5: 25–29; Heb. 12: 26; Rev. 16: 17–20; 6: 14–17; Jer. 25: 30–38; 1 Thess. 4: 14.

I understand that we are now, for about six months in the little while, during which we have need of patience—that is, perseverance, (endurance to the end,) that after we have done the will of God we may receive the promise, (when?) for YET A LITTLE WHILE, and He that is coming will come, and will not tarry, Heb. 10: 35-40. If we have the necessary patience during this little while, until the year of redemption shall begin, we shall not draw back to perdition, but believe to the saving of the soul, at the revelation of Jesus Christ. God has ordered the passing by of different set times, to try our faith and patience, and to give opportunity for all to come to repentance; but the Lord will not tarry long—he will not much longer bear to suffer toward his elect who cry day and night unto him to avenge them of their adversary, 2 Pet. 3: 4, 9; Luke 18: 7, 8. We must now let patience or perseverance be perfected, must HOLD FAST the confidence and rejoicing of the hope FIRM UNTO THE END—must CAST NOT AWAY our confidence which hath great recompense of reward, for he that shall ENDURE to the end the same shall be saved.—Heb. 3: 6; Matt. 24: 13. And finally, I understand that we are now for about six months living in the DAYS OF THE VOICE of the Seventh Angel, WHEN HE SHALL BEGIN TO SOUND, in which days the mystery of God will be finished, and time shall be no longer, as he hath declared by his servants the prophets. The mystery here referred to is the bringing both Jews and Gentiles into one fold, which will not be FINISHED till they all who have the earnest of the Spirit are changed into spiritual bodies, at the last trumpet, and coming of Christ.—1 Tim. 3: 16; Eph. 1: 14; 3: 6; 1 Cor. 15: 50–52. But when the 7th or last trumpet shall sound, or the Lord utter his voice from on high, the righteous dead will arise, the living saints be changed, and all go to meet the Lord in the air, the kingdoms of this world become the Lord's, the Lord God Omnipotent reign, all rule, authority, & power be put down, the nations be angry, and God's wrath come upon them, the time to judge the dead, to reward all that fear the name of the Lord, and love his appearing, to destroy the wicked, and to melt with fervent heat the heavens and the earth which are now.—Rev. 10: 6, 7: 11: 15–18; 1 Cor. 15: 20–25; Jer. 25: 30–38; John 5: 25–29; 2 Tim. 4: 1, 8; 2 Pet. 3: 7–12. During this little while, or during these days of the voice of the 7th angel, when he is beginning to sound, we are commanded to go and take the little book and eat it, which book contains 'prophecy,' which we are to speak from, to edification and to comfort, AGAIN before many peoples, and nations, and languages, and kings.—Rev. 10: 8–11; 1 Cor. 14: 3. From this book of prophecy, which is beginning to be understood and spoken, the times and the seasons are to be understood and spoken, showing when time shall be no longer—or more correctly, there shall be no longer DELAY. Time has been spoken from the "thus saith the Lord" at different points, but there has been delay, so much so, that the evil servants are saying, and will more strongly say, in reply to the wise servants, "My Lord DELAYETH his coming;" but there will be no longer delay (as I solemnly believe) than during the remaining days of this year, to some time in April, when the mystery of godliness will be finished. GOD WILL ARISE TO JUDGMENT, TO SAVE ALL THE MEEK OF THE EARTH.—Blessed are the meek, for they shall INHERIT the earth. When the Son of Man shall come in the glory of his Father, with all the holy angels, then will he sit upon the Throne of his glory; before him shall be gathered all nations—he shall set the righteous on his right hand, but the wicked on his left. THEN will the KING say to them on his right hand, "COME, ye blessed of my Father, INHERIT the KINGDOM prepared for you from the foundation of the world." The meek shall inherit the earth, and shall delight themselves in the ABUNDANCE OF PEACE; WHEN THE WICKED ARE CUT OFF THEY SHALL SEE THE LAND; the people shall be ALL RIGHTEOUS, they shall INHERIT the land for EVER. The saints of the Most High shall take the Kingdom under the whole Heaven, and shall possess the Kingdom forever, even for ever and ever.—Ps. 76: 9; Matt. 5: 5; Ps. 37: 3, 9–11, 18, 22, 26–29, 34; Matt. 25: 31–34; Luke 1: 30–32; Isa. 60; 21; Dan. 7: 18, 27. But the proud, and all that do wickedly, shall be stubble, and the day of the Lord that cometh shall burn them up, root and branch.—Mal. 4: 1; Isa. 2: 10–22; 29: 5, 6. To all the dear brethren scattered abroad I would say, we constitute the Philadelphia Church—the remnant of the woman's seed; and let us be faithful to the end, and we shall receive a crown of life, and be made pillars in the temple of God, and go no more out for ever.

ENCOURAGING.

From a letter received by us from a friend in the east, we are permitted to give an extract of a private letter written in the western part of Massachusetts, dated January 10, 1845.

After detailing some previous tours, he says—

"I then returned to H., considerably fatigued, and with a view to recruit my health a little, or rather my strength. I remained nearly 3 weeks at home, and then two weeks ago last Saturday left to spend the Sabbath at W. There is here a large and happy company of Disciples—we truly had a Sabbath day's journey toward the New Jerusalem. I remained there till Thursday of that week, enjoying precious seasons of worship every evening. On that day I came to this place, where I found about a dozen souls collected together, from a previous appointment, expecting me there. We had a good season of comforting one another. I remained in that section of the town over the Sabbath. Our meetings were all very interesting—but as the people in that neighborhood generally did not incline to attend, we commenced in this the north eastern section of the town. One week ago last Lord's day evening, a large room was nearly filled with attentive hearers. Our meetings have been continued in this neighborhood every evening since, until our house is filled to overflowing. Last Friday evening, having spent a week with this people, and having placed before them sufficient evidence to satisfy any rational mind that the Kingdom of God was at hand, we brought our series of meetings to a close. But as quite a number of them had come heartily into the Advent faith, it was agreed by them that they would meet by themselves every week for worship, and accordingly gave out their first appointment. I retired to bed, expecting to leave the next morning for T., feeling grateful to God that my labors here had not been in vain in the Lord. During the night the Lord brought upon several of the mothers in Zion, such a burthen, or trial of soul that they could not sleep. A sister B., full of the Holy Ghost, (late convert to the Advent doctrine,) having been in agony through the night for her children and others, rose as soon as it was light and went in pursuit of me. After traveling on foot about a mile, being fatigued, she took a horse and sleigh and drove till she found me. As soon as she entered the room she exclaimed—Praise God, Bro. C., that I have found you!—and added, The Lord is in this place of a truth, and you must not leave. We have met every evening since. Her eldest daughter [say 15 years old,] before noon the same day was in great distress of mind, enquiring, what must I do to be saved? After a season of prayer, in which she herself took a vocal part—she was wonderfully liberated and praised God;—since which she has taken a decided stand for the Lord—and is, for a youth, wonderfully gifted in exhortation. In every meeting we have witnessed much of the salvation of God—say 15 or 20 souls already converted, and as many others now anxiously enquiring.

"Yours, affectionately, &c.

S. C."

Letter from Bro. Cherry.

Marysville, Union co. O., Feb. 1, 1845.

DEAR BRO. JACOBS:—

* * * Your little sheet is to us a welcome visiter—and I believe the Lord will sustain it the "little while" that yet remains of the 2300 days. Then the sanctuary will be cleansed and God's dear Son will reign King of kings and Lord of lords. Until then we need not expect any thing but tribulation. Who is not willing to suffer persecution rather than give up the hope of the Gospel. Can we not already see the lofty spires of the celestial City. I wish Bro. J. B. Cook would call and make us a visit, or some one would come this way and cheer us up. Can't you come Bro. Jacobs? Methinks I hear you say, no.

Please give our love to the brethren and tell them to "remember Lot's wife."

Mob Spirit in Canada.

BRO. R. HUTCHINSON, writing from Waterloo, C. E., Jan. 13, 1845, says:—

Persecution runs high here. I have been shut out of three public buildings within a few days. But, glory to God, all tends to the furtherance of the Gospel. Two weeks last evening, when the congregation was quietly seated in the Frost Village School Room (in which all have been allowed to preach,) a Major and a Captain came, at the head of an armed force, and drove us out.—They were full of rage, and would hear no reason. On the following evening we assembled in a private house; during the meeting thirty heavy guns were fired close at the window. But we sat "calm on tumult's wheels," excepting the children.—Last evening, after going a distance of ten miles, I found the West Shefford School House, in which I have preached more or less for the last two years, closed against me. The cry was, "Hutchinson can't enter the School House." "No Millerism here to-night!" The ostensible reason was, the proprietors feared it would be demolished by the mob. We took the congregation, which was large, to a private house. By the time I had addressed the people, and Bro. CALDWELL had delivered a sermon, the mob came. Some rushed into the house, with deadly weapons; others threw stones and clubs through the windows. Most of the windows in the principal room were entirely smashed in. Some of the brethren were wounded in the head, and some received blows. The head of the mob is a member of the Church. Their object was to get their hands upon me, but the brethren were too strong for them; so that hitherto I have escaped their designs, and I will trust the Lord for the future. He will preserve me till I have done my work.

We have just closed our Conference here. The labors of brethren Kimball, Caldwell, Chandler, Stone, Sweet, and others, have been blessed.—The little flock is fearing not, knowing that it is their Father's good pleasure to give them the kingdom. Yours, in the patience of Jesus,

R. HUTCHINSON.

As a specimen of our speculation, Mr. Smith owes us 75 cents, and furthermore has subjected us to 18¾ cts. postage, of which we do not complain, as Mr. Smith's advertisement extraordinary is worth that much, seeing it is an illustration of the glorious speculation into which we have fallen.

THE GOOD SHEPHERD.

Let thy kingdom, blessed Saviour,
Come, and bid our jarrings cease,
Come, O come, and reign for ever,
God of love and Prince of Peace.
Visit now poor bleeding Zion,
See thy people mourn and weep;
Day and night thy lambs are crying,
Come, Good Shepherd, feed thy sheep.

Many follow men's inventions,
And submit to human laws,
Hence, divisions and contentions
Sully the Redeemer's cause.
Hence we suffer persecutions,
While the foolish virgins sleep,
All is uproar and confusion,
Come, Good Shepherd, lead thy sheep.

Come, good Lord, with courage arm us,
Persecution we'll not fear,
Nothing, Lord, we know can harm us,
While our loving Shepherd's near.
Glory, glory be to Jesus,
At his name our hearts do leap,
He both comforts us and frees us—
The good Shepherd guards his sheep.

Some of Paul, some of Apollos,
Some of Cephas:—none agree;
Jesus, let us hear Thee call us,
Help us Lord, to follow thee:
Then we'll rush through what encumbers,
Every hindrance overleap;
Fearing neither force or numbers,—
The Good Shepherd guides his sheep.

From the Morning Watch.

The Watching Time.

We insert the following for the excellence of its conclusion, although we have not the same confidence in the types which the writer manifests.

"Watch, therefore, for ye know neither the day nor the hour wherein the Son of Man cometh.—Mat. 25; 13.

Two things appear clearly taught relative to the coming of the Lord. 1st. That there would be three points of general expectation for the consummation of that event; and, secondly, That that event will transpire at no definite point of time determined upon.

The year 1843 and the 7th month were grand rallying points, intended to try the faith of the true seed of Abraham, and to prepare a people ready to say, "Blessed is He that cometh in the name of the Lord." It is evident that we must pass a third point of general expectation. That point, probably, is the 9th month, the only one which has excited general interest since the passing of the 10th day of the 7th month.

The question may be asked, is a third definite time predicted? Not so clearly and explicitly as are the two former; but it is more than intimated.

All will admit that every word contained, and every circumstance related, in the Bible, mean something, and are intended for our instruction. In the word of God there is nothing superfluous. All advent believers will agree that the Transfiguration on the Mount was a miniature representation, or type, of the Kingdom of Christ.—The Savior appeared as the representative of himself in his glorified state; Moses as the representative of those who come forth in the resurrection; and Elijah as the representative of those who live and remain at the coming of the Lord. The translation of Elijah, then, is a type of those who are to be changed. From this we may infer, that the circumstances attending his translation were also typical; and we have seen their antitype most accurately fulfilled, so far as we have progressed.

Elijah was sent by the Spirit of the Lord from Gilgal to Bethel (see 2d Kings, 2:,) where he expected to be taken up; but he was disappointed. Did not the Spirit of the Lord direct us to 1843? and were we not disappointed? Bethel signifies House, and certainly we found a house of God in 1843. From Bethel Elijah was directed to go to Jerico; and he went on, not the least discouraged by his first disappointment, and what was the result? Did he go up? No. He must suffer a further trial of his faith. Were we discouraged by the passing of 1843? Not in the least, but went forward with stronger faith, and in full assurance that our hopes would be consummated in the 7th month. Jericho signifies His Month, or His Moon, and we firmly believe that the 7th month was the moon, or month, in which the Lord would appear; but, like our type, our faith had to be tried still further. From Jericho, the Lord directed Elijah to go to Jordan, which signifies River of Judgment; and the many who have believed in the 24th day of the 9th month no doubt believe the Spirit of the Lord directed their minds to that period. Elijah was disappointed, and so they have been. Elijah was finally translated, at an indefinite point, and so must we be. Elijah passed every definite point, and while he was walking along, talking with Elisha, and at a moment when, perhaps, he least expected it, there appeared a chariot of fire and horses of fire, and he went up by a whirlwind into heaven. And this will, no doubt, be the case with all who maintain their confidence, as Elijah did, firm unto the end. But when? Elijah evidently passed every point; and went up in a single literal day; and in order to fulfil the type accurately, we must pass every point, and go up in a single prophetic day. All, then, must be completed before the close of the present Jewish year.

What, then, is the conclusion? That we shall soon, very soon, see the chariots and horsemen of Israel. We are certainly living in a most momentous period—a period, every succeeding moment of which may be the last—may reveal our coming Lord. To let our lamps go out now would be fatal—to go to sleep now would be only to be aroused by the appearance of the Sign of the Son of Man, to a consciousness of our danger, and to a knowledge of the fact that our lamps have expired, and there is no opportunity left to retrim them,—and to see ourselves shut out, while those who are ready go into the Marriage Supper of the Lamb. Every element should be one of watchfulness, and every thought, word, and action, should be in view of the fact, that, "In such an hour as ye think not, the Son of Man cometh."
